us Gods Compassion towards us, and free Love in forgiving us, potently to move us, to forgive those who have done us Injury, and to forgive them out of that Consideration. 9. That we ought from our Hearts, to forgive Men their Trespases, that is, so as not to hate them, bear them any Grudge, or Malice, seek any private revenge upon them, nor public Satisfaction, beyond what they are able to give, but be ready to do them what common Offices of kindness in their limits, are in our Power. 10. That the not doing of this, will be an ill Evidence to our Souls: That God hath not indeed forgiven them, as well as a Bar against such forgiveness, and an Obstacle, that some Punishment from God expecteth us in this Life, to bring us to a Temper more conformable to the Gospel, and if not, in this Life, yet in the Life which is to come.

CHAP. XIX.

1 And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judaea, beyond Jordan.

2 And great multitudes followed him, and he healed them there.

Most Interpreters agree that both Mark, Ch. 10. 1. & Luke, Ch. 9. 51. make mention of the same motion of our Saviour out of Galilee, into the Province of Judaea, which is here exprest, the Like and Galilee mention something largely, some things done in the way, of which Matthew speaketh not. He departed from Galilee: Our Saviour had hitherto spent his time mostly in Galilee, the Country of the Jews was divided into three Provinces, Galilee, Samaria, and Judaea: Galilee was the more Northerly part of the Country. And was divided into the upper Galilee, which is also called Galilee of the Gentiles, Mat. 4. 15. and the lower Galilee, which was Contiguous to it, but lay more Southerly, and adjoined to Samaria: Our Saviour dwelt at Nazareth a long time. Nazareth, Bethsaida, Capernaum, were all Cities of Galilee: He is now taking his leave of this Province, into which he never returned more. His next journey was to Samaria (for Samaria lay in the middle, between Galilee and Judaea) and through part of it he did go, for Luke 9. 52. some Inhabitants of a Village belonging to the Samaritans refused to receive him. He came into the Coasts of Judaea beyond Jordan. This Phrase hath caused some Difficulty to Interpreters, because Judea was bounded by Jordan; and had no Coasts beyond it. Some say, that the term beyond Jordan must be applied to, he came, he came beyond Jordan, to the Coasts of Judaea. Others say, that as Men came out of Egypt, the Coasts of Judaea were beyond Jordan, Mat. 4. 15. But some think it should be there translated, By Jordan: The word para signifies any Border, or side of a Border, beyond Jordan: Therefore is on the Border of Jordan, and possibly were better translated so, seeing the Word Jordan, kept on the left hand near to Jordan, still he came into Judaea, which also bordered on that River. Wherever he went great multitudes followed him, but more for Healing their Bodies, or for the Loaves, than for the Feeding, or Healing of their Souls; so different is most people Sense of their Bodily and spiritual wants. He Healed them the Text faith, but it faith not, They believed in him.

3 The Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?

Our Saviour, tho yet at some distance from Jerusalem, yet was come into that Province, where the Pharisees had the greatest Power, and were in greater Numbers: Now they come to him, Tempting him, where the Word Tempting, rather signifies generally making a Trial of him, than strictly, Solliciting him to sin, they came (as appears by their Question) to make a Trial, whether they could intreat him, and see any Determination from him of a point, for which they might accuse him. The Question they proposed to him is: Whether it be Lawful for a Man to put away his Wife for every Cause? The Word here translated Cause; signifieth not Cause, or Occasion, but Crime alone. So it may be translated Crime, but they did not only put away their Wives for Crimes, but upon any occasion, in abuse of that Text, Deut. 24. 1. When a Man hath taken a Wife and Married her, and it comes to pass that she find no Favour in his Eyes, because he hath found some uncleanness in her: Which the Pharisees had interpreted, of any kind of Deceit, or natural Infirmary, not merely of Moral uncleanness. Had our Saviour now answered, Yes, he had contradicted what he had formerly delivered, Ch. 5. 32. he did deny it, they had trapped him as Contradicting the Law of Moses, Deut. 24. 1. (according to their Interpretation of it) So they had had whereof to accuse him.

4 And he answered, and said unto them, have * Gen. 5. 2. ye not read, * that he who made them at the beginning, made them male and female.

* Eph. 5. 31. 5 And said, * For this cause, shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh.

* 1 Cor. 6. 16. 6 Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh, What therefore God hath joined together let no man put asunder.

Mark Ch. 10. 2. 3. 4. giveth us the same History of this Discourse, differing a little in the Order of the Words; but nothing as to the Substance of his Discourse. Our Saviour answereth neither Yes nor No to their Discourse, but gives them a fair occasion to answer themselves, and Tacitly chargeth them with Ignorance, and Corruption of the Law of God. He reareth them to the first Institution of Marriage, and for that to the Book of Genesis. Ch. 1. 27. & 2. 24. It is as much as if our Lord had said: You own the Book of Genesis, as well as the Book of Deuteronomy. In the Book of Genesis, you read the first Institution of Marriage, it was instituted by God himself; he made Male and Female, Gen. 1. 27. he made the Law of Marriage, Gen. 2. 24. that a Man should leave his Father and Mother, and cleave to his Wife, and they should be one Flesh, from whence he concludeth that the Man and Wife are one Flesh in Gods Account; from hence he leaves them to conclude, whether it was probable, Moses, whom they so revered, and who was so Faithful in the House of God, as a Servant, would License them to put asunder, whom God had put together: Or, whether they had not put an Interpretation upon the Law of Moses, which it could not bear, in Contingency with the Law of God. For the Sense of those Words, Gen. 1. 27. & Ch. 2. 24. See the Notes on those places.

7 They say unto him, Why did Moses then * command to give a writing of divorce, and to put her away?

8 He faith unto them, Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so.

Mark reports this a little differently, Ch. 10. 2. As if Christ had first said unto them. What did Moses command you? And they said Moses suffered to write a Bill of Divorcement, and to send her away. And Jesus answered, and said, For the hardness of your Hearts, he wrote you this Precept, &c. The substance of our Saviours answer seemeth to be this. Moses gave you no positive Command in the Case he could not make a Law directly opposite to the Law of my Father. But Moses law the Weakness, and Wickedness of your Hearts, that you would turn away your Wives without any just and warrantable Cause, and to restrain your Extravagancies, of Cruelty to your Wives, or disorderly turning them off upon any occasion; he made Moses that none should put away his Wife, but upon a Legal Cause of the Cause, and giving her a Bill of Divorcement. Indeed possibly this Bill of Divorcement was sometimes judicially granted upon irregular Cause, and Moses might conceive it for the preventing of greater Evils, because you were always an hard Hearted, and Stiff-necked people; and you by your Traditions have expounded that Law, beyond Moses his Intention, and made a Bill of Divorcement grantable in Cases which he never thought of, nor intended in that Law. But the measures of Lawfulness, are neither to be taken from Moses his Temporary Toleration and Concomitance, nor much less from your Traditions, and Expositions of the Law of Moses, but from the Original Justice of Marriage, and from Gods Original Law relating to it; now God at first made one Man and one Woman for one Man, and you united them, that he filled them one Flesh: So as he, who puts away his Wife, doth as twain divide, and tear his own Flesh piece from piece, which is Barbarous, Inhumane, and unnatural. And the Law of God was not, that a Man should forsake his Wife, when ever he had a mind to it, but that he should either forsake his Father and Mother than his Wife, that he should cleave to his Wife in living, and dwelling with her, as a Man of knowledge, not hating his own Flesh, Loving his Wife, as his own Body, Loving and cherishing her, Eph. 5. 28. 29. Now how can this possibly consist with a Man putting away his Wife, upon every little and trivial Cause of Offence, or dislike unto her.

* 1 Cor. 7. 10. 9 * And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his Wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and who so marryeth her that is put away, doth commit adultery.

We met with the like Determination of our Lords upon this Question, Ch. 5. 32. only there it was I instead of committeth Adultery; I can be better to committeth Adultery, that is in Case the Married again: Here our Lord faith, the like of the Husband, we have the same, Mark, 10. 11. Luke, 16. 18. The reason is this, because nothing but Adultery doth dissolve the Knot, and band of Marriage. Tho they be thus illegally separated, yet according to the Law of God, they are still Man and Wife: Some have upon these Words made a Question, whether it be Lawful for the Husband, or the Wife separated for Adultery, to marry again while each other Liveth: As to the party offending, it may be a Question, but as to the innocent Person offended, it is no Question, for the Adultery of the Person offending, hath dissolved the Knot of Marriage by the Divine Law. It is true, that the Knot cannot be dissolved, without the Freedom of both Persons, each from another, but yet it seemeth against Reason, that both Persons should have the like Liberty to a second Marriage. For, 1. The Adultery, is by Gods Law a dead Woman, and so in no Capacity to a second Marriage. 2. It is unreasonable, that she should make an Advantage of her own sin, and Error. 3. This might be the occasion of Adultery, to give a wicked Person a legal Liberty to falsify an Extravagant Luit. But for the innocent Person, it is as unreasonable, that he or she should be punished for the sin of another. But what our Saviour faith here, and in the other parallel Texts, is understood, as to the God, of Husbands, and Wives, put away not for Adultery, but for other light and trivial Causes, for which by the Law of God no Divorce is allowed.

10 His disciples say unto him, If the case of the Man be so with his wife, It is not good to marry.

This is a very strange Saying, and discovers us, both the imperfect faith of Christs Disciples, and also the Tyranny of a sinful Practice grown up into a Custom. The Jew had assumed a Liberty of turning their Wives out of Doors, upon every light and trivial Offence, or dislike, the Disciples think; if this Licentiousness may not be allowed, it is not good to marry. So a Holy Institution of God ordained for the Propagation of mankind, for the restraint of Extravagant Luit, and for the Solace and Comfort of Mans Life, should be despised rather than those unequal Luits, and Corruptions mortified, the Mortification of which, would have made those irregular Separations both needless, and undesirable. Surely they should rather have said; If the case of a Man be so with his Wife then both Husbands and Wives, had need learn to deny themselves, to comply each with another, to flee their Brutish, and boisterous Passions, that being the same Flesh, they might also have one and the same Spirit, and not be like a diseased piece of Flesh, where Humours so Quagled, that one piece need be cut off to preserve the other. But the best of Men have their Infirmities, and as the Hebrews said, Spiritus dei non semper tangit corda prophetarum. The Spirit of God was not always upon the Hearts of the Prophets. So it is as true, Spiritus Dei non semper; Ubi tangit ad fidem. All that the Saints say is not Gospel. Their flesh hath its turn to speak, as well as the Spirit in them. A full Liberty conceded, included, or removed at, by the Law, or by the Rulers of a Church, or Place where we Live, for a long time, is not easily restrained, and even good Men may for a time be carried away with the Error of it, so as they could not discern it, be Convinced of it, or be brought clearly to a Conformity to the Will of God.

11 But he said unto them, * All men can * not receive this saying, save they to whom it is given.

12 For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mothers womb, And there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: And there be * eunuchs which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven: * sake, He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

Our Saviour knowing the sinful Custom, and Practice of the Jewish Nation now for many years, and giving some allowance for that, and his Disciples infirmities, he doth not answer them severely, as what they said might deserve, but reproves them gently; what he faith amounts to thus much, you consider what you say. All men without sinning against God, cannot abstain from Marriage. An Ability to live without the use of Marriage, is a peculiar Gift of God, and your saying hath no place in Persons, to whom God hath not given that Gift, For it is better to marry than to burn. There are some whom God by Nature hath made unfit for Marriage. There are others whom Men (wickedly) make unfit for it, that they may gratify their own Jealousie. There are some Countries were made Eunuchs, and so betrained with the Care of Princes Wives and Concubines. And there are some whose made themselves Eunuchs (not castrating themselves, that is wickedness) but abstaining from Marriage, and yet living Chastely (having mortified their Luits, and brought under their Body) that they might be less incumbered with the Care of the World, and be more free for the work of the Ministry; he is able more to give up themselves to an Holy Life and spiritual Conversation. But God, who by his Ordinance of Marriage designed to People, and continue the World, hath given to Persons Persons different Tempers and Constitutions: So as possibly the most of Men and Women, cannot without making use of Marriage govern their Luits. As to those, Marriage is not a matter of Choice and Deliberation, and they must, and ought to use it as an appointment of God, for the ends for which he hath instituted it. If there be any who can receive this Saying, who can without Marriage bridle his Luit, and so live in a folate and single state, as not to sin against God, by any Extravagancy of Luits, and impure Desires and Affections, and desire, and shall do so, that he may be more spiritual, and serve God with less distraction, and be a more fit Instrument to promote the Kingdom of God in the World, let him do so.

13 Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them and pray, and the disciples rebuked them.

Mark faith, Ch. 10. 13. and Luke faith, Ch. 18. 15. they were brought forth, he should touch them. A doubt may from this Text arise in the Readers mind, for what purpose the Parents, or Nurses did bring these young Children to Christ: It was not for Baptism, for he Baptized none himself; Ch. 4. 2. It is not like it was for Healing, for tho our Saviour in such Cases did sometimes Touch, or lay his Hand upon the sick Persons; yet it is not likely, that in that Case the Disciples would have rebuked them, knowing that their Master used to heal such as were brought to him. It mult therefore unquestionably be, that he might Bless them, Matthew here faith that he might put his Hands on them and pray. The putting of Hands upon Persons, when they Bled, shed them, or Prayed for a Bleeding on Persons, was a very usual Rite and Custom amongst the Jews. Without all Controversy (faith the Apostle, Heb. 7. 7. The lesser was blessed of the greater.) It was a Custom amongst the Jews to bring Persons, to those whom they looked upon as Excelling in Holiness, to be blessed and commended to God by their Prayers. Mark, 27. 4. & 18. 14. The Parents, or Nurses of these Children by this Act declared, that they looked upon Christ as some great Prophet, in Favour with God; and whose Prayers could prevail with God, and whose Blessing was countable as to these little ones. The Disciples rebuked them; as thinking they were too troublesome to their Master, and not understanding what Children in Health had to do with their Master, nor perhaps having been such a President.

14 But Jesus said, Suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto me: For of such is the kingdom of heaven.

15 And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.

Both Mark and Luke, add something to this Story. Mark faith, Ch. 10. 14. When Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said, Suffer the little Children to come to me, and forbid them not: For of such is the Kingdom of God: Verily I say unto you, whosoever shall so receive the Kingdom of God as a little Child, he shall so enter therein. And he called them up to him in his Arms, put his Hands upon them, and Blessed them. Luke faith the same, Ch. 18. 15. only he faith he called them unto him, and leaves out what Mark hath, 16. of Christ taking them up in his Arms, putting his Hands upon them, and Blessing them. From this Text, Divines will prove the Baptism of Children, because theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven; which whether we understand of the Church, viz. That the Gospel Church is made up of Infants, as well as grown Persons, or that the Grace of Christ under the Gospel, viz. Remission of sin through the Blood of Christ, doth belong to some Children, as well as to grown Persons: Or, of the Kingdom of Glory, viz. Children shall go to Heaven, as well as grown Persons. The Argument is drawn from this Text: Those who have a right to a whole love right to the Kingdom of Glory may be Baptized: Or, those who have a right to the Kingdom of Glory may be Baptized. But one or both of these are affirmed in this Text. We must take heed, we do not found Infant-Baptism upon the Example of Christ in this Text, for it is certain that he did not Baptize these Children, Mark only faith, he took them into his Arms, laid his Hands on them, and Blessed them. The Argument for Infant-Baptism, from this Text is founded upon Ch. 18, addeth, that our Saviour told them, That infants could use the Kingdom of God as a little Child, he could use it unto it. But we exposed these words before, Mark, 18. 3. where we met with the same in Effect.

16 And behold one came and said unto him, Good master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?

This History is reported by Mark, Ch. 10. from v. 17. to v. 23. and by Luke, Ch. 18. from v. 18. to v. 24. Mark faith, When he was gone forth into the way, there came one running and kneeling to him, and asked him: Good Master, what may I do, that I may inherit Eternal Life? Luke faith, A certain Ruler asked him. Our Lord was now in his way from Galilee to Judea, and to Jerusalem. There cometh a Person, a Ruler, whether of some of the Synagogues, or in some place of Civil Magistracy. The Scripture faith not, He runs, he kneeleth to him; [paying him at least a Civil Homage, as to his Superior] he kneeleth to him with the ordinary Title, they gave to their Teachers: Mark, Good Master, he propoundeth a Grave Question to him, what he should do, that he might get to Heaven? But yet, he doth not propound the Question in those terms; but, What good thing should I do, that I may have Eternal Life? It appeareth, by his respect he brought to Christ at his coming, and by the Question propounded, and by his going away joyful, when our Saviour Answered did not satisfy him, that he did not come upon any Cupious design to entice our Saviour, but out of a Desire to learn; but yet, it appeareth plainly, that he was a Pharisee, or a Disciple of the Pharisees, and though his Life was his own Hands, that he had a Power in himself to do some good thing, by which he might merit Eternal Life, or upon the doing of which, he might at least obtain Everlasting Life; tho not as a strict reward for his Work, without any Consideration of a Merit: He grants an Eternal life, he declares his Desire of an Eternal Happiness, he declares his Readiness to do some Good thing, that he might obtain it.

17 And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? There is none good but one, * that is God: But if thou wilt enter into life keep the commandments.

Mark omitteth the latter Clause, and only faith, Thou knowest the Commandments: So faith Luke, Ch. 18. 19. 20. Our Saviours design here was, not to show this young Man by this Answer, the way by which it was possible, that he or any other might come to Heaven, but only to convince him of the Errors of the Pharisaical Doctrine; they would not own Christ to be God, nor to be come forth from God, They taught Eternal Life to be obtainable by the Works of the Law, and by a fulfilling of the Law, according to that imperfect Sense which they gave of it, of which we heard much, Ch. 5. Now (faith our Saviour.) Seeing you will call me to be God, there is none Originally, Essentially, and absolutely good, but God: There is none Derivatively good, but he deriveth his Goodness from God. How callest thou me Good, whom thou wilt neither own to be God, nor to derive from God? But if thou wilt enter into life, keep the Commandments. This was the Doctrine of the Pharisees: That men might keep the Commandments. Saith our Saviour, the way to Eternal Life according to your Doctrine, is plain before thee: You say, Men may perfectly keep the Commandments of God: He that doth so shall be saved. Therefore keep the Commandments: Not that our Saviour thought he could do it, nor that there did lye a passable Road to Heaven, that way, but that he might convince him of his Error, and the need he had, of a Saviour.

18 He faith unto him, Which? Jesus faith, * Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, &c.

* 19 * Honour thy Father, and thy Mother; & thy Neighbour as thy self: Which elsewhere our Saviour calls the second Commandment, and makes Comprehensive of all the Commandments of the second Table. We mult not from the second Table, in this Enumeration of the Commandments, either conclude, that the Precepts of this second Table, are greater than those of the first, or that it is enough to keep them, in order to Eternal Life: Nor yet, that the fifth Commandment is lesser than the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, because it is put after them. But, 1. Our Saviour had reckoned up Commandments enough to convince this Man, that he could not save himself by keeping the Commandments hope for Eternal Life. 2. He had reckoned up those of the first, which he intended by and to convince him, that he had kept the Commandments. 3. And those of the Non-Obervation, which it was most easy to convince him. 4. The Pharisees looked upon these, as the most Vulgar and easy Commandments.

5. Because Love to our Neighbour, is an excellent Evidence of our Love to God. As concerning the Order, in which they are Enumerated: It was not our Saviours business here to shew which was the greatest Commandment, that he hath elsewhere determined; calling, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, &c. the first and great Commandment, here he is not Sollicitous about the Order.

20 The young man faith unto him, All these things have I kept from my youth up, what lack I yet?

Those words, What lack I yet? Are not in Mark or Luke.

1 For the Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning, to hire labourers into his vineyard.

2 And when he had agreed with the labourers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard.

3 And he went out about the third hour, and saw others standing idle in the market place.

4 And said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way.

5 Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise.

6 And about the eleventh hour, he went out and found others standing idle, and said unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle?

7 They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.

8 So when even was come, the Lord of the vineyard said unto his steward, Call the labourers and give them their hire, beginning from the last to the first.

9 And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny.

10 But when the first came, they supposed they should have received more; and they likewise received every man a penny.

11 And when they received it, they murmured against the good man of the house.

12 Saying, These last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden, and heat of the day.

13 But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong. Didst thou not agree with me for a penny?

14 Take that thine is, and go thy way. I will give unto this last, even as unto thee.

15 *Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with my own? Is thine eye evil, because mine is good?

16 *So the last shall be first, and the first last, *for many be called, but few chosen.

We find this Parable only recorded by St. Matthew; nor have any thing to guide us in understanding the Scope of our Saviour's intent, but the 16 v. So the last shall be first, and the first last. For many are called, but few are chosen. Some here by First, understand such as are of greatest Repose and Esteem in the World; or who have the highest Opinion of themselves. By Last, they understand Persons who are of meaner Note and Reckoning in the World, and have low opinion of themselves. The former shall be last as to the Love and Favor of God, and any Reward from him; and the other shall be first. Orders by the First, understand the Jews, who were the first People God had in the World, and more dignified than any other by Privileges: By the Last, the Gentiles, who came last into the Church of God. This seems to be directly intended by our Saviour, who perfectly knew the Pride and invidious Temper of the Jews, who valued themselves upon their Privilege, that they were the chosen People of God, when the World lay in wickedness; that they were the first called into the Church, and were made equally Partakers of Spiritual Privileges with them. Having now fixed the Scope of the Parable, the Interpretation is easy. The Kingdom of Heaven, that is the sovereign Dispensation of God in calling Nations or Persons to partake of Spiritual Benefits in his Church, and consequently of eternal Blessedness; is like unto a Man that is an Householder, which went out early in the Morning to hire Labourers into his Vineyard. The Householder is God the Father, compared by Christ to an Husbandman, with respect to the Culture of Vines. Joh. 15. 1. to one that hath a Vineyard, Joh. 15. 1. 2. The Vineyard is the Church; the Work is that which concerns eternal Salvation, both of our own Salvation, and of others that are committed to our Charge, or that are within the Compuls of our Activity to do them spiritual good. The Labourers, are eminently, Persons in Office, and generally, all that are called by the Gospel. The hiring of them imports, the gracious Promise of the Reward published in the Gospel to those who will work. The Penny, is the Reward comprehensive of the spiritual Privileges, that Persons in the Church are made Partakers of. Men standing idle in the Market-place: signifies their neglect of the great and proper Work for which they came into the World, to glorify God, and live their Souls.

His going out at several times, and calling in some to the Vineyard, the third, sixth, and ninth hours, implies the Calling of the Jews in the early Age of the World, and his sending the Prophets in sundry times, when they were degenerated, to return to his Service.

The calling some at the tenth hour, particularly respects the bringing in the Gentiles by Preaching the Gospel, who before were without the Knowledge of God and the way to Life. The Even, is the time of Accounts and Recompense.

The murmuring of some, that they received no more than those that came later into the Vineyard, primarily and immediately signifies the Envy and Vexation of the Jews, that the Gentiles should be equal Partakers of the Grace of God with themselves, who for so many Ages had been his peculiar People.

The Householder's vindicating himself, is from two Considerations: wherein it appears, that his Liberty to make is perfectly consistent with his Justice to all. 1. That he agreed with them for a Penny, which they received: The Jews enjoyed those eternal Privileges of Gods Covenant which they so much valued themselves for, till they cut themselves off by their obstinate rejecting of his Grace. 2. That he might do what he pleased with his own. He was Master of his own Purses, and it was malignity to tax his Bounty to others, which was nothing prejudicial to what was due by Agreement to them.

Our Saviour concludes the Parable, that the Last shall be First: The Gentiles shall be made Partakers of the Gospel with the blessed Privileges attending to it: And the First shall be Last: That is, the Jews should be deprived of those Privileges. And analogically in every age, some who are first in Pretension of their own Merit, in Protection, and Reputation, but not in real Holiness, shall be last in Gods Account; and those who were sincere and diligent in the Christian Calling, the disordered by the World, shall be preferred before them: For many are called, but few are chosen. This is the Reason of what is said before: Many are called by the external Preaching of the Word, into the visible Communion of the Church; this is the evident meaning by the reading of the Parable, wherein is said, Persons were called at several Hours, Comprehending the Ministry of the Prophets and the Apostles, and all the succession of Preachers in every Age: and few are chosen: That is by the free and unchangeable Decree of God ordained to eternal Life, and to partake of saving Grace in order to the obtaining it. This is the main Scope of the Parable.

17 And Jesus going up to Hierusalem, took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them, 18 Behold we go up to Hierusalem, and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief Priests, and unto the Scribes, and they shall condemn him to death.

19 *And shall deliver him to the Gentiles, to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him: and the third day he shall rise again.

Both Mark and Luke give us account of this Passage. Mark faith Chap. 10. 32. And they were in the way going up to Hierusalem. Jesus went before them, and they were amazed, and as they followed, they were afraid, and he took again twelve, and began again to tell them, what things should happen unto him: Saying, behold we go up to Hierusalem, and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief Priests, and unto the Scribes, and they shall condemn him to death, and deliver him to the Gentiles, and they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and spit upon him, and shall kill him, and the third day he shall rise again. Luke hath Chap. 18. 31. Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold we go up to Hierusalem, and all things that are written by the Prophets concerning the Son of man, shall be accomplished: for he shall be delivered to the Gentiles, and shall be mocked, and spitefully reviled, and shall be scourged, and they shall spit upon him, and he shall die, and the third day he shall rise again. And they understood none of these things, and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things that were spoken. Our blessed Lord was yet upon his road from Galilee to Hierusalem; we have here an account of some of his travelling Disciples, to teach us to make use of all time for edifying, and profitable Discourse. Mark faith, that as they went, Jesus went before them, and they were amazed, and as they followed they were afraid. Mark gives us no account of any formidable Object in their Eyes: Those that think they are away from being made such fast to his death, forget that Luke faith, that our Saviour had further instructed them in this, they understood it not: But probably they knew he was going into the field of his Enemies, and thus made them after for a Multitude him the twelve, (it was not a Discourse fit for a Multitude and gives them an Account very particularly of what he will twice or thrice before taught them; he had before told them of his Death and Resurrection, and that he should be betrayed to death; here he describes the manner, how he should deliver him to the Gentiles, (to Pilate and Herod) he describes his precious Sufferings, he should be scourged, mocked, spit upon, and the kind of his Death, he should be crucified; that when these things came to pass, they might be assured that he was God, who had so punctually foretold things to come, not silent in their causes, but meer Contingencies, he comforteth them with two things. 1. That it was according to what had been foretold by the Prophets. 2. That tho he died, he should rise again the third Day. They had need of this forewarning, for a fore-arming; for considering that they now looked upon him as the Messiah, it might well pelt them to think how he should die; and when they had seen all these things come to pass, it might have shaken their Faith, but being particularly foretold, the coming of them to pass, rather confirmed their Faith in the Son of God, than weakened it.

But Luke faith, They understood none of these things; that is, barely they believed none of them, the saying was hid from them. The words were plain enough, but they could not reconcile them to their Reason, they could not conceive how he who was the Messiah could die: nor get over the Prejudice of his being a temporal Prince, and exercising a Kingdom in this World: For his rising again the third Day, they could not believe it.

21 And he saith unto her, What wilt thou? She saith unto him, Grant that these my two Sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other the left, in thy Kingdom.

Mark faith Chap. 10. 35. And James, and John, the Son of Zebedee, came unto him saying, Master, we would that thou shouldst do for us what we desire. And he said, what would ye, that I should do for you? They said unto him, Grant unto us, that we may sit, one on thy right hand, the other on thy left, Hand in thy Glory. Matthew's saying, In thy Kingdom, Mark in thy Glory, leaves us in some doubt whether these two Disciples and their Mother, had here some casual Notion of the Kingdom of Heaven, because Christ had before spoken of some that should be first in it, and others last. Or were in some expectation of some glorious secular Kingdom, which Christ might give his Rewards, and should exercise in the World; for that they had some such Thoughts, appears from Luke 22. 24. After 1. 6. This Mother of James and John was Salome Mark 15. 40. A constant follower of Christ, Mark 27. 55. Matthew faith she spake, Mark faith her two Sons spake. They would first have had a general Grant from Christ of whatsoever they should ask, or a certain thing. But wife Men will not to grant such Requests; Our Lord asks them what they would desire? Then do they betray their Ambition.

We there ever a more unreasonable Request, than for them to be Sutors for great Places to him, when he had but now told them, he was going to be Spite upon, Scourged, Crucified, Crucified? Yet there was this good in it, they by discovering a Faith in him, that notwithstanding all this, he should be exalted, and have a Kingdom. But how carnal are our Conceptions of Spiritual and Heavenly Things, till we be taught of God a right Notion of them?

22 But Jesus answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the Baptism, that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able.

Mark hath the same Chap. 10. 38. 39. Our Savior gently reproves them for their invidious Position, and again mentions, that they were first to Suffer, and then to enter into his glory, said that by much Tribulation they also must enter into the Kingdom of God, which was a thing fitter for their present Thoughts, than sitting at his right hand, and left hand, for we must suffer with him, if we will be glorified together.

Rom. 8. 17. How ready are we to ask we know not what? Are ye able to suffer, that I am to suffer? Hereby our Savior intimates, That those who are the first, and greatest Sufferers for Christ: shall have the greatest Rewards from him. Christ here expreth his Sufferings under the Notion of Drinking of a Cup, and being Baptized with a Baptism. A Cup is an ordinary Metaphor in Holy Writ, by which a Mens Portion in this Life is expreth, whether it be a Portion of good Things, or evil. Lk. 11. 6. 15. 17. Jer. 25. 15. Lam. 4. 21. Chap. 26. 39. 40. 42. John 18. 11. Drinking of a Cup is usually put for Suffering. Jer. 49. 12. Ezech. 23. 32. Obad. 16. The Metaphor being for Suffering to Death, by giving them a Cup of Poison to drink, or as others think, from the bitter Gall, at compositions to force men to drink off their Passions. To be Baptized with the Baptism I am Baptized with, hath the same Import, see Luke 12. 50. Afflictions are ordinarily compared in Scripture to Waters: To be Baptized, is to be dipped in Water; Metaphorically to be plunged in Afflictions: I am faith Christ to be baptized with Blood, overwhelmed with Sufferings and Afflictions. Are you able to do so? They say unto him, we are able. This was a rashly spoke as the other. How little do we know our own Strength? Ch. 26. 56. When Christ was apprehended, they all forsook him and fled.

23 And he saith unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism, that I am baptized with, and to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine *to give, *Chap. 25. 34 but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.

Mark hath the same Ch. 10. 39. 40. Our Savior here tells them, that as he was first to Suffer and then enter into his Glory; so they that should be glorified with him, should also first suffer with him, for none shall be Crowned, but those who strive Lawfully, 2 Tim. 2. 5. And all that will give Glory in Christ Jesus shall suffer Persecution, 2 Tim. 3. 12. But who should be highest in the Kingdom of God, his Father must determine upon whose Will, the disposal of his Kingdom, and the preferences in it depended. This Text hath been abused, by those who have denied Christ's Deity, and Equality to the Father, as if it served their Purpose: Because Christ here denieth it in his Power, to dispense of the Kingdom of Heaven; but besides that, he elsewhere asserts the contrary. Joh. 10. 23. 37. 12. Christ doth not here speak of what was in his Power but what was his Office as Mediator, so his work was to encourage them to fight the good Fight, not to dispense out Crowns to them. Or else, he speaketh of himself as Man, as he speaketh, Joh. 14. 28. Nor indeed doth Christ here deny, that it was in his Power, but only that it was in his Power, to give this preference to any, except those for whom his Father had prepared it. Note the Greek, ος κειν εδωκεν αλλα ος εδωκεν, That is, I am not to give, but to them for whom it is prepared: So that those words I shall be given to them) which our Translators put in, were better left out. All this was before ordered and determined by God, and he could only dispense of the Kingdom of God, according to the Eternal Council, αλλα (which we translate but) hath here the Force of αλλα (unless) as in Mar. 9. 8. 2 Cor. 2. 5. Besides that to shew the Order of the Trinity in working; Acts of Power and Precedence, are usually ascribed to the Father, tho by other Scriptures it appears that the Son in then co-operate with the Father.

24 *And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren. *Luk. 22. 24

Mar. 10. 41. Here is not yet a Word of Peter's Primacy, or any Claim he put in for it, nor is Kenneth, had the others any Apprehension of such an Establishment, for then, neither would James and John have put in for it, nor would all the Disciples (among whom Peter was one) have been so displeased at the Ambition of James and John, yet they seem to be tick of the same Disease, and to have been surprised only, that they had the start of the Motion, and had put in their Petition first.

25 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles, exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them.

26 But *it shall not be so amongst you, *but whosoever will be great amongst you, let him be your minister. *1 Pet. 5. 3. *Chap. 23. 12. Mar. 9. 35.

27 And whosoever will be chief amongst you, let him be your servant.

So Mark hath much the same Ch. 10. 42. 43. 44. Luke hath also much the same, (but it seemeth spoken at another time) Luk. 22. 25, 26, 27. I shall not here inter-meddle with the Disputes, some have founded on this Text: Whether there may be a Civil Magistracy amongst Christians: A thing undoubtedly Foreign to the Sense of this Text. Or, Whether Christ here Ethapheth a Party amongst Ministers; Which I do not think our Lords design here: Nor yet, with that other Question, Whether Ministers of the Gospel may take upon them, the exercise of any Civil Power: That which our Saviour here intendeth, is to discourage his Kingdom from the Kingdoms of the World: Those Kingdoms are over mens Bodies and Estates, his was a spiritual Kingdom, over the Hearts and Consciences of Men. Or rather, his was a Kingdom of Glory, where there would be no need of Rulers and Magistrats, as in the Governments of the World, nor any such Exercise of Authority, as is here Exercised in the Government of Earthly Kingdoms, and Priests. 2. To condemn Ambition, and Pride in his Disciples, as making them most unfit for this Kingdom, which is a thing he had before taught them. The way to be greatest in Heaven, is to be humblest, to be Low, and mean in our own Eyes: This I think

This piece of the History, is related by two of the other Evangelists, but with great difference. Like before this, mentioneth a Discourse upon the way, upon our Saviour's first sight of the City, and his Prophecy of the Destruction of it; but no other Evangelist mentioning it, I shall pass it over, till I come to his History. Mark hath this part of the History thus. Ch. 11. 11. And Jesus entered Jerusalem, and went into the temple, and began to cast out of the temple all things, and said, Every one that curseth thee, shall be cursed.

the Temple, and when he had looked round about upon all things, and the Evening was come, he went out to Bethany with the twelve. And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry. (Then he relates, our Saviour cursing the barren Fig-tree, which I leave till I come to it in Order, v. 15. And they came to Jerusalem, and Jesus went into the Temple, and began to cast out of them that sold and bought in the Temple; and overturn the Tables of the Money-Changers, and the Seats of them that sold Doves: And would not suffer that any Man should carry a Vessel through the Temple. And he taught, saying unto them, It is not written, My House shall be called of all Nations the House of Prayer, but you have made it a Den of Thieves: And when the Even was come he went out of the City, v. 19. Luke hath, Ch. 19. 45. And he went into the Temple, and began to cast out things that sold there, and those that bought, saying to them, It is written, My House is the House of Prayer, but you have made it a Den of Thieves: And he taught daily in the Temple. It is plain by all the Evangelists that our Saviour coming to Jerusalem, five days before the Passover, went every night to Bethany, about two miles off, and returned in the Morning to the Temple, where Luke faith that he taught daily. The first day, it should seem by Mark, that he only came into the Temple, look round about upon all things, and with the twelve went out to lodge at Bethany. By his going into the Temple, we must understand only the outward Court, for the Priests and Levites only might enter into the Inner-Court, and the Holy Place; and the High Priests, only might enter into the Holiest of all. This Mark mentions not his driving out the Buyers and Sellers the first day, but reciteth it as if it had been done the second day of his coming; yet the best Interpreters think that it was done the first day, as Matthew and Luke seem to hint; nor is any thing more unusual, than for the Evangelists to set down things out of the Order of time, in which they were done. Some learned Authors in the Hebrew Learning tell us, That in the outward Court, was a daily Market of such things as were used for Sacrifices, Wine, Salt, Oyl, Oxen, and Sheep; But it being but three or four days before the Passover, the Market was much greater, because of the great multitude of Lambs, then to be used. By the Law, Exod. 30. 12. 15. every one also was to bring an half Shekel. For this purpose there were Tables of Money Changers; Men that were furnished with half Shekels to change with the People, that every one might have his half Shekel, and thole that to be changed, allowed some little Profit to those that changed their Money, which gain was called Abolus; thence the Changers were called Abolus, Money Changers. These that sold Doves were there, to furnish the Women that came up to their Purification with their Oyl; according to the Law, Levit. 12. 6. This was the reason of that great Market, which our Lord found in the outward Court of the Temple, and it is not likely that our Lord should there abuse the first day, and take no notice of them, but the next day and correct them, which makes Interpreters think, Mark in this Relation postponed this part of the History, and wrote two Questions. 1. Whether it was unlawful for our Saviour to cast figs into the Court of the Temple? 2. What Authority did our Saviour dare to do this? To the first must be said, That it had not been unlawful, our Saviour would not have reproved them, for turning his Fathers House and the House of Prayer, into a place of Merchandize. Nor should he have driven them out in such a Zeal, overturning the Tables, &c. which he had done also once before, Job. 2. 15. The Temple was built by Gods direction, not only dedicated by Men, but Gods Acceptation of it was testified: It appeared by Job. 2. 19. it was a Type of Christ's Body. We know there were special Privileges granted to those that did very toward it, 1. King. 9. 3. God faith, he had hallowed it, that separated it from common use to his Service amongst other things for an house of Prayer, Isa. 56. 7. Now we read of no other things sold there, but what were useful for Sacrifices; yet this was a Civil use, and a Profanation of that Holy Place, because there were Market-places in Jerusalem, in which these things might have been done. It had been against Liberty, if the Temple had not been hallowed in this manner, if such things had been done in the Synagogues, being places set apart, and commonly used for Gods Worship, but not the Temple, which was so specially hallowed, was doubtless a great Profanation of the Holy Place. As to the second Question: By what Authority our Lord, being no publick Magistrate, did these things? I am not so foolish to determine that, he being the Eternal Son of God, and now in the Exercise of his Regal Power, as I am to give an Account how it came to pass, that the Priests and Scribes and Pharisees never questioned him for what he did; for if any will say, That we prefer the words of their taking Council against him: I reply, But we read of nothing relating to this laid to his Charge. Nor do we read of their Questioning him, when he did the things before, before an Account of which we have in Job. 2. For this I know some say, that our Saviour did this Fig-Scouring. That the Jews had a Law, That any might punish even to Death, such as profaned the Worship, or Holy things of God; which they justify from Deut. 13. 9. and the Examples of Phineas killing Amri and Kisbi, Numb. 25. 6. and Masabiah killing the Yem, Sacrificing to Idols at Modin, and the Kings Commissioner, of which we read in 2 Maccab. 2. 24. 25. yet this doth no way give me any Satisfaction; for as on the one side, I should not have known how to have defended the Act of Phineas, if God had not by and justified him, Gen. 34. 26. that the Law in Deut. 13. 9. is to be expounded of private Persons. So on the other side, if the Priests and Scribes, and Pharisees, had not known of some Law that justified our Saviour in this, I can hardly conceive they would have quietly put it up, especially considering that probably their Profit was concerned, if they had for Gain Licensed those Traders, to a place within the Compuls of the Temple; as is very probable. Being therefore fully satisfied, that our Saviour who was Lord of the Temple, and to whom the Spirit was given without measure, did no more, than he might Lawfully do, I am willingly ignorant how it came to pass, that he met with no opposition in it, because God hath not pleased in his Word to inform us. It is certain that he did the thing, and that it was a thing to be done, and that he, as the Son of God, had Authority to do it; what made them take it so foolishly, I cannot tell, nor is it necessary for us to know, nor of any great advantage.

15 And when the chief priests, and the scribes, saw the wonderful things that he did, and the children crying in the temple, and saying, Hosanna to the Son of David, they were fore displeased.

16 And said unto him, Hearst thou what these say? And Jesus faith unto them, Yea, Have ye never read Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings, thou hast perfected praise?

The other Evangelists say nothing of this part of the History: The wonderful things here mentioned, are his healing the Blind and Lame, of which we read v. 14. The Cry of the Children doubtless more displeased them; it was of the same Nature with that of the multitude in the way, and in the Streets when our Lord came into Jerusalem, they owned Christ as the Messiah, and gave him Praise, and wished all manner of Felicity to him. The Pharisees viewing a displeasure at the Adoration, Christ referred them to what was written, Psal. 3. 4. it is thou hast Founded, or Ordained strength, that is, a solid, and firm Praise: A prediction that from the Testimony of his weak Persons, the Glorious power of Christ should be presumed, and from such mean and despicable beginnings; great and Glorious things should come to pass.

18 Now in the morning, as he returned into the city, he hungered.

19 And when he saw a fig-tree in the way, he came to it, and found nothing thereon but leaves only, and said unto it, Let no fruit grow on thee, hence forward for ever. And presently the fig-tree withered away.

20 And when the disciples saw it, they marvelled, saying, How soon is the fig-tree withered away?

21 Jesus answered, and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, If ye have faith * and doubt not, I say unto you, that this, which is done to the fig-tree, but also, if ye shall say to this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea, it shall be done.

22 * All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.

Luke hath nothing of this passage, but Mark relateth it with some Variation, and Additions: The Variation some time, as to which the Evangelists were not careful. Matthew relates this Miracle, as done in the Morning of the second day, as Christ and his Disciples returned from Bethany; so doth Mark, Ch. 11. 12, but Matthew speaks, as if the Disciples discerned it presently Withered. Mark mentions it, as not discerned to be Withered, till the next Morning, v. 20. Mark faith, v. 13. For the time of Figs was now, which breeds a Difficulty, why our Saviour should Curse the Fig-tree, for having no Fruit, when the time for its Fruit was not come (of which more by and by.) Mark faith v. 21, 22. That Peter calling to remembrance his Master Cursing the Fig-tree, faith unto him Master, Behold the Fig-tree which thou Curdest is Withered away. And Jesus answering said unto them, Have faith in God: There repeats the substance of what Matthew hath in v. 21, 22. to which Mark addeth, v. 25, 26. And when you stand Praying, forgive, if you have ought against any; that your Father also which is in Heaven, may forgive you your Trespases. But if you forgive not your Trespases, neither will your Father which is in Heaven, forgive you your Trespases. When our Lord had been in the Temple, and driven out the Buyers and Sellers there, he went out of the City to ly at Bethany, either to avoid the noies of the City (now very full of People, the Passover being so nigh) or to get a more private place for Prayer. He returns the next Morning, and being an Hungry, and seeing a Fig-tree in his way, he goes to it, finds it full of Leaves, but no Fruit on it. He faith unto it, Never Fruit grow on thee more. Mark faith, For the time of Figs was now: yet it should seem our Saviour Curse this Tree? Some think, that by reason here meant Sejanus, as indeed the Greek word often signifieth this would have the meaning to be, For it was now Sejanus even for Figs. But this rather Arguement, than about the Difficulty, for why should our Saviour Curse it, for having no Figs, when the Year was such, as was not Seasonable? Others therefore think, that it should be, then the Fig-tree would be, Where he was, was a time of Figs. For this is said, 1. That the Greek Spruce and Accents were ordinarily left out in ancient Copies, which if they be taken away, the Words are the same. 2. That this was according to Truth, for it was a time of Green Figs, at least it being near Jerusalem, and but three or four days before the Passover, about which time they reap their Corn, as appears from Lev. 23. 16. Deut. 16. 9. and it is plain from Can. 2. 13. that in the beginning of their Spring, their Fig-trees put forth Green Figs. But when I consider, that none of the ancient Translations are according to this Truth, but as our Translations, I conclude, that the Antients understood it, it is not so, and it is necessary to interpret the Words contrary to their Unanimous Sense: Others therefore tell us, that Fig-trees, or at least some kind of them (like Orange-trees) had Leaves and Fruit upon them always, some Green, some half Ripe, some full Ripe, and that these kept on their Leaves all the Winter: So that our Saviour seeing Leaves, might be led to it with an Expectation of some Fruit put forth the former Year, for the time for the Ripening of Fruit, of that kind that Year, was not come, and finding none he Cursted it. Thereby in a Type, shewing what should be done to Barren Souls, who have only Leaves, no true Fruit of Righteousness. Or, what if we should say, that he did not Curse it, with any respect to its want of Fruit, but only to their Divine Power, working a Miracle? And presently the Fig-tree Withered away: Ailion as our Saviour had Cursted it, it began to Withere. Mark tells us this was the next Morning, Ch. 11. 20. he said Peter, after he had Curse the Fig-tree which thou Curdest is Withered away. Matthew faith, When the Disciples saw it, they marvelled, saying, How soon is the Fig-tree Withered away? Upon this our Saviour telleth Peter and the rest, that if they had Faith, and doubted not, they should not only do that which he had done to the Fig-tree, but if they said to that Mountain, be removed and cast into the Sea, it should be done. This is interpreted by v. 22. All things whatsoever ye shall ask in Prayer, ye shall receive: We met with the like Expectation before, Mat. 17. 20. Mark hath the same, Ch. 11. 23. Luke hath it, Ch. 17. 6. It is an Expression which ought not to be strained further than to signify, That there is nothing conducive to the Glory of God, and our own good, but Believers may receive at the Hand of God, if they can believe without doubting, that what they would have shall come to pass. I see no reason to Discourage of a Faith of Miracles, as different from other Faith; which only thus differed, that the Disciples (the Apostles I mean) had a Power given them, and a Promise made to them, that they should be able to work miraculous Operations, which is not given to other Christians; saving only the particular occasions of that time, to give Credit to the Gospel. The General proposition is true, and shall be made Good, to every Believer: That whatsoever Good is made the matter of a Promise (such are all Good things) shall be given to believing Souls, Praying for them. But there were of old special Privileges, not made to the People of God in general, but to particular Persons, for particular Ends; we cannot expect to do, or obtain such things now. Nothing is too big for true Faith to obtain, but that Faith must have a Promise to lean upon, and it must be shewed by Prayer, as v. 22. Mark adds, that it must be all attended with Charity, a charitable Heart ready to forgive, and Actually forgiving our Brethren their Trespases: But it is no more than we met with in Matthew, Ch. 6. v. 14, 15, where we opened the Sense of those Words.

23 * And when he was come into the Temple, the chief priests and the elders of the people, came unto him, as he was teaching, and * said, By what authority dost thou these things? and who gave thee this authority.

Mark hath before this, Ch. 11. 18. And the Scribes and chief Priests heard it: That is, his turning the Buyers and Sellers out, and overturning the Tables of the Money Changers, and saying how they might destroy him: For they feared him, because all the People was astonished at his doctrine. Then v. 27. he faith, And they came again to him, and as he was walking in the Temple, there came to him the Chief Priests, and the Scribes, and the Elders: And say unto him, By what Authority dost thou these things? And who gave thee this Authority to do these things? Luke hath, Ch. 19. 47. 48. And he answered them in the Temple, but the Chief Priests, and the Scribes, and the Chief of the People sought to destroy him: And could not find what they might do, for all the People were very attentive to hear him. It is plain that our Saviour went every Night to Bethany, and returned to Jerusalem every Morning, and daily Preached in the Temple. And Luke faith, the People were very attentive to hear him. In the Greek it is, being open him, hearing him. They were also much affected with the Miracles, which they had seen him working: So as the Scribes, and the Elders feared him (Mark Mark.) This possibly might be one reason, why they made no opposition to our Saviour, driving the Buyers and Sellers out of the Temple, viz. For fear of the People; for we must remember, that they were a conquered Tributary People, and under the Jurisdiction of the Exercise of their own Religion, yet they had a Liberty for the Exercise of their own Religion, yet they had not such a Power as before: For as we saw Lausil for them to put any to Death, Job. 18. 31. And for the preserving of their own Liberty, they were obliged to take care, of causing any Tumults for matters concerning their Religion. So as what they did of this Nature, they did by Caute rather than plainly, and openly Attempting it. Mat. 14. 1. It is likely, they might have some previous, secret Councils, what Method to take mentioned both by Mark and Luke: The Method it seems which they agreed upon, was first to send to him, to know, By what Authority he did these things, and who gave him such Authority? This is mentioned both by Matthew and Mark, they sent such a Message to John, Ch. 1. 19, 20, 21. They had often questioned him about his doctrine, and had gone by the word, he justifying his doctrine to their Faces. For the Truth of his Miracles, it was so Evident that they could not question that: They therefore now only question his Authority to Preach. This Question was Captious enough, for if he had said by a Divine Authority, they would probably have accused him of Blasphemy: For an Humans Authority, they knew he had none, according to their Rules for Order, for they came from the Court, that should have given them such Authority: Our Saviour well enough understanding their Design, gave them, who would not understand his Divine Mission by his Miraculous Operations, a wary Answer.

24 And Jesus answered, and said unto them, I also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell me, I likewise will tell you, by what authority I do these things.

25 The baptism of John, whence was it, from heaven? or of men? And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say from heaven he will say unto us, Why did ye not believe him?

26 But if we shall say, Of men, we fear the people, for all hold John as a prophet.

27 And they answered Jesus, and said, We cannot tell. And he said unto them, Neither tell I you, by what authority I do these things.

We have the same without any considerable Alteration Mat. 11. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33. Luke also records the same History, Ch. 20. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. with no considerable difference, only he thus prefaces to it. And it came to pass that on one of those days, as he taught the People in the Temple, and preached the Gospel, the Chief Priests, and the Scribes, came upon him with the Elders. Which makes it plain, that their Question principally related to our Saviours Preaching. It should seem, they had a Law prohibiting any to preach in the Temple without Authority, from the Chief Priests, and Elders. If any one think this was not an apposite Answer, to the Question propounded to him, 1. They ought to consider, that our Saviour did truly Judge, they deserved no Answer, for his Works had testified of him, that he acted by a Divine Power; he should not need tell them so, in so many Words. 2. In very deed, there was a direct Answer couched in this Question of our Saviour. I pray, faith he, by what Authority did John Preach and Baptize? They could not but be by an Humans Authority, for they knew he was not Licensed by their Magistrate: It must follow that he Acted by Virtue of an extraordinary Divine Mission, so do I (saith our Saviour) and have given you a greater Proof of it, than ever John Baptized did. But our Lord well knew, that the Pharisees had a greater Reverence for John the Baptist, than for him, and that many of the People had a great Opinion of John, indeed greater than of him. Our Saviour coming Baring and Drinking, as he expressed it, (that is) being of a more free, and sociable Conversation, which did not so please the Pharisees, and their supercilious Humour; he therefore chuseth to teach them by a Question, in which also as they could resolve themselves, they might know by what Authority he did, what he did. Besides, by the Baptism of John, mentioned in our Saviours Question, it is not to be understood only his Administration of Baptism, but his doctrine, and indeed the whole of his Ministry: For as his Baptism, is called the Baptism of Repentance; so the Pharisees here argue, that if they should say 8 Go ye therefore into the high-ways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

Luke hath this Parable, Ch. 14. from v. 16. to 26. which hath made Diverse Interpreters think, that Matthew had put it out of its due order, for Luke reports it as spoken long before, and that is not in the Temple, but at a Pharisee's House where he was at Dinner, and upon occasion of one of them saying, Blissed be that shall Eat Bread in the Kingdom of God. But I know no reason why we may not allow our Saviour to have used the same Parable twice, in two differing Companies, and upon two different occasions, especially considering there are remarkable differences in Lukes and Matthew's Relation. I shall therefore leave the consideration of Luke's Relation till I come to that Chapter in his Gospel, where I shall meet with it in Course, and consider only what Matthew hath. We must remember this is a Parable, not an Historical Narration. The first Verse tells us, Then Jesus answered, and spake again to them in Parables. he answered, that is, He began a Discourse (so the Word very often signifies) our Saviour hath never given us any particular Explication of this Parable, nor any Proparabola or Epparabola, any Sentence, before, or after the Parable, guiding us as to the Explication, except only that short Sentence, v. 14. For many are called but few are chosen, which rather guideth us in the Explication of the four latter Verses, than of the whole Parable, yet it is not hard for us to find out our Saviour's Scope in this Parable. It seemeth to be double. 1. To inform those to whom he spake of the Destruction suddenly coming upon the Jews, for their Rejection of the Gospel, and of the calling of the Gentiles. To let us know that neither amongst the Jews nor Gentiles, all should be saved, whom God called by the External Ministration of the Gospel: But those alone who belonging to the Election of Grace, should be found in the Day of Judgment, having on the Wedding Garment. So then: The Kingdom of Heaven here signifies, The way, or Equity of God in the Dispensation of the Gospel, or the Admittance of things in order to the Kingdom of his Glory. The King here mentioned, must be he who is the King of Kings. The Marriage for his Son, is the Exhibition of the Covenant of Grace. Which whosoever layeth hold on, Isa. 56. 4. is by Faith United to Christ, which Union is often expressed in Holy Writ, under the Notion of a Marriage, Psal. 45. 10. 11. Eph. 5. 23. &c. Or their Union with him in Gal. Rev. 19. 9. The Persons bidden were the Jews, The Servants that called them to the Wedding, were those that were faithful, amongst their ordinary Teachers, or the Prophets, such as Isaiah and the rest, whom they refused to hearken unto. The other Servants might figure John the Baptist, and the twelve, and others sent out by Christ, to tell them that Christ was now come, there wanted nothing but their coming to him, and receiving of him. Their making Light of it, going one to his Farm, another to his Merchandise, and others taking the Servants, entreating the Servants spitefully, and slaying them, signifies the Jews general refusal of the Gospel, and the particular Rage, and Mice of some of them, shewn in their abusing of the Jews' Prophets, and Messengers, and which he knew come of them would further shew against Stephen and James. The Kings sending forth his Armies, and slaying the Murderers, signifieth the coming of the Roman Armies, and their utter destroying Jerusalem. The sending of the Servants into the High-ways, and inviting all those whom they found to the Wedding, signifieth the Apostles, going to the Gentiles, and Preaching the Gospel to all Nations. Which much enlarged the Territories of the Church, gathering in many who professed to accept of Christ, but not all in Truth, and Sincerity. The Kings coming to see his Guests, signifieth Christ coming at the Day of the last Judgment, with his Fan in his Hand, thoroughly to purge his Floor. His finding one without his Wedding Garment. Signifieth his finding many Hypocrites at the Day of Judgment. The Guests that were either wont to put on their belt Cloths (as we usually do) or a particular Garment which was then in use, and was worn by them who were invited to Weddings. By the Wedding Garment here is meant Christ, Rom. 13. 14. who is at this Feast, both the Bridegroom, and the Meat at the Feast, and the Wedding Garment also, in Diverse Respects. It is but an Idle Dispute, whether Faith is meant, or Love, neither the one nor the other separately, but Faith that worketh by Love. Whatsoever God requireth of us, that we may be made meet for the Kingdom of God, without Faith and Hisself, none can save God. His being speechless signifies, That those who have lived under the profifers of Grace and Salvation, and have rejected them, neither believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, nor bringing forth Fruits of Holiness, will be without excuse at the Day of Judgment. And the Kings Commanding his Servants to Bind him Hand and Foot, &c. signifieth that all such Persons as live within the Church, under the means of Grace, yet dye impenitent, and unbelievers, having not by a true Faith received Christ as their Saviour, and brought forth the Fruits of true Repentance and Holiness, shall get nothing by their being within the Church, and externally called, but shall be thrown to Hell as well as others, the pains of which are here expressed by Binding Hand and Feet, lying in outer Darkness, Weeping and Gnashing of Teeth, as in other places by a Worm that shall never dye, and a Fire that shall never go out, all Metaphorical Expressions signifying the Vexations, and Intolerable Punishment of the Damned in Hell. For (saith our Saviour) many are called, but few are chosen. We meet with this Expression, before, Ch. 20. 16. where the Sense of it was not so obvious, as it is here. Some by it here understood, a choice unto Life Eternal: Nor without reason, if that be understood, by the Marriage Supper, as it is Rev. 19. 9. and it appears to be partly at least the Sense of it here, in that the Person without the Wedding Garment is Doomed to Eternal Miserie: If we by the Marriage Supper understand an Union with Christ here, or the Benefits flowing from that, we must by Chosen here understand Affectionally called, being made partakers of that special Distinguishing Grace, which bringeth Salvation. The Gospel is Preached to many whom God doth not will to save, by special Grace, so as they receive it, convert and are saved. The former part of this Parable, doth hint us the reason why the Jews rejected the offers of Grace and Salvation made to them, viz. The power that the Temptations from the World of Pleasure, Profit, and Honour had upon them. As the latter part all sheweth us the true reason why they are saved, to be from the free Grace of God, viz. because they are Chosen, chosen to Eternal Life, and particularly favoured to be made partakers of his special, and distinguishing Grace.

15 Then went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

Mark Ch. 12. 13. saith, They sent unto him certain of the Pharisees, and of the Herodians, to catch him in his Word. Luke saith, Ch. 20. 20. They watched him, and sent four Spies, which should feign themselves just Men, that they might take hold of his Words, that so they might deliver him up to the Rulers, and Authority of the Jews. Life was what they sought for. This they had no Power allowed by the Romans to take away without the Sentence of Pontius Pilate, the Roman Governour. That they might have something to accuse him of before him, which he might condemn him for, they first take Counsel. They law he did nothing worthy of Death: They therefore illude their Counsels in a resolution, to fend some Persons to discourse with him, under the pretence of Confidentious good Men, to propound some Questions to him, his Answer to which, might give them some opportunity to accuse him of Blasphemy, or Sedition. The men they pitch upon, were some of them Pharisees, some Herodians.

16 And they sent out unto him their disciples with the Herodians, saying, Master, We know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man, for thou regardest not the person of men.

17 Tell us therefore, What thinketh thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar, or not?

Mark hath the same, Ch. 12. 14. So hath Luke, Ch. 20. 21. There is a great Variety of Opinions, who these Herodians were, we read of them in an early Confutation against Christ, with the Pharisees, Mar. 3. 6. Some think, they were Foreigners of other Nations; when Herod being Tetrarch of Galilee, had brought in from contiguous Pagan Nations, but this is not Probable, for then the Pharisees would have had nothing to do with them. Others think, that they were some of Herod's Guard, or Soldiers; but neither is this Probable, considering the illuse of their Counsel to fend some whom Christ should not know, nor be frightened with. Others (which is more Probable) think they were some of those Jews, who favoured Herod's side, and had forgotten the Liberty of their Country, joining with the Conquerors, and taking his Part. Others think they were Sadducees. Others say, they were Persons, that were of a Mungrel Religion, made up of Judaism and Gentilism. Mar. 8. 15. Our Saviour bids them beware of the Leaven of the Pharisees, and of Herod; which maketh it Probable, That the Herodians were not only Courtiers, and for the Roman interest, but that they had embraced some particular Doctrines, much differing from the Pharisees; it is likely, they were Leavened with some of the Doctrine of the Sadducees, denying Angels and Spirits, and the Resurrection. It is plain, that they were some of Herod's Faction, what their Principles were as to Religion, is not to plan, nor of much concern to us to know. They begin their Discourse to our Saviour, with a great Compliment, Master, a Name the Jews did usually give to those, whom they owned for Teachers. We quote that thou art true, one that will tell us the Truth, and speak as thou thinkest to be true: And teachest the way of God in Truth, neither carest thou for any man, for thou regardest not the person of Men. Thou wilt speak nothing out of Fear, nor for any Favour or Affection: But plainly tell us what is Truth, and what God would have us do in the Cases we offer to thee. In these Words they give us the true Character of a good Teacher, he must not be guided by Men, True, one that will truly teach Men the way of God, and in the faithful discharge of their Duty, not be afraid of the Face of Men. But herein they condemned themselves, for if our Saviour was so, why did they not believe in him, and obey what he taught them? Tell us therefore what thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give Tribute unto Caesar? Or not? But how came this to be a Case of Conscience? What doubt could there be, whether Men for their Conscience? What doubt could there be, whether Men for their Peace, might not lawfully part from their own, especially such a little part of it? Some think, that they spake with Relation to that particular Tribute, which was demanded, which they think, was that half Shekel, Exod. 30. 12. 15. paid by the Jews every year, which was to go for the Service of the Tabernacle: They say, that the same had ordered this Payment to go to the Emperor, and thus they laid the Question, Whether they might lawfully pay that which was appointed, as a Testimony of their Homage to God, and for the Service of the Temple, to a profane use. I must confess I cannot so freely agree to this, wanting any good proof, that the Romans exacted that Payment for the Emperor, and thinking it a very probable Argument to the contrary. That the Tables of the Money-Changers, who changed the Peoples Money into half Shekels, fit for that Payment, was now continued. And if that Payment had been now altered, and turned to the use of the Civil Government, our Saviour's overturning those Tables and driving the Money Changers out, had offered them a fair opportunity, to have charged him with Sedition, which they did not do upon that Account. Another therefore think the Question propounded concerning the Lawfulness of making any Payments to the Emperor, looking upon him, as an enemy very envious of their Liberty, appears from Gal. 8. 33. And without doubt, the most of them paid such Taxes. Now these Hypocrites turn it into a Case of Conscience; God having made the Jews a free People, whether they should not sin against God, in paying these Civil Taxes to a Pagan Conqueror? There was one Tiendas, and Zadai mentioned, a Question Capious enough. For if he had said it was Lawful, he had probably incurred the Odium of the People, before this time, but for Fear of them: If he had said, it is not Lawful, they had what they sought for, a fair opportunity for accusing him, and delivering him up to Pontius Pilate, the Roman Governour at this time amongst them.

18 But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?

19 Shew me the tribute money. And they brought to him a penny.

20 And he saith unto them, Whose is this image, and superscription?

21 They lay unto him Caesars. Then saith he unto them, * Render therefore unto Caesar, the things that are Caesars, and unto God, the things that are Gods.

22 When they had heard these words, they marvelled, and left him, and went their way.

Mark hath the same, Ch. 12. 15. 16. 17. So hath Luke, Ch. 20. 23. 24. 25. 26. Our Saviour, saith Luke, perceived their craftiness, how subtilly they went about to entrap him. He calls them to shew him the Tribute Money: The Jews had two sorts of Money: Shekels and half Shekels, which was Money proper to them, and Roman Coin, Pence and Sesterces. Their Tribute was paid in this Coin. Accordingly they bring unto him a Penny, a Roman Penny as much in value as a Sesterce, which the Romans exacted of every Head. The sovereign Power, was always looked upon, as an Act of Sovereignty: Most Princes use to have their Effigies stamp upon their Coin, and some Inscription about it, with their Names, and some Words expressive of their Dominion over such places, where their Coin is Current: So as the addition of a Princes Coin as Current amongst a People, was a Testimony of their owning, and subjection to such a Prince. Such an Image and Superscription, rendered therefore unto Caesar, the things which are Caesars, and unto God, the things that are Gods. Altho Caesar be an Usurper, yet God hath given you into his Hands, you have owned him, by accepting his Coin, as Current amongst you. His right, and Gods right are two distinct things. Religion doth not exempt you from your Civil Duties, and Obedience to Princes, in things wherein they have a Power to Command. Princes have Power to impose Tributes upon their Subjects, for the Maintenance, and upholding of the Civil Government. Let Caesar have his due, and let God have his right: You are a Company of Hypocrites, who by this Question would make me believe you have a great Zeal for God, and his Rights; and that you would not pay Taxes, that you might alert Gods Right over you, this is your Pretence; but indeed your Design is to try me, if you can persuade me by any Words of mine, to encourage you to any Sedition, or Acts of Disloyalty to your Civil Governours. I see no reason why I, Caesar hath his Right, and God hath his Right, you may give them both their Rights, and so you ought to do. Gods Kingdom is of another Nature, than the Kingdoms of the World. His Law forbiddeth no Civil Rights. Thus our Saviour Answers their Question for, as he maketh them to condemn themselves, if owning the Civil Magistrates Power, they did not give him his Rights, and so, as neither Caesar, nor yet the People had any just Cause of Exception against him for his Words. This Answer surpriseth them, they marvel, and go their way, having paid their Game, and got nothing.

23 The same day came to him the Sadducees, which say that there is no resurrection, & asked him, 24 Saying, Master, Moses said, If a man dye having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

25 Now there was with us seven brethren, and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased, and having no issue, left his wife unto his brother.

26 Likewise the second also, and the third, unto the seventh.

27 And last of all the woman dyed also.

28 Therefore in the resurrection whose wife shall she be of the seven? for they all had her. Mark, thus repeats the time History, Ch. 12. 18. 19. 20. &c. So doth Luke, Ch. 20. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. Concerning the Sadducees, we have before spoken, they were a Sect, amongst the Jews much differing from the Pharisees as may be seen, Act. 23. 8. Amongst other enormous Terrors, they denied the Resurrection, as may be seen in the Text, as well colleth upon the Person or thing, by which he sweareth to be his Judge; or to take a revenge upon him, in Case, he doth not believe in his Heart, what he affirmeth, or denieth with his Words, to be true or false, otherwise an Oath is no security at all. From whence appears, that it is unreasonable for any to swear by any other than God, who alone can have a knowledge of the Truth, and security of the Heart; and that he, who sweareth by any Creature, committeth Idolatry in his Heart, and in his Heart doth indeed Blaspheme, paying a Divine Homage to a Creature, and attributing to the Creature, what only agreeeth to the Creature. The Pharisees as it seemeth had taught the People, that it was Lawful to swear by the Creature; but all Oaths by Creatures did not bind to the performance of the thing promised by such Oaths. If a Man swears by the Temple, or by the Altar, It was saying, no Man was bound by such Oaths, to perform the thing, for which such Oaths were given as a security. But if any Man swear by the Gold of the Temple, or by a Gift, which he brought to the Altar, these Oaths did bind him. By the Gold of the Temple, is not to be understood the Golden Vessels used in the Temple; nor the Golden Plates, with which the several parts of the Temple shined; but the Gold which was brought as an Offering unto the Temple, and put into the Treasury there, of which and of the Gifts the Priests and Officers about the Temple, had a considerable share, which made them Equalize an Oath by these, to an Oath made by the Name of God itself: Our Saviour here sheweth the unreasonable Folly of the Tradition, and calleth them for it, Blind Guides, for in reason: The Temple Sanctifying the Gold, must it self be more especially Holy, that is, separate for an Holy use. The Temple was Holy, so was the Altar: before the Gold was brought into it, but the Gold was not Holy, till it was brought into the Holy place, and there offered. Secondly, we let them know, that Oaths by the Creatures were made did oblige, as much as if they had been made by God himself. They were indeed infinitely made for Men ought not to have sworn by Creatures, but being made, those who made them were bound to perform them, if the matter of them were not sinful. For he that swears by the Altar, swears by it, and all the things thereon: And he who swears by the Temple, swears by it, and him that dwelleth therein: And he who swears by Heaven, swears by the Throne of God, and him that sitteth thereon. For none who swear by inanimate things, could possibly be imagined to call the things which he knew had no Life, no Sense, no knowledge to be a Witness to the Truth of his Oath, as to what he believed, or what he intended. So as though he that sweareth by the Creature, be a profane Swearer, yet he is bound by his Oath, he indeed swearing by the God of those Creatures. He hath reason to repent or the profane, and unlawful form of his Oath; but if the matter be, what he may without sin perform, he is bound by his Oath to the performance of it.

23 Woe unto you scribes and pharisees, hypocrites, for ye pay tithe of mint, and Annise and Cummin, and have yet omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

We have much the same, Luk. 11. 42. only there it is, Thou Mint, and Rue, and all manner of Herbs, and pass over Judgments, and the Love of God. It is manifest by our Saviour's Words in the latter part of the Verse: These ought ye to have done; that he doth not blame the Pharisees exactly in Tithing Mint, Annise, Rue, Cummin, and all manner of Herbs, but their neglecting the weightier matters of the Law. Faith and Love to God, Judgment and Mercy. The Levites having no Inheritance, God ordained Tithes for their Maintenance; of which also the poor were to have a share. Lev. 27. 30. Num. 18. 23. The Pharisee boasted, Luk. 18. 12. that he paid Tithes of all he possessed; Christ here acknowledges, that the Pharisees were exact in tithing paying Tithes. But he blames them for their Partiality, neglecting the weightier things of the Law. 2. For their Hypocrisy, they were only exact in these little things, that they might be taken notice of, as Scrupulous observers of the Divine Law; while they omitted those things, which were of much more weight, which he reckoneth up: Faith by which some understand Faith in God, but the most, Faithfulness, and sincere and honest dealings with Men, in opposition to Fraud, and Cheating, and Circumventions, Judgments by which he means Justice, giving to every one what is their own: Mercy, by which he meant a Charitable behaviour, in helping such as are miserable, and afflicted. Love to God, which is the true Root, out of which all things should flow, and is indeed comprehensive of all our Duty toward God, as well as the Root of all our Good Works towards Men.

24 Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.

It is a Proverbial Expression used amongst them, against such as would pretend a great Niceness and Scrupulosity, and Zeal for, little things, but in matters of much higher Concern, and moment were not Nice, and Scrupulous at all, and this indeed is both a certain Note, and an ordinary Practice of Hypocrites: There is no man that is sincere in his Obedience to God, but hath respect to all God's Commandments, Psalm 119. v. 6. The more Duties be greater, of more moment for the Honour and Glory of God than other, which a good Man will lay the greatest stress upon, yet he will neglect nothing which the Law of God enjoineth him: But concerning Hypocrites, these two things are always true. 1. They are partial in their pretended Obedience. 2. They always lay the greatest stress upon the least things of the Law, bodily Labour, and Exercise, and those things which require least of the Heart, and least self-denial.

25 Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites: for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess.

26 Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also.

Luke hath this, Ch. 11. 39, 40. as occasioned by the Pharisees, wondering that he washed not before Dinner, instead of Extortion and Excess, he hath raucous and Wickedness, and addeth, Thou Fool, didst not see that made that which is within clean, that which is within also? But the same thing might be spoken at two several times: His speech is therefore to the Pharisees, with whom he Dined, v. 37. Here he speaks to the Disciples, and the Multitude. Our Saviour desired here to make to me not to be a Condemning of their Legal, or Traditional washings of Pots and Cups, which he elsewhere reprehended, but by way of allusion only; to blame them that in their whole Conversation, they rather studied an external Purity, than the inward Purity of the Heart, whereas if they would first have looked at Purity of Heart, the other would have followed: That a man may be outwardly pure, and inwardly filthy and iniquitous: But no man can have a pure Heart, but he will live a Pure and Holy Life; for the External Altar, as but the Imperfect Acts of the Soul: Out of the abundance of the Heart, the Mouth speaketh, and according to inclinations, and Affections of the Heart the Foot moveth, the Hand, and all the bodily Members act. For our Saviour's Application of this to their Traditional washings, I shall speak to it when I come to, Luk. 11. 39.

27 Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye are like unto whitened sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead mens bones, and of all uncleanness.

28 Even so ye also appear outwardly righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy, and iniquity.

The Similitude is of the same import, with the other to shew, that the Pharisees had only a Vizard of strictness, and Holiness, when in the mean time their Hearts were full of Lusts, Hypocrisy and Iniquity. The Jews had two sorts of Graves; some for ordinary Persons which appeared not to their Saviour likened the Pharisees, Luk. 11. 44. Others that were covered with Tombes, which were wont to be kept whited, so as they looked very fair outwardly, but had within nothing but Rotteness and Putrefaction. To these he compared them in this place. They were Men that made great show, but had nothing of any inward Purity or cleanness, but were full of Iniquity: Thus Paul called Ananias a whited Wall, and Psalm 59. The Psalmist called of the Throat of the Wicked, that it is an open Sepulchre.

30 And say, if we had been in the days of our Fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets.

Luke hath it, Ch. 11. 44. Woe unto you, for ye build the Sepulchres of the Prophets, and your Fathers killed them: Truly you bear Witness, that you allow the Deeds of your Fathers, for they indeed killed them, and you build their Sepulchres. It is plain by our Saviour's discourse, that the Pharisees were at great Charge at times, to rebuild or adorn the Sepulchres of the Lords Prophets, who had been slain by the Jews in former Ages, for testifying the Truth of God, and the Sepulchres of other Righteous Men dying for their Righteousness. This they did like a Company of Hypocrites, to persuade the World of what they also said. That had they lived in the times of these Prophets, and other good Men, they would have had no Hand in their blood.

31 Wherefore ye also be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are the children of them that killed the prophets.

32 Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers.

33 Ye serpents, ye generation of Vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?

You (saith our Lord) confess that you are lineally descended from those who killed the Prophets: You have not only this Blood communicated to you, but their Spirits, your Behaviours and Carriages towards me, and my Disciples have witnessed, and will yet further testify, that you are the Children of those who killed the Prophets in a Moral, as well as a natural Sense; you inherit the same Spirit, and are full of the same Malice and Rancor. They killed them, and you bury them: Seeing there is no reclaiming you, Go you on, Fill up the measure of your Fathers him. There is something more to be added, to make the Iniquity of this Nation full; you are a Company of Serpents, Vipers, that cannot escape the Damnation of Hell.

34 Wherefore behold, I send unto you Prophets, and wise men, and scribes, and some of them ye shall kill and crucifie, and some of them ye shall scourge in your Synagogues, and persecute them from city to city.

35 That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel, unto the blood of Zacharias, the son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar.

36 Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation.

Luke hath, Ch. 11. 49. 50. Therefore also said the Wisdom of God, I will send them Prophets and Apostles, and some of them they shall kill, and persecute. That the blood of all the Prophets, which was shed from the Foundation of the World, may be required of this Generation. From the blood of Abel, to the blood of Zacharias, who perished between the Altar and the Temple. Verily I say unto you, it shall be required of this Generation. Luke hath, Therefore also said the Wisdom of God. Matthew hath, Behold I send. Christ is the Wisdom of God, he here tells them, he would send them Prophets, Wise men, Scribes, Luke expounds it by Prophets and Apostles. Men Authorized by Christ, to reveal unto Men the Will of God, and Men that should be extraordinarily inspired to enable them themselves to deliver, that Serpents, but much sinner for their Work, than the present Scribes. And some you shall kill, and crucifie, &c. Our Lord in this only fore-tells, what usage both himself and his Apostles should meet with from this Nation, which was fulfilled, in what the Scripture telleth us, of the scourging of Paul the stoning of Stephen, the killing of James, &c. beside the Crucifying of himself. That upon you; that is, as he expounds it, v. 38. Upon this Generation may come all the Righteous Blood, that is, the blood of righteous men, from the blood of Abel, to the blood of Zacharias, shed upon the Earth, &c. Here arise two Questions. 1. Who this Zacharias the Son of Barachias was? 2. How it could stand with God's justice, to bring the Guile of the Lord of former Generations, upon this Generation. As to the first, some have guessed the Person spoken of, to have been one Zacharias the Son of Barachias, who was the last slain upon the taking of Jerusalem, as Josephus tells us, but our Saviour here speaks of a thing past, not to be afterwards done: Others think, it was Zacharias the Father of John Baptist, but we have no Proof that he dyed a violent Death: Others think, it was Zacharias, who was one of the small Prophets, but there was no Temple in his time. It is most probably concluded to be Zacharias, the Son of Zebedee, whom the Jews stoned with Stones, at the Commandments of Jefts: In the Court of the House of the Lord, Ch. 24. 21. The Fathers name indeed doth not agree, but first, Zacharias (as many of the Jews had) might have two Names, some think it was this same Zacharias, who is called the Son of Zebedee, Isa. 8. 2. Our Saviour nameth Abel, who lived before the Law, and Zacharias, who lived under the Law, both slain for Righteousness sake; that under them he might comprehend all the Martyrs slain in these two Periods, others judge, that these two are named, because we read of Abel's blood crying, Gen. 4. 10. and Zacharias' praying (when he dyed) That the Lord would requite his blood. For the other Question. It is but Righteous with God, to punish the sin of Parents upon the Children; and so the just Vengeance doth not ordinarily reach further than the Tenth and Fourth Generation, yet where many reach further, and our doers, Isa. 65. 6. I will (saith our Lord) bring into their Bosom your iniquities, and will be like you, for ye have together. That was the Case. Therefore Christ tells them, that Vengeance should sleep no longer, but come upon that Generation, which happened in the utter Destruction of Jerusalem, within less than forty years after. Our Lord concludes with a Pathetical Lamentation.

37 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem! thou that killest the Prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not?

38 Behold your house is left unto you desolate.

39 For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, * Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

We have the same, Luk. 13. 33-34. *O Jerusalem! Jerusalem! The doubling of the word, sheweth the vehemency of our Saviour's Affection. Thou killest the Prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee. That hath killed, and stoned, and are yet going on to do the like not taking notice of the Vengeance of God upon thee before for this very sin, 2 Chron. 36. 16, 17. Num. 9. 26. How often would I have gathered thee? Giving thee all External means, proper to have reformed thee, and reconcile thee to God, as a Hen gathereth her Chickens under her Wings: Which if thou hadst accepted, and embraced, the Chickens are not far under the Wings of the Hen, from the danger of a Fire, than thou wouldst have been from Enemies. But thou wouldst not. Instead of hearkning to thy Prophets, thou killedst them, and didst those things sent unto thee, and so didst continually reject me, and all my offers, and tenders of Grace, Mercy, and Protection, through the mere obstinacy of thy perverse Will. Behold your House is left unto you desolate. Both the Temple, in which you place such a Confidence, and your own dwelling Houses shall be destroyed, burnt and razed down, or at least left without you as Inhabitants. For I say unto you, ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the Name of the Lord. I will appear no more to you as a publick Preacher, after two or three days for ever; and you, that the other day did exult in the Name of the Lord, shall be glad your selves, to see one of the Sons of Men, and shall say the same thing, Blessed is he, Son of Man, for whereas former interpreters the term Till, &c. of the day of Judgment, or the time when the Jews shall be converted, I take them to be strained Interpretations. Till here certainly is to be interpreted, as Psalm 110. 1. and Math. 1. 23. and this Comprehended in the History for after this time, our Saviour appeared in the Temple publicly no more. For the Disputes raised from v. 7. About Gods secret Will, whether he would will the Salvation of the Jews, &c. take the Affirmative part, to have no Foundation in this Text, for would I, is plainly enough here interpreted by the foregoing Word, Sending them Prophets, and other Ministers, to persuade them to Repentance, and Reconciliation with God. As the use of means proper to an end appear to us, Indications of the Will of him that useth them.*

CHAP. XXIV.

And Jesus went out, and departed from the temple, and his disciples came to him, for to shew him the buildings of the temple.

2 And Jesus said unto them, See ye not all these things? Verily I say unto you, * there shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

Mark hath, Ch. 13. 1, 2. One of his Disciples, Luke hath come, Luk. 21. 5. Mark hath the Disciple said, Master what manner of Stones, and Buildings are these? Luke hath, they spake how the Temple was adorned with divers Jewels and Gifts. All three Evangelists agree in the Substance of our Saviour's reply. Christ had now done his Work in the Temple, where he never came more, and was going toward the Mount of Olives, where they shall find him in the next Verse: His Disciples, either one of them or more, Probably one in the presence of the rest, either doubting (considering the structure of the Temple) whether it could be destroyed, or at least thinking it pity that so famous a structure should come to Ruin, come to him, admiring the Stones and Buildings. Molt think this was the Temple built by Zerubbabel, almost six hundred years before, though it received great Additions by Herod (for we have no Record, that that Temple was ever destroyed.) Incredible stories are related about the Dimensions of the Stones, and the Ornaments of it. Our Saviour faith unto them, Verily I say unto you, there shall not be one Stone left upon another, that shall not be thrown down. Temple shall be utterly Ruin'd: Nor, (if we may believe other Histories) did this Prophecy fail as to the letter of it: Thus the Roman Emperor taking Jerusalem, about forty years after this, Commanded his Soldiers to spare the Temple, when they entered the City, but they in their Rage burnt or it, what was of a Consubstantial Nature, and Turnus Rufus left General

And they shall fall by the Edge of the Sword, and shall be led away Captives into all Nations; and Jerusalem shall be broken down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled. These Veres must be understood with reference to the Jewish Nation, and who shall read the History, the History of the Wars of the Jews, will easily agree, there is nothing in all the foregoing Jewish History, which we have recorded in Scripture like unto it, the final Destruction of them by Titus, was rather an abatement of Miseries, they suffered by the Factions within themselves than any thing else. And thus we think, that God shortened those days of their Misery, by sending the Roman Armies to quiet the Seditions, and Factions amongst themselves, which were more cruel to another; God promised to shorten these days for the Elect sake, that were amongst this sinful People. So that as the City was taken in less than six Months, so was their whole Country, in less than eighteen Months more: And if the Lord had not in Compassion to those amongst this People, who belonged to his Election of Grace, shortened these days of Calamity, both by sending the Roman Armies, to quiet their intestine Divisions, and then giving the Armies to quick Victories, none of the Jews would have been left alive, which indeed any one will judge, that shall but read these Histories.

* Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo here is Christ, or there, believe it not.
* For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders in such manner, as to deceive the elect, if it were possible they shall deceive the very elect.

Behold, I have told you before:
Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold he is in the desert, go not forth, Behold he is in the secret chambers, believe it not.

Mark hath much the same, Ch. 13. 21, 22, 23. There is no doubt, but that our Saviour here hath a special Respect to those Persons, who about the time of the Destruction of Jerusalem, taking advantage of the Jewish Expectation of the Messiah, as a secular Prince, who should restore them to Liberty (and as a secular Prince, as we have often heard had infected the Generality of the Jews; and not a little even the Disciples of Christ) made themselves Heads of Parties, and pretended that they were the Messiahs, the Christs, thereby to incourage People to follow them, and to stand up for their Liberty, of which kind there were several mentioned both in the History of Josephus, and in the Roman History, respecting those times. Our Lord therefore cautioned his Disciples against such a false expectation of the Messiah, as they had dreamed of. The secular Kingdom of the Messiah, as they had dreamed of. He tells them, that there would such Persons arise, and some of them should do great signs and wonders, in such manner as it were possible, they would deceive the Elect of God, but if he had prayed for them, only they must also watch and take heed, that they might not be Cheated, and deceived by them; tho they came with never so fair Pretences, for his coming would be quite of another Nature, and his Kingdom, would be a quite other Kingdom.

For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west: so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

For wherefore over the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together.

Like hath much the same, Luke, 17. 24, 27. The Disagreement of Interpreters, about the coming of the Son of Man, here spoken of, makes a Variety in their Interpretation of these Veres. Some think the coming of the Son of Man here spoken of, was his coming to deliver Jerusalem, which he faith, will be sudden like the Lightning, which tho the Thunder be taken notice of, as following the Lightning, yet is not taken notice of. These Interpreters make the Carcass mentioned, v. 23. to be the Body of the Jewish Nation, designed to be destroyed, and the Eagles to be the Roman Armies. Job faith of the Eagle, Ch. 39. v. 20. Where the fawn are, there is Job, Habakkuk, Ch. 1. 8. faith the Eagle of the Caldeans Armies. They shall fly as the Eagle that hath her to her, come under the shadow of the wings of Christ here, his coming in his Spiritual Kingdom. The preceding of the Gospel shall be, like the Lightning; you need not listen after those that say: Lo here is Christ, or Lo he is there, for my Gospel shall be preached every where, and where the Carcass is, where my Death, and Resurrection shall be preached, all the Elect, My sheep that hear my Voice and follow me, shall be gathered together. Others understand it of Christ's coming to Judgment, which is compared to Lightning for the suddenness, and the Carcass to be the dead, and all my Saints shall be of it. There faith Christ I shall be, and all my Saints shall be gathered together, Luke, 17. 37. That Phrase, Wherefore over the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together, is a proverbial Phrase signifying, That it will need no great Labour to bring things together, which are naturally joyed by an innate Desire, either of them to the other; so that it is applicable in more Cases than one, and whether that Discourse in Luke, were at the same time, when this was, I cannot favour Saviours Discourse on this Argument, Luke 21. hath not these Veres, and is a part of a Discourse which Luke 17. v. 20. is said to have been begun at least to the Pharisees. But I shall further consider what Luke faith, when I shall come to that Chapter in him.

29 Immediately after the tribulation of those days * shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken.

Mark faith, Ch. 13. 24. In those days after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars of Heaven shall fall, and the Powers that are in Heaven shall be shaken, Luke faith, Ch. 21. 25. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the Earth distress of Nations with perplexity, the Sea and the Waves roaring: Many Hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things, which are coming on the Earth, for the Powers of Heaven shall be shaken. Interpreters are much divided in the Sense of these Words, whether they should be interpreted of Christs coming to the last Judgment, and the sign of that: Or, 2. Concerning the Destruction of Jerusalem. Those who interpret it of the Destruction of Jerusalem have the Context to guide them, as also the reports of Historians of strange Prodigious seen in the Air, and Earth, before the taking of it; likewise the word Immediately after, &c. But I am more inclinable to interpret them of the last Judgment, and to think that our Saviour is now pressed to satiate the Disciples about their other Question, concerning the end of the World, for altho, Christs coming may sometimes signify, that remarkable Act of his Providence, in the Destruction of his Enemies; yet the next Veres, speaking of Christs coming with great Power and Glory, and of his coming with Angels, and with the sound of a Trumpet, and gathering his Elect from the four Winds, the Phrases are so like the Phrases by which the Scripture expreth Christs coming to the last Judgment, 1 Cor. 15. 52. 1 Thes. 4. 16. and Christs speaking to his Disciples asking of him, as well about that, as the Destruction of Jerusalem: I should rather interpret this Veres with reference to the last Judgment, than the Destruction of Jerusalem, before spoken of, or at least, that these signs should be understood common both to the one, and the other; as divers of the other signs mentioned in this Chapter are. Some think, that the darkening of the sun and the moon here, the falling of the stars, and the shaking of the Powers of Heaven, are to be taken Metaphorically, as signifying the great Change should be in the Ecclesiastical and Civil State of the Jews, and it is true, that such kind of Expressions do often in Scripture so signify, Isa. 13. 10. Ch. 24. 23. Eccl. 32. 7. Joel 2. 31. But without doubt the literal Sense is not to be excluded, whether we understand the Text of the Destruction of Jerusalem, or of his coming to his last Judgment, for, as Historians tell of great Prodigious seen before the former, so the Apostle confirms us, that there will be such things seen before the day of Judgment, 2 Pet. 3. 10. 12.

30 And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven, and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and * they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.

* And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

Mark faith, Ch. 13. 26, 27. And then shall they see the Son of Man, coming in the Clouds with great Power and Glory. And then shall he send his Angels, and shall gather together his Elect from the four Winds, from the utmost part of the Earth, to the uttermost part of Heaven, when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your Heads, for your Redemption draweth nigh. Interpreters are also divided about these Words, as about the former, some understanding them concerning the Destruction of Jerusalem, and judging that by the sign of the coming of the Son of Man, is probably meant some Prodigy, or sign that comes seen before that Destruction, which should be of that Nature as it should make the Jews (here called the Tribes of the Earth) to mourn, they by the Angels and Trumpet mentioned, v. 31. understanding the Ministers of the Gospel, who after the Destruction of Jerusalem, should go and preach the Gospel over all the World, and to gather in the Elect into the Gospel-Church. But I cannot agree this Sense, and I find the most Interpreters expound these Words of the last Judgment; what is meant by the sign of the Son of Man, I find not so well agreed, two of the Evangelists say only the Son of Man: Matthew mentions, first the appearance of the sign of the Son of Man, then the Son of Man himself, probably it signifieth some great Prodigy, that shall be seen before that great and Terrible day. Those things which incline me to think, that the day of Judgment, not the Destruction of Jerusalem, is that which is spoken of in these Veres, is, 1. That all the Phrases are such as the Scripture useth, to expreth Christs coming to the last Judgment. His coming in the Clouds of Heaven, Mark 26. 64. Rev. 17. the Tribes of the Earth mourning, Rev. 17. his coming with the Angels, and the sound of a Trumpet, Mark 25. 31. Mar. 8. 38. 1 Cor. 15. 52. 1 Thes. 4. 16. His sending his Angels to gather the Elect, Mar. 13. 29. 2. The Tribes of the Earth mourning, seems to signify more than the Tribes of Israel. 3. That which Luke faith, Look up, and lift up your Heads, for the day of your Redemption draweth nigh; seemeth hardly applicable to the Destruction of Jerusalem, rather to the Redemption of the Body mentioned, Rom. 8. 23. For the Gospel before that time was carried to the Gentiles: Nor do I know, that that is any where called Redemption. Those things which have led some learned Interpreters to expound, v. 29, 30, 31. of the Destruction of Jerusalem, are, Inconceivable, those Particles, Immediately after the Tribulation of those days, v. 29. and the Particle then, v. 30. together with v. 34. where our Saviour faith: This Generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled. But the term Immediately after the Tribulation of those days, may signify not only the Destruction of Jerusalem, but also all the Calamities of those days, that should follow that, to the end of the World: And it is very useful for Prophetical Scriptures to speak of things to come long after, as if they were presently to come to pass, Deut. 32. 35. and the day of Judgment is ordinarily spoken of, as if it were at hand, 1 Thes. 4. 15. Jas. 5. 8. 1 Job. 2. 18. both to denote the certainty of it, and to keep us from Security, and to let us know that a Thousand years in Gods sight, are but as one day, 2 Pet. 3. for the 34. v. we shall give the Sense of it in its Order.

32 Now learn a parable of the fig-tree, When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh.

33 So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know * that it is near, even at the doors.

34 Verily I say unto you, This Generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled.

35 * Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away.

Mark hath the very same, Ch. 13. v. 28, 29, 30, 31. So hath Luke, Ch. 21. v. 29, 30, 31, 32, 33. only he faith, the Fig-tree, and all Trees, when they now shoot forth, ye see, and know of your own selves, that Summer is nigh at hand. See, when ye see these things come to pass, know that the Kingdom of God is nigh at hand: Verily, &c. By this Similitude of the Fig-tree, he implied therefore, that the Kingdom of God should not only design to inform them, that these things which he had told them, should be as certain signs of the approaching of the Destruction of Jerusalem, and the coming of his Kingdom, as the Fig-trees, and other Trees putting forth of leaves, is a sign of the approaching Summer, as Cow. 2. 13. but that as the Frosts, and Snow, and Cold of the Winter, do not hinder the Trees from bringing forth Fruit in the Summer, so these Tribulations and Troubles should be so far from hindering, and destroying Christs Kingdom, that they should prepare the World for it, and promote it so that as they might know from these Tribulations in Judea, that the Kingdom of Grace was at hand, and began: So from the following Tribulations upon the World, they might know that his Kingdom of Glory was also waiting. Verily I say unto you, this Generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled. These are several Notions men have of that term. This Generation, some by understanding mankind, others, The Generation of Christs, Others the whole Generation of the Jews; but doubtless our Saviour meant the Set of Men that were at that time in the World: Those who were at that time living should not only see, until all these things be fulfilled, all that he had spoken with reference to the Destruction of Jerusalem; and indeed the most of those signs, which our Saviour gave were signs common, both to the Destruction of Jerusalem, and the last Judgment, abating only Christs personal coming in the Clouds with Power and Glory. So that considering, that the Destruction of Jerusalem, was within less than forty years after our Saviours speaking these words, so many as lived to the Expiration of that number of years, must see the first greater part of the things actually fulfilled, as signs of the Destruction of Jerusalem, and fulfilling, as signs of the end of the World. Heaven and Earth shall pass away, but my Words shall not pass away. By this Expression our Saviour confirmeth the Truth of what he had said, assuring those to whom he spake: That altho there should be a change of the Heaven, and the Earth, 2 Pet. 3. 10, 12, 13. which Men commonly look upon as the most stable, and abiding things, yet the Truth of what he had said should not fail.

36 But of that day and hour knoweth no man, neither the Son, nor the Father, only the Father.

37 Verily I say unto you, that he that shall be the Son of man, shall find the Son of man.

38 And as it was in Noahs days, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

39 And as it was in the days of Lot, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

40 And as it was in the days of Sodom, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

41 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

42 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

43 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

44 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

45 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

46 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

47 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

48 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

49 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

50 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

51 And as it was in the days of the Flood, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man.

Heaven and the Earth shall pass away, as he had before said, or when the End of the World shall be, which was one of the Questions propounded to him by his Disciples, v. 2. knoweth no man, no meer Man, nor have Men any reason to be troubled at; for it is a piece of Knowledge, which the Father hath reserved into his own Power, and his own Pleasure, from the Angels, who continually behold his Face. Nay I myself as Man know it not, nor is it more absurd, or derogating from the Election of Christ, then for to say, that Christ as Man, was not Omnipotent, or Omniscent, &c. By the way this gives a great Check to the Curiosity of Mens inquiries after the particular time, or year when the World shall have an end, or the day of Judgment begin, or be.

37 But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the son of man be.

38 For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered in to the ark, 39 And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

Like hath much the same, Ch. 17. 26, 27. where he also faith, it shall be as in the days of Lot, but I shall consider what he faith, which seemeth to be said at another time, and upon another occasion, when I come to his seventeenth Chapter. Two things our Saviour seeth here to teach us. 1. That Christs coming to the last Judgment: will be sudden, and not look for; upon which account his coming, is compared in Scripture to the coming of a Thief, v. 43. 44. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Rev. 16. 15. That it will be in a time of great Security, and Debauchery, such was the time of Noah, Gen. 6. 3, 4, 5.

Some refer this, to the coming of Christ in his Kingdom of Grace, some to his coming in the day of Judgment, it is true of both those comings. God shows the freeness of his Grace much in the Conversion of sinners, and makes Discriminations of which we can give no Account, as he tells us, Luke 4. 25, 26, 27, 28. but it seemeth here rather to be understood of that Separation, which Christ shall make at the day of Judgment, of the Sheep from the Goats, the Elect from the Reprobates; for that of coming our Saviour seemeth to be speaking, both in the preceding, and in the following Words.

42 * Watch therefore, for ye know not what your Lord doth come.

43 * But know this, That if the good man of the house know this, in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up.

44 Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the son of man cometh.

Mark faith, Take ye heed, Watch and Pray, for ye know not the time when the Son of man shall come, Luke 12. 39. what our Lord here meaneth by Watching is easily gathered, as well by what went before, where our Saviour had been speaking of the Security and Luxury of the world: As by what followeth, v. 44. where he biddeth them, be always ready, and therefore Luke, Ch. 21. 34. expounds thus: And take heed to your selves, lest at any time your Hearts be over-charged with Surfeiting, and Drunkenness, and Care of this Life, and so that day come upon you as an unawares. For as a figure shall come on all them, that dwell upon the Face of the whole Earth. Watch ye therefore and Pray, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things, that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man. Our Saviour in these Veres, from the uncertainty of the particular time, when the day of Judgment shall be, preleth upon his Disciples, a Sober, Heavenly and Holy Life; intimating that by such a Life only, they can make themselves ready for the coming of Christ, and to stand before the Son of Man, when he shall appear in his Power and Glory. He preleth this from that which common Prudence would teach any Householder, If he knew in what Night a Thief would come to watch, and not suffer his House to be broken open. This is, in what time of the Night, the Jews divided the Night into the fifth, second, third, and fourth Watch, as the Romans divided it for relief of their Military Guards. Now (faith our Saviour) you, knowing that there will come such a day, and see certainly knowing at what time, stand concerned to be always Watching and Praying.

45 Who then is a faithful, and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household to give them meat in due season?

46 Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing.

47 Verily I say unto you, * that he shall make him ruler over all his goods.

30 And when they had hung an || hymn they went || Or, E but into the mount of olives.

22, 23, 24, 25, 26. only he adds, They drank all of it, and gave it for many for the Remission of Sins. Luke takes up from this giving the Bread, said, This is my Body which is given for you. His do in Remembrance of me. Likewise the Cup of Sinner's Joying, This Cup is the New Te- stament in my Blood, which is shed for you. From the Discourses of our Saviour with Peter, he gives us more further on other Evangelist mentioning them, and to his Disciples, but where saying that they were spoken in this place, and Luke shall not consider them till I come to that Chapter in Luke, and where they were Eating, that they, while they were yet in the Chamber, where they had eaten the Paschal Lamb (for we must be of Eating the Paschal Lamb, with these Words, and another institution) Jesus said, Eat ye, and be filled. Luke says for this Night there was no other to be found in the House of this Night. But it will not from hence follow, that the Lords Supper must be Eaten with unleavened Bread. For tho our Saviour be to be imitated, in his Actions relating to Gospel
Worship; yet not in such of them which had a plain reason in the Temple Worship, and were there instituted for a special reason, as unleavened Bread was, to put them in mind of the gift in which they came out of Egypt. Our Saviour at the one could use no other than unleavened Bread, for no other as to be had. And blessed is He did not only give Thanks for God for it, and beg his Blessing upon it, which (as we have before observed) was our Saviour's constant practice where he did Eat Bread, but he set it apart, and consecrated it where he did his Last Supper. It seemeth very probable, that this is to be understood here in the Word Blessed is For also the Jews, when our Saviour ordinarily used a short Prayer and Blessing, before they did Eat Meat, thereby shewing that they were God as the giver of those things, and depended upon him for a Blessing upon them, yet we no where Read, that they did so during the same time, as often as they put Bread to their Mouth. Luke (as we heard before) made a partitioning of our Saviour's Blessing of the Paschal Supper. The first is of a new Notion, and Institution, and the repeating it again, v. 27, upon his raking the Cup, doth yet further Confirm it. That our Saviour's Blessing both yet further, signifieth to us not only his giving Thanks to God

Ordinance a bare empty Sign, but do acknowledge it a sacred Institution of Christ in the Gospel, in the Observation of which he doth vouchsafe his spiritual Presence, so as every true Believer worthily receiving, doth Really and Truly partake of the Body and Blood of Christ, that is, all Benefits of his Blessed Death, and Passion, which is undoubtedly all intended by our Saviour in these Words; and when he saith, Take Eat, he means no more, than that true Believers should by the Hand of their Body take the Bread, and with their bodily Mouths eat it, and at the same time by the Hand, and Mouth of Faith: Receive and apply, all the Benefits of his Blessed Death and Passion, to their Souls; and that they should do this in remembrance of him, that is, (as the Apostle, 1 Cor. 11.26. expounds it) showing forth the Lords Death, till he come. It followeth, And he took the Cup, and gave Thanks; and gave it to them saying, Drink ye all of it. For this is my Blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many, for the Remission of sins. Christ's taking of the Cup, and giving of Thanks, were Actions of the same Nature, with those which he used with a Relation to the Bread, of which I have before: Let the Papists, and Lutherans say what they can, here must be two Figures acknowledged in these Words. The Cup here is put for the Wine in the Cup; and the meaning of these Words: This is my Blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many, for the Remission of sins, must be: This Wine is the Sign of the New Covenant. Why should not, as readily acknowledge a Figure in those Words: Take ye my Body, I cannot understand; the Pronoun This in the Greek, is in the Neuter Gender, and applicable to the term Cup, or to the term Blood; but it is most reasonable to interpret it: This Cup, that is, the Wine in this Cup, is the Blood of the New Covenant, or Testament; That is, the Blood by which the New Covenant is confirmed, and established. Thus the Blood of the Covenant, signifieth in several Texts, Exod. 24. 8. Zechar. 9. 11. 9.20. Is. 62.10. Which is shed for many, for the Remission of sins, to purchase Remission of sins; and thus let us know, that by Many, here cannot be understood all individuals, unless we will say, that Christ purchased a Remission of sins for many, who shall never obtain it, which how he could do, if he died in their stead, suffering the Wrath of God due to them for sin, is very hard to understand. But I say unto you, that I will now henceforth Drink of the Fruit of the Vine. I observed before, that Luke puts these Words before the Institution of the Supper, and some think that they properly belong to that place, but I understand no reason for it, Matthew and Mark both placing it here; nor doth it seem probable, that after these Words, our Saviour should presently Drink of it, in the Institution of his Supper; some here Object, our Saviour drinking after his Resurrection; but besides that, it cannot be proved that he drank any Wine, neither did he otherwise eat, or drink at all; but to show that he was indeed risen (for he Hungred and Thirsted no more after his Resurrection) Or else by this Purport our Saviour only meant, I will no more participate in this Ordinance with you, Quia I drink is new Wine in my Fathers Kingdom, that is, in Heaven. Some will say, Shall there then be drinking of Wine in Heaven? Ans. No, neither doth the Particle Quia, signify any such thing; But the Joys and Pleasures of Heaven, are often Metaphorically set out, under the Notion of drinking to Banquet, Chap. 8. 11. Supper, Rev. 3.20. Eating and Drinking, Luk. 22.30. Our Saviour calls this New Wine to signify, that he did not by it mean, such Wine as Men drink here: I will not henceforth drink of the Fruit of the Vine, but both you and I in my Fathers Glory, shall be satisfied with Rivers of Pleasures, which shall be fairer, and more Excellent than that, which is but the juice of the Grape, and the Fruit of the Vine. And when they had sung an Hymn, they went out into the Mount of Olives. That the Jews were wont to clothe their Passover-Supper with singing an Hymn I do not doubt: Nor that they had some particular Psalms, or Hymns, which they used at that time to sing: But whether it was any of these, that our Saviour at this time Praised God with, I cannot tell, much less, whether he delighted this Praising of God, with particular Relation to the Passover-Supper, or his Supper, which he had now instituted, or both. The inquiries after these things, are but insignificant Curiosities, fit for such as have more mind, to look into the skirts of Holy-Writ, than to find out of it, what may be of Profit and Advantage to them. Our Saviour doubtless intended by this to instruct us, That the Ordinance of his Supper, is an Ecclesiastical Service, wherein our Souls are most highly concerned to give Thanks unto God, and as singing is an external Action, which God hath appointed to express the inward Joy and Thankfulness of our Hearts; so it is very proper to be used at this Holy Institution. They went out to the Mount of Olives. Our Lord knew that his time was now come, when he must be actually delivered into the Hands of his Enemies. That he might not therefore cause any disturbance, either to the Master of the Family where he was, or to the City, tho' it was now Midnight, he goeth out of the City (the Gates being either open, (because of the multitude of People) very late; or else only opened to him) to the Mount of Olives. A Mountain in the way, between Jerusalem and Bethany, so called, as is thought, from the multitude of Olive Trees growing upon it, and so called, The Evangelist as yet mentioneth nothing of Judas, who now was gone to Plot his traitor, and will soon return to accomplish it. In the mean time let us follow our Saviour, attending to his Discourses and Actions.

31 Then faith Jesus unto them, * All ye shall be offended, because of me this night, for it is written, I will smite [the shepherd], and the sheep of the flock, shall be scattered abroad.

32 But after I am risen again, * I will go before * you into Galilee.

33 Peter answered and said unto him. Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended.

34 Jesus faith unto him, * Verily I say unto thee, that this night before the cock crow thou shalt deny me thrice.

35 Peter said unto him, Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee, Likewise also shall all the disciples.

Mark hath the same, Ch. 14. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31. only, 30. he saith: This Day, even this Night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. Luke, Ch. 22. 31, 32, 33. hath it not entire, but he hath something of it, with some Addition, thus, And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as Wheat. But I have prayed for thee, that thy Faith may not fail, and when thou shalt be converted, strengthen thy Brethren. And he said unto him, I am ready to go with thee, both into Prison, and to Death. And he said unto him, I tell thee, Peter, thou shalt not Crow this Day, before thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me. Those who read the Evangelist, must remember that they did not write our Saviours words from his mouth, but from their Memories, and therefore must be allowed to vary in their Explications, and Circumstances, giving us only an Account of the substance of Words and Actions, as their Memories served them, from whence also it is, that some of them have some Circumstances, not in the others. Our Saviours design here in General, is to inform his Disciples of something, which would happen by and by. All ye (saith he) shall be offended, because of me this Night. The word offended, is of a very large Signification in Holy-Writ; it takes it, it seems to signify, to be disturbed, or troubled, that if we take it strictly for sinning, to sin is not, it was too strong, for that. It happened, (as we shall see anon) which made them to frayle their Faith, which doubtless was their sin. For it is written, I will smite the Shepherd and the Sheep of the Flock shall be scattered. The words are, Zechar. 13. 7. The words there are imperative, Smite the Shepherd. There are different Opinions, whether that Text is primarily to be understood of Christ, or it be only a Prophetic Speech, which the Prophet made use of with more reference, which yet Christ doth apply unto himself: I do more incline to think, that Christ here interpreteth the Prophecy, to relate primarily to himself, for he doth not say, As it is said, I will smite the Shepherd, yet consider it a Prophetic Speech, it is true of others also. But certainly our Saviour designed to hold the Spirits of his Disciples, by letting them know, that do they should feel the Shepherd smitten, that is, Himself, who is the Good Shepherd, Job. 10.1, and is called by the Apostle, the Great Shepherd of the Sheep, Heb. 13. 20, the Chief Shepherd, 1 Pet. 5. 4; yet they should not be disturbed, for, 1. It was no more than was Prophesied concerning him, Zechar. 13. 7. 2. Tho' at present they were scattered, yet it should not long be so, for he said Rise again, and then he would go before them into Galilee, which was fulfilled, as we read Mat. 28. 16. Upon these words Peter whom by all the Gospel History, we shall observe to have been of the highest Courage, and forward to speak faith, Thou all Men should be offended, yet will I never be offended. These doubtless were his present Thoughts, this his hidden Resolution, here now come to come in our Saviours Words to Peter, mentioned by Luke only, Ch. 22. 31. Simon, Simon, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as Wheat. But I have prayed for thee, that thy Faith might not fail, when thou shalt be converted, strengthen thy Brethren. You is in the Plural Number, and to be interpreted by Thou all, tho' our Saviour directeth his Speech only to Peter, who first spake, whom he calleth by his own Name; and doubtless it, to signify his Earnestness in giving him warning, To sift you. In sifting there are two things. 1. The shaking of the Corn up and down. 2. The Separation of the Grain, from the Dull, or its Seeds mixt with it: Satan hath desired, or hath obtained leave of my Father, to trouble you all, shaking your Faith thus and that way. But I have prayed, that although the siftings of your Faith be suspended, and the Harvest of your Faith be shaken, yet it may not utterly fail, but the Seeds of God may abide in you: You shall not wholly fall away, but be renewed again by Repentance, and when thou art converted, when thou shalt have fallen, and shalt have a fight of thy Error, and be humbled for it, endeavour to strengthen thy Brethren Faith: We may observe from hence. 1. These Temptations are siftings. God sifts us to purge away our Dross. Satan sifts it, if it were possible to take away our Wheat. 2. That the Devil is the great Tempter. Others may hazard, and argue the Sift, but he is the Master of the Work. 3. That he hath a continual desire to bring in the Fall of Gods Flower. 4. That he hath a Chain upon him, he must ask Gods leave to trouble his People. 5. That God often gives him leave, but through Christs pleadings, he shall not Conquer. He may sift and trouble a Believer, but the Believers Faith shall not fail. 6. That in the hour of Temptation, we stand in Christs strength, by the Virtue of his Intercession. 7. That laid in our hands, when the Lord hath restored them, ought to be used to strengthen and establish others. Jesus faith to Peter, Verily

If ye men then, that this Night before the cock crow thou shalt deny me thrice. Luke faith, Thou shalt deny that thou knowest me. Mark faith, before the cock crow twice: And so interpreteth Matthew, for he denied Christ but once, before the cock did crow once. How little do we know our selves, that cannot tell what our Hearts will be, three or four hours? Peter was too confident of the contrary, and repented again, upon our Saviours telling him: That if all should deny him, he would not. So also, they all said, but what happened we shall hear more by and by.

36 Then came Jesus with them, unto a place called Gethsemane, and faith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder.

Mark leaveth out London, Ch. 14. 32. Luke faith, Ch. 22. 39. He came out, and went as he was wont, to the Mount of Olives, and his Disciples followed him. And when he was at the place, he said unto them: Pray that ye enter not into Temptation. And he was withdrawn from them a stones cast, and kneeled down and Prayed. Whether this Gethsemane, were the name of a Garden, or of a Village, wherein was a Garden, is not much Material for us to know: In Jerusalem they lay, they laid no Gardens, but their Prayers were without the Gates; certain it is, it was on the other side of the Brook Cedron, at 11. and either in, or at the Foot of the Mount of Olives. The Christ went with his Disciples: That is, eleven of them, they flew of the twelfth by and by, Luke faith, that he had his Disciples Pray, that they might not enter into Temptation: These Words Matthew and Mark have, after Christs first return to them: They lay, he now said only, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder.

37 And he took with him Peter, and * the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be sorrowful, * and very heavy.

38 Then faith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death, tarry ye here, and watch with me.

Mark names the three Disciples, Ch. 14. v. 33, 34. And he taketh with him Peter and James, and John, and began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy. And faith unto them, My Soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: Tarry ye here and watch. The three Witnesses of his Transfiguration, Ch. 17. 1. He takes also to be Witnesses of his Agony. He began to be sorrowful, and very heavy. The words in the Greek are expressive of the greatest sorrow imaginable, which he further expresseth, v. 33. Saying, My Soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death. This was not wholly, upon the Sense of his approaching Death, for he laid down his Life, no Man took it from him. Nor yet, consider how his Disciples would be left; but in the Sense he had, of the Wrath of God due to Man for sin, which he now felt, bearing our sins. So as this was a part, and a great part of his suffering, as appears by his following earnest Prayers, for the pulling away of that Cup, his Smeating as it were drops of Blood, Luk. 22. 44. The Angels coming and ministering unto him, Luk. 22. 43. Luke faith, he was in an Agony, which signifieth a great inward Conflict.

39 And he went a little further, and fell on his face * and prayed, saying, O my Father if it be possible, let this cup pass from me, nevertheless I will, but as thou wilt.

Mark faith, He went forward a little, and fell on the Ground, and Prayed, that if it were possible, the hour might pass from him. And he said, Abba Father! All things are possible unto thee, let this cup pass from me: Nevertheless, not what I will, but what thou wilt. Ch. 14. 33, 35. Luke faith, He was withdrawn from them about a stones cast, and kneeled down, and Prayed, saying, Father if thou be willing, remove this from me: Nevertheless, not my Will, but thine be done. Here are three distinct Forms of Words, but all agreeing in sense, and the same Sense. Matthew faith, He went a little further and fell on his Face, and Prayed. He is at his first Motion carried but three with him: Peter, James, and John, none he leaves them, but not far, Luke faith, about a stones cast. Perent Prayer loves Privacy, and Christ by this sheweth us, that secret Prayer is our Duty. He fell on his Face, Luke faith, He kneeled, he possibly at first kneeled, then fell on his Face, Luke faith, We read in Scripture of Sitting, Standing, Kneeling, and Prostrating used in Prayer, the first and last rarely: Sitting and Prostrating in his House, a Mozart ordinary Postures. David prayed lying in his House, a Son. 7. 18. Abraham and Isaac by his Face, Gen. 17. 17. So did the most ancient Pagans, hardly otherwise Prayer was ordinarily used in great Palaces, but always prostrate. Prayer, saying, O my Father if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: Nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt. Mark first tells us the Sum of his Prayer, then faith, he laid this Cup from me: Nevertheless, not what I will, but what thou wilt. Luke faith, he laid, If thou be willing, remove this from me: Nevertheless, not my Will, but thine be done. Luke, If thou be willing, remove this from me: Nevertheless, not my Will, but thine be done. A thing in it self may be possible, which considered in its Circumstances is not so, thus (saith it) Mark, All things are to God possible: But yet it is not possible for God to alter any thing which he hath decreed, or said shall come to pass; because God is not as Man: One thing can Lie, or Repent. But it will be Objected, Did not Christ know, that it was not possible? Did not he himself, v. 54. say, This is my Will, but thine be done. It is one thing what he knew, as he was God, it is another with the Father; and another thing what he Prayed for, as Man: Besides, our Saviours saying, If it be possible, doth not suppose that he knew it was possible: It signifieth no more than this. Father, my Humane Nature hath an Aversion from this heavy burden, so as if it were possible, it craves of thee a Discharge from this Curse: Nevertheless, not my Will, but thine be done. The first Clause, is but the Expression of the natural (but not sinful) infirmity of his Flesh: The latter a perfect Renunciation of his Will to God. In the first, he tells his Father, what his natural Flesh would crave, if it might contend with the Will of God. In the second, he beseech that whatsoever his Flesh craved, yet the Will of God might be done. And herein he sets us a perfect Pattern for our Prayers, for deliverance from all temporal Evils, viz. With a Submission to the Will of God. By this, our Saviour doth not declare himself ignorant, or uncertain of the Divine Will, only as, tho' the Person that dyed was God-man, yet the Humane Nature only dyed: So, tho' the Person that prayed was God-man, yet he only prayed, as we as Men.

40 And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and faith unto Peter, What could ye not watch with me one hour?

41 Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

Mark hath the same, Ch. 14. 37, 38. Luke hath nothing of our Saviours going the second, or third time; but hath some other passages, which he shall consider by and by, and telleth us also of the finding the Disciples asleep, which we shall also take notice of, in their Order. Whether Christ came this first time, only to Peter and James, and John, whom he had left nearer to him, or to the other eight, left at a further distance, I cannot determine, but think the first most probable: He faith unto Peter, and to James and John: What could ye not watch with me one hour? You Peter, that even now were so resolute for me, and you James and John, that told me, You could drink of the Cup where I drank, and be baptized with the Baptism I should be baptized with, what? Do you faint the first time? Watch and pray, that ye enter not into Temptation. Here he calls them to a greater Watching, spiritual Watching, in Opposition to Security, that they might not fall under their Temptations. By watching, he directeth them to the use of such means, as were within their Power to use; by adding Prayer, he lets them know, that it was not in their Power, to stand without Gods help and Assistance, which must be obtained by Prayer, and upon their Praying, should not be denied them. The Spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak. The Spirit fortified by Divine Grace, is relieved with Concomity to perform its Duty; but the flesh, the sensitive part, is apt to faint and fall away, when terrible Temptations assault us: Therefore you should earnestly pray for supernatural strength, and be vigilant, lest you be surprised and overcome by them. The words also, may have an immediate Respect to their being overtaken with sleep in this hour of Christs Summons; tho' they relieved Affectionately to attend him, and cleave to him.

42 He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

43 And he came, and found them asleep again, for their eyes were heavy.

Mark faith, Ch. 14. 39. And again he went away and Prayed, saying the same Words. And when he returned, he found them asleep again (for their eyes were heavy) neither did they know what to answer him, saying the same Words. How our Translation came to translate this so I cannot tell, in the Greek it is And he went away, which must be Translated, the same Word, as the same Speech, not Words (if that were the Evangelists Sense. But that it is not, is plain, our Saviour used more than one Word. So it is as plain, it was not the same Speech, or Form of Words, for we have met with four different ones already, our Lord prayed but three, for he could not pray the same Speech. But Alas here signifies Matter—Speaking the same Matter, or to the same Sense, and thus we translate it, Mark. 1. As. Mozart. 2. and in a multitude of other Texts, in Cor. 12.2 and in the most ancient Versions. He comes to them a second time, and findeth them asleep. So quickly did they find the Truth of what he had but now taught them. That the Spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak, for there is no doubt, but they did what they could to keep themselves awake.

44 And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying, the same words.

45 Then cometh he to his disciples, and faith, Sleep on now, and take your rest, behold the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

46 Rise, let us be going, Behold he is at hand, that doth betray me.

Mark faith nothing of this third Praying, but faith, And he

by the Fire, Peter also late down amongst them, being desirous to see the end.

59 Now the chief priests, and elders, and all the council fought false witnesses against Jesus to put him to death.

60 But found none, yea, tho many false witnesses came, yet they found none. At the last came two false witnesses.

Mark Expresseth this latter Verſe, Ch. 14. v. 56. For many bare false witness against him, saying, But their witness agreed not together. It is plain that they had taken up a Resolution to deftroy Christ one way, or another, but they will make a Shew of Justice, in the Execution of their Malice. The Council being late, it is not to be thought that they had any Leisure to fend about for Witnesses, but out of their Malice, they grew and then upon their Oaths, to affirm any thing they could get, which by their Law was Capital. Many false witnesses came, yet their witness agreed not together. That is, no two agreeing in the same Story, as the Law required, Deut. 19. 15. for a single Testimony was none. Vox unus est Vox nullius. A single Witness, is no Witness. Or none that could testify any thing of a Capital Nature, many came and Witnessed Trivial things, but none Witnessed any thing which touched his Life, till at last came two false witnesses.

61 And said, * This fellow said, I am able to deftroy the temple of God, and to build it in three * days.

Mark faith, Ch. 14. 57, 58. And there arose certain, and bare false witness against him, saying, We heard him say, I will deftroy this temple, that is made with Hands, and within three Days: I will build another made without Hands. But neither do they tell their witness agreed together. They are called by the Evangelists, false witnesses; our Saviour said, Job. 2. up. Speaking of his Body, as Tſolm tells us there. v. 21. he will build three Days Tſolm bare another, made without Hands. But Mark faith, These Witnesses could not agree in their Tale, or their Testimony, tho agreeing was not sufficient to make him guilty of a Capital Crime. The High Priests must use some other Arts.

62 And the high priest, arose, and said unto him, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witnesses against thee.

63 But * Jesus held his peace, And the high priest thrust him, and said unto him, I adjure thee by the living God, that thou telts us, whether thou be the Christ the Son of God.

Mark speaks to the same purpose, Ch. 14. 60. 61. The High Priest, expected a bold defence, and to have had matter of Accusation against him out of his own Mouth. Christ disappointeth him, saying nothing at all, either out of Modesty, or not thinking what they said of any Moment, or worthy of any reply, or perhaps feeling that they could not agree in their Tale, so that what they said was of no force against him. The High Priest therefore comes at last to examine him, Ex. 23. 1. Mark faith Ch. 14. 61. Again the High Priest asked him, saying, Answer me, thou sayest thou Christ the Son of God? he answered him, saying, I say unto thee, I know not what thou sayest. Luke to give us the reason of Peter, from his first coming into the High Priests Hall, to his going out, entire interpretation himself a little in his Relation to their dealings with Christ, and then relates some Indignities offered him, which the other Evangelists do not mention. Which seem to have been offered him, while the Souldiers and the Rabble had been before he appeared in the Council, Ch. 22. 63, 64, 65, 66. And the high priest said Jesus mocked him, and smote him, when they had beat Blindfolded him, and said unto him, Thou art asked him, saying, Prophesie unto us, that thou knowest many and other things, Blasphemy is this, that thou sayest against us, saying, I say unto thee, I know not what thou sayest. The Chief Priests, and the Scriber came together, and led him into their Council. Then he mentioned nothing of what the Witnesses said, possibly because it was nothing of Moment, and upon which they proceeded against our Saviour for no Faith, or for no Christ the Son of the Living God, but for the Son of the Buffoon. It is plain both from this Text, and from John 1. 49. that the Jews did respect a Messiah, who should be the Son of the Ever-living and Ever-living God, and Eternal Generation, or only by a more special Adoption, than the whole Jewish Nation was (to whom the Apostles belonged the Adoption) I cannot say. I adjure thee to us, that is, I adjure thee, I charge thee upon thy Oath to tell (but it doth not appear that they had given any such Oath him), the Guilty Person was not wont to be forced by an Oath accuse himself, neither is it very probable that our Saviour should have taken such an Oath. The Scribe therefore said, rather I command, or require, or charge thee, as Solomon then had taken an Oath (as in the presence of God) to if thou speakest falsely, or wilt be silent to declare, if thou be the Christ the Son of the living God.

64 Jesus faith unto him, Thou halt said. Nevertheless I lay unto you, * Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man, * sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

Mark. Ch. 14. 62. faith, And Jesus said, I am, and you shall see me. Luke faith, And he said unto him, If I tell you, you will not believe me. And if I talk unto you, you will not answer me, nor let me go. Hereafter shall the Son of Man sit on the right hand of the power of God. What all the Evangelists lay, put together, makes up our Saviour's perfect Answer. To what purpose? faith Christ? should I answer you? This is not but a Captious question, not propounded by you to that end that you might be justified as to the Truth, but only to enquire me, for if I should tell you I am, you would not believe in. I should argue the matter with you, you would give me no Answer. Have given you Proof enough, but yet, Caiaphas, thou halt said the Truth, I am the Christ, the Son of the ever Living blessed God, and to confirm you further; Hereafter you shall see me, whom you think to be no more than the Son of Man, sitting on the right hand of the Power of God, and coming in the Clouds of Heaven. There is a time for a Man to fight, and a time for him to hold his Peace. In the matter of Confession of Truth. The seasons for Silence, or Speech, are to be judged from the Honour and Glory of God; when we cannot be silent without betraying the Truth, we are bound to speak. Our Lord therefore, being so solemnly adjured in the Name of God, to tell them what was the Truth; now Confesseth, and denieth not, that he was the Son of God, and Tell them, Hereafter they should see it, whether the term Hereafter, refers to the time four following days, or to the time of his Ascension, and I am now, in Luke (even to signify) and to be understood of Christ's Resurrection, his Ascension into Heaven, the coming of the Holy Ghost, and the carrying of the Gospel to all Nations, or to the day of Judgment (which the New Testament often speaks of, as a thing at hand, and that Phrase coming in the Clouds of Heaven, seems rather to signify) or (as others think) to both, referring the Jesus on the right hand of Power, to the former, and the Coming in the Clouds to the latter, is hard to determine.

65 Then the high priest rent his cloths, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy, what further need have we of witnesses? Behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy.

66 What think ye? They answered, and said, * He is guilty of death.

Mark hath much the same, Ch. 14. 63, 64. only he faith, They Condemned him, to be Guilty of Death. Luke, Ch. 22. 70, 71. faith, Then said they all, Are thou then the Son of God. And he said unto them, ye say that I am? And they said, what need we any further Witness? For our selves have heard of his own Mouth. This rendering of Cloths was a thing very ordinary amongst the Jews, used by them, in Testimony of Sorrow, and of Indignation: They used it in Causes of great Sorrow, and Mourning, even before the Israelites were formed into a Nation; we find it Practised by Rehoboam and Jacob, Gen. 37. 29, 34. and by Jacob's Son, Gen. 44. 13. by Joseph, and Caleb, Num. 14. 6. by Zephaniah, Jud. 11. 35. indeed he that was High Priest, was forbidden to do it, Levit. 21. 10. and in Order to it, to come near a dead Body, v. 11. which Command, yet the Jews restrain to their Priestly Garments, but upon other occasions he might rend his Cloths, as Caiaphas here did. It was usual in Case of Blasphemy, both to their Sorrow for it, and Detestation of it. 2 King. 19. 1. Jer. 36. 24. Acts 14. 14. So as they Convinced our Saviour, not upon Oaths of Witnesses, but upon Words which they interpreted to be Blasphemy. The High Priest, being but the President in this Council, asks the Opinion of the rest of the Council. They all condemn him as Guilty of a Capital Crime, which is the Priestly Guilty of Death; that is, one who by their Law ought to die.

67 * Then did they spit in his face, and buffeted him, and * others smote him with the palms of their hands.

68 Saying, * Prophecie to us, thou Christ, Who is he that smote thee.

Mark hath much the same, Ch. 14. 65. And some began to spit on him, and to offer him blows, and to buffet him. And to smite him with the palms of the hands. And the Servants did strike him with the palms of their hands. Thou there be nothing more Barbarous, and Inhumane, than to add to the Affliction of the afflicted; yet this is no more, than we ordinarily fee done by a Rabble of brutish People; spitting in the Face, was but an ordinary Token of Contempt, Numb. 12. 14. Deut. 25. 9. And perhaps in all these Indignities, Isaiah was a Type of Christ, Jsa. 50. 6. if that Text be not to be understood of Christ immediately. In the mean time it lets us see, that there is no Degree, or Mark of Contempt, or Shame, or Suffering which we ought to decline, and Grudge at, for the Name of Christ; who tho much more Excellent than us yet for our sake endured the Cross and despised the Shame.

69 * Now Peter sat without in the palace, and a damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with Jesus of Galilee.

70 But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest.

Mark hath this, Ch. 14. 66, 67. only he faith, Peter was heareth in the Palace, and warming himself. Luke hath this whole Story before, what he faith of Christ's Examination, and Condemnation, Ch. 22. 56. And a certain Maid beheld him as he sat by the Fire, and earnestly look upon him, and said, This Man was with him, And he denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not. We before left Peter in the High Priest's Palace, warming himself by the Fire amongst the Servants. It is a dangerous thing for Christians, to come into places of Temptation. A Maid comes to him, and Chargeth him to have been with Christ, whom she calls Jesus of Galilee: So they called Christ, sometimes Jesus of Nazareth, the City in Galilee where Christ lived the greatest part of his Life: He denied before them all: So loud that all heard it. I know not what thou sayest, or (as Luke faith) I know him not. I neither know him, nor what thou sayest.

71 And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth.

72 And again he denied with an oath, I do not know the man.

Mark hath the same, Ch. 14. v. 70. more shortly. So Luke, Ch. 22. 58. It was like Peter upon the first Alarm, began to flit away, and was got into the Porch, but there another meism, with the same Charge. Here to the former he had told, and here repeated, he add an Oath for the Confirmation of what he had said. What are the belt of Men, when God leads them to their own strength? But the Temptation, yet rich higher.

73 And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said unto Peter. Surely thou also art one of them, for thy speech bewrayeth thee.

74 Then began he to curse, and to swear, saying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew.

Mark, Ch. 14. v. 70, 71. faith, And a little after, they the stood by, said again to Peter. Surely thou art one of them for thou art a Galilean, and thy speech agreeth thereto. But he began to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the Man of whom you speak. Luke hath it, Ch. 22. 59, 60. And after the space of an hour after, Another Confidently affirmed, saying, of a Truth this fellow also was with him, for he is a Galilean. And Peter said: Man I know not what thou sayest. And immediately the cock crew. One spoke in the Name of the rest, that were gathered about Peter, and he Chargeth Peter Confidently, and so might well, for John faith, Ch. 18. 26. That this was one of the Servants of the High Priests, being his Kinsman, gave Peter cut off, he said, Did not I see thee in the garden with him? Temptations always grow upon us, in the Company of wicked Men. Here Peter adds to his Lying, Swearing, and Cursing; all Confirming of what he had said, in the deal of his Master. All in an exact fulfilling of what Christ had told Peter, v. 54. tho he was then Difficult to believe it, to touch all, not to presume too far upon our own strength, but to see, that we be not led into Temptation. While we stand to be led into we fall, and in Order to it, to avoid the Society of wicked Men, and places in which we probably may be Tempted. To teach us also Charity to falling Brethren, and not too hastily to Condemn our Brethren, for lapsing a second and a third time, into the same sin; especially, while the same fit of Temptation holdeth. It is added, and immediately the cock crew. That is, the second time: So faith Mark, Ch. 14. 72. who had mentioned the Cock's first Crowing, v. 68. upon Peter's first fall of his Master.

75 And Peter remembered the word of Jesus, which said unto him, * Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. And he went out and wept bitterly.

Mark faith, Ch. 14. 72. And the second time, the cock crew, and Peter called to mind the Words, that Jesus had said unto him: Before the Cock crew twice, thou shalt deny me thrice; and when he thought thereon he wept. Luke faith, Ch. 22. 61. And when he was turned, and looked upon Peter, and Peter remembered the Word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, Before the Cock crew, thou shalt deny me thrice. And Peter went out and wept bitterly. We have in this last Verse Peter's Repentance, and the Occasion and Cause of it. A good Man may fall, and that foully, but he shall not fall, so as to rise no more: David lay longer than Peter under the Guilt of his sin, but both of them wept bitterly. He went out to what his whether he went in doubt, possibly he was afraid, to what his Detestation of him might rise, or else, perhaps a plot (as Joseph did) to weep more private, and plentifully than he durst do, or thought convenient to do in the Porch of the High Priest. That which gave occasion to this Reflection, was the Crowing of the Cock the second time, and his Remembrance of the Words of Jesus, v. 34. Our Memories serve us much in the business of Repentance, and therefore, that the Soul should be without knowledge of the Law of God, is not good. Peter remembers, as what Christ had personally said to him. True Penitence, as will excited to Repentance, by remembering the Law of God, what Christ hath in his Word said to them; and considering their own ways: The Crowing of the Cock the second time, help him to remember the Words of Jesus, for he had said, Before the Cock crew twice, &c. But the Cause of his Repentance, is expressed by Luke: The Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. More must be understood by this Look of Christ upon him, then the mere cast of Christ's bodily Eye, with that Look there was a Virtue which went from Christ, which healed Peter exciting his Habit of Grace, and afflicting him in the Exercise of it, which double influence of Grace, is necessary to every renewed Soul. Christ looked upon Judas, when Judas kissed him: Yea, and said to him, Judas behest thou the Son of Adam with a kiss? Yet Judas went on in his Villany without Remorse. He looked upon Peter, and he went out and wept bitterly. He looked only upon the Face of Judas, but he looked upon the Heart of Peter, as well as upon his Face.

CHAP. XXVIII.

1 When the morning was come, * all the chief priests and elders of the people, took counsel against Jesus, to put him to death.

2 And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor.

Mark Ch. 15. 1. faith. And straightway in the Morning, the Chief Priests led a Consultation with the Elders and Scribes, and the whole Council, and bound Jesus, and carried him away, and delivered him to Pilate, Luke faith, Ch. 23. 1. And the whole multitude of them arose, and led him to Pilate, John, Ch. 18. 28. faith, Then led they Jesus from Caiaphas, unto the Hall of Judgment, and it was early, and they themselves went in into the Judgment Hall, left they should be defiled, but that they might eat the Passover. If any ask why, having condemned Christ, they did not put him to Death. John tells us, v. 31. It was not lawful for them, to put any one to Death. They had already out of their Malice to Christ broken several of their own Canons, or Rules observed in ordinary Capital Causes, Sitting in the Night-time, and upon a Festival day. They must have notoriously broken another, if they had themselves on that day put him to Death. It should seem by their Pleading Stephen, Act. 7. 59. They had a Power in some Cases to put Persons to Death, but Christ was to be Crucified, and as to that kind of Death they had no Power, see Job. 18. 32. Besides that we must consider it was the Passover-day, and Striving any Man to Death, required a Concurrence of People to throw Stones, and they were afraid of Tumults. The Roman Governor had the Militia in his Power, and could better prevent, and suppress Tumults than they could do: Finally, Christ was by his Death to give Testimony to his Kings Office; and the Jews, as we shall hear, had this to Charge him with, That he made himself a King, this was a Civil Cause, and to be adjudged by Pilate the Roman Governor amongst them. In the Morning therefore, Confessing how to put Christ to Death, they delivered him to Pontius Pilate, having first bound him, (for tho he was bound upon his Pilate's Apprehension, yet it is probable, that they had looked hard on him when he came in the Hall of the High Priest, and now had him a second time, when they carried him before Pilate.) John tells us, that they would not themselves go into the Judgment Hall, left they should be defiled, but that they might eat the Passover, which Words have been a Difficulty, and also give us an Account, of a most inconsiderable Superstition. For the Passover, they had eaten it the Night before. But we must know, that not the Paschal Lamb only, but all the Sacrifices offered any of the seven days, were also called the Passover, Deut. 16. 1, 2. &c. It was now the First day of unleavened Bread, but there were to be Offerings this day, of which they were to Eat, which in a large Sense are called the Passover. But how inaccountable was the Superstition of these Hypocrites. They made no Conscience, when they had eaten the Paschal Lamb in the Evening, to spend the whole Night in confiding around now Conscience, that they will not go into a Pagans house in the Morning, for that was the Defilement they feared, having nothing to do to sit in Judgment with him.

3 Then Judas who had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests, and elders.

4 Saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood; and they said, What is that to us? fee thou to that.

5 And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed and went and hanged himself.*

Matthew (who alone reports this piece of History) interprets his Relation of our Saviours Tryal before Pilate, with strictly, so as to think Judas did this at the time, when Christ was carried before Pilate, but some short time after; for they Hell, and said there until Christ was condemned by Pilate, he was that day, after Pilate had condemned him, or within some short time after, that Judas (as it is said) Repented himself. That he began to be terrified in his Conscience, for what he had done. The Conscience of the world of Men, will not always digest incurably poisoned them, fin is sweet in the Mouth, but bitter in the Belly. All Repentance is not saving. Nor doth all Confession of sin obtain Remission. There are herepents, and innocent Person; yet he findeth no Mercy, he hath not an Heart to be forgiven, nor to apply himself to Christ for Remedy. But the Answer of the chief Priests and Elders, is very remarkable. What is that to us, look thou to that? Wretched Judas! he had been the Servant of these wicked Men, Lutes, and poor Wages for them, in the highest Act of Villany. He falls into a distress of Conscience for what he had done. What miserable Comforters do they prove? Ministers never make good Comforters. Those who are the Devils Instruments, to Command here, Entice, or allure Men to sin, will afford them no relief when they come to be troubled, for what they have done: Nor will it now satiate the Conscience of Judas, to remember that he had a Warranty for apprehending Christ, and acting Militarily. The Priests will not take the Money, he throws it down in the Temple, and goes and hangs himself. How great is the Power of Conscience, fasting for the Guilt of sin? Judas could have no hope of a better Life, so as all his Happiness lay in the time of this present Life. Yet, he is not able to allow himself that. The Devil that entered into his Heart, to Tempt him, now entrench again to perfwade him, to put an end to his Misery in this Life, by halting himself to an Eternal Misery. Let all Apostates turning Persecutors of innocent Persons, read this, and tremble. There is a Difficulty of reconciling this Text, to that of Luke, Acts 1. 18. where it is said of him, That he falling Headlong burst asunder in the midst, and all his Bowels gushed out. That which is usually said, is that he fell from the place where he hanged himself, and with the fall burst himself: I know there are some others, who think that the Word was suffocated or Strangled. Some think the Devil strangled him, and threw him down a Precipice. Others, that he was suffocated in some Disease, which caused a Rupture of his Body. Others think (as we translate it) that he hanged himself, and Swelling his Body broke, and his Bowels gushed out. Concerning the manner of his Death, we can determine nothing, but that he was Strangled, and his Bowels gushed out, both are the Scripture affords, but how it was, we cannot certainly tell.

6 And the chief priests took the silver pieces and said, It is not lawful for us to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood.

God, Deut. 23. 18. had forbidden to bring the Price of a Whore, or a Dog, into the Temple. Thus, they had interpreted of all filthy Gain: Upon which they thus determine, that it was not Lawful for them, to put the Money they had given Judas, for so fordid a Service as that, of betraying him to the Chief Priests, into the Chest, or place which they had, where they kept the Monies given for the Repairs of the Temple; and in this they were right enough, perhaps, but in this they shewed themselves stupidly blind Hypocrites, that they did not see it was much less Lawful for them, who had hired him to this (so called) Action, to be employed in the Service of the Temple, for Jsa. 53. 11. those that bear the Vessels of the Lord, ought to be Holy. Thus to justify our Saviours words, they strain at a Gnat, and swallow a Camel.

7 And they took counsel, and bought with them the potters field, to bury strangers in.

8 Wherefore that field was called The * field of * Acts 1. 19. blood to this day. Or, whom they bought of the Children of Israel.

9 Then was fulfilled, that which was spoken by Jeremiah the prophet, saying, And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they of the children of Israel did value.

10 And gave them for the potters field, as the Lord appointed me.

They at last resolve what to do with the Money, which was great Sum (for as we noted before, it exceeded not three hundred and fifteen Shillings) they would not turn it to their own private use, for (probably) it was before, taken out of the Treasury, neither would they again return it into the Treasury, because it had been made use of as the Hire of Blood. They therefore agree to buy with it a piece of Ground, ordinarily known by the Name of the Potters Field, probably because some Potter had Dugged Earth, and thrown the wait of his Pot Idles there, so it was of no great value. This Field the Vulgar upon this purchase of it by the Priests, called many Years after, The Field of the Blood. Thence was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremiah the Prophet. The Evangelists lay this Term fulfilled, as I have before Noted, in very different Senses. 1. Sometimes to express the fulfilling of a Type or answering it by the Antitype. 2. Sometimes to express an Allusion to some other Scripture, mentioning some matter of Fact, of a like Nature. For the Text here quoted, we have no such Term in the Writing of the Prophet, whereby, which are upon sacred Record. Jeremiah indeed buy a field by order from God, Chap. 32. 9. to declare his Faith in Gods promises, for the return of the Jews out of Captivity, but

found no fault in him. Mark, chap. the same, Chap. 15. It was about the sixth hour, v. 38. Luke chap. 23. 44. That it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the Earth, unto the ninth hour. And the Sun was darkened, and the Vail of the Temple was rent in the midst. And when Jesus cried with a loud Voice, he said, Father, forgive them: for they know not what they do. And when he had said this, he gave up the Ghost. John faith no more, Ch. v. 30. but that — he bowed his Head, and gave up the Ghost. It is said John 19. 4. It was about the sixth hour, when Pilate brought forth Christ to the Jews, when then could he be Crucified at the third hour? and the Darkens begin at the sixth. The different ways the Jews, and the Romans had of counting Hours, make us to be at a loss sometimes, as to Circumstances of time to reconcile these Scriptures, and to remove the difficulty, I have thought fit to observe, that the Night begins about the fourth hour, so they also divided the Day into four parts, each part having its Denomination from the succeeding part, by which Name all the intermediate time was called. Thus when the third hour (which with us is nine of the Clock) was past, they called at the fifth hour till half twelve. Thus Pilate Condemned Christ in the beginning of the sixth hour, and the darkness began at the end of it, that is, after twelve, for dividing the day into quadrants, the Hours had their Denominations from the beginning of the day, and not from about the sixth hour, which is true, but it comes full minute after. There was darkness over all the Land, till the ninth hour. That this darkness was caused by the Eclipse of the Sun at that time of the Day is plain enough, but that this was no Eclipse in the ordinary course of Nature is evident, for 1. whereas all Eclipses use to be in the time of the New Moon, this was, when the Moon was at the Full, the fifth day of the Month Nisan: 2. This Eclipse was not seen in one part or in another, but in all parts of the world, under the same Latitude, and in all parts of the year: 3. No Eclipse in a natural course can last three Hours. So that plainly this was a miraculous Eclipse, not caused by the Interposition of the Moon (as other Eclipses) but by the Mighty and Extraordinary Power of God, which made an Heathen Philosopher at a great distance of time, to exclaim the Divine being non suseptor, et sympathizet with one that suffereth, he is said to have seen this Eclipse in Egypt And about the ninth hour, that is, about the close of the Clock (as we reckon the Hours) Jesus cried with a loud Voice, Et Eli, Eli, Et Eia (as the Jews cry) My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me reports them according to the Syriac Corruption of the Bible. They are Davidis Words, Psal. 22. v. 1. David was a Type of Christ. He that was the Son of David saith Davidis Words, publicly spoken by David in the Perion of Christ Gods forsaking any Person or places, must be understood with reference not to his Essential Presence, for so he filled all places, and is present in all places, but to his Accidental Presence, as he is present in his Providence for our good, so that when God would his good Providence to us, and with respect to our outward or toward Man, he is said to *for*sake us. A Total *for*saking either of our Bodies, or of our Souls, is not consistent with the being of our outward Man: or the Spiritual being or Life of our inward Man. All forsakings therefore in this Life, are Gradual, and Partial. The *for*saking which Christ therefore here complains of was not the Total withdrawing of Divine favour, and assistance from him, but the Partial withdrawing of his favour, and assistance from him, as he is present with the first Words testifying his relation to God, and alliance in him, but it must be understood with respect to Gods Consulatory Manifestations, and that is testified by his other Words, related by Luke. Father unto thy Hand I commend my Spirit. Whose words having said, he gave up the Ghost [By Matthew, Mark and Luke] John added, that he bowed his Head, and yielded up the Ghost. Words added, to confirm what was said before, and to shew that he was *for*saken from him. His crying twice at this instant, with a loud Voice argued his Spirits not to spend, but he might have lived a few Minutes longer, but he freely laid down his Life. The People saying, he calls for Elias, when he said Eli, Eli, Eia, make them to be Jews, who to this day dream of an Elias to come, and reform all things. That they no better distinguished between Eli and Elias, must be attributed either to the simplicity of the Syriac Corruption of the Term) or their too great distance from him. Their mocking him upon it, was but Consequence to their former behaviour toward him, while he was upon the

45 Now from the sixth hour, there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour.

7. 46 And about the ninth hour, *Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, Lama!bachtani that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me.

47 Some of them that stood there, when they heard that, said, This man calleth for Elias.

21. 48 And straightway one of them ran, and took a sponge, and filled it with vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

49 The rest said, Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him.

50 Jesus when he had cried again with a loud voice yielded up the Ghost.

Crofs. Their giving him the Sponge with Vinegar, and Hypoc. we before gave an account of.

51 And behold * the veil of the temple was rent <sup>in two</sup> in twain from the top, to the bottom, and the earth <sup>did</sup> quake, and the rocks rent.

52 And the graves were opened , and many bodies of faints which slept arose.

53 And came out of the graves, after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.

Mark, Ch. 15. 38. mentioneth only the rending of the Vail. No more doth Luke, Ch. 23. 45. From whence cometh note of the piercing of the side, to give a Testimony against this Prodigious piece of Wickedness by Prodigious Sign, both in the Heaven, and on the Earth. In the Heaven the Sun as we heard before, suffered an unusual Pre-ter-natural Eclipse, which lasted three hours.

In the Earth, there was an Earthquake, to that degree that the Rocks were rent by it. Earthquakes were sometimes no more than Indications of Gods Power, and Majesty; and fone, that, by this Earthquake, Christ declared his Divine Power, Psalm 68. Psalm 2. Isaiah 24. It is certain, Psalm 136. Psalm 136. the Centurion concluded from this, that this was the Power of Gods Arm, and therefore, he was not only the Indication of the Divine Majesty and Power, but also of his Mercy, Psalm 136. Isaiah 7. Isaiah 26. Natum 1. And Isaiah 40. Isaiah 40. to this: To show that the Earth abhorred what these Men had done. Besides this, The Veil of the Temple was rent, three of the Evangelists mention it. It is not much Material, whether this were the outward Veil, or the inward Veil, or Hangings, which parted the most Holy Place from the other part of the Temple, tho' probably it was the inner Veil, by this rent, and the Jews, and the Gentiles, were made to feel the guilt the Jews, and that he was leaving his Temple among them. The Veil also was a Type of Christs Veil, Heb 10. 20. the Antitype being Rent, it was reasonable that the Type should also be so. By this also was shewed, that the Temple-Service was now at an end, and to continue no longer, and the partition Wall between Jew and Gentile was pulled down. For what Matthew speaks, Isaiah 52. Isaiah 53. of the Graves opening, and the Bodies of the Saints rising, &c. probably it was not till Christ's Resurrection, that the Graves were rent, and the Bodies of the Saints were raised up together all the Prodiges things that happened, for Matthew himself faith, Isaiah 53. They came out of their Graves after his Resurrection, and it is not likely that the Graves opened any considerable time before they came out of their Graves. These now were the Prodiges which attended the Death of our Saviour.

54 Now when the centurion, and they that were with him watching Jesus, saw the earth quake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God.

55 And many women were there beholding afar off: * who followed Jesus, from Galilee, ministering unto him.

56 Amongst which was Mary Magdalen, and Mary the mother of James, and Joses, and the mother of Zebedees children.

Mark faith, Ch. 15. 39, 40, 41. And when the Centurion which stood over against him, saw that he was dead, and gave up the Ghost, he said, Truly this Man was the Son of God.
There were also Women looking on afar off, amongst whom was Mary Magdalen, and Mary the Mother of James the less, and of Joses, and Salome; who also when he was in Galilee, followed him, and Ministry unto him, and many other Women, which came up with him to Jerusalem. Luke, Ch. 23. 47, 48, 49. faith, Now when the Centurion saw what was done, he glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous Man.
And all the People that came together to that fight, beholding the things which were done, smote their Breasts, and returned, and all at Acquittance, and the Women that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off beholding these things. We heard of this in Ch. 36. That the Soldiers were down and watched Christ.
The Centurion here mentioned, was the Captain of this Watch, beholding the Earthquake, and all the other things that were done (faith Matthew) Mark faith, When he saw that he was dead, and gave up the Ghost, he glorified God, (faith Luke) Matthew and Mark tell us how he said, Truly this Man was the Son of God. Luke faith, he said, Certainly this man seus Man: he Glorified God by a Confession of the Truth; to the Glor of God, saying, he was a Righteous Man, and such a Righteous Man, as was also the Son of God. It seems very probable, that this Captain living amongst the Jews, had learned from them their Expectation of a Messiah; and spakeeth this with reference to that, and acknowledgeth that Christ was he. Like Death. That all the People that came to see that fight returned, Smiling at their Confession, and Chief Priests; and Wickedness committed by their Teachers, Pharisees, and Chief Priests; and Elders; and fearing that Vengeance should be followed in less than forty Years (and many Women were there) these Women had followed Christ out of Galilee: Two only are named here, Mary Magdalen, who probably had her Name from Magdala a City in Galilee, and Mary the Mother of James and Joseph. James the Jeft, fifth Mark, to distinguish him from James the son of Zebedee, and the Mother of Zebedees Children, these stood off from the three Evangelists say. John told them, 19. 25. 25. That two of these were to see near the Crofs, with the Mother of our Lord, that he spake to her when they were no- thing of the Master of that Lord, probably she was gone with the Jeft, to whom Christ had commended her, and she with- drew, and stood further off from the Crofs at this time. Mary the Jeft then gone on, describing the coming of Joseph of Ari- mae, to beg the dead Body of Christ, to doth Mark, and Luke, John, Ch. 19. 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37. Interprets something tending to complete the History. The Jews therefore because it was the Feast of the Passover, that the Bodies should not re- main upon the Crofs, and that the Bodies should not re- main was an High day, before that Sabbath day, that Sabbath day be broken, and that they might be taken and their Legs might be broken, and brake the Legs of the first, and of the other which was Crucified with him; But when they came to Jesus, to and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his Legs. But one of the Soldiers with a Spear pierced his side, and forthwith came there out Blood, and Water. And he that saw it bare Record, and his Record is true, and he knoweth that he saith true, that you might believe. For these things were done, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled. A Bone of him shall not be broken. And again another Scripture saith, They shall look upon him, when his bones are bruised. The day upon which he was Crucified, was the fifteenth day of the month Nisan, upon the Friday, as we call it; this appeareth from this Text, which saith, It was the Preparation to the Jewish Sabbath, and that Sabbath the Evangelist saith, was an High Day, not because as some think the Jews put off their Passover to that Day, but because it was the second Day of the Feast of unleavened Bread. It is true, John 19. 14. it is called the Preparation to the Passover, but we must remember, that all the seven Days of unleavened Bread, were counted as one before the Jews. This Day was indeed the Preparation to the Sabbath in the Jewish Law, for otherwise we must say, that Christ did not Eat the Passover the same Day that the Jews did, which involves us in many inextricable difficulties, and could not be if the Passchal Lamb was to be killed by the Priests, for they would not have killed it the Day before. It is therefore most probable, that John 19. 14. must be expounded by v. 31. and the Preparation of the Passover, must be the Preparation to the Sabbath, which falling within the compass of the seven days of unleavened Bread, was a great Day with them, especially being the day following the Eating of the Passchal Lamb. By the Law, Deut. 21. 23. The Body of none that was hanged, was to abide all Night upon the Tree. It was betwixt three and four of the Clock in the Afternoon, before that Christ died, they used to let some hours apart for Preparation to the Sabbath, which that Night began to be. Since Jesus fell, this therefore makes them to go to Pilate, and desire the Loaves that he suffered might be broken. Pilate grants their request. The Soldiers break the Legs of the two Thieves, but when they came to Christ, they found him dead, and brake not his Legs, but a Soldier with a Spear pierceth his side. The Evangelist takes notice of these minute things (and adfureth us he saw them, that we might believe) that he might show us how in every point, the things of old spoken concerning Christ, were fulfilled in him. Christ was the true Passchal Lamb, who was slain for us. For a Bone of it should not be broken, Exod. 12. 46. Num. 9. 12. So also the Evangelist referreth to Phil. 34. 20. where it is said of a Righteous Man: He kepteth all his Bones, that not one of them is broken. Our Saviour's Side was pierced, and that also is recorded, to let us know the fulfilling of that Scripture, Zech. 12. 10.

57 When the even was come, there came a rich man of Arimathea, named Joseph, who also himself was Jesus his disciple.

58 He went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus. Then Pilate commanded the body to be delivered.

59 And when Joseph had taken the body, he wrapt it in a clean linen cloth.

60 And *laid it in his own new Tomb, which he had hewed out in the rock, and he rolled a great stone, to the door of the sepulcher, and departed.

61 And there was Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, sitting over against the sepulcher.

Mark hath it, Chap. 15. from v. 42. to ec. And now when the even was come, because it was the Preparation, an, that is, the Day before the Sabbath. Joseph of Arimathea, an Honourable Councillor, who waited for the Kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus. And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead, and calling unto him the Centurion, he asked him whether he had been a while yet dead. And when he knew it of the Centurion, he gave him the Body to Joseph. And he bought fine Linen, and took him down, and wrapp him in the linen, and laid him in a Sepulcher, which was hewed out of a Rock, and rolled a stone to the door of the Sepulcher. And Mary Magdalene, and Mary the Mother of Jesus, beheld where he was laid. Luke hath it, Ch. 23, 50. Ec. thus. And behold there was a Man Named Joseph, a Councillor, and he was a good Man, and a just. Use same words, but he hath conferred it with the word of the Evangelist of Arimathea a City of the Jews, and he made it for the Kingdom of God. This Man went unto Pilate, and begged the Body of Jesus. And he took it down, and wrapped it in fine Linen, and laid it in a Sepulcher, that was hewn in stone, wherein never Man before lay. And that day was the Preparation, and the Sabbath drew on. John reports it with these additions, Ch. 19, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42. And after this Joseph of Arimathea, being a Disciple of Jesus, but secretly for the Jews, becometh Pilate's man to requite his duty for the Body of Jesus, and Pilate gave him leave, he came down and took the Body of Jesus. And there came also Nicodemus ( which at the first came to Jesus by Night ) and brought a mixture of Myrrour, and Aloes about an hundred pound weight. Then took they the Body of Jesus, and wound it in fine Linen Cloths, with the Spices, as the manner of the Jews is. Now in the place where he was Crucified, there who in those Promises and Prophecies were fulfilled, the first Publick and Plain Preacher of the Doctrine of the Gospel, for the Law and the Prophets, prophesied until John. Since that time the Kingdom of God is Preached, and every Man prelieth into it. Math. 11. 13. Luke 16. 16. So as John's Preaching was the beginning of the Gospel, for tho the Doctrine of the Gospel, was hardly before known, yet it then began to be plainly and publicly declared to the World. He was the first in whom the Gospel Prophecies began to have an End, as both the Prophecies and the types of it, had a more full complection in John. Two Prophecies at least had their complement in John. Gen. 22. 18. which the Evangelist mentions in the next verse, and Mal. 4. 5. concerning Elias first to come, which our Saviour applies to John. Math. 11. 14. Chap. 9. 11. and the Angel before him. Luke 1. 17. besides Isaiah's Prophecy. Isaiah. 40. 3. applied unto him by Matthew Ch. 3. 3. and in the third verse of this Chap. and by John applied to himself John 1. 23. This Gospel is called the Gospel of John's Christ; because the History of Christ's Birth, Life, and Death, is the matter of it. Christ was by Matthew called the Son of David, the Son of Abraham, to let us know that he was truly Man, a Native Jew, and of the Royal Family, to whom the Promises were made. By Mark he is called the Son of God, to let us know that he was more than meer Man. And indeed who, but he who was the Son of God, could fully reveal his Fathers will? Determine the Law of Moses, and introduce a new way of Worship, and publish a Ministry of Salvation, bid from all preceding ages, tho not from all individual Persons in them.

* Isaiah 40. 3. 3. * The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Luke 3. 4. Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

The Prophets Malachi and Isaiah (both the Evangelist) prophesied of this beginning of the Gospel. Malachi prophesied, that before the Great King should come unto Zion, an Harbinger should come before him; to prepare his way. The Angel Luke 1. 11. expounds both the Prophecies, and also that Mal. 4. 5. And he shall go before him in the Spirit, and Power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the Fathers to the Children, and the disobedient to the Wisdom of the Gospel; to make ready a People prepared for the Lord. John by his Preaching turned the Ears of the People to the voice of the Gospel, and so prepared them for Christ. See the further Explication of these words, in the Notes on Math. 3. 3 & 11. 10. This Name given to John the Baptist, A Voice crying, gives us the right notion of a Gospel Minister. Here is but a Voice crying, speaking what God hath first fuggelled to him. Thus Exod. 14. 15. God said to Moses. Thou shalt speak unto him, and put Words into his Mouth, and I will be with thy Mouth, and with his Mouth.

5. And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins.

Luke faith that John began about the fifteenth year of Tiberius Cæsar, he Baptized in the Wilderness, that is a place little inhabited, by his Baptism is not to be truly understood Baptism, but his Preaching and Doctrine, his whole Administration, which is called the Baptism of Repentance, because Repentance was the great thing he Preached. A fear of which Baptism was to be, the consequence of which was to be the Remission of Sins, or the Argument which he used to perswade Repentance, was the Remission of Sins. See further the Annotations on Math. 3. 5. 6. where we have had these Words.

6. And John was clothed with camels hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins, and he did eat locusts and wild honey.

This was all explained in the Notes on Math. 3. 4.

7. And preached saying, There cometh one mightier then I * after me, the latchet of whose shoe I am not worthy to stoop down, and unloose.

8. I indeed have baptized you with water, but he shall baptize you * with the holy Ghost.

We had the same with very little difference in the Phrase Matthew 3. 11. See the Notes there.

9. And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

10. And straightway * coming up out of the Water, he saw the heavens || opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him.

11. And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Luke 3. 21. 22. * I have at my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, Christ, who Luke 2. 51. went with his Parents to Nazareth, and was subject to them, after he had been disputing with the Doctors in the Temple, now goes from Nazareth a City in Galilee, to that part of Galilee near Jordan, or rather to Bethabara where John was Baptizing, and was Baptized, see the Notes Math. 3. 13. 16. 17. John 1. 28. where this piece of History is more fully related. Luke addeth that Christ was now about thirty years of age.

12. * And immediately the spirit driveth him into the wilderness.

13. And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan, and was with the wild beasts, and the angels ministered unto him.

Both Matthew and Luke relate the History of our Saviours temptations by the Devil more fully. See the Notes on Math. 4. 1. 2. Mark faith immediately, but it is not to be taken strictly, for the next moment but after a day or two as it should seem.

14. Now after that * John was put into prison, Jesus came into Galilee, * preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God.

15. And saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand, repent ye and believe the gospel.

It should seem that John had but a short time, when he exercised his publick Ministry, he was the Son of a Priest Zecharias Luke 1. 13. and it is probable that he entered not upon his publick Ministry, till he was thirty years of age, (it was the sacred age, and the age which Luke tells us our Saviour entered upon his publick Ministry.) He was but about six Months older than our Saviour, and was imprisoned, as soon as our Saviour entered upon his Ministry, indeed before we read of his entrance upon it. Upon his Imprisonment, Christ begetteth to Preach in Galilee, the Gospel by which he set up his Kingdom, and which leadeth Men to the Kingdom of God. And saying, The time is fulfilled, the time determined of God for the Revelation of the Messiah, and the grace of the Gospel through him, foretold by the Prophets Dan. 2. 44. hence Christ is said to have come in the fulness, and in the dispensation of the fulness of time Eph. 1. 10. Gal. 4. 4. and the Kingdom of God is at hand, the gracious dispensation of God in the Gospel is at hand, or hath appeared. Revel. 1. 3. Turn from the wickedness of your ways, and believe the Gospel, or in the Gospel, to believe the Gospel is one thing, to believe in the Gospel, (as it is here in the Greek) is another. The former phrase signifies no more than a firm, and fixed assent to the Proposition of the Gospel, but to believe in the Gospel, is to place our hope of Salvation in the Doctrine, and Promises of the Gospel, which are the proximate object of our Faith, tho the primary object of it be the Person of the Mediator. There is a Repentance that must go before Faith, that is the application of the promise of pardoning mercy to the Soul, tho true Evangelical Repentance, which is a sorrow for Sin, flowing from the sense of the loss of God in Christ by the fruit, and effect of Faith. Our Saviour Preaching agree with the Baptist Math. 3. 2. John 3. 23.

16. Now as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew his brother casting a net into the sea, for they were fishers.

17. And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become Fishers of Men.

18. And straightway they * forsook their nets, and followed him.

19. And when he had gone a little further thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, and John his Brother, who also were in the ship, mending their nets.

20. And straightway he called them, and they left their father Zebedee in the Ship, with the hired servants, and went after him.

We heard of the call of these four Apostles, before in Math. 4. 18. in the Notes upon which, may be found what reason is necessary for the explication of these verses, (having nothing new in them) as also the reconciling of what John faith Chap. 1. 40. about the calling of Andrew and Simon, to what these two Evangelists say about it.

21. * And they went into Capernaum, and straightway on the sabbath day, he entered into the synagogue, and taught.

22. And they were astonished at his doctrine, for he * taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

We heard before that the Synagogues were much of the Nature of our Parish Churches, places where People ordinarily met together on the Sabbath days, to Worship God by Prayer, and reading the Law and the Prophets, and hearing the Words of Exhortation, from such as the Rulers of the Synagogues appointed thereunto. Christ ordinarily Preached in them. The Evangelists often mention, the Peoples admiring, being amazed, and astonished at his Doctrine, but it is one thing for People to be astonished, and amazed, at a new Doctrine, and to admire the Preacher, another thing to believe; we read amongst the Jews, of many that were affected at the hearing of Christ, with astonishment, and admiration, but of few that believed in him, for he taught them as one that had Authority. A small derivative from this, is yet seen in the Gravity, awful presence, and Authority, (which as a great gift of God) we see still given to some faithful Ministers of Christ, such especially as God maketh a more eminent use of in the conversion of Souls. But this great Preacher had the most humane measure, not as the Scribes, the ordinary teachers of the Jews, who read their lectures of the Law, but he was, and without Life, and Power, as the hearts of the People were not at all affected with them, no more then with the dull telling a tale, with which neither the tellers, nor hearers were much affected.

23. * And there was in their synagogue, a man with an unclean spirit, and he cried out,

24. Saying, Let us alone * what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth, art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the holy One of God.

Luke reports the same passage, he faith—There was a Man who had the Spirit of an unclean Devil. The Devil is called an Unclean Spirit, in opposition to the Spirit of God which is the Holy Spirit. The Man that had this unclean Spirit, or rather the Unclean Spirit in the Man cried out, Let us alone, what have we to do with thee, he doubted what followed, etc. That he should be cast out. He counts himself destroyed when he cannot do much if the wicked Men, who are the feed of this old Serpent, who Prov. 1. 16. Sleep not except they have done mischief, and their Sleep is taken away, unless they have made some to fall. The Devil here owneth Christ to be the Holy one of God.

25. And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him.

26. And when the unclean spirit had torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him.

It is both here and in many other places observable, that when the Devils made a confession of Christ, yet neither Christ nor his Apostles would ever take any notice of it. Truth is never advanced from the Confession of known Liars (as the Devil was from the beginning.) Christ need not the Devils testimony, either to his Holiness, or his being the Son of God, nor would he have People allow the least faith to the Devils words. Nor was he to be imposed upon, by the Devils good words, he was to make no trust with him, but to destroy him, and his works, he therefore charged him to hold his peace, and to come out, And when the Unclean Spirit had torn him. The Greek Word here translated was is translated turn, as appears by Luke 4. 35. where it is said, it did him no harm; the word signifies no more than a violent Confusion, or shaking, and it is observed that those possessed by Devils had only their members made use of by the Devils, but without any wounding or laceration of them, he cried out with a loud voice, and came out of him. O how low is the Devil to what with his Pollution, but possibly also Christ would have him cry out with a loud Voice, that his miraculous operation, might be the more taken notice of.

27. And they were all amazed, inasmuch that they questioned amongst themselves, saying, * What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean Spirits, and they do obey him?

The Jews had Exorcists amongst them, who sometimes cast out Devils, by some forms of Invocation they had, but Christ commanded them out; he neither did it, by any kind of intreaty from any company with the Devil, nor yet by any Invocation of God, but by an Authoritative Command; this was new to the Jews, and especially confounding a new Doctrine that he had published. But still we read of no believing, no signification of him as God, or the Son of God, or the Messiah, and Saviour of the World, only the generality are amazed, they could not obtain of themselves to believe this new Doctrine, nor yet so far command their passions, but they must be startled and amazed at it.

28. And immediately his fame spread abroad, throughout all the region round about Galilee.

The Fame of his Miracles, rather then of his Doctrine, by this means many were brought to him to be cured, many were brought also to hear him, some of whom believed, others were

29. * And forthwith when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon, and Andrew, with James and John.

30. But Simons wives mother lay sick of a fever, and anon they tell him of her.

31. And he came, and took her by the hand, and lifted her up, and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them.

See the Notes on Math. 8. 14. where we met with this History. Our Saviour sometimes shewed his Power in diseases not accounted incurable. The Miracle appeared in 1. In the cure of her without the use of any means. 2. In the Inflammasion of the Air, the did not recover gradually, but in a moment, and to such a degree as she could Minister unto them, suppose at Dinner or Supper, &c.

32. * And at evening, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils.

33. And all the city was gathered together at the door.

34. And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils, and * suffered not the devils to speak || because they knew him.

It was upon the Sabbath day, (as appeared from what went before) therefore the time is noted, at the Evening when the Sun was set. Before that time when the Sabbath was determined, the Jews thought it unlawful to carry any burdens, but after Sun-set they judged it lawful. The use of the Particle all here, v. 32. 33. is again observable to shew the vanity of those who will from general Principles, conclude Propositions contrary to the Analogy of Faith. Those Principles being often used in a restrained Sense. Acts faith, that the Devils cried out, Thou art Christ the Son of David, but he rebuked them, suffering them not to speak, because (or that they) they knew him. Christ desired not to be published to (soon under that Notion, but he much less desired the Devils testimony in the case. See v. 25. Acts 16. 18. The good Words of the Devil and his Seed, are indeed a detestation to Christ and his Seed.

35. And in * the Morning rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed.

Secret Prayer stands commended to us, as by the precept of Christ. Math. 6. 6. by his frequent example, to teach us that our duty in Prayer is not discharged without it, we are to pray with all Prayer and Supplication, there is in Publick, and Private Prayer, a more united strength, and interest: But in secret Prayer, a more free and full communication of our Souls unto God. Christ for this cause the Morning (as the time freeest from Distractions and Company,) and a solitary place as fittest for a secret duty.

36. And Simon, and they that were with him, followed after him.

37. And when they had found him, they said unto him, All men seek for thee.

38. And he said unto them, * Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also, for * there-fore came I forth.

39. And he preached in their Synagogues, throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils.

Peter probably piteeth the Multitude, because many amongst them needed Christs presence, for their bodily infirmities. Our Saviour knew their hearts better then Peter, and that which made them so much seek for him, was either in some a curiosity to see Miracles wrought, or at best, but a desire of some bodily benefit from him. Whereas his working of Miracles was but a secondary work, subservient to his work in Preaching, and do to confirm his Doctrine, and to advantage them as to their Faith in him as the Messiah. As therefore he refused to gratify the curiosity of the Pharisees in giving them a sign: So here our Saviour takes no notice of the Multitude seeking for him, but faith to his Disciples, Let us go into the next Towns, that I may preach there also, for thereby will I come forth. Paul faith that God sent him not, Let us go into the next Towns, that I may work Miracles, but that I may preach there also; he doth not say he came forth to work Miracles, but to Preach, how it comes to pass, that some are possessed of so lightly an opinion of Preaching, as to think that it is needless, which our Saviour and St. Paul counted to be their principal Work, where in the mean time, they pretend to derive from Christ, I can not tell. I am free Preaching was the greatest part of Christs work, I have it comes to be the best part of Ministers work since, or how many of them think it sufficient to discharge that work by Journey Men, which he thought it not beneath him to do himself, may deserve their examination, which make it so; we do not say that Preaching is a greater Work then Prayer, or that it is not Ministers duty to Pray, nor yet that it is greater then administering the Sacrament. But this we say, we read of Christs Preaching often in the Synagogues, on the Sabbath, in a Ship, of his Preaching, we read not, of his Private, and secret Prayer often. We read expressly that he Baptized none, we must have leave to think that our greatest Work, which our Lord and his Apostles were most employed in, and do think others will be of our Minds, affords us they shall understand, that if the end of Preaching be not turning Men from one opinion to another, but from the love, and practice of Sin to God, there is as much need of it as ever, and that the turning of Men from one Opinion to another, without a change of heart, as to the love of Sin, is but a turning of Men from one quarter of the Devils Kingdom to another.

40. * And there came a leper to him, beseeching him, and kneeling down to him, and saying unto him, * If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

and others) seems but to be a piece of natural Religion, and Christians giving themselves signs of the approaching curse, first of Jerusalem, then of the World, will make thinking Christians believe them with a Religious eye, not to undertake to expound them particularly or Prophecy upon them. Certainly we ought to look upon them, as propagating some great work of God, and usually of the greatest upon Sinners.

9 But * take heed to your selves: For they shall deliver you up to councils, and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten, and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them.

This is far as concerneth those to whom Christ spake, can only be a Sign of the Destruction of Jerusalem, but for as it concerneth others, it is also a Sign of the end of the World. It is the fifth Sign he gives them. The Persecution of the Ministers of Christ and the Saints of God, for the Preaching, and profession of the Gospel. See the Notes on Mark 24. 9.

10 * And the gospel must first be published among all nations.

I am prone to think that our Lord gives this not only as a Sign of the Destruction of Jerusalem, but of the end of the World, and the latter principally, for before the Destruction of Jerusalem (which was in less than forty years after Christ's Death) the Gospel was not Preached to all Nations, otherwise then as All figures were typical. And I do think that all places shall have the Gospel Preached to them, before the Day of Judgment, for another manner then either it was possible, it should be Preached to them within forty years, after the Death of Christ, or then many places have had it Preached amongst them to this Day. For this the Holy Scriptures, and Ecclesiastical Histrories, give us a something large account, of the Gospel being Preached in Europe, Asia, and in Africa, yet we have little account from any of them, of its being Preached in America. I am not wholly ignorant of what those writers tell us, of Thomas the Apostle his Preaching to the Indians, and of Tamasius and his Catechists, yet they are very few Preachers of any stories give an account of, gone to the Indians, whither I believe the Gospel must go before that Christ comes to Judgment.

11 * But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought before hand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate: but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost.

See the Notes on Mark 10. 19. 20. By take no Thought, he means take no anxious thoughts to disquiet your selves.

12 Now the * brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son: and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause them to be put to death.

13 And ye shall be hated of all men for my names sake: * But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

This is but an amplification of the fifth Sign, given us v. 9. viz. a furious Persecution, eminently made good in the Jewish Persecution, before the Destruction of Jerusalem. In the Pagan Persecution, for 300 years after Christ. In the Popish Persecutions at this Day. See the Notes on Mark 24. 10.

14 But when ye shall feel the abomination of desolation * spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing where it ought not, (let him that readeth understand) then let them that be in Judea, flee to the mountains.

15 And let him that is on the house-top, not go down into the house, neither enter therein, to take any thing out of his house.

16 And let him that is in the field, not turn back again for to take up his garment.

17 But woe to them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days.

18 And pray ye that your flight be not in the winter.

19 For in those days shall be affliction, such as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created, unto this time, neither shall be.

20 And except that the Lord had shortened those days, no flesh should be saved: but for the elects sake whom he hath chosen, he hath shortened the Days.

See the Notes on Mark 14. 15. 16. 17. where we have before opened all these passages. This Sign doth manifestly relate to the Destruction of Jerusalem, and can have no relation to the end of the World. In our Notes on Mark 24. we have shewed what is meant by the Abomination of Desolations, and to what place in Daniel it refereth. Luke expoundeth it, Ch. 21. 20. when you shall see Jerusalem compassed with Armies, the Roman Armies. Abominable, for the Idols that in them were worshipped. The Sign was this, when you shall see the Roman Armies besieging Jerusalem, he assured God will soon deliver it into their hands, what ever way comes. Men may suggest of their holding out, or driving them away. Let every one of you with all imaginable expedition, shift for your selves. God will surely deliver up the City, when that time comes. And before the taking of the City, he tells them, there shall be such affliction (by reason of their intestine Factions and divisions, as never any People experienced. As to these things. See the Notes on Mark 24. 15. 16. 8c.

21 And then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, Luke 14. 33 here is Christ, or Lo, he is there: believe him not.

22 For false Christs, and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce if it were possible, even the elect.

23 But take ye heed: behold, * I have foretold you * Pa. 2. 1. all things.

See the Notes on Mark 24. 23. 24. 25. The History of Josephus, and those Roman Histrories, who did write the History of those times, that went immediately before the Destruction of Jerusalem, and give us account of the taking of that City, are the best commentary on these verses. It hath been often said, that the Jews were in expectation of a Messiah, and are so still. But they were under no notion of a Person, who should be God-man, and save his People from their Sins, and set up a spiritual Kingdom in the World, but a secular Prince, who should come out of the house of David, and restore them to their civil Liberties. So that the name of Christ, was a fair name to patronize any Rebelling Faction, where the Leader would arrogate it to himself, (especially if he could pretend to the house of David), near the Destruction of Jerusalem, several Persons used these arts to draw People after them to defend themselves, and to stand up for their Liberties. Our Saviour having discovered his Disciples tainted with this common error of the Nation, and knowing what would come to pass, gives his Disciples warning, to avoid these delusions, and not to run after such pretenders, to their Ruin and Destruction.

24 * But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light.

25 And the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken.

26 And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory.

27 And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth, to the uttermost part of heaven.

The usage of these Phrases, of the darkening the Sun, and the Moon, and the falling of the Stars, to signify the ruin of Nations, and changes wrought in them, as in Isaiah 13. 10. as to the Destruction of Babylon, and Ezekiel 32. 7. to express the change the Providence of God made, by the Destruction of Egypt, and to signify the change made in the World, by setting up the Gospel, to which purpose they are used by Joel ch. 2. 31. hath given a latitude, to Interpret these verses, with relation to the Destruction of the Jews, which made a great change, as to the Jewish Church and State. 2. And with reference to the change made by setting up the Gospel Church. But the 26. and 27. verses incline me rather to Interpret them of the end of the World. For the those other explications are used to express great Changes and Mutations, yet it is not said of any of them. Then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds, with great Power, and Glory. And then shall he send his angels, &c. Which Phrases do so agree with those other Texts, where Christs second coming to Judgment is expressed certainly, that I cannot but think our Saviour speaks here with reference to that. See Mark 13. 41. 1 Cor. 15. 2. 1 Thes. 4. 16. Rev. 1. 7.

28 * Now learn a parable of the fig-tree: When her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is near.

29 So ye in like manner, when ye shall feel these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the doors.

30 Verily I say unto you, that this generation shall not pass, till all these things be done.

31 Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away.

See the Notes on Mark 24. 32. 33. 34. where we met with the same things, almost Word for Word. So, as more Words need not be repeated here in the explanation of these verses.

32 But of that day and that hour, knoweth no man, no not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father.

33 Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is.

See the Notes on Mark 24. 36. 42. Idem last ultimate Diss. adversus omnes Dicos. God hath concealed from our knowledge of the last Day, that we might watch all our Days. See the Notes on Mark 24. in what sense Christ's Fifth, he did not know know the last Day, and hour. Watching is opposed to Sleeping, there is a natural Sleep, and a spiritual Sleep, of which the Apostle speaks Rom. 13. 11. Eph. 5. 14. the latter is here principally intended to which the Watching here commanded is opposed, and signifies an industrious diligent Care, to keep our selves from Sin, upon a prospect of the last Judgment, and the consideration of the uncertainty of the particular year, or day when it shall be. Together with such a bodily Watching, as may be subservient unto that end, and it us for Prayer, but the Watching principally intended, is a striving against Sin, which is the spiritual Sleep, and this it is expounded by Luke ch. 21. 36. compared with 24. 35.

34 For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch.

35 Watch ye therefore, for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning.

37 And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch.

In the Greek, those Words, For the Son of man is, are not, but those, or some such like, are necessary to be understood, to make up the sense. The Watching here again twice called for is the same with that before mentioned. The sense of the verses is the same as before, the uncertainty of the time, when Christ cometh to judgment, should oblige all Men to be diligent and industrious, to keep themselves from Sinning, that they may be ready at what time to ever he cometh. He mentions only the four parts of the Night, having spoken of Sin, under the notion of Sleeping, and himself, under the notion of Watching.

CHAP. XIV.

1 * After two days, was the feast of the passover, and of unleavened bread: and the chief priests and the scribes sought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death.

2 But they said, not on the feast-day, lest there be an uproar of the people.

Matthew faith the same, only he bringeth it in, as said to the Disciples by Christ. This must be said upon that day in the Week, which we call Tuesday, for Friday was the Passover Day, when began the Feast of Unleavened Bread. See other things in the Notes on Mark 26. 1. 2. 3.

3 And being in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster-box of ointment of spikenard, very precious, and she brake the box, and poured it on his head.

4 * And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made?

5 For it might have been sold for more than three hundred  $\pi$  pence, and have been given to the poor.

And they murmured against her.

6 And Jesus said, Let her alone, why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me.

7 For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will, ye may do them good: but me ye have not always.

8 She hath done what she could: for she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying.

9 Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done, shall be spoken of for a memorial of her.

See the Notes on Mark 26. 6. 7. 8. &c. where this piece of History is fully considered, with the differing circumstances related by our Evangelists, and by St. John.

10 And Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve, went unto the chief priests, to betray him unto them.

11 And when they heard it, they were glad, and promised to give him money. And he sought how he might conveniently betray him.

See the Notes on Mark 26. 14. 15. 16.

12 And the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the passover, his disciples said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare, that thou mayest eat the passover?

13 And he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go ye into the city, and there shall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water: follow him.

14 And whosoever he shall go in, say ye to the good-man of the house, The Master faith, Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?

15 And he will shew you a large upper room furnished and prepared: there make ready for us.

16 And his disciples went forth, and came into the city, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover.

See the Notes on Mark 26. 17. 18. 19.

17 And in the evening he cometh with the twelve.

18 And as they sat and did eat, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, One of you which eateth with me, shall betray me.

19 And they began to be sorrowful, and to say unto him one by one, Is it I, and another said, Is it I.

20 And he answered and said unto them, It is one of the twelve, that dipbeth with me in the dish.

21 The Son of man indeed goeth, as it is written of him: but wo to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed: good were it for that man, if he had never been born.

See the Notes on Mark 26. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. where is opened whatever is necessary for the understanding of these Words, in which nothing of moment is varied, save only that Matthew reporteth Judas as being at this time particularly discovered, John hath nothing of this, unless the Supper mentioned, Chap. 13. where this Supper, of which more shall be said in its order.

22 And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat, this is my body.

23 And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them: and they all drank of it.

24 And he said unto them, This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many.

25 Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God.

26 And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

See the Notes on Mark 26. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. where the very final differences between our Evangelists and Matthew, and Luke are also considered.

27 And Jesus saith unto them, All ye shall be offended, because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered.

28 But * after that I am risen, I will go before you into Galilee.

29 But Peter said unto him, Although all shall be offended, yet will not I.

30 And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, that this day, even in this night before the cock crow twice thou shalt deny me thrice.

31 But he spake the more vehemently, If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wife. Likewise also said they all.

See the Notes on all the discourse Mark 26. 31. 32. 33. &c.

32 And they came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he faith to his disciples, Sit ye here while I shall pray.

33 And he taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy.

34 And faith unto them, * My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here, and watch.

35 And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed, that if it were possible the hour might pass from him.

36 And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee, take away this cup from me: * nevertheless, not what I will, but what thou wilt.

37 And he cometh and findeth them sleeping, and faith unto Peter, Simon sleepest thou? couldst not thou watch one hour?

our Saviours friends gave him, to refresh him: But it is most probable it was given him to entice him, that he might be lessensible of the pain he should endure upon the Cross; whatsoever they intended, our Saviour refused it, having Wine to uphold him, which they knew not of. For other things relating to this Story, see the Notes on Matth. 27. 32-33.

38 * And the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom.

39 And when the centurion which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God.

40 There were also women looking on afar off: among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less, and of Joses, and Salome.

41 Who also when he was * in Galilee, followed him, and ministered unto him; and many other women which came up with him unto Jerusalem.

The Prodigies happening upon the Death of our Saviour, and the passages happening betwixt the time of his expiration, and his Burial, are more largely reported by the other Evangelists than by Mark; we have put them all together, and considered the passages relating to them in our Notes on Matth. 27. v. 51. 52-53.

John 19. 38.

42 * And now when the even was come, (because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath:)

43 Joseph of Arimathea, an honourable counsellor, which also waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus.

44 And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he asked him Whether he had been any while dead.

45 And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

46 And he bought finelinnen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linnen, and laid him in a sepulchre which was hewn out of a rock, and rolled a stone unto the door of the sepulchre.

47 And Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Joses, beheld where he was laid.

The circumstances of our Saviours honourable burial as related by this, and the other Evangelists, are gathered together, and opened in our Notes on Matth. 27. from v. 57. to 66.

CHAP. XVI.

We are now come to the History of our Saviours Resurrection, his several appearances to, and converse with his Disciples, from the time of his rising from the Dead, unto the time of his Ascension up into Heaven, which was forty days. Of all the Evangelists, St. John is most full in his Relation of this part of the History of our Saviour, which we shall consider in order, for his two last Chapters are wholly spent in this part of the History, in the mean time, as we did in our Notes on Matth. 28. take notice only of what Matthew hath upon that Argument: So we shall in the opening of this Chapter of Mark, take notice only of what Mark hath not concerned with, and complementary of what Matthew had before said. (For what he hath of that Nature we shall refer to the Reader to our Notes on Matthew) and here we will also take in what Luke hath, that tends to the fuller relation of any thing which Mark hath, not meddling with what John hath, but reserving that till we come to open the fuller account of this whole History, in the twentieth, and one and twentieth Chapters of his Gospel.

1 AND when the Sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him.

About the time when they came, see the Notes on Matth. 28. 1. which is also further explicated in the next verses.

2 And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

John 20. 1.

Matthew saith, As it began to dawn toward the first day of the Week, John saith, they came early while it was yet dark, Luke also saith very early. But it is manifest from the History, that they came a second time, of which Mark saith, passing over their first coming.

3 And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre.

4 (And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away) for it was very great.

These were their thoughts as they were coming, concerning the guard which they had set by Pilates permission at the importunity of the Jewish Priests and Rulers, it is probable (the day before being the Jewish Sabbath in the observation of which the Jews were very strict) they had not heard, so were not solicitous as to them, but they knew of the Stone rolled to the mouth of the Sepulchre, but they were in vain solicitous, when they came they found the Stone rolled away. Christ was risen before.

5 And * entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted.

6 And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified, he is risen, he is not here, behold the place where they laid him.

7 But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter, that he goeth before you into Galilee, there shall ye see him, * as he said unto you.

8 And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled, and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.

Both Luke and John mention two Angels in the habit of young Men, Matthew speaks of one sitting upon the Stone. They might see him sitting upon the Stone, and yet find him within all, the motions of Angels are quick, and indelible to our sense, or the Stone might be rolled inward. That they were affrighted is no wonder, considering how apt we are to be affrighted by any apparitions. Concerning what the Angel said to these women, read the Notes on Matth. 28. 7. 8. They presently fly from the Sepulchre amazed, saying nothing to any, till they came into the City, where they tell it to the Disciples.

9 Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, * he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils.

10 And he went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept.

11 And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

Concerning this appearance of Christ to Mary Magdalene, see the Notes on Matth. 28. 9. and more fully on John 20. 2. 3. 4. who gives a more full account than any other of this appearance.

12 After that, he appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country.

13 And they went and told it unto the residue: neither believed they them.

Of this appearance St. Luke gives us a very large account Luke 24. from v. 13. to v. 36. See the Notes on that Chapter.

14 * Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief, and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.

This most probably is the appearance mentioned Luke 24. 36. John 20. 19. See the Notes there.

15 And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

16 * He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved: but he that believeth not shall be damned.

17 And these signs shall follow them that believe; * In my name shall they cast out devils, they shall speak with new tongues.

18 * They shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; * they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

See the Notes on Matth. 28. 19. where what we have here is largely explained.

19 So then, * after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God.

Matthew saith nothing of our Saviours Ascension, Mark speaks of it very shortly. Luke saith, And he led them out as far as Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them. And it came to pass while he blessed them, he parted from them, and was carried up into Heaven. And they worshipped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great Joy. And again gives us this part part of this History most fully, Acts 1. from v. 1. to v. 12. we shall in our Notes on Luke 24. speak more fully to this. We are told Acts 1. 3. that Christ was forty Days upon the Earth after his Resurrection, and v. 9. That a Cloud did receive him. He is said to sit on the Right Hand of God, to distinguish him from Angels, whose places are but places of Ministration.

20 And they went forth and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and * confirming the word with signs following. Amen.

Here is now the History of a great deal of following time, shortly Epitomized in one Verse. The first motion of the Eleven was to Jerusalem, Luke 24. 52. and this was according to the express command of Christ, v. 49. There they were continually in the Temple Praising and Blessing God. v. 52. Acts 1. 12. 13. At Jerusalem they went into an upper Room. There they continued with one accord in Prayer and Supplications, v. 14. and chose Matthias for the twelfth Apostle, Acts 2. The Holy Ghost came upon them, till they continued Preaching to the Jews, till Acts 13. 46. The Jews by their Unbelief and Persecution, judging themselves unworthy of Eternal Life, they turned to the Gentiles of God confirming their Word, that is, his Word spoken by them with Signs following. The whole History of the Acts of the Apostles is an abundant Proof.

St. L U K E.

The ARGUMENT.

Concerning the Penman of this History, the certain time when he wrote it, and the occasion of his Writing of it, we have little in Holy Writ; and there is such an uncertainty in Traditions, as it is hardly worth the Labour to Transcribe what Men have but guessed at. For those who would have him to be Barnabas, or one of the Seventy, they seem not to have considered what Luke himself saith, Chap. 1. 2. that he wrote, as they delivered them to him, which from the beginning were Eye-Witnesses, and Ministers of the Word. By which is fairly hinted to us, that he was no Eye-Witness, nor (from the first at least) a Minister of the Word. That there was one Luke Contemporaneous with Paul, and his Fellow-Labourer, appeareth from 2 Tim. 4. 11. Philemon v. 24. Col. 4. 15. in both which latter Texts he is joined with Demas, and in Col. 4. 14. he is called a Beloved Physician. Those three Texts seem all to speak of one and the same Person who (probably) at first practised Physick, afterwards being made a Disciple, exercised the Ministry; it is generally thought that this was he, who was the Penman, both of this History, and of the Acts of the Apostles. Whether by Nation, he was a Syrian, or a Roman, or of what other Nation is but an unprofitable Speculation. That he was an Evangelist we know, that is, one inspired by God to Transcribe to the World, the History of the Birth, Life, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension of our Saviour, as also of the Acts of the Apostles, until Paul was a Prisoner at Rome. For his History of the Gospel, so far as it relates to Christ himself, it containeth many remarkable things, not mentioned by the other Evangelists. The Generation of John Baptist. The History of Zacharias. The Angels coming to the Blessed Virgin, Elizabeths Exclamation, and Salutation of her. The Publication of Christs Birth to the Shepherds, with the things spoken by them. The Testimony which Simeon and Anna gave to Christ. The occasion of Joseph and Marias going to Bethlehem, the Circumstances of our Saviours Birth there, his disputing with the Doctors at twelve Years of Age, are things reported by no other Evangelist, and of great use to complete the History of John the Baptist and of Christ; besides that he hath many Parables (as those of the lost Sheep, the lost goat, and of the Prodigal, &c. that are to be found in no other Evangelist, together with several other Parables and pieces of History; so say nothing of divers Circumstances, in those Parables and pieces of History (which other Evangelists have recorded) omitted by them: He dedicateth his Book to some Friend, either named Theophilus, or to whom the Signification of that Name (which is a lover of God) in his Judgment did very well agree. The time when he wrote it, is uncertain; some would have it to be Written the fifteenth, some the two and twentieth, some the twenty seventh Year of our Saviour. The matter Written by him is much more of concern to us to know than these Circumstances. We have in our Annotations spoken to those things which he mentioneth (before recorded by Matthew or Mark) more shortly. To other things which we in him first meet with, more largely.

CHAP. I.

1 For as much as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us, *

2 * Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eye-witnesses, and ministers of the word.

3 It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus.

4 That thou mightest know the certainty of those things wherein thou hast been instructed.

Luke Evangelical History hath this peculiar to itself, That whereas the Histories of the other Evangelists are written to the whole World, having no particular Inscription, or Dedication, Luke dedicateth his to a particular Person, named Theophilus; for so that Name signifies one, that loveth God, yet I cannot think it to be taken Appellatively, it being commonly used as a Proper Name. Parents in former Ages giving Children Names generally either expressive of their Childrens Duty to God (that by their Names they might be put in mind of it) or Expressive, of Gods Mercy to themselves in giving them such Children. The Evangelist here suggesteth, That many had taken in Hand, orderly to Write an account, of the things which were certainly believed among the Jews; some think that Luke here reflecteth upon those, that even to early had given false accounts of our Saviours History; for there were several pretended Gospels wrote, called, The Gospel of the Nazareans, of Thomas, of Matthias, Nicodemus, and many others which the Church soon saw cause to reject. But others think that Luke doth not at all reflect, and possibly those Fictions were not so early; but Luke observing that many did Write this famous History, and some possibly for want of due information, not so exactly, as they might, yet as they were delivered to them, from such as from the beginning were Eye-Witnesses, and Ministers of the Word, but possibly might not be able to exactly to inform them, or the Writers not to be able fully to digest them (for most think, Matthew, Mark and John wrote after). Or possibly, because there being then no Printing, but all in Manuscripts, because he thought, his Friend Theophilus (to whom he knew such an History would be grateful) might not have come to the sight of those Manuscripts, he undertakes / not without the direction

Psalm 145. v. 3. 4. 5. His flesh groweth as the grass of the field, and his life as the green herb. Of Providence, should argue, whence the true knowledge of God, or how God should have any thing known concerning, without a previous knowledge of his Will, determining the thing, let any one consider, in the many time it is thereby given, that the intervening of Mens Inbelieve, and Mifcove, and Opposition to Christ, and his Gospel is the Privileged Mercifull Cause of the fall of any Soul by occasion of him. It follows. And for a Sign that shall be spoken against you. Such a Mark as Job speaks of, Job. 16. 12. For I shall be a Sign upon the earth. Job. 18. 5. Some will see thee, and shall be astonished, and shall say, what is this that hath befallen thee? That Christ and his Ministers and People, should be Rethieved, and all the Arrows of ungodly Men, should be shot against him, which proved true in the time of Christ, and his Apostles, and in succeeding Ages as to that derive from him, and will follow him, For as the Branches are cut off from the Tree, and will fall, so shall the Kingdom of the World; For, a Sword shall pierce thee, and thou shalt die as do, as the Irons enter the Heart of Egypt. Job. 107. 13. He tells the Virgin her Soul should be wounded with the Reproaches and Indignities, which should be offered to this blest Babe, as proved afterwards, when the heart him Reviled, and saw him Crucified. That the charges of many Heats may be revealed. The Gospel-times, especially times of Persecution will discover, when God hath Chosen, and whom he hath not, by discovering the Dominions of their Hearts, it will then be seen who will be saved, and who will reject the Messias, who is his Son, and alive, and who will reject the Messias, who is his Son, and who will be acquainted. The Term [ ] do denote the Consequence now the Effect. The Preaching of the Gospel is the Lords Fan, by which he purgeth his Floor. Perfection is the Lords Sieve, by which he seiveth the wheat from the chaff, the Tares from the Darnel, and Tares from the Wheat. Gospel-times, and times of Persecution are both of the times which make great Discoverers of Mens Spirits.

36 And there was one Anna a prophetess, the daughter of Phanneel, of the tribe of Aser, she was of a great age, and had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity.

37 And she was a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fasting and prayers night and day.

38 And she coming in that instant, gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that <sup>39</sup> looked for redemption in <sup>40</sup> Jerusalem.

39 And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth.

If the Wife-men mentioned, Matth. 2. 1. had been with Herod before this time, it is more then probable that Herod would have made an end of Christ, at this time, therefore certainly after this time, Isa said nothing of what we call Muth.

 2. 13, 14, 15, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, of Jefeph going into Egypt, upon the Admission of the Angel, nor his coming back, but both Muth: and Luke agrees in their dwelling at Nazareth, which he calleth their own City, for these Jefeph dwelt, v. 4.
 How after this the Wife-men came to find him at Bezielchem, Muth. 2. the Scripture hath not told us. How every Idole foray to try Jefeph dwelt in Bezielchem, and Isa dwelt in Bezielchem.
 But Isa had been put to such a trifles, as to have his Wife bring forth in a Stable, belides it is apparent from v. 4, and this Verfe, and from Muth. 2. 23. that he dwelt at Nazareth.
 God who ordered the motion of the Wife-men, and their intrusions to be sent to Bezielchem, to look for Chrift, could easily find Jefeph some bumfies to be done there at that time, whether some bumfies of his Trade, or some Vifit to his Friends

40 * And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him.

This Verse shortly summeth up all that we have in the Gospel, of the History of the first twelve years of our Saviours Life. Tho there could be no Accētion to the perfection of the Divine Nature in Christ, yet as to his humane Nature, he was (as we are) capable of Accētion of Habits, and Wisdom and Knowledge, for tho the Divine Nature was personally United to the humane Nature, yet there was no Communication of Properties.

* at the feast of the passover.

The Law of God enjoined all the Males of the Israelites to appear at 7 Feasts, three times each year, of which the 3 of the Unleavened Bread was one, but the Women need not have been all under the same Obligation, but many of them went, of which Mary was one, but we read not of Christ's going, till he was twelve years Old. Some think that the Women used to go once in a year, we read that Elikanah's Wife went, 1 Sam. 1. 5, 6, 7, but whether they generally did so or no, the Scripture faith not. One thing is observable. The Pharisees and Scribes and Priests had in those days much Corrupted the Worship of God by their Traditions, yet they retained the substance of Gods Institutions, we find both our Saviour and his Disciples, and other People of God, not wholly forsaking the Jewish Church, because of its Corruptions, yet we cannot think they joyined with them in any thing of their Superstitions, from whence we may learn the wisdom of that General Separation, which our Lord has enjoined us to attend. Divine Ministries, the Sanctified with usages, which we approve not of provided there be honesty & Holiness in the Service.

42 And when he was twelve year old, they went up to Ierusalem, after the custom of the feast.

It is said by those who are learned in the Jewish Writings, that till a Child was of this Age. he was not obliged by the Law to go. We have in Scripture nothing to ascertain us in the Case, it is certain that our Saviour went at this Age, after the Custom of the Feast, that is, so as to be there about the fourteenth Day of the Month. Nisan.

43 And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem: and Joseph and his mother knew not of it.

44 But they supposing him to have been in the company, went a days journey, and they sought him among their kinsfolk and among their acquaintance, 45 And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him.

The feast of the Passover, and of Unleavened Bread held seven Days, during which time Joseph and Mary stayed in Jerusalem, and then returned, they usually both went to and returned from these Feasts in great Troops, or Companies. Christ tarried behind, Mary thinking he had been in the Company, missed him not, they return to Jerusalem to seek him.

46 And it came to pass, that after three days, they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the Doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.

After three Days possibly here is to be understood from the time they first went from Jerusalem, one Day they went forward in their journey, a second Day they were coming back, the third Day they found him, for it cannot be thought that he should be in Jerusalem three days before they found him, considering that they found him in the Temple, which it is likely was the first place they sought for him in. It should seem that the Doctors of the Law gave a general liberty to any, to propose any Questions to them about the Law of God, to which they were to give Answers. But it is very probable, that something more than ordinary appeared in him, that they admitted him to sit amongst them, for tho' themselves fate on Benches, yet other Auditors usually fate at their Feet, hence we read of Paul's being brought up to the feet of Gamaliel.

47 And * all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers.

What was the subject matter of the Doctors and Christ's Discourses, is vainly questioned, only in the general we may be assured was something about the Divine Law, what the particular Theme or Subjects were, is not material for us to inquire. Our Saviour answered their questions, as they were all astonished.

48 And when they saw him, they were amazed
And his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.

The something must be allowed to a Woman's passions, and a Mothers indulgence, yet one would think, that especially considering where they found him, and what doing, the should not have spoken thus unto him, had he had, a clear, and distinct knowledge of his Divine Nature, in Union with his Flesh; for he speaks to him with the authority of a Mother, Why halt thou thus dealt with us?

49 And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Fathers business?

*Cap. 9. 45. 50 And *they understood not the saying, which 13. 34. he spake unto them.

Some read it — that I must be in my Fathers House, then the Sonle must be. Why did you seek me in any other place then the Temple, that is, my Fathers House, there lyeth my Bu-sinels. But the Ple is (teemeth rather to lignify as we Translate it. He doth here lignify his Father, that Mary might have known not only Man, but the did not yet fully understand his Divine Office as Mediator and the great Prophet promised, that should reveal the Will of God, to People, much els did the fully and distinctly understood, that he was by Nature the Eternal Son of God She believed so much as was revealed to be clearly, concerning Christ. It is said they understood not the saying, which he saith to them, they had not a clear, and distinct understanding of them. In the mean time from the Words of our Saviour, and this Fact of his. We may learn, That Inferiours are not in all things under the Power or their most Natural Superiours. Particularly not in such things wherein they cannot yield obedience to them, without a disobedience unto God. There are some Cases wherein instead of obeying, we are bound to hate both Father and Mother by our Savours Precept.

51 And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them, But his mother kept all these sayings in her heart.

we left him at Nazareth after Maries Purification, v. 39. we find him at Nazareth now at twelve years old. We shall now need no more than to say, What 3. y. when he came to be about thirty years of Age. What he did in the mean time, is a business of too much Curiosity for us to inquire, and of very little Significancy to us if we knew. Some think he wrought with his Father upon his Trade; as I cannot tell how to prove it, so I know nothing against it. It is not like he was sent to any of the Schools of their Prophets, as he who could Argue with the Doctors pertinently at thirty years of Age, and to whom the Spirit was given not by measure, could be so in need of their Instructions: So their Academies were not such as we can reasonably think of. That Joseph and Mary should seek any Education for him in them, and I know no reason why we should think, that he who abhorred not the Womb of the Virgin, nor a Stable, nor a Manger should abhor the Works of an honest Vocation, and not much more abhor an idle Life. But we dispute about these things in vain, being such as to what we are not satisfied ( God having hid them from our knowledge ) what is for our Instruction is told us, He was Subject unto his Parents. This teacheth the greatest and highest Mortals, to bow to their Fathers and Mothers. Which (saith the Apostle) is the first Commandment with promise. Solomon honour'd his Mother, and beheld a greater God Solomon is here, paying his Homage also both to the Word that bare him, and his (supposed) Father: That provided for him, and protected him; that was his Father, as Joseph says in her Heart. Mary was no forgetful heart, for she that did not yet clearly understand, but the kept them in her Heart, and those who do so to Gods Word, shall in time un-

52. And Jesus * increased in wisdom and || stature, and in favour with God and man.

If any ask how he, who was the eternal Wisdom of the Father (who is the only wife God) increased in Wisdom, they are not spoken with respect to his entire Person, but with respect to the one, or the other Nature united in that Person, he increased in Wisdom, as the Logos, or Stature, with respect to his Humanity, not to his Divine Nature, as God daily Magnified by Grace and Favour toward him, so he gave him Favour to his Neighbourhood, and People of Galilee, so that as when he came forth to be a Publick Minister, he came forth as a Bishop, (the chief Bishop of Sour especially) ought to do, Having a good Repaire over a People, and to be a Father of many, and we have our Servious History, for about eighteen years of which the History of the Gospel tells us nothing.

2 * Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, the word of God came unto John the son of Zacharias * Joh. 1. 49 in the wilderness.

The Evangelist having given us an account, both of the Birth of John the Baptist, and of our Saviour, and of all the Prophecies preceeding and attending them both, leaving the History of

of our Saviour a little, cometh to give us an account of the History of John the Baptist, his entrance upon his publick Ministry, and fulfilling of it. John the Baptist had six Months Ministry of our Saviour, and probably did appear to him before him to the World, as a publick Minister, the time of his beginning was in the fourteenth Year of the Reign of Tiberius Cæsar. Tiberius Cæsar was he who ne. Augustus Augustus for all the Roman Emperors after Julius Cæsar, he was called Cæsar, as all the Kings of Egypt were called Pharaohs he was as wised a Prince as moit who ruled the Roman Empire. Heraod the Great (in whose time Christ was Born) was some time fince dead, Archanas began to Rule in his stead as a King, but the Romans changing the Government from a Monarchy to a Tetrarchy (that is, a Government of four) Archanas had only the Government of Judea, Heraod Antipas (another Son of Heraod the Great) had the Government of Galilee under the Title of Tetrarch, and Philip another Son of his, had the Government of Trachonitis, and Tyachonitis, under the same Title of Tetrarch. And

So as at this time the Jews were all under the Government of Foreigners, the Scepter or Government was wholly departed from Judea. Archelaus was soon after sent into France, and Pontius
Pilate made Prætor or Gouverneur of Judea and Samarita.
Anna and Caiaphas were the High Priests. By the Law of God, the eldest Son of the Family of Aaron was to be the High Priest.
How then came to be at this time two High Priests, is not a grounded among Interpreters. Those who are curious in this Inquiry, may see what M. Pool hath Collected for their Satisfaction, in his Synopsis they must know, that at this time the Jews were under the Power of the Romans, and all things amongst them were out of order. Some say the Jews had liberty to chuse their High Priest, but then their Conquerors would turn him out, and fell the place to another. Others say that the High Priest had his Deputy, who also obtained the same Title. Others think, that as they had made the High Priesthood an Office, to which they chose one Annually, (which was by Gods Law an Office for Life ) so the High Priest of the former year, still retained his Title for another year. We are at no certainty in these things. It is certain that at this time there were two that bore the Title of the High Priest, upon what account we cannot tell. It appeareth from John 8 12, that the same Men three or four years after bore this Title of High Priest, whether chosen again or no we know not. But this was the time, when The Word of God came unto John the Son of Zacharias in the Wilderness.
The same John, of which we heard before. The Word of the Lord came to him, commanding him out to Preach the Gospel.
It is a Phrase which is often used in the Old Testament, to signify the Influence of the Spirit of God upon the Prophets, quickening them to their Work. And signifieth to us, That no Man ought to take this Honour unto himself, until he be called of God, nor to speak in the Name of the Lord until the Word of God cometh to him.

3 And he came into all the country about Jordan preaching the baptisme of repentance for the remission of sins.

How long the time of John's Ministry was before that he was shut up by Herod in Prison, the holy Scriptures do not certainly tell us; but it must be very short, for our Saviour's time was a little more than three years, and we hear of his imprisonment in the beginning of our Saviour's Publick Ministry. All that we have of John's Ministry is to be found either in this Chapter, or in Matth. 3. or in Mark. 1. or in the first, and third Chapters of John. From them all it appears, that the Sum of his Doctrine, was the necessity of Repentance, and Faith in Christ, in order to the Remission of Sins. His preaching Faith in Christ is not clearly declared by the Evangelist John; Matth. Mark and Luig mention more upon his Preaching the Doctrine of Repentance for the Remission of Sins, and Baptisme as an Evidence of it. Which Doctrine Herod he preiled both from Evangelical Motives, the Arguments of Heaven 1. at Hand, and from Legal Motives, or the Arguments of Terror, that God is to be feared for the King of the Heavens in this fitting an Example to all Ministers of the Gospel, theew them what should be the main Subjects of their Discourses for we shall find that our Saviour Preached the same Doctrine, and in the same Method. What is here said, we before opened in our Notes, on Matth. 3. 2. and Mar. 1. 4. John did not Preach that Baptisme was Repentance, or that Remission of Sins was immediately annexed to it, but that way to obtain Remission of Sins was by Repentance, and that Baptisme was an External Sign and Symbol of it.

There have been great Disputes, about the Genealogy of our Saviour, as recorded both by Matthew and Luke. The Adversaries of Christian Religion have taken no small advantage from the seeming difference betwixt them, which even many Sober Writers have thought it a vain matter to Reconcile. The Apostle both hath used us against giving too much heed to endless Genealogies, which multiply Questions rather than Gently Edifying. 1 Tim. 1. 4. yet certainly it is our Duty, as well for the opening the Mouths of such as would Clamour against the truth of the whole Scripture (if not of the whole Christian Religion) as far as we can to vindicate our Faith from their little Cavils, and thereby also to confirm them who are Held in Error. To make these things clear as we can. It is plain that both the Evangelists agree in their Design, by setting down the Genealogy of our Saviour, to prove him Legally descended both from Abraham, and David, the two Persons to whom was made the promise of the Messiah, and the Stability of his Kingdom, and also in the Names of the first fourteen Generations, mentioned by Matthew and here by Luke, v. 32, 33. and to Abraham, v. 34. Their disagreement lieth in four things. 1. In the form of the Pedegree. Matthew, beginning with those who were first, and those that were last in order of time. But this is no valuable Exception, one Evangelist counts forward, another backward. 2. Matthew counts by three Periods, each consisting of fourteen Generations, Luke does not, neither is this of any Moment. 3. Matthew tells down our Saviour's Genealogy, before he tells us any thing of his Conception or Birth. Luke after his Relation of his Conception, Birth, and Baptism. 4. Matthew deriveth our Saviour's Genealogy but from Abraham, Luke from Adam. All these differences lay no Foundation for any Exception. Several accounts are given, why Luke carrieth up the Genealogy to Adam, the best seemeth to be this. That Matthew intending his History Primarily for the Jews, judged it enough to prove Christ, the Son of Abraham, and the Son of David; by Luke designing the information of the whole World, deriveth him from the common Father of Mankind. By which means he also sheweth, the Antiquity of the Gospel, and lets us know that Christ was he who was promised to Adam, before Abraham time, and that the Grace of the Gospel is not limited to the Seed of Abraham. Thus also Luke supplyeth what was wanting in Matthew, and truly deriveth both the first, and second Acl from God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and of us all. But besides these differences (hardly worth the taking notice of under that notion) there are some seeming contradictions in the Genealogies, yet not such, but I think a fair account may be given of, to any who will but first consider, 1. That they all lie in what Luke hath from v. 32 to v. 34 and from the latter end of v. 34 to the end. So that in v. 32, 33. and part of v. 34. we have nothing to reconcile. 2. That these Words 1. 1. 1. in the Greek only v. 32. where Christ is said to be the Son of Zeferai, but ever after it is supplied by the Translators. So as the Greek runs thus, The Son of Joseph, which was of Hei, which was of Matthai, which was of Levi, which was of Meichi, &c. Which consideration cuts off the first cavil how Zeferai could be the Son of Zechar, as Matthew faith) and the Son of Hei, as Luke faith; for indeed Luke faith no more than, v. 23. And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the Son of Zechar, which was the Son of Hei. That is, Christ was called the Son of Zeferai, but ever after he was called Hei, the Father of Mary, his Mother. I know that some think that Zechar was also called Hei, (as it was ordinary with the Jews to have two Names), others think that Zeferai is called the Son, because he was the Son-in-Law of Hei, by the Marriage of the Virgin Mary his Daughters, (Naomi calleth those her Daughters, which were but her legal Daughters Ruth 1. 11.) in this the most agree, but I must confess I think it is Christ, who is here said to be of Hei, (who he was reputed, and generally taken to be the Son of Zeferai). For that Luke here deriveth our Saviour, not from his supposed Father Zeferai, but from Mary his true Mother. It is not to be conceived that Luke after such a narration of the predictions of his conception as he had given us in the first Chap. should go to derive Christ from Zeferai, and this gives us a fair account why the Names are so different from David time to the Birth of Christ. Zeferai (whose pedigree Matthew relates) deriveth from Solomon who was the Son of David succeeding him in the Kingdom. Mary (whose pedigree Luke relates) deriveth from Martha v. 31. 1 Chron. 3. 5. tells us he was another Son of David. So that after David time, the Persons named which before were the same in our Saviour's Pedegree became diverse, some the Progenitors of Zeferai, who is Matthew reckons, others the Progenitors of Mary, whom Luke nameth. This answereth the objection, from the differing number of the Persons from Zeferai to Zecharai, (excluding them both) Matthew reckoneth but nine, Luke here reckoneth 18. v. 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38. From Zecharai to David Luke nameth 12 Progenitors, Matthew 11; but 13, leaving out three Kings of the house of David, of which we have account in our Notes of Matthew (1) to 10; the Scripture nameth 17; the Matthew leaves out 3, in two different Lines; it is not impossible that one person in many years might have to many more Progenitors than another, supposing Matthew desired to reckon all, which it is plain from his leaving out three Kings named in Scripture that he did not. That ordinarily the Jews had two Names, sometimes three, all Zecharai Sons had each of them two at least. Matthew had also the Name of Levi, &c. This solves the difference from v. 32. where Refa is said to be the Son of Zecharai, when as Matthew faith ch. 13. Zecharai begat Abdai. That Abraham was the Son of Terah on Thara, and Terah the Son of Nachor, appeareth from Gen. 11. 24. 26. That Sarnach or Sarg, was the Son of Ren or Regeu, appeareth from Gen. 11. 20. 1 Chron. 1. 25. that Ren was the Son of Peleg, (here called Phalec) and Peleg the Son of Eber, and Eber the Son of Sala appeareth from Gen. 11. 18. 1 Chron. 1. 25. But in Genesis 11. we read, that Sala was the Son of Cainan v. 12. whereas he is here said to be the Son of Cainan, and Cainan is made the Son of Arphaxad. So as Luke maketh Sala Grandchild to Arphaxad, Moyses makes no mention of Cainan at all, but mentions Sala, as begotten by Arphaxad. Those who are curious to know what is said for the resolution of this difficulty, may read it largely both in Spanheims difficilia Evangelica, and Mr. Poole's Synopsis Criticorum. It is a difficulty which hath exercised many very learned Men, and I doubt whether ever any yet satisfied himself in the resolution of it. It is not probable that Luke should correct what Moyses said, the best account I can give of it is, the Septuagint in Gen. 11. 12. have it just as Luke here hath it, and it is certain, that Luke in his quotations out of the Testament, doth generally follow the Septuagint, (being the translation most in use among them) Beza tells us of an ancient Copy of the Gospel he had, which mentioneth no Cainan. The best of it is, that it is a matter of no great moment, for the Question is not, whether Sala was the Son of Arphaxad, (for so he was, tho Arphaxad was his Grandfather, in the same sense that Christ is called the Son of Abraham, and the Son of David, and Elizabeth the Daughter of David ch. 1. 1.) but whether he was the immediate Son of Arphaxad, or Cainan, whether Moyses omitted Cainan, or some transcriber of Luke added Cainan out of the Septuagint (being then the current Translation among them) the last is most probable. For the other part of the account v. 36, 37, 38. it plainly agreeth with Gen. 5, 6, &c. & 10. So that I must profess I see no great difficulty to reconcile the Genealogies, admitting the one to give the Genealogy of Zeferai, and the other, to give the Genealogy of Mary; that indeed Mary was the Daughter of Hei, is not to be proved by Scripture, nor yet contradicted, but it is very probably judged so. And if we cannot prove that Cainan, mentioned v. 36. was added out of some later Copies of the Septuagint, yet it is more than probable it was for, which two things if we admit, I see no great difficulty remaining, but a fair agreement betwixt both the Evangelists. For I presume none will stumble at the alteration of some letter, or omission of some letter in a Name, or addition to it in the end; there is nothing more ordinary than that, when Names are mentioned in several Languages.

CHAP. IV.

AND * Jesus being full of the holy Ghost, * Mat. 1. 18. returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness.

By the Holy Ghost here is to be understood the Gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to the Prophecy of him, [Isaiah 11. 2.] The Gifts of the Holy Spirit are often in holy Writ called the Spirit, Acts 1. 2. 4. 8. 18. 10. 44. and not only those that are influenced with the loving Gifts and Graces of the Spirit, are said to have the Spirit, and be filled; but those who received the more extraordinary Powers of it, such as the Gifts of Prophecy, &c. Others besides Christ are said in Scripture to be filled with the Spirit, Acts 6. 5. and it was so Prophecied concerning John, Luke 1. 6. 7. But they had but their measure, to Christ the Spirit was given not by measure, John 3. 34. he returned from Jordan. There John baptized, there Christ was baptized by him. And was led by the Spirit into the Wilderness. Isaiah faith Luke, and he, faith Matthew, Mark expreth it by the Word ἐρημία, the Words do not signify a violent motion (for without doubt Christ went willingly) but a potent, and efficacious motion.

2 Being forty days tempted of the devil, and * Exod 34. 28. 1 King 18. those days he did eat nothing; and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.

3 And the devil said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.

4 And Jesus answered him, saying, * It is written, * Deut. 5. 3. That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.

See the Notes on Matth. 4. 3, 4. It is very observable that Christ here asserteth the Authority of the Scriptures, and so he was full of the Holy Ghost, yet maketh the Holy Scripture his rule of action.

5 And the devil taking him up into an high mountain, shewed unto him all the Kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.

And the devil said unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them, for that is delivered unto me, and to whomsoever I will, I give it.

6 If thou therefore wilt * worship me, all shall be thine. 7 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: for * it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

See the Notes on Matth. 4. 9, 10. Those Words, v. 6. For that is delivered to me, and to whomsoever I will, I give it, are only mentioned by Luke, where we may observe, 1. That the Devil was a Lyc from the beginning. The Dominion over the things of the World was not given to the Angels, but to Man, neither hath he any such Power as he pretends to, being not able to do any thing against Job, till he had obtained leave from God, nor to enter into the Swine, without leave first obtained from Christ.

9 And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thy self down from hence.

10 For it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee.

11 And in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

12 And Jesus answering, said unto him, * It is said, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

See the Notes on Mat. 4. 5, 6, 7. what Matthew calls the Holy City, Luke expoundeth Jerusalem.

13 And when the devil had * ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.

Matthew faith, The Devil left him, and behold Angels came and ministered unto him. Luke faith, he departed from him for a season, when he had ended all the Temptation. Those Words for a season, seem to intimate that our Saviour had further conflicts with the Devil than are here mentioned; and possibly those Words all the temptation may hint us, that the Devil offered more temptations, than the Evangelists have recorded, the some affirm that all Temptations fall under those which are the heads of their Temptations, and think those Words for a season, signify until the time of his Passion, when he entered into the heart of Judas, and armed all his Instruments against this Captain of our Salvation.

14 And Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into * Galilee, * and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about.

15 And he taught in their synagogues, being glorified of all.

Both Matthew and Mark make the occasion of our Saviour's going into Galilee, to be his hearing, that John was cast into Prison. But certainly Matthew and Mark speak of a second going into Galilee, and mean by it Galilee of the Gentiles, which was in the jurisdiction of Philip the Brother of Herod Antipas, else one might admire, why Christ should go into Galilee, upon hearing that John was cast into Prison, that had been for him to have thrown himself into Herod's Mouth, before his Temptation; he first went to Capernaum, where he did not stay many days, John 2. 12. and then to Nazareth, which was his own Country; but others think that all the Evangelists speak of a second going into Galilee, which I cannot agree if Nazareth was within that Galilee, which was called the lower Galilee, and was within the jurisdiction of Herod Antipas, who was the Tetrarch of Galilee, and the Man that had imprisoned John, and afterwards called him to be beheaded. And he taught in their Synagogues. He had the reputation of a Prophet, which procured him that liberty of speaking in all those places, where the Jews celebrated their publick worship; being glorified, that is, admired, and honoured of all.

16 And he * came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up, and as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and stood up for to read.

We heard before Ch. 2. 29. 51. that Christ was brought up at Nazareth, we read of him at Nazareth, Matth. 13. 54. But I will confess I doubt, whether Matthew there, and Luke here speak of the same time; of the Nature of the Jewish Synagogues, and their order of Worship there, and the reading of the Scriptures in them we have looked before in our Notes on Matth. 4. 23.

17 And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Elias, and when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written,

18 The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor, he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised.

19 To preach the acceptable year of the Lord.

The Words differ in some things from the Words of the Prophet out of which they are quoted, Isaiah 61. v. 1. where is nothing of recovering of sight to the Blind, but they exactly agree with the Septuagint version, only v. 19. they have καταρτισει to fill, and Λουκ hath καταρτισει to preach, according to which we have the copies of the Septuagint in use with them were. It was their manner in the Synagogues for the Minister (an officer appointed to that purpose for v. 19.) to bring the Book of the Law or of the Prophets, which was to be read, and to deliver it to him that officiated for that time, who when he had read, & delivered it to the same Officer to be laid up. Their Writers tell us, that the Books of Moyses were divided into several portions, which they were to read in order; but for the Books of the Prophets, he that officiated, was more at liberty to read in what place, and in proportion he pleased. Our Lord readeth, Isaiah 61. 1. which (according to the Septuagint copy) was as Luke here translated, and by the way, this custom of the Writers of the New Testament (writing in Greek) to quote Texts of the old Testament, very often according to that Septuagint translation, may hint give us some account of the difficulty we met with Chap. 3. where Sala was made the Son of Cainan, and the Grandchild of Arphaxad, whereas Moyses mentions no Cainan, Gen. 11. Luke taking the quotation out of the Septuagint might put it in accordingly, then, for they have it in Gen. 11. 12. Secondly it may learn us not to be too curious as to minute things in Scripture, for had it been a thing of moment, the holy Spirit of God had certainly never suffered Luke to write after their Copy, either there, or here. God never had a Church in any place, but he soon stirred up some to make an Interpretation of the Scriptures for their use, and so far as afflicted them, that so they might differ from the Hebrew Text, or the Greek in those minute things, yet they differed not in anything of moment necessary for us to know and believe in our Salvation. And the frequent quotations we have in the New Testament out of the Septuagint, incline us to think that it is the Will of God, that particular Persons in Churches, should make use of such Verities, and take them from the Hebrew Scriptures, not lightly and ordinarily varying from them. The meaning of Scriptures, being not an ordinary ministerial Gift, but a work of God stirred up by God unto him, and whom he more than ordinarily afflicts, as that they have not erred in any momentous thing. If this may be admitted, we need not lay the fault upon him who transcribed Luke's copy. But let us come to the Text itself. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because he has anointed me. Anointing may signify two things. 1. The endowment of the Person with Gifts, and abilities for his Work. Thus 1 John 2. 27. The anointing is said to teach us all things, and Christ is said [John 1. 9. 10.] to be anointed with the oil of gladness above his fellows, which the Prophet seemeth to interpret, Job. 3. 34. God giveth him the Spirit by measure unto him. 2. Anointing also was a Symbol of Gods calling out, and sending a Person to the Execution of an Office, 2 Kings 9. 6. 3. And also anointing used, as a Symbol of Gods purpose, and designation of a Person to an employment, to the performance of which he did not perfectly call him, thus David was anointed 1 Sam. 16. 13. By the Spirit of the Lord it was upon me, I conceive is meant, exciting and quickening Christ to the present Execution of that Office, to which God had anointed him, that is, of old designed him. 2. Isaiah 61. him, giving him the Spirit not by measure, 3. now called him to the exercise of it, and because the Lord had so anointed him, so prepared, and now to call him. The Spirit now excited, and quickened him. God sturth up none to take upon them the Office of the Ministry, whom he hath not first fitted with Gifts for the discharge of it. But with this employment to which Christ was anointed, εὐαγγελιστὴς to preach the Gospel to the Poor. This was the great work of our Lord and Saviour, to preach, and what the Gospel, the glad tidings of Salvation, to whom? Isaiah 61. it is said to signify those that are mean in the World, and by a figure, those that are miserable, and afflicted, and thus I should take to be the sense here, in conformity to that other Phrase which our Saviour useth to Johns Disciples Matth. 11. 1. and to that of the Apostle, 1 Cor. 1. 26. Christ was first sent to the lost Sheep of the house of Israel, who were all at that time in a Poor afflicted State and Condition, and amongst them chiefly to the meaner sort. The Rulers believed not on him John 7. 45, 49. To teach Ministers what Erasmus faith, Nulla nobis anima vili videri debet, pro qua Dominus gloriam non esse dedignatur. That they are too proud, for which he who was Lord of Glory thought it not to dye, for which he who was Lord of Glory thought it not to dye. We may add, to which the great Minister of the Circumcision took himself to be anointed to preach. I had rather thus understand it, then of such as are poor in Spirit, which seem to be understood in the next Words, he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, whereby wounded in the sense of Sin, or melted in the sense of Mercy; the whole hearted, are such as fee no need of repentance, no need of a Saviour, Christ came not to heal these. The whole need not a Physician. It followeth, to preach deliverance to the captives. To let them know that we are yet Slaves to Sin, and to their Lusts, that there is a way for their deliverance, and recovering of sight to the blind, to let all Blind Sinners know, that there is a way to discover it, which if applied will recover their spiritual sight. To set at liberty them that are bruised. It is of the lame figment, with binding up the broken in heart. To preach the acceptable year of the Lord. The true Isaiah, when every Soul may be let free from the bonds of Sin, 2 Cor. 6. 2. the year of Gods good Will, that time was now come, when in every Nation, he first feared God, and wrought Righteousness, could be accepted with him. Acts 10: 35.

20 And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down: And the eyes of all them that were in the Synagogue were fastened on him.

21 And he began to say unto them, This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears.

Christ observed the order used in their Synagogues, when he came to teach, had read such a portion out of the Law as was appointed, or out of the Prophets, as he pleased, he closed the book, or the Roll, and gave it again to the Officer, whose work it was to bring it, and then to carry it back, and lay it up. And then he desired them to be attentive to hear what he would say. He begins to speak and telleth them, that was a Prophet, as concerning this Text Is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears? This Text, it is fulfilled in me, either primarily, or as I am the Antitype of David. We must not think that this was all which Christ said, but these he began his discourse.

22 And all bare him witness, and * wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, * Is not this Josephs son?

All that heard our Saviour in the Synagogue bare him witness. Or what? Not that he was the Messiah, much less the Son of God, but they praised his discourse in opening the Prophecy, they did not believe in him, but they admired the Wisdom, and the power of his discourses, they admired the effects of the Grace of God in him, his gracious Words, but hee the wretchedness of carnal hearts, in their propensity to rise up prejudices, to choke the beginnings of any convictions in themselves. They do not admire the Power of Living Grace, that they could so far influence one of men an education as they took Christ to have had. But dreaming that the Kingdom of God must come with observation, and the coming of the Messiah must be in great outward splendour and glory, they stumble at his parent, because (tho of the house of David) they were of so mean a vile quality.

23 And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thy self: whatsoever we have heard done in * Capernaum, do also here in * thy country.

24 And he said, Verily I say unto you, * No prophet is accepted in his own country.

Christ here tells those of Nazareth, what was in their hearts. viz. That they in their hearts contemned him, because of the means of his Parentage, and challenged him to confirm his Doctrine by Miracles, saying that Nazareth was his own Country, and Physicians are the last place ought to cure themselves, and their Friends and kins of their own Families; they therefore challenge him to work some such Miracles, as he had before wrought in Capernaum, as they had heard. He gives them the reason why he did no Miracles amongst them, viz. because he discerned that they contemned them, as is very usual for Persons, according to that common saying, No Prophet is accepted in his own Country. The reference here to some things done before this time in Capernaum, would incline us to think that after Christs Temptations, he is went to Galilee, where he wrought his first Miracle John 2: 1, turning the Water into Wine, then to Capernaum, where he spent not many days, John 2: 12, then to Nazareth, but fearing that Capernaum was cut into Prison, he removed from Nazareth, to Galilee, out of the jurisdiction of Herod, under the mild Government of Philip his Brother.

25 But I tell you of a truth, Many * widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and sixth months, when great famine was throughout all the land.

26 But unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow.

27 And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Elisha the prophet: and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian.

The two Stories to which our Saviour referreth are those 1 Kings 17: 9, 2 Kings 5: 14. But the question is what our Saviour intended to teach by these stories, which made them so exceedingly angry as we shall find by and by. I answer, several things none of which pleased them. 1. The friendship of Gods distinguishing Grace. That God was not bound to give to all the same aid, and measure of Grace, that he gave none. This is a Doctrine the World were never patient to hear. That God would have Mercy on whom he will have Mercy. We would him make God a debtor to us, dole of Nazareth, think they had as good, if not a better right to Christs Miracles than those of Capernaum. I tell you, faith Christ, God is Sovereign in his acts of Grace, and acteth freely, and I can do no Miracles, but where he will have the blessing of Divine Grace. If the Israelites would have entertained Elisha, he might have been sent to them, as well as to Sarepta. If the Lepers in Israel, would have sought out, and come to Elisha they might have been healed, if you would have received me, and believed in me, you might have seen what those of Capernaum did it because of your contempt and unbelief, that I can show you no Miracles. If any lay, if God had put it into the hearts of the Widows in Israel or the Lepers there, they would also have entertained Elisha, and have sought out and come to Elisha, why did not God put it into their hearts? To this the answer is ready Why was not God put it into their hearts? Why did not the Clay reply upon the potter? Even so O Farther, for so it pleaseth thee, how ever the failures of the Lepers in Israel, and the Widows there and of those in Nazareth, was in a great measure in their duty, as to things within their Power to do by virtue of that common Grace, which God denieth to none, he might justly deny his special influences, which he neglected to make use of his more common influences.

2. That in every Nation he that feared God, and wrought Righteousness, was never accepted of him. God had no respect to this Country, or that Country, he sent Elias to do good to a Syrian, and Elisha to do good to a Syrian, whiles he neglected the ingrateful, and disobedient Israelites. Thus he also not obdurately hardened, that for their unbelief, and rejection of God, and disobedience to him, God would send his Gospel to the Gentiles, and reject them, which came to pass within a few years after. None of all these were grateful founds in the ears of the Men of Nazareth; you ask me (faith our Saviour) why I do not such things here at Nazareth, as I did at Capernaum. I was not sent to you. No? but were not they some of the left Sheep of Israel? Ah! but Christ was no more sent to all Israel, than Elias was sent to all the Widows in Israel. He was sent to Preach to them all, but for any special favours, he was sent but to some, and those some were such as did not proudly reject and contemn him, but receive him.

28 And all they in the Synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath.

29 And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him down the || brow of the hill whereon their city was built that they might cast him down ||

30 But he passing through the mids of them, went his way.

Unhappy Nazareth! where Christ had now lived more than thirty years, they had seen him growing up, increasing in Wisdom, and Stature, and in favour both with God and Man, Mark 2: 2, they had had the first fruits of his Ministry, and 2: 22, they bore him witness, and wondered at the gracious Words, which proceeded out of his Mouth, they knew his education, so as they could not think he had this Wisdom, and knowledge, from any advantages of that, but must have it from Heavens, yet when they hear him Preaching, and but touching them for their contempt and rejection of him, and tacitly comparing them with their Fore-fathers in the time of Abraham, and Preaching the Doctrine and Gods Sovereignty, and free Grace, and hinting to them, that the Grace of God should pass to the Gentiles, while they should be rejected, they are not able to bear him. Thus Acts 22: 21, the Jews heard Paul patiently, till he repeated Gods Commission to him, to go unto the Gentiles, then they cried, away with such a fellow from the Earth, for it is not his to be heard here. This was according to the old Prophecy, Deut. 32: 3, (applied to the Jews by the Apostle, Rom. 10: 19.) that because they had moved God to jealousy, with their idols which is not God, he would move them to anger with a foolish Nation. This is further matter of observation, That a wicked Sinners, who cannot obtain of their Lusts to be as good and holy as others, yet are ordinarily so proud, as they have no patience to hear that others are better than they, or have or shall have, any more special grace in Gods favour. Those of Nazareth, which were in the Synagogue hearing these things are filled with wrath, thrust Christ out of the City, as not fit to live among them, and go about to kill him, by throwing him down headlong from the brow of the Hill upon which their City was built. But he passing through the midst of them went away. How he got out of their hands, when they had laid hold of him, the Scripture doth not tell us, nor is it our concern to be curious to inquire; we read much the like passage John 8: 59, when the Jews had taken up Stones to stone him, we know it was an evil thing for him who was God as well as Man, to quit himself of mortal Enemies, but how he did it, whether by blinding their eyes, or altering the Nature of his Body, and making it impetible by them, or by a greater strength, then they (which the Divine Nature could easily supply his Humane Nature with) who is able to determine?

32 And they were astonished at his doctrine: * for his word was with power.

Capernaum was a City in the other Galilee, under the jurisdiction of Philip, whither Matthew and Mark mention our Saviours motion, upon the report of the imprisonment of John. Philip is not only by Historians reported of a less bloody temper, than his Brother Herod, but Herod having taken away his Wife, it is very probable, that there was no good understanding between him and Philip. So that two things promised our Saviour more quiet in *Philip*s jurisdiction. 1. The tanness of his temper. 2. The hatred between him and Herod. It appears from 2: 22, He

He had been at Capernaum before, but stayed very little, halting in his own Country of Nazareth in the other Galilee, from whence he now again renews, hearing of *John*s imprisonment, and seeing the bairns of his Countrymen; when he came there, he keeps on his course Preaching upon the Temple Sabbath, not abolished till his Resurrection. It appears by 2: 23, That he Preached in the Synagogue here also. It is said, That the People were astonished at his Doctrine. Astonishment is one thing, Believing is another. Men may be so much amazed at some degree of wisdom, as the Word of God, that yet are far enough from believing, as the most of these Capernaum were, else Christ had never said, as he did Mark 11: 23, For his Word was with Power. That this Phrase is to be understood only of those powerful, and miraculous operations, by which Christ confirmed the Word which he Preached to be from God, I cannot yield, it is better interpreted by Mark 1: 22. He taught them as one that had Authority, not as the Scribe, and the understanding of the gravity, and spirituality of his Doctrine, his Majesty and Life in the delivering of it, and the Power of God going along with the conviction of Sinners, to all which were added his miraculous operations, of which the Evangelist goeth on giving us a more particular account.

33 And in the Synagogue there was a man which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and he cried out with a loud voice.

34 Saying, || Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth, Art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art; the holy One of God.

35 And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had thrown him in the mids, he came out of him, and hurt him not.

36 And they were all amazed, and spake among themselves, saying, What a word is this? for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they come out.

37 And the same of him went out into every place of the country round about.

We met with the same History related as done in Capernaum and with the same circumstances Mark 1: 21, 22, &c. To the Notes upon which we refer the Reader.

38 And he arose out of the Synagogue, and entered into Simons house: And Simons wives mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her.

39 And he stood over her, and rebuked the fever, and it left her. And immediately she arose, and ministered unto them.

We met with this History both in Matthew and Mark. See the Notes on Mat. 8: 15, and Mark 1: 29, 30.

40 Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases, brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.

41 And devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ the Son of God. And he rebuking them, suffered them not to speak: || for they knew that he was Christ.

See the Notes on Mark 1: 32, 33, 34, where we met with the same things.

42 And when it was day, he departed, and went unto a desert place, and the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them.

43 And he said unto them, I must preach the Kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent.

44 And he preached in the Synagogues of Galilee. See the Notes on Mark 1: 35, 36, 37, 38, where that Evangelist reports the same things, that this Evangelist mentioneth, with some circumstances. Mark tells, he went out a great while before day into a solitary place to pray. He faith also that Simons and Andrew followed him, and found him, and told him, that all Men sought him. Luke addeth that the others desired him, not to depart from thence. They desired his stay, in order to his Miracles, the healing of their Sick, dispossessing Demoniacks, &c. Christ replied (as Mark faith,) Let us go into the next Town; that I may Preach there also, for therefore came I forth. Luke faith, he told them, He must Preach the Gospel of the Kingdom to other Cities also, for therefore came I forth. Accordingly, (faith Luke) he did Preach in the Synagogues of Galilee. Mark adds also that he called out Demons. How can any think, that Preaching the Gospel, is not the great Work of the Minister of Christ, but Prayers are to be preferred before it, or Prayers the Sacraments greater? When it is expressly said, That Christ Baptized none but his Disciples John 4: 2, and Paul faith Christ alone.

sent him not to Baptize, but to Preach the Gospel. And Christ omitted opportunities of working Miracles, that he might Preach to other Cities, and only wrought Miracles to confirm the Doctrine he Preached; and we too often read, of his going about Preaching and Teaching, never of his Praying, but alone with his Disciples or in a Mountain or solitary place, (tho doubtless he, or some of his disciples did pray at their worship in the Synagogues) unless any will be so mad as to think, that the sole end of Preaching, owning and professing of Christ, tho under that profession, by reason of their foolish ignorance, and debauched lives, they remain twice more the Children of the Devil, than many Jews and Pagans are. What was Christs great Work, certainly his Ministers, viz. to Preach the Gospel of the Kingdom.

CHAP. V.

1 AND it came to pass, that as the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God, he stood by the lake of Genesareth,

2 And saw two ships standing by the lake: but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets.

It is by many Interpreters thought that Luke in this History to the eleventh verse, doth but give us a larger account of what Matthew, ch. 4: 18, and Mark, ch. 1: 16, told us shortly. The Sea of Galilee, (as they call it) and the Lake of Genesareth were both the same, receiving the different denomination from the opposite Coasts between which it was, asaph the lake had been better translated upon, or at, than by the Lake, for without doubt the two Ships here mentioned were upon the Water, tho possibly fastened as usually to the Shore.

3 And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simons, and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land: And he sat down and taught the people out of the ship.

4 Now when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

5 And Simon answering said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing: nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net.

6 And when they had this done, they enclosed a great multitude of fishes; and their net brake.

7 And they beckoned unto their partners which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And they came and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink.

8 When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down at Jesus knees, saying, Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord.

9 For he was astonished, and all that were with him, at the draught of the fishes which they had taken.

10 And so was also James and John the sons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men.

11 And when they had brought their ships to land, * they forsook all, and followed him.

Here is a plain and orderly story related with many circumstances, Tending to shew us the Power and influence of God upon Mens faculties, in their hearts, and ordinary callings, and also that God hath a Command upon the Fish in the Sea, together with an account of Christs call of Simon Peter, to be a Preacher of the Gospel. The only difficulty is to reconcile this, to what Matthew tells us Chap. 4: 13, 19, &c. *Matthew*s words are these. And Jesus walking by the Sea of Galilee, saw two Brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his Brother, casting a net into the Sea for they were Fishers. And he saith unto them, Follow me, and I will make you Fishers of Men. And they straightway left their Nets, and followed him. And going on from thence, he saw other two Brethren, James the son of Zebedee, and John his Brother, in a ship with Zebedee their Father mending their Nets, and he called them. And they immediately left the Ship, and their Father and followed him. Mark relation doth much agree with *Matthew*s. The differences are in these things. Matthew and Mark speak of Christs calling the Disciples, as he was walking by the Sea. Luke speaks to mention it as done in the Ship. As Luke faith in Chapter 5, that Christ spake to Simon in the Ship, tho he is understood to mention those Words to Simon, before he mentioned them bringing the Ship to Land, because possibly, he would, to account to all that Christ did or spake together. 2. They might be out of the Ship, walking by the Sea, before he called James and John, while Paul faith doth not mention, but Matthew and Mark alone.

of the Text more largely, as a general precept of Mercy, from the Example of our Heavenly Father.
37 Judge not, and ye shall not be judged, condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned, forgive, and ye shall be forgiven.

See the Notes on Matth. 7. 1. and on Matth. 6. 14. where we have discounted what private Judgments are here forbidden; and what Forgiveness is here required.

To let us know how God favoureth Acts of Charity and Justice we shall observe, that there are good Deeds, that God is to reward by Retribution, as such which are the Products of these Habits, nor any Sins, which God do punisheth by way of Retribution, as Sins contrary to these, especially such as are more extremely contrary. This Verse speaks of Acts of Charity. Give, and it shall be given to you, and that not bare Measure, but good Measure, Prefixed down, and shaken together, running over; nothing can more Concur to make good Measure, than the shaking of the Buhel, the Crowding and Pressing down of the Corn, or Meal with the Hand, and the Pouring in down of the Corn, or Meal with the Hand, so that which is here promised the Measure runneth over. So as that which is here promised, is a plentiful reward to Charitable and Merciful Actions, either from the Hand of God more Mediate, God stirring up others to be as kind to us as we are to others, or more immediately himself Bleeding us by his unexpressed Providential Dispensations; for this purpose are abundance of Scriptures, Deut. 24. 19. Psal. 41. 1, 2, 3. Prov. 11. 25. and 28. 27. 2 Cor. 9. 6. If Men will not be so just, as to requite the good which they have done them, having it in their Power, yet God will then have done them, having it in his Providence take care, that those who have done Acts of Mercy, not in a meer Commemoration to Humane Condition, but in a just obedience to him, will not lose by what they have done, they shall be rewarded fully and plentifully, finding again (so it may be after many days) the Bread which they have cast upon the Waters, according to his command.

39 And he spake a parable unto them, Can the blind lead the blind? shall they not both fall into the ditch?

By a Parable here is to be understood a Proverbial saying, which hath some likeness in it, as being brought to express, or signify more than the Words naturally do express. Proverbial Speeches, are applicable to more things, and in more Cases than ordinary. Nor is it to be expected, that in all that the Evangelists give us an account of, as to the sayings of Christ, we should be able to find out an evident Connection. They (questionless) wrote much at least from their Memories, and set down many sayings, without respect to the time when our Saviour spake them, or the matter of his Discourse, immediately preceding them; we need not therefore be careful to make out the Connection of these Words of his, with what was before let down, in the Parallel Text, Matth. 15. 14. Our Saviour plainly applyeth these Words with reference to the Scribes and Pharisees, who themselves being ignorant of the true Sense of the Divine Law, were like very well to Guide others, but with them to fall into the Ditch, that is, into Ruin and Destruction, from whence a very probable Connection of them here, with what went before may be observed; for as appears from Matth. 5. he had in the preceding Verbs, given an interpretation of that Law of God, Thou shalt love thy Neighbor as thyself, much different from what the Pharisees had given of it, who had expounded it, Matth. 5. 43. Thou shalt love thy Neighbor, and hate thy Enemy. Making a great many Branches of Love to Men, more than they made Now (saith he) This is the Will, this is the Law of my Heavenly Father. The Scribes and Pharisees, your prelate Docters and Teachers go much below this, but listen not to them, if you mind to please God; themselves are Blind, and know not the Will of God, and if you follow them, what can you expect more than such an event, as where one Blind Man leads another.

This was another common saying, which our Saviour applyeth, Matth. 10. 24. John. 15. 20. to comfort his Disciples concerning their Sufferings, because he was first in Suffering; here he applyeth it to signify their Duty in doing. Some apply this with reference to the Pharisees, and to make a Connection betwixt this and the former Verse, where he had said, If the Blind lead the Blind, they shall both fall into the Ditch. For, The Disciple is not above his Master, none must look to learn of another, more than the Teacher knoweth himself. But it is better applied to Christ, and is as much as if our Lord had said, I am your Master, you are my Disciples, and by that Relation engaged to learn of me, and to follow me. I have taught you no more than I am ready to preach, I am Mercifully forgive, I give looking for nothing again. I do not look that you should do any thing above me: any thing as to which I have not set you, or shall not set you an Example, but your perfection lyeth in coming as near to me as you can, in being as your Master.

41 And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but perceivest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

42 Either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyself beholdest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, * cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye.

43 For a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit, neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.
44 For * every tree is known by his own fruit, * of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble-bush gather they grapes.

45 * A good man out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is good, and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is evil, for * of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh.

See the Notes upon Matth. 7. 16, 17, 18. 20. The 43. and 44. are expounded in the 45. v. Men and Women here, (as in other Texts of Scripture) are compared to Trees with respect to their Root and Fruit, and the dependence the Fruit hath upon the Root, and the Nature of the Tree. The Heart of Man is made the Root, that being the Principle of humane Actions, as the Root is the Principle to the Fruit; for all the other Actions of a Man's Life, are but the imperate Acts of the Heart and of the Will. Hence it is that a Will renewed and Sanctified in a Man and made Conformable to the Will of God, doth not only reject and chafe the Will of God, love it, desire it, and delight in it, but commandeth the Tongue to direct its Discourses conformable to it, and also commandeth all the Members of their Body, in their Motions, and Order, to Act conformably; and on the contrary the unrenewed, and sanctified Will of Man, doth not only reject, and refuse the Will of God, but directeth the Tongue to Words contrary to the Divine Will, and all the Members of the Body in their Motions and Order, to Act without any respect to, or awe of the Will of God.

47 Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will shew you to whom he is like.

48 He is like a man which built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock, and when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it, for it was founded upon a rock.

49 But he that heareth and doeth not, is like a man that without a foundation built an house upon the earth, against which the stream did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell, and the ruin of that house was great.

See the Notes on Matth. 7. 24, 25. &c. where we before met with the same thing. The Sum is, Men Hopes of Salvation built upon any other but Christ alone, or Built upon Christ, without a Sincere Study, and Endeavour to keep the Commandments of Christ, are Vain Hopes, and the till a Storm of Afflictions, or Temptations comes, they may please themselves a little with them, yet when they come to try, or when any notable Temptation afflicts them, or any great Affliction cometh upon them, then they will fall them, and they will see the folly, and Vanity of them, what is the Hope of the Hypocrite, when God takes away his Soul? Job 27. 8.

CHAP. VII.

Now when he had ended all his sayings in the audience of the people, he entered into Capernaum.

2 And a certain centurions servant, who was dear unto him, was sick and ready to dye.

3 And when he heard of Jesus, he sent unto him the elders of the Jews, beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant.

4 And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was worthy for whom he should do this.

5 For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue.

6 Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent friends unto him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself, for I am not worthy that thou shouldst enter under my roof.

7 Wherefore neither thought I my self worthy to come unto thee, but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed.

8 For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto one, Go, and he goeth, and to another, Come, and he cometh, and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

9 When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled at him, and turned him about, and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

10 And they that were sent, returning to the house, found the servant whole that had been sick.

See the Notes on Matth. 8. from v. 5. to v. 11. where we have considered all the differences betwixt Matthew and Luke Relation of this Miracle. We have in it remarkable, 1. The Humanity of the Centurion to his Servant, to teach us Christians to do like. 2. The profitableness of good Works, the Centurion love to the Jews in Building them a Synagogue, gaineth their Applications to Christ for him. 3. The Humility of the Centurion, he did not think himself worthy to appear in Christ's presence, nor to receive Christ into his House. 4. His Faith in Christ's Divine Power and Goodness. It doth not appear, that he believed that Christ was the Eternal Son of God, but he did at least believe, that he was clothed with a Divine Power, or had a Divine Power Communicated to him from God, by which he was able, at a distance, and by no more than a Word, without Application of humane Rational means, to command off the Demons of his Servant. 5. The Power of Faith in God, and its acceptableness to him. Christ doth not only effect the Cure, but predicate his Faith, to be greater than he had found amongst the Generality of the Jewish Nation, who went for the only People of God at that day, and had much more Light, and means to discern that Christ was sent of God for the good of Men, than the Roman Captain had.

11 And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain, and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12 Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she was a widow, and much people of the city was with her.

13 And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not.

14 And he came and touched the bier, and she and they that bare him stood still, And he said, Young man, I say unto thee, * Arise.

15 And he that was dead, sat up, and began to speak, And he delivered him to his mother.

Luke alone gives us an account of this Miracle of our Saviour. Matthew mentions only the raising from the dead of Zairus his Daughter. Luke addeth this, John addeth that of Lazarus, John. 11. by which our Lord did mightily shew his Divine Power, and gave full scope to the more general Reflection, as well as declared himself to be, as he elsewhere saith, the Resurrection and the Life. The place where this Miracle was done, was called Nain. H. Stephen Heb. Cald. Gr. et Lat. nainos, he tells us, it was a City or Town about two Miles from Mammi Tabor, at the Foot of the lesser Mount Hermus near to Hendur. It was the Custom of the Jews to bury their Dead without their Cities. Christ went this Dead Body carrying out. He was it seems her only Child, and she was a Widow, so under a great Affliction God by this Providence having quench'd the only God, she had left in Israel. And when the Lord saw her, weep not. None moved him on the behalf of the Widow, neither do we read, that she herself spake to him. Only our Saviour's Bowels were moved at the sight of her Sorrow and consideration of her loss. It is observable that our Saviour wrought his healing Miracles, 1. Sometimes at the motion, and desire of the Parties to be healed. 2. Sometimes, at the desires of others on their behalf. 3. Sometimes of his own free motion, neither desiring nor others Soliciting him for any such Act of Mercy towards them, as in the three first Miracles of which Matthew and Luke give us an account here, and Matth. 8. gave us an instance of all these in his healing of the Leprous Man, he instantly beseeching him, of the Centurions Servant at the Intreaty of the Elders of the Jews, and of the Widows Son here, upon shewings that we ought not to stay our Hand from doing good, when we have proper objects and opportunities before us, until we be importuned, and Solicited, thereto. Christ saying to her, Weep not, forbade not the Natural expression of the Passion, but signified a fouldin, and not expected Resurrection, so as she should not Weep without Hope. This did he cometh, and toucheth the Bier of the Coffin and faith not, Young Man! In the Name of God I say unto thee, Arise, but, Young Man! I say unto thee, Arise! Thereby declaring to them that they have understood it) that he was the Son of God, and while he was on Earth, had a power, in, and from himself by the Word of his Mouth to Command the Dead to Arise. His Word was effective, and to evidence it, it is said, That he who was Dead rose up, to as all might take notice of the Miracle, and began to speak, And is delivered him to his Mother. To let him know, his Duty to be subject to her, and the Justification she had over him.

16 And there came a fear on all, and they glorified God, saying, * That a great prophet is risen up among us; and, * That God hath visited his people.

17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about.

The People here saw the Divine Power, manifestly exerted for the Keys of the Clouds, the Womb, and the Grave action, Keys, which their Teachers had taught them were kept in Gods Hand alone. All Sense of the Divine Presence Naturally fills with fear. Some even the worst of Men, are filled with a stupid fear of Abolishment and Amazement. Pious Persons, or those that are inclined to Piety, are filled with a Fear of Reverence, such a Fear we read of, Wag. 3. 6. such was this for it issued in a predication of the Name of God, and a giving to him Praise, and Glory. For that a Great Prophet was risen up amongst them, thus far God Blest this Miracle to make men look upon Christ as a Prophet, a Great Prophet, and to look up on Gods Act in his sending him as an Act of great kindness to the Jews, for that is here plainly understood by them, saying, God hath visited his People, as before, Luke. 1. 68. and this Rumour was spread abroad all that Country.

19 And John calling unto him two of his disciples, sent them unto Jesus, saying, Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?

20 When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?

21 And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities, and plagues, and of evil spirits, and unto many that were blind he gave sight.

22 Then Jesus answering, said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard, * how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, to the poor the gospel is preached.

23 And blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me.

See the Notes on Matth. 11. 2, 3, 4. &c.
24 And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness for to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

25 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft rayment? Behold they which are gorgeously apparelled, and lived delicately, are in kings courts.

26 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet.

27 This is he of whom it is written, * Behold I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

28 For I say unto ye, Amongst those that are born of women, there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist, but he that is least in the kingdom of God, is greater than he.

See the Notes on Matth. 11. 7, 8, 9. where we met with this Testimony concerning John, given by our Saviour with some considerable enlargements.

29 And all the people that heard him, and the publicans justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John.

30 But the Pharisees and lawyers * rejected * the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him.

Matthew hath not this Addition to our Saviour's Commendation of John, but it is of great use to introduce our Saviour's following Discourse. The Evangelist here divideth the hearers into

For Gen. 18. 4 & 19. 2. Jud. 29. 21. 1 Sam. 25. 41. 1 Tim. 5. 10.
 See Psal. 23. 5 & 45. 7. This Woman had exceeded the usual kindness, and civility of the Country toward Christ, they were wont to bring their Friends Water to wash their Feet, and possibly a piece of linen to wipe them, she watheth his Feet with her tears, and drieth them with her hair. They used to anoint the Head of their Friends with Oil, she anoints his Feet. They used to kiss one anothers Cheek, on Lips, she kisseth his Feet, they kisseth their Friends once, she sealed not to kiss his Feet. Upon this Christ who before had forgiven her, declareth her to be forgiven, first in the hearing of Simon, then he doubteth not to say to her, Thou art forgiven. He had told Simon before that the Creditor had freely forgiven them both, his adding here, Her sins which are many, sufficiently evidenceth that she was vile, whom he intended by the debtor who owed much. Hence we may judge how little ground the Papists have, to urge this place to prove, that Remission of Sins is procured by our own merits and satisfactions. Love here is not mentioned as the cause, but as the effect of the Remission of Sins, and that which our Saviour here designed to instruct Simon in, was. 1. That whatsoever this Woman had been, she was not now such a notorious Sinner, as he fancied; her sins were forgiven. 2. That God having thus favoured her, she knew of Remission, had also kindled in her heart a Love towards him. 3. That this Love wrought in her heart in some proportion to that Love, which God had kindled in his heart towards her. 4. That Men and Women Love him, therefore she loved much. 5. That much love to God, will bring a great fence of Gods Love to the Soul. John 14. 21. The Particle for which they Translate because, doth not always in Scripture signify the cause, but may be translate therefore, or for what cause, see Job 14. 17. you know him for he dwelleth in you, the Spirits abiding in believers, is not the cause of their knowing of him. but the effect of it, so that for, in that place is as much as therefore, See Mark 9. 28. He is as much as for what cause, or, for what reason? we translate it, why could not we call him out, lo here, Her sins which are many are forgiven, for which cause, or reason, she loveth much.

49. And they that sat at meat with him, began to say within themselves, * Who is this that forgiveth * Matth. 9. 3. Isa. 43. 1.

These were either the Pharisees, who thought that Christ was blasphemed, in arrogating to himself such a Power as belonged to God alone, or the others, who speak this rather in admiration, but it is probable the former are here meant.

50. And he said to the woman, * Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace. * Mark 10. 52 & 18. 42.

They believing in me as he who have Power on Earth to forgive Sins, and accordingly making application to me, and they faith working by Love, Gal. 5. 6. producing in these believers the sorrow for thy Sins, a subjection unto me, and such testimony of thy Love as thou art able to make, hath been an instrumental cause of that Salvation, which floweth from me as the principal cause. Rom. 6. 23. we have such another expreſſion in Mark 9. 22. Mark 3. 24. the faith here mentioned be much more excellent than that there spoken of, Faith is profitable both for the good things of this Life, and those of the Life which is to come. And with reference to both, Salvation is ascribed to Faith, so the instrumental cause, must to Obedience and Love, tho the Faith that doth us good must work by Love, and be evidenced by an Holy Conversation. Go in Peace, is a Phrase which was the usual valediction among the Jews, as much as our Farewell, God be with you, they under the term of Peace, comprehending all that was necessary to their welfare, and their comfort, and immediately preceded, we have reason to think this was a more ordinary Compliment to sinners, even as much as is comprehended under the term Peace, which at that time said is good, at more especially that Peace mentioned by the Apostle. Rom. 1. 2. as an effect of Faith. Go thy way a blessed, and happy woman, and in the view and fence of thy own blessedness, and not troubled at the Censures and reflexions of supercilious persons, who may despise or overlook thee because thou hast been great Sinner. God hath pardoned thy Sins, and this I assure thee only take heed to keep and maintain that Peace.

C H A P. VIII.

AND it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village preaching, and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the twelve were with him.

2. And * certain women which had been healed of evil Spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, out of whom seven devils were driven.

3. And * Joanna the wife of Chuza Herods steward, and Susanna, and many others which ministered unto me of their substance.

Still I cannot but observe, that Preaching the Gospel, and shewing the glad tidings of Salvation, (the principal business to bring Men to the Kingdom of God,) is the principal business of the Christian Ministry, whither that is in this Life, or the Kingdom of Glory, in the Life which is to come.

these Prejudices, and tho he doth not approve of their Worship, yet he did not think, that the way to change their minds, was to call for Fire from Heaven against them, nor would he be so severe against them. It is not the Will of God, that we should approve of any corrupt Worship, and joy in those that use it, but neither is it his Will, that we should by Fire and Sword go about to suppress it, and bring Men off from it. Aniquis, or the Practice of our Forefathers, is no sufficient Plea to justify any Worship. (It was the Samaritanes Plea, John 4. 20.) but yet where any such Prejudice against the Truth is, it calleth us to, for Mild and Gentle Behaviour, towards such as are under those disadvantages for the receiving of the Truth. 2. But Secondly, There was a difference in the Call of Elias. He was an extraordinary Prophet who did nothing of this Nature, but by an immediate Intuſe, and direction, so as what he did was in Zeal for God, guided by a Knowledge of the Will of God. The Disciples had no ſuch Call. 3. The times differed, Elias acted under the Legal Dispensation, which was more severe. They were under the more mild and gentle Dispensation of the Goſpel. And in this Question they did but indulge their Paſſions, and ſinful desire of Revenge, therefore (ſaith our Saviour) you know not what manner of Spirit you are of. Our Saviour ſeemeth to know, that they were under a more mild and gentle Dispensation, by Propounding his own Example. The Son of Man (ſaith he) came not to deſtroy Mens Lives, but to ſave. The Term Translated Lives ſignifyeth alſo Souls; but if we conſider the Apoſtles questions, which was not whether they should call for Fire from Heaven, to deſtroy their Souls; but to deſtroy them as to their Lives here, it will well enough juſtify our Tranſlations rendering it in this place Lives. You ſee, ſaith our Saviour, by my beſeeking the Sick, raiſing the Dead, &c. that my buſineſs is not to make my Miniſtry ingratul to Men, by any ways Prejudicing them in their outward Concerns. If it were Translated Souls, it is yet a great Truth. Chriſt came not to deſtroy Mens Souls, but to bring the means of Salvation, and Eternal Happineſs; if they reject thee, and Perſiſt, their Deſtruction is of themselves.

57 And it came to paſſe, that as they went in the way, a certain man ſaid unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goeſt.

58 And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have neſts, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

Matthew ſaith, Ch. 8. 19. This Man was a Scribe. See the Notes on Matth. 8. 19. Let thoſe who have flately Houſes, and think themſelves well Glorifying in, or that they are things fit for Men to value themſelves upon, deſpiſing their poor Brethren that want ſuch Accommodations of this Life, digeſt this Text.

59 And he ſaid unto another, Follow me, But he ſaid, Lord ſuffer me firſt to go and bury my father.

60 Jeſus ſaid unto him, Let the dead bury their dead, but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

See the Notes on Matth. 8. 21. How free is Divine Grace? the Scribe offers to follow Chriſt. Chriſt encourageth him not. To another that made no ſuch offer, he firſt ſpeaketh, ſaying, ſuffer me, and will admit or excuſe?

61 And another alſo ſaid, Lord, I will follow thee, but let me firſt go bid them farewell, which are at home at my houſe.

62 And Jeſus ſaid unto him, No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

Matthew (who mentioned the other two) mentioneth not this Third Perſon. Some doubt whether we well Translate theſe Words ἀφ' ὧν ἔτι τοὺς οὐκ ἔχουσιν bid them as my Houſe farewell. Or whether it were not better Translated, to order the things, or Perſons relating to my Houſe. Let it be Translated either way, ſignifying too much Worldliſhneſs of mind in this Diſciple, which our Saviour Checketh in the ſecond Words, ſaying, No man having put his Hand to the Plough, and looking back, is fit for the things behind, is fit for the Kingdom of God. Some think it is an Alluſion to the Story of Eliſha's call, 1 Kings 19. Eliſha paſſing by him Ploughing with Twelve Yoke of Oxen before him, and he with the twelfth, Caſt his Manſie upon him. And he left the Oxen, and ran after Eliſha, and ſaid, Let me I pray thee Kiſs my Father, and Mother, and then I will follow thee. Be that as it will, here is a Plain Alluſion to the Work of a Ploughman, and a comparing of a Miniſter of the Goſpel in his Duty, with the Ploughman in his Work. The Ploughman is obliged to look forward to his Work, or he will never draw his Furrows either ſtraight enough, or of a juſt depth; ſo muſt a Miniſter of the Goſpel, he be once called out of ſecular employments to the ſervice of God in the Miniſtry, he is obliged to mind and attend that that is enough to take up the whole Man, and his whole thought, and time, he had need of no other things to mind, or long for, but the things of the World are things behind him; Not that God debarreth his Miniſters (in caſe of Exigence) to work for their Bread with their Hands, as Paul did, but they ought not without apparent neceſſity to intangle themſelves with the things of this Life, ſo as to make them their buſineſs.

CHAP. X.

After theſe things, the Lord appointed other ſeventy alſo, and ſent them two and two before his face into every city, and place, whithersoever he himſelf would come.

We heard before of Chriſt's firſt Bleſſing, then ſending out Twelve, Ch. 6. 12, 13, 14. Ch. 9. v. 1, 2, 3. & v. 10. we heard of their return, and giving an account of their truſt to their Lord, what their particular account was, we now hear, but it was ſuch as our Saviour judged, the Harveſt too great for the Hands of the Labourers. He therefore now reſolveth to ſend out ſeventy more. The Names of theſe we have not in the Evangelists, only that Chriſt ſent them out, and that he ſent ἑξήκοντα ἑπτὰ two by two, which might be for their better Mutual Affiance each of other, and alſo for their Mutual Teſtimony, one for another; when God ſent out their firſt Conduſion, and Governors of their Diſtricts, he ſent two, Moſes and Aaron; John Baptiſt ſent two of his Diſciples to Chriſt; Chriſt, Ch. 22. ſent two of his Diſciples to prepare the Paſſover. There ſeemeth to be nothing Myſterious in this Man is a ſociable Creature, and it is not good for him to be alone; we cannot determine that our Saviour had any regard to the Numbers of Twelve, and Seventy, tho' it is certain that both thoſe Numbers among the Jews ſeem to have had a more than ordinary Character, Twelve being the number of the Tribes of Iſrael, according to the promiſe, Gen. 17. 20. & 49. 28. & 21. Elm they found Twelve Wells of Water; according to the number of the Tribes, were the twelve Pillars, Exod. 24. 4. and the Twelve Stones in the Breſt-plate of Judgment, Exod. 28. 21. and the number of the Cakes for the Show-bread to be twelve, Levit. 24. 5. The Princes of Iſrael were twelve, Num. 1. 44. and twelve Men were ſent to ſpy out the Land of Canaan, Deut. 1. 23. So we ſhall obſerve that in a Multitude of things, they kept to the number of twelve: John in his Deſcription of the new Jeruſalem, which he ſaw in his Viſion, ſays Rev. 21. 12. It had Twelve Gates, and at the Gates Twelve Angels, and on the Gates were the Names of the Twelve Tribes. And the Wall had Twelve Foundations, &c. And for the number of Seventy, Jacob's Family when they went down into Egypt, were Seventy Souls, Gen. 46. 27. they Mourned for Jacob ſeventy Days, Gen. 50. 3. at Elms they met with ſeventy ſix Years, Gen. 50. 23. p. the Pottery of Jacob was in Babylon ſeventy years. The Jewiſh Sederim, or great Court choſen upon the advent of Jeſus, is ſaid to have conſiſted firſt of ſeventy, then ſeventy two Perſons. So as the numbers of twelve, and ſeventy, ſeem to have been Numbers to which the Jews had come ſomeſort. Whether our Saviour in the choice of thoſe, whom he firſt ſent to preach the Goſpel, had any reſpect or no to the Jewiſh value for thoſe Numbers, or deſigned by it to them, that he was about to ſet up a new Kingdom and Government, which ſhould diſtinguiſh from what they had Exerciſed formerly, yet in ſome little things, ſhould have ſome conformity to them, we cannot determine. We ſhall find the ſame Powers and Authority, given to theſe ſeventy, as to the twelve, and the ſame Inſtructions; how ſome come to imagine a difference of order betwixt them, I cannot tell, no ſuch thing appeareth from the Inſtructions given the one or the other upon their firſt ſending out.

2 Therefore ſaid he unto them, * The harveſt is great, but the labourers are few, * they pray ye therefore the Lord of the harveſt, that he would ſend forth labourers into his harveſt.

See the Notes on Matth. 9. 37. where theſe Words are put immediately before the ſending out of the twelve. Both the Twelve, and the ſeventy, all that Chriſt ever ſent out were to be Labourers in the Lords Harveſt.

3 Go your ways, Behold, I ſend ye forth as lambs amongſt wolves.

4 * Carry neither purſe, nor ſcrip, nor ſhoe, and ſalute no man by the way.

We met with theſe Inſtructions before, and opened therein our Notes on Matth. 10. 9. & 10. 16. only there we had not thoſe Words, and ſalute no man by the way. The meaning of that is no more, than make all poſſible ſpeed, 2 Kings 4. 29.

5 And into whatſoever houſe ye enter, firſt ſay, Peace be to this houſe.

6 And if the Son of peace be there, your peace ſhall reſt upon it, if not, it ſhall turn to you again.

7 * And in the ſame houſe remain, eating and drinking, ſuch things as they give, for the labourer is worthy of his hire, Go not from houſe to houſe.

See the Notes on Matth. 10. 11. and on Mark 6. 10. 11. the Inſtructions as to the ſubſtance of them are the ſame here, and there, tho' a little differing in the Terms.

8 And into whatſoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat ſuch things as are ſet before you.

9 And heal the ſick that are therein, and ſay unto them, The * kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

10 But into whatſoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the ſtreets of the ſame, and ſay, 11 * Even the very duſt of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off againſt you; notwithstanding be ye ſure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

12 But I ſay unto you, it ſhall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

We have met with the ſame Inſtructions before in Matthew and Mark. See the Notes on Matth. 10. 11. 14. and Mark 6. 10. 12. there is ſome difference in Words. Matthew ſaith, enquire whether in the City is a ſon of peace, and v. 13. If the Houſe be worthy, Lete ſay, The Son of Peace be there, which ſignifies the ſame thing. If there be any in that City who belongs to God Election of Grace, any whom God intendeth by your ſermon to call, and make partakers of the Peace of the Goſpel. For other things relating to the opening of the Words, ſee the Notes before mentioned. Only we may from hence obſerve for our Inſtruction. 1. That it is the Will of Chriſt, that his Miniſters ſhould not be too ſollicitous for a Lively-hood. As the Labourer is worthy of his Hire, ſo he that feeds them into his Harveſt, will fee they ſhall be Fed. Let them look to their Calling, and to the fulfilling of their Miniſtry. God will fee they ſhall be Fed. 2. That the Society of Miniſters of the Goſpel, in Cities and Houſes ſhould be with Debauches, but with thoſe that are worthy, ſo far as Man can judge, ſuch as are their Maſters, Friends, and Servants ſhould be their Companions. 3. Thoſe are moſt worthy in places amongst whom the Son of Peace is, Men and Women that have the moſt Knowledge of, and Love for Chriſt. 4. The Miniſters of Chriſt, ought to carry themſelves with all imaginable Civility, wiſhing good to all, and doing good to all; Chriſt's Miniſters ought not to make their Belief their Gods—Eat ſuch things as are ſet before you. 6. They have a Divine Licence to take and uſe for their neceſſities, ſuch things as Men give them. 7. Chriſt expects, that his People ſhould maintain his Miniſters, not depriving the Labourers of their Hire, nor Muzzling the Mouths of the Oxen, which bread out the Corn, 1 Cor. 9. 9. 10. nor preferring their Servants for their worldly occaſions, before ſuch as Labour for their Souls, and in that Work are Gods Meſſengers to them, and his Servants in the firſt place, tho' employed in Watching for Peoples Souls. 8. The not giving a Lively-hood to Miniſters, is a new receiving them. i. e. that is, provided the People be able. 9. People by not receiving the Goſpel of Peace brought them by faithful Miniſters, ſhall do them no hurt, their Peace ſhall return unto them. They ſhall be a Sweet Saviour unto God, even as to them that Petriſh, their Judgments are with the Lord, and their Work with him. God, they ſhall be Glorified, Men proportion their rewards according to Succels of Servants. God more juſtly proportioneth his rewards to Mens Sincerity and Diligence in their Labour. 10. If Men reſuſe the Goſpel, yet they ſhall know the Kingdom of God is come nigh unto them. If they will not be ſubject to his Kingdom of Grace, yet they ſhall be ſubject by the Kingdom of his Power and juſtice. 11. There will come a Day when Men that have the offers of the Goſpel and Peace, and reſuſe them, ſlighting, and deſpiſing his Miniſters and their meſſage, will find, that they had better have lived in Sodom when it was Burnt with Fire and Brimſtone. Their Portion of wrath in the Day of Judgment will be larger, and bitter, than the Portion of the Men of Sodom. Let all who live in our Days hear and fear, and in time break off their Sin by a true Repentance, leſt they go to Hell, at the height diſadvantage.

13 And he ſaid unto them, I ſend you forth two by two, and ſay unto them, The Kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. 14 And ſay unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 15 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 16 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 17 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 18 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 19 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 20 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 21 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 22 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 23 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 24 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 25 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 26 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 27 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 28 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 29 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 30 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 31 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 32 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 33 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 34 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 35 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 36 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 37 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 38 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 39 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 40 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 41 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 42 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 43 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 44 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 45 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 46 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 47 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 48 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 49 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 50 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 51 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 52 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 53 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 54 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 55 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt wolves. 56 And he ſaid unto them, Whomever ſhall receive you, or drink water only, because you are Prophets, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Heaven. 57 And whomever ſhall deſpiſe you, or ſhall deſpiſe one of theſe little ones which are here, I ſay unto you, he ſhall be rewarded in Hell. 58 And he ſaid unto them, Behold, I ſend you forth as lambs amongſt ## CHAPTER

Galilee, for that was the Tetrachy or Province of Herod Antipas, who is the Herod here mentioned; whether these Pharisees came upon their own heads, or as sent by Herod is not so plain, nor so well agreed by Interpreters. If they came upon their own heads it is certain they came not out of kindness, for the whole History of the Gospel, lets us know, that the Pharisees, had no kindness for Christ, but were his most implacable Enemies, and continually consulting how to destroy him, but they came to see him out of Gallilee, whose reputation was so great, and who did them so much mischief, that to drive him into the trap, which they had laid for him in Galilee. But it is most probable, that they came as secretly sent by Herod, who tho' of himself he is reported to be of no bloody disposition, yet upon the Pharisees continual solicitations might be persuaded, to lend them on this errand, chusing rather cunningly to see him out of his Province, then by violence to fall upon him. This opinion looks more probable, because v. 32. Our Saviour sends them back with a Message to Herod, Go and tell that Fox. Herod had gained himself no reputation amongst the Jews, by his Mothering John the Baptist, whom the Jews generally valued as a Prophet, and probably seeing our Saviour exceeding him in popular applause, he was not willing to augment the Odium, which already lay upon him for that Fact, yet to gratify the Pharisees, (many of which were in his Province) he was willing if he could effect it cleverly, and without noise, to be quit of Christ, especially considering (as we before heard) he had an opinion, that he was John Baptist risen from the Dead, or the Soul of John the Baptist in another Body, and possibly he could not tell what might be the effect of his Ghost, or haunting his Province. It is certain, that the Pharisees, who were both a mind to have him gone some whither else, to which purpose the Message is brought to him. Our Saviour either discerning Herod's craft in this thing, or having observed the craft he used in the whole managery of his Government, that he might keep favour both with the Roman Emperor, and with the Jews, bids them, Go and tell that Fox. I do not much value their Critical observation, who observe that it is not ἄλλωθεν ἔρχεται but ταῦτα that is, this Fox, from whence they would observe that our Saviour might mean the Pharisees not Herod, nor yet have any need of it to exhort our Saviour, from the violation of that Law of God, Exod. 22. 28. Thou shalt not revile the Gods, nor curse the Ruler of thy People, which Law Paul reflected on, Act. 23. 5. and pleads ignorance for his calling Ananias, a wise Man. For we shall observe that the Prophets all along (being immediately sent from God) took a further liberty than any others, in severely reproving Kings and Princes. Elijah said ahab was he that troubled Israel, the Prophets call the Rulers of the Jews, Rulers of Sodom, and Princes of Gomorrah, &c. But Christ may be allowed a liberty neither Lawful, nor decent for other Persons, no tho' they were Prophets. But what is the mischief which Christ sends by these Pharisees? Behold I cast out Devils, and I do cures to day, and to Morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected. Tell him what he is doing, I am freeing his Subjects from molestations by evil Spirits, and the innumerable of many Diseases. What do I do worthy of Death? I have but a little time to trouble him, for in a little time I must Die, which is that which he means by being perfected, it is plain that these Words to day, and to Morrow, and the third day, must not be taken strictly, for Christ lived more than three Days after this. If he will not satisfy him, tell him, (saith our Saviour.) That I must walk to Day and to Morrow, and the Day following. I know, that as to this thing I am not under his Command, or Power, I must walk, &c. My Days are not in his hands, and I know that he cannot kill me, for I cannot be that a Prophet perish out of Jerusalem. Jerusalem is the place where I must die, not Galilee; the Sanhedrim sits at Jerusalem who alone can take cognizance of the case of false Prophets, and Jerusalem is the place where the People must up to the measure of their iniquities by filling my Blood. Upon this our Saviour breaketh out into a Jad Lamentation of the case of that once Holy City, the praise of the whole Earth.

34. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and fonest them that are sent unto thee: how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen dath gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not?

35. Behold, your house is left unto you desolate: And verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, *Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

See the Notes on Math. 23. 37, 38. These five last verses afford us much for our instruction. 1. We may from them learn the craft of the Enemies of the Gospel, as well as their Malice, they are Lions, and will like Lions tear and rend, when they see an opportunity, but when they see it convenient, they put on the fox's skin, doing the same thing by subtilty which they durst not attempt to effect by cruelty. 2. Their Malice is as much persequious, who but the Children of the Devil could have found in their hearts, to have desired Christ to go out of their Country, who did nothing there, but innocently, and diligently preach the Gospel, deliver People from grievous Diseases, and the Power of Satan, who miserably posselt and tormented them. 3. When the most Malicious Enemies of Gods People have done what they can, they shall finish their course, and work the time God hath set them. And then they have perfected their work, they shall be perfected. Death is but the perfecting the Saints, it was the perfecting of Christ. *Men shall Die as the time, fo at the place which God hath set. 6. God sending of his Ministers faithfully to reveal his Will to People, is a declaration of his willingness to gather them under the Wings of his special favour and protection. 7. The perverse Wills of Men, are those things which hinder Men and Women from being gathered. 8. Temporal judgments, and that of the severest Nature will first or last follow Man's contempt of the offers of Grace and Salvation. 9. Those that do not contain the means of Grace, shall not see them long. *Thou shalt not see me. 10. The Proud and Scornful and Contemners of Christ and his Grace; shall one Day with, that one would or might come unto them in the Name of the Lord, and do but now content what hereafter they would be glad they might enjoy.

CHAP. XIV.

1. AND it came to pass, as he went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees to eat bread on the sabbath-day, that they watched him. 2. And behold, there was a certain man before him which had the dropie. 3. And Jesus answering, spake unto the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, *Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-day? 4. And they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go: 5. And answered them, saying, *Which of you shall have an ass, or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath-day? 6. And they could not answer him again to these things.

We have before observed the freedom of our Saviours converse; sometimes he will dine with Publicans, sometimes with Pharisees, becoming all things to all Men, that he might gain some. Christians certainly have the same liberty; the matter is not in whole houses we are, but what we do, or say, how we behave our selves there. In his going to a Pharisee's house, he gives us a great Prospect of humanity, and self-denial, for the Pharisees were his great Enemies, and we shall observe no great kindness shewed to him in the invitation of him. Whether this Pharisee be called one of the chief of the Pharisees, because he was a Member of the Sanhedrim, or a Ruler of a Synagogue, or because he was one of the Elders and greatest repute, is not worth the inquiry; whether he were in Bread, that is, to take a Meal with him. It is a Phrase often used to signify Dining, or Supping, for they ordinarily under the Notion of Bread, understood all manner of Victuals. It was on the Sabbath-day. In the mean time the Evangelist tells us, they watched him, to wit, whether they might catch any thing from him, or see any thing in him, whereof they might accuse him. It happened there was a Man who had a Dropie, whether casually, or brought thither on purpose by the Pharisees, the Scripture saith not, he was not there without a Divine direction, to give Christ an occasion of a Miracle, and further to instruct People in the true Doctrine of the Sabbath. Christ upon the Sabbath begins us a discourse proper for the Day, asking the Pharisees if it were Lawful to lead on the Sabbath-day, they make him no reply, Christ healeth him, then Preacheth a Doctrine to them, which he had twice before inculcated, in the case of a Man who had a withered hand, Math. 12. 10. and of the Woman whom Satan had bound of which we heard, Ch. 13. 15. viz. The works of Mercy are Lawful on the Sabbath-day. Then he justifieth his Fact by the confession of their own practice, in lifting up Beasts fallen into Pits on the Sabbath-day. His Argument is this. If it be Lawful on the Sabbath-day to relieve a Beast, it is more Lawful to relieve a Man. But you do the former. The Evangelist reports them put to silence, but saith nothing of their Conviction. It is an eating thing to set Malicious Persons Mouths then to remove their prejudices. Malice will ordinarily hold the conclusion, when the reason of the Soul infected with it is not able to justify the premises.

7. And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms; saying unto them,

A Parable here hath something a different signification, from what it more ordinarily hath in the Evangelists, it usually signifies a Similitude, here it signifies either a Wife saying, or a Dart saying, by which he intended something further than in the Parable he expressed, which he expoundeth v. 11. we may see from hence, that the Dining of Friends together on the Sabbath-day is not Unlawful, only they ought to look to their discourses that they be suitable to the Day.

8. When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not down in the highest room: lest a more honourable man then thou be bidden of him?

9. And he that bid thee and him, come and say to them, Give this man place, and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room;

10. *But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh someth, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher, Then shall thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

11. *For whosoever exalteth himself, shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself, shall be exalted.

Two or three Moral instructions we have in this Parable. 1. That the Law of Christ justifieth none in any rudeness and iniquity. 2. That the Disciples of Christ ought to have a regard to their Reputation, to do nothing, they may be ashamed of. 3. That it is according to the Will of God, that honour should be given, to those to whom honour belongeth; that the more honourable Persons, should sit in the more honourable Places. Grace gives Men no exterior preference, though it makes Men alacris yet it is within. But the moral spiritual instruction (for which our Saviour put forth this Parable) is in v. 11. Our Saviour had but now in the sight of these Pharisees, cured a Man of a bodily Dropie, he is now attempting of a cure of the spiritual Dropie, of Pride in their Souls. He had before denounced a Woe against the Pharisees, for loving the uppermost places in the Synagogues, Ch. 11. 43. and told us Math. 23. 6. that they loved the uppermost Rooms at Feasts, and possibly he might at this Feast be something of it. He therefore applyeth his discourse by pressing upon them Humblety, and shewing them the danger of Pride, which tho' it is a vice rooted in the heart, yet by such little things discovereth it self in the outward Conversation, he tells them, That God is such an Enemy to Pride, that he ordinarily fo ordereth it in the Government of the World, that usually self-exalting People, are by one means or other abased, and brought to shame, and contempt, and those that are low in their own eyes are exalted, and if it doth not so fall out here, yet this will be, what will at the last Day befall them, in the Day of Gods righteous judgment. See the Notes on Math. 23. 12. We shall meet with the same again, Ch. 18. v. 14.

12. Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee.

13. But *when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind: 14. And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

Many things are delivered in Scripture in the form of an absolute, and universal Prohibition, which must not be so understood, amongst which this is one instance; none must think that our Saviour doth here absolutely, or universally forbid, our invitations to our Brethren, or kinsmen, or rich Neighbours, or Friends, to Dinner, or Suppers with us, there was nothing more ordinarily practised amongst the Jews, Christ himself was at divers Meals, but Christ by this teacheth us, 1. That this is not all of Charity; it is indeed a Lawful act of humanity and civility; and of a good tendency sometimes to procure unity and Friendship, amongst Neighbour and Friends, but no such act of charity, as they could expect an heavenly reward for. 2. That such Feasting ought not to be upheld in prejudice to our Duty in relieving the Poor, that is, they ought not to be maintained in such excesses and immoderate degrees, as by them we shall disfile our selves, from that relief of the Poor, which God requireth of us, as our Duty, with respect to the estate with which he hath blessed us. 3. That we may most reasonably expect a recompense from Heaven, for such good Works as we do, for which we are not recompensed on Earth. 4. That Gods recompenses of us, for doing our duty, in obedience to his Commands, are often deferred until the Resurrection of the just, but then they will not fail obedient Souls.

15. And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, *Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.

Whether this Person had any gross Conceptions of the Kingdom of God, as a place of eternal pleasures, and sensible satisfactions, I cannot say; (tho' it is the opinion of some plausible Interpreters) he might mean no more than, Blessed is he that shall come to Heaven, and enjoy the Celestial pleasures and satisfactions there, for that Blessed state is called the Marriage Supper of the Lamb; and Christ spake to his Disciples, in this Discourse, when he spake of drinking Wine with them in his Kingdom. But this passage, both lets us know the good influence of spiritual discourse, to let the Tongues of others on Work, and also it lets us see, what good Meditations may be founded, almost upon any Subjects, if we have any heart thereto. This gives our Saviour an occasion to put forth the following Parable.

16. I have said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many:

17. And *sent his servants at supper-time, to say to them that were bidden, Come, for all things are now ready.

18. And they all with one consent began to make excuse, saying, A certain man called me, and I go to see him, and I will come.

19. And another said, I have bought five yoke of Oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

20. And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21. So that servant came, and shewed his lord these things. Then the master of the house being angry, said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.

22. And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded; and yet there is room.

23. And the lord said unto the servant, Go out into the high-ways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.

24. For I say unto you, that none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

We meet with the same Parable, Math. 22. 1, 2. 3. where we had the most of what is here, and many other considerable Circumstances. See the Notes on that Chapter. Christ's Primary intention by this Parable, was certainly to foretell the Rejection of the Jew for their Contempt of his Gospel, and the Reception of the Gentiles. They were those who were first bidden, and called, and invited by the Preaching of John the Baptist, Christ himself, and the Apostles to the Receiving of Christ, that to they might be prepared for the Marriage Supper of the Lamb, mentioned Rev. 19. 9. The Gentiles as a more Ruttick People, are let out under the notion, of such as were in Lanes, Streets, and by-ways. It also informeth us of some great Causes of Mens rejection, of the Grace of God offered them in the Ministry of the Gospel, their Worldly care, and business, &c. Their feignible Enquiries, and Pleasures, which did not hinder them, I leave only, but one or other of which hinders the most of People from receiving the Grace of Christ tendered in the Gospel. They are either not at leisure to attend their Souls, or they must enjoy things sensible and sensual, in a degree in which the enjoyment of them is inconsistent with that Duty, which God requirerth of them who would be saved. Periculum licetis, most Men Perish by their Sensual life (or abuse rather) of things in themselves lawful. It may be observed also, that the two first sorts made a kind of mannerly excuse, saying, I pray thee have me excused, but the last Peremptorily said, I cannot come. The secular impediments, be great diversions of us, and fo hindrances of our minding things of highest Concernment, yet Sensual satisfactions and pleasures do most Drown, and Swallow up the Soul of Man, and keep it from minding Heaven, and Heavenly things. There have been a great many Words spent about these Words, Compel them in, Ch. 14. v. 23. It appeareth to be almost the unanimous Sense of the Ancients, That Man ought by Temporal Pleasures to be compelled to the Possession of the true Faith. Some of them have a little differed about such as having once embraced the Doctrine of the true Faith, and afterwards turned from it, tho' the truth of it, they can be no more Compelled than the other, for the Will admits of no Violence. Be the Truth what it will in those points, certain it is that External Compulsion, hath no Colour of Foundation in this Text. They are the Ministers of the Gospel that are so often spoken to, who we know by Christ's Commission had no Civil Power committed to them. Nor do we ever read that they exercised any in order, to the bringing of the Gentiles to the embracing of the Faith, nor do Servants sent out to invite Men to Feasts (as these were) use to pull them by the Head, and Shoulders, or to drive them in by Whips, and Cudgels, only to use the best Arguments they can to persuade them. Christ never prescribed any Spanish Compulsion of People. Man is presumed to be a Rational Creature, and taught even by Nature to chuse things, which he sees are of any be of highest Importance and Concern. So that the very opening to Mens Riches of Divine Grace, fitted to their lust and undone State (which must also be shewed them) is a Compulsion of them, or would at least be so, if Men by the fall were not Corrupted as to their Wills, so as they will not follow the Dictate of their understanding. But notwithstanding the depravation and averness of the Carnal will, yet it is many as the Lord will please to new Mercy to, by forcing the Merciful Operations of his Spirit, with the Exterior call in the Ministry of the Word, shall come in. The Words are ἀναγκάζουσιν, anankazousin, it needeth force then to come in, which no Cudgels, no bodily punishments can, for they have their choice, whether they will die, or do it. It is said, Math. 14. 22. Christ Compelled his Disciples to go into a Ship, ἰνα κενον ἔσται it is certain he used no Swords or Staves, or Whips, or pecuniary Mulcts to enforce them. A Word of as high an import is used, Chap. 24. 29. of the two Disciples compelling Christ to stay, ἵνα μὴ φέροις ἡμᾶς, hina mē pherōis hēmas, lest thou wilt not carry us, which signifies, lest thou force the Gentiles to Judaea, yet it is certain Peter neither exercised, nor called in the Power of the Magistrate to force the Gentiles. But when Men began to spare their pains as to their tongues, to over-power and prevail prevail upon Mens Hearts, then they began to Compel them, by Civil Coercions, and to call in the Civil Magistrate, to the effecting of what they would have, whilst they themselves would do nothing, and thus contrary to all Sense and Reason, they expounded these Words, Compel them to come in.

25 And there went great multitudes with him: and he turned, and said unto them, 26 * If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple.

27 And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple.

We met with much the same, Matth. 10. 37. The sum of the Words is, That no Man can be a true Disciple of Christ, that giveth any Friend, or any thing a preference to Christ in the affections of his Heart. Christ must be loved above all. It appeareth that the Words must not be interpreted rigidly, for then they would oblige us to a thing impossible in Nature. Christ, Matth. 23. 29. yet Life is one of the things mentioned which ought to hate. It is Morally impossible: For the Law of God Commands us to Honour our Father and Mother, for the non-observance of, or teaching contrary to which Law. Teaching the People to say Corban. It is a Gift whatsoever thou mayest be professed in by me. Christ fo leavely reflected on the Pharisees themselves, doth not here teach others to hate their Fathers or Mothers, taking Hated in a strict, and absolute Sense. If any Man be not signifiyly here more than if any Man doth love his Father, wife, Children, Brethren and Sisters yea, and his own Life more than me, cannot be my Disciple Nor is this any Sense put upon the Term Life, different from what must be the Sense of it in other Scriptures. *Gen. 2. 31. When the Lord said, that Leah was hated, that is less loved, as is expressed, v. 30. it must be interpreted, in v. 33. It also signifiyly less loved. Deut. 21. 15. 17. Matth. 6. 24. John 12. 25. We met with the substance of what is here v. 27, in Matth. 10. 38. and Mark 8. 34. See the Notes on those places.*

28 For which of you intending to build a towre, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether ye have sufficient to finish it?

29 Less haply after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it, begin to mock him.

30 Saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish.

31 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

32 Or else, while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an ambassage, and desireth conditions of peace.

33 So likewise, whosoever he be of you, that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple.

Our Lord, had in the Parable of the Supper shewed what those things are, which keep Men from embracing the Call of the Gospel, to wit their Hearts too much adherence to, and embracing of Sensible, and Sensual things. For the according of which Temptation he had told them, v. 25, 26, 27. That if they loved any thing in the World more than him, they could have no Portion in him, they could not be his Disciples, for (as Matthew saith) they are not worthy of him. Nay, more than this, they must sell up, and bear their cross, and come after him. Here he directs them, the best Expedient in order to the performance of these Duties, to hard to Flee and Blood. That is, to sit down before Hand, and think what it will cost them to go through with the Profession of Religion. This he tells them, ordinary Prudence directeth men to, when they go about to Build, or Fight, &c. As to the first they must take good Estimate as they can of the Charge. As to the latter they consider both the charge, and the Strength that they are able to produce, to make opposition. So saith he, must they do, who will be his Disciples. 1. Sit down and consider what it will cost them to become the Lords Building, what old Foundation of Nature must be dugged up, what new Foundation must be laid, how many Stones must be laid before they can come up to a Wall Tere, to the promise wherein Salvation is infused. 2. They must consider what Difficulties they are like to meet with, from the World, the Flesh, and the Devil. And they must be ready to forsake all for Christ, so it may be they shall not be actually called out to it. Only we must remember, that in Parables every Branch is not to be applied. We must desire no Conditions of Peace from our Spiritual Adversaries. 2. In our counting up of our Strength to maintain the Spiritual Fight we must do as Princes use to do, who use to count the Forces of their Allies, and Confederates, as well as their own: So we must not count what opposition we alone can maintain against the World, the Flesh, and the Devil; but what Christ (who is in Covenant with us as to these Fights) and we can do together. So as Confideration, and Pre-deliberation here is not required of us upon any account to deter us from the Fight (for fight we must, or dye Eternally) but to prepare us for the Fight, by a firm and Steady Resolution, and to help us how to manage the Fight, looking up to Christ for his Strength and Assistance in the Managery of it.

34 Salt is good: but if the salt have lost its savour, wherewith shall it be seasoned?

35 It is neither fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill; but men cast it out. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

See the Notes on Matth. 5. 13. Mark 9. 50. where we met with the most of what we have in these Verses. By Salt in this place our Saviour seemeth to mean a Christian Life, and Profession. It is a good, a noble, a great thing to be a Christian; But one that is so in an outward Profession may lose his Saviour. Tho a Man cannot fall away from Truth, and Reality of Grace, yet he may fall away from his Profession, he may be given up to believe Lies, and embrace damnable Errors, he may flake off that dread of God which he seemed to have upon him, and then what is he good for? wherewith shall he be seasoned? He is neither fit for the Land nor the Dunghill, as some things will poll Dunghills, or Debauched Professors do make what wicked Men worse, by prejudicing and hardening them against the ways, and Truths of God. He that hath Ears to hear, let him hear. It is an usual Epiphonema, or Sentence by which Christ often flouts up grave, and weighty Discourses; the Sense is, you had therefore need to look about you, and to undertake the Profession of my Religion upon such weighty Grounds, and Principles as will carry you through this practice of it to the end, I will all the Oppositions you shall meet with, for if you Appearize from your Profession, you will be the worst of Men, neither fit for the Church, nor for the World for you will make that the worse) indeed fit for nothing but for the Fire of Hell.

CHAP. XV.

1 Then * drew near unto him all the publicans, and sinners for to hear him.

2 And the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.

I have to often taken notice, that the Term All in the New Testament is very often used to signify, not all the Individuals that Species, or order of Men to which it is applied, but only a great and considerable number of them, that it is needless again to repeat it. None can imagine, that every Individual Pharisee and Sinner in those parts, where Christ now was, came to hear Christ, but only many of them, on some of every sort. Thus Publicans and Harlots entered into the Kingdom of God, whilst the Children of the Kingdom, and such as appeared to be fairer of it, were cast out. The Scribes who were the Interpreters of the Law, and the Pharisees, who were the rigid owners of their decrees, and interpretations, murmured, they were disturbed, and troubled at it. Thinking that because the Law appointed no Sacrifice for bold, and presumptuous Sinners, therefore there was no Mercy in God for them, or those of whom they had such a Notion, and that they were ipso jure Excommunicated, and therefore Christ sinning in Eating, or Drinking with them, or in any degree receiving of them. And from hence concluding he was no Prophet. As if because ordinarily, Persons are known by their Companions with whom they converse, therefore it had been a general rule, as if one might have concluded, that their Disciples were ignorant, because they conversed with them that were so, for their Instruction; or could conclude, that the Physician is Sick, because his Converse is with the Sick, for their Cure and Healing. A man is not to be judged to be such as he converseth with; necessary; or to be good, which was the end of all our Saviours Converse with these Sinners. Besides were they themselves without Sin? The Root of their uncharitableness was their opinionous of their own Righteousness, from the Works of the Law, according to their own joining Interpretation of it. But let us hear our Saviours reply.

3 And he spake this parable unto them, saying,

4 What man of you having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?

5 And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing.

6 And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me, for I have found my sheep, which was lost.

7 I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth; more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance.

See the Notes on Matth. 18. 12-14. where we met with the same Parable, also not related with so many Circumstances. The Seventh

Seventh Verse which is the Epiphonema, the same as the Principal thing which our Saviour by this Parable designeth to teach his Hearers, and us also, viz. That Christ is far from teaching the greatest Sinners, that Repent, and Fly unto his Mercy, that he is more willing, he should take a greater Satisfaction, in such an issue of Divine Providence, than in all the blessed Saints. No Repenting Sinner, let his Sin be as many, and as great as they can be, shall be unwelcome unto Christ, Aving to him with a broken Heart (rejoiced against his former Courses) for Pardon and Mercy. But as it is happeneth to them, who by Study and Practice make great Experiments, they can hardly find out what they mostly seek for, but in the way to it, they will find out several other Notions, which are of great use to them: So it will fall out to them, who diligently study the Parables of the Gospel. The sence one Truth he that, the Exposition of which our Saviour doth chiefly intend; yet the Parable will also afford some other profitable instructions, not unworthy of our notice and regard. The Man here intended is Christ, who was the Son of Man, as well as the Eternal Son of God. The Hundred Sheep signifies the whole number of his Elect, whether in Heaven or on Earth, whether yet called, or hereafter to be called. The Sheep, going to find it, signifies all the Elect, who are by Nature Children of Wrath, as well as others. Dead, in Tragicall and Sins, eph. 2. 1. 3. Here is mention but of one Sleep, to goe away, tho there be many to let us know the Love of Christ to every individual Soul, that if but one of them had been to have been Redeemed, he would have come down from Heaven to have Redeemed it. The Ninety Nine left in the Wilderness, them to me to be the Glorified Saints, they are the only Persons who need no Repentance. The Country Man was going after the lost Sheep till he found it, then bringing it home upon his shoulders rejoicing, signifies the infinite Love of Christ, in leaving his Fathers Throne, and the Society of the Glorified Saints and Angels to come and to seek, and to save that which was lost to pay a Redemption price for them, then sending his Holy Spirit, and the Ministers of his Gospel to invite, and effectually persuade them to accept of his Salvation, truly Repenting of their Sins, and also perceiving them through his Power by Faith, unto Salvation. For it is upon his Shoulders, that any Redeemed Soul is brought home (it is his Eye must find them, and his Power that must bring them Home). The Country-man Rejoicing, and calling his Neighbours to Rejoice, signifies the Satisfaction and well pleasedness of Christ, in the Conversion of Sinners, which is more plainly expressed, v. 7. I say unto you, that likewise there shall be Joy in Heaven over one Sinner that Repenteth, more than over Ninety and Nine just Persons, which need no Repentance. We have much the same again, v. 10, leaving the Companyative part. There also it is: There is Joy in the presence of the Angels of God. We will consider the Expressions in both the Verses together. As to which time may arise these Questions. 1. 2u. What is here meant by Joy in Heaven? The Inhabitants of Heaven are God, the blessed Angels, and the Glorified Saints, how can they be said to Rejoice, whereas Rejoicing is in us the product of a Passion, by which we triumph in our Union to some good, which we before wanted. 2. *3u. When Terms Expressive of our Passions, are applied to Angels, we must understand them so, as they are not to agree to such Things, separated from their Executions, which they have in beings more imperfect. Joy signifiyly, then, but the full satisfaction of the Will, in a good obtained. Thus God is said to Rejoice in his People, Isa. 62. 5. 2u. Who are these Ninety Nine just Persons that need no Repentance? For the number, it is but an incertain number put for one certain. 2. 3u. Some by such as need no Repentance understand, such as think of themselves, who indeed they do need it. Others understand it Comparatively, such as if compared with others need no Repentance. 3. Others by Repentance understand, Repentance. Such sober Persons as stand in no need of being called to a Public Confession, for the satisfaction of the Church of God. I had rather understand it of the Glorified Saints, and Society Christ left, when he came to Work out our Redemption. For the others it had been no great matter for Christ to leave them, that God, and the Holy Saints, and Angels, Rejoice over one Repenting Sinner, than over Ninety Nine just Persons. 4. 5u. It is universally agreed, that Christ speaks of the Son of God, and of the Angels, after the manner of Men. Of that pleads that it is to express more Passion, upon a new Object than they are wont to have, that they have been long pleased with. As a Parent Rejoiceth more over one Child recovered from the jaws of Death, than over all the rest of his Children. The nothing can be new to God, that is, which he did not see, as he knew, yet (sometimes may be new to him) in fact as he is wise and fulfilled, and we must not imagine any Mutability in the Divine Being upon any Intermittency, as though we were to express how infinitely pleased God is, in the Repentance and Conversion of any Sinner, he is set out, as receiving an Augmentation of satisfaction in the effecting of it; such Expressions as are considered in this God for our Consolation, must not be so strained by us, as to occasion any unbecoming thoughts of God: *So some query how the Angels could be the Conversion of a Sinner, and from hence the Paper would some of them infer, that they know our Hearts, because that is the Seat of Conversation. An. both the Angels, and the Glorified Saints also may know it by Gods revealing it to them.

8 Either what woman having ten pieces of silver, if the lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it?

9 And when she hath found it, she calleth her friends and her neighbours together, saying, Rejoice with me, for I have found the piece which I had lost.

10 Likewise I say unto you, There is joy in the presence of the angels of God, over one sinner that repenteth.

This Parable (as appeareth by the conclusion of it) is of the same import with the other, and needs no further Explication. By both these Parables, our Blessed Lord lets the Pharisees know, that he aimed at in Converting with Publicans and Sinners, viz. In order to their Repentance and Conversion, than which nothing could be more grateful, and well pleasing to that God whom they desired not the Death of a Sinner, but rather that they should turn from their Wickedness, and live. Of the same import is also the following Parable, which taketh up all the remaining part of this Chapter.

11 And he said, a certain man had two sons:

12 And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living.

13 And not many days after, the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living.

14 And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15 And went and joyned himself to a citizen of that country, and he sent him into his fields to feed swine.

16 And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him.

The Scope of this excellent Parable, is apparently to Magnify the Grace of God, who is willing to receive and to Treat kindly the greatest Transgressors, seriously Repenting, and turning unto God; but in it we are also, 1. instructed in the Original State of Man, like that of a Child in his Fathers House, Happy and wanting nothing. 2. The most Miserable Estate of fallen Man, such especially as are far from Grace of Riot. 3. The true way of sinners returning to God. 4. The readiness of our Gracious Father to receive, and his wonderful kindness in the receiving and embracing repenting, and returning Sinners. 5. The Envy that is sometimes found in good Souls to others receiving (as they think) more favour from God than they do. 6. The Gentleness and Meekness of God in dealing with us, notwithstanding our infirmities and self-convincing passions. God is again here represented under the notion of a Man, who had two Sons. Some that are his Children by Regeneration as well as Creation; he having given them that believe, a Right to be called the Sons of God, John 1. 12. Others, that are his Sons by Creation only. The latter are here represented under the notion of a Younger Son. This younger Son is represented, as dissatisfied with living in his Fathers House, desiring his Portion. Eccl. All Men and Women by Nature were equally the Sons of God, being all in Adam who was so. All Men Served from him, in Adam's Sin, and all created. But some again by Grace are returned to their Fathers House. Others challenge a Relation to God, as his Creatures, but are not of their Fathers House, but desire only a Portion of the good things of this Life. Some desire Honours, some Riches, all of them Life and Health, &c. God like a liberal Father, gives some of these good things to one, others to another, to some more than to others, who maketh his Sun to shine, and his Rain to fall upon the Just and Unjust. Wicked Men when they are thus furnished by God, quickly take their Turn to go to a far Country, are more Alienated and Estranged from God by Law, and wicked Practices, than they were by Nature. Waste their Substance, the Health of their Bodies, their time of Life, their Estates, their great and Honourable Capacities, by giving up themselves to Lewd and Riotous kinds of Life, to the high dishonour of Almighty God. If pleased God by his Providence, sometimes, to bring these Men into Strangers, when they are so brought, they will take any base Sordid Course to relieve themselves; rather than they will think of returning to their Heavenly Father, of themselves they will rather dye to save Swine. But if they be such as belong to Gods Election of Grace, the Providence of God will not leave them: the three little Food for a Soul in the Husks of sensible Satisfaction; yet they shall not have a Belly full of them. God will bring them out from Men believe the prophecies of his Word, and live up to the rule of Life, prescribed there; and not expect to have their curiosity gratified, by needles and extraordinary Revelations. But there is then no need of the Gospel to bring Men to Heaven, doubtless there is; but that is included in Moses and the Prophets, who all Prophesied of Christ, though more darkly than he is revealed in the New Testament. Had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me, for he wrote of me, John 5. 46 & 47. 39. Teach the Scriptures, for therein ye think that ye have eternal Life, and they testify of me; now that at that time, had no Scriptures to search, but those of Moses and the Prophets; for the New Testament was not at that time written.

30 And he said, Nay, Father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they would repent.

31 And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rise from the dead.

How vain is Man in his imaginations? We are prone all of us, to think after the rate, that this Rich Man is here brought in speaking. That altho Persons be Dead to the found of the Word, yet some sensible evidence of the Wrath of God, would make a change in their hearts and lives. There is no such thing. There is not possibly in all the Book of God, a Text that more largely depicts the hardness of a Sinners heart, than this, now a Text, which looks more dreadfully upon Persons living under the Mercy of Grace; reading and hearing the Word of God, and yet find not their hearts to be affected with the reading, and hearing of it, as thereby to be brought to repentance, and Faith, and such Holiness of Life as is required. It were possible that such Men and Women should see one come out of the bottomless Pit, tearing his hair, and wringing his hands, and gnashing his teeth, and bewailing his Misery, and begging of them to be wile by his example, telling them for what Sins he is made so miserable, and with tears and highest expressions of Passion, beseeching them that while they have time, they would leave of those courses, acquaint them selves with God, and be as Peter, who thereby good might come over them, they would not yet believe nor Repent, nor would they have any further effect upon them, then a little Passion, till they could get the Din out of their Ears. For the sensible evidence, be the highest advantage in the World to mortal foolishness, yet these things are under no Divine appointment to such an effect. Henceforth let us wonder no more that a Drunkard sees his Companion drop down Dead before him, yet presently cries again, fill the Glass, that hundred of Sinners are daily hurried down to Hell in a fight at Sea or Land hundreds drop, yet their Companions do not fly, but are held up by their Stomachs, and Passion, and their Ears are made deaf by the noise of the Drums and Trumpets. So in the World hundreds of Sinners drop down daily into the Pit, yet the rest of their Companions, tumble their Companions into their Graves, and never consider the work of the Lord, nor consider the operation of his hands, till they also like Sleep be laid in the Grave, and Death comes to feed upon them, and Hell to devour them also. This now to those that duly consider not things, and in particular do not consider this Text, seemeth strange and amazing. But it is no more to be wondered at, than that hundreds read, and hear the Word of God, and are not by it Converted and Changed. It is not to be expected that any Providence of God, should work upon those Souls any salvifick change, upon whom the Word doth not work. That is the ordinance of God, by which the holy Spirit works it self, which alone can produce this change. If God work not this change, he will work it by nothing else. To he sometimes maketh use of such Providences towards Souls so whom he intendeth good, to make them observe, and attend to the Word better, in order to be Blessed an effect.

CHAP. XVII.

Then said he unto the disciples, It is impossible but that offences will come: but who unto him through whom they come.

See the Notes on Mark 18. 6, 7. Mark 4. 23. This term scandalum is used in the New Testament very variously; in the general it signifies any thing, which may be an occasion of mischief to another. Man consisting of Body and Soul, may by something be made to stumble and fall either with reference to the one, or to the other; thus Levi 19. 14. Thou shalt not see a stumbling block before the Blind. Job 32. 17. the mischief done to our Souls is by Sin, so as in the New Testament, it often signifies any action of ours, by which our Brother is made to Sin, which actions may be said necessary, and then the scandal is taken, not given; or Wicked and Abominable, hence we call one Sins scandalous Sins, such as give offence to others, and are examples against them to Sin. Or thirdly, Actions which in themselves are of indifferent Nature, neither commanded nor forbidden in the Word. Our taking one part in these Actions, rather than another, may be a scandal, that is an Offence. What our Saviour here saith, is certainly true, concerning all these kinds of Offences, considering the Completion of the Word, and the Corruption which is Mens hearts. It is impossible but that Offences will come. But I must confess that I incline to think, that the Offences primarily intended by our Saviour here, are those of the flesh and that by them are meant Persecutions of the People of God. To the Authors of which our Saviour denounceth Wrath. So our Saviour by this, lets the World know, the special provision under which he hath taken his People, so as to know there would arise those, who would hurt and grieve in his holy Mountain; yet he declares, that they shall not be punished, but they had better dye the most certain Death imaginable, (such must be the Death of him who is thrown into the Sea, with a Millstone about his Neck) than to that degree expose himself to the Vengeance of God, a guilt of that Nature, that there is not much more hope for him to escape Gods Vengeance, than there would be for a Man escaping with his Life, whom we should see thrown into the Sea, with a Millstone appendant to him. I do very well know that it is also highly dangerous, to tempt or solicit a Child of God to Sin, either by our Words or Actions; but I do not think the design of our Lord in this place, so much to express that as the other.

3 Take heed to your selves: If thy brother trespass against thee, * rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him.

4 And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him.

Matthew hath something of the same tendency in, ch 18. 11. mentioning it as an answer to a Question which Peter propounded to our Lord; but the circumstances of both relations are so different, that I cannot think them the same, but do believe these Words spoken at another time. This Doctrine of the forgiveness of our offending Brother, is pressed upon us in several places in the Gospel, and New Testament, and that upon the greatest Arguments imaginable. Mark 6. 15. & 18. 21. Mark 11. 25. Mark 6. 17. Eph 4. 32. from whence we may justly conclude it a duty in the very high concernment for us, both to understand, and to live in the practice of it. It signifies the laying aside of all thoughts of desire of revenge in our own cause. The precept is not exclusive of our duty in leaving the Glory of God avenged upon Murderers, &c. Nor yet of our seeking a just satisfaction in a legal way, for wrongs done to us, relating to our Limbs or Estate, so far as the Person is able to do it; much less doth it require the making such a one as hath so injured us, our intimate and beloved Friend. That which it requireth is the laying aside all Malice, or desire of Revenge, upon our Neighbour in a case wherein our own Name or Honour is concerned, and is fitly joining to what went before. This Malice, or desire of Revenge, being the root of all the mischief that Men voluntarily do one to another, especially of that which they do to the innocent Servants of God.

5 And the Apostles said unto the Lord, increase our Faith.

Two we be not to seek a Connection of all those speeches of our Lord, which are recorded by the Evangelists, they sometimes heaping together many of his golden sayings, without regard to the order of time which he made them, or the dependence each one another; yet he that wisely observes the preceding discourse for charity, will easily observe an excellent Connection of this verse with the former. No duty required of Men and Women, more grates upon Flesh and Blood, than this of forgiving injuries, nothing that the most of People find harder to put in practice: so as indeed where there is not a root of Faith, this Fruit will not be found. It is Faith which works by Love, till the Soul cometh readily and freely, to agree to those propositions of the Word, where this is required, as the indispensible Will of God. Nay till it comes freely to rest upon those promises and hope for them, which are made to this duty, finally till it comes to have received Charity, and forgiveness from him, and considers it felt bound to forgive, as God for Christs sake hath forgiven it, Eph 4. 32. it will hardly come up to the practice of this duty. Hence it is that unregenerate Men are usually incapable of Malice, or desire of Revenge, they are so much in the hands of God, as always flowing Revenge. Nay to imperfect are the labors and workings of Faith in Believers, that they often find it very difficult to forgive. The Apostles therefore very properly pray, Lord increase our Faith, after hearing this discourse, others make the Connection thus, Lord we have now heard thee discoursing our duty as to Love, now increase our Faith, discourse to us something for the increase of that. But the former seemeth to be left strained. By the way we may observe from hence, that as to beginnings, so the increase of our Faith must be from God. In things truly, and spiritually good, without him we can do nothing.

6 And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye might say unto this sycamine-tree, Be thou plucked up by the roots, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you.

Matthew hath in Effect the same ch 17. 20. tho he saith you might say unto this Mountain. See the Notes there. I cannot be of their Mind who think that our Saviour in this, and the Parallel place, speaks only of Faith that works Miraculous Operations. The object of which must be a Divine Revelation or Promise made to particular Persons, that they shall be able to do things (by the Power of God) out of, and beyond the ordinary course of Nature. I do believe that in both Texts our Lord designs, to shew the great honour he will give to the exercise of the Grace of Faith. So as nothing which shall be for the honour of God, and the good of those that exercise it, and which God hath promised shall be too hard, or great an achievement for us, yet will not these follow, that if we had Faith, that is a full perfection, that God would do such a thing by us, and a rest and confidence in God relating to it, we might remove Mountains, or cut Sycamine-trees into the Sea, for no such Faith in us now could have a Promise for the object, so as such a Perfection would be no Faith, but a mere Perfection. But there are other things as difficult, for which all believers have Promise. Sin shall have no Dominion over you. Resist the Devil and he will flee from you, &c. there are duties to be performed by us, as hard in the view of our Natural Eye, as removing Mountains, amongst which this of removing Injuries, is not the least, especially to some Natural Tempers. But (saith our Saviour) do not think it impossible to you, ye have said well to me, Lord increase our Faith, for ye had Faith as a grain of Mustard-seed, either so small as a grain of Mustard-seed, (if true) or so lively and working, that it had a principle of Life in it, as a grain of Mustard-seed, you might do any duty, resist any Temptation, mortify any Corruption and you that have a Power given you, and a Promise made you for working Miracles, might say to this Sycamine-tree, be removed, &c.

7 But which of you having a servant plowing, or feeding catel, will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, Go, and sit down to meat?

8 And will not rather say unto him, Make ready wherewith I may sup, and gird thy self, and serve me till I have eaten and drunken; and afterward thou shalt eat and drink?

9 Doth he thank that servant because he did the things that were commanded him? I trow not.

10 So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty, &c.

The 7, 8, 9. verses are plainly a Parable, a part of a discourse wherein our Lord, under an earthly figure instructeth us in a spiritual Duty. This Duty is easily learned from the Epiparable, 10. 10. and it is by this that we are to know, that we ought to do those things which our Lord hath commanded us. *2. Now if ye, when ye have done all, are to look for your reward, you of debt, but of Grace He illustrates this by a Similitude or Parable. He supposeth a Man to have a Servant, Plowing or feeding Catel for him. By Servants we must understand, such Servants as they had in those Countries, who were not day Servants, or Covenant Servants; who are only obliged to work their hours, or according to their Contract with us; but such Servants as were most usual amongst them, who were bought with their Money, or taken in War, whom they were wholly at their Masters Command, and all their time was at their Masters, and they were obliged by their labour only to serve him; such Servants our Lord supposeth to have been abroad in the field, Plowing, or sowing, or feeding Catel, and at Night to be come in from their Labour. He asks them which of them would think themselves obliged presently to let them to Supper, (for Meat, Drink, and Clothes, were all such Servants wages) or would not rather let them to work again, till they had their Masters Supper, and then to wait upon him, tying up their long Garments, which they used in those Countries to wear, promising them, that afterwards also they should Eat and Drink. And suppose they do that without Murmuring? he asks them again, whether they would take themselves obliged to thank them, for doing the things which their Master commanded? He tells them he supposeth not. Now what is the meaning of all this, he tells them, *v. 11. So likewise ye, when ye have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable Servants, for the infinitely Glorious and Blessed God, can receive no benefit by our services; we have done that which was our Duty to do. By which we are instructed. 1. That we are wholly the Lords, all our time, strength, abilities; we are obliged to love the Lord, with all our Heart and Mind and Soul and Strength. 2. That our labour for the Lord must not cease, till the Lord ceaseth commanding; till we have done all that the Lord by his revealed Will lets us know we have to do. 3. That when we have done all, we shall have nothing to do. 4. That when we have done all, we shall have nothing to do. 5. That the Lord may delay our reward till he have done all that he hath commanded us. 6. That when we have it, it is not a reward of thanks, but of Grace. This Parable before excellently added to the former discourses, our Saviour had before pressed the Doctrine of Charity, he had also shewed what must be the Lord by his revealed Will, and he here sheweth what we must do to ourselves, as our end in our faith, viz. not to merit at the hand of God, not merely in order to receive a reward from him, but the Gratitude of a Faithful obedience to his Will, owning him to be our Lord, and our selves as his Servants, without any vain Glory, or Ostentation, and in all Humility, confessing our selves Servants, unprofitable

Servants, and such as have but done our Duty, no tho we had done all that he Commanded us, waiting for our reward with patience and taking it at last as of his free Grace with thankfulness, which indeed requireth the true and regular performance of every good work which we do, and our Duty if the infirmity of our good would allow us to do all whatsoever God hath commanded us, but much more when our performances be so lame and imperfect, that the greatest part of what we do, amounteth not to the least part of what we leave undone.

11 And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.

12 And as he entred into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off.

13 And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus Master, have mercy on us.

Christs nearest way from Galilee to Jerusalem, was through Samaria. In a certain Town ten Lepers met him, for tho the Law forbade them any other Society; yet it did not restrain them from the Society each of others, probably they were got together, that they might at once come to this great Physician. The Leprosy was a sore Disease, not to be much known in our Countries. We shall observe it was the Disease which God made to come upon some Persons, to testify his displeasure for some Sin committed by them. It was threatened as the Mark of God upon Men for Sin, Deut. 28. 27. from the Scab whereof thou canst not be healed. God sent it upon Miriam, Num. 12. 10. for her contempt of Moses. David curseth Goliath house with it 2 Sam. 3. 29. Goliath smothered by it, for his lying and going after Namias for a wife, 2 Kings 5. 27. King Uzziah for usurping the Priests Office, 2 Kings 19. 5. These ten Lepers cry to Christ for Mercy, Mercy with respect to their Afflictions.

14 And when he saw them, he said unto them, * Go shew your selves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that as they went, they were cleansed.

It was according to the Divine Law, Levit. 14. 2. That the Leper in the Day of his cleansing, should be brought unto the Priest, who was to judge whether he was healed yea or no, and to offer the offering there prescribed. Christ sends him to the Priest, partly that he might observe the Law which his Father had given in the case, partly that he might have a testimony of this his Miraculous Operation. We shall observe that our Saviour cared no more being at distance from them, than he by the Word of his Power only, to be more present in the same place, others by touching of them; he certainly chose thus to vary his circumstances, in actions of this Nature, to let People know that the healing virtue was inherent in him, and that the proceeding of it from him, was not tied to any ceremony used at the doing of the Work, which he used or omitted according to his pleasure.

15 And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God.

16 And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: And he was a Samaritan.

It is most probable that this Leper first shewed himself to the Priest, according to the Commandment and the direction of our Saviour, and then returned to give our Saviour thanks. Some think that this glorifying God here mentioned, and his giving thanks to Christ, signify the same thing. I doubt it, because nothing appeareth from this Story sufficient to convince us, that he looked upon Christ as God; nay it doth not appear that his Faith was risen so high as to believe him, the Messiah, the Son of David, they speak to him only under the notion of Jesus, Master, v. 13. It is plain they believed him at least to be a great Prophet, sent from God, and clothed with a Power from God. I chuse rather to interpret his falling down on his face at his feet, as an humble posture of Reverence, which those Nations did often use to complement their Superiors by, even as a posture of Adoration, and that this glorifying God, was a praising of him as the principal efficient cause of his healing, and his giving thanks to Christ, a civil respect paid to Christ as Gods instrument in the case. The Evangelist adds, and he was a Samaritan. Christ calls him a Stranger, v. 18. A Stranger to the Common-Wealth of Israel, as all the Samaritans were.

17 And Jesus answering, said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?

18 There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.

These ten Lepers were a representation of all Mankind, not more than one of that receive final Mercies, from the bountiful hand of Divine Providence, come to give God any suitable honour, and upon the Unjust. Men how to God upon their beds, but glorify him not when they are called up. But this interpretation of our Saviour lets us know, that this their way is their folly.

19 And he * said unto him, Arise, go thy way; * Math. 9. 22. thy faith hath made thee whole.

signifieth that he only prayed in his Heart, or with a Voice that could not be heard, or only that he prayed by himself. I doubt, for tho our Saviour, who knew Mens thoughts, could easily repeat his Prayer, supposing it only mental, or at least with a Voice not audible; yet this denieth not to be taken notice of, I am not heard by others; he saith, God I thank thee, for I am not as other Men, Extortioners, Adulterers, &c. But was this blame worthy? may we not bless God for his restraining Grace, not suffering us to run into the false Excesses of Riot with other Men? Doubts it is both lawful, and our Duty provided, 1. That we speak Truth when we say it. 2. That we do not come to plead this as our Righteousness before God. But this Pharisee, 1. Speaks this in the Praise of his Heart, in the justification of himself. 2. In the Scorn, and Contempt of his Neighbour. 3. Tho he be guilty of as great Sins as these, tho of another kind. In the mean time we observe, That he did not attribute this Negative goodness, of which he had boasted, or that positive Goodness, which he will tell us on by and to the Power of his own Will. He gives thanks to God for them.

12 I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.

Twice in the Sabbath, faith the Greek, but that is ordinary to denigrate the Days of the Week, from the Sabbath; the meaning is, Twice between Sabbath and Sabbath. Those learned in the Jewish Rabbinus tell, that the Jews were wont to fast twice in a week, that is, the Pharisees and Pharisees sort of them once on the Sabbath, and another time on the fifth Day (from whence some call it Wednesday and Friday, come to be with us Fasting Days or Fifth-days). The Christians in former times, thinking it beneath them, to be less in these Exercises, than the Jews, would have also two Fasting-days each Week, and those not the same with the Jews, that they might not be thought to fade. If that Custom had any true Antiquity, I doubt not, but they fasted after another rate, than the Pharisees or others now do, who pretend a Religion to that of God. But neither was the Pharisee Practice, nor the Practice of Christians in this thing to be much admired or applauded. For Fasting was always used in Extraordinary Cases, and the bringing extraordinary Duties into ordinary Practice, usually ends in a meer Formality. It is a good Rule; Neither to make ordinary Duties extraordinary, or rare. Nor yet extraordinary Duties, ordinary, and doing of the first ordinary in the loss of them, and leaving them off, to the loss of the latter. I give Tithes of all I possess. The Emphasis lies in the Word All. Others paid Tithes of Apples, and some Fruits of the Earth (of which alone Tithes was due) but the Pharisees would pay Tithes of those things, as to which it was generally held, that the Law did not strictly require them, such as Pork, Eggs, Milk, Cheese. Our Saviour bare them this Testimony, that they paid Tithes of Mint, Annis, and Cumin, Mat. 23. 23. Rue, and all manner of Herbs. Luke 11. 42. This Pharisee boath of his Excellency in these things; neither of which were required particularly by the Law of God. Nor did he anils in them, if he had not omitted the weightier things of the Law, as our Saviour chargeth them to have done in both the Texts before-mentioned, but how came these things to make him a Piles for his justification before God? he will plead his Righteousness, because he did things which God did not command him, whiles in the mean time, he omitted those things which God had commanded? Or, what did these things signify, if they were not done out of a Root of Love? The Law is Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, and how could they be performed out of Love, when Love was one of the things which our Saviour chargeth them to have omitted? Of the same nature, are other Works, such as building of Churches, and Hospitals, and Alms-houses; the Fruit is good, if the Root be good. But if they be done out of Feigning, or opinion of meriting at Gods Hands, Mens Money, not worthy to look toward Heaven, 2. By his Actions, He smote upon his Breast, as one full of Sorrow, and trouble. 3. By the manner and form of his Prayer, he confest himself a Sinner. He smote upon the free Grace of God; Here's not a Word of Boasting, that he was not such, or such, nor yet that he did thus, or thus. He confest himself a Sinner, a Miserable Sinner, and fleeth to the free Grace of God, thereby instructing us how to make our Applications to God, disclaiming any Goodness or Righteousness in our selves, and fleeing to the alone Merits of Christ, and the free Grace of God in, and through him.

14 I tell you, This man went down to his house justified rather than the other: *for every one that exalteth himself, shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself, shall be exalted.

Justified, I say, we Translate rather than the other, not that the other was at all justified by God, the other was justified by himself only, and thole of his party. The Publican was justified by God. It followeth, For every one that exalteth himself shall be abased, &c. It is another of our Saviours Sentences often made use of by him, Matth. 23. 12. and in this Gospel, Chap. 14. 11. It is applied to the ordinary practice of Men, but hear to God in the ways of his Providence, he refuteth the Proud, and gives Grace to the Humble. The Blessed Virgin magnified God on this account, Chap. 1. 51. 52.

15 And they brought unto him also Infants, that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it, they rebuked them.

16 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

17 *Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, shall in no wise enter therein.

See the Notes on Matth. 19. 13. Mark 10. 13. where we before met with this piece of History.

18 And a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

19 And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? none is good save one, that is God.

20 Thou knowest the commandments, *Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, *Honour thy Father and thy Mother.

21 And he said, All these have I kept from my youth up.

22 Now when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, Yet lackest thou one thing, *Sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, follow me.

23 And when he heard this, he was very sorrowful: for he was very rich.

24 And when Jesus saw that he was very sorrowful, he said, *How hardly shall they that are rich enter into the kingdom of God.

25 For it is easier for a camel to go through a needles eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God?

26 And they that heard it, said, Who then can be saved?

27 And he said, *The things which are impossible with men, are possible with God.

We have met with this Story at large, Matth. 19. 16. And with (if not the same) very like to it, Mark 10. 17, 18. See the Notes on both these places. The History is of great use to us. 1. To know how far a Man may go, that yet is a great way from truly good, and Spiritual State. He may know that nothing in this Life will make him perfectly happy. He may desire Eternal Life, and Salvation. He may go a great way in keeping the Commandments of God, as to the Letter of them. He may come to the Ministers of the Gospel to be further instructed. But herein he will fail. He will not come to Christ, that he may have Life, but fancy he should do something by himself, of it, he doth not write under the Law, and that there is no going to Heaven that way, but by the perfect observation of it, and therefore Ensigneth himself in a much better Estate than he is. 2. It instructeth us in this, That there is no coming to Heaven by Works, but by a full and perfect obedience to the whole revealed Will of God. 3. That every Hypocrite hath some Luit or other, in which he cannot deny himself. This Rules Luit is his immoderate love of the World, and the things thereof. 4. That it is a mighty difficult thing for any Person, but especially such as have great possessions on Earth, to get to Heaven. 5. As difficult and almost impossible it may appear to Men, yet nothing is impossible with God. He can change the Heart of the Rich, and incline it to himself, as well as the Heart of the Poor. The Rich Man hath more impediments; but he may Rich or Poor, without the powerful Influence of God upon his Heart, without his free Grace no Soul will be saved.

28 Then Peter said, Lo, we have left all, and followed thee.

29 And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children; for the kingdom of Gods sake, 30 Who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting.

See the Notes upon Matth. 19. 27, 28, 29, 30. and on Mark 10. 28, 29. The difficulty is only to reconcile, v. 30. to Gods Promises. For the Eternal Life promised in the World to come, that is Matter of Faith, and not so much as Manifold more for Christ, that in this Life do not receive Manifold more, or an Hundred-fold. An. It is true if we understood it in specie. But the promise is not to be interpreted. It is enough, if they do receive much more in value, in value upon a true and just estimation. And this every Sufferer for Christ hath either: 1. In a Joy, and Peace, and assurance of Gods love, which is thousand times more. 2. Or at least in a consolation of Mind, whilst State into which the Providence of God bringeth them; this is as much more, as any will judge it a happier State nearer to Heaven, than to have much Drink to satisfy the Appetite.

31 *Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man shall be accomplished.

32 *For he shall be delivered unto the Gentiles, and shall be mocked, and spitefully intreated, and spitted on;

33 And they shall scourge him, and put him to death: and the third day he shall rise again.

34 And they understood none of these things: and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken.

We shall afterward in the History of our Saviours passion, see all these things exactly fulfilled, and our Lord here affirmeth his Disciples, that it was not in accomplishment of all that was prophesied concerning the Messiah; nor was it any more than he had told them, Ch. 9. 32. and again v. 44. Matth. 20. 17. Mark 10. 32, 33. yet it is said, That they understood none of these things. The Words were easy enough to be understood, but they could not Reconcile them, to the notion of the Messiah, which they had drunk in, they could not conceive how the Messiah, that should redeem Israel should dye, or be thus barbarously used, by those whom he came to Redeem, or Save. We have great need to consider well, but in our Notions we entertain concerning the things of God. All this Blindness, and unbelief of the Disciples, was bottomed in the false Notion of the Messiah, which they had taken up. However our Saviour thought fit to incultate them, to prepare them against the offence they might take at them, when the Providence of God brought them forth, it is goods for us to be, tho it be only for the time come.

35 *And it came to pass, that as he was come along unto Jericho, a certain blind man sat by the way-side bemoaning.

This blind Man was Bartimeus, the Son of Timeus, as Mark tells us, Mark 10. 46. Bartimeus mentions two, the other two Exorcists but one, as being more famous, either upon his own, or his Fathers account.

36 And hearing the multitude pass by, he asked what it meant.

37 And they told him, that Jesus of Nazareth passed by.

38 And he cried, saying, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me.

39 And they which went before rebuked him, that he should hold his peace: but he cried so much the more, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

40 And Jesus stood and commanded him to be brought unto him, And when he was come near, he asked him, 41 Saying, What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee? And he said, Lord, that I may receive my sight.

42 And Jesus said unto him, Receive thy sight: thy faith hath saved thee.

43 *And immediately he received his sight, and followed him, glorifying God: And all the people when they saw it, gave praise unto God.

See the Notes on Matth. 20. 29, 30. and on Mark 10. 46. where this whole History is more fully opened. It is here again very remarkable, how much Christ attributeth to Faith, v. 42. Thy Faith hath saved thee, which can be no otherwise understood, than of Faith, as the condition that was required in the Person to be healed: for it is most certain, that Christ by his Divine Power, was the Efficient cause of this Blind Mans healing; but he exerted this Divine Power, upon that exercise of Faith, which he discerned in the Blind Man, whose Faith seemeth to be a degree higher than that of the Lepers, Ch. 17. 13. who said no more Jesui, Messiah, Jesui than Son of David: it was much more than this. It spake the blind Mans perfusion, that Christ was the Messiah; for it was an uncontested Tradition amongst the Jews, that the Messiah was to be the Son of David: Christ rewards the least Exercise of true Faith, but much more the higher Exercise of it. It doth not appear this Blind Man was fully informed, who the Messiah should be, viz. God-man, but so far as he knew he professed, he calleth Jesus, The Son of David.

CHAP. XIX.

1 And Jesus entered, and passed through Jericho.

Jericho was a very rich City, in the Tribe of Benjamin, less than twenty Miles distance from Jerusalem, (whither our Saviour was going) and less than eight Miles distance from Jordan. See Num. 22. 1. It was the first place which Joshua sent Persons to spy out, before he had conducted the Israelites over Jordan. Josh. 2. 2. he took it, Ch. 6. and Cursed the Man that should rebuild it, (who he Burned it) v. 24. He Prophesied, that he who should go about to rebuild it, should lay the Foundation of it in his first-born; and set up the Gates thereof in his Tumbler-Son, which accordingly fell out in Abahs time, to one Hiel a Bethelite, 1 King 16. 34. Through this Town or City, which now had been rebuild'd many years, our Saviour passeth in his way to Jerusalem.

2 And behold, there was a man named Zaccheus, which was the chief among the publicanes, and he was rich.

We have had frequent occasions to hint, that the Publicanes were the gatherers of the Publick Revenue from the Romans. Amongst them there was an order of Superior and Inferior Officers: Zaccheus was the chief of them that were in that Commission. And he was Rich, which is not to be wondered at, considering his employment, and is particularly mentioned doubtless to Magnify the Grace of God towards him, (of which we shall by and by hear more.) As well to let us know, that tho it be an hard thing for a Rich Man to be saved, yet with God it is possible, as we heard before, as that the Publicanes were most of them Rapacious and exceedingly given to Extortion; and the love of Money commonly increaseth, with the increase of Mens Estate, yet Christ can change the Heart of such a Man, and work it into a Contempt of Riches, and into a Freedom to part with them at the Command of Christ, or where they hinder the Embraces of him.

3 And he sought to see Jesus who he was, and could not for the press, because he was little of stature.

4 And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore-tree to see him; for he was to pass that way.

All this was but Curiosity, he saw a great Croud passing by, and asks what was the matter. The People tell him: That it was Jesui of Nazareth, that famous Prophet, whose Fame had filled Judea as well as Galilee, he hath a great Curiosity to see him, and runs before to find out a convenient Station, but perceiving the Croud was great, and knowing that he was too low of stature to look over all their Heads so well, as to satisfy himself, he climeth up upon a Sycamore-tree, by the way-side, in which he knew that he must pass.

5 And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, Zaccheus, make haste, and come down; for to day I must abide at thy house.

I see no ground for their Opinion who think that before this time, Zaccheus his heart was touched with any love, or affection to Christ. The Evangelist seemeth to represent Zaccheus before this, as a meer stranger to Christ, he ought to see who he was. But Christ's looks are healing looks, there went verse along with them to convert Zaccheus tho a Publican. Christ to recover Peter did send him Messiah, but they must be such looks, as carried with them a design to go down to Souls, Christ looked upon those to whom his looks conveyed no spiritual favouring Grace. He that could heal by the hemm of his Garment touched, could change an heart by his look. How good a thing it is to be near the place where Christ is, what ever principle brings Men thither? provided Men come not as the Pharisees used to come, to execute their Malice. Zaccheus was brought to the bodily view of Christ, out of meer curiosity, but being there he received a saving look from him, how many have had their hearts changed by Gospel Sermons, who never went to hear the Preachers with any such desire or design? Christ's design may be executed in the Conversion of Sinners, tho not by men. He is found of them that seek him, not of those that enquire not after him. Preparatory dispositions in us are not necessary to the first Grace. God can at the same time Prepare, and change the heart. Zaccheus is the first we read of, (to whom Christ did not send) Christ sent him, and in it did more for Zaccheus than he expected. O the freeness, and riches of Divine Grace, which seeketh not a worthy object, but makes the object worthy, and therefore loveth it. What a Word was this. Come down for I must this Day abide at thine house?

6 And he made halt, and came down, and received him joyfully.

Curiosity carried Zaccheus up, but Love to Christ brought him down, he therefore makes halt to come down, and he receives Christ joyfully, glad to entertain such a Guest. When Christ cometh to any Soul he never brings any sorrow to it, nor any thing but glad tidings.

7 And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying, That he was gone to be a guest with a man that was a sinner.

Here must not be taken for every individual Person, that is not to be presumed either of all the Inhabitants of Jericho, or much less of all that were in Christs Company, amongst whom Mary Magdalene was at that time in his Company, who had no reason to murmur at that. But of what sort of People were these Murmurers? The voice is the voice of Pharisees, who had often quarrelled at Christ for this, and their Disciples for there were multitudes of the Jews that had drunk in the Superstitions of this Nation, and were more afraid of keeping Company with their excommunicates than themselves being so. Of having fellowship with their excommunicates in their houses, then of having fellowship with their or greater works of darkness. Our Saviour had before answered this Civil, he will now come to them when they were mistaken in the Man. That the whom they counted a Sinner, was a better Man than themselves generally were.

8 And Zaccheus stood, and said unto the Lord, Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him four-fold.

See here the first Effects of Christs saving looks upon any Soul. The Lord is presently brought to cry out with the Prophet Isaiah 6. 5. We are like unto men of unclean Lips, and I dare not be the King of a People of unclean Lips, for mine Eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts. Zaccheus is now made sensible of his Corruption, and inwardly he turns towards the Power of his Conversion, and Outwardly, and resolves upon an excellent Reformation. Christ never looks any Soul in the face but to loose his fundul sins out of countenance. Acts 8. Charity and Justice are the fruit of true Repentance. The World and the love of it, goeth out of the heart as soon as the true love of Christ comes into it, the Soul knows that it cannot serve God, and Mankind. A life of wrong doing to others, there can be no Repentance, nor forgiveness, any Remission, without Retribution and Satisfaction, for as we know it, and are able to restore, Christ will restore. True Love to Christ never giveth him bare measure. God had no where required the giving of half a Man goods to the Poor, nor the restoring of four fold, except in case of theft, of which Men were judiciously convicted, in case of voluntary Confession; the Law was but for a fifth part over and above the principal as to which a Person was wronged, Numb. 5. 7. In case an Ox were stolen, the thief was to restore five fold and in case of a Sheep stolen, four were to be restored, if the Person had stolen it, if it were found alive in his hand, he was to restore double, Exod. 22. 1. 4. In other cases he was to restore but double, if it came to the Sentence of the Judge, Exod. 22. 1. 4. But in case of a voluntary Confession, he was only tied to a fifth part above the principal, Levit. 6. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. and to bring a Trespass-Offering to the Lord. This was the case of Zaccheus, being touched with the sense of his Sin, he voluntarily confessed, and promised the highest degree of Reformation. But to true Love in the Soul to Christ, thinks nothing too much to do in the Detestation of Sin, or demonstration of self in Works which may be acceptable in the sight of God.

9 And Jesus laid unto him, This day is salvation come to this house, forasmuch as he also is the son of Abraham.

10 For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

It is the opinion of some, that by house is here to be understood Zaccheus, and his whole Family. Not can it be denied, but that God when he pours out the Oil of Grace upon the head of a Family, maketh some of it to run down to the skirts of his Garments. Gods Covenant was with Abraham and his seed. There is a Blessing upon whole Nations, and whole Families, where the heads of them receive the Gospel; but this is not to be extended beyond Gods Gospel privileges, and the liberty of the means of Grace. Salvatio in house (which we translate salvation is come) seemeth to signify much more than this. It is rather to be understood, Interpreting this house, the head of this house. Forasmuch as he also is the Son of Abraham. Here again a question ariseth, in what sense these Words are to be understood, whether that he were the Son of Abraham, as Abraham was the father of the Jewish Nation, or as was the Father of the Faithful, viz. of all those who believed, or should believe in Christ. Those who think that he was a Jew suppose, that the Romans did employ Jesus in their service, to gather the publick Revenue, (which was a profitable, because no more then is done by all Conquerors) that he also to countenance them. 1. That Zaccheus was a name of Hebrew extraction. 2. That his mention of a four-fold restitution, seemeth to have reference to the Law of four-fold restitution, Exod. 22. 1. in case of Sheep stolen, and alienated. 3. That the Jews did not charge our Saviour for eating with a Person Uncircumcised, but a Person that was a fundulous Sinner. These make these Words to be a reason given by our Saviour, why he was kind to Zaccheus, because he also was a Son of Abraham, one of the left Seed of the house of Israel. If I could Interpret Salvatio, The means of Salvation, I should incline to this sense also; but taking it to signify saving Grace, which brings men to a certainty of Salvation, Remission of Sins, and the publication of the Soul of this Publication. I cannot but think that by a Son of Abraham in this Text is meant a true believer; which he might be and yet be a Native Jew also. Tho all Israel did not obtain, yet the Election amongst them did obtain, Rom. 11. 7. All were not Israel, who were of Israel. Neither (saith the Apostle Rom. 9. 7.) because they are the seed of Abraham are they all Children. Nor were they other then Jews to whom Christ said, John 8. 39. If ye were Abraham's Children ye would do the works of Abraham, and ye do not, ye are of your Father the Devil, and the Lusts of your Father ye will do. Our Saviour therefore in saying, Forasmuch as he also is the Son of Abraham, intendeth much more, then that he was a Native Jew, (if indeed he were so, for that is not certain) viz. that he was a believer, a Son of Abraham, considered as the Father of the Faithful, a genuine Son of Abraham, rejoicing with him at the sight of his Son, and believing with him, for as it was imputed to him for Righteousness, and Salvation is already come in a sure Title, tho not in actual possession, to every Soul that is such an one. For the Son of Man (with him) is come to seek and to save that which is lost. We had the same Matth. 18. 11. See the Notes in that place.

11 And as they heard these things, he added, and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the Kingdom of God should immediately appear.

We noted before, that Jericho was but 150 furlongs from Jerusalem, (which were not twenty Miles) and probably this discourse was the way when he was come near to it. But the principal occasion of the following Parable was, his discerning of the Opinion which polluted the hearts of the company which went along with him, that the time was now at hand when the Kingdom of God should appear. When Christ would put forth some eminent act of his Power, in delivering them from the servitude they were in, to the Romans, or in destroying the unbelieving Jews and Pharisees. Or when his Gospel should take a further place, and prevail in the World beyond what it yet had done. He therefore putteth forth a Parable to them, wherein by a familiar figure, he lets them understand, that he was going away from them, but would come again, and then receive the Kingdom. That in the mean time he would employ them as his Servants, with his goods, and when he came would take an account what use, and improvement they had made of them, and then he would both reward his Friends, and be revenged on his Enemies. The Parable followed.

12 He said therefore, A certain noble man went into a far country, to receive for himself a Kingdom, and to return.

13 And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come.

14 But his Citizens hated him, and sent a message half chide after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us.

15 And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.

16 Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.

17 And he said unto him, Well, thou good servant: because thou hast been so faithful in a very little, I will set thee over ten cities.

18 And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds.

19 And he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities.

20 And another came, saying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound which I have kept laid up in a napkin.

21 For I feared thee, because thou art an austere man: thou takest up that thou laydest not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow.

22 And he said unto him, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knowest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow:

23 Wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury?

24 And he said unto them that stood by, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds.

25 (And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.)

26 For I say unto you, * That unto every one which hath, shall be given: and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him.

27 But those mine enemies which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

The Parable of the Talents which we had, Matth. 25. 14. is of great consequence to this Parable, and the Doctrine of it in many things is the very same; but the circumstances of that and this are so differing as I cannot think, that both Matthew and Luke relate to the same time. I know nothing that hinders, but that our Saviour might twice repeat a Parable, which in substance is the same. Not to insist upon the examination of the Words used in the Greek, (which is a work fit only for Critical Writers) for the right understanding of this Parable we have three things to do. 1. To enquire what special instruction our Saviour did in this Parable intend to those who heard him at that time. 2. What the Persons are represented in it, under the Name of Noblemen, and Servants, and what the things are, represented under the Name of going into a far Country, to receive a Kingdom, distributing his Goods, &c. 3. What general instructions from it may be Collected, which are informative of us as well as to those to whom our Lord at that time spake. The special instructions which our Lord in this Parable seemeth by it to have given his Disciples were these. 1. That they were mistaken in their Notions, or apprehensions of the sudden coming of Christs Kingdom in Power and Glory. He had said a great journey to go, and they had a great deal of work to do. In the mean time, and exulting therein, was going away from them for a long time. 2. That there would be such a manifestation of his Kingdom in Glory and Power, when he should exert and liberally reward his Friends, and severely punish all such as should be his Enemies. In order to these instructions, he taketh up this Parable, or speaketh to them in the use of this similitude. 3. As to the aptness of it. 1. The Nobleman here mentioned was Christ, who shall hereafter be a King in the exercise of Power and Justice, and distribute eternal Rewards and Punishments, but in his State of humiliation in which he was, when he thus spake to them was but like a Nobleman, a Son of Man, to the chiefest of ten thousand. His going into a far Country, signifieth his going from Earth to Heaven. To receive a Kingdom, a Kingdom of Glory, Honour, and Power at the right hand of the Father. His returning signifieth his coming again to Judge the World at the last Day. His calling his Servants, and delivering to them ten Pounds, signifieth his giving Gifts unto Men, when he should ascend up High, Gifts of several Natures, but all to be Occupied, used in a spiritual Trade, for the advantage of our common Lot. Not that he meant to all alike which it is manifest he doth not; yet every man is to be put to some use, in which it is manifest it is brought to represent or express. The Citizens hating him, and sending a Message after him, &c. signifies that the generality of the World are haters of Christ, and demonstrate their hatred by their refusal of his spiritual Government and Jurisdiction. His returning, and calling his Servants to an account, signifies, that when Christ at the last Day shall come to Judge the World, he will have an account of every individual Person, how they have used the Gifts with which he hath intrusted them, whether they be longer time of Life, more health than others, Riches, Honours, or more spiritual Gifts, such as Knowledge, Utterance, Wit, &c. or any trusty places, or Offices, they have been in. The different accounts the Servants brought in, signifieth, that Men do not equally use the Gifts with which the Lord besteth them; some use them well, some ill, some bring Honour and Glory to God by the use of them, and some in one degree, and some in another. Some bring him no Honour or Glory at all. The Masters answer to them upon their accounts, let us know that every Man shall be rewarded according to his Work. There will be degrees in Glory, (tho we cannot well open them) as well as of Punishments. The unprofitable Servants excuse for himself signifies, the great itch of Proud Humane Nature to excuse itself, and lay all the blame of its miscarriages on God, either his severity, or his not giving them enough, &c. The Kings answer, v. 22, 23. let us know, that Sinners will be found to be Condemned out of their own Mouths. At the last Day, God will be found a Righteous God, and Man will be found to be a Liar. What the Lord further adds, v. 24, 25. Let us know Gods liberality in rewarding his Saints at last. What he saith, v. 27, concerning his Enemies assures us, That also God judgeth Men and Women a long time, for so long as while his Son is in the far Country, while the Heavens must contain him; yet in the Day of Judgment, a most certain final ruin will be their ruin in this Parable. 1. That the fate of Christ when he shall come to Judge the World, will be a far more Glorious State, then it was when he was upon the Earth. He was here in the appearance of a Nobleman, but he shall then appear as a King. 2. That all the good things which we have in this Life, are our Lords goods but in trust with us to be used for his Honour and Glory. 3. That it must be expected that in the World, there should be a great many Rebels against Christ and his Kingdom, a great many that shall say, We will not have this Man to rule over us. 4. That some make greater improvements then others, of what God intrusteth them with for his Honour and Glory, and some make no improvement at all of them. 5. That Christ when he cometh to Judge the World, will have a strict account how Men have used his Goods, their time of Life, or Health, their Capacities, Honours, Riches, Truths, Parts, &c. 6. That those that shall have the highest reward in Glory, who have made the highest improvements; but those who have made improvements in any proportion shall have their reward. 7. That Proud and Wretched Sinners, will think in the Day of Judgment to wipe their own Mouths, and lay all the blame of their miscarriages on God. 8. That this is their folly, God will Condemn them from their own vain Pleas. 9. That in the Day of Judgment unprofitable Creatures, will besides the loss of those Rewards which they might have received from God, have all their little satisfactions taken from them, in the enjoyments of which they dishonoured God. 10. That the Proud Sinners here oppose the Law of God revealed to them, and will not suffer Christ to Reign over them, yet his Power they shall not be able to resist, they shall at the last Day be laid before Christs face, and become his Footstool. He shall break them with a Rod of Iron, and dash them in pieces like a Pottery Vessel. Psalm 2. 9. And he shall then deliver them out of his hand.

28 And when he had thus spoken, he went before, ascending up to Jerusalem.

Jerusalem (as we before Noted) stood upon an Hill, thote that was to it therefore ascended. This going before the Kingdom was by Mark, ch. 10. 32. here again Luke taketh notice of it. To let us know certainly with what Alacrity, our Saviour managed the business of Mans Redemption. He knew that he was at this time to be the sufferer, and to die at Jerusalem; to flee that he was freely willing, he leaveth the way.

29 And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples, 30 Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which at your entering ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him hither.

31 And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because the Lord hath need of him.

32 And they that were sent, went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.

33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?

34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.

See the Notes on Matth. 21. 1, 2, 3, and Mark 11. 1, 2, 3. We have discovered the meaning of Bethphage and Bethany, and whatever occurs in this History needing and explanation.

35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

36 And as he went, they spread their clothes in the way.

37 And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives; the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice, and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen.

38 Saying, * Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: * Peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.

See the Notes on Matth. 21. 7, 8, 9. Mark 11. 7, 8, 9, 10. John 12. 13. both which Evangelists (Mark most fully) describe this great Triumph.

39 And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples.

40 And he answered, and said unto them, I tell you, that if these should hold their peace, * the stones would immediately cry out.

How Persever were these wretched Pharisees? to envy our Saviour this little Triumph; of coming into the City upon an Asses colt, with Garments under him instead of a Saddle, or any stately furniture, and trappings, and attended by a Company of poor People throwing their Garments, and boughs of trees in the way; yet these they would have silenced. Our Saviours reply, If these hold their Peace, the stones would immediately cry out. It seemeth to have been a Provoked Speech used amongst them to signify a thing which could not be. This Day was accomplished Gods decree in that particular passage of Providence, concerning our Saviour, which could not be defeated.

41 And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it.

Those who of old blotted out this Sentence, as thinking that weeping was not becoming Christ's Perfection, seem to have forgotten that he was perfect Man, and a sharer in all the natural infirmities of humane Nature, (if weeping upon the prospect of humane Misery, delivereth no better Name than an infirmity, being an indication of Love and Compassion.) Those who think that it was idle for him to weep, for that which he might easily have helped, seem to oblige God to give out of his Grace, whether Men do what he hath commanded them and is in their Power to do or no. Christ wept over Jerusalem as a Man, compassionating these poor Jews, with respect to the Miseries he saw coming upon them. As a Minister of the Gospel pitying the People to whom he was primarily sent.

42 Saying, if thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.

Species which are the products of great passion, are usually abrupt and imperfect. If thou hadst known, That is, O that thou hadst known, or I wish that thou hadst known. We are said in Scripture to know more than we believe, are affected with, and live up to the knowledge of. They had heard enough of the things which concerned their Peace; Christ had told them to them, but they attended not to them, they believed them not, and so cared not to direct their lives according to any such notions. As least in this thy day. The time in which I have been Preaching the Gospel to thee, (for I had rather interpret it, then of this last journey of our Saviours to Jerusalem.) This was properly the Jews day; for the first Preachers of the Gospel, spent all their time and pains amongst them. The things which belong to thy Peace, that is, to thy happiness, for so the term often signifies, and it referreth well to the happiness of the outward, as of the inward Man. But now they are hid from thine Eyes. God will not suffer his Spirit always to strive with Man, because he is his Foe, not to be always waited on by the great Majesty of Heaven. First, Men shut their Eyes against the things that do concern their Peace, then God hideth them from them. No Man hath more than his Day, his time of Grace, how long that is none can tell, if he sleepeth out that, his case is desperate, past remedy.

43 For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall call a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, 44 And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another: because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.

It is a plain Prophecy of the final Destruction of Jerusalem, by the Roman Armies, which came to pass within less than forty years after. The cause of that dreadful judgment is assigned, because thou knewest not the time of thy Visitacion. Gods visitations are either of Wrath or Mercy, Exodus 32-33. Levitic 26. 16. Jer. 13. 3. of Mercy. Jer. 29. 10. It is plain that our Saviour useth the term here in the latter not the former sense, and that by Gods Visitacion of this People here, is meant his visiting them with his Prophets, by John the Baptist and by himself. Their not knowing of it, (here intended) was their not making use of it, not receiving, and embracing the Gospel. The contempt of the Gospel is the great cause of all those Miseries which come upon People in this Life, or shall come upon them in that Life which is to come.

45 And he went into the Temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought.

46 Saying unto them, * It is written, My house is the house of prayer: but ye have made it a den of thieves.

We have met with this before more fully. See the Notes on Mark 11. 13. 15. 16, 17.

47 And he taught daily in the temple. But * the chief priests and the scribes, and the chief of the people sought to destroy him.

48 And could not find what they might do: for all the people were very attentive to hear him. This our Saviour Preaching daily must be understood of a very few days, for it appeareth from John 12. 1. that he came to Bethany but six days before the Passover, now upon the Passover-day he Died, but for the intermediate time it is plain from the other Evangelists, that he was wont to spend the Day time at Jerusalem in the Temple, and at Night to return to Bethany. The chief Priests and the Scribes, and the chief of the People, sought to destroy him, only they stood in a little awe of the People, who were very attentive to hear him.

CHAP. XX.

AND it came pass, that on one of those days, as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the gospel, the chief priests and the scribes came upon him, with the elders.

2 And spake unto him, saying, Tell us, * By what authority doest thou these things? or who is he that 7. 27.

We have along the History of the Gospel observed, that the Scribes and Pharisees, took all advantages imaginable against our Saviour; failing in all their acts they now come to question his Authority, which seemeth not so much to have respect to his Preaching, as to his act in calling of the Bishops and Elders out of the Temple for as to Preaching, they seemed by the History of Scripture to have given a great liberty, especially if any had the repute of a Prophet.

3 And he answered, and said unto them, I will also ask you one thing; and answer me:

4 The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men?

5 And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then believed ye him not?

6 But if we say, Of men; all the people will stone us: for they be persuaded that John was a prophet.

7 And they answered, that they could not tell whence it was.

8 And Jesus said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

See the Notes on Mark 11. 28, 29. The substance of our Saviours answer is this. From whence had John his Authority? he Preached, and Baptized, who gave him his Authority? They had felt much such another Message to John, John 1. 21, 22, 23. was John's Authority ordinary or extraordinary? It is plain that he had no Authority from them, for then they would not have sent him to know who he was. He must therefore have it from Heaven, now if they had allowed John's Authority extraordinary, why should they allow Christ to be such, to whom John gave so large a testimony, and who confirmed his extraordinary Mission by Miraculous Operations, which we do not read that John ever did? Besides the Pharisees law that if they allowed John's Mission to be extraordinary, and from Heaven, they had obviously expolled themselves to a check, for not believing what he said, they therefore refuse to make any answer, and Christ refuseth also to satisfy them.

9 Then began he to speak to the people this parable: A certain Man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to husbandmen, and went into a far country for a long time.

10 And at the season he sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard: but the husbandmen beat him, and sent him away empty.

11 And again he sent another servant; and they beat him also, and entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty.

12 And again he sent the third; and they wounded him also, and cast him out.

13 Then said the Lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? I will send my beloved son: it may be they will reverence him when they see him.

14 But when the husbandmen saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is the heir: come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours.

15 So they cast him out of the vineyard, and killed him. What therefore shall the lord of the vineyard do unto them?

16 He shall come and destroy them, husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they said, God forbid.

17 And he beheld them, and said, What is this then that is written, * The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner.

18 Whosoever shall fall upon that stone, shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

We met with this Parable at large both in Mark 11. 33. to the end, and in Mark 12. 1. Its obvious Scope is to let them know, that God in righteous Judgment, for the Jews rejecting the Lord's Prophet, John the Baptist, and himself, who was in a few Days to be killed by them, would unchurch and destroy them, and rule up to himself a Church amongst the Gentiles, and that this was no more than was Prophecied of, Psalm 118. 22.

19 And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

20 And they watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor.

There is nothing in these verses, but what we before met with, and is opened in the Notes on Mark 11. 43, 46. or Mark 12. 12, 13. They let us see as in a Glass the Spirit, and Genius of wicked Men filled with Malice against the Gospel. They are continually seeking to destroy such as have any relation to Christ, and to effect their ends, they will judge no means unfair, and their great art to represent themselves as dangerous Persons to the Civil Government, so as if good Men find the false things they, have this to comfort them, That the Disciple is not above his Master, nor the Servant above his Lord.

21 And they asked him, saying, Master, we know that thou sayest and teachest rightly, neither acceptest thou the person of any, but teachest the way of God truly.

22 Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Cesar, or not?

23 But he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, Why tempt ye me?

24 Shew me a penny: Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, Cefars.

25 And he said unto them, Render therefore unto Cesar the things which be Cefars, and unto God the things which be Gods.

26 And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they marvelled at his answer, and held their peace.

This piece of History we have likewise met with both, in Mark 12. 16. and Mark 12. 13. See the explication of it there.

27 Then came to him certain of the Sadducees, which deny that there is any resurrection and they asked him, 28 Saying, Master, * Moses wrote unto us, If any mans brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

29 There were therefore seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and died without children.

30 And the second took her to wife, and he died childless.

31 And the third took her; and in like manner the seven also. And they left no children, and died.

32 Last of all the woman died also.

33 Therefore in the resurrection, whose wife of them is she? for seven had her to wife.

34 And Jesus answering said unto them, The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage:

35 But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage.

36 Neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection.

37 Now that the dead are raised, * even Moses shewed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

38 For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him.

See the Notes on Mark 12. 23. Ec. and on Mark 11. 18. Ec. where all the passages in this piece of History are fully opened. By equal unto the angels, in v. 36. we must not understand in all things, but in the thing mentioned, the number of the Elect shall be perfect; so that there shall be no need of Marrying, or going in Marriage, to multiply the number of Men. 2. There shall be no more wars and God. The Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, were dead at the speaking of those words, yet they were not so in Gods Eye, who was determined to raise them up in the last Day, and who with the same Eye beholds things past, present, and to come. But see more in the Notes before mentioned.

40 And after that, they durst not ask him any question at all.

The Scribes were the Jewish Doctors of the Pharisee Faction, and enemies to the Sadducees; they applauded our Saviours answer, as the Herodians before (in the case of the Tribute) so the Sadducees here are put to silence. He will now put the Scribes and Pharisees to silence.

41 And he said unto them, * How say they that Christ is Davids son?

42 And David himself saith, in the book of psalms. The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 43 Till I make thine enemies thy footstool.

44 David therefore calleth him Lord, how is he then his son?

The answer had been easy if the Scribes and Pharisees, who (Matthew saith) were there also, had owned Christ to be the Son of God. But this they did not own, and so (as Matthew tells us) ch. 22. 46. No Man was able to answer him a Word, neither durst any Man from that Day forth ask him any more questions. Thus Christ Nonplused all his Adversaries.

45 Then in the audience of all the people, he said unto his disciples,

46 Beware of the scribes, which desire to walk in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the highest seats in the synagogues, and the chief rooms at feasts:

47 Which devour widows houses, and for a shew make long prayers: the same shall receive greater damnation.

We have met with all this before, ch. 11. 42. Mark 12. 39, 40. See the Notes on those Texts.

CHAP. XXI.

AND he looked up, and saw the rich men casting their gifts into the treasury.

2 And he saw also a certain poor widow, casting in thither two mites.

3 And he said, Of a truth I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all.

4 For all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: but she of her penny hath cast in all the living that she had.

We met with this piece of History, Mark 12. 41, 42, 43, 44. Mark telleth us, that Christ was sitting right over against the Treasury, for other things necessary to be known. To understand this piece of History, see the Notes on Mark 12.

5 And as some spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones, and gifts, he said,

6 As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be throw down.

Matthew and Mark say, That some of his Disciples spake these words to him, and received this answer, as he was going out of the Temple. For the goodly Stones which the Disciples admired, we are told that there were some of them forty five Cubites long, five in depth, and six in breadth. The gifts here mentioned are called in the Greek, ἀραβικαὶα, not ἀραβικαὶα nor ἀραβία. The latter Word ἀραβία signified any Gifts, Money or Plate, Ec. which Men voluntarily offered, ἀραβικαὶα signified things accursed, or devoted to God, as all the goods of a Jew, Job 1. 7. but this Word signified such Gifts or Presents made to God, as might be hung up and exposed to open view. Our Lord to take of his Disciples Eyes from those gay and Sensual things, he saith, that one stone should not be left upon another; which how it was afterwards fulfilled within less than forty years. See the Notes on Mark 12. 1, 2, 3. and on Mark 13. 1, 2. God by that Providence not only destroying the vain confidence of the Jews, who took their Temple to be an Asylum, or Sanctuary for them from the Providence of God, or his justice rather, but also severely punishing them, for their Persecution of his holy ones; and also to let them know that the time was come, when God would put an end to all Types of the Messiah, and also to all that Worship, which could not make him that did the Service, perfect, as to the Conscience, but stood only in Meats and Drinks, and divers washings, and carnal Ordinances, imposed on them until the time of Reformation, Heb. 9. 10. See further, the Notes on Mark 12. 1. and Mark 13. 1.

7 And they asked him, saying, * Master, but what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass?

Mark saith, Peter, James, John, and Andrew asked him privately. Matthew brings two things more within the compass of their Question, viz. What shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the World. Our Saviour answereth this question from v. 8. to v. 32. The most of what he said, we have before

On, I have heavily defiled.

14. And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him.

See the Notes on Matth. 26. 17, 18, 19, and on Mark 14. 12.

15 And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you, before I suffer.

16 For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

17 And he took the cup and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among your selves.

18 For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come.

19 And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me.

20 Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament, in my blood, which is shed for you.

21 * But behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me, is with me on the table.

22 And truly the Son of man goeth * as it was determined: but two unto that man by whom he is betrayed.

23 And they began to enquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing.

See the Notes on Matth. 26. from v. 20, to v. 30. where is opened whatsoever Luke hath, that is not in the other Evangelists.

24 And there was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest.

Luke only taketh notice of this strife, at the time of their being in the Gethsemane; such a strife we read of, Matth. 18. 1. Chap. 23. 25. Mark 9. 33. and in this Gospel, Chap. 9. 46. by which it is apparent, that they had been more than once agitated by this point. But yet most Interpreters think that it is here placed by Luke out of order, and some Translate it so in this Text, There had been, not there was, and indeed we can hardly think it uncharitably of the Apostles, as to imagine of them, that immediately after their receiving, first the Passover, then the Lords Supper, their thoughts should be taken up with things of this nature, much less that they should discourse any such Subjects as this, especially all considering what our Saviour had told them, that he was betrayed into the Hands of Sinners. Something of our Saviours Answer prefilling upon them Brotherly Love, and mutual Serviceableness, each to other, was very proper to this time, which our Saviour (so spoken before) might at this time repeat, and Luke particularly to it might take notice of this content in this place.

25 And he said unto them, The Kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them, are called benefactors.

26 But ye shall not be so: * but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve,

27 For whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? * I am among you as he that serveth.

See the Notes on Matth. 20. 25, 26, 27. The Sum is, Our Saviour hereby teacheth all his Disciples (his Ministers especially) to avoid all Affliction of Rule and Dominion, as that which make Heathens rather than Christians, and the Kings of the Gentiles, rather than the Ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ. This Text giveth no Countenance to the levelling of all orders of Men. Magistracy is an ordinance of God, and ought to be upheld. Order also in the Church is to be observed, for God is the God of order; but no Minister of Christ ought to affect great Titles nor to Exercise a Dominion or Authority, 1 Pe. 5. 3. Our Work is to Feed the flock of Christ, taking the oversight of them not by Constraint, but willingly. Not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind: Neither as being Lords over Gods Heritage, but being Examples, 1st Th. 5. 12. 2d Cor. 4. 24. Not for that we have Dominion over your Faith, but we are helpers of your Joy. That the Ministers of Christ may not have Titles given them: speaking Honour and Reverence due to them, I do not know. But the reason is obvious, why they should not affect them to be fond of them: for Pride is a vain and vicious Affection, and more culpable in them than others. Their Works are but a Ministry to the Church in putting the Laws of Christ relating to it in Execution, and it is their greatest Honour to be Example. Nor doth this at all Degradate a Minister of Christ, for even Christ himself while he was upon the Earth, was not, as our Father said at Meat, Ye are all that served.

28 Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations.

29 And I * appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father * hath appointed unto me.

30 That ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and * sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

These Verses seem to contain: (tho in a few more Words) the substance of what we met with, Matth. 19. 28. There they are spoken as an answer to Peter, speaking on the behalf of himself, and the rest of the Apostles, who had forsaken all to follow Christ. Christ tells them there, that those which had followed him in the Regeneration, should the Son of Man should sit on the Throne of his Glory, should sit upon twelve Throns, judging the twelve Tribes of Israel. That time which our Lord calleth the Regeneration, is the time, when he had been giving a new Birth to the Church, Reforming the World by his Doctrine and holy Example. That time he here calleth the time of his Temptation, by which he meant Trials, Afflictions and Persecutions, as the Word is often taken in holy Writ, James 1. 12. Gal. 4. 14. 2 Pe. 2. 9. Rev. 3. 10. To promise of the Disciples (they were eleven of the twelve) to promote a Kingdom, a State of great Honour, and Dignity, as his Father had appointed him, and therefore they might safely themselves with Titles and qualities, of Ministers and Servants while they were here, and be content to meet with Troubles and Temptations, as he had done, 2d Hunger and Thirst, &c. when that time came which he had appointed, they should then Eat and Drink at his Table, they should sit upon Throns, judging the twelve Tribes of Israel. Terms expressive of that Rest and Satisfaction, that Glory, Honour, and Dignity, which the Saints in God shall in Heaven be possessed of.

31 And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, * Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you * as wheat:

32 But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

Our Lord directeth his Speech to Peter, as one who will by and by appear) had a greater confidence of himself than the rest expected, &c. as one who he therefore would fall more easily than the rest, tho' it appears, that in his Speech he had a respect to them all, for the Word You is in the Plural Number. The Devil had a mind to disturb them all by his Temptations: (that is here called Sifting) Christ hath his Fan in his Hand, and will Sift his Church, but his Sifting is to purge his Floor, he Sifts a particular Soul, to purify it from its Luils and Corruptions, but Satan sifteth the Soul and the Church merely to give them trouble, and to keep them from rest and quiet by continual motion and Agitation. This was he all concerned to take notice of, that we may both be continually prepared for the time of our Sufferings; and bless God who doth not satisfy Satans desires to sift us; for he hath the same mind to winnow us now, that he had to sift Peter and the rest of the Apostles. But (saith our Saviour) I have prayed that thy Faith fail not. There is a total and partial failing of Faith. Peter's Faith did fail in part; but the Seed of God did yet abide in him; his Faith did not wholly fail, so will it be with the Faith of every true Disciple of Christ, of great Temptation and Trial, their Faith may, as to some degree, fail, but totally it shall not. They may be perverted, but they shall again be converted. As the Apostle faith of the Bodies of the Saints, Rom. 8. 10, 11. And if Christ be in you, the Body is Dead, because of Sin, but the Spirit is Life because of Righteousness. But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the Dead, dwell in you, he shall raise up Christ from the Dead shall also quicken your Mortal Bodies by his Spirit here dwellers in you, may also be fail of their Souls. They have in them a Body of Death, and they may in an Hour be taken in them a Body of Death, and their gracious Habits may come to dye. But if the Spirit of God dwell in the Soul, he will again quicken their Souls by his Spirit, which dwelleth in them. And when thou art Converted strengthen thy Brethren. That is, when God hath recovered thee from thy fall, and made thee free thy Error, make an improvement of thy recovery out of the snare of the Devil, by admonishing others to take heed of the same confidence in themselves, and encouraging them not to despair, tho' they also may fall into Temptation; but that the Grace of God shall be sufficient for them.

33 And he said unto him, Lord, I am ready to go with thee both into prison, and to death.

34 And he said, I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.

This is more largely recorded by Matth. Chap. 26. 33, 34, 35; and by Mark Chap. 14. 27, 28, 29, 30. See the Notes on these places.

35 And he said unto them, * When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing.

36 Then said he unto them, But now he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one.

37 For I say unto you, that this that is written, * Mark 15. 28. must yet be accomplished in me, * And he was reckoned among the transgressors: For the things concerning me have an end.

38 And they said, Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, It is enough.

Those who interpret, v. 35, 36, as a Precept of our Saviours imposing a Duty upon his Disciples: or a Counsel concerning the providing Arms which they might use for the protection and defence of themselves, will not only find a difficulty to reconcile their notion of it, to several other precepts, and the Will of God declared by the Apostles practice, who never went about by force, and Arms to defend themselves in the first Plantation and Propagation of the Gospel; but also to Reconcile it to the fact Words of our Saviour, who said, when his Disciples told him they had two Swords, It is enough, which he would never have said, if he had intended any such thing; for two Swords was much too little to have conquered that Multitude of Adversaries, which the Disciples of Christ were to meet with. Our Saviour doth doubtless speak in a Figure, and all that he intendeth amoneth but to this. Hitherto I have been with you, and you have had my special protection; tho' you went out without a Purse, or a Scrip; yet you have wanted nothing; tho' you went without a Sword, yet none did you any harm. But the time is now come, when the pollution of your Affairs will be much altered; your Friends will be few, your Enemies many, therefore you stand concerned to make as good Preparation as you can do in these things, that are consistent with the general precepts that I have given you. The Tragedy will begin with me; for what a written of him must now be accomplished, Isaiah 53. 12. He was numbered amongst the Transgressors; I must be brought before Magistrates as a common Malefactor, and hanged on a Cross between two Thieves. And also things concerning me shall shortly have an end: you will need soon upon the Stage, and therefore prepare what in you lieth for the performance of your part.

39 * And he came out, and went, as he was wont, to the mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him.

Both Matthew and Mark say, he went to a place called Gethsemane, but that makes no difference, for whether Gethsemane signifies a Village, or a Garden, or a Valley, all agree it was at the Foot of the Mount of Olives. It was a place to which our Saviour had used to go ever since he came to Jerusalem, and lay in his way to Bethany. He went thither to pray, and his Disciples followed him.

40 And when he was at the place, he said unto them, * Pray, that ye enter not into temptation.

When he came to the Mount of Olives, he first setteth his Disciples to that Work, which at this Day was proper for them. Pray, that ye enter not into Temptation, that if it be the Will of God, you may be delivered from such an Hour of Trial as is so entering into, or at least that you may not be overcome by it. That my Trials which you will presently be come by, and your own which you shall hereafter meet with, may have no Power upon you to withdraw you from your Work in the Publication, or Profession of my Gospel. The other two Evangelists make mention of our Saviours taking Peter, and James, and John with him, yet more privately, Luke mentioneth not that but goeth on.

41 * And he was withdrawn from them about a furlongs cast, and kneeled down and prayed.

Whether from the Eight, or from Peter, James and John, also the Evangelist doth not tell us; but some are of opinion, that he took the three Disciples along, to join with him in Prayer, from whom some account might be given of the substance of his Prayer, which followed. I rather think he was alone.

42 Saying, Father, if thou be't willing, remove this cup from me: * nevertheless not my will, but thine be done.

We have a larger account given us of our Saviours Prayer, both by Matthew and Mark, Matth. 26. from 39. to 46. and Mark 14. from v. 35. to 42. See the Notes there.

43 And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him.

44 * And being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly; and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.

We have formerly opened these Verses in our Notes, on Matth. 26. 42, 43, 44. where we took them in, as being a part of the History of our Saviours praying before his passion.

45 And when he arose up from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow.

46 And said unto them, Why sleep ye? rise, and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

The Relations which Matthew and Mark give us, are both more particular, than that given us by Luke, to which we refer the Reader. Luke speaketh but of his praying once. Matthew faith he prayed thrice. Luke mentioneth nothing of his withdrawing with Peter, James and John, from the other Eight, Matthew and Mark both mention it. Luke maketh mention of an Angel appearing to him; of the Agony in which he was, and his sweating drops as it were of Blood, which neither Matthew nor Mark take notice of, yet we must not think, that either any one of the Evangelists, or all of them together give a perfect account of all the Words our Saviour used in these Prayers, only they tell us the Sum of them in different Words: but see the Annotations on Matth. 26. 39. and Mark 14. where we have fully considered whatsoever is said by any of the Evangelists upon this Argument.

47 And while he yet spake, * behold, a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus, to kiss him.

48 But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?

See the Notes on Matth. 26. 47. Chap. and Mark 14. 43.

49 When they which were about him, saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword?

50 And one of them * smote the servant of the high priests, and cut off his right ear.

51 And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him.

No other Evangelist but Luke hath this passage perfect. What he hath we have opened in our Notes, on Matth. 26. 41. Chap. because it tendeth to complete that part of the History there discoursed, concerning Christs being apprehended. Luke relates it with more Circumstances, telling us that it was Peter who drew the Sword, and that his Name whole Ear was cut off, was Malchus, and relateth some further Words used by our Saviour to Peter, which we shall further consider in their place. This ear of Peter might have cost him dear, for it made a Kingdom of Malchus take such notice of him, as he was very near being accused by him, until God puts them into our Harbs. Peter ought not only to have asked his Master if he should smite with the Sword; but also to have staid his Hand till Christ had given him an Answer.

52 Then Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders which were come to him, Be ye come out as against a thief, with swords and staves?

53 When I was daily with you in the temple, ye stretched forth no hands against me: but this is your hour, and the power of darkness.

See the Notes on Matth. 26. 53. and Mark 14. 48, 49. It speaketh a great degree of Rage and Malice against our Saviour, that so great Men, as the Chief of the Priests, and the Elders should come out at Mid-night, in the Company of the Officers and Soldiers to apprehend Christ. From these Verses it appeareth that some of them were there in the height of their Zeal.

54 Then took they him, and led him, and brought him into the high priests house. And Peter followed afar off.

55 And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and were set down together, Peter late down among them.

56 But a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him.

57 And he denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not.

58 And after a little while, another saw him, and said, Thou art also of them. And Peter said, Man I am not.

59 And about the space of six hour after, another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him; for he is a Galilean.

60 And Peter said, Man I know not what thou sayest. And immediately while he yet spake, the cock crew.

61 And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter, and Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

62 And Peter went out, and wept bitterly.

See the whole History of Peters denial of his Master, and of his Repentance, in our Notes on Matth. 26. from v. 69. to the end.

and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid.

See the Notes on Matth. 27. 57, 58.

* Matth. 27. 61. 54 And that day was the * preparation, and the Sabbath drew on.

Gr. ἡμερὰ τῆς παρασκευῆς, the Sabbath shined. What Preparation was here intended, whether to the weekly Sabbath of the Jews, (that it was most certainly) or to the Passover also, which some will have to have been this year put off to that Day, because of the concurrence of the Weekly and the Annual Feasts, the not determine, tho the most judicious Interpreters skilled in the Hebrew Writings, think the Passover this year was kept in its season, the Night before. But the Sabbath, that is the seventh Day drew on. The Greek Word signifies joined, the propriety of which term, hath cost Critics some pains to make out, for it rather begin to be Dark, then lighten, their Sabbath beginning after the setting of the Sun. Some think the Word referred to the evening Star, which began to shine. Others, that they call it a Lamp or Candle, which they were wont to set up, to signify the Luminous demonstration, the Light of Discrimination, which being set up in their several Families, the Sabbath was accounted to be begun. Others think it referred to the following Day. But there need not much labour in the case, for by the same reason that it is said: The Evening and the Morning made the Sabbath Day. The Sabbath might be said begin to be (that is to begin) when it began to be Dark, not taking the Word in a proper, but in a Metaphorical sense.

* Mark 15. 47. 55 And the women also * which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid.

* Exod. 20. 10. 56 And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested the sabbath-day, * according to the commandment.

See the Notes on Matth. 27. 61. It is Bea's observation upon these verses, That Christ being opposed by the Devil, and all his instruments, being now Dead, leaveth two or three poor Women, as it were in the Front of the Battle, intending within a very short time, without much ado, to Triumph over all these terrible adversaries.

CHAP. XXIV.

* Mark 16. 1. NOW upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them.

Mary Magdalene, and Mary the Mother of Joseph, were the two Women that took up their feat right over against the Sepulchre, to see where Christ was laid, Matth. 27. 61. Mark 15. 47. they had bought spices, some time of that Day after they knew he was Dead, or else they bought them immediately after his Burial, as they went home, for they rested on the Sabbath-Day, they laid now got some others into their Society, and came very early upon the first Day of the Week. (See the Notes on Matth. 23. 1. as to the particular time) intending to shew their last act of love to their Friend, by imbalming his Body.

2 And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre.

The stone which Joseph had rolled to the Mouth of the Sepulchre, when he had laid in the Body, Matth. 27. 60. and the Jews had sealed, v. 66. and which as they came walking they were so troubled about, how they should get it removed, Mark 16. 3. How it came to be rolled away Matth. 28. 1. tell us, ch. 28. v. 2.

3 And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

Probably when they entered in they saw no Angels, for one may reasonably suppose, that if they had, they would hardly have adventured to enter in, but at their coming out being furnished that the Body was not there, the Angels made themselves visible to them, for it followed.

4 And it came to pass as they were much perplexed thereabout, * behold, two men stood by them in shining garments.

5 And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they laid unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead?

6 He is not here, but is risen: * Remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee, 7 saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

8 And they * remembered his words.

These two Men were two Angels in humane shape. See the Notes on Matth. 28. 5, 6, 7.

9 * And returned from the sepulchre, and told * all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest.

10 It was Mary Magdalene, and * Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles.

11 And their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not.

12 Then arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulchre, and stooping down, he beheld the linen cloths laid by themselves, and departed, wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.

See the Notes on Matth. 28. 8, 9, 10. but more fully on John 20. 2, 3, 4. Gr. who repeateth this piece of History more largely than the rest. It is plain that scarce any of the Disciples gave credit to the first Relation of the Women; but yet, it being near by the City Peter and John thought it worth the while to go, and see. For though Peter alone be mentioned here, yet John is mentioned, John 20. 3, 4, 5. under the Notion of another Disciple; and he is said to have out-run Peter, and to have come first to the Sepulchre. But concerning that part of the History relating to the Resurrection, we shall relieve our selves till we come to John 20. We now pass on to a piece of History relating to the evidencing of Christ's Resurrection, which is neither touch'd by Matthew nor by Luke. Mark toucheth it shortly, ch. 16. 12, 13. After that he appeared in another form to two of them, as they walked, and went into the Country. And they went, and told it unto the residue; neither believed they them. We shall now hear Luke giving us a more full and perfect account.

Who tho' two were is variously guess'd; that the name of the one was Cleophas, appeareth from v. 18. Some will have the other to have been Luke, but by him in the beginning of his Gospel distinguisheth himself from Eye-Witnesses, ch. 1. v. 2. Some will have it to have been Nathaniel, others will have it to have been Simon, from v. 34. and 1 Cor. 15. 5. But these things are so uncertain, that all the instruction we can learn from them, is the Futility and uncertainty of Tradition. This Emmaus was from Jerusalem, about 60 furlongs, which make seven Miles, and an half according to our computation.

14. And they talked together of all these things which had happened.

There is nothing more ordinary, than for Persons walking and riding upon Roads, to make the present news of the time, the subject of their discourse, there had great things happened in Jerusalem, the Death of our Saviour was such, and tho' things which attended his Death were very extraordinary, and it is not at all to be wonder'd that a discourse of them, should fill every Mouth, especially every Disciple's Mouth.

15. And it came to pass, that while they communed together, and reasoned, * Jesus himself drew near, and went with them.

He overtook them upon the way, and joined himself to their Company. It is a good thing to be discoursing of Christ, it is the way to have his presence and company with us.

16 But their eyes were holden, that they should not know him.

God

God by his Providence restrained their Eyes, that tho' they saw a Man, yet they could not discern who he was. We may learn from hence that the Form or Figure of Christ's Body after his Resurrection, was not changed. His Body had the same Dimensions, the same Quantity, Colour and Figure, and was in itself a proper object for humane Eyes, for otherwise there had been no need for their Eyes to be held. From hence also we may learn the Influence, which God hath upon all our Members and Senses, and how much we depend upon God for a daily Power, to Execute our natural Faculties. Our Lord had no mind that these two Disciples should at first discern who he was, that he might draw out their following Discourses, and from them take occasion to prove from Scripture the certainty of his Resurrection, from this Text and draw out their following Discourses concerning him. From this Text we may gather, how hard the Lutherans are put to it, to maintain the Real presence of the Body of Christ, where-ever the Sacrament of the Lords Supper is Administered, for this they must maintain. That altho the Body of Christ after his Resurrection was the same that was Crucified, and so obvious to Sense, yet he had not only a power to make it invisible, and visible, which we grant, but that he hath also a power to multiply it, and make it in one and the same instant, to be in many places as his Supper is administered in, and also that he willeth it at the same time, for it is apparent from hence, that it was not at all times imperceptible; it might at this time have been seen, had not the Disciples Eyes been held, that they could not know him.

17 And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?

Not that he from whom the secrets of no Hearts are hidden, did not know what they were saying about, but that he had a mind to hear them repeated from them, that from their Repetition of them, he might take the better advantage to instruct them.

18 And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering, said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?

19 And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, * which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God, and all the people:

The things which had lately happened in Jerusalem were so many, and so unusual, that the Disciples wonder that any one coming from Jerusalem should ask what things? they therefore ask him, if he were a mere stranger in Jerusalem, coming from some other Country, or from some remote part of Judea or Galilee, or if he were the only Man, who had been unconcerned in what was the common Discourse, both of the Town and Country? Still our Saviour draws out the Discourse from them, by asking them what things? They tell them concerning Jesus of Nazareth, a great Prophet, mighty both in Words and Deeds. In which Parable Stephen Celebrated Matth. Acts 7. 22. That it, one who did not only in an Extraordinary manner receive the Will of God unto Men, but also did many great and mighty Works, and lived a most Holy and most Exemplary Life, and Conversion, so that he was not only highly favoured of God, but in great repute, and Estimation also amongst the People.

20 And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

21 But we trusted that it had been he * which should have redeemed Israel: And beside all this, to day is the third day since these things were done.

It is from hence evident, that as yet they neither had a true Notion of Christ as God-man in one Person, nor yet of the Messiah, but still remain'd in an opinion of a Temporal Deliverance, to be effected for the Jews by the Messiah, when he should come. The Words also shew'd a great weakness in the Disciples Faith as to Christ, they speak as if they were quite out of Breath, and their Faith began to fail. We were say they once of the mind, and maintained some Hope that this Jesus of Nazareth, had been he, whom God had designed for the Messiah, and now it is the third Day, since these things were done. This mention of the third Day, is a good Argument to prove that there were some old Disciples of Christ, who had taken notice of his Promise or Prophecy, that he should Rise again the third Day, Chap. 18. 33. They ought to have had patience till Night, and to have considered, that tho the third Day were begun, yet it was not yet past.

22 Yea, and * certain women also of our company * Mat. 28. 8. made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre. Mark 16. 10. John 20. 18.

23 And when they found not his body, they came, saying that they had also seen a vision of angels which said that he was alive.

24 And certain of them which were with us, went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said; but him they saw not.

It is plain from the Relation of these two Disciples, that they had whatever might conduce to a Moral Satisfaction. They had the Revelation of the Word, from the Mouth of Christ himself. They had Evidences from the Women, from the Apparition of Angels, from some among themselves, that his Body was not there. The Angels said he was Risen. Why do they hesitate then? Why do they not believe? Is the fault in the Personages of their Wills? had they no mind to believe, that the thing they had hoped, longed, waited for, was true? Certainly there was nothing they more desired. Let the Patrons of the Power of Man's Will to believe, or perform any Actions Spiritually good, tell us (if they can) what could hinder these Disciples actual believing the Resurrection of Christ, but the Imperiency of their Wills, God not yet pleasing to Influence, and assist their Wills actually to believe, what they had the greatest Propensions, and Inclinations imaginable to have believed.

25 Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken.

26 * Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?

27 And beginning at * Moses, and * all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures, the things concerning himself.

By our Saviour's form of reprehending his Disciples, we may learn 1. That it is not every saying, Thou Fool, but every saying of it from a Root of hatred, Malice and Anger, which our Saviour makes to be a Breach of the sixth Commandment, Matth. 23. 14. 5. Our Saviour's Reprehension of them was out of a Principle of Love, and a Root of good Will to them. 2. That the best of us are very slow of Heart to believe what cometh to us upon Dan. 9. 24. the mere credit of a Divine Revelation. It is also observable Mich. 7. 20. not to be rejected by Christians, they also have much concerning Christ; out of them Christ instructeth these two Disciples in the things concerning himself.

28 And they drew nigh unto the village, whither they went: and he * made as though he would have gone further.

29 But * they constrained him, saying, Abide with us, for it is towards evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them.

I do not understand how some conclude from hence the lawfulness of dissembling, or telling a lye in some Cases, because the Evangelist saith, our Saviour made as tho he would have gone further, and did not; for without doubt our Saviour had gone further, if the Disciples had not been urgent with him to have tarry. Nor did he tarry long there, as we shall hear by and by.

30 And it came to pass as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.

31 And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and || he vanished out of their sight.

Some would have this Bread to be Sacramental Bread, as if our Lord at this time Celebrated his Supper, and some of the Papists are mightily Zealous for that Interpretation, thinking that they have in it a mighty Argument, to justify their Lane Administration of it in one kind (for here is no mention of the Cup at all) but they do not consider, that this Text will prove (if it be taken with relation to the Supper) more than they they would have it, as. 1. That priests may Consecrate, without Wine, which themselves will not grant, tho they say that both Elements being Consecrated, the People sufficiently partake if they share but in one. 2. It will also prove that a Priest may Consecrate, without using those substantial Words This is my Body. But it is a most improbable thing, that our Saviour coming just out of his Journey, should tell upon his Administration of this Ordinance. The Text is certainly to be meant of Bread, which our Saviour never took without a previous Blessing of it, Matth. 14. 19. How their Eyes were opened, the Evangelist tells us. Some think they knew him by his form of Bleating. It is a wonder then they did not know him before by his Style, in three or four Hours Discourse by the way. Others think they knew him by taking upon him the Office of the Master of the Feast. To bless the Table, and to serve to the Guests. But all this is vain. He withdrew the Veil from their Eyes, which alone hindered their discerning him before, for the Object was visible, only the Medium of their sight was indispensible, and he unveiled out of their sight. Our Saviour had now obtained his end, viz. to satisfy them that he was indeed risen, now he disappeared, so that he had a power to make his Body imperceptible to the Disciples Sense is out of doubt.

32 And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures.

There was a mighty difference no doubt, betwixt Christ's Preaching, and his Ministers; he Preached as one who had Authority, not as the Scribes, not as ordinary Ministers, but with more Majesty and Power; but as to the Efficacy of his Words, that depended upon his Will, where he pleased to put forth such Efficacious Grace, there his Words became effectual, where he did not, they were not so: Christ Preached in the hearing of hundreds, who yet continued Unbelievers, and Perished in their Unbelief. There is a great deal of difference also between a Minister's Preaching and another's; some kind of Preaching of its self makes Mens Hearts to Fly, others make them to Burn, but where Preaching makes our Hearts to Burn within us, Christ throws in the Coal, which the best Preacher doth not blow up; only the Spirit of God is pleased to work (as Erasmus faith) seminum quod nascitur est Organum, according to the Instrument it worketh by, and to Concur with Rational and Spiritual means, in order to Rational and Spiritual ends. But wherever any Soul is Baptized with Fire, or burning a Seal, it is also Baptized with the Holy Ghost, Christ will not always Cure Blind Eyes with Clay and Spittle (tho he did it once). These were Disciples before the Fire was kindled in their Hearts, Christ's Preaching did but blow it up. We ought to speak in our Preaching, lo to open, and apply the Scriptures as our Discourses, may have a rational tendency, to make the Hearts of our hearers to Burn within them, not so to make them Dead, and Sleepy, and Cold, or like warm; and then to know that it must be Christ's Work to Inflame them, when we have said all that we can say.

33 And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them, 34 Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.

35 And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

The 34. v. compared with, 1 Cor. 15. 5. makes some great Authors think, that Simon was one of the two, and that Cleopas (who was the other) spake this. They make no stay at Emmaus, but come presently to Jerusalem and acquaint the Disciples. That for certain, Christ was Risen, and that he had appeared to them in the way, and was known of them at their breaking of Bread.

36 And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

Of this appearance of Christ, Mark speaks, Ch. 16. 14. and John, Ch. 20. 19, 20. The Salutation, which he uttered to them was comfortable amongst the Jews, and answereth our God save you, or God be with you. It was an appreciation of all Blessing, and Happiness, which they comprehended under the name of Peace.

37 But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit.

Spirits sometimes (by Gods permission, or direction) assumed humane shapes. They feign an humane shape, and not able on the sudden to conceive, how an humane Body should come into the midst amongst them, without any more noise, or notice taken of it, were affrighted, as we usually are, at the sight of apprehended Apparitions. From hence we may conclude, That either the World, and the best Men in it, have been in all Ages deceived, and a few Atheists have been wiser than them all, or there are such Beings as Spirits.

38 And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled, and why do thoughts arise in your hearts?

39 Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.

40 And when he had thus spoken, he shewed them his hands and his feet.

If either the Papists, or the Lutherans could shew us Christ's Hands or Feet, while they impose upon us to believe, that Christ's Body is really present at, or in the Lord's Supper, they would not so frigate us, nor make so many thoughts arise in us as they do, about their apprehensions of the Nature of a Body. But while the Papists allow us to Handle, and to taste the Bread, and we find no such things, and the Lutherans touch our Eyes to be open, and we can see no such thing, we cannot but conclude that the Body of Christ which they talk of, must certainly be a Spirit, which (according to our Saviour's notion) is a substance which hath neither Flesh nor Bones, as we see the Body, they would have us to believe hath not; that is to say, that the Body they talk of, is no Body. Our Saviour here proreth that it was his true Body which appeared to them, because, 1. It had integral parts, Hands and Feet. 2. Because it might be seen. 3. It might be handled. 4. It had Flesh and Bones, which a Spirit hath not. Then he shews them his Hands and Feet. So then our Saviour did not think, that the Judgment of our Senses was to be rejected, concerning the Nature of Bodies, and his Body in particular, and that in its State of Exaltation, when it was raised from the Dead. Do any of them say that Christ's Body has come through the Door, or it could not have been here? How shall that be proved? We can easily tell them how his Body might be in the midst of them, tho it were not discerned while he was there, even as the Eyes of the two Disciples were held, so, 16. that they could not discern Christ, so the Eyes of the Disciples might be held now, till he was in the midst amongst them.

41 And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, * Have ye here any * John 11. 26. meat?

42 And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honey-comb.

43 And he took it, and did eat before them.

Believed not for Joy, yet if they had not now believed, they doubtless would not have rejoiced, but their Faith was the cause of their Joy; yet the Excess of their Joy was the hinderance of their Faith, lo dangerous are the excessive motions of our Affections. Christ here gives them another Evidence of the truth of his Body, he did Eat with them. (tho very ordinary Course) Diet a piece of broiled Fish, and a piece of an Honey-comb (such a Meal as we read of that he had at the Lake of Thiberis, John 21. 9. He did not Eat to uphold, but only to refresh his Life. Thus when he had raised the Daughter of Jairus, Ch. 8. 55. he bid them give her something to Eat; and for this Lazarus fate at Meas with the rest, John 12. 2. and Peter proves the Resurrection of Christ from their Eating and Drinking with him, Acts 10. 41. Let not profane Wits seek Reasoning, inquiring what became of this Meat? See. Let them first tell us what became of the Meat the Angels did Eat with Abraham, Gen. 18. 8. and learn to believe, that it was eaten with the Power of God to Annihilate again that Meat, which was not necessary for the sustentation the body of Christ now freed from all the cravings of Natural Appetite, tho he did Eat to satisfy them, that he was truly risen from the Dead.

44 And he said unto them, * These are the words, which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, * Ch. 1. 2. that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms concerning me.

The Jews ordinarily divided the Old Testament into the Law, the Prophets, and the Holy Writings, which they called the Hagiographa. The Book of Psalms was one of the last sort, and one of the most noted amongst them: so as by these three Terms our Saviour understands all the Scriptures of the Old Testament. He tells them, that he had before his Death, while he conversed with them, told them that all things (which were very many) which were found in any of these Books concerning him must be fulfilled, he had told them so, Chap. 18. 31. Matth. 16. 21. & 17. 22. & 20. 18. Mark 9. 31. & 10. 34.

45 Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures.

He did not open their Understanding, without the Scriptures, he feeds them thither, and he knew the Scriptures would not sufficiently give them a Knowledge of him, and the things of God, without the Assistance, and Illumination of his Spirit, they are truly taught of God, who are taught by his Spirit to understand the Scriptures. Christ gives a great Honour to the Scriptures. The Devil Chasteth those Souls whom he persuades to cast away the Scriptures in Expectation of a teaching by the Spirit. The Spirit teacheth by, not without, not contrary to the Holy Scriptures.

46 And said unto them, * Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day.

All the Divine Predictions are certain, and infallible. The Jews did maliciously and freely prosecute our Saviour to Death, and God did certainly foresee how their Wills would be determined, and the Event was accomplished accordingly.

47 And that repentance, and * remission of sins should be preached in his name, amongst all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

48 And * ye are witnesses of these things.

The few Words in v. 47. are comprehensive of the great duty of the Apostles, 1. To preach Repentance and Remission of Sins. 2. In Christ's Name. 3. To all Nations. 4. Beginning at Jerusalem. They were to Preach Repentance, that is, a turning from Sinful Courses, into a Course of Life Consonant to the Will of God, and Remission of Sins, that is, upon Repentance, they they were to Preach in his Name, which is upon Repentance, they they were to Preach by his Authority, 2 Cor. 5. 20. To be Ambassadors for Christ, Stewards of Mysteries, or else it may refer to Repentance and Remission of Sins, which are to be Preached in his Name, for the sake of Merits and Satisfaction. They were to Preach this to all Nations. This was prophesied plentifully, Psalm. 2. 8. Isa. 49. 6. Dan. 7. 14. Hof. 2. 23. Joel 2. 32. This was a piece of Divine Revelation, which Christ had, till this time, concealed in a great Measure, when he sent out the Twelve, Matth. 10. 5. He commanded them not to go to the Gentiles. Beginning at Jerusalem, that is, amongst the Jews. He was prophesied of under the Notion of a King, to be set upon the Lords Holy Hill of Sion. So Psalm. 110. 2. Isaiah 2. 3. & 28. 16. & 60. v. 1. in pursuance of this, we shall find the Apostles Preaching only in Judea, till they had judged themselves unworthy of Eternal Life, then they turned to the Gentiles, Acts 13. 38. 46.

49 And behold, * I send the promise of my father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be indued with power from on high.

It is questioned by some, but by the promise of the Father, our Lord meant the promise of the Spirit, as it came down in the Days of Pentecost. This Effusion of the Spirit was promised under the Old Testament, Isaiah 44. 3. Jerem. 31. 33. Ezek. 36. 27. Most eminently, Joel 2. 28. (The Apostle himself interpreting the Prophets. Acts 2. 16, 17, 18.) See also Acts 1. 8. Where the fulfilling of this promise of the Father, as it is call'd, v. 4. is put before— and ye shall be Witnessed unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in Judea, and in Samaria, and is also expounded by, and ye shall receive Power, after the Holy Ghost is come upon you. Our Lord altho had said, I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever. In this Text he saith, that he will send him; so also John 15. 26. and Ch. 16. 7. etc. by confirming his Disciples in this. That he was equal with the Father, and that the Holy Ghost was sent by the Father and him, yet sent by the Father upon the Prayer of the Son, and in his Name, John 14. 16, 26. This Holy Spirit is also called Power from on high, the power of the highest, Luke 1. 35. But here the Gift of the Holy Ghost, may be understood as also in Acts 1. 8. where this Power is said should be received after that the Holy Ghost should come upon them, until this time should come, which was in the Days of Pentecost, Acts 2. 1. The Disciples were bound to stay at Jerusalem, which accordingly they did. And we may from hence conclude, that these Words of our Saviour were spoken to his Disciples, after his appearance to them in Galilee, (of which Luke saith nothing) which was the place where (as most think) he was seen of above five hundred Brethren at once, 1 Cor. 15. 6.

50 And he led them out as far as to Bethany: and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them.

51 * And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven.

This must be understood to have happened forty days after our Saviour's Resurrection, for so Luke himself tells us, Acts 1. 3. then he led them out as far as Bethany, not the Village Bethany, but that part of the Mount of Olives, which belonged to Bethany. Our Saviour had been often there praying, from thence, he now ascended into Heaven, and raised up his Hands and blessed them. Some think that by Blessing, here is meant Praying; and the lifting up of his Hands, was accommodated, to that religious Action. Others think that Blessing here signifieth a more Authoritative Act; and that his lifting up of his Hands, was a stretching out of his Hands, as a sign of that effectual Blessing of them. While he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up to Heaven, that is, he moved upward, as if he had been carried, for it is certain that our Saviour ascended by his own Power. Luke saith, Acts 1. 9. He was taken up, and a Cloud received him out of their sight, as Elijah, 2 Kings 2. 11. Went up to Heaven in a Whirlwind. So Christ went up in a Cloud, but with this difference Christ ascended by his own power, Elijah could not without the help of an Angel.

53 And were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God. Amen.

We never before read of any Act of Adoration, which the Disciples performed to Christ. Their Faith was now come to the highest pitch. They did no longer look upon him only as one sent of God, a great Prophet, nor only as the Son of David, the promised Messiah. In the mean time not rightly taking the notion of the Messiah, but looking upon him as one who should be a Temporal Saviour, and deliver of his People, they now believe him to be the Eternal Son of God, being so manifested by his Resurrection from the Dead, and Ascension into Heaven before their Eyes. According to his Commandment they return to Jerusalem, full of Joy. And were continually in the Temple praising and blessing God, Amen, Acts 1. 12, 13. it is said, that they being returned, they went into an offer Room, and continued in Prayer and Supplication. Some think that this offer Room, was appendant to the Temple. But continually here may reasonably be interpreted often, or ordinarily, or at Temple Hours of prayer as the Morning, and Evening Sacrifice, are called the Continual Burnt-Offering,

Exod. 29. 42. Num. 28. 3. Their work was to praise and Bless God. It is not said for what, but easily understood : as for other mercies, so more especially for his sending the Messiah for our Redemption, and the Confirmation, and perfecting their Faith in him.

St. JOHN.

The ARGUMENT

The Penman of this Gospel is generally taken to have been John the Son of Zebedee, Matth. 10, 2, nor either John the Baptist, or John formed Mark, Act. 15, 37. He was a Person mightily honoured by Christs personal favours, and therefore often called the beloved Disciple; you may read of these Favours in these Scriptures following, Matth. 17, 1. Luk. 9, 28. and 22. Joh. 13, 23, 24, and 19, 25, 26, and 20, 1, 2. Act. 3, 3; Act. 13, 4; Gal. 2, 9. Thus far the Scripture guideth us: He is thought to have gone to, and continue in Asia till the third of the ten Persecutions in the time of Trajan; he was by Domitian banished into Pathmos, where he wrote the Revelation.

The time when he wrote this Gospel, is uncertain; some think about the latter part of his Life; he died the last of all the Apostles, judged about an hundred Years after the Birth of Christ. It is said that the heretics of Ebiion and Cerintus, who denied Christs Divinity, and of the Nicolaitans, who held many absurd things about his Person, gave occasion to the writing of this Gospel; himself mentioning the Doctrine of the Nicolaitans, Rev. 2. 6. and Ebiion and Cerintus are thought to be those Arch-heresies which he in his Epistles, especially 2d. and 3d. of John, has so often and so strongly rebuked.

Two things are offered of him : 1. That he suffers more on the proof of Christ's Divinity, than any of the Evangelists ; producing his Miracles most evidently to prove it. 2. That he mentions very little reported by the other Evangelists ; to which I think may be added, that he delivers the History of the Gospel after Christ's Resurrection, more fully than any of them ; he gives us also a more distinct account of the four Passovers happening after Christ's Baptism : The necessity of Faith in Christ, and Regeneration, the Doctrine of our Mystical Union with Christ ; the ending and end of the holy Spirit's Mission, and the advantage that the Apostles and others should receive from it. His Gospel is most particularly remarkable for the sublimeness and mysteryfulness of the matter, and sweetness of his Phrase.

CHAP. I.

IN the beginning  $a$  was the word  $b$ , and the word was with God  $c$ , and the word was God  $d$ .

that beginning which Mofes mentioneth, Gen. 1. 1. the beginning of all things, who was the foundation of the World were said, Prov. 8. 27, 28. the beginning of Time; for before that, was no measure of Time, all was Eternity; It was the Word, that is, the Eternal Son of God, the Lord Jesus Christ, of whom more is spoken afterward. Nor is Christ in this Text also called the Word, but 1 John 1. 1. the Word of life, in Revel. 19. 13. and there are some who think he is so called, Luke 1. 2. comparing that Text with 2 Pet. 1. 16. as also Plaf. 6. 36. Nor is it an improper term by which to express the Son of God; for it both expresseth something of his Ineffable Generation, as the Word is beget of the Father's thoughts, and is the express Image of his Father, and also his Office, as John 1. 3. *He by whom all things were made, and he that sustains all things, and he that reveals his Father to us, Matth. 11. 27. and there are many (if they be not too curious in their notion) who think David by that phrase, *2 Sam. 22. 3.

who will not allow Christ to be a distinct subsistence, or Person from his Father; it also denoteth the Son's co-existence, and his equality with his Father; and yet, his Finality in the Father; for God is not said to have been with the Father, but the Word was with God, which also speaks of the unity and consent between them. I Left any should say, What but God can be Eternal; or be said to have been and had an existence in the beginning of the World? The Evangelist addeth, That the Word was God; that is, the person or subsistence spoken of, and intended by him, was the Divine Being, which is but one, tho' in it there be three distinct subsistences; all make but One, and the same Divine Being. The first thing spoken here of Christ, attributed to him Eternity: The second speaks his Relation to the Father; he speaks the Oneness and Sameness of his Essence with that of the Father. The term God, which in the foregoing words is to be taken personally for God the Father, is here to be taken Essentially, as it signifieth the Divine Being.

e These words of the Evangelist are a further Confirmation and explication of what the Evangelist said before; after the Eternity of the Son, and the Religion of the Father; ther, and oness of Efence with the Father; whether the Evangelist forewarned by the Spirit of God, did add this repetition to fore-arm Christians against those Errors which did afterward trouble the Church, I cannot say; but certain it is, That these words do effectually confute the Eumoni-ans, who distinguished betwixt the Word which in the Beginning was with God, and that Word by which all things were made; and the Arians, who make the Father to have made the Son; as also the Anomians, who would make the Son, and the Son diverse both in Nature and Will. Some others, who this Verbe a transition to death, and the enite to be, This Father was manifested in the World from the Beginning of the World; but this Son was manifested to be manifested in the Flesh: Thus John 1. 2. it is said, He was with the Father, and was manifested unto us. He was manifested in the flesh, 1 Tim. 3. 16.

3 * All things were made by him f; and with- * Rev. 4. 11.
out him was not any thing made that was made g.

the want of Wine, that it was a family where the had either a coultant charge, or the charge for that day.

2 And both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage.

c Whether only the five Disciples mentioned in the former Chapter, or some others also, the Scripture doth not say. Christ and his Disciples being at this Marriage-feast, both lets us know, that feasting at such a time is proper, and that the most severe Religious persons may lawfully be present at such meetings, only they are obliged to keep to rules of Frugality, Modesty, and Sobriety, to a breach of which possibly such meetings may give more temptations.

3 And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus faith unto him. They have no wine d.

e The word wanted may as well be translated coming short, or behind, as wanting; and so some think it is to be understood; but d Mary tells Jesus, they had no Wine; they either had none, or the deficient it came short; they had not enough. It lets us know the Frugality of him who made the Feast. But whether Mary told her Son of it, in expectation that he should supply it by a Miracle, or that he should entertain the Company with some Pious discourse, while the want should be supplied, is not to settle to determine; that which seems to oppose the first, and the most generally received opinion, is, That this was the first Miracle he wrought, which we have upon record; nor had our Saviour by any words given her hope to see any miraculous Operations from him; for the same say, he had, from the last verse of the former Chapter; yet the words can hardly be strained to such a sense; nor doth it appear that Mary was in Judea to hear them. But yet it seems probable, she had some such Expectation, both from our Saviour's answer, v. 5, and from her saying to the Servants, v. 4. Whatever he saith unto you, do it; and the Christ had as yet done no public miracle; yet what the Virgin might have seen of him in thirty years time, while he lived at home with her, we cannot tell.

e That it was ordinary with the Jews, speaking to Women, to call them by the name of their Sex, is plain from Math. 15. 28. Luk. 12. 11, 12. and 22. 37. Job. 4. 11, 12. But that speaking to their Relations, they were wont to own their Relation in their Compellation, Isaiah is also evident from 1 King. 2. 20. Ask on, my Mother. So as our Saviour here calling the blessed Virgin, Woman, not Mother, is agreed by most, to signify to her, that in this thing he did not own her as his Mother, and so clothed with an authority to command him. And indeed so much of the next words signify, which is a form of Speech that both signifies some displeasure for her unreasonable interrupting him, and so that she had no right nor authority upon him in this thing. See the use of the same Phrase, Judg. 11. 12. 2 Sam. 16. 10. Exra. 4. 3. Math. 8. 29. and 27. 19. None was more obedient and respectful to his Parents, than our Saviour, Luk. 2. 51. therein fulfilling the Will of God, Jer. 9. 3. 13, 14. but in the business of his calling, he regarded them not, Math. 12. 48. Luk. 2. 49. and hath thereby taught us our Duty, to refer our Obedience to our heavenly Father, before our Obedience to any earthly Relation, Mat. 10. 37. Luk. 14. 26. He hath also hereby taught us, that the blessed Virgin is not to be preferred before her Son, (as the Papists do). g Besides this, our Lord giveth another reason for his not present hearkning to his Mother; either, because the time was not yet come to work miracles publicly; or to show her, that he was not to prescribe the time to him when he should work miraculously; thereby also shewing us, that for things in this Life, we are God's leisure; yet by this expression he also gives her some hopes, that he would in his own time supply this want.

b She saith by these words, declareth her confidence, that Christ (notwithstanding the Repulse he gave her) would supply this want; and therefore taking no notice of Christ's reprehension of her, the orders the Servants to be absolutely Obedient to him, doing, without dispute, whatsoever he bid them; and indeed this is the Obedience which we all owe to God and Jesus Christ.

6 And there were set there six water-pots of stone; after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins a piece k.

k The Jews were wont in their Dining rooms, to have Water-pots standing; whether one for every guest, upon which account some think here were six) doth not appear. A For, the content of these Vessels, it is uncertain; the reason is, because the Jewish measures, both for things dry and liquid, are much unknown to us, most Countreys varying in their measures. According to our measures, these Vessels should contain three Hogheads, or near it; but it is not probable, that so great Vessels of Stone should stand in a room; the end of their standing there, was for the people to wash in, before they did eat, Math. 15. 2. Mar. 7. 3. and to wash their Vessels in, v. 4. We are certain of the number of the Vessels, but not of the content of them. Some say, they held to hold four measures, as being turned into Wine, was enough for 150. Persons; but we can make no certain Judgment of it.

7 Jesus faith unto them, Fill the water-pots with water l. And they filled them up to the brim m.

l Either the Water was defiled by some Pious washing in it, or else the Vessels were not full. Our Lord commands them to be filled, the Water-pots, not Wine vessels, with Water, pure Water; he commands them all to be filled by the Servants, who could not do the miracle, that there was nothing in the Vessels but pure Water, there was no new Creature to be produced; he doth not therefore command the production of Wine out of nothing; but only the transformation of a Creature already existent, into a Creature of another kind. The Servants dispense not his commands, nor ask any reason of his command, but yield that ready and absolute Obedience which we all of us owe to Divine Precepts. They fill them, and so fill, that they could hold no more.

8 And he saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governorour of the feast n. And they bare it o.

n The Jews had one who was to order the affairs of their Feast, and who is upon record called the Master, or Governorour of it; to whom our Saviour directed, that some of this newly-made Wine should be carried; either that they might not suspect it was by some art provided by him, or because he was of the best Judgment to observe to him, or because he was of the best Judgment to observe to his commands, which they had before yielded.

9 When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine p, and knew not whence it was, but the servants which drew the water, knew q; the governorour of the feast called the bridegroom, p Our Saviour's action, by which he turned the Water into Wine, being not obvious to the senses of any; but only the secret motion of his Will, willing the thing to be, is not recorded, only the effect, and the consequent of it are. The Papists would from hence argue, that the Bread in the Sacrament, may be called Bread, tho it be transubstantiated, as the Water here is called Water, tho it were turned into Wine; but it must be observed, that is not here called Water, without the addition of the new made Wine; we have no such addition in the Gospel, where the Sacramental Bread is called Bread; it is not said, the Bread which now is turned into the flesh of Christ; nor doth the Scripture any where (as here) attest any such Transubstantiation. q The Governorour of the Feast had a Cup of Wine presented to him, but knew not whence it came, only the Servants, who by Christ's command first filled the Vessels, and drew out this Cup full, they knew.

10 And faith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine r; and when men have well drunk s, then that which is worse: but thou hast kept the good wine until now t.

r The Governorour calls the Bridegroom (at whose call the Provision for the Feast was to be provided) and mislead him, that he seemed to have done contrary to the common practice of such as made Feasts; for they used to bring forth their best Wine first, when new Palates were quickest, and least adulterated; and worse f after that they had drunk well; so the word substantiated signifies, (as appears by the Septuagint Translation of the Hebrew word to signify, Gen. 43. 34. Hag. 1. 6. Not only men are dipping themselves with Wine, (which it also sometimes signifies), and this speaketh our Translation of it, 1 Cor. 11. 21. are drunken, Something hard, the word not necessarily be to the Primitive Church of Corinth, who can think, that it would permit persons actually drunken to the Lords table. But the custom, it seems, was, if they had any Wine worse than other, to bring it out to their Guests after that the edge of their Palates was a little blunted with the taste of better. s Now this Bridegroom, as the Governorour of the Feast (who knew nothing of the Miracle) thought, had kept his briskest and most generous Wine to the last, thereby giving a great Approbation of the Miracle, not only owning it to be true Wine, but but much better than they had had before at the Feast.

11 This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee x, and manifested forth his glory w; and his disciples believed on him x.

x The feast is not, That this was the first Miracle which Christ wrought in Cana of Galilee; but this was the first Miracle which Christ wrought after he was entered upon the public Ministry, and it was wrought in that Cana, which is within the confines of Galilee, either in the lot of Zebulon or Affers; yet there are some, who would not have it the first Miracle which Christ wrought, but the first which he wrought in that place, but there is no reason for such an Interpretation; for then there had been no reason for the following words, for Christ did not manifest his glory there only; tho some object those wonderful, or miraculous things, happening at our Saviour's Birth, of which we read, Math. 2. 9. Luk. 2. 11. Yet as some distinguish betwixt mira and miracula; so others give a more plain and satisfactory answer, telling us those were miraculous Operations, more proper to the Father and the Spirit, whereby attesting the Deity of Christ, than to Christ considered as God-man. This was the first of those miraculous Operations which were wrought by Christ Jesus as God-man, by which he manifested his Glory, the Glory mentioned, chap. 1. 14. as of the only begotten of the Father; his Divine Majesty and Power. x And his Disciples, who before believed on him, Job. 1. 41, 42. now more firmly believed on him, Job. 14. 1. as Mediators. In Scripture that is often said to be, which doth not commence, but increase from that time and occasion.

y Capernaum was a City lifted up to Heaven, for merits of all sorts, which Christ foretold, Math. 11. 22. should be brought down to Hell for their contempt of his Doctrine and Miracles. It was in the Tribe of Naphthali, whose Lot was contiguous to Zebulon, and lay on the North-Est of it, a place where Christ afterwards Preached much, and wrought many miracles, Math. 8. 13, 14. and 9. 18. Mar. 2. 1. and 5. 22. a place brought to low in Heaven time, that it trace consisted of seven poor Cottages of Fishermen. z Thither at this time went Christ and his Mother, and his brethren; (by which term the Scripture often expresseth any near Kinsmen) and his Disciples; whether only the five mentioned in the former Chapter, or others also, is not said: a But they did not at that time stay long there, probably because the Passover was (when they were to be at Hierusalem), was so nigh, as would not admit any long stay before they began their journey; and it is likely, that the company mentioned here, to be with Christ at Capernaum, did also design to go along with him to the Passover, of which we next read.

b Concerning the Jewish Passover, we have once and again spoken in our Notes on the other Evangelists; the Institution of it, was Exod. 12. It was to be solemnized yearly in the place which the Lord should chuse, according to the Law, Deut. 16. 6. Christ, tho he was not naturally subject to the Law, yet to fulfil all Righteousness, and to Redeem his people from the Curse of the Law, Gal. 4. 5. kept the passover yearly, taking also advantage from the confus of the people to Hierusalem at that time, to make himself and his Doctrine more known. None of the other Evangelists make mention of more than one Passover betwixt the time of Christ's Baptism and Death: but plainly mentions three, one here, another in chap. 6. The last, chap. 18. 39. and some think, that he mentioned another, tho more obscurely, chap. 5. 1. Our Lord was at them all.

d Math. 21. 12. Luk. 19. 45. Is a piece of History so like this, that some have questioned whether it mentioned not the same individual matter of fact; but it is apparent that it doth not. 1. Because St. John mentions it as done three years before it, at the first Passover; all the other Evangelists mention what they report, as done at the fourth Passover. 2. The circumstances of the Narrative make it appear. 1. John mentions only the Nation both of the Buyers and Sellers. 2. Here, he only saith, that Christ was the Son of David, the Impression seems to have worn off. It is a greater Question, whether Psal. 69. (from whence this quotation is,) is to be understood of Christ, properly and literally? Or merely as the Antitype to David, of whom that Psalm is literally to be understood.

away. The others say, he overturned the Seats of them that sold Doves; so as our Saviour plainly appeareth to have done this twice at his first Passover, and at the last. For the more full Explication of the parts of this History; see our Notes on Math. 21. 12. Luk. 19. 45. Mark. 11. 15. The reason of their bringing Oxen, and Sheep, and Doves, into the Temple, was to supply those that came a far off, and could not bring their Sacrifices with them, with such Sacrifices as the Law required in several cases. The money-changers were there, to change the peoples money into half-Shekels; every one being obliged to Offer his half Shekel, Exod. 30. v. 13. Our Saviour did not condemn this course of accommodating of people; but blameth the covetousness of the Priests, who for their private lucre had made the Temple their Market-place; when as there was room enough elsewhere.

15 And when he had made a scourge of small cords e, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers money f, and overthrew the tables g.

e It concerns not us to inquire, where our Saviour had the small cords, of which he made his Whip; there were doubtless Cords enough at hand, taken off from Benks brought thither, (tho he was himself in no Franciscan habit, as the Papists idly dream.) f g But herein was the mighty Power of God seen, that Christ, a single, private, obscure Person, should without any more noise or opposition, drive out the multitude of these Hacketts, and overturn their Tables. Nor I think (after the consideration of this circumstance) need we enquire, By what authority he did this? It was prophesied of him, Mt. 3. 1. That he should come to his temple; and v. 3. Should sit as a refiner, and purifier of silver; and purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver. Christ here according to that Prophecy, cometh to his Temple, and begins to purge it.

16 And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence: make not my Fathers house an house of merchandise h.

b At this his first coming, he gives them that sold Doves a liberty to take their goods away; but at the last coming, Math. 21. 12. it is said, he overturned their Benks. Those that think this present sufficient to indicate private Persons tumultuous pulling down Images, seem not to consider, that Christ was no private Person (tho to esteem) and did what he did as Lord of his house: Those who urge it, as infering Majesties and Supremacies duty in this case; urge it well; for it may well seem more noble and concluded, that it is the Will of Christ, that places for a cure for public Worship, should neither wickedly be made men of Throne; nor yet indecently made places for men to buy and sell in; tho we can ascribe no such holiness to any place, as to the Temple, which had not only a particular Dedication, but was built by Gods order, his acceptance of it declared, and had secular Promises annexed to it; besides its Prefiguration of Christ (of which we shall speak more afterward); yet even nature it self teacheth, That there is a decent reverence and respect due to such places. That this action of Christ's, also, before he had published the Doctrine of the Gospel, instructs us, That those who have authority, are not always to refrain from removing instruments of Superstition and Idolatry, or gross and indecent Corruptions; until people be first by the preaching of the true Doctrine persuaded, willingly to part with them. But if this were to make Gods house a place of Merchandise for men, there to sell Oxen, and Sheep, and Doves, and keep Shops for changing money: What do Papists make such houses for their lying their Relics and Images to people, thereby to get money for their Priests; and for selling Pardons, Indulgences? &c. Never were Gods Houses to that degree made places of Merchandise, and dens of Thieves, if every one that cheatech for his profit be (as he is) a Thief.

17 And his disciples remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up i.

i The Disciples, as well as the rest of the people there present, could not but be astonished at this so strange a thing, to see a single Person, and he in no repute but as a private Person, to make a Whip, and with authority drive the Buyers and Sellers out of the Temple, and no body to oppose him; but they remembered the words of David, Psal. 69. 9. Some think that John here reports what they did after Christ's Resurrection; and indeed, who so considereth all the following part of the Gospel History, would think that it were so, for they did not seem so early to have had a perception of Christ's Divine nature, nor that he was the Messiah, Or if they at this time remembered it, and apprehended that Christ was the Son of David, the Impression seems to have worn off. It is a greater Question, whether Psal. 69. (from whence this quotation is,) is to be understood of Christ, properly and literally? Or merely as the Antitype to David, of whom that Psalm is literally to be understood.

40 So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they besought him that he would tarry with them a. And he abode there two days w.

u The Sichemites being come to Christ, had some Difficulty with him, as appeareth from v. 41, 42. What the subject-matter of their Difficulty was, we are not told; we may know that it was Spiritual, and something proper to excite Faith in them; for believing was the effect of it; they desire that he would abide with them: thus their Faith is wrought by Love u. Our Saviour, that he might not disgrace the beginning of their Faith, did stay with them two days: For altho when he sent out his Disciples, he commanded them not to go into the way of the Samaritans, yet himself was not obliged by that Law, and did sometimes by Preaching to Heathens, and Converting of them, give an Earnest of the Calling of the Gentiles, whose Faith Calling was referred to after times, yet probably, the reason why he would not stay longer with them than two days, was because the time was not yet come, for the fuller Calling of the Gentiles, and he was not willing by a longer abode with them to give offence to the Jews, betwix whom and the Samaritans was a rooted Harred upon the account of their differing Religion.

x Believing seemeth here to be taken in a different sense from what it was taken in v. 39, from what followeth, v. 42. There it seemeth only to signify a lower degree of Faith, that he was a Prophet unto the women saying, that he had told her all he had done; here it signifieth a giving Credit to him, as the Christ, the Saviour of the World, of which they were convinced by what they heard from himself. Thus that of the Apostle, Rom. 10. 17, is justified, That faith cometh by hearing; and the Influence of Christ upon the Souls of Believers is also justified: We read of no Miracles our Saviour wrought here, they believed not because of any Signs they saw, but because of his word, wherein also they further learned themselves the first fruits of the Gentiles, the generality of which were afterwards Converted to the Faith of the Gospel, after that Miracles were ceased, by hearing the Gospel Preached.

42 And said unto the woman, Now we believe, not because of thy saying y: for \ we have heard him our selves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world z.*

y Several things may be the occasion of Faith, which are neither the principal efficient causes, nor the proper instrumental cause of it: The principal efficient cause of the Faith of these Samaritans, was undoubtedly the finger of God upon their Souls, enlightening their minds with the saving knowledge of the Gospel, and bowing their wills to the Obedience of it. The proper instrumental cause was their hearing the words of Christ, but the occasion of this was what the Woman had told them; so at, tho they in a sense believed because of what he had said, because that occasioned their coming out to see, and hear Christ; yet the proper instrumental cause was their hearing Christ, God upon their hearing him working in their hearts, an ability, and a willingness to receive and to clove with Christ. Thus the Church gives us the first occasion of receiving the Scriptures, and believing them to be the Word of God, we having them put into our hands by the Church, read them, and find such impressions and signs of Divinity in them, that we conclude from Reason very probably, that they are more than Humane Writings, but never firmly and fixedly receive them as such, until persuaded of it by the Holy Spirit. z These Samaritans do not only own Christ as a Prophet, nor do they only suppose that he must be the Messiah, but they profess to know, that he was the Christ, the Saviour of the World.

43 Now after two days, he departed thence, and went into Galilee a.

a Christ (as we heard before, Ver. 3.) was upon his Journey into Galilee, only he stopped a day at Sichem to gratify the desires of the Samaritans of that City, which two days being now spent, he keepeth on in his Journey: But here ariseth a Question, viz. Whether he first went to Nazareth, or to Cana; for the Opinion of those, who think he first went to Nazareth, is quoted Mat. 4. 12. Besides it is said, that Nazareth was in his Road to Cana, and Luke 4. 24. he is said to have uttered these words there. Clemens thinks he went first to Cana, according to what John relateth in the following Chapter, Luke 4. 16. he is said to have gone to Galilee to Nazareth, and besides, the next mentioned Miracle is v. 5. said to have been Christ's Second Miracle, which it could not have been, had he first gone to Nazareth; for Luke 4. 23. those of Nazareth mention some Miracles which he had wrought at Capernaum.

b Christ spake those words more than once, Mat. 13. 57, Mark 6. 4. Luke 4. 24. But the Question is, what force of Reason this hath, why he went into Galilee, when as Nazareth, which was in Galilee, was his own Country; for tho he was Born in Bethlehem, yet he was Educated at Nazareth; upon which account, Luke 4. 23. it is called his own Country? The best Solution of this Difficulty is, that by Galilee here is to be understood, the Country-part of Galilee, exclusive to Nazareth; and this is not given as a Reason why our Saviour went into Galilee, but why he did not go to Nazareth, but into the Country-part of Galilee, because Nazareth was his own Country, and a Prophet is not without honour, except in his own Country.

45 Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, having seen all the things that he did at Hierusalem at the feast c; for they also went unto the feast d.

c When he came not to Nazareth, but to some parts of Galilee, the Galileans entertained him Hospitably, and this they did because of those Miracles they had seen wrought by him at the Passover-feast, where Christ was, Ch. 2. d For these Galileans, who they lived at a great distance from Hierusalem, yet were observant of the Law which commanded all the Males of the Jews to be present at that Solemnity. The Samaritans saw no Miracle, but believed Christ upon his word: The Galileans also received Christ, but their seeing of his Miracles at the Feast, is given as the cause of their receiving him, their Faith was not so noble as that of the Samaritans. Blessed (saith our Saviour) are they, who have not seen, and yet believed.

46 So Jesus came again into Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine e. And there was a certain Nobleman, whose Son was sick at Capernaum f.

e Our Saviour, coming into Galilee, made choice of Cana, the place where being at a Marriage-feast, he turned Water into Wine Ch. 2. first to fix in the reason is not expressed, and therefore vainly guessed at by Interpreters, there he wrought a Second Miracle, not upon the Person of any one of Cana, but upon the Son of one who was at Capernaum, which was a City in the Tribe of Naphtali upon the Shore of the Famous River Jordan: This Person is described to be one that was basilikos, a Nobleman, whether of the Blood of Herod, that was Tetrarch of Galilee, or some Courtier, or Principal Servant of his, is not said.

47 When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee g, he went unto him and besought him that he would come down and heal his Son h; for he was at the point of death i.

g Christ had been in Galilee before, and in this Town, and wrought a Miracle, and if this Courtier were a Disciple of John (which some think, but it is hard to prove) it is probable he had been at the Passover, and seen the Miracles he wrought there, or at least might have heard of them from some who were there h, though it was a good way from Capernaum thither, yet his love to his Son moved him, and humbled him to beseech Christ, that he would come down and heal his Son, by which he shewed a great weakness of Faith, as if he thought that Christ could not pur forth his Healing Virtue at a distance, but his Personal Presence was necessary, as Nagman the Syrian saith, that Elisus must come down and lay his hand upon him if his Son it seems was in Humane appearance dying.

48 Then said Jesus unto him, \ except ye see signs and wonders, you will not believe k.*

k It may seem strange to such as do not well weigh all Circumstances, that our Saviour, who at other times without asking, shewed himself to hard to be interested by this Courtier, and answereth him so roughly; but we must not take our selves to be able to give a certain Account of all Christ's Actions, and different dealings with Persons, whose Hearts he well enough knew. Thus much is certain, that our Saviour always preferred that Faith which was given to his bare word; before that which was wrought by our Miracle confirmative of that word, John 20. 29. Our Miracle faith that this Courtier came to him purely upon a natural account for the Recovery of his dying Son, without a desire to be instructed in his Heavenly Doctrine, therefore (as it may be presumed) he checks this Courtier, and not him alone, but the generality of the Jews, who were only struck with Admiration of his works, and drawn from Cynicality, or some Temporal benefit, to follow him, without a due regard of his Person, or the Heavenly saving Truths Preached by him.

l The Courtier, tho probably of Spirit enough to have shewn some discontent at our Saviours no kinder Answer to him before, yet was so intent upon his Sons life, that he takes no notice of it, but reneweth his Request, still discovering the weakness of his Faith, as thinking that Christ's Personal Presence was necessary to the life of his Son.

50 Jesus faith unto him, Go thy way: thy son liveth m. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way n.

m Our Saviour would neither discourage the weak Faith of this Nobleman, nor yet encourage his weakness, he heareth his Son for the encouragement of his Faith, he doth it by his word, without going down to him, that he might not gratify his weakness, thinking his Personal Presence was necessary: n he bids him go, for his Son was recovered (that is here meant by liveth) n upon this his Faith growth, and he who before only believed Christ to be a Prophet probably upon others hearay, now believeth his word, that is, was persuaded that his Son was indeed Recovered.

51 And as he was now going down, his servants met him, and told him, saying, Thy son liveth o.

o The servants that met him to bring the acceptable News of his Sons recovery, knew nothing of the passages that had been betwix Christ and their Master, but merely came to tell their Master, what they knew would be acceptable to him.

52 Then enquired he the hour when he began to amend: and they said unto him, yesterday, at the seventh hour, the fever left him p.

p He enquired the precise time, they tell him it was about the seventh hour. The Miracle appeared in the fullness of the Recovery, and also that it was without the application of means, at least any that could have produced to sudden an effect.

53 So the father knew that it was at the same hour in which Jesus had said unto him, Thy son liveth q, and himself believed, and his whole house r.

q The circumstance of the time when his Son recovered agreeing with the very hour, when Christ had said unto him, Thy son liveth, was a mighty confirmation to him, that he was beholden to Christ for his Cure, and consequently, that Christ was no ordinary man, more than a Prophet, even the Son of God; r this works upon his faith to an higher degree: He first believed the report of him, then he gave credit to the word that he spake, now he believeth firmly, and not he alone, but his whole Family became Christians. Such Instances we have mentioned, Luke 8. Acta 16. 14, 15. the Jeylour, v. 34. and Crispus, Acta 18.

54 This is again the second miracle that Jesus did, when he was come out of Judea into Galilee s.

s His turning Water into Wine, Ch. 2. was the first, this was the second, and so in order of time before any of those Miracles which he wrought in Galilee, of which we read, Mat. 4. 23.

CHAP. V.

t Tho there be some that think the Feast mentioned here was that of Precept, and others, that it was the Feast of Tabernacles, yet the most and best Interpreters judge it to be the Feast of the second Passover that is here mentioned. And that this was the second Passover which happened after our Saviour had entered upon his Publick Ministry. We read of the first, Ch. 2. 13. and from that Verse of that Chapter, to this Chapter, the Evangelist (as they think) hath been relating so much of our Saviours Actions, until the Second Passover, as it was the Will of God we should have upon Publick Authentic Record, and had not been Recorded by the other Evangelists, who give a further account of his Actions done this Year, Mat. Ch. 4. Ch. 8. Ch. 9. Mark Ch. 1. Ch. 2. Luke Ch. 4. Ch. 5. In the time of our Saviours Publick Ministry (which was three Years and a half) there were four Passovers. The other Evangelists take notice but of one of them, and that the last. John is thought to have mentioned all the four; the first, Ch. 2. 13. the second in this place, the third, Ch. 6. 4. the fourth, Ch. 13. 1. Another Reason they give why the Feast of the Passover should be here intended, is, because from about that time to the Harvest were four Months, according to what our Saviour had said, Ch. 4. 35. b Jesus went up to the Passover, to Hierusalem, to shew his Obedience to his Fathers Law, Deut. 16. 16.

2 Now there is at Hierusalem by the sheep market c a pool d, which is called in the Hebrew Or Gaze: brewtun Bethesda e, having five porches f.

c We read in Scripture of Sheep-gate in Hierusalem, Neh. 3. 1. There was also a Market for Sheep, and other Cattel, Deut. 14. 26. Some therefore add Marjeh, others add Gaze to the word in the Greek, signifying Sheep; d Near to this Gate or Market, there was a Pool, καταβήδης; some translate it a Fish-pool, others (more properly) a place to walk, or to swim in (the word deriveth from a Verb that signifies to swim). They say, there were two such Pools within the compass of the Mount on which the Temple stood, the one Eastward, called the upper Pool, 2 Kings 18. 17. The other Westward, near to the Sheep-gate. The one was called Bethesda, the other, the Pool of Siloam, by the Kings Garden, Nehem. 3. 15. mentioned also by our Evangelist, Ch. 9. 7. They say, the Waters of this Pool were supplied from a Fountain called Siloam, up in it at certain times with a great noise, coming (as was thought) through hollow places of the Earth, and Quarries of hard stones. These Waters of Siloam are mentioned, Isa. 8. 6. and said to go forth; from what place, these Waters are concluded a flow in the Kingdom of David, and of Christ. This being admitted, it is not to be wondered that they had that Healing Virtue given unto them (as some judge) just about the coming of Christ: for it should appear by Ch. 9. 7. that the Pool of Siloam, as well as that of Bethesda had so, for in former time it is thought to have been of use chiefly to wash Garments, and Sacrifices when they were clean. Some will have them to have derived their Healing Virtue from thence, but that is vain, their Healing Virtue was doubtless derived from the Lord that healeth us. e This Pool in the Hebrew was called Bethesda, which some Interpret, The House of pouring out, because as some fancy, the Blood of the Sacrifices was there poured out (but that is a great mistake, for that was to be poured out at the altar) or because Run-water (as some think) was poured into it; or (which is more probable) because waters were poured into it out of the Conduit mentioned 2 Kings 20. 20. But others Interpret, The house of Grace, Mercy, &c. because of Gods great goodness shewed the People, in giving this Healing Virtue to these Waters. f The five Porches belonging to this Pool seem to have been five Apartments for Impotent men to walk in, or rest themselves in, when they came to wash themselves in the Pool.

3 In these g lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water h.

g In these Apartments (called here Porches) there were a great number of Sick Persons, some labouring under one Infirmary, some under another, Some being lame, some lame, waiting for the time when h the water should be troubled.

4 For an Angel went down at a certain season into the Pool, and troubled the water: i whosoever first after the troubling of the water, stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever Disease he had k.

i This water had not always in it this Healing Virtue, but only when it was troubled, and this was at a certain season, how often, the Scripture hath not determined (some will have it to be only at their great Feasts, of the Passover, and Pentecost, &c. but the Scripture saith no such thing). None must think that the Angel appeared in any visible shape, but the rolling or troubling of the water was a certain sign, that that was the time when alone they were cured. k Nor were many healed at one time, but only one Person, that could first get into this water, he was Healed, let his Disease be what it would. The waters not being constantly Medicinal, but at a certain time, when they were rolled; and then, 2. not for all, but only to him who could first get in. And 3. for any Disease, of what sort, or kindsoever his Disease was, sufficiently contenteth the Opinion of those who fancy that the Waters derived this Healing Virtue from the Entrails of the Beasts Offered in Sacrifice, being washed therewith, besides that this is denied by some, who say, those Entrails were washed in a Room on purpose for that use within the Temple; if they had derived their Healing Virtue from thence in a Natural Rational way, they would have exerted their Virtue upon more than him who first stepped in, and that not at the time only when they were rolled, nor would their Virtue have extended to all kind of Diseases. Of what ever use this Pool therefore was before, certain it is at this time God made use of the Water in it to heal, and to as men might be cured that healed not by any Natural, but a Miraculous Operation. The Scriptures of the Old Testament make make no mention of it. And it is observed by those who are versed in the Jewish Rabbin, that neither do they make the least mention of it: Which makes it very probable, that they had this Virtue, not from the time of the building of the Sheep-gate by Shalman, Nehem. 3. 15. Nor from the time when the Assyrian Family was exiled, or the rebuilding, or further building and adorning the Temple by Herod, but a little before the Birth of Christ, as a Figure of him being now coming, who, Zecl. 13. 1. is a Fountain opened for the House of David, and the Inhabitant of Hierusalem; and from whom is both our cleansing, and our healing, as these Waters, which before had a cleansing, and now received also an healing Virtue.

5 And a certain man was there which had an infirmity thirty and eight years.

1 What this man's Name was, or what his Circumstances in the World, or what his particular Disease was, we are not told; nor is it said that he had been there thirty eight years, but that he had long laboured under his Weakness, which whether it was the Palfie or no, is uncertain; probably it was a Disease hardly curable by Humane Art, and ordinary means; for it cannot be thought but in that time he had used all rational means, which his finding of no value as to his cure, he came and lay at this Fountain, waiting for a Cure in this way of Miraculous Operation.

6 VVhen Jesus saw him lie, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, VVilt thou be made whole?

m Christ as God, knew the particular time when this Infirmary seized him, which was eight years or upward of our Saviours Birth, and about the time when the Temple was re-edified, or rather enlarged and further adorned by Herod. As Man, he pities his Case; he asks him, if he was willing to be made whole? Not that he doubted of his willingness; for what Sick man was ever unwilling to be healed? Besides that, he knew that the poor man lay there for that very purpose, but that he might make him declare his miserable, helpless state and condition, and draw out his Faith, and heal in himself; and from his Answer, take an occasion to heal him, and make the Spectators more attentive to his Miracle.

7 The impotent man answered, (Sir) I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the Pool: but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me.

o What his particular Impotency was, the Scripture doth not tell us: Some have (not improbably) judged it the Palfie, which depriveth the Person of Motion, by the Stoppage of the Animal Spirits, so that without help he cannot move from one place to another, which is manifest this poor man could not; for he complains for want of help, that he could not get into the Pool.

Luke 5. 24.

8 Jesus saith unto him, * Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.

g Our Lord will let this poor man know, that the Waters, and the Angel, derived their Power from him; and that with a word could do as much for him, as the Waters rolled by the Angel could effect: He therefore bids him Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk, that others might see, and be assured that he was perfectly Cured.

9 And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked; and * on the same day was the Sabbath.

r The mans strength returned immediately; he is able immediately to take up his Bed, and to walk. e All this was done on the Sabbath-day, on which day it was unlawful to carry any Burthen, Jer. 17. 21. 24. And by the Jewish Canons it was punishable by Death, or Scourging, but our Saviour had a mind to let the Jews know that he was Lord of the Sabbath, and what had been unlawful without his special Command, became Lawful by it. Neither was this against the sense of the Law, but against the letter of it; the Law only prohibited City Labour, and carrying Burdens for their own profit, and in the way of their Trade; it forbade the doing of nothing which was to be done as a publick Testimony of the Goodness and Mercy of God shewed to Persons; and by this our Saviour opens a way for his Correction of their Erroneous Opinions about the true Sanctification of the Sabbath: We shall observe, that our Saviour used the like Phrase to him that had the Palfie, Mat. 9. 4. and to the Centurions Daughter, Mark 5. 41. Daughters Arise: And to Lazarus, Chy. 11. 43. Lazarus, come forth; which our Saviour did for the restitution of the Miracle to all that should see them. It is further observed by Heinsius, that our Saviour did many Miracles on the Sabbath-day, because that day was the usual time when the Jews were wont to Consult the Prophets for help, as may be learned from 2 Kings 4. 25.

10 The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, * It is the Sabbath-day: it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.

u That is, according to the letter of the Law, they understood not that Christ was the Lord of the Sabbath; their Cavil argued their want both of Faith in Christ, and Charity also toward their Neighbour.

11 He answered them, He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed and walk.

v He makes them as good an Answer as could well be imagined; the sum of which was, he believed that he that had thus Healed him, was a Prophet, and fo did what he did by a Divine Authority, which was Lawful for him to Obey, contrary to their Traditions; tho who this particular Person was, or what his Name was, were things as yet not known to him (as we shall by and by read) yet he seemeth sensible that he was Healed by a Power more than Humane.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, Take up thy bed and walk? x The Impotent man that was Healed, seemed to oppose the Authority of God (by virtue of which he believed himself healed) to the Authority of Man, which made it disagreeable for him on the Sabbath-day to take up his bed and walk. The Jews taking no notice of Christ being God, or of his being as a Prophet sent from God, do ask, Who was he, but, What man was he that said, Arise. Opposing the Command of God, to the Command of Man. It is as much as if they had said, The Law of God hath Commanded that no Burdens should be carried on the Sabbath-day: Now, what is that man that dare teach thee any one to do what is contrary to the Law of God?

13 And he that was healed, wist not who he was: For Jesus had conveyed himself away, a multitude being in that place.

y Christ came as a stranger to the Pool, and only wrought this Miracle, so as the Impotent man that was Healed had no time to enquire who he was; and there being there a crowd of People, Christ had through the People conveyed himself away: so as the man could not find him to shew them the man who had fo said unto him.

14 Afterward Jesus findeth him in the Temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole, z fin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee. a Walking in the outward Court of the Temple, or Chap. 6. 11. some part of it, where People ordinarily Walked; he charges him to fin no more, lest a worse thing berid him; hereby letting him and us know, that fin is the usual cause of Diseases, and an Holy walking the best Preservative of Health; and that God hath further Revelations of his wrath against fin and sinners, than what do, or can tell him in this Life.

15 The man departed, and told the Jews that it was Jesus which had made him whole.

c It were very uncharitable to judge, that this poor man went to the Jewish Magistrates, to inform against Christ, who had been so kind to him; and much more probable that he went in the simplicity of his Heart, desirous both to publish what Christ had done to his Honour; and also to do good to others, who might also stand in need of his help.

16 And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the Sabbath-day.

d But the Jews made another use of it; seeking from hence an advantage against him, because he had violated the Sabbath, which they often made a Capital Crime.

17 But Jesus answered them, * My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.

e We read of no Objection they made to Christ, as to what he had done, only that they Persecuted him, which they might do without speaking to him: But it should seem by what we read in this Verse, that some of the Jews had Objected to him, his violation of the Sabbath (as they thought) yet, as we before noted, Answering (in the Text of the Gospel) do often signify no more than the beginning of a Discourse upon some proper occasion of speech. f Our Saviour defendeth himself from the Example of his Father, in the remembrance of whose resting from his work of Creation on the Seventh day from the beginning of the Creation, the Jews kept their Sabbath; who tho he rested from his work of Creation, yet hitherto worketh, as well on the Sabbath-day as any other day, by his preservation of Created Beings: So (saith he) who am the Son of this Father, also work; upholding all things by the word of my Power, Heb. 1. 3. So that works of Divine

Divine Providence are Lawful on the Sabbath-day, which was this. I work no other way than my Father till now, who he rested on the Seventh day from the Creation.

18 Therefore the Jews * fought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the Sabbath, but said also, That God was his Father, * making himself equal with God.

g This yet enraged the Jews more: He had before against him a Charge of breaking the Sabbath, or at least, teaching another to break it, (in their Opinion) but now he had (as they judged) spoken Blasphemy, calling God Father; nor in the sense the Jews fo called him, and all good Christians are Licensed to call him; but veritas Deus, his proper Father, or his own Father; by which (as they truly said) he made himself equal with God, Nor did he by that alone, make himself equal with God, but he ascribed also to himself a co-operation with God, in works proper to God alone: Nor did he think this any Robbery, Phil. 2. 6. This was their Charge; we shall now hear how our Saviour defendeth himself against it.

19 Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, Verily, I say unto you, * The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: I, for whatsoever things he doth, these also doth the Son likewise.

i Consider Christ as God; fo, he can do nothing but what the Father doth; that is, nothing that respected Created Beings: For it is a known Rule, That the works of the Trinity are of it self are not divided; whatsoever one Person doth, the others do; tho to denote the order of the Trinities working, some works are more ordinarily ascribed to the Father (such are the works of Creation and Providence.) Some to the Son, as Redemption; some to the Holy Spirit, as Sanctification; yet they are not fo ascribed to any Person, but that other Scriptures justify the co-operation of all three Persons. Consider the Son as the Messiah; fo also it is true, That the Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do. Nor is this any diminution to the Glory of Christ, nor doth it speak any Impotency in him; from whence the dravins and Socinians would conclude his Inferiority to his Father; but rather his Perfection, that he did only what pleased the Father: So that Phrase (What he seeth the Father do) is to be Interpreted. And that term [can do nothing] signifies no more than, he doth, or will do nothing. See such an usage of the Phrase, Gen. 19. 22. Luke 16. 2. John 12. 39. From this he leaveth them easily to conclude, that what he had done, in curing this Impotent Man upon the Sabbath-day, was the Fathers work, tho by him. For whatsoever the Father doth, or willeth, the same doth the Son likewise. From hence will appear an easie Solution to the difficulty arising upon the first view of the words, viz. How these words can prove Christ equal with the Father, when they rather prove the contrary; because he can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do. Some seek a Solution in the words can; he can do nothing of himself, which God cannot do, is equal with God. Some seek it in the word seeth; which they say, signifies here an identity of Nature and Will. Some seek the Solution in the word do, which they say, signifies to will, and to confess so. The best Solution is to be taken from those words [of himself] the Son hath done many things which he did not see the Father do, but he did them not of himself. Our Saviours meaning is plainly this: The Son neither willeth, nor can do any thing, but what the Father willeth, and doth in him: Therefore he is one in Essence with the Father, and equal to him. & The Son doth those things which the Father doth; and as the Messiah he doth those things which the Father willeth to be done.

20 For * the Father loveth the son, and sheweth him all things that himself doth, and he will shew him greater works than these, that you may marvel.

j Both as his Son by Eternal Generation, Mat. 3. 17. and also as the Messiah sent by him into the World, to finish the work the Father had him to do: And m look as a Father will make his Son acquainted with all that he doth; and not only fo, but communicate all his Power and Skill to his Son, so far as he can: So the Father communicates all his Power to the Son, working all things in him, and by him; and he will in and by him work greater things than this, healing this poor man; he will by him raise the dead, &c. n That you may marvel; Christ knew, that they would not believe, and all the effect that his Miracles had upon the generality of the Jews, was but causing them to be a superstitious amazement, and admiration; as Chap. 11. 47. whereas it was their Duty not only to marvel, but to be believed also; without which their Admiration did but cause that they had no Cloak for their fin.

Divine

21 For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them, even so the son quickeneth whom he will.

o He saith not, to speak of what God will do in the general Resurrection, but of those whom the Lord raiseth up from the dead in the Old Testament, by Elijah and Elisba. The giving of, and restoring unto Life, are things proper unto God, Deut. 32. 39. 1 Sam. 2. 6. p So the Son quickeneth whom he will. God hath given unto me a Power to raise from the dead whom I will (as he did raise up Saiahs Daughter, Mar. 9. 25. and the Widows Son, Luke 7. 14. and Lazarus, Chap. 11. 3.) This was one of those greater works, of which our Saviour spake in the former Verse.

q Alone he judgeth no man, he judgeth no man but by and with the Son, no man without the Son, but r committed all Judgment in the administration of the Mediatorial Kingdom and in the Church to his Son, and by his Son will Judge the World at the last day.

23 That all men should honour the Son, as even as they honour the Father. * He that honoureth not the son, honoureth not the father which hath sent him.

s That his Son might be Honoured by all men, Psal. 2. 11. 12. Phil. 2. 10. t With the same Honour which is given to the Father; u for the Son is sent by the Father, not as one Inferior to him, as a Servant is sent by his Master; but as an Equal is sent by his Friend, John 4. 24. and 6. 38. and 7. 28. And look, as a great Prince, when he sendeth his Ambassador, expecteth that those to whom he is sent, should give him Honour, and the same Honour as he himself; fo doth the Father: So that he that Honoureth not the Son, Honoureth not the Father which sent him. It is a Text which reflecteth directly upon such a Honour not Christ, especially the Jews and Socinians, who professedly do not Honour him with the same Honour which they yet pretend to Honour the Father; and are concluded by this Text not in truth to Honour the Father.

24 Verily, Verily, I say unto you, * He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death to life.

v He that fo heareth my words, that they are not a mere sound in his Ears, nor affect his Heart with some mere sudden and vanishing Passion; but so, that he gives an assent to them upon my Authority, and that firmly and steadily believeth him that sent me (the Particle on seemeth not well put in by our Translators; in the Greek it is ἐν τῷ ἀποστείλαντί) giveth Credit to the words of my Father that sent me, believing that I am his only begotten Son, whom he hath sent into the World, and receiving me as such, hearing me according to the Command of the Voice from Heaven, Mat. 17. 5. x he hath a certain Title to Everlasting Life; and hath received the first fruits of that Harvest, Rom. 8. 23. the incorruptible seed of the Word, 1 Per. 1. 23. and already fixeth in Heavenly places in Christ Jesus, Rev. 2. 6. and hath the Kingdom of God within him, Luke 17. 21. and shall not come into that Judgement which shall lie in Eternal Condemnation; y but is passed out of a state of Spiritual Death, into a state of Spiritual Life; and shall be at last eternally saved, and pass into the actual fruition and enjoyment of Life Eternal.

25 Verily, Verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when * the dead shall hear the voice of the son of God, and they that hear shall live.

z Some understand this concerning the special Resurrection of such Bodies as Christ raised while he was upon the Earth from Death to Life (of which number was Lazarus and the Daughter of Saiahs, &c.) Others understand it of the general Resurrection, spoken of, v. 28. 29. This which favoureth this sense is, because here is no mention of believing, but only hearing a voice. But the most and best Interpreters rather understand these words of those who are dead in Trespasses and Sins; and the quickening and Life mentioned, Eph. 2. 1. which is called the first Resurrection, Rev. 20. 5. because of what was said immediately before, that such a one is passed from death to life; and what was said before, that he heareth my word, and what was said here, of hearing the voice of Christ; and what follows, seemeth better to agree with this sense. And v. 29. speak plainly of the Second and general Resurrection of the Body. A Those who fo hear the Voice of Christ in the Gospel, as to give a firm and steady assent to it; and upon the Credit of it, shall receive Christ as their Mediator and Saviour, shall live Eternally; they do live the life of Grace, and shall live the life of Glory.

26 For as the Father hath life in himself, he hath he given to the Son to have life in himself.

b How the Eternal Father hath life in himself, is obvious to every Capacity; for he is the first mover, and therefore must have his Life in, and from himself, and not from any other: And he is the first cause, and therefore that Life which floweth from him to all Created Beings, must first be in him, as in its Fountain. But in what sense it is said, that he hath given to the Son to have life in himself; whether as God, by his Eternal Generation, or as the Messiah and Mediator betwixt God and Man, is more question. Those who understand it, as to the Divine Nature, shewed. Those who understand it, as to the Divine Nature, shewed. Those who understand it, as to the Divine Nature, shewed.

27 And hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man.

c To have the power of Life and Death, the Keys of both; to Rule and Govern the World, and to Judge it at the last day. d Acts 17. 31. He hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained, &c. So Phil. 2. 8. Being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross; wherefore God hath him highly exalted him, &c. Some think that the sense is, because he was that Son of Man, who was the Seed of the woman promised, Gen. 3. 15. The Son of Man Promised by (Daniel, Chap. 7. 13, 14. And that the term, Son of man (here) signifieth his Office as Mediator.

28 Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice:

e Do not marvel at this Power which I tell you the Father hath given me, to execute in the World Justice and Judgment; to raise from the particular Persons from a Natural Death, and whom he pleaseth from the Spiritual death of sin: For the hour is coming, when all those who are in the Graves, shall by an Arch-Angel, Mar. 24. 31. 1 Thef. 4. 16. hear my voice, commanding them to arise; and they shall obey my command.

f And come forth; not all to be made partakers of Eternal Life and Glory. There shall be a Resurrection unto Life, which only they shall obtain, who have done good, walking in the Commandments of God; not because they have done good, as if their good deeds had Merited any such thing; for Eternal Life is the gift of God, Rom. 6. 23. But others who have wrought Iniquity, and died without Repentance and Faith in me, shall rise b, that the Justice of God may be in me, the Judge of the Quick and the Dead, be executed upon them unto Eternal Condemnation. This Daniel, Chap. 12. 2. calleth seance, and everlasting contempt. Our Saviour, Mar. 25. 46. calls it Everlasting Punishment.

30 I can of my own self do nothing; as I hear, I judge; and my judgment is just, because I seek not my own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me.

i Neither considered as God, or as Mediator. As God the Father and Christ were one, and what one Person in the Holy Trinity doth, all do: so that he did nothing in that capacity separately from his Father. As Mediator, he did nothing of his self; he finished the work which his Father gave him to do. k As the Father revealed his Will to him for the administration of his Mediatorial Kingdom in the World, he judged: And therefore his Judgment must necessarily be just and true; for his Will was not his Will proper to himself, so as it was not common to his Father, but derived from the Will of his Father; but as his Father, his Will was the same with his Father; and his Essence, his Will, his Father: so that he did his Will, being by the Father sent into the World to do his Will, accordingly did nothing as Mediator but what was his Father's Will as well as his own; in nothing differs from his Father.

m This seemeth to contradict what he saith, Ch. 8. 14. I bear record of my self, yet my record is true: But our Saviour here speaketh according to the common Opinion of the Jews, or indeed of men, who are ready to suspect any Ones Testimony, who testifieth of himself: He tells them, he could grant them this, tho his Record of himself was true, yet he could allow them their common received Opinion, and saying, Ch. 8. 13. That the Testimony of one testifying of himself, is suspicious; for it is certain that a man may testify truth of himself, only such a testimony is suspicious; he tells them, he did not only testify of himself, his Reputation did not stand upon his own single word.

32 * There is another that beareth witness of me, and I know, that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true.

n The Father by a voice from Heaven testified of Christ, that he was his well-beloved Son, in whom he was well pleased, Mar. 3. 17. Some understand it of John the Baptist, of whom he speaketh, v. 33. But he naming John in the next verse, it seems most proper to understand this of the Father testifying of Christ, both at his Baptism, and also at his Transfiguration; and to interpret the next Verse, as speaking of another Testimony distinct from that of John: And (with our Saviour) I know; that I am fully assured that his Testimony of me is true; for God is that God who cannot lie, but is truth itself. So I do not barely testify of my self; for my Father, whom you all own to be a God of truth, and who cannot lie, and whom I know to be such, he testifieth of me, and none can contradict his Testimony.

33 * Ye sent unto John, and he bare witness unto the truth.

o Ye sent Priests and Levites from Jerusalem to John, Ch. 1. 29. He was a man of Reputation among you, for all the People judged him a Prophet; and he had as interest in Herods Court: He bare witness (he doth not say to me, but) to the Truth.

34 But I receive not testimony from man; but these things I say, that ye might be saved.

p That is, not for my own sake; for otherwise he had received testimony from man, Ch. 15. 27. After 1. 8. that must be Truth, to which any one can give a true Testimony. John by his Testimony added nothing to me. I was what I am, before John testified concerning me. I lonely take of John's testimony for your sake, that you might believe, and be saved.

35 He was a burning and a shining light, and ye were willing for a season to rejoice in his light.

q I do not speak this to lessen John in any of your thoughts; he was a Famous Light, burning in the knowledge and love of the Truth; shining both in his Doctrine, in publishing the Truth, and also in Holiness of Life and Conversation: He was not that light, John 1. 8. but he was a Light, not 7: 28. tho darkness, but very light, Mar. 4. 14. Luke 8. 16. r And you for a small time pretended a great Affection for John, and came with great Zeal to hear him, Mar. 3. 3. and 21. 26. Mark 1. 5. hoping that he was the Messiah, or at least Elias, or that Prophet in his revived again: But when they saw that John did only bear Record to Christ, they grew cold in their Affection, not liking either his Doctrine, or the strictness of his Life, or the tidings that he brought; looking for a far more glorious and glorious Messiah than Christ appeared to them to be.

r Not that that of my Father, mentioned v. 31, 32. but that that of John (last mentioned); nor doth he say a truer, but a greater witness. u The works which his Father sent him to do, his fulfilling of the Law, his publication of the Gospel, the Miracles which he wrought, were all of them works which his Father had given him to finish. Christ often appealeth to the works which he had done, as Christ often testifying of him, Ch. 10. 25. 37. 38. and 41. 11. and 19. 24. And it is plain, that the People look upon them as a great testimony, Ch. 3. 2. and 9. 33. 39. The Jews avoided the force of this testimony implicitly, force of them saying, that he did them by the help of the Devil, Mar. 12. 24. Others pretending (more lately) that the Messiah was to work no Miracles; but that is expressly contrary to what we have, Ch. 7. 3. and is doubted a device of later years. w But it is a greater Question, how the Miracles of Christ bear witness of him; and whether they were only a probable, or a certain and infallible Testimony of his Deity. Those that think them an infallible Testimony, say, 1. That he did work which none else did, John 15. 24. 2. That he did them by his own Power, Luke 6. 19. There went virtue out of him, and healed them all. 3. That they were done in confirmation of the doctrine to that purpose, which he preached, which God would not have confirmed by Miracles, had not been sent of God to work such things. Those that think they were not a certain and infallible Testimony, say, 1. That the Prophets and Apostles also wrought Miracles. 2. That our Saviour tells his Apostles, they should do greater works than he had done. 3. That the doing of them from his own Power, was a thing could not be known to others; so could he not testify to them. But our Saviour did not only himself raise the dead, cast out Devils, and work other Miracles; but he gave others also a Power to do it, which argued an Original Power in himself, and is more than we read of any Prophets or Apostles; who, tho they wrought such Miraculous Operations, yet having not that Power Originally in, and from themselves, could not communicate it to others.

37 And the Father himself which hath sent me, hath born witness of me; Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, * nor seen his shape.

x Not only in my Baptism, and at my Transfiguration, by an audible Voice from Heaven, but by the Voice of his Prophets, by whom he spoke to your Fathers. y You have no knowledge of him, nor any acquaintance with him. It is expounded, v. 38. Ye have not his word abiding in you: For tho indeed God appeared to the Jews in no shape or similitude; yet they (that is, their Fore-fathers) had heard his Voice, Deut. 4. 12. Speaking out of the midst of the fire, v. 32. God being an incorporeal Being, hath no such organs of Speech as we have, by which we declare our minds unto others; but God had formed an audible Voice, by which he revealed his will unto the Jews: So as it could only be said of the Jews of that Generation and their Forefathers, from the time of giving the Law, that they had not heard his Voice; for Exod. 20. 19. they then desired that Moses might speak to them, and that God would speak no more immediately. Accordingly, he did by the Prophets speak to them, Heb. 1. 3. but they would not believe them; no, not when he spake to them by his Son, who knew his will.

38 And you have not his word abiding in you, for whom he hath sent, him ye believe not.

z Though they heard the word of the Lord, their Forefathers, by the Prophets, and in that Generation by John the Baptist (the Messenger sent before Christ's face) and now by Christ himself, whom the Father had sent; yet the word of the Lord had no place in their Hearts, Ch. 8. 37. it was unto them as a Tale told; they received the sound of it, but it was not graven in their Hearts. A and this appeared, because as of themselves they had no intimacy of Communion with God to know his mind: So when the Son was sent out of the Bosom of the Father to reveal God unto them, yet they would not receive him, so as to give any ready, fixed assent to what he revealed, and to yield him any just and true Obedience.

39 * Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and * they are they which testify of me.

b The words may be read either Imperatively (as our Translation readeth them) or Indicatively; you do search the Scriptures (that is, of the Old Testament, for the books of the New Testament were not at that time written), so they had the Books of the Old Testament; so they made use of them: And they (the Pharisees especially) were very well versed both in the Law and the Prophets: They did agree that the way of Salvation and Revealing Life was revealed unto them in the Holy Scriptures; nay, they did judge, that Eternal Life was to be obtained by their observation of the Law d. They (saith our Saviour) are my principal Testimony; he doth not only say, they testify, but they are they that testify. No Writings but those testify of me; I principally appeal to them to give you an account of me.

40 And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life.

c You will not own, embrace, and receive me as the true Messiah and Saviour of the World, tho that be the one means by which you can obtain f that Eternal Life which you pretend to be seeking after; and rightly think that the Scripture alone can show you the way to. These two Verities teach us, 1. That the Holy Scriptures are the only Writings which show us the way to Life Eternal. 2. That not only the Scriptures of the New, but also of the Old Testament, are of use in order thereto, tho the Old Testament Scriptures shew us it more darkly, and those of the New Testament shew us it more clearly. 3. That both the one and the other point us to Christ, and to the receiving and embracing of him, as our Saviour, if we would have Life. 4. That it is not sufficient for us to search the Scriptures, and be well in, and acquainted with them, unless we in Obedience to them come to Christ.

d I depend not upon the single Testimony of men: Or, I seek not, nor hunt after the Honour of men, nor regard what they think or say of me.

42 But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you.

e You pretend a great deal of Religion, and to do many things out of love to God, and a zeal for the Glory of God; but tho you can do these things, yet you cannot deceive me; I that search the Hearts, and try the Reins, and am a witness to your Actions, know that whatsoever you pretend, the true love of God dwelleth not in you; and that is the reason why you do not receive me.

43 I am come in my Fathers name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

f I am come clothed with an Authority from my Father, sent by him for this very purpose, to reveal his will to men for their Salvation: I speak, I do nothing but by the Authority of my Father which sent me: nor do I aim at my own Glory, but the Glory of him that sent me; yet you give no Credit to my words, nor embrace me, as him whom God hath sent for the Saviour of Man. g Through the Corruption of your Hearts, and the just judgment of God, giving you up to strong delusions, yo believe lies, 2 Thef. 2. 11. If any Seducers come, without any Authority from God, never sent of him, nor speaking his words, nor seeking his Glory, or your good, you will readily enough receive them.

44 How can ye believe which receive honour from one another, and seek not * the honour that cometh from God only?

h It is evident that by receiving Honour from one another, is here to be understood the seeking and pursuing of Honour and Applause from men, without regard to the praise of God. So also Ch. 12. 43. For otherwise it is Lawful for Parents to receive Honour from their Children, from Servants, Princes, and other Majestates, from People; but for men to be Ambitious of Honour and Applause of men, in neglect of the Honour and Praise of God, this is highly sinful; and it cannot be expected that any such Persons should so far deny themselves, and renounce their own works of Righteousness, as to accept of Christ and his Righteousness, and rely upon him alone for Life and Salvation. It is said, John 12. 42, 43. There amongst the chief Rulers, many believed: Yet it is added, v. 43. For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God. But those words, v. 43. seem rather to refer to the Pharisees, mentioned in the latter part of v. 42. where a Reason is given, why tho many great Rulers believed, yet they did not confess Christ, because of the Pharisees. Or it should be so, v. 43. be to be applied to those of whom it is said, they believed, v. 42. we must distinguish concerning believing, which in Ch. 12. 42. signifieth no more than an assent given to him as a great Prophet, upon the Miracles they saw wrought by him: In this place, a true and lively Faith, receiving Christ as our Mediator and Saviour.

45 Do not think that I will accuse you to the Father: no, there is one that accuseth you, even Moses, in whom ye trust.

i There will be no need of my accusing you, n you will need no other Accuser than that Moses for whom you have so great a Reverence, and for whose sake you condemn me, Ch. 9. 28, 29. They said, We are Moses his Disciples; and that God spake unto Moses: as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is. This Moses (saith our Saviour) will accuse you unto the Father.

46 For ye had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me, for * he wrote of me.

o Had you given an hearty credit and understanding, and assent to Moses; that is, to the writings of Moses, for so the term is often taken, Luke 16. 31. and 24. 27. you would have received me; as all the Law of Moses pointed to, and prefigured me, so he in particular wrote of me, Gen. 3. 19. Deut. 18. 15.

him that lay at the Pool of Bethesda. 2. His making himself equal with the Father.
* Lev. 23: 35. 3. Now the Jews feast of tabernacles was at hand.

4. The Feast of Tabernacles was a Feast which God ordained the Jews to keep the fifteenth day of the seventh month (which some make to answer our September, others our October) Lev. 23: 34, 35. after they had gathered in the Fruits of the Land. It was to be kept seven days, the first and last of which days were to be kept as Sabbaths; they were all the seven days to dwell in Tents or Booths, in remembrance of the forty years they so dwelt in the Wilderness, passing from Egypt to Canaan, as we read there, v. 43. Now this Festival was near at hand; so we must understand the things following to have happened about the September or October before Christs Suffering, which was at the next Passover: that is, the March or April following, as we count the Months.

e His Friends and Kindred; fee the Notes on Mat. 12. 47, 48. f Either, such as did believe in him, or such as did not believe; for v. 5. all of them did not believe in him, would have him leave Galilee, which was the far more fruitful, secure and ignoble part of the Country; and go into Judea, which was the more noble and famous Province; that those who in that Province followed him, might also fee the Miracles which he wrought.

4. For there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly g: If thou do these things, shew thy self to the world h.

g The things which thou doest, thou doest out of a desire by them to be more known, and to spread thy Fame and Glory. For this Galilee is not a proper place, because it is an obscure part in the Country. The Phrase which we Translate, to be made known, is in the Greek, καταπαύειν. The usage of it here seemeth to be something different from the use of it in other places of Holy Writ. It sometimes signifies confidence and security; and we Translate it boldness, Acts 13: 16. and 26: 26. and 28: 31. Phil. 1: 20. Heb. 3: 6. and 10: 19. But this cannot be the sense of this Text; for it were no sense to say, seeketh to be known boldly, confidently, or securely: Sometimes we Translate it openly, as in this Text; and Chap. 11: 54. and Col. 2: 15. It sometimes signifies a freedom of speech, Acts 2: 29. 84: 13. 2 Cor. 7: 4. Sometimes it signifieth clearness and plainness of speech, Ch. 16: 24. and 11: 14. Sometimes it signifieth a speaking in public Meetings, as in Mark 8: 32. Chap. 18: 20. Dr. Hammond notes, that it also sometimes signifies to speak with Authority, Acts 4: 29. 31. and Eph. 6: 19. Certainly the use of its primary signification, signifieth a freedom and boldness of speech; which freedom and boldness is necessary to him that speaketh openly, and in Public Meetings; and is advantaged by the Authority which any man hath to speak: Hence in a secondary sense it may signify both to speak with Authority, and also to speak in Public Assemblies; and this last I take to be here signified. It is (as our Saviours Friends tell him) both against Reason, and the ordinary course of the World, for men desirous of Opportunity to speak boldly and freely in Public Assemblies, to keep themselves in obscure places, where are no such Public Assemblies. b They therefore advise him, that if indeed he wrought these Miraculous Operations, and were able to produce such Effects, he would not bury up himself and his Reputation in such an hole as Galilee, but shew himself to the more noted and famous part of the World, which was, as to that part of the World, Hierusalem, and at the Feast now, where multitudes of the People would be to Celebrate the Feast of Tabernacles.

* Mark 3: 21. 5. For neither do his brethren believe in him i. i Not all his own Friends and Kindred; he came not only among his own Country-men, but among his own Relations, and they received him not: Or if they had some Opinion of him, and some little hopes concerning him, yet they did not believe that he was greater Proof and Demonstration. Certainly there cannot be a greater external means, aids, and assurances for their Faith, than Christs Preaching amongst them; and confirming his Doctrine by Miraculous Operations before them, if now they had a power in their own wills, to have loo'd upon Christs as the true Messiah, and Saviour of the World; and accordingly to have received and embraced him; what was the matter they believed not, or as yet at least they believed not in him?

6. Then Jesus said unto them, My time is not yet come k: but your time is always ready l.

k The time of my Death (say some) of my manifestation to the World (say others); but questionless our Saviour intends no more than his time for his going up to this Feast, for we shall read that he did go up afterwards; but (said he) as yet I cannot go up; I may go when you please: And this he further openeth, saying,

7. The world cannot hate you m; but me it hateth n, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil o.

m By the World, our Saviour plainly understandeth the men of the World; men not Regenerated, Renewed, and Sanctified. These men, faith he, cannot as yet hate you; there was a time afterward when this part of the World hated all the Disciples of Christ, as Christ foretold, Ch. 15: 18. but that was after the Doctrine of the Gospel was more Preached, and made known to the World by the Preaching of the Apostles: And therefore Christ faith (in that place) that it hated him before i. I say, therefore, Christ first published the Doctrine of the Gospel, and so became the first object of the Worlds hatred on that account. These his Brethren were not concerned (that we read of) at this time in the publication of it, nor had any occasion to make themselves known, and odious to the World upon that account; therefore he faith, the World (the wicked Jews, here so called) could not be reasonably imagined to have any spite or malignity to them. But (faith he) it hateth; that is apparent from what we met with Ch. 5: 18. n But this was not for any fault in Christ, but only for his Preaching the Doctrine of the Gospel, and for proving them for the evil of their works, the corruption of their Doctrine, and the Errors of their Life and Conversation.

8. Go ye up unto this feast p: I go not up yet unto this feast q, for my time is not yet full r.

q Let not my forbearance to go up, hinder your going up according to the Law. p I have some particular reasons, why as yet I will not go to be there at the beginning of it. q I know my time to go, when it will be most safe and proper for me. I shall be there some time during the Feast, but my time is not yet come. I shall not be there at the beginning of it; v. 14. It appeareth that he came up into the Temple about the middle of it, which was three or four days after it was begun, for it held seven days, Lev. 23: 35, 36. Or his time was not come, because he designed to go very privately without any notice takes of his coming; which must have been, if he had at that time gone up with his Kindred and Acquaintance.

9. When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee s.

s He let them take their Journey to Hierusalem to the Feast, without him, and himself still abode in Galilee.

10. But when his brethren were gone up, then went he also up unto the feast f, not openly, but as it were in secret i.

f He went up to shew his Obedience to his Fathers Commands, Exod. 23: 17. The Feast of Tabernacles, was the same with the Feast of Ingathering in the end of the Year, when they had gathered their Labours out of the Field, mentioned Exod. 23: 16. and that was one of those three times (as appears from that Chapter) when all the Males in Israel were to appear before the Lord, v. 17. Christ being born under the Law, sheweth a punctual Obedience to it; and therefore in Obedience to it, he would go up; But his Wisdom desired much Prudence; and therefore he did not go up openly, nor in any crowd of Company, but secretly, to reach up, that we are not so frantically tied up to Ritual Precepts, which concern only Rites and Circumstances of Worship, that we may not abate them sometimes for the performance of Moral Duties. It was a Moral Duty incumbent upon our Saviour to preserve himself with what Wisdom and Prudence he could, from the rage of his Enemies, till his time should fully come to yield up himself to their rage; which was the reason why he went up now only, without any company, where he was to suffer, went up with all imaginable boldness and alacrity; leading the way, to their amazement, Mark 10: 32.

11. Then s the Jews sought him at the feast, * Chap. 15. and said, VVhere is he n?

n Our Saviours confiant going up to the Jewish Feasts, made the Rulers of the Jews, who sought to slay him, Ch. 5: 18. at the Feast of the Passover (which was slain by them before this) because he had violated the Sabbath (as they interpreted his healing the Impotent man that day, and bidding him take up his Bed and walk) and because he had made made himself equal with God his Father, as Ch. 5: 18. kept him the first days of the Feast, speaking of him with great contentment and light.

12. And s there was much murmuring amongst the people concerning him w: For s some said, He is a good man: others said, Nay, but he deceived the people x.

w Our Saviours constant attendance at these Publick Festivals, did not only create an expectation of his being there amongst his Enemies, who therefore sought him, that they might destroy him; but amongst the generality of the People, who had very different Opinions about him. x Some having heard his Doctrine, and hearing nothing from him but what was good and Spiritual, tending to shew them the way of Holiness, and the true Path-way to Eternal Life and Happiness, concluded that he was a good man: Others said, he was a mere Impostor, one that deceived and cheated the more ignorant common People.

13. Howbeit, no man spake openly of him, for fear of the Jews y.

y Tho many, both of the Galileans, among whom he had conferred, as the common People of Judea, had the same Opinion of Christ, yet the Rulers of the Jews were in such a Rage against him, that his Friends durst not freely discourse their thoughts concerning him.

14. Now about the midst of the feast, Jesus went up into the Temple, and taught z.

z About the third or fourth day of the Feast (which continued seven days) our Lord being (as was said before) come up privately and by stealth, as it were, to Hierusalem, first appears in the Temple Preaching. What our Saviour at this time Discours'd about, the Evangelist doth not tell us; but doubtless it was the things of the Kingdom of God, which were the usual Themes or Arguments of his Discourse, as we may easily understand by the latter part of it. Our Lord probably delivered his Preaching in the middle of the Feast, partly, because the People were in bustle after him was now a little over; and that there might be a fuller concourse of People to hear him.

15. And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned a?

a Having never been at a constant School at the Feet of any of the Jewish Doctors, nor been Educated in their Schools of the Prophets; they wonder how he should come by such knowledge of the Law of God, as he delivered in his Discourses; wherein he made it appear, that he did not only know the letter of the Law, but the more Myterious sense of it, the great Myteries of the Kingdom of God.

16. Jesus answered them, and said b, My Doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me b.

b My Doctrine is not mine, considering me as the Son of Man; nor taught, or to be taught me by men; not learned out of Books, or by the Precept of men; not invented by me; but it is mine as it is the Doctrine of the Father that sent me, and I and my Father both are one, and agree in one, i. John 5: 7, 8. and being so, there was no such need that Christ should be Learned, in their sense, viz. at the feet of the Doctors, and in their Schools. But Enthusiasts vainly argue from hence, That there is no need of Humane Learning for him who is to be a Preacher of the Gospel: For Christ was not mere man, but one in whom the fulness of the Godhead dwelt bodily. No such thing will stand from the Prophecy of Amos, who was an Herdman, or the Apostles who were Fishermen; much less from the Preaching of Christ. We must distinguish betwixt an extraordinary and an ordinary Calling: And tho it be true, that the Ministers of the Gospel Preach Doctrine which is not theirs, but that they sent them; yet it doth not follow, that they must come by the knowledge of this Doctrine in the same manner that Christ did; who was in the bosom of the Father, and knew his will, and came from him to communicate it to the World: Nor yet in the same manner that the Prophets and the Apostles came to the knowledge of it, as by Christs vocal Instruction. So also by the Influence of the Holy Spirit upon them in the days of Power, which abode upon them.

17. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God c, or whether I speak of my self d.

c If our Saviour seemeth to obviate an Objection which the Jews would make, viz. How they should know God? He indeed said so, but how should they have any Evidence of it? How could he make it appear to them to be of God? If any man (saith our Saviour) will do his will, &c. That is, If any man hath an Heart truly disposed to know and embrace whatsoever shall be revealed to him to be the will of God, how contrary soever it be to the interest of his own Lust; and ready to do it in all things; and live according to the Precept and Revelation of it; having a serious purpose of Heart to obey God in every thing. If he feeleth for Truth seriously, and in the fear of the Lord, laying aside all Vainness, Malice, Harred, and any corrupt Passions or Affections, God will reveal the Truth to him, so as he shall know the Doctrine that is of God: And that I do not speak of or from my self, but by Authority from my Father. Now, from hence indeed followeth, That corrupt Affections, Passions, and Prejudices; and an ill Life, may prejudice, yes, and will prejudice men from receiving of the Free Grace of God, Spiritual Illuminations, and the Gift of Faith: So as men that give way to such Prejudices, or maintain such Passions, or live such Lives, shall be left of God to their Native blindness, and to strong delusions, and not discern the Truth in the light that openly shineth in their Faces. But from hence it will not follow, That a Moral Life, and a Study of, and a seeking after Truth, are the cause of Faith, or effective of it, with the working of our own will.

18. He that speaketh of himself, seeketh his own glory e: but he that seeketh his glory that is sent him, the fame is true f, and no unrighteousness is in him g.

e Here our Saviour giveth them another note, by which they might know that his Doctrine was of God, because he spake not of himself, nor sought his own Glory in what he delivered. No man doth an Action of, and from himself, but he maketh himself the end of his Action: For to what purpose should a man devise and broach new Morions; but for some selfish Advantage, that he may get some Profit, or some Honour and Applause from men? f But if a man Acts as Servant to another, and seeketh only the Honour and Applause of another, he is true, and cannot be presumed to have spoke of, and from himself, but of and from him whose Honour and Glory he seeketh to advance; and in reason ought to be judged sincere and faithful in the execution of the Trust committed to him: And g it is without fraud and deceit, having no unrighteousness in him; there being no just cause to be presumed which should move him to speak any thing that is false. Hence also may be learned a good Rule or Direction, which Divines ordinarily make use of to help us to judge of the truth of Doctrines. Those Doctrines which most tend to the advancing the Honour and Glory of God, and least to the advancement of the Creature, those are most likely to be of God. And this also most tendeth to confirm the Reputation of Holy Writ, and the Peumen of it; for it is manifest that the Peumen of it fought not their own Glory in their Writings, but the Honour and Glory of God, taking all shame to themselves.

19. Did not s Moyses give you the law h, and yet none of you keepeth the law i? VVhy s go ye about to kill me k?

h Moyses was Gods Instrument in delivering his Law to the People, Exod. 24: 3. Deut. 33: 4. i A Law which none of them exactly kept; by what brake; y why do you (saith our Saviour) make it such a Capital Crime (suppose ye were not in an Error, but I had in this one point of the Sabbath violated the Law) in me, to break the Law, that you for it would have my Blood? how cometh it to be a more heinous Offence in me to break the Law in one thing, than it is in you who violate it in so many things? Or, k do not you think it a Capital Crime maliciously to go about to destroy an Innocent Person? Is not that a greater breach, thy doing of the sixth Commandment, than what I have done, is of the fourth? Supposing that had been any breach of the Law at all, which indeed it was not.

20. The people answered and said l, Thou hast a devil i: who goeth about to kill thee m.

l The Jews had an Opinion, that whosoever was beside himself, and talked distractedly, was influenced with an evil Spirit: So s, Thou hast a Devil, is no more than thou art Mad; unless we will take the Phrase as a mere term of Reproach, such as we ordinarily use to speak of from some men in their Passions, when they hear any speak what is false, and hath no congruity with truth, according to their apprehensions, saying, The Devil is in you; the former is the milder Interpretation, tho in that was sufficient, considering who it that spake. m It is very proper to observe that the common People (to whom our Saviour was now speaking) knew nothing of the design of their Rulers, mentioned Chap. 5: 18. f, to spake this innocently (tho in their Passion) having no such design in their Hearts; but they ought not so peremptorily to have denied what our Saviour positively affirmed, who knew the Designs and Counsels of all men, Hearts, they knew them not.

21. Jesus answered and said unto them n, I have done one work, and ye all marvel o.

n By the one Miracle it is plain by what followeth, that he meant healing the man who lay at the Pool of Bethesda; at this, he faith, they marvelled; by which is to be seen, that they were be understood offended (for so it is expounded by Jer. 27. 23. and to this sense is our Saviour's subsequent Discourse.

22 * Moses therefore gave unto you circumcision b, (not because it is of Moses, but * of the fathers) and ye on the Sabbath-day circumscribe a man c.

a The Parable therefore for this [αὐτῶν] maketh in this Verse a great difficulty, what the meaning of it should be. The most probable account of it is, that it be- longeth to the former Verse, which should read thus—ye all marvel for this. This indeed maketh all plain; otherwise it is very hard to give an account what force it can have, if we consider it as a note of a cause. b Deut. 10. 16. ye Circumcise, that is, a Law about Circumcision; yet that Law had its rise from Moses: The Law was given to your Father Abraham, Gen. 17. 10. long before Moses his time. c In obedience to that Law, you Circum- scribe a Male Child, or a Prophesiee, that is, a man grown, on the Sabbath-day.

23 If a man on the Sabbath-day receive Circumcision, [that] the law of Moses should not be broken d, are ye angry at me, because I have made a man every whit whole on the Sabbath-day?

The strength of this whole Argument seemeth to be this. If a Ritual Law (such was that for observation of the Sabbath, given in Mount Sinai, Exod. 20.) may give place to another Ritual Law which is antecedent (such was that of Circumcision, given to Abraham long before) much more ought it to give place to a Law of Nature written in every man's Heart, viz. That it is our Duty to help those that are in great degrees of Misery and Affliction; which is what I paid Obsequies in. Curing the Impotent man that lay at the Pool of Bethesda. d Do you yield this in your daily practice, that a man may be Circumcised, yea, and ought to be Circumcised on the eighth day, tho' it happeneth to be the Sabbath-day; and not to do it, were a violation of the Law of Moses about Circumcision, which was a Law given you by Moses, tho' before him, to Abraham also? e What reason then have you to be Angry with me, b Deut. 10. 16. on the Sabbath-day have only healed a man, and made him every whit whole: That is, (as some think) I have not only Cured him as to his Body, (but as to his Soul, [but that hardly seemeth probable; for if it were so, the Jews could have no Evidence of the Spiritual Cure.] Others therefore think that the term wholly, signifieth no more than perfectly, or completely whole, as to his Body.

24 * Judge not according to the appearance f, but judge righteous judgment g.

f Do not Judge Persons, and condemn me for what I have done, merely out of your Hatred, Prejudice, and Malice against me. Or do not judge according to the first appearance of this Fact. It looketh to you as a violation of the Sabbath; it is not indeed so; but the performance of a Duty greater than that of Sanctifying the Sabbath, viz. g Judge Righteously, and do not condemn in me what you yourselves do in other causes, because of your hatred to, and prejudice against me; nor condemn an Action which is in it self a Righteous Action, and not deserving Condemnation.

25 Then said some of them of Jerusalem, Is not this he whom they seek to kill h?

h Those who here speak, are said to be of Hierusalem (probably Citizens) who knew more of the Designs and Counsels of the Chief Priests and Elders, than those who said before, v. 20. Thou hast a Devil: who seeketh to kill thee?

26 But lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him i: Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ k?

The first reason being over, it is probable that the Rulers had not heard that Christ was come up to the Feast; this made the People think, & That they had some know- ledge that he was the Messiah; otherwise they would have taken some course to have restrained his so free and open Discouraging: But we shall in the latter part of this Chap- ter find that they were mistaken; for as soon as they heard where he was, and what he was doing, they used all means they could to Apprehend him.

Luke 4. 22.

27 * Howbeit we know this man whence he is: for when Christ cometh, no man knoweth whence he is m.

I We know he is of Nazareth, and that Joseph is his reputed Father. n They also knew whence the Messiah was to come; That he was to be of the Family of David, of the Tribe of Juda, of the Town of Bethlehem. The Chief Priests and Elders had this purpose, without the least hesitation, Mat. 2. 6. but they had no Relation to guide them to know of what particular Family he should be; thus this Verse is easily reconciled to v. 42. Others think, that they speak of the second manifestation of Christ. They had a Tradition, which was borrowed on Holy Writ, That was to come out of Bethlehem: But then they had another Tradition; That he should be taken away from thence, and hidden for some Years, and then again appear as a Person unknown where he came. Which Opinion, if some, was borrowed on the Revelations of the Old Testament concerning a double Regeneration of Christ, Isa. 53. 8. Who shall declare his Generation? Micha. 5. 2. The one of which is to be understood of his Eternal Generation, which none can de- clare. The other, as to the Generation of his Humane Nature. But the Jews not understanding that the Messiah was to be God-man, understood both of his Humane Nature; which made them think, that he was to be born at Bethlehem, according to Micha. 5. 2. yet he was to be carried away for some Years some whither; so as when he came to appear to the World, none should know whence he came; but he should appear as a man dropped down from Heaven. Now Christ having been offered in the Temple at his Mothers Purification, went back again with his Parents, Luke 2. 39. came to Nazareth, and ordinarily went up to Hierusalem; there he was found disputing with the Doctors, v. 46. And at last, we find him telling with his Parents at Nazareth, and being subject to them; after which we read no more of him, till he came to Judea to be Baptized; so as the Jews had known and observed the whole course of Christs Life.

28 Then cried Jesus in the Temple as he taught, saying, Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am n; * and I am not come of my self, but * Chap. 4. 43. that sent me * is true, * whom ye know not e. Chap. 4. 42. Chap. 4. 43. You might have known me by the Doctrine which I have taught, and the Miracles which I have wrought among Chap. 4. 44. you; and you had known me, if you had not shut your Eyes against the Light, which shone in your Face. Or Chap. 4. 45. you say, and think that you know me; others think that it is an Irony, or as a Question, Do you know me so well? If you did, you would know that I came not of my self, but was sent by my Father; and that sent me is True in itself; but you know not the Father, and therefore cannot know me as indeed I am.

29 But * I know him p, for I am from him q, and he hath sent me r.

p I know him, so as no man else knoweth him, Mat. 11. 27. q I know his Essence, his Will, his Counsels, his Laws. r For I am from him by an Eternal Generation, his only begotten Son; and I am sent by him, as the Mediator and Saviour of the World, to declare, and to execute his Will and Pleasure, as to mans Salvation.

30 Then they sought to take him s; but * Mat. 11. 27. no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not Chap. 4. 43. yet come d.

d By this time the News was come to the Sandrim, the Chap. 4. 43. great Court of the Jews, to whom belonged the cognizance Chap. 4. 44. of Church-Affairs, falsely Prophets, Blasphemy, Violation of the Sabbath, &c. they took Counsel, and used endeavours to Apprehend him; or it may be, some of the ruler sort of People that were his Enemies used some such endeavours, but not with any effect; for by the mighty Provi- dence of God, who had let the time when Christ should suffer; till that hour was come, mentioned also Chap. 8. 20. and 12. 23. there was such a restraint upon the rage of the Rabbis; yea (as we shall hereafter hear) the Spirits of the Officers, who were sent from the Sandrim to Apprehend him, that they had no power to lay hold upon him. Men shall do us no hurt, till Gods time come. A Sparrow fall not to the ground without the will of our Father.

u Not as the true Messiah; for the next words let us know, they did not believe him to be the Christ, but look'd for him to come; but they gave Credit to him, as a great Prophet sent from God: And w doubted whether the Mi- racles which he wrought, were not as many, and as great as ever the Messiah would do when he came. For hence John reports but a few Miracles wrought by Christ; yet they were such as required a Divine Power to produce; such as turning the Water into Wine, multiplying the Loaves, raising Lazarus from the dead, &c. And John tells us, Chap. 20. 30. and 21. 25. That he did many more works than he hath Recorded in this Book; and many more are Recorded by the other three Evangelists. From hence may be observed the fullhood of the later Jews, who say that the Messiah is to work any Miracles; for it is apparent from hence, that they had in our Saviour a general expectation of great Miracles to be done by the Messiah; and their expectation was truly founded upon Isaiah 53. 5. as appears by Mat. 11. 5.

32 * The Pharisees heard that the people mur- mured x such things concerning him: and the Pharisees, and the chief Priests sent officers to take him y.

x Murmured here is taken in a different sense from what it was before, and signifieth as much as whispered, or talked privately among themselves. y The Chief Priests, who were afraid that their Honour would abate amongst the People; and the Pharisees, who were afraid the Cre- dit of their Traditions would be lost, if they suffered him to go on; and being more especially troubled for the Mi- racles which he daily wrought, as Chap. 11. 47. They sent Messengers from their great Court (kept at Hieru- salem) to Apprehend him.

33 Then said Jesus unto them, * Yet a little while I am with you, and then I go to him that sent me z.

z Whether Christ spake these words to the Officers sent to Apprehend him, or to the people in the Temple, is not much material to be known: He by them plainly declareth, that all their endeavours against him were vain and foolish; for he should yet live with them six Months (this was in September or October, he dyed at the next Passover, which was about six Months after this) and then he should go and willingly lay down his Life for the sins of the World, rise again from the dead, and ascend unto his Father who sent him into the World.

34 * Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: a and where I am, thither ye cannot come b.

a Some think the meaning is, You shall seek me; to ex- ecute your malice upon me, but to no purpose, for you shall not find me. Or, you shall seek me to destroy me in my Church, and to root out my Name, but to no purpose. But the most probable sense is this; you wicked Jews, that now condemn the means of Grace by me offered to you, shall one day be in distress and calamity enough; and when you are so, then you will with I were again amongst you; but I shall be Ascended to my Father; and as deaf to your Prayers, as above the reach of your malice. There is much the same thing said in Mat. 23. 39. That he here speaketh of his Ascension is plain from Chap. 15. 33. He speaketh of Heaven as a place where he was at that time, for he was as to his Divine Nature. It is where y, whither I go; which makes some think, it should not be shall, but was, and shall. But others reject it, be- cause it is a Poetical word, hardly used in the New Testa- ment.

35 Then said the Jews among themselves; Whither will he go, that we shall not find him c? c Chap. 4. 43. Chap. 4. 44. Chap. 4. 45. Chap. 4. 46. Chap. 4. 47. Chap. 4. 48. Chap. 4. 49. * Chap 9. 16. 43 * So there was a division among the people because of him p. p A Division as to their Opinions about him, as was before expressed.
* Ver. 30. 44 And * some of them would have taken him; but no man laid hands on him q.
q There were some that had an ill Opinion of Christ, and put on the Officers that came for the purpose to Apprehend him; but there was none so hardy as to do it.
45 ¶ Then came the officers to the chief Priests and Pharisees, and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?
r Probably the Officers, Christ being amongst a multitude of the People that had an high Opinion of him, durst not adventure to Apprehend him: Some of them, as appeareth from what follows, were astonished at his Doctrine; all of them agreed to return to their Masters without him; at which they are angry, and ask them, how it came to pass, that they did not execute their Commands, in bringing Christ before them as a Malefactor, to answer what they should lay to his Charge.
46 The officers answered, Never man spake like this man f.
f With so much Authority, Evidence of truth, &c. Yet they did not cordially believe in Christ; being under the power of Carnal and Worldly Affections, which only supernatural Special Grace could subdue. There were some of thole, in whom the Prophecy of Christ, Isaiah 11. 4. was to be fulfilled. — He shall sit on the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips he shall slay the wicked. The word of the Lord doth often restrain, astonish, and amaze thole on whom it hath no powerful effect to Eternal Life and Salvation. So it was with these poor Officers.
47 Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived?
g You, who have us not only for your Masters, whose Commands you ought not to dispute, but to execute; but for your Teachers also, from whom you might have learned better Doctrine; are you seduced? For lo wicked men count all who embrace not their Notions, and follow not their ways.
* Chap. 12. 42. 48 * Have any of the rulers, or of the Pharisees believed on him n? n You ought to be ruled by us, and guided by us, who are your Rulers, and your Teachers, (so early did the Doctrine of impie Faith and Obedience creep into the World) which is indeed to suppose an Infallibility in Teachers and Rulers, to whom indeed we owe all imaginable Reverence; but we must live by our own Faith: And tho the Jews were bound up, Deut. 17. 10. 11. to do according to the sentence that the Priests and Levites in Hierusalem should them; yet v. 11. it must be the sentence of the Law, and it was in Civil matters, as appeareth by v. 8. Controversies between Blood and Blood, Plea and Plea, Struck and Struck.
49 But this people who knoweth not the Law are cursed v.
w Out of the great Pride of their Hearts they vilifie the people, as not Learned in the Law, and so were cursed, contemptible, and not to be regarded, as to their judgement and sentiments.
50 Nicodemus saith unto them, (he that came to J Jesus by night, being one of them) x. x Of Nicodemus we read, Chap. 3. 2. and of his coming by Night to Jesus. He now being one of this great Court, stands up to speak for Christ, yet faintly, or at least wonderfully prudently, and warily. He saith no more for him than he ought to have spoken for the greatest Malefactor, viz.
* Deut. 1. 17. 51 * Doth our law judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doeth y?
y That no Law of God or Nature Condemneth any man before he had heard him speak, or had what he did deplored by Witnesses before them; that they might know what he did.
* Mat. 4. 15. 52 They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee z? Search, and look: for * out of Galilee ariseth no prophet a. z Not that they thought Nicodemus was a Galilean; they knew him well enough; but they take up this as a term of Reproach against him, for that he would offer to speak one word (tho never so just) on the behalf of one against whom they had such a perfix hatred. a Search, say they, the Scriptures, and look if ever there came a Prophet out of Galilee. Suppose this had been truth; yet 1. What did this concern our Saviour? who was not Born in Galilee, but in Juda in Berlethem, the City of David, Luke 24. 2. could not God when he pleased influence one of Galilee with the Spirit of Prophecy? But z. Neither is it true; for Nahum and Jonah were both Galileans, 2 Kings 14. 25. compared with Isaiah 19. 13. (for the Tribe of Zebulun had their Lot in Galilee) Isaiah 9. 1.

53 And every man went unto his own house b.
b As little as Nicodemus said for Christ, it put a stop to their further proceedings against Christ at present: Some think that the party of the Sadducees in the Council, who valued not the Pharisees Rites and Traditions, took part with Nicodemus; so as by the over-ruling hand of God Christ at this time escaped their wicked Counsels against him. So much is certain; but what parties in the Council concurred in it, is uncertain.
C H A P. VIII.
J Esus went unto the mount of Olives a.
a A Mountain within less than two miles of Hierusalem, whither our Saviour, when he was at Hierusalem, was wont often to withdraw, for Privacy and Devotion, Mat. 24. 3. and 26. 30. Luke 21. 37. & 22. 39.
2 And early in the morning he came again into the temple b, and all the people came unto him; and he laid down, and taught them d.
b So at our Lords last Passover Luke notes, Chap. 21. 38. That all the People came to him early in the morning in the Temple to hear him. Our Saviour early going into the Temple to teach, and the Peoples diligence in coming to early to him to hear, ought to check our slothfulness in sacred business. c Multitudes of People came to him; in the Universal Parable all must be expounded in a multitude of Scriptures. d He, after the manner of the Jewish Teachers, laid down, and taught them: Of this Custom of theirs, for their Doctors, while they taught, to sit down, we have had occasion to speak before.
3 And the scribes e and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery; and when they had set her in the midst, f.
e There were (as they say) three sorts of Scribes amongst the Jews. The first were Secretaries to Princes and great men; so Simeon was Scribe to David, 2 Sam. 20. 23. A Second sort, were such as we call Scribes, or Publick Notaries, who made Instruments for People, and were employed in their more private Bargains and Contrads: Neither of them seem to have been of Authority enough to have done this act; besides, the Pharisees being joynd with them, makes it evident, that these Scribes were those who expounded the Law in the Temple, and in the Synagogues; and are therefore called Lawyers; they are often joynd with the Pharisees in our Saviours Discourses, Mat. 23. 13. 14. 15. &c. And we find them often joyning with them in their Discourses and Actions, tending to entrap our Saviour; such was their Design at this time.
4 They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act f.
f They bring to our Saviour a Woman taken in the Act of Adultery, and set her before him.
5 * Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned g: but what sayest thou h?
g Moses in the Law, Lev. 20. 10. commanded, that such a Person should be put to death; but we read of no Malefactor should be put to death. And their Rule was, that when the Law had set no kind of death for an Offence, then the middle kind of death was to be their Punishment, which they counted Strangling to be: But they ordinarily entitled Moses to their Traditional Additions: tho the Law & death being commanded by the Law, as the Punishment of such Offenders, they took themselves to be at liberty to determine the kind of death, as Prudence, and reason of State ruled them; so as probably, they seeing that that sin grew very frequent amongst them, they appointed Strangling to be the kind of death: such Malefactors should be put to death. The manner of which we are told was this: The Guilty Person was to be carried up to some high Place, and thrown down from thence headlong by such as Witnessed against him; then they threw stones at him till they had killed him (if not killed by the fall); or covered him, if he died. This they tell our Saviour Moses commanded, because he had commanded in the general, that such a Person should dye; and their Sanhedrim had determined this particular death to such Malefactors: h But they would know what our Saviour said to this.
6 This they said, tempting him, that they might have to accuse him i. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground as though he heard them not k.
i Their design was from his answer to take some colourable pretence to Accuse, and either to discredit him with with the People, or to expose him to the displeasure of the Superior Powers. If he had directed to fend her to be punished by the Roman Governours, who administered Justice in Capital Causes, the People would be fir'd with Indignation; for they lookt upon them as Invaders of the Rights of Government that belonged to the Pharisees. If he had advised them to put her to death by their own Power, they advised have Accused him of Sedition, as an Enemy of the Roman Authority. If he had dismissed her as not worthy of death, they would have Accused him to the Sanhedrim, as an Infringer of the Law of Moses, as a favourer of diffidence, an Enemy to Civil Society, and worthy of universal Hatred. This malicious Design, so craftily concerted, our Saviour easily discovered and defeated; whereas they thought it would require most attentive consideration, to extricate himself from the Snare, & He seemed not at all to attend to what they said, but stooping down, wrote on the ground; what he wrote, or how he could write upon the floor of the Temple (which was of stone) are very idle Questions; the first not possible to be resolved, the second impertinent; for it is not said, that he made any impression upon the ground, tho it be said, he wrote upon it. It appeareth plainly to have been but a divertive Action, by which our Saviour signified, that he gave no ear to them.

7 So when they continued asking him, he lift up himself, and said unto them, I fe that is without fin among you, let him first cast a stone at her m.
I They will not let our Saviour alone, but importune him to an Act of stone at her. He that hath no fin, let him first cast a stone at her. The Law of God was, Deut. 17. 7. That in the Execution of Malefactors, The hands of the Witnesses should be first upon him, so put him to death. In reason thole who are zealous for the Punishment of others, should neither be guilty of the fame, nor of greater Crimes themselves. By this saying of our Saviour, we must not understand it the will of God, that thole who are Magistrates, and employed in executing the Lords Vengeance on Malefactors, should themselves be free from all Guilt (for then no Justice should be done.) The Vengeance is Gods, not theirs: It is the Law of God which they execute. He only by this minds them of that Compassion which ought to be found in Persons Prosecuting others justly, that they may execute Judgment with compassion and tenderness, and such moderation as the Law will allow them, considering that they are not free from guilt, but as obnoxious to the Justice of God for other sins, as thole poor Creatures, whom God hath suffered to fall into fins Punishable by Humane Judges.
8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground n.
n When our Saviour had said this, he returneth to his former posture and action (it being not a thing wherein he was concerned, who was not sent into the World to be a Secular Judge) as not at all regarding them.
9 And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last o: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst p.
o This was an Age of very great Corruption as to mens Lives and Manners, as well as to Doctrine, and corruption of Worship; and as other Enormities of Life were very common and ordinary amongst them, so it is very probable were Adulteries; and that their Rulers and Teachers were not without great Guilt. Now, see the power of Conscience, when fet on work by God; these Accusers Conscience were to them as a thousand Witnesses; they were reproved and convicted by them, and notable to stand under the Reflections of them; or to say any thing in Answer to what our Saviour had said: They went away one after another; and possibly it is particularly noted, that they began at the Eldest, because the Conscience of the Eldest of them charged them more deeply for more and greater sins. p Jesus was left not wholly alone, for the next words tell us, that the Woman was still left standing in the midst; and no doubt but his Apostles were there, for they constantly attended him, and no doubt divers others were also there: But the meaning is, that he was by this means quit of the Scribes and Pharisees Company, who were gone out of shame, being thus convicted by their own Conscience, which told them, that whatsoever this Woman was, they were no fir Accusers.
10 When Jesus had lift up himself, and saw none but the woman p, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee q?
q The close of the former verse told us, that thole the Scribes and Pharisees were gone, yet the Woman was left in the midst, expecting Christs Sentence; q Christ knew well enough that the Scribes and Pharisees, this poor Womans Accusers, were gone; but yet he asked warily, and calls for her Accusers, and asks if no man had Condemned her? Thereby intimating, that the Law against Adultery was a just Law; and if the Crime were proved against her, she defered to dye; but she must first be convicted, and Condemned: He asks her, if she were Condemned? For then he had nothing to say. She tells him, None had.

11 She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee r: go, and sin no more f. f He replyeth, Neither did he. He did not acquit her, for he was not to make void the Law of God; nor did he Condemn her: He was neither a Witness in the case, nor yet a Secular Judge, to whom such Judgments did belong; he was only to speak to her, as the Mediator and Saviour of Man. f Go, I discharge thee, as being Corum non Judice, before one who in my present capacity am no Judge to hear this Cause, and to give Sentence in it. Sin no more, whatever become of thee as to mans Judgment, thou hast reason to fear the greater Judgment of God, if thou goest on in a course of sin. Nor doth he say, Commit Adultery no more: but Sin no more. No partial Repentance or Sorrow for any particular fin will suffice a Penitent that hopes for any Mercy from God; but a leaving off all sin, of what kind and degree it be.
12 ¶ Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, * I am the light of the world r: he that followeth me, shall not walk in darkness u, but shall have the light of life w.
r This is what John the Baptist had said of Christ before, Chap. 1. 4. 3. and what Christ said of himself afterwards, Chap. 9. 5. It was prophesied of him, that he should be a light to the Gentiles, and Gods Salvation to the ends of the Earth. And old Simeon saith of him, Luke 1. 32. That he was to be a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the Glory of his People Israel. Light is a thing Glorious in it self, and communicative of it self unto others to guide them. So as Christ is most aptly compared to Light, and spoken of under that Notion; as for his own innate Glory, so for the communicativeness of himself to Creatures; which latter appeareth to be chiefly here intended: v For he saith, that he who followed him, believing his Doctrine, and obeying his Precepts; Living according to his Direction, and his Example, should not be at a loss, how to guide himself, nor remain in the darkness of Sin, Ignorance, and Spiritual Death; but he should have that Light, which bringeth Life along with it, and is sufficient to guide a man in all the works of a Spiritual Life, and at last bring him to Life Eternal.
13 The Pharisees therefore said unto him, Thou bearest record of thy self; thy record is not true x. x It was a known Rule of Law, That none ought to be believed upon a Testimony given to himself; this is that they object to our Saviour, That tho he spake great things of himself, yet he was not to be believed in his own Cause.
14 Jesus answered and said unto them, Though I bear record of my self, yet my record is true y: for I know whence I came, and whither I go z; but * ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go a.
y There is a seeming difficulty to reconcile the words of our Saviour, Chap. 5. 31. If I bear witness of my self, my witness is not true; and his assertion here, Though I bear witness of my self, my record is true: But the Resolution of it is clear by considering that he speaks in the former Chapter of his own single Testimony with respect to them, as not of sufficient validity to Authorize his Divine Vocation, according to the Rule of their Law, that required a double Testimony for Confirmation of things; but here he speaks of the verity of it in it self: For I know whence I came, and whither I go. That is, I know from whom I have received my Commission, (tho secret to the World) even from the Father: And yet after the accomplishing of my Embassy for his Honour, I shall return to Heaven, and be Glorified with the Glory I had with him before the World was, Chap. 17. 5. The Reason alleged implies his being the Son of God; and his Fathers entire approbation of his Office, and Fidelity in the discharge of it; and the concurrent Testimony of the Father with him: Therefore his Record was Authentick and true. But they did not believe his Mission from Heaven, nor that he was to ascend thither, and accordingly disvalued his Testimony.
15 Ye judge after the flesh b, * I judge no man c. According to my outward appearance to you, so you judge of me; or according to your own Passions, and Corrupt Affections. c I judge no man in that manner, or I judge no man alone, as it followeth in the next Verse.

16 And yet if I judge, my judgment is true: for <sup>a</sup> I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me.

* Ver. 29.

17 My Testimony is not to be looked upon as a single Testimony of my self; tho I do judge, yet my judgment is true; for an Act of mine is a single Act: I and my Father are one; and what I do, my Father also doth, that sent me into the World as his Ambassador: So as if the judgment of God be true, which you all own, grant, and acknowledge; then my judgment is true, because it is mine only, but the judgment also of that God, whom you own, acknowledge, and worship, and who sent me into the World.

17 * It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true.

18 It is written, Deut. 17. 6. and 19. 15. God do ordered by his Divine Law, that everything should be established by the Testimony of two Witnesses.

18 I am one that bear witness of my self, and the Father that sent me, beareth witness of me. <sup>f</sup> I (faith our Saviour) have two Witnesses: I am one, I bear Witness of my self: My Father is another, for he beareth Witness of me. Our Saviours Argumentation seemeth weak, unless we look upon him as exempt from the condition of ordinary men, and no mere man, by reason of the Personal Union of the Divine and Humane Nature in his Person. Nor must our Saviour be understood here to distinguish himself from his Father, in respect of his Divine Being; for to be and his Father are one: But in respect of his Office, as he was sent, and his Father was who sent him. And indeed in the whole he seemeth to accommodate himself to the Peoples apprehensions of him.

19 Then said they unto him, Where is thy Father? <sup>g</sup> Jesus answered, * Ye neither know me, nor my Father, * if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also.

20 Thou talkest much of thy Father, where he is? We know no Father which thou hast but the Carpenter, Joseph; we do not look upon him as so Credible a Witness in the Case, as to take his Testimony in such a matter as this is: <sup>h</sup> Christ tells them, that the reason why they did not know the Father, was because they did not know and acknowledge, receive and believe him; for if they had received and believed him, they would not then have been at such a loss to have known where his Father was, or who he was. The Eternal Father is not to be known but in, and by, and through the Son.

20 These words spake Jesus in the treasury as he taught in the Temple: i and * no man laid hands on him <sup>k</sup>, for his hour was not yet come.

* Chap. 7. 30.

21 The Treasury was a public place in the Temple; concerning which, see the Notes on Mat. 27. 6. Mark 12. 41. Luke 21. 1. Christ taught sometimes in one of the Temple, sometimes in another: <sup>k</sup> But that no man should lay hold on him, considering the search made for him in the beginning of the Feast, and their sending Messengers to take him, as we read Chap. 7. 32. and the Affront he had given to the Scribes and Pharisees (of which we read in the beginning of this Chapter) was very Miraculous: I Nor can any account be given of it besides what is here given, viz. That his hour was not yet come. Which was the reason we heard given before in the same case, Chap. 7. 30. Men shall be able to do nothing against Christ, or any that belong unto him, till the time cometh that God hath set in his will and eternal thoughts.

21 Then said Jesus again unto them, I go my way, and * ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sins <sup>m</sup>: whither I go, ye cannot come <sup>n</sup>.

* Chap. 13. 33.

22 The greatest part of what is said here, was said by our Saviour before, Chap. 7. 34. (See the explication of it there) only here, instead of ye shall find me, is, ye shall die in your sins; <sup>m</sup> a Phrase we shall find in Ezek. 3. 18, 19. which doubtless signifieth, in the guilt of your sins, not removed from you; and is a threatening of Eternal death, as well as Temporal in the destruction of Jerusalem: <sup>n</sup> And those who do so, cannot come into Heaven, where Christ is.

22 Then said the Jews, Will he kill himself? because he saith, Whither I go, ye cannot come.

23 And he said unto them, * Ye are from beneath, I am from above: ye are of this world, I am not of this world <sup>p</sup>.

23 * Ye are not only of an Earthly extraction, Creatures of the Earth, not descended from Heaven, as I am; but also of Earthly Spirits and Principles: You favour nothing that is sublime and Spiritual, and therefore you do not understand me: I tell you, I am not of this World. My Original is not from it, nor am I to determine my being in it. I shall dye, but I shall rise again from the dead, and ascend into Heaven, where you cannot come. Still our Saviour asserts his Divine Nature; and the flesh of all, he saith, lyeth there; their unbelief of which was the cause of all their Disputings and Errors. He had given them the greatest Evidence of it imaginable in the works which he had done in their sight, which were not only above the Power of Nature, but such as God never Authorized, or enabled any Creature to do; yet they being declare of supernatural Grace, did not believe in him: And they were unexcusable, because that Grace was denied them by their wilful Corruption and wickedness, which they might have avoided by the use of that common Grace which was not denied them.

24 * I said therefore unto you, that ye shall <sup>q</sup> die in your sins: for if ye believe not that I am die, ye shall die in your sins <sup>q</sup>.

25 In the Greek it is only, If ye believe not that I am. Some refer this to Christs Divine Nature. (I am, is the Name of God, Exod. 3. 14.) But others rather think that Christ here speaketh of himself as the Messiah and Mediator, and to the object of Peoples Faith; and he our Lord from there is no Salvation. The latter indeed inclines to the former; for Christ is he that trafficketh in man, and maketh flesh his Arm. The Text plainly holds forth an impossibility of Salvation for those who do not under the Revelations of the Gospel, receive not, and believe not in Christ as Mediator.

25 Then said they unto him, VVho art thou? <sup>r</sup> Jesus faith unto them, Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning <sup>r</sup>.

26 What good Christian will not learn to condemn the flights and Reproaches of sinful men, when he readeth a company of Miscreants thus using their Lord and Master, saying to him, Who art thou? It is no wonder if the World which knew him not, doth not know us of the latter part of the verse as it lies in the Greek, is exceeding difficult, word for word it is, The beginning, because also I speak unto you. Some think that our Saviour calleth himself The beginning. Others think the Num is in this place put for an Adverb; of which we have many instances in Scripture, tho none as to this Num; (but I shall leave those who desire satisfaction as to what is said by Critics about this Verse, to what Mr. Pool hath Collected in his Synopsis Criticorum, and only consider it as our Interpreters understood it) in which form it seemeth to be a mere flighting of them, as much as if he had said, I have often enough, even from the beginning, told you who I am; I can lay no more to you upon that head than I have said. I am the same, and no other, than I at first told you I was.

26 I have many things to say, and to judge of you: <sup>s</sup> but * he that sent me is true; and I <sup>s</sup> speak to the world those things which I have heard of him <sup>s</sup>.

27 Judging is not put here for Judicial Condemnation; but for Reproving and Accusing, which is one part of judging. You Accuse and Reprove me; I have many things of which I could also Accuse and Convince you; but let me say what I will, you will not believe me. <sup>t</sup> But you will not escape the Judgment of my Father, who is true, he will judge you <sup>t</sup>. I speak unto men nothing but what is his will that I should declare to them.

27 They understood not that he spake to them of the Father <sup>x</sup>.

28 The Jews (as we are told) used to call God, The Father, in a way of Eminency; they understood that he spake to them of his Father; but they would not understand when he spake to them of his Father, or else Father, he meant God the Father of all, their minds were blinded, that they could not see; and their hearts hardened, that they could not understand.

28 Then said Jesus unto them, VVhen ye have lift up the Son of man, y then shall ye know that I am he, and * that I do nothing of my self <sup>y</sup>, but * as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things <sup>y</sup>.

29 It is your unbelief, that while I am alive, and Preaching the Gospel to you, inviting you to Repentance, and Faith in me, as the true Messiah: You will not believe me to be indeed what I am; but you shall lift me up the Cross (for that is meant by lifting up, as Chap. 12. 32. and 3. 14.) and when that time cometh, as Chap. 12. 32. shall know that I am the Light of the World, as Chap. 1. 9. For after that the Gospel began to be Preached to all Nations. Or that I am the true Messiah, he whom the Father hath sent into the World. Some of you shall then know it by those Signs and Wonders, that shall attend my Death and Resurrection, and to your shame and confusion: others of you shall know it by your Eternal Joy and Salvation; believing on me, whom you will not now acknowledge: <sup>z</sup> and that what I have done, I have only done by Commission from my Father, not of my self: <sup>a</sup> and that what I have taught, I have had in Commission from my Father to teach.

29 And * he that sent me is with me, the Father hath not left me alone <sup>b</sup>, for I do always these things that please him <sup>b</sup>.

30 I have the presence of God with me, as I am Mediator: the Father hath not sent me into the World to do his will, I drive no separate Design from my Father, but always do those things which please him. From whence all Faithful Ministers and Christians may learn how to conclude of God's Presence with them, which they can no longer promise to themselves, than they speak and do those things that please him.

30 As he spake these words *, many believed on him <sup>c</sup>.

31 Believing on him, is not here to be understood strictly of Saving Faith; but rather, of some preparations toward it: they began to believe that he was the true Messiah, and to have more honourable thoughts than they had of him; and that this was all, will appear from what we find in the following Verses; and believing often signifieth no more in the New Testament, than a light Assent given to some Propositions of the Gospel relating to Christ.

31 Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him <sup>e</sup>, if ye continue in my word <sup>f</sup>, then are ye my Disciples indeed <sup>f</sup>.

32 In the Sense before Expressed. Our Saviour well enough saw their Hearts, and in what manner they believed, and what sort of Disciples they were, viz. only Nominal: They have the name of Disciples who come after Christ to hear him; but they are his Disciples indeed, who make his Doctrine the Rule of their Lives. He therefore tells them, that that is not a mere saying to him Lord, Lord, and yielding some light Assent to some Propositions of Truth in the Gospel, would make them his Disciples in truth and reality; without an abiding and continuance in the words which he taught them.

32 And ye shall know the Truth <sup>g</sup>, and * the truth shall make you free <sup>g</sup>.

33 That is, you shall more fully and clearly know the Truth; by which may be either understood Christ, who liveth himself, The way, the truth, and the life; or those Propositions of Truth which Christ hath Revealed. There must be some knowledge of Truth in a Soul before it can believe; for how shall they believe (saith the Apostle) in him whom they have never heard? but a fuller and clearer knowledge of the Truth is got by degrees, by those who studiously seek after it, and walk close with God. I And the truth shall make you free. It appears by ver. 36. That by the Truth, he means himself; there he saith, If the Son make ye free; and indeed, though the knowledge of the Proposition of Truth, gives men some liberty from the bondage of ignorance, and some Lusts, yet it is only the saving knowledge of Christ, which brings men into the perfect Liberty from the Law, the rigour, curse, and terror of it, and from the dominion of Sin and Corruption.

33 They answered him *, We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man <sup>h</sup>: how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free <sup>h</sup>?

34 How carnally doth a carnal heart understand Spiritual Mysteries? Thus Nicodemus hearing of being born again, greatly dreamed, of entering into his Mothers Womb, and being born again. The woman of Samaria, hearing of living Water, dreamt of Water that should foistise her Thirst, as she should never come again to the Well to draw. The Jews here hearing of being made free, dreamt of a freedom from Human Bondage, and from the Law. To whom our Saviour had said, That if they knew the Truth, the Truth should make them free; They reply, We are Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any. Admitting that they were Abraham's seed, that is Jews, were not the Jews in Bondage? King of Babylon; they were now in Bondage to the Romans. They were Tributaries, they were not Slaves; or else concerning their Rights, they had a right to Liberty, though they were under an Extraordinary Servitude to these Conquerors. I This made them angry, That Christ should speak of their being made Free; for those that are Free, are not in a capacity to be made Free. The Jews were a People very tenacious of their Liberty; and gloried much in the right they had to it.

34 Jesus answered them, Verily, verily I say unto you, <sup>i</sup> to you, * Whosoever committeth sin, is the servant <sup>j</sup> * Rom. 6. 16. of sin <sup>j</sup>.

35 Our Saviour here Correcteth their mistake, letting them know, That he was not of the freedom of any Corporal, but Spiritual Servitude; and of the freedom of Mens Bodies from the power of Enemies, but of the freedom of Mens Souls from the slavery and dominion of Lusts and Corruptions. He that doth sin (saith he) is the servant of Sin. The committing or doing of Sin here intended, is not to be understood of single Acts of Sin, (for in that sense, who lives and sinneth not? The righteous man sinning from time to time, to as all men would be concluded the Servants of Sin, and in the practice of gross Sin, in which these Workers of iniquity is to be taken, Mat. 7. 23. And this very Phrase, 1 John 2. 4. And indeed, the very Heathen could see, that there was no such slavery as a Servitude to Lusts and Passions; Men are the Servants of Corruption, 2 Pet. 2. 19. under the Dominion of sin, Rom. 6. 20.

35 And * the servant <sup>k</sup> abideth not in the house for ever <sup>k</sup>, but the son abideth for ever <sup>k</sup>.

36 The Servant of Sin is abideth not in the Church (which is the House of God) for ever. Look as it is with Slaves, and Servants, they are no fixed Members of Families; they may be turned out, they may be sold over to others; they abide in Families according as their will they behave themselves; so you, who as you are as them they behave themselves and glory; are now servants in the Church of God; yet if you continue to be servants of Sin, you shall not for ever abide in Gods House; if you be not cast out of the Church Militant, you shall certainly be cast out of the Church Triumphant; that is, you shall never come there: <sup>l</sup> but the Son, some think he speaks of himself, who was the Eternal Son of God, he abides for ever; but I rather think, he speaks of him that is a Son by Adoption, John 1. 12. Rom. 8. 16, 17. So as this Text sheweth us the remarkable distinction, betwixt a nominal Professor, and one who is a true Believer; the one is but as a Servant in Gods House, to whom belongeth no Inheritance; though while he is in the Family, he enjoyeth some common privileges which a meer stranger hath no right to: The other is a Son, and hath a right to the Inheritance, and so shall never be cast out of the Family, but abideth in it for ever.

37 If that term [the Son] in this Verse be the same with [the Son] mentioned in the former Verse, they must both be understood of Christ; for it is most certain, that here [the Son] can signify no more than Christ, to whom alone it becometh to make Souls free from the slavery of the Law, Sin, Death, Hell, &c. <sup>n</sup> Now faith our Saviour, This is the true freedom. Alas! what is the freedom you boast of, and glory in? It is not the freedom of your inward Man; if you were in the full actual possession of it: many a one that is free, hath a base servile slavish mind, and is a servant to Corruption and Lusts. It is only the freedom which I give unto Souls, that is true and perfect liberty; and is alone worthy the name of it.

38 According to the flesh you are descended from Abraham, that I know; but of what advantage is, or can it be to you? <sup>p</sup> While in the mean time you are implacable enemies to me, and seek to murder me, who am not only an innocent person, but am the Lord of Life, and came to save the World. And the root of this is your unbelief; did you receive and believe the Word that I have spoken to you, you would do otherwise; and when you receive a little of it; yet it passeth not into your hearts, it hath no place within you; you do not believe it, you are not affected with it, it doth not dwell in you as it ought to do, so that you are not turned into the likeness and obedience of it. Men may be Professors and Members of the Church of God, in whom yet the Word of God hath no rooting, and sinneth no true place, so as that their condition may be seen enough.

39 My Father is God, I declare unto you his Mind and Will; no uncertain things, but what I have seen with him, that is, what I certainly know to be his Will. <sup>r</sup> You declare by your actions who is your Father; and as I do my Fathers Will, and what he teacheth me to do, so you do the works which the Devil, who is your Father, ver. 44. prompteth you to do.

39 They answered and said unto him *, Abraham is our Father <sup>s</sup>, Jesus said unto them *, If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham <sup>s</sup>.

* This

* This was their continual boast, as may be learned from Math. 9. Glorifying in their birth-privilege; as Abraham being the Father of the whole Jewish Nation, and in a Church-privilege. Abraham being the Head of the Jewish Church, and to be whom the Promises were made. But Christ taketh them off this glorying, by minding them, that the Blood of Abraham running in their Veins, would be of little significance to them, so long as they did not walk in the Spirit. Men are truly to be accounted the Children of the Spirit, not from whom they are naturally Descended, but whose Spirit they walk in, and whom they imitate in their Conversations.

40 But now you seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God: This did not Abraham a.

† You declare by your Actions, that you are very far from the Spirit and temper of Abraham; I am one who being sent of God, whom you own as your Father, have faithfully revealed the Will of God to you, and have never told you any thing but the Truth; and this is all my Crime, for which you seek to murder me; so as though you have something of Abraham's Blood; yet you have nothing of Abraham's Spirit in you.

41 You do the deeds of your father b. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication,

* We have one father, even God c.

† You imitate him who is indeed your Father, by whom our Saviour (as we shall hear more afterwards) meaneth the Devil. c. This they thus said, and tell them, They were not born of fornication, which is in our English Dialect, as much as, We are no Bastards; but it hath another sense in this place, as appears by the next words. c. We have one Father, even God. That is, we own and Worship one God who is our Father; which makes very good Interpreters think, that their meaning in those words, We are no bastards of fornication, is, We are no idolaters; Idolatry in Holy Writ being very ordinarily compared to Whoredome and Fornication.

42. Jesus said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me d, for I proceeded forth, and came from God e, neither came I of my self, but he sent me f.

† This agreeth with what we have 1 John 5. 1. Every one that loveth him that begeth, loveth him also that is begotten of him. But these our Saviour rather seemeth to speak of his proceeding forth, and coming from God, as he sent into the World to fulfil the Will of God as the Redeemer of Man, than of his proceeding from his Father by Eternal Generation. It is true, That he who loves the Father, will also love the Child, so far forth as he resembleth his Father, and acteth like unto him; and it is as true, that he who loveth him that sends a messenger, will also love the messenger, executing the Commission of him that sent him.

43 Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word g.

† It is manifested all along this Discourse, that Christ spake Riddles to the Jews, and that they understood not the import and sense of his Discourse; now (saith our Saviour) the reason is, because you cannot Hear, that is, Believe my Word: they could, and did hear it with their Ears; they heard the sound of it, but they could not discern the Spiritual sense and meaning of it. It was not given to them to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of God; Matt. 13. 11. And the reason was, because they suffered themselves to be blinded by prejudice, and by their own Lusts, and corrupt Affections, till God gave them up to a judicial Blindness, that hearing they heard, and did not understand; and seeing they saw, and did not perceive.

* 44 Ye are of your father the Devil g, and the lusts of your father ye will do h, he was a murderer from the beginning, i and abode nor in the truth, because there is no truth in him; when he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own, for he is a liar, and the father of it k.

† Our Saviour now plainly tells them, what he meant by a sin Father, mentioned 23. viz. the Devil, whose Children though they were not by Natural Tradition, yet they were by imitation. b. Wilfully doing the things which the Devil would have them do; he incessantly in two of these Lusts; 1. Murder. He saith, the Devil from the beginning of the World had a mind and design against the Sons of men; and he ever since, (as the Apostle tells us) hath gone about like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour. And in this they were his true Children, using all Arts imaginable to destroy him whom God had sent into the World for mans Salvation. c. In another thing also, they were the true and genuine Children of the Devil. The Devil had no Truth in him, nor did he abide in the Truth. God indeed created the Angels (who afterward fell) in a state of Rectity, without unrighteousness; but they did not keep their first Rectitude. So, neither did they love the Truth, nor abide in it, but were wholly false and Liar, and could not abide the Truth.

45 And because I tell you the truth, you believe me not l.

† I such is your hatred to the Truth, that you hate me for no other reason, but because I loved the Truth will, (which is the Truth) to you; than which nothing can evidence a greater hatred to Truth, nor conformity and likeness to the Devil; there cannot be a greater Evidence of any ones hatred of the Truth, than the hatred of those who tell them the Truth; and for this very reason because they do so.

46 Which of you convinceth me of sin? and if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me m?

† If any of you can prove, that I have spoken to you any thing that is false, and not consonant to the will of my Father, do it; but which of you is able to charge me with any such thing? If there be no such thing, but I have told you what is the very Truth, and the Will of my Father, as to what you are to believe, and do: why do you not believe me; for every reasonable soul is a Debtor to the Truth.

47 He that is of God n, heareth Gods words o, ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God p.

† To be of God, here, is opposed to a being not of God, as well as may be understood to comprehend Election, as well as Regeneration. o. He heareth, acknowledgeth, believeth, and patiently submitteth to the Will of God revealed in his Word p. The reason why you, though with your own eye hear the Word of God, yet do not in heart receive, and embrace, and believe it, nor can submit to it, is because ye are not of God, not chosen of him, not favourably inclined, and regenerated by him. So as this Text affords us an excellent Note, by which we may know whether we be Regenerated, and of God, yea or no? That is, our believing and yielding obedience to the Will of God revealed in his Word. By this saying of our Saviour, he seemeth to acquiesce in the Will of God, concerning their refractory and unbelieving Jews, notwithstanding all the pains he had taken with them to enlighten and bring them to the saving knowledge of the Truth. It pleased not his Father to open their Eyes that they might see, or their Hearts that they might understand. This ought in like manner to satisfy all the true and faithful Ministers of the Gospel, when they see they have laboured in vain, and spent their strength for nothing, and in vain. When they have done all they can, they will find this of our Saviour true; That the work will be done by God, and not theirs; and no more hearts will be changed, than theirs, who are of God.

48 Then answered the Jews, Say we not well q that thou art a Samaritan r, and a devil s?

† A Samaritan signified to the Jews as much as an Impostor, or Seducer, for the Jews looked upon the Samaritans as a detestable sort of men, who had corrupted the Worship of God with their horrible Superstitions in Mount Gerizim. r. And hast a Devil: that is, art mad. (See the Notes on Chap. 7. 20.)

49 Jesus answered, I have not a Devil s. I honour my father, and ye do dishonour me t.

† That is, I am not possessed with an Evil Spirit, as you Blaspheme, or (as others think) I am not mad, I speak the words of Truth and Sobriety, (for is it said, that the Jews held an Opinion, That all who were Distracted, were influenced by an Evil Spirit, and had a Devil.) It is true in heresy Sinne, Christ had no Devil, s. He did nothing that he did, but for the honour of his Father; this was but a term of Scandal and Reproach they cast upon Christ. In the mean time it must be observed, with how much meekness the Lamb of God received these most unworthy Reproaches cast upon him; that we may learn to behave our selves in like manner under such Temptations.

50 And I seek not my own glory, there is one u that seeketh and judgeth x.

† Christ very often mindeth them of this, That in what he spake and did, he sought not his own Honour and Reputation, which both obtained an Objection they might make against him, and also convinced them of his truth and integrity in what he did; (but faith he) though I seek not my own Honour, yet there is one who cometh himself in my Honour and Glory; and you must expect that he should Judge and Condemn you for all your hard speeches which you have spoken against me.

51 Verily verily I say unto you, * If a man keep my sayings he shall never see death y.

† To see Death, in this Text, signified to die, but not apparently differing from what is taken in Luke 23. 42. Where it is to be understood, of a Natural Death; of which it cannot be understood, for the holiest men shall die Rom. 8. 10. The body is dead, (that is in dying) because of Sin; or shall dye, because of Sin; it must therefore be understood of a Spiritual Death; and in that sense the Proposition is certainly true, That an holy man that keepeth the Sayings of Christ, shall not see Death; that is, shall have Eternal Life; which is no more than what we have often before met with, viz. the Promise of Life Eternal, to Faith and Holy men.

52 Then said the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou hast a devil x. * Abraham is dead, and the prophets, and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never taste of death y.

† This is the third time we have met with this Blasphemous imputation from these wretched men. Chap. 7. 20. In this Chap. 48. and here. What we have here, may strongly incline us to believe, that by the Phrase they did not intend that he was Possessed with the Devil; for they here declare themselves confirmed in what they said, from his speaking that which was contrary to sense, and demonstration. y. Abraham was Dead, (though the Father of the Faithful) and the Prophets were dead; and therefore to speak of any Mortal Man's not seeing Death, was contrary to every day Experience, and to the Experience of the holiest men who ever lived. To them therefore who understood him, speaking of a Natural Dissolution of the Soul and Body, this looked like the Language of one besides himself, (which probably was all they meant, when they said, He had a Devil) unless they used it as a term of reproach and passion, of all which, none can give any just account.

53 Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead? and the prophets are dead: whom makest thou thyself z?

† If thou canst so effect it, that those who keep thy sayings shall not dye; and thou canst also make thyself Immortal; neither Abraham, nor the Prophets could save themselves from Death, they are all dead; What art thou? What dost thou make thyself? And by the way, this was another charge upon our Saviour, the Jews having no patience with any that should prefer himself before their Father Abraham or Moses.

54 Jesus answered, If I honour myself, my honour is nothing a: It is my Father that honoureth me, of whom ye say, that he is your God b.

† This is much the same with what our Saviour said Chap. 5. 31. which he seemed to contradict, Ver. 14. (see the Notes on both these places) the meaning is, If I seek mine own honour, and glory; Or, if I arrogate to myself what whosoever do not belong to me. Or, if I alone honour myself, which (by the next words) seemeth to be the true sense of the Phrase; that is, my Father is he who honoureth me; by sending me into the World to accomplish his Work; by many Signs and Wonders; and you say, that this my Father is your God. If therefore you will not give credit to me, and my Testimony, yet you ought to give credit to him, whom you own as your God.

55 Yet * I should not have known him c, but I know him, and if I have said I know him not, I should be a liar like to you: but I know him, and keep his sayings d.

† Knowing here signifies more than a notional knowledge, or comprehending in our understanding so much of God, as may by Natural Powers be comprehended. It signifies affection, and a conversation suitable to such a knowledge d. But I (saith our Saviour) fully and perfectly know him, both as to his Essence, Councils, and Will, and am fully obedient to him.

56 Your father Abraham * rejoiced to see my days e: and he saw it f, and was glad g.

† You glory much in this, that you have Abraham to your Father; This Father of yours fore-warn my coming into the World, and my dying upon the Cross. He saw it by the Eye of Faith, in the Promise which was made to him, That in his seed all the nations of the Earth should be blessed. He saw it in the type of Isaac being Offered, then lifted him up in a figure, Heb. 11. 19. He saw it in the Light of Divine Revelation. He saw my coming in the Flesh: My dying upon the Cross for Sinners: The Publication of my Gospel to the whole World, by which means all the Nations of the Earth became Blessed in his Seed. g. And he was glad, with the joy of Faith, which gives the soul an union with an absent Object by Faith made certain to it, Heb. 11. 1.

57 Then said the Jews, Thou art not yet fifty years old h, and hast thou seen Abraham i?

† Christ was at this time but Three and thirty years old, and upwards; they dream of Abraham seeing him, and his seeing Abraham with bodily Eyes, of which Christ said nothing; that indeed had been a thing impossible for Abraham was dead many hundred of years before Christ appeared in the Flesh to the World: neither doth our Saviour say, That he had seen Abraham, or that Abraham had seen him, but that he had seen his day, his coming in the Flesh, his Death, which Abraham had seen, not with bodily Eyes, but with the Eye of Faith.

58 Jesus said unto them, Verily verily I say unto you, before Abraham was, I am k.

† Some will have the meaning to be, That Christ was before Abraham's time constituted Mediator. As he is said to be the Lamb slain from the Foundation of the World: Rev. 13. 8. So 1 Pet. 1. 20. But thus it might have been said of any of the Elect, That they were chosen before Abraham was: It is therefore undoubtedly to be understood of Christ's Eternal Existence, as to his Divine Nature, and will appear: as from other Arguments, so from the whole scope of our Saviours former Discourse in this Chapter, which was to assert his Divine Nature and Equality with the Father.

59 Then * took they up stones to cast at him l, * Chap. 10. 33: but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple; and passed by, going through the midst of them m, and so n.

† As they also did, Chap. 10. 31. It is vain to enquire, where they had stones in the Temple: they might be Reaping some part of it, or some parts of it pared with Stones might be loose, &c. It is enough, that we are assured that some they found m. He did not go through the midst of them that were in this uproar, but first thrust himself into the more innocent crowd, then passed through the midst of them. Some make a question here, how he could pass through the midst of them: Whether he made his body invisible: (so the Lutherans think) or whether he struck his Enemies with Blindness, or thickened the Air before their Eyes. But what needs that Dispute? admit some few of the Rabble to be in a Rage, the greatest part Innocent, it is no hard thing for us to conceive, how a person discerning the disorder, may thrust himself into the more innocent Crowd, and pass by, escaping the rage of his Enemies.

CHAP. IX.

And as Jesus passed by, he saw a man which was blind from his birth a.

† The Evangelist doth not tell us, where our Saviour was passing by; nor the Word seemeth to import, a passing by the High-way side; when he saw this poor man, who was born blind: which is particularly noted, because such blindness is judged incurable as to the Art of Man.

2 And his Disciples asked him, saying, Master, who did sin, this man, or his parents; that he was born blind b?

† The Disciples question, supposed two things for Truth; 1. That all bodily Punishments and Afflictions come upon men for Sin. 2. That as some come upon them for personal Sins, so others come upon them for the sins of their Parents. The latter is unquestionably true: so in the former, but not Universally: as there are Afflictions which are Punishments of Sin, so there are some that are Trials.

3 Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: c * but that the works of God should be made manifest in him d.

† Our Saviour must not be understood here, as either asserting the Blind man, or his Parents free from sin; and a degree of sin deserving such a Punishment: but as speaking to his Disciples question, and answering, That this Affliction came not upon them, either for any personal Sin of his own, (for he could not be guilty of any Actual Sin before he was born,) nor yet for any sin that his Parents had Committed. d. But that the Works of God might be made glorious in him: both his work of Power in afflicting, and his work of Mercy in healing him.

4 I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day e: the night cometh, when no man can work f.

† The father who sent Christ into the World, gave him work to do, John 17. 4. his general work was, To glorify God upon the Earth; as by working out the Redemption of Man, so by revealing his Will to the Sons of Men, and working Miracles for the glorifying the name of God: faith Christ, I have a few time to work in: thus it, thus which he here calleth day, the time wherein Christ was to live upon the Earth. e. I am not to be here always, there will come a time when I must be absent from the Earth, then none of this work can be done. A good Argument to persuade every Christian to work while the time of his life lasteth, for the Night of Death will come, when no Man can any longer work out his Salvation: but as the tree falleth, it must live, Eccl. 9. 10.

5 As long as I am in the world g, I am the light h of the world g.

† Those words as long as I am in the world, let us know 35. 46. F F F what our Saviour meant by this day, mentioned ver. 4. Ver. 1 The time he should be in the World: (Said he.) So long as I am in the world it is a part of my work to show light to the world. Christ indeed, though he hath left the World, is yet the Light of the World; but he was the Light of the World, that part of the World, especially where he was in a more eminent sense so long as the World enjoyed his bodily presence in it.

* Mar. 7. 32. 6 When he had thus spoken, he * spat upon the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he Or spread the anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay b Several mysterious Allegories are found out by men of the blind Luxuriant fancies, with reference to the manner of our Saviours curing this blind man; as if our Saviour had made choice of Clay, to shew, that as he at first made man of the dust of the Earth, he could again cure him with dust; And that his Spittle denoted, the efficacy of Christs Humanity, being now personally united to the Divine Nature: Others think, he made use of Spittle, because the Jews had a great Opinion of the Medicinal Virtue of Spittle; and they say, forbade the Medicinal use of it on the Sabbath-day, (on which day this Miracle was wrought) but all these things are great Uncertainties, for which we want any guidance from Holy Writ. It is most probable, That our Saviour made use of his Spittle in working this Miracle, because he had no Water at hand, for Water was a very scarce thing in those hot Countries. That which we are chiefly to attend in this great Miraculous Operation is, Christs Demonstration of his Divine Nature for the confirmation of the Truth, of which he doubtless wrought this great Work, as well as to shew his Charity to this poor Creature. To this purpose he first maketh choice, not of a Blind Man only, but one who was born so, and for incurable according to all judgment of Humane Art. 2. He maketh use of no means that had any appearance of a Natural Virtue in it; nay, which was more like to put out the Eyes of one that saw, than to give sight to one that was blind.

And said unto him, Go wash in the pool of Siloam: Which is, by interpretation, Sent: He went his way therefore, and washed, and came feeling a. He doth not only anoint his Eyes, but sendeth him also to Wash in the Pool of Siloam: We read of this Pool Neh. 2. 15. And we are told, That it was a Fountain which sprang out from Mount Zion. It should seem, that there was a Brook of that Name, which supplied part of the City with Water, Isaiah 8. 6. Some think, they have found a Mystery in this Name, because it signifieth Sight; and think that it hath an allusion to Shilo, which was the Messias mentioned, Gen. 49. 10. The name is plainly an old Name, as appears from the place I noted out of Adamian, probably given to it anciently, in acknowledgment of the mercy of God given them, in sending them such a Brook, or Rivulet from those Mountains, so commodious for that great City: Or, because (as some think) the Water did not run always, but at certain times, as it were were of God. We read of nothing Medicinal in this Water; only as a probation of the blind mans Faith and Obedience; it pleased our Lord to send the blind man to wash himself there; as of old Namaan the Syrian was sent to wash in Jordan. He went, and the Evangelist to let us see, that true Faith joined with sincere Obedience, never faileth the Expectation of them that exercise it, lets us know that he returned feeling.

8 The neighbours therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat there, and begged? 1 The Evangelist now reports the Consequents of this Miracle; he being cured, returned to his Friends: who he lived about that place, had taken notice of his ordinary fitting there, and begging; now seeing him perfectly recovered, ask one another, if this were not the blind Beggar that used to sit there.

9 Some said, This is he: Others said, He is like him: But he said, I am he m. Some conclude it was he, others doubted, but did think he was like him: he puts it out of doubt, and saith, That he was the man.

10 Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened? a According as is the nature of most men upon the sight of any new and strange accident, they are curious to know how it came to pass, who did it; and where he was. The Blind mangleth them, That he was cured.

11 He Answered, and said, A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash: and I went, and washed, and received sight b. By one that was called Jesus, probably he had heard some of the people mention him by that name, and describeth to them the manner how he did it.

12 Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not p. They would know where he was, this he knows not.

13 They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind q. Whether the Neighbours, or his near Relations, is not said. Nor is the place mentioned, where this Convention of Pharisees were, whether in the Temple, or in some Synagogue, or the great Court which they called the Sanhedrim; nor is it material for us to inquire into.

14 And it was the sabbath-day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes r.

r It was observed before, That Christ made choice of the Sabbath-day, as the day wherein he did many of his mighty Works. It was on the Sabbath-day that he cured the impotent man who lay at the Pool of Bethesda, Chap. 5. 10. and upon the Sabbath-day, that he cured him who had the Withered Hand, Matth. 12. 10. And now again upon the Sabbath-day that he cured him who was born blind; possibly he chose that day, because that was a day, wherein he ordinarily Preached that heavenly Doctrine, which he continued in these Miraculous Works: or perhaps, that he might take occasion from thence to instruct the Jews, if they would have received Instruction in the true Doctrine of the Sabbath; that they might not superstitiously think, that it was not lawful to do acts of mercy on the Sabbath-day; certain it is, that himself maketh that improvement of it, Matth. 12. 10. Or to them, that he was Lord of the Sabbath; and that as his Father by his Works of Providence, worketh on the Sabbath-day; so did he, being equal with his Father: by which Argument he afore defended himself, for the cure of the impotent man on the Sabbath-day, John 5. 17.

15 Then again, the Pharisees also asked him, How he had received his sight? He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see r.

r The Pharisees asked him, How he had received his sight? they had before heard it from others, but they now desire to hear it from himself; not (as appears) out of any good design; that they might be convinced of the truth of the thing; or that he who had wrought this Miracle was the Son of God; but that they might have something to object against Christ, and to quarrel with him for, upon their Traditions, with reference to the observation of the Sabbath. Of which we are told this was one, That it was unlawful for any to anoint their eyes with Spittle on the Sabbath-day; they having a conceit, that it was a medicinal application. The Blind man is not ashamed to use the goodnoeds of God to him, to the Pharisees, but relate the same story which he before had related to the People.

16 Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the Sabbath-day; Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them s.

s They are so far from owing Christ as God, the Eternal Son of God, and equal with his Father, that they will not allow him to have any relation to God as one sent of him. It is true, the Sanctification of the Sabbath is to great a piece of Religion (the whole of which is sometimes expressed by it, Isa. 56. 4. 6.) That who maketh no conscience of it, may reasonably be concluded to have little or nothing of God in him: but we must rightly understand what the Will of God is as to that Sanctification, and not think that it lyeth in a performance of some Ritual Services; while in the mean time we neglect most Duties: Christ kept the Sabbath, though not in that Superstitious sense they thought it was to be observed, keeping to all their Traditions about it. t Others of the Pharisee had a somewhat better Opinion of Christ by reason of the miracles he had wrought; concluding, that if he had been so bad a man, as some of their Brethren would have him taken to be, those miracles would not have assailed him to the doing of such miracles. Works as he had done. u Thus the wife God made a division among the Count of Christs Enemies, his Work being not yet finished, nor the time come when he was to dye for the Redemption of man.

17 They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him that he hath opened thine eyes with? He said, He is a prophet v.

v What Opinion hath thou of this man, who hath opened thine Eyes? to make the question perfect, Interpreters think, there ought to be this Supplement, On the Sabbath-day. What dost thou think of such a man as this, who would make clay, and apply it to thy Cure upon the Sabbath-day? How can such a Fact be defended? w The Blind man Answered, He is a Prophet. It was said to be granted by the Jews according to their Traditions, That at the command of a Prophet it was lawful to violate the Sabbath: which indeed is no more than, That God hath not in giving us a Law, bound up himself, but he may dispense with his own Law. Their Prophets had an extraordinary mission from God, and immediately revealed the Will of God; so as they looked upon what they said, as spoken by God himself. The Blind man declareth, That he believed that Christ was a Prophet; and being so, his Words and Actions had an extraordinary Warrant, and therefore were not to be judged by ordinary Rules.

18 But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the Parents of him that had received his sight y.

y That is, The Rulers of the Jews did not, or the multitude, or Rabble of the Jews did not; for we before heard that many of the common Jews did, they had seen him for a long time sit begging; (begging being allowed, in that their corrupt and miserable state, they being Tributary to the Romans, that in their tattered prosperous state, there was such a liberal Provision made for their Poor, that there was no Beggar in Israel: ) besides, they had it from his own mouth, ver. 9. but the Rulers had no mind to believe it; and many others of the Jews (possibly) had been no eyewitnesses of his begging, but had only heard the relation from others: the Rulers therefore fend for the Parents of the Blind man.

19 And they asked them saying, Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see? z.

z The Parents of this man that was Blind, in their Answer shew a great deal of discretion and prudence. They asking the Pharisees ask, 1. Whether they were their Son? 2. Whether (as they said) he was indeed born blind? 3. How he came now to see? The manner of the propounding their question, Who (ye say) lets us know what Answer they would have had, and that they did not fend for the Parents of this Blind man, out of a desire to know the naked Truth of the thing, but hoping to fright them into a speaking (doubtfully at least) whether it was their Son yea or no? or whether he was stark blind when he was born, yea or no? But alas! the Providence of God ordering his condition to be so poor, that he was glad to beg for his livelihood, made this design vain; would his Parents have gratified the Pharisees, by any shuffling, and indirect Answer?

20 His parents answered them, and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind a.

21 But by what means he now seeth, we know not, or who hath opened his eyes we know not; He is of age, ask him, he shall speak for himself b.

b Besides this, The Parents of this man proved honest, and flour, than it may be the Pharisees did expect. They affirm, That they knew that he was their Son; that he was born Blind. But for the Third Question, How he now saw, they avoid an answer to that, being possibly to Eye-witnesses of Christ when he wrought the Miracle. For this they refer them to their Son, who was no Babe, but a man grown, one of Age, able to speak for himself; of whom they might enquire, and he was best able, as to anything, to give them satisfaction.

22 These words spake his Parents, because they feared the Jews c, for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the Synagogue d.

c The reason why his Parents answered so very warily, and avoided saying any thing to the Pharisee Third Question, on which probably they could not do of their particular personal Knowledge was, That they were afraid of the Rulers of the Jews; John 8. 12. That the fear of man bringeth a snare; it is often a temptation to men to deny the Truth, or at least, not to own, and confess it when God calls to them for a publick owning and confession of it; but nothing of that nature appeareth in this case; for it doth not appear that his Parents were present when Christ wrought this great Miracle; which if they were not, they were not obliged to tell the Pharisees what themselves had never received; by rumor and hearsay. So that their Answer seems but a prudent Answer, to avoid an Eminent danger. d For they were not ignorant of a Decree made by the Jewish Sanhedrim: That if any did publicly say, or declare, That Jesus was Christ, he should be Excommunicated: for that is meant, by being put out of the Synagogue.

23 Therefore said his parents, He is of age, ask him e. Then again called they the man that was blind and said unto him, Give God the praise, for we know that this man is a sinner f.

f They were not able to obtain their design from the Parents of this poor man; now they again call him, and advise him to give glory to God. Thus far they speak well, if they had been hearty and serious in what they said: For the man indeed had great reason to give God the glory; by whose Power alone exerted by his Son Christ Jesus, he had received his Sight; but Moral Actions are made good or bad by their ends; and if we consider the End of these wretched men in this action of theirs, wherein they persecuted the poor man to his duty, the words will appear to have been spoken from hearts minding nothing less than the glory of God, and out of a design to vilify and depreciate his Son; whereas God hath set up his Rest in his Son, and cannot be glorified but with him, and through him; whom in the next words, they maliciously defame not only by speaking of him contemptuously, calling him this man, but affirming him an sinner; not a Sinner only, but a notorious, scandalous Sinner; as that Word imports.

25 He answered, and said, Whether or he is a sinner, or no, I know not; One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see g.

g This poor man being of no higher quality than a Beggar, can be presumed to have had no great Education; yet his answer is as good as could be expected from one of the greatest breeding, both for security to himself, and his own asserting what was Truth. As to their Charge upon our Saviour of his being a great Sinner, he avoideth it, telling us as to that he knew nothing, nor was it his concern to enquire; but this he knew, that he had wrought a great Work on him, for whereas he had been blind from his Mothers Womb, he now had his Sight; by his means; so as all their frowns could not tempt him to deny the Miracle wrought upon him, nor yet to speak the least in abatement of it.

26 Then said they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes? h.

h They cannot frown him into a denial of the Miracle wrought, he stood stoutly to affirm, That he was born Blind, and that he was cured by Christ; now they put him to tell the story over again, either hoping they should encroach him, contradicting himself in his story, or at least, finding something, upon his repeating the story, for them to take advantage from, to persecute the people, That it was but a Cheat, and indeed there was no such Miracle wrought upon him.

27 He answered them, I have told you already, and ye did not hear, wherefore would ye hear it again? will ye also be his disciples? i.

i It is wonderful to see, how the boldness and confidence of the poor man increased, God giving him that wisdom and courage which they were not able to resist. He refuseth to repeat the story to them, telling them, He had once already told it them: But they would not give credit to him; and to what purpose was it for him to say it over again, unless they were inclined to be his Disciples, (for some think the form of speech, importeth a hearty willing and desiring that they would be so; but others think, he speaks ironically, as if he had said, I know my repeating again, the story will not induce you to be his Disciples, you are resolved against that, and therefore why do you put me upon a needless trouble. And this seemeth to have been his sense by what followeth in the Pharisees reply, full of Indignation.

28 Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple, but we are Moses his disciples k.

k If this were all their reviling, for them to tell this poor man that he was Christs Disciple, it was a very tolerable imputation, and what the blind man had reason to glory in, their guilt in reviling, is to be judged not so much from what they spake, for their was nothing of great honour, as from what heart and spirit they spake it. l A Disciple signifies, One that followeth another, and learneth of him. To be a Disciple of Christ indeed, was the greatest thing that any could glory in; yet, the imputation of it to this blind man, is here called a Reviling: Whence we may observe, That the guilt of Reviling, is to be judged not so much from the Words which a man speaketh, as from the frame of his Spirit, and design of the heart in the speaking of them. If a man speaketh that of another which is good, and true, yet if he do it out of a design to Expose him, to do him mischief, and make him odious unto others. God doth account this Reviling, because it proceedeth from the hatred of our Brother, in our heart, and a design to do him harm. Again, tho indeed it was no Reproach to be called Christs Disciple, yet they affixed this term upon this poor man, out of a design to Reproach him, and to expose him to the hatred of others; we are in the government of our Tongues not only obliged to take heed what we say, but with what heart, and out of what design we speak it. A malicious design unites terms of the greatest Honour, into terms of Reviling.

begotten So, we may a' be've're, 1 that born the Father and Christ love those that are truly the sheep of Christ.
The love that Christ hath to his People is as true, and as certain as the Fathers love to Christ, or Christs love to his Father; and this could be steved by no higher act, than that of laying down his Life, John 15. 13. Now, faith he,
I lay down; that is, I am ready to lay down, or I shall truly lay down my life for the sheep; wherefore Sleep can fig-nifie all, and every person born into the World, is their common more closely to enquire, who are they that are re-nicious of that point, That Christ is equal with the Father, for All, and Every man;
As also, whether they upon that Principle that absurdity not follow, That Christ loved those who shall yet perish Eternally, with such a love as the Father loved him, and he loved the Father.

* Ezek. 37:22. hear my voice b; * and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd c.

One Sacrifice meaneth the Gentiles, who belonged not to the Jewish State and Church, who were not under the same Laws and Government; for 1 Job. 2, he was not only a Propitiation for the Sins of the Jews, but for the Sins of the whole World; he calteth those sheep, because the Lord knew who were his from Eternity; and they were sheep in the councils of God, and they were suddenly to be made his sheep by Calling, the Gospel being soon to be preached to all Nations. b Them also, (saith he) I must bring in. It is so written in Gods Book, the Promises, and Prophecies to that purpose must be fulfilled. They had not only heard the Voice and sound of my Gospel, though going out of Sion, yet not terminated in Sion; but they shall embrace, receive, and believe that joyful sound. c And they shall be not one Church; as I am one Shepherd, so there shall be but one Flock of sheep; one Body, one Spirit, one hope of our Calling, one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, as there is one God and Father of all, as the Apofle speaketh, Ephes. 4, 4, 5, 7.

*Ila.53 7,8,12. 17 Therefore doth my father love me, * because I lay down my life, that I may take it again d :

1. Christ here saith two things. 1. That he was about to lay down his life, and should now very shortly lay it down; but yet so, as he should take it again. i. e. rise again from the Dead, Death should not have Dominion over him; by which he comforteth his Disciples concerning his Death, declaring, 1. That he was a Free-will Offering, as he further openeth it in the next Verse. 2. That he should not perish in the Grave, but rise again from the Dead. 3. That therefore the Father loved him; for by this means he declared himself with power to be the Son of God, and the Father could not but love his Son. And 2. By this means also he humbled himself, and became obedient unto Death; even the Death upon the Cross, Phil. 2. 8. So as that the Father had many reasons to love the Son, so amongst others this obedience of his to Death, even the accursed Death upon the Cross, to fulfill his Fathers Will, for the Redemption and Salvation of the Sons of Men, was not the least: and by this also he commendeth his Fathers love to those that are his sheep, in that his Father loveth him with the more exceeding love, for laying down his life, to purchase their Redemption, and Salvation.

18 No man taketh it from m<sup>e</sup>, but I lay it down of my self: I have power to lay it down,

Confession. And he Man took it from me by force, without my willing-ing it, and consenting to it; the Jews and Pilate will take it from me, but not without my free and voluntary surrender of it; and this is that which we read, Act. 4. 27, 28.
For of a truth, against thy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, hath Herod and Pontius Pilate, and the Gentiles, with thy people, have gathered together, for to do whatsoever thy hand and counsel shall determine before thee be done, &c. By which he asserteth his Divine power, to comforteth his Disciples against the disturbances they were like to have from the sight of his Passion, at this time not many Months off. And this (saith he) is the Will of my Father, that which my Father hath given me Commission to do, and for which he hath sent me into the World:
And thus he declares his Duty to be the fulfilling of his Fathers Will, and in act of Obedience to his Fathers Will;
and indeed, in his Obedience in the thing, lay much of the virtue of his Death.

19 There was a division therefore again amongst the Jews for these sayings g.
Christ by his Words often caused a Division amongst the Jews, so as they could not agree in their sentiments, and censures about him; which was either caused, through the mixture amongst them, of such as truly Believed, with those which Believed not. Or else from the mixture of a more considering part amongst them, with others which were more Brutish, Irrational, and full of Passion. We meet with much the same, Chap. 7. 42. and again, Chap. 9. 16. It is one Method of God's Providence for the deliverance of his Servants from unreasonable men, to cause divisions among them: so that they cannot agree among themselves.

20 And many of them said, * He hath a devil, * Chap. 7. & 2. 45. and is mad, why hear ye him? b Some of the People said, He had a Devil, and was mad. For (as was said before) this was the Opinion of the Jews; concerning all that were Mad, and Distracted, That it was by the Influence of the Devil, and they were infested with an Evil Spirit.

21 Others said, these are not the words of him that hath a devil; * Can a Devil * open the eyes of the blind? * Exod. 4:11
Psal. 145:8.

* But others that were less Passionate and Brutish in their Expressions, and more thinking, and confidant in pushing their judgments, said, There are not the words (so we translate it; the word in the Greek ψυατα, which signifies things, and matters; as well as Words; and by what follows, one would think that were the more proper Translation of it here) they instance in no words, but in a matter of Fact. Asking, if a Devil could open the Eyes of the Blind? that is, of one that was born Blind: for they certainly speak with reference to that Miracle which he had to lately wrought upon such a person.

meditation, and so.

¶ This Verse affords Two Questions, which have not a little troubled Interpreters. 1. What feast of Dedication this was. 2. Whether Dedications of places to the Worship of God be warrantable, or no, in that manner as they are Dedicated amongst the Papists at this day. As to the first of these, That which we have about it in Scripture is this, Exod. 40. from the First to the Fifteenth Verse, we have Gods Command and Direction for the Hallowing, or Dedication of the Sanctuary, or the Tabernacle, which was the first Hallowing we read of in Scripture, set apart for the Publick which we read, 2 Maccab. 2: 23. Chap. 10 of 1 Maccabees tells us that the Feast of Dedication was first celebrated in the year 167, and so no wonder that it is not mentioned in the Canonical Scripture, yet are as good as given us an account of it, Antiq. l. 12. c. 10. v. 11. We do not read of any thing they did, having Offering Sacrifices, and fettering things in order, according to the Law of Mosé, and Feasting; Jefeph tells us, They used all Lawful Pleasures. We do not read, that either God appointed an Annual Feast of Dedication for the Sanctuary, nor Solemon, nor Ezra, for either of these things are not in the Scriptures; but we read twice in the Book of Maccabees and Jefeph (Writing the Jews) Feast tells us, That Judas Machabeus kept this Law, that the Feast should be kept yearly for Eight Days, in Memory of that Mercy which God had shewed them. This was without doubt the Feast of Dedication here mentioned: for this Feast began upon the Twenty fifth day of the Month Chiflen, which is our month of November and December, and took in part of each; it agrees with the Time when the Dedication was in Autumn was in Winter: whereas the Feast of Tabernacles was in Spring, Ezra, Jefeph and Judas Machabeus do well in appointing this Feast of Dedication; neither Solemon, nor Ezra having, that we read of, no fore, done any such thing: and that our Saviour was not at this Feast in any honour to the Feast, but only to take advantage of the Multitude of People that met to Preach the Gospel. For my own part, as I will not defend, so I durst not condemn him: I see no more that he did in this, than was done Exh. 9. 27, 28. as to the days of Parus. Magistrates certainly have a power to appoint Publick days, yea Annual days of Thankgivings, for Mercies never to be forgotten.

forgotten. Indeed they cannot make a day holy, so as to shall be a fight against God to labour in it, or to use any pleasures (as in the case of the Sabbath), but they may commend the publick Worship of God to others, on performance on particular days, and then they ought to attend it with conscience they can: Obedy they ought to take care that such days be not spent in Luxury and Profaneness, and that they be fortified by special Providences, and not to be multiplied, and frequently renewing, as that the service of them degenerate into mere matter of form. Whether Christ went up in order to the Feast, or because of the great concourse of people he knew would be there at that time, cannot be determined.

For the second Question, It is not so much a question whether it be lawful in a solemn and decent manner, to con-secrate an house to the publick Worship of God, by such Acts as Prayer and Praise, Reading, Preaching and hearing the Word : As whether it may be done by such Rites and Ceremonies as the Papists do it with, for the which there is no institution; for the former, though it may be some while not agree it necessary : yet certainly, no sober person can deny, but if a place be made for people ordinarily to meet in to Worship God, there they may as well meet at the first to Praise God for his mercy, and to beg his presence, when they shall there meet together to Worship God, and to hear his Word, as they may meet there afterwards for Prayer, Praise, preaching, and hearing the Word. We satisfieth not the Papists. They firlt do it by many Superstitious Ceremonies. Secondly, They plead for the Holiness of the place when so Consecrated. As the Ceremonies of their Consecra-tions, or Dedications. Beſtiamus reckon un right.

1. The Painting twelve Crosses in the several parts of the house to be Consecrated, and lighting up twelve Lamps, one at every Cross; To signify the twelve Apostles who carried the Banner of the Cross throughout the world.

2. The Bishop's knocking at the door with a Pastoral staff, commanding the Devil to give place, and invoking of God, the Angels and Saints, to grant their presence in that place, which they make to signify the opening of peoples hearts by the Preaching of the Gospel.

3. The scattering of ashes upon the flore of the places, upon which the B.ishop writes the letters of the Latine and Greek Alphabets, in the figure of a Cross.

4. The sprinkling the place with Holy-water, and lighting up wax Candles.

5. The mounting of the Crosses before mentioned, and raising on the wall.

6. The sprinkling of the place, with a mixture of Water, Wine, Salt, and Athes.

8. The keeping of a Festival upon it: And for all these they have devised several significancies too vain and fanciful to repeat.

For none of which we know nor the least warrant in holy writ: Nor can we conceive, how any Consecration can imprint any character of holiness upon a place, or make prayers offered up in or toward it more acceptable: though we know it did jo to the Temple, both because it was an emblem of Christ, and also because of the particular promises made to it, 1 Kings 8, which were not applicable to any other place, and so the building was called the Synagogues, which signifies a place of prayer, and the place of publick Worship, but only to the Temple upon theaccount before mentioned. Tho we say that all places for that use, ought to be used with all imaginable decency; and we ought during the publick Worship of God, to carry out selves in them with all reverence, because of the Angels, and because of the special preference of God, promised to the assemblies of his people in his name, and for his publick

<sup>1</sup> Of this Solomon's porch we read, 1 Kings 6, 3, that Solomon built the porch before the temple of the house, twenty cubits long, and ten cubits broad. This was the place where they walked in winter, though this was destroyed when Jerusalem was destroyed by the Babylonians; yet it seemeth that there was one builded that was like it, and kept that name. It should seem that it was a place better defended from the weather, then those other parts of the Temple where in Summer-time they used to walk.

24. Then came the Jews round about him, and said unto him, How long dost thou make us to doubt? If thou be the Christ tell us plainly m.

in Our Saviour was at this time within three months of his Crucifixion; he had often before told them that he was the light of the world, the true Shepherd, he had Preached Doctrine to them, from whence they might easily have concluded what he was; he had wrought works among them which none could do but by a Divine Power; but he had been very wary of telling them in plain terms that he was the Messiah, the Christ; when at any time, but had so declar-red himself to his Disciples, or they had owned him as such, he still laid a charge upon them, to tell no man of it, Matth. 16. 20, &c. They therefore came to his denuding of a plain resolution in the case; some of their minds were in some suspense about it. It was but a captious question, for he denied it, besides that, it had been the denial of a truth which he came to bear a testimony unto; they had had a great advantage he had lessened his reputation among those who had believed on him as such. Had he affirmed it, he had brought himself in danger of the Roman Governor, for the Jews indeed expected Messiah, a Christ, but to be a Temporal Prince, to deliver them from the Roman, and for him to have declared himself such a Christ, as they expected, had been fatal to them. He therefore answers with his usual prudence and wariness to this question.

25 Jesus answered them. I told you, and ye believed not: * the works that I do in my fathers Name, they bear witness of me.

"I have in effect told it you more than once; I have told you, that I am sent of the Father, &c. I have said enough for you to conclude it; but you will not understand, you will not receive it, you will not believe what I say. o What need you any further witness of it, than those works which I do by Divine Power? by virtue of my oneness with my Father, and of that Power and Authority which he hath committed to me, that by them I might confirm the Doctrine which I have taught you.

26 But * ye believe not, because ye are not of * Chap. 8. 47.
my sheep. as I said unto you p. p Acts 12. 48. As many as were ordained to life, believed 13. 40. Thy mercy is more abundant to thy people, because Here our Saviour gives this, is a case of unbelief, that is, un- belief, that they were not his Disciples; were they not Disci- pled? yes, but all are not Disci, that are defended of Disci- ple. It seems a very hard interpretation that some would put upon these words; ye believe not, because ye are not credi- table, and fit to be made my Disciples; the words are ye yei yei lo ve meshefah lo ve sukh. Nor can such interpretation be pulled from all other Scripture. That ye Disciple, here, cannot be meant members of the Church, is plain; for they were of the Church of Christ, whom the Lord loved (as the Psalmist speaks, Psal. 50. 1) That Believers, and such as are truly called and sanctified, are not meant, is as plain; for then the sense would be, ye believe not, because ye believe not; besides, our Saviour had before said, Ye had other Disciple that were not of this fold, (by which he meant the Gentile Church, for whom he prayed, Chap. 17. 20.

being full as Jewish, believe on me ye shall be Disciples for me, certainly, such as were not of this fold, John 17. 20.
 48. Nor will it therefore follow, that God's new ordination of them to life, was the near and immediate cause of their not believing; but their own hardness, and perversity will in representing, that they might believe. As our Saviour tells them, Matth. 21. 23. that is, not turning from their grofs and sinful ways, which they might have done by virtue of that common grace of God, which we afforded them in the Gospel, by the Preaching of John the Baptist, and of Christ himself.

27 My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me q.
q This is the same which he said verse 4. (See the notes

28 And I give unto them eternal life, <sup>r</sup> and * they shall never perish <sup>s</sup>, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand <sup>t</sup>. * Chapter 13, v. 21, and 18, 19

1. I do give them, and will give them eternal life; as soon as they shall come to hear, and believe my voice, and to follow me, they shall have a sure right and title to it; and when My Father by his Providence shall remove them out of the world, and in the great day, they shall be taken up into the actual possession of it. 2. For they shall never perish, but though they may fall, they shall rise again by repentance. 3. They are in my hand, and my hand shall preclude them, none shall ever pluck them out of it; they shall be preferred through faith, by the Power of God to eternal life, and Salvation.

29 * My Father which gave them me, is greater * Chap. 14:28 than all u : and no man is able to pluck them out of my Fathers hand.

u All that are my sheep, became so by my Fathers donation and gift; so as my Father is equally with my self concerned in the preservation of them to that happy end, to which he hath ordained and designed them. Those that would pluck them out of my hand, and deprive them of that eternal life which I will give them, must be too strong, not for me alone, but for my Father also, which none is, for who can be too strong for Omnipotence?

30 I and my Father are one w. w My Father and I are one, not only in Counsel and Will,
(as John 17. 11, 12. And believers are said to be of one heart, Acts 4. 32.) but in Nature, Power, and Essence; for it is plain, that our Saviour here ascribes the preservation of his sheep, not to the Will, but to the Power of his Father. Now is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand. And it is plain by what follows, that the Jews thus understood our Saviour: Some eminent Professors Interpreters expound this of an unwilling in Confess and Willing doing the same things, and driving the same design; both agreeing to pre-serve the Sheep unto Eternal Life; but (with all respect un-der them) I think the context implieth more, though this be not excluded.

31 Then the Jews took up stones again to stone him.

* Tumultuously, as we read they did once before, Chap. 8. 59. From whence we may learn with what design they came to Christ, ver. 24. plainly to tell them whether he were the Christ. By the Law of God the false Prophet was to be stoned; but he was first to be judicially tried, and judged: This was but a Tumultuous action of an enraged Multi-tude.

32 Jesus answered them, Many good works have I shewed you from my Father: for which of those works do you stone me?

The word Translated good, is of a very large significa-tion; signifying, Excellent, Useful, Profitable, Beauteous, &c. Whatever in common speech comes under the No-tion of Good; I (with our Saviour) never did harm to any of you, but I have been the Instrument of a great deal of good to you. I have given light to the Blind, healing to the Deaf, healed many that were sick of grievous diseases, cast out many Devils out of those which were infested with, or possessed by them. Do any of these deserve any such usage at your hands? What maketh you in such a rage a-against me?

33 The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not, but for blasphemy, and because that thou being a man, makest thyself God.

* These are not the things we are incensed against thee for; we grant that thou hast done many good Works a-mongst us; these we gratefully acknowledge. But this is that which we are not able to bear, That whereas thou art but a mere man, by thy discourses thou makest thyself equal with God, and art guilty of Blasphemy, which is committed as well by arrogating to our selves what is proper to God, as by imputing to God the Natural or Moral imperfections of the Creature; and the Blasphemer de-serveth to be stoned, according to the Law of God. By this it is manifest, that the Jews understood our Saviour, affirming that He and his Father were One; as asserting himself One in Essence with his Father, not in Will only.

34 Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods?

b This was written, Psalm 82. 6. The whole Scripture of the Old Testament, being wrote by holy Men, inspired of God, and directive of men's Conversation before men, and towards God, is sometimes called The Law, Psalm 107. 1. he says (spoken concerning Magistrates, and the Governors of Gods People, who being Gods Deputies, and Vicegerents, intrusted to execute the Judgments and Vengeance of God, and dignified with the name of gods.

35 If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken:

c If God dignified those Men, (and many of them were also vile and sinful Men) with the Title of gods, because they had a Commission to Govern People according to the Law of God; and he none must contradict what God hath said in his word; there can be no fallhood in the Revelation of any part of the Divine will.

* Chap. 6. 27. 36 Say ye of him * whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest: because I said, I am the Son of God?

e Suppose I were no more than a mere man, yet being Sanctified, that is, set apart of God for the special work of Mans Redemption; and sent of God into the World, with Commission both to reveal and to do his Will, yet dare I say you, that I blaspheme, because I said, I am the Son of God? In the place, ver. 26. Where God said of Magis-trates, ye are gods; he also added, all of you are Children of the most High; you have therefore no reason to rage at me, though I said I was the Son of God; being one whom the Father hath in his Eternal Councils set apart for this great and special Work; and actually by his Providence sent into the World for the finishing and dispatching of it. But we must take heed, that we do not understand our Sa-viour here, as if he in another sense understood to him the Title of the Son of God; it was enough for him at present to assert, that the Title well enough belonged to him, if he indeed had been no more than the Son of Man, as they said.

37 If I do not the works of my Father, be-lieve me not.

g Our Saviour doth often appeal to his Works to testify concerning his Divine Mission and Power: These works he here calleth the works of his Father; by which he doth not only mean works that are pleasing and acceptable to God, as acts of Obedience to the Will of God, performed by Men, may be called, and are, Chap. 6. 28, 29. nor (as I conceive) only those works which he did by Commission and Au-thority from his Father; which Chap. 17. 4. He calleth the work which his Father had given him to do. But those works which none but God could do; such were the multiplication of the loaves, Chap. 6. 11 &c. The curing of him who was blind, Chap. 9. 1, &c. If (saith our Saviour) I do not do those works which no mere man ever did, give me no credit; but if I do those works, which can be done by no humane Art or Power, you have reason to believe me.

38 But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works: that ye may know and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him.

h If I do such works as can be done by no less than a Di-vine Power, being beyond the Power and ability of all Cre-atures; then, though you will not give credit to any bare as-sertions of my self, because I say I am the Son of God; ye believe the things for the testimony that my works give unto it. Proper effects give Testimony to the proper cause; He who doth those things which none but God can do, must needs be God, or Impowered by God to do them. & This is the way for you to know, be persuaded, and to believe, That the Father is in me by his mighty Divine working Power, Chap. 14. 10. The Father that dwelleth in me, he doth the works; and I work in, and together with him. This phrase, The Father is in me, and I in him; teacheth us three things concerning Christ. 1. His Oneness in Nature and Essence with the Father. 2. His Personal distinction from his Father; here are two mentioned, the Father and Me. None can properly be said to be in himself. 3. The most perfect and intimate, indwelling of one of the persons in the Holy Trinity, in the other.

39 Therefore they fought again to take him: but he escaped out of their hand.

i Because he said, that the Father was in him, and He in the Father; by which they well enough understood, that he asserted an union with the Father; they did not assen-sue to stone him, as they did before; he had sufficiently stopped their mouths, as to their imputation of Blasphe-my; but they seek to apprehend him, with a design (no doubt) to carry him before the Sanhedrim, (their great Court, which had Cognizance of all such things.) But as he had once and again before, so he now again catches out their hands: Whether by darkening the Air before their Eyes, their hands: or (as some would have it) making his Body inviolable, by his Divine Power; or what other way, the Scripture tellus not, and it is great rashness to determine.

40 And went away again beyond Jordan, into the place, where John at first baptized us; and there he abode.

k Christs time was not yet come when he should be betrayed, and Crucified; it was yet three months and more to it: He saw the Jews at Jerusalem were in such a rage and fury, that there was no staying in that place: He goes be-yond Jordan to Bethabara, where he found John at first baptizing, John 1. 28. before he Baptized in Enon near Sa-lim: Chap. 3. 23. See the Notes on John 1. 28. Possibly he chose that place, as being a place where John had been preparing a way for him, by turning mens hearts in some measure for receiving the Gospel, and pointing out Christ to his Disciples, as the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the World. o How long he abode there, we cannot tell; probably, till he took his last journey from Galilee to Jerusalem, of which the other Evangelists speak, Mark 10. 17. Mark 10. 32. Luke 18. 31. What he did in Galilee during these three months, John reports not, only faith, 41 And many resorted unto him, and said, John did no miracle: but all things that John spake of this man were true.

p God so ordered it in the Wisdom of his Providence, that though Elijah and Elisba under the Law wrought miracles, though they confirmed their Divine Mission; yet John by which they confirmed their Divine Mission; and coming immediately before Christ, as the glory of Christ in Fore-runner, wrought none, that he might be more clear and evident. This made the People, that came to Christ while he was in Galilee, say thus amongst themselves, We paid a great Veneration to John the Baptist, yet he never did those things which Christ hath done. q And whereas John told us of this Person, John proved true: and it is in the judg-ment of greater things than ever John did: and it is in the judg-ment of sense to be preferred before him: should we not now believe before in him: John told us he was the Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the World: and told us much more concerning him, which our Eyes see is true.

42 And many believed on him there.

r Some believed on him, as such whom John B. testified had spoken him to be: others possibly believed on him in the sense mentioned, Chap. 6. 23. Not of the saving of their Souls, but as one sent of God, a great Prophet, no ordinary Man. The rage of men shall not hinder the progress of the Gospel.

CHAP. XI.

Now a certain man was sick, named Lazarus of Bethany, the town of Mary and her sister Martha.

s Bethany, (as appeareth by ver. 18.) was eight unto Jeru-salem, not wholly at two miles distance from it: but our Saviour was at this time in Judea, for ver. 7. he saith to his Disciples, Let us go into Judea. Again, he was at this time in Galilee, or in Peraea: and we shall find ver. 17. That Lazarus had been in his grave four days, before our Savi-our got thither: So as we must allow at least six or seven days betwixt the time when Christ heard of Lazarus his Sicknes, and the time when our Saviour came to Bethany. This Bethany is here only described to us, as the place where Martha and Mary lived, or at least where they were born: Some think that Bethany was only a part of the Mount Olives; but others more probably, think that it was some little Town or City, standing within that part of the Mount Olives; for it is here called a Town, and Luke 10. 33, 39. the place where these two Sisters lived, is called a Village.

t It was that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, is, whole brother Lazarus was sick.

u We read of a Woman, Luke 7. 38. that came behind our Saviour while he was at dinner, in the House of Simon the Pharisee; brought an Alabaster box of Ointment, stood at his feet behind him weeping, washing his feet with her tears, and wiping them with her hair; but it appears by the story, she had been before a notorious Sinner. We read of another Woman, Matth. 26. 6, 7. Mar. 14. 3. that poured a box of Ointment on our Saviours head, as he was at dinner in the House of Simon the Leper: but we in those two Evangelists, read nothing of her washing his feet with her tears, or wiping them with her hair; but in the next Chap. of this Gospel, ver. 3. we have a story, which (whether it be the same with the other or no, I cannot tell) is that of this woman which this verse referreth to: The Names and circumstances much agree. There were other Maries, (for Mary was a very ordinary name among them) but this was that Mary which is mentioned Chap. 12. 3. that anointed the Lord with Ointment, &c. It was her brother was Sick.

v Christ (as was said before) seemeth to have been very familiar at the House of these two Sisters, and often to have made them his Hostesses; and if it should appear by this verse, that his wife he had shewed particular kindnesse to this brother Lazarus, who was now Sick, this makes them tell their Brother, him whom thou lovest. They plead no merits either of their own or his; but only plead with him for his own goodnesse and love. Nor do they ex-press in particular, what they desired for their Brother, though it is easily understood by their representation of his state and condition.

4 When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, * but for the glory of God; that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.

x God hath not sent this Sicknes upon Lazarus to de-termine his being upon the Earth; or such a separation of the Soul of Lazarus from his Body, as there shall be no re-union of it before the general Resurrection, (which is our ordi-nary Notion of Death) God hath not sent this Sicknes for that purpose, but that he might be glorified by his Son, rais-ing him from the dead: God is glorified, when his Son is glorified; and Christ is glorified, when his Divine Power is manifested, so as men acknowledge him to be what indeed he is.

z He doubtless loved them with a special distinguishing love; as persons chose in him to Eternal Life before the founda-tion of the World, given unto him by an Eternal Donation, called by him with an effectual calling, to own and receive him as their Saviour; but this text seemeth to speak of him as loving this family, with an human love, which in-clineth man to a complacency in an object beloved; he had a kindnes for the whole family: They had shewed him kind-ness in his state of humiliation; and he loved those that lo-ved him, Prova. 8. 17.

6 When he had heard therefore that he was sick, he abode two days still in the same place where he was.

a Though he loved him and his Sisters, with a tender love, yet he did not presently go to them, to comfort Mar-tha in their sorrow, nor yet to cure Lazarus, and prevent his Death; but staid still two days in the place where he was. He loved Mary, and Martha, and Lazarus, but he more loved the Honour and Glory of his Father, which was to be manifested in his raising of Lazarus from the dead; we must not judge of Christs love to us, by his more external dispensations of Providence; nor judge that he doth not love us, because he doth not presently come in to our help, at our times, and in such ways and methods as we would think reasonable.

7 Then after that faith he to his disciples, Let us go into Judea again.

b This lets us know, that Christ was not in Judea, when he received the tidings of Lazarus his Sicknes, but in Peraea or Galilee; but he presently upon it, takes up thoughts of returning again into that Province, and indeed he was now preparing for his last journey thither; however the Sicknes of Lazarus, and his raising from the dead; was one occasion of his so soon going up; from which his Disciples would have discouraged him, as followeth.

8 His disciples say unto him, Master, the Jews of late fought to stone thee; and wilt thou thither again?

c See Chap. 10. 31. There were not three months elap-sed, since the Jews had so fought to have stoned him; and there was no reason for him to think, that their fury was in any whit abated. We read in the other Evangelists, Matth. 16. 22. of other words they used (Especially) to dissuade our Saviour from this journey to Jerusalem. They were afraid for their Master, and they were afraid also for themselves.

9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world.

d Look as in the day there are twelve hours, in which the Sun shineth, and by giving its light, directs men in their courses, so as they know how to guide their feet; and do not stumble, because they have the light of the Sun, which God hath ordained, to direct men that walk up and down in the world.

e But if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, * Chap. 12. 35. because there is no light in him.

f And there is a night also, wherein if men walk, they will be very prone to stumble, because they are in darkness, and have no light to guide their feet. So there is a set-time, for all the duties of men; a time for their peace and liberty; and a time for their troubles and sufferings. Gods Rules and Governs the World, while men are in their callings and places faithfully discharging their trust, and finishing the work which God hath given them to do; and their time is not come, for their glorifying of God by suffering; they shall not stumble, nor be given up to the rage of their eagerest Enemies; they are in their callings and places, and will be light unto them: But when their working-time is over, and the time of their night is come, then they will stumble; because then God withdraweth his light from them, they are no then under such a special Protection of God, who hath done his work by, and with them. This is as much as he had said before, Chap. 8. 20. No man laid hands on him, for his hour was not yet come. The twelve hours of his day were not all spent. This day digested, is of infinite use to quiet the Spirits of Gods People in the worst of times; every man hath his working hours, his day and set time, to honour God upon the stage of the World; he shall not stumble, he shall not miscarry while those hours are spent; he shall not die, he shall not be disabled for long; so long as God hath ought for him to do; but every man hath his night now, when he must not expect to con-verse in the World, without stumbling.

1 These things said he: and after that, he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus * sleepeth; * Mar. 9. 24. but I go; that I may awake him out of sleep.

g There is such an Analogy betwixt Death and Sleep, that there is nothing more ordinary than to express Death by Sleep in Scripture, Deut. 31. 16. 2 Sam. 7. 12. 1 Kings 1. 21. 2 Kings 20. 21. Job 7. 21. and 14. 12. Dan. 12. 2. and in a multitude of other Texts, both in the Old Testament, and in the New; so as it was evident our Saviour meant

There was a time also when Saul (who a man rejected of God) did also Prophesy; and the word of the Princes of Galilee, had an use of the Crem and Tumulus. So also here Capitula, who a vile and wicked man, was here influenced by evil to Prophesy, and speak an Oracle: nor are the High Priests (using High Priest that year) superfluously put in, for it being consistent with the Holiness of God, sometimes to make use of the Tongues of the worst of men to declare his Will, it seems agreeable to the Wisdom of God, in his doing it, to make use of principal men, they being Persons whose words are most likely to be regarded, and to make imposition upon people. The Papists would from hence infer the infallibility of the Pope, because he is the High Priest: but they ought to prove, 1. That the Office of the Pope, hath any foundation in the word of God. 2. That this was a gift given to particular Priests, and at particular times; for the Jews High Priests were fallible enough ordinarily, witness Aaron making the golden Calf, and Urim and Thummim after the pattern of Damascus, 2 Kings 16. 10, 11. The words, being High Priests, are not given at a reason why God was pleased to choose his Tongue, and over-rule by his own thoughts and intentions, to serve his design in this Revelation. He did not Prophesy intentionally, as designing that a thing only materially; the matter of his words were indeed a Divine Revelation, tho his intention and scope was fit for none but a base, carnal Politician. God made him a Prophet in what he said, tho he meant not so.

52 And *not for that nation only I, *but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad m.

I Not for the Jews only. The words used in Caiphas speech were And 1966, words not significant of the Jews only, but of other people also: m for Christ was to gather into one body all the Elect of God, (who are here called the children of God, because they were to be so after their being begotten by the Immortal seed of the Word, and born again of Water and the Spirit) those that at present were scattered abroad over the face of the whole Earth: Christ, Eph. 1. 10, was to gather in one all things in Heaven and Earth. The Evangelist extendeth the sense of Caiphas his Prophecy, to Gentiles as well as Jews, according to the extent of the Death of Christ, declared 1 John 2. 2.

n They had taken this Council before; but now they were more intent than before, having found a better presence, viz. to prevent a Sedition and Rebellion; and learning of their High Priest, that it was more convenient that one should die, than that a whole Nation should be destroyed. The High Priest had satisfied their Consciences: now they make all the halt they can to put their malicious designs in execution.

54 Jesus therefore *walked no more openly amongst the Jews: or *but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim p, and there continued with his disciples q.

p For he being the true Paschal Lamb, was to be slain at that Feast, and put an end to that Type, and would therefore reserve himself for that time, which was now at hand.

q What this Ephraim or Ephraim was, Interpreters vainly but themselves in inquiring; it was some obscure City, and near the Wilderness; some think it was in the Lot of Benjamin, others think it was within the Lot of Ephraim, and obtained its name from the Tribe within whose Lot it was. The Scripture no where mentioneth it: and it cannot be expected, but that so many changes of Government as had befallen the Jews, the names of places should be so altered, that we should be at loss for many of them: q where ever it was, it is said that Christ and his Disciples continued there in some privacy.

r Christ's last Passover, which was the fourth after he had entered upon his publick Ministry, this was nigh: r He doth not lay all, but many went up to purifie themselves. There was no general legal purification required before men did eat the Passover; but there were several legal uncleannesses, and purifications necessary to cleanse men from them; now those who had any special Purification to pass, went before others, that they might have time to do what the Law required of them.

56 *Then sought they for Jesus, and spake amongst themselves, as they stood in the temple, VVhat think ye? that he will not come to the feast?

*I find good Interpreters expounding ver. 6. of the friends of Christ, who having used to meet Christ at these Feasts, and see some Miracles wrought by him, did out of a good design seek for him, and inquire of each other, whether they knew, whether he intended to be at the Feast; yet it may also be understood of his Enemies, tho it seemeth something too early, being six or seven days before.

57 Now both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that if any man knew where he were, he should shew it, that they might take him u.

u For their great Court had issued out orders for the discovery and apprehending of our Saviour, if they could any way learn where he was. This was in pursuance of that wicked Council of which we read before, ver. 53, where they decreed: now they cannot rest until they bring their bloody devices to pass, for which we shall soon find God giving them an opportunity.

C H A P. XII.

Then Jesus, six days before the passover, came to Bethany a, where Lazarus was, which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead b.

a From the Country near to the wilderness where he continued with his Disciples, Chap. 11. 54, he came to Bethany within less than two miles of Jerusalem, upon the Sabbath-day, or possibly the night before; six days before the Passover: b it was the place where (as we read in the former Chapter) Lazarus dyed, and was by Christ raised from the dead.

2 There they made him a supper, and Martha served; but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him b.

c That this Supper was made in Bethany, is no question; but at whose house there, it is questioned: some think that it was at the house of Simon the Leper, we read indeed of a Supper made for our Saviour at his house, both Mark 26. 6, 7, and Mar. 14. 3. and that Simon is said to have been at Bethany, only the Supper here mentioned, is said to have been six days before the Passover, and that mentioned by Matthew and Mark, seems to have been but two days before, Mark. 26. 2. Mark 14. 1. That which is probably said to solve that difficulty is, the circumstances of the Supper, and history about it, seem the very same, both in Matthew and Mark: but it seems in Matthew and Mark, to be a little put out of order; they do not say, that this Supper was two days before the Passover, (that indeed had been a little put out of order, if that Christ told his Disciples, that the Passover was to be within two days, and of the Council taken by the chief Priests and Elders against Christ, and then relateth the story of this Supper; John first gives us an account of this Supper, which was six days before the Passover, *Jo*hn seems to have related it in its proper time and order.

3 Then took Mary a pound of ointment, of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.

4 Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simons son, which should betray him,

5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?

6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor: but because he was a thief, and *had the bag, and *Chap. 12:6 bare what was put therein.

7 Then said Jesus, Let her alone, against the day of my burying hath she kept this.

8 For the *poor always ye have with you: but *Me. 12:8 me ye have not always d.

d Both Matthew and Mark relate this story with some different circumstances; see the notes upon those two places, where all the differing circumstances are considered, and explained, and the parts of this history are more largely explained.

9 Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there; and they came, not for Jesus sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also *whom Chap. 12:10 he had raised from the dead e.

e Bethany was so near to Jerusalem, that many of the Jews came thither, as well to see Lazarus raised from the dead, as to see Christ; nor was this without the special Providence of God, that the name of Christ might be made more famous just before his suffering.

10 But the chief priests consulted, that they might put Lazarus also to death f.

f Never was there a more unreasonable madness and rage, to justify the Apostles calling of the Enemies of the Gospel unbelievable Men, 2 Thos. 2. 2. Suppose that Christ had broken the Sabbath, or had spoken Blasphemy, yet what had Lazarus done?

11 Because that by reason of him, many of the Jews went away, and believed on Jesus g.

g Being raised from Death to Life, he possibly spake of it to the Honour and glory of God, for this they consult to put him to Death also; and their only reason was, because that many of the Jews believed on Jesus for his sake.

12 *On the next day, much people that were coming to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem.

13 Took branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried *Hosanna, Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the Name of the Lord.

14 And Jesus, when he had found a young ass, sat thereon, as it is written,

h This whole History is much more largely reported by the other Evangelists, Mark. 21. in the 16. first Verse. Mark 11. in the ten first Verses. Luke 19. from Verse 29. to Verse 41. (see the notes on all those places.)

16 These things understood not his disciples at the first: but when Jesus was glorified, then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him i.

i The Evangelist amongst others, confesseth his own ignorance also, the Disciples saw the thing done, Christ riding into the City upon the foal of an Ass, the people strewing of boughs, and throwing their clothes in the way; but to what purpose these things were done, or what fulfilling of Prophecies was in this thing, that they understood not, so long as Christ was alive: their eyes were upon the Messiah as Temporal Prince, that should come in great State and Majesty, for they were wholly blinded from seeing any thing of the truth and faithfulness of God fulfilled in this little Triumph of his Lords. But after that Christ had died, and was risen again from the dead, and ascended up to heaven, to declare himself with Power to be the Son of God: then they began to remember these things, so as to confirm their Faith in him as the true Messiah, whom God had sent into the World. The Word of the Lord which we hear, and the Works of God which we see, do sometimes they do not profit us, nor are improved by us at the present, yet afterwards become of use and profit to us; it is therefore good to hear, and see, and observe Gods Words and Works, and to lay them in our hearts, as it is said My pondered the sayings of the Angel; expecting future afterwards, of what at present we see no fruit and effect.

17 The people therefore that was with him when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raised him from the dead, bare record.

18 For this cause the people also met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.

19 The Pharisees therefore said among themselves, *Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? Behold, the world is gone after him k.

k These three Verses let us know the External cause of the peoples coming to see Christ, which was the fame of the Miracle wrought by our Saviour on Lazarus: This increased the number of those who came to see his entrance into Jerusalem; but the unseen cause was doubtless the influence of God upon their hearts, directing them to it, for the further glorifying of his Son before his Passion. But this enraged the Pharisees, to see that their Decree that those who owned Christ, should be turned out of the Synagogue, should have no better effect: but the multitude rather more owned him, and ran after him. Here again we find the Heaven World signifying many, tho those many made up but a very small part of the World.

l It is not easy to be determined what these Greeks were, whether Jews, who being called in the Grecian Country upon the Conquests which the Grecians had made upon the Jews under Alexander the Great, and those who succeeded him; still remained in those Countries, but kept so much of the religion of their Country, as to come up to the Passover; or Gentiles, which are ordinarily called Greeks in contradistinction to the Jews; Acts 14. 1. and 16. 1. and 18. 17. Rein. 1. 16. 1 Cor. 1. 23; 2 Gal. 3. 23. But it is most probable that they were Gentiles: for this Cause say, that the Jews would never have suffered the Gentiles to have come into the Temple to worship; yet the contrary is plain from the instance of the Eunuch, Acts 8. 27. who was on Herbim, and came to Jerusalem to worship. And Acts 17. 4. We read of a great multitude of devout Greeks, in the plain from the beginning, that there was a liberty for Strangers, not of Israel, but such as came out of a far Country, for the Lords Name sake: And Salomon prayeth at the Dedication of the Temple, That the Lord would hear them; And there was belonging to the Temple, a Court of the Gentiles, Rev. 11. 2. What worship they there performed, is a greater question: some think they only prayed; others think they offered Sacrifices in that Court; from 2 Mac. 2. 35. but certain it is, that there were Courts of the Gentiles devoutly disposed, that hearing of the Jews Temple, and the solemn Worship performed there, at their leisure Feasts, came, some as Spectators at those great Conventions, others with a true design to Worship the God of the Jews.

21 The same therefore came to Philip m, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee m, and desired him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus n.

m If these Grecians (as is probable) were Syrophonicians, their Country was so near to Bethsaida of Galilee, which was Philip's Town, that it is probable they might have some knowledge of him, and that might bring them to him to be spoken with; n but it should seem, they came only to satisfy their curiosity, for they ask for no more, than that they might see Jesus.

22 Philip cometh and telleth Andrew: and again Andrew and Philip tell Jesus o.

o The news of their coming, and their Errand, is brought to Christ by Philip and Andrew, who possibly might stumble at it, because they were Gentiles, and Christ had forbidden them to go into the way of the Gentiles; they therefore first acquaint him with the desire of those Greeks, before they bring them to Christ.

23 *And Jesus answered them, saying *The *Chap. 12:32 hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified and 17. 1. raised p.

p Christ replies, that the time was now come, when he (who was the Son of God) should be glorified; that is, by Gentiles receiving of the Gospel, according to the many Prophecies of it in the Old Testament; but he goeth on, telling them that he must first die.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you *Except a *1 Cor. 15:36 corn of wheat fall into the ground, and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit q.

q Look as you see in your ordinary Husbandry, the grains of Wheat are first buried in the Earth, and lose their form, before they spring out thence up again, and bring forth fruit: so it must be with me: I must first be crucified, before I shall draw men after me; I must first be crucified, before my Gospel shall be preached to all Nations, and the fulness of the Gentiles shall come; but if I have once died, and risen again from the dead, then you shall see this abundant fruit.

r We had much the same in the other Evangelists, Matth. 10. 37. Luke 14. 26. Some think that our Saviour repeated it here, to glory, that as Christ first suffered, and then entered into his glory, so his disciples must also lay the foundation of their glory in their suffering; and by much tribulation enter into the Kingdom of God: Or what it he would say; That our blessed Lord doth here Prophecy, what sufferings would attend the first Preaching of the Gospel, and encourage his Disciples to what he knew they must meet with and undergo, by letting them know, that the ready way to loose their share in Life Eternal, was to be found in this Life, and the comfort of it, as to be ready to lay their down for him: but if any person here, that he Jesus loved his Life, and all that in this World is dear to him, than Christ and his service, he should, if not be preserved from enemies rage, yet most certainly be recompensed with eternal Life.

26 If any man serve me, let him follow me s, and *where I am, there shall also my servant *Chap. 14:3 be: and if any man serve me, him will my Father and 17. 24. honour.

s This is much the same with that, Matth. 16. 24. unless following here, be more restrained to suffering, let him follow me to my Cross; for otherwise it seemeth the same, with serving; we must not be ready only to do, but also, to die for Christ, to follow him to the Cross if he calleth us.

to it. And if any man so feareth me, he shall be in Heaven where I am, Rom. 8. 17. If we suffer with him, we shall also be glorified together. For my Father, with whom I am one in Nature, and Essence, will honour those that are my servants; so great a thing it is to be a servant to the Son of God. The Father will honour those that are so, and especially those who are so in suffering, with Eternal Life and Felicity.

27 Now is my soul troubled, and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour; but for this cause came I to this hour.

By Soul, is not here to be understood only the sensitive part of the Soul, but his whole human Soul. So Chap. 13. 21. He was troubled in Spirit. Our inward troubles arise from our passions; and there are passions of grief and fear, which give us noise of our inward trouble; Fear respecteth some evil at a distance from us; Grief is caused by evil fallen upon us, or so near, that we seem already to be in the Power of it. The word here used is, troubled, which designeth no mean, but a great, and more than ordinary degree of trouble. Christ was greatly troubled, not so as we sometimes are, when our trouble leadeth us to despair: Christ was capable of no sinful trouble. Hence two questions arise. 1. For what the Soul of Christ was troubled: 2. How such a degree of trouble could agree to the Lord Jesus Christ? He tells us, Matth. 26. 38. That he was exceedingly sorrowful, so as sorrow was one part of his trouble; and we may learn from what he afterward said in the other part of it. He was grieved, and he was afraid, some say it was at the apprehension of that miserable Death he was to die; others say at the sense of the Divine Wrath which he was to undergo, Death being not yet overcome, and his conflict with his Fathers Wrath for the sins of men, being yet to be endured; so Christ at this time was in the most perfect Obedience to his Fathers Will, offering up a most acceptable, and well-pleasing Sacrifice unto God; yet he felt a conflict to endure even with he fulfilling our persons, had a conflict to not upon his own Fathers Wrath upon that account, not upon his own personal account, for he was at this time doing that which was most acceptable, and well-pleasing in his sight. As to the second question, nothing could be more agreeable than this to Christ, both with respect to his human Nature, which had the same Natural (tho not sinful) Infirmitie which other men have; and with respect to his design and end, to help and relieve his people under their troubles of Spirit; and as the Apostle faith, to deliver them, who through fear of death, are all their life time subject to bondage. So as this trouble of Spirit, agreed to him both as man, and as Mediator; but there must be a vast difference observed between this trouble of Spirit in Christ, and that which is in us. Our troubles are upon reflections for our own sin, and the Wrath of God due to us therefore. His trouble was for the Wrath of God due to us for our sin, but his was not, because we have personally grieved Him. He was troubled, because we had not (nor he himself) had offended God, though given to him for our sin. External Condemnation; he was only afraid by a Natural fear of Death, which naturally riseth higher, according to the kind of Death we die. Our troubles have mixtures of despair, distrust, sinful horrors; there was no such thing in his trouble. Our troubles in their Natural tendencies, are killing and degrading; only by accident, and the well ordering of Divine Providence, they are advantageous; by leading us to him as the only remedy for troubled Souls. His trouble was in the very nature of it, not only pure and clean, but also curative and healing. But that he was truly troubled, and that in his whole Soul, and that such a trouble did very well agree, as to the human Nature he had assumed, to his Office, as our Mediator and Saviour, and the foundation of a great deal of peace, quiet, and satisfaction to us, is our question. The chastisement of our peace in this particular lay upon him; and they were some of his stripes of his, by which we were healed: and faith he, What shall I say? It is the natural Language of a Spirit troubled, to Father save me from this hour. This hour of my Passion; it is the same with that in our Saviours last Prayer, Let this cup pass from me; and must be understood with the same Qualifications there expressed, If it be thy will, let it be possible. By his blessed example he hath taught us under the distresses of our Spirits, whereto faith, what to do? For my love (saith David of his Enemies, Psalm 109. 4) I leave mine enemies, but I give my self unto Prayer. I give up my self to Prayer. God hath bidden us, Psalm 50. 15. Call upon me in the day of trouble; and Saint James faith, Is any man afflicted? Let him pray. Herein Christ hath himself set us an example, that we should follow his steps. But how doth our Saviour pray, to be saved from that hour? when for this cause he came into the World. Here was in Christ a conflict between the flesh and Spirit; not like ours, which is between corrupt flesh and the Spirit, but between his natural flesh, and the natural affections of it, and his Spirit, that was fully conformed to the Will of God, and gets a present Conquest. But for this cause (saith he) I came to this hour; he checks himself, correcteth the Language of his Natural flesh, acquiesceth, rejoyceth in the Will of God. I was not (saith he) forced, I came of my own good will to this hour; and I came on purpose to die for my people.

28 Father, glorify thy Name. Thy Name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.

That is, make thy Name glorious, make it to be known and famous over all the Earth; a general petition, but such as, by all our particular requests must be reduced to, if they be according to the Will of God. It is as much to say, Father! I do thine own Will; for God is then glorified, when his Will is done. But it here signifies more, not thy will, but thy will be done. My flesh indeed faith, Save me from this hour; but Father do thy own Will, let that be done concerning me, which will most tend to make thy Name renowned: Such a Prayer never goes without an answer. There came a voice from Heaven, etc. The Lord causal a voice as from Heaven to be heard: I have glorified it, I have by thee caused my glory to be published, and proclaimed in the World, by thy Preaching, by thy Miracles, and I will perfect that which I have begun, I will glorify it again; thou shalt further glorify me by thy Death, by thy Resurrection from the Dead, by the Preaching of the Gospel, and carrying it to the ends of the Earth.

29 The people therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: Others said, An angel spake to him.

A Nor it may be were they mistaken, faving only in that they thought it was nothing else but thunder, (being possibly at such a distance, as they could not distinctly hear the voice) for it was Gods word, when he spake to his people by a Voice, to have that voice for the greater declaration of the Divine Majesty, attended with Thundings and Lightnings: thus it was at the giving of the Law upon Mount Sinai; thus we read in Johns Visions, Chap. 4. 5. and 5. 5. Of Lightning, and Thundrings, and Voices, which proceeded from Gods Throne. It was the general opinion of the Jews, that God always, when by Voice he revealed his mind to his people, made use of an Angel to do it by, hence (probably) as those who were at such a distance, as they heard no Voice, thought it was nothing but Thunder; to those who were so nigh, as before the Thunder to hear a Voice, said, It was an Angel that spake with him.

30 Jesus answered, and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.

This voice came not to instruct me, I very well be aware it came, knew that my Father had glorified his own Name, and would do it again; it came not principally nor solely for me, but chiefly to confirm you in this great truth, that I am the Son of God, and he whom he hath sent into the World, by, and in whom, he designeth to glorify his own great Name.

31 Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out.

The terms [Judgment] and [World] are taken to signify, not only the present time, but the whole of time, as is seen in the New Testament, and particularly in 1 Thess. 4. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. The Jews therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: Others said, An angel spake to him. rising Lyon, seeking whom he may devour, and molesting the blessed, God will bruise him under their feet; he that had the power of Death (that is to say, his dominion) be destroyed, and those who are in bondage through the fear of it, shall be delivered, Heb. 2. 14. the tempted shall be succoured, ver. 18. and God with the temptation shall give a blessed issue. And the Devils Kingdom kept up by Idolatry, shall also in a great measure be destroyed in the World: many Nations now under that slavery shall embrace the Gospel, and throw away their idols.

32 And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, I will draw all men unto me.

33 This he said, signifying what death he should die.

If however this term of lifting up Christ is taken in some other Scriptures, it is by the Evangelist himself in this text expounded concerning his death, so as there is no room for any other interpretation of it in this Text: The word that is used is hardly to be found in any place, (except where in Scripture it relateth to Christ) signifying to die, or put to death, but is very proper upon to express the kind of his death, which was a lifting up upon the Cross, from the Earth into the Air; and to let us know that his death was a lifting up of his Name: As it was the lowest degree of his humiliation, so it was nearest to his Exaltation. It was his highest act of Obedience to the Will of his Father, that for which his Father highly Exalted him, giving him a Name which is above every Name, Philip. 2. 9. and 10. 9. and 11. 9. which made his Name famous over all the World, by the Preaching of the Gospel, for as the Apostles, so all the Ministers of the Gospel since their times, preach a Christ Crucified. (saith our Saviour) If, or altho I be put to death by the hands of the Jews, lifted up upon the Cross between Heaven and Earth, yet this shall not hinder my Fathers glorifying of himself in and by me; for instead of obscuring or hindering my Fathers glory, by this I shall further promote it. For by the Preaching of my Cross, and publication of my Gospel to all Nations, and by the efficacious concurrence of my holy Spirit, together with the Preaching of the Gospel, I shall draw (tho not all, and every man, yet) multitudes of men and women after me, so as they shall embrace and believe in me, having died and risen up again from the Dead, and being by my Apostles, and other Ministers of the Gospel, held forth as the object of peoples Faith, to be by them laid hold upon in order to their Eternal Life and Salvation. He used the term of lifting up, faith the Evangelist, to signify the particular Death he should die, by being Crucified, in which Death the bodies of the Crucified abode not upon the Earth, as when they were at any time Stood, or Straggled, or beheaded, &c. but were lifted up from the Earth to be nailed to the Cross, and hung in the Air until they died.

34 The people answered him, We have heard out of the law, that Christ abideth for ever: and how canst thou say that the Son of man must be lifted up? Who is the Son of man?

Here again the Law is taken in a larger sense than in some places, where it is only significant of the Books of Moses, in opposition to the Prophets and other holy Writings, as we had before, *Chap. 20. 34. for the places of Scripture where the people seem to refer to, seem to be *Psalm 110. 4. where Christ is called a Priest for ever; or *Psalm 136. 14. where the Kingdom of the Messiah is said to be an everlasting Dominion, which should not pass away; a Kingdom that should be destroyed: so also, Psalm 44. Micah 4. 7. These old Prophecies of the Messiah, the people could not reconcile to what our Saviour here told them of his Death; the reason was, their understanding the true Notion of the Messiah, and of his Kingdom, but a Temporal Kingdom here on Earth. This made them ask, how (that is to say, with what consistency to those Prophecies) if he indeed were the Messiah, he said, The Son of man should die, (for that they understood by the term lifted up) which maketh it very plain, that it was a phrase they used to express that kind of Death by. They ask who he meant by the Son of man.

35 Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you: I walk while ye have the light, lest I darkness come upon you: for I he that walketh in darkness, knoweth not whither he goeth.

Our Saviour thinketh not fit further to open himself as to this point concerning the Messiah, and his Divine Nature; into a direct answer of which he must have entered, had he given a direct answer to their questions; otherwise what they had objected, might easily have been answered by our Saviour, by distinguishing between the two Natures in his own person; according to his Divine Nature he was not to die, tho he died according to his human Nature; and after his suffering and Resurrection, his whole person in which both the Divine and human Nature were limited, were to infuse for ever; but he thinks not fit to discourse this point, what he himself had said, Chap. 9. 5. That he was the light of the World, tho possibly by light, he here understood the throne of his Gospel Doctrine, which lifted out from him as the fountain of light. Yet a little while, I who am the great light, and the true light of the World, am with you: or yet a little while, the Gospel which is light, and directs you in the way to Heaven, is with you, for within a few years (under forty) after this, their City was destroyed, and Jerusalem ruined, and before that time the Apostles were turned away from the generality of that Nation to the Gentiles, Acts 13. 46. and 18. 9. 10. 11. He thus very pompously himself as to what he meant by making, *ver. 11. leaving: make use of the light, both to guide your understandings and judgments, and also to direct your feet: for look on men in the World, while they have the guidance of the light of the Sun, know how to order their steps, and to direct their feet: but if once it be dark, they know not how to direct their feet in their way; but err, and stumble, and fall. So it will be with you, when I shall be gone, who am the great light of the World, while I am in the World, as he spake, *Chap. 9. 5. and not only I gone, but the Gospel which is that light which I shall leave behind me, be gone; by my Apostles turning to the Gentiles, through your perverse refusal of the Salvation of it, (as Acts 13. 46. and 18. 9. 10. 11.) When you shall be utterly ruined, (as it will be at the destruction of your City) then you will walk in darkness, having no means of Salvation left you.

36 While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. These things spake Jesus, and departed, and he did hide himself from them.

He either expounds what he meant before, by his call, that ye may be the children of light, *ver. 12. Believing in him who is the true and great light of the World. Or else he declares Faith in him to be their duty, as well as Obedience to him, which is a point our Saviour had often before pressed: While I am amongst you, and when I shall be gone from you, and the light of the Gospel yet sheweth behind amongst you; embrace me, and receive me as your Saviour, and yield all Obedience to the prescriptions of my Gospel, that you may be children of the light; this the Apostle expounds, and enlargeth upon *Eph. 5. 8, 9, 10, 11. Or after Christ had spoken these things in Jerusalem, he departed to Bethany, p where he obscured himself from his Enemies.

37 But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him.

The Miracles of Christ did not work faith in any, yet they had a tendency both to prepare Souls for an assent to the proposition of the Gospel, and also for receiving Christ as the true Messiah, and Saviour of the world; as they evidenced a Divine Power in him by which he wrought those mighty Works; but yet they had not this effect upon the generality of the Jews.

38 That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled which he spake, O Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?

So as that which Isaiah Prophecied, *Isa. 53. 2. appeared to be fulfilled in them; for the term isa which we translate that, doth not in Scripture always denote the final cause, with respect to the Counsel and intention of God, but sometimes the event. So *Chap. 5. 20. Rom. 9. 20. 2 Cor. 1. 17. The arm of the Lord may either signify the Gospel, which is called The Power of God to Salvation, Rom. 1. 16. 1 Cor. 18. Or else the Messiah, who is thought to be mentioned in this Notion by Isaiah *Chap. 51. 5. and 52. 10. and 59. 16 and 63. 12. because the Father worketh by him, as a man worketh by his arm, Chap. 1. 3. 14.

39 Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again,

Some will have, they could not hear, to be the same which they did not, as *Matth. 13. 17. It is said Christ could not do mighty works at Nazareth: Or the same with they would not, as *Gen. 19. 22. but this seemeth an hard Interpretation of isa Isaiah 53. It is most certain, that in all there is a natural impotence and inability to believe; but this Text seemeth to speak of a further degree of impossibility, than that, occasioned through their wilful obstinacy, and Gods judicial hardening of them. Because Isaiah faith, is no more than, for Isaiah faith, the particle doth not denote the cause, influencing them, but the effect of a Prophecy: Gods word (saith the Evangelist) must be made good, and Isaiah had Prophecied of what now came to pass.

ified in the Name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of God, (as the apostle speaketh, 1 Cor. 6. 11.) their flame is not to be renewed; they need not be justified a second time, but they will have need to have their feet washed in regard of their remainder of sin, and lust that is in them, and will be so while they are in the World, and the temptations which every where lie in the World, as snares for their feet; they will have need of a daily washing by repentance, and fresh applications of their Souls to my blood, by the repeated exercises of faith, according to their renewed and repeated acts of sin. O you, who are my Apostles, are clean, you are washed, you are justified; I have forgiven your sins, accepted your persons, but not all; the most of you are so, but not all.

ye By these words, the Evangelist expounds only what our Saviour meant in the former verse, when he had told them, they were not all clean; for tho the Disciples did not yet know that they had a Traytor amongst them, Satan had before this, put the design into the heart of Judas, ver. 2. and Christ who knew all hearts, knew what was in the heart of Judas, and he soon after (as we shall hereafter in this Chapter read) revealed it; yet at this time he had not revealed it to his Disciples. Now he begins to discover it, telling them, that tho the most of them were clean, justified, sanctified, yet all of them were not so.

12 So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again ye he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you?

ye After that our Saviour had finished this Ceremony, and washed his Disciples feet; (some question whether all or no, but I see no reason to doubt it) ye he returned again to the Supper, which (probably) now was near finished, which certainly was the common Supper which the Jews had besides the Passover Supper, and probably before it, tho some think after it. He asketh them, if they knew the meaning of this which he had done unto them; lest they should not fully understand it, he openeth it to them in the following discourse.

* Mat. 23. 8, 10. 13 Ye call me Master and Lord, and ye say well: for so I am.

ye The Disciples in their ordinary discourses, called Christ Master and Lord: nor was it a name improper for him, for he was their Master to instruct them, their Lord to rule, guide, and govern them; ye nor faith our Saviour, Disciples ought to obey their Master, Servants ought to obey their Lords, and Disciples also ought to imitate their Master.

* Luke 22. 27. 14 If I then your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one anothers feet.

ye I have by this action taught you to love, and to be ready also to serve one another, and not to think much to serve them even in the lowliest and meanest offices by which you can do them good; for we must not think, that these words lay a literal obligation upon Christians, to wash the feet of others; washing the feet is mentioned but as Species pro generis; a single act of service, but for all other acts by which we can be serviceable unto others; so it is also used, 1 Sam. 23. 41, and 1 Tim. 5. 10. Some of the Ancients seem to have judged this washing of feet, to have been instituted as a Sacrament, (tho in an improper sense) and from hence, (as the Belarmine, Maldonate and others, deny it to be a Sacrament as well as we) yet certainly is the practice in use amongst the Papists, to wash certain persons feet every Thursday before Easter, (a theatrical Ceremony, rather than any thing of solid and profitable use.) Our Saviour certainly intends no more by ye ought to wash one anothers feet; than ye ought to serve one another in all offices of love, and not to think your selves too good, or too great, to do the meanest services to those who are my Disciples; and this is that as which he tells them, he had set them an example that they should do as he had done, in other acts of the same kind, tho not as to this special act.

* 1 Pet. 2. 21. 15 For I have given you an example, that ye should do, as I have done to you.

16 Verily, verily I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his Lord, neither he that is sent, greater than he that sent him.

The Apostles were to take up a very high station in the Gospel Church, and our hearts are very prone to swell in an high opinion of our selves, for which the nature of man taketh advantage from every thing in which we either really do excel, or can conceit that we do excel our neighbours: Our Lord therefore, (so speaking to the Apostles, (some of the best of men) yet knowing they were (like Elisiah) men subject to like passions with other men, addeth this to arm them against any Temptation to Pride; they owned themselves as servants to Christ who was their great Lord;

they had seen what he had done; he therefore applyeth a prophetic expression to them, which he also made use of in other cases, as Math. 10. 24. Chap. 15. 20. in both which places he maketh use of it to arm them against perfection; here to persuade them to humility, condescension, and brotherly love.

There ye tells them, that it is not the bare comprehension of these things in their Notion, that would do them any good, unless they brought their knowledge into practice; for James 4. 17. To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth not, it is sin. Faith without works is dead, and the Knowledge of our Masters will, (if we do it not) doth but expose us to many trippings.

18 I speak not of you 2 all, I know whom I have chosen: 1 but that the scripture may be fulfilled 2. He that eateth bread with me, hath lift up his heel against me.

1 I am about to tell you what will make your ears tingle; 2 I am of good courage, what I shall now tell you, doth not concern all of you, it concerneth but one man amongst you.

I know whom I have chosen to be the work of the Apostle; this 1 some interpret it, as Chap. 6. 70. Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a Devil? But the generality of the best Interpreters understand the choosing here mentioned, of a choosing to Eternal Life, and perseverance in the way of God as a means in order to it, as Eph. 4. 1. and of understanding, here is a greater argument in this Text to prove the Gospel of Christ, as the Author of Eternal Election: tho one of you be a Devil, a Traytor, yet I have chosen the rest of you to Eternal Life: and this is no more than was Prophecied of me, and fulfilled in David as a Type of me; the Scripture must have its accomplishment: that Scripture is now fulfilled in me.

19 Now I tell you before it come, that ye know when it is come to pass, ye may believe that ye are he.

b What I now tell you should be so far from prejudicing your faith in me, that it ought rather to confirm and increase your faith in me, the true Messiah; when (the thing coming to pass) ye shall understand that I know the hearts, counsels, and secret thoughts of men: and when ye shall see the Scriptures have their accomplishment, and those things which were long ago Prophecied concerning the Messiah have their just accomplishment, and fulfilling in me as the person intended in those Ancient Revelations.

20 Verily, verily I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send, receiveth me, and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

c See the notes on Math. 10. 24. The words of which place are but here repeated: either to commend to them brotherly love, and offices of love, which he had before recommended to them under the notion of washing one anothers feet: Or else to comfort his Disciples who might think that this treacherous villany of Judas would make them odious to the whole World: No, faith our Saviour, you are my messengers, persons sent by me; I will provide for you, there shall be those who will receive you; and I declare unto the World to encourage them, That I shall take their receiving of you as kindly as if they received me, and it shall run to the same account, and that is all one as if they had received my Father himself, for he sent me. Some think that by these words Christ aggravate the sin of Judas, as being committed against the Father as well as against Christ; and a most treacherous failure as to the duty of an Apostle, or one dignified so much as to be sent out by Christ.

21 When Jesus had thus said, he was troubled; and he said in spirit 2, and testified, and said, Verily, verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.

d How, and in what sense trouble of Spirit could be to Christ, was noted before, Chap. 12. 27. (See the notes on that Text) this seemeth to have been rather a trouble of grief; that one of his Apostles, one whom he had chosen, should commit to great a villany, than arising from fear of Death. e For his next words are a further discovery of the person that should betray him: he had said before, that he should be betrayed, and that it should be by one that he should eat bread with him; now he cometh closer, and telleth them that it should be by one of them, that is one of the twelve; this was a closer discovery than he had as yet made.

f It seemeth they had no suspicion of Judas, as our Saviour telleth them that it was one of them, they begin to look about one upon another, rather suspecting themselves than Judas. There may be a great deal of villany, and of greater villany in the hearts of Professors, in whole conversation ation appeareth nothing that may give a just suspicion to others, and the true Disciples of Christ will have so much candor and brotherly love, that they will not rashly judge and censure their brethren.

23 Now there was leaning on Jesus bosom g one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved h.

g This leaning on Jesus his bosom, and the lying on Jesus his breast, mentioned Cor. 25. cannot be understood without the understanding of the literal posture the Jews used at their meals, and particularly at the Paschal Supper: of which we have spoken largely in our notes upon Math. 26. 20. (see the Annotations there) Their posture seemeth to have been kneeling, and resting their bodies back upon their legs, with a leaning upon their left elbow; and this seemeth not to have been so close, but that he that so fate, might use his other hand to take his meat; hence he who late before any, fate with his back towards him, but leaning towards the bosom of the other, which is here called a leaning on (that is towards) his bosome, and lying on his breast, for it cannot be understood of such a sitting, or leaning, as to touch the others breast or bosome, for that would have hindered him upon whom the person to be served, from any use of his right hand to take his meat or drink. It is apparent from hence, that at this Supper there was none but Christ and his twelve Disciples. Secondly, that they late in this posture of leaning: These two things make it very probable, if not certain, that the Supper here mentioned was either the Paschal Supper, or a common Supper, which immediately went before, or followed after the Passover Supper. For 1. we have no record of any other Supper, at which were only Christ and the twelve Disciples, and 2. if we may believe the Jewish Writers, that their ordinary posture at their common meals was Disubineure, that is, a kneeling on their knees, with a resting their bodies backward upon their legs; yet this posture of leaning was constantly added once upon the Passover nights, as a further testimony of their liberty; that they were now no servants, (as in the land of Egypt) b the person who fate next to our Saviour, with his back next to our Saviours bosome was John, often in Scripture dignified with the title of the beloved Disciple, and him whom Jesus loved, Chap. 19. 26. and 20. 2. and 21. 7, 20.

24 Simon Peter therefore beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake i.

i Peter knowing the particular affection that Christ had for John, maketh a sign to him, to ask of Christ which of them he meant; when he said, One of you shall betray me.

25 He then lying on Jesus breast, faith unto him, Lord, who is it k?

k John answering doth propound the question to Christ.

26 Jesus answered, He it is to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it m. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot the son of Simon n.

m We have the same, tho not mentioned (as spoken in particular to John) Math. 26. 23. Luke 22. 21. tho neither of them mention Christ's own dipping the Sop; but Matthew faith, He dipped his hand with him in the dish; and Luke faith, His hand was with him on the table. Without question all the Evangelists speak of the same time; for it is not reasonable to think that this discovery should be made, and Judas gone out, and that afterward he should return again to eat the Passover. This maketh me very inclinable to think, that tho the washing of the feet might be during the time of a common Supper, preceding the Passover; yet the Supper they were now at was the Passover Supper: where, 1. were none but he and the twelve Disciples. 2. It is plain they were in that leaning posture, not used at common meals, but on the Passover nights, (as Dr. Lighfoot tells us from their Writers.) 3. The discourse passed at the Table is the very same (tho in some words in sense) with that mentioned by Matthew and Luke, at the Passover Supper. 4. It is not reasonable to think, that after such a discovery as Christ now made of the Traitor, he should come again to be pointed at, and exposed. Concerning the Sop what it was, hath been some question; and a Learned Writer of our own, (but in this point I think much too critical) hath increased the difficulty, by affirming the word here used [Lepros] signifies a piece of bread, or the lower part or chippling of the bread; for which he quotes Hesychius, who indeed doth say so of Lepros, but not Lepros.

The Learned Annotator thinks, Lepros is a false Print for Lepros, but it cannot be: for 1. there are in Hesychius several words in Alphabetical order, between Lepros and this word. 2. Tho Lepros be not in Hesychius, yet Lepros is, and expounded by him Le pros parts; now all know that this Lepros, which is but a diminutive derived from Lepros, can signify no more, than a little part, let it be what it will; for it is manifest out of Homers, that joined

part

with an adjective, it signifies a month full of many flesh, which came out of the Calops his mouth. So as the sense of these words is, He it is to whom I shall give a little part or portion of meat, when I have dipped it: n And having dip't, he gave it to Judas the Son of Simon: not the Judas who wrote the Epistle, and who is mentioned, Chap. 14. 22. but who was the son of Simon, called from his place which he lived in [Kirois] Isariot, by which he did as perfectly describe the Traytor, as if he had named him.

27 And after the sop Satan entered into him o. Then Jesus said unto him, That thou doest, do quickly p.

o That the Devil did ever to enter into Judas as to possess him, as we read of many who were possessed, and violently acted by the Devil, is more than we read any where in holy Writ; the entrance into him, signifies Judas his free and willing giving up of himself to the Devils suggestion and conduct: and in this sense the Devil also before this time was entered into Judas, Luke 22. 3. But as holy men are said to be filled with the Spirit of God, who had before received the Spirit, because the holy Spirit came after upon them with fuller and stronger impulses, and notions: so tho the Devil had formerly been moving Judas to this vile Act, and had had his consent to it; yet after he had taken this morsel, the Devil plied him with stronger notions, impulses, and suggestions: and now he had mastered his conscience, and hardened his heart, so as he was more prepared for the Villany which he had formerly thought before: he had now with an unbelieving, and unthankful heart, been eating the Passover, which was a Type of Christ; and had mastered his conscience, as to come and do this, with a vile heart, reeking before with treacherous and bloody designs against his Lord and Master: See what is the effect. His heart is more vile, more treacherous, and bloody, he is twice more the servant of the Devil than he was before. The sop given by Christ, was but an accidental occasion of it: for the Devil took more advantage from his now hardened, and further imboldened heart, and he is twice more the child of the Devil than he was before. p Christ knowing this, doth not command, advise, or exhort him, but in a detestation, bids him go and do what he was resolved to do, and which he knew would be quickly; letting him both know, that he knew what was in his heart, and that he was now ready to receive the effects of his malice.

q For some of them thought, because Judas had the bag q, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast r: or that he should give something to the poor r.

q How innocent are honest hearts? Charity thinketh no evil, (saith the Apostle) altho our Saviour had plainly enough deciphered him as the Traytor, by telling John that he to whom he should give the Sop, was he; and then by giving it to Judas, yet whether they did not hear what our Saviour said to John, or did not think of so sudden a Tisage; they do not suspect that the hour was at hand, when Judas should betray his intended Villany: tho they heard our Saviour bid him get his our, and do quickly, what he had to do; yet Judas being he who carried r that little stock of money which Christ had, Chap. 12. 6. they thought that that which our Saviour bid him do, as a work he had undertaken to do, was laying out some money, either to buy some things which were necessary for them, for the seven days of the Feast of unleavened bread; either for food for them to eat, or for Sacrifice for them to offer: r Or that it was our Saviours mind, that he should out of this little stock, distribute something to the poor; they little thought that our Saviours words argued a giving him over to perfect the treacherous designs which he had conceived in his heart.

29 For some of them thought, because Judas had the bag q, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast r: or that he should give something to the poor r.

q How innocent are honest hearts? 30 He then having received the sop, went immediately out s: And it was night t.

s From hence appeareth, 1. That it is impossible to prove that Judas was with our Saviour, when he Instituted and Celebrated the Supper; tho if he were, it prove nothing of a liberty for ignorant and scandalous persons to be there; (for Judas was not such a one) nor yet of a lawfulness for Ministers of the Gospel, knowing any to be such, to give the Lords Supper to them. For altho Christ knew Judas his the first and prime Minister of the Gospel, setting us an example, not to judge of secret things, but of things openly.

2. It also appeareth from hence, that it is not probable, that this was any other Supper than the Passover Supper; for if it were not, the Passover Supper must be after this, and this same Supper preceding it. Our famous Dr. Lighfoot thinks it was a Supper in Bethany, at two miles distance (or near so much) from Jerusalem. But chet it must follow, 1. That John speaks nothing of the Paschal Supper, or the Lords Supper; and 2. it doth by no means appear

9 Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me Pharisee? * He that hath seen me hath seen the Father us: and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father us?

¶ Our Saviour still infisteth upon the Oneness of himself with his Father, and the personal Union of the Divine and Humane Nature in him: for otherwise the Apostles might have been with Christ a long time, and known him, and yet not have seen nor known the Father. u But that supposed none that had seen Christ, but must have seen the Father also, there being but one God.

It is the opinion of Mr. Calvin, that these words are not here spoken to much to express his Divine Nature and Being (for to Christ is no more known than to us than his Father), as to express his manner of revealing it. Yet is the Divine Nature of Christ fully proved from thence. Others judge, that these words do clearly signify both the distinction of persons, for nothing is in itself; and also the Union of the persons in the Divine Being. ¶ He proveth his Union with his Father, because he spake not those words which he spake of himself; that is, not of himself solely; he revealed but his Father's Will, and declared his Father's Mind and Will; and ¶ because the works which he did, he did not by his own bare power, without the concurrence of his Father's power in those Operations.

11. Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very work I do.

a Believer my words (for that is your duty); but yet if you will believe my words, declaring to you my Union with my Father, and I will be doing such works as none but God could do, for me for their fake. It is true that both the Pharisees and the Apostles fake Gods words not their own to the People, and also did many great and mighty works; but fill their Doctrine led unto another Christ, and their Miracles were not wrought in their own names, but in the name of Christ. Elijah raised the Samaritan dead child to life by prayer to God that the child might live, and the lame man arise, and he would do it; and the Apostles bid the lame man arise, and walk, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ's Doctrine testified the Father's might, call'd men to believe in him, and he wrought Miracles by his own power, and by the power proceeding out of, and from himself, so that the power of his Father also, because he and his Father were one in Essence.

* Mat. 21. 21. 12 * Verily verily I say unto you, He that believeth on me b, the works that I do, shall he do also, and greater works c than these shall he do: because I go unto my Father d.

he do: because I go into my house.

b Not every individual soul that believeth in me, but some of those, particularly you that are my Apostles, & some that I have filled with the Holy Ghost in the days of Pentecost: for you shall preache the Gospel, and work Miracles, for the confirmation of the truth of the Doctrine of it. Yea, and you shall do greater Works than I have done: not more, or greater Miracles: the truth of that may be justly questioned; for what Miracle was ever done by the Apostles greater than that of raising Lazarus? Much less do I think that it is to be understood of speaking with divers tongues: It is rather to be understood of their successful carrying the Gospel to the Gentiles, by which the whole World, almost, was brought to the Obedience of the Faith of Christ: and I have read that of Christ which we read of Peter, viz. he brought that of Christ which we read of Peter, viz. he converted three thousand souls in one day. A because I go to my Father, he afterwards expounded, telling us, that if he were gone away, the Comforter would not come. Thus pouring out of the Spirit in the days of Pentecost, was the proximate cause of those great works. Now Christ's going to the Father had an influence upon that Mission of the Holy Spirit.

our good; such things as we stand in need of, and as God hath given us a liberty to ask; and indeed no other thing can be asked in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ; for to ask in Christ's name, signifieth not only the making use of his sacred name in our prayers (tho' not in confidant practice of his name), but also the making use of his merits, and of his will, and for his glory. Whatsoever (faith he) you shall ask of this nature, I will do. He doth not say, my Father will do; but I will do it, to testify his Divine Power, and Omnipotence in Power with his Father. g. That the Father may be glorified in the Son. God hath let up his Right in Christ; and will be glorified in and through him; and hath therefore given him all Power in Heaven and

14. If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it b.
b The words are doubled for the further confirmation of them, that we might not doubt when we put up our Petitions to God in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, according to the Will of God.

15 * If ye love me, keep my commandments i.

i Do not shew your love to me in mourning, and being troubled for my going from you; but shew it by your Obedience to what I have commanded you. True love must not evaporate in compliment, but discover it self in a strict observance of the Commandments of God.

16 And I will pray the Father, and * he shall give you another Comforter k, that he may abide with you for ever l;

3. Of his Father's concern as well as his own, in sending the Holy Spirit; here faith, I will pray the Father, and he shall send you another comforter. That term, another, signifieth the per-the blessed Spirit, advocatus (which we too narrowly translate Comforter), is the one concerning whom all the Christians of all generations are to be comforted, and upon whom they are to rely for help. The same word, 1 John 2, where it is applied to Christ (as here it is to the Spirit), is there much better translated Advocate; and it is most probable that our Translators here translate it Comforter, because he is here promised to the Disciples troubled, as fitted to their present distress. The Verb from whence the word deriveth, signifies not to comfort only, but to exhort; and to be an Advocate for another. Now it belongs to the Office of an Advocate to justify his Client what may be for his advantage; which is also the Office of the blessed Spirit; if he feel his Client in anerror, to reprove, and to convince him; which is altogether the work of the Spirit, John 6. 7. If he feeth him weal; and discouraged, to uphold, strengthen, and encourage him; this is also the Spirit's work, Eph 3. 16. If he feeth him running into an error, to reprove, and convince him; which is altogether the work of the Spirit, John 6. 7. If he feeth him ready to be importuned, to defend him; if he hath any thing to do by importuning, to prepare, and draw it up for him; and as occasion ferreth, to break for him. All these things (as might be largely shewed) fall within the Office of an Advocate, and under the comprehensive term here used. I And (and our Saviour) he shall abide with you for ever. I shall be with you but for a while, but he shall abide with you to eternity (as I have before this word is constantly used by the Evangelists). So that the word eternity is here used in a beneficial sense, as the Apostles and their Successors in the Ministry, are to be understood only of those extraordinary gifts bestowed on the Apostles, and first Ministers of the Gospel; but to be extended further, both with reference to persons and influences; and without doubt the influences of the Spirit, both as to Gifts and Graces, both upon Ministers and more private Christians, are much more plentiful since the sending of the Holy Ghost, after Christ's Ascension, than they were before; nor was it any particular person, as David, a Salm: Or some other particular person might be thought to be intended, as the Christians have been admitted as the generality of Ministers, and Christians doubtless, since the pouring out of the Spirit in the day of Pentecost, there have been greater measures of the Gifts and Graces of the Holy Spirit given out, and will be to the end of the World, than ever was in any Age before Christ's Ascension, which is no more than what was prophesied, Joel 44. 3. Joel 2. 23. applied to the days of Pentecost, Joel 2. 23.

17, but not to be limited to that time or age, either for gifts or graces, habits, or as the extraordinary gifts and powers, which exist in some degree after the Apostles' age, (if we may give any credit to Ecclesiastical history) to both in the ages, and ever since, as to the generally born of Ministers and Christians, (that is, such as are mentioned Eccl. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 128. 129. 130. 131. 132. 133. 134. 135. 136. 137. 138. 139. 140. 141. 142. 143. 144. 145. 146. 147. 148. 149. 150. 151. 152. 153. 154. 155. 156. 157. 158. 159. 160. 161. 162. 163. 164. 165. 166. 167. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 173. 174. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 181. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 194. 195. 196. 197. 198. 199. 200. 201. 202. 203. 204. 205. 206. 207. 208. 209. 210. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. 216. 217. 218. 219. 220. 221. 222. 223. 224. 225. 226. 227. 228. 229. 230. 231. 232. 233. 234. 235. 236. 237. 238. 239. 240. 241. 242. 243. 244. 245. 246. 247. 248. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 255. 256. 257. 258. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 264. 265. 266. 267. 268. 269. 270. 271. 272. 273. 274. 275. 276. 277. 278. 279. 280. 281. 282. 283. 284. 285. 286. 287. 288. 289. 290. 291. 292. 293. 294. 295. 296. 297. 298. 299. 300. 301. 302. 303. 304. 305. 306. 307. 308. 309. 310. 311. 312. 313. 314. 315. 316. 317. 318. 319. 320. 321. 322. 323. 324. 325. 326. 327. 328. 329. 330. 331. 332. 333. 334. 335. 336. 337. 338. 339. 340. 341. 342. 343. 344. 345. 346. 347. 348. 349. 350. 351. 352. 353. 354. 355. 356. 357. 358. 359. 360. 361. 362. 363. 364. 365. 366. 367. 368. 369. 370. 371. 372. 373. 374. 375. 376. 377. 378. 379. 380. 381. 382. 383. 384. 385. 386. 387. 388. 389. 390. 391. 392. 393. 394. 395. 396. 397. 398. 399. 400. 401. 402. 403. 404. 405. 406. 407. 408. 409. 410. 411. 412. 413. 414. 415. 416. 417. 418. 419. 420. 421. 422. 423. 424. 425. 426. 427. 428. 429. 430. 431. 432. 433. 434. 435. 436. 437. 438. 439. 440. 441. 442. 443. 444. 445. 446. 447. 448. 449. 450. 451. 452. 453. 454. 455. 456. 457. 458. 459. 460. 461. 462. 463. 464. 465. 466. 467. 468. 469. 470. 471. 472. 473. 474. 475. 476. 477. 478. 479. 480. 481. 482. 483. 484. 485. 486. 487. 488. 489. 490. 491. 492. 493. 494. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. 500. 501. 502. 503. 504. 505. 506. 507. 508. 509. 510. 511. 512. 513. 514. 515. 516. 517. 518. 519. 520. 521. 522. 523. 524. 525. 526. 527. 528. 529. 530. 531. 532. 533. 534. 535. 536. 537. 538. 539. 540. 541. 542. 543. 544. 545. 546. 547. 548. 549. 550. 551. 552. 553. 554. 555. 556. 557. 558. 559. 560. 561. 562. 563. 564. 565. 566. 567. 568. 569. 570. 571. 572. 573. 574. 575. 576. 577. 578. 579. 580. 581. 582. 583. 584. 585. 586. 587. 588. 589. 590. 591. 592. 593. 594. 595. 596. 597. 598. 599. 600. 601. 602. 603. 604. 605. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. 611. 612. 613. 614. 615. 616. 617. 618. 619. 620. 621. 622. 623. 624. 625. 626. 627. 628. 629. 630. 631. 632. 633. 634. 635. 636. 637. 638. 639. 640. 641. 642. 643. 644. 645. 646. 647. 648. 649. 650. 651. 652. 653. 654. 655. 656. 657. 658. 659. 660. 661. 662. 663. 664. 665. 666. 667. 668. 669. 670. 671. 672. 673. 674. 675. 676. 677. 678. 679. 680. 681. 682. 683. 684. 685. 686. 687. 688. 689. 690. 691. 692. 693. 694. 695. 696. 697. 698. 699. 700. 701. 702. 703. 704. 705. 706. 707. 708. 709. 710. 711. 712. 713. 714. 715. 716. 717. 718. 719. 720. 721. 722. 723. 724. 725. 726. 727. 728. 729. 730. 731. 732. 733. 734. 735. 736. 737. 738. 739. 740. 741. 742. 743. 744. 745. 746. 747. 748. 749. 750. 751. 752. 753. 754. 755. 756. 757. 758. 759. 760. 761. 762. 763. 764. 765. 766. 767. 768. 769. 770. 771. 772. 773. 774. 775. 776. 777. 778. 779. 780. 781. 782. 783. 784. 785. 786. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 797. 798. 799. 800. 801. 802. 803. 804. 805. 806. 807. 808. 809. 810. 811. 812. 813. 814. 815. 816. 817. 818. 819. 820. 821. 822. 823. 824. 825. 826. 827. 828. 829. 830. 831. 83

17 Even the Spirit of truth m, whom the wor cannot receive n, because it seeth him not, nei ther knoweth him o : but ye know him p, for he dwelleth with you, and, shall be in you q.

28 He here explaineth himself, and tells them, that by the other Comforter mentioned, ver. 16. he meant the Spirit of truth, either because he whom he here calls the Spirit of truth, either because he is a Spirit that declareth and reveals the truth, as in 1 John 2. 27. or because he reacheth us truth, as 1 John 2. 27. or because he guideth us into all truth, John 16. 13. Or in opposition to the lying Spirit of the Devil, 1 Kings 22. 22. Most probably the holy Spirit is here called the Spirit of truth, because of the Efficiency he hath as to it. It is he who hath revealed all the truth contained in the Scriptures, to the World. Those men wrote as they were inspired by him, Acts 1. 16. 2 Pe 1. 21. It is he that is the Author of particularly and specially revealed truth to the particular Soul, 2 Cor. 12. hence persons are placarded, are said to be made partakers of the Holy Ghost, Heb. 6. 4. He leadeth his people into truth, Chap. 16. 13. he fealeth and confirmeth truth to the Soul: Chap. 16. 13. he is the demonstration of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 14. N This Spirit of truth, the World, that is, men of carnal hearts that are of the world, and in whom worldly lusts predominate, 1 John 2. 18. Chap. 17. 9. This World, or through natural impotency, 2 Cor. 2. 14. Though wise men, 1 Cor. 1. 21. through lusts and passions, cannot receive, that is, be made partakers of the Spirit of truth, 1 Cor. 2. 14. yet they may be made partakers of it, because it neither seeth him, who is not to be seen with mortal Eyes, nor knoweth him affectionately, and experimentally; he being not to be known by men whose hearts are carnal and full of lusts, p but ye know him believably, experimentally, affectionately, favouring: q for he dwelleth in you by a mystical union, Rom. 5. 11. 1 Cor. 6. 17. and he shall abide with you, by his dwelling in you, and influencing your human union.

18 *I will not leave you || comfortless, † I will come to you.

† The word in the Greek is Orphanes, persons without father and mother, who for the most part are the most comfортless persons; therefore it is translated comfortless: Christ hath care, not only of the peoples Salvation and Life, but also of their comforts while they are here; he will not leave his people without proportionable comfort for their distresses.

‡ In the Greek it is, I do come to you, to denote the certainty, and the fadfulness of his coming, which is either to be understood of his Refurrection, which was (as we know) after the absence of three days: or which is more probable, (for after his Refurrection he flood with them but a few days) and by his Blessed Spirit, (for the Spirit is called the Spirit of Christ) who was to come, and to abide with them for ever. This may also have a reference to his coming again to judge both the quick and the Dead, to receive them to himself; that (as he said before) they might always be where he was; but the two former senses, are understood as more specially relating to their present distresses, upon account of his bodily absence from them.

 live also <sup>20</sup>.

¶ The World hath me now only with fleshly Eyes; it will be but a little while, and the men of the World shall be able to see me no more; I shall be crucified, and laid in the grave; and tho I shall rise again, yet I shall not be seen of them: (we read of no appearances of him after his Resurrection; but to his Disciples) u but ye see me, or shall see me; to they did often after his Resurrection with their bodily Eyes; or ~~may~~ may be understood of a Spiritual sight by the Eye of Faith, or of a sight of experience; (as seeing others in Scripture signifieth coming) u because I live, that is, I shall live by my Resurrection from the Dead; and by my glorious Ascension into Heaven: u also shall live the Life of grace here; and tho your bodies must die, because of sin, yet your Souls shall upon the death of your bodies live; and in the Resurrection, both your Souls and bodies shall live, and together be glorified with me; all this grace and mercy shall flow out to you from me as Mediator, and because I live.

20 At that day x ye shall know, that * I am my Father, and you in me, and I in you y.
x Some understand our Saviour here (speaking of the day of his Resurrection; others Interpret it of the days of Pentecost, when there should be such an effusion of the blessed Spirit: but the following words discover, that it is both Inreperted: of the day of judgment, and the general Resurrection; for they speak of two great mysteries, which the Disciples should understand in that day, which is here spoken of, to wit, The personal Union of Christ with his Father, and the mystical Union of Believers with Christ; as to both which, the Apostles and Believers knew much more after Christ's Resurrection, and the pouring forth of the Spirit in the day of Pentecost, than they knew before those times; yet it is a very important knowledge they were had, or yet have of those mysterious Unions; but in the Resurrection we shall understand these things clearly.

21. He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him <sup>a</sup> and will manifest my self to him <sup>b</sup>.

Our Lord here doth repeat what he had before said, ver. 15 declaring that there is no infallible indication of our love to Christ, but obedience, which is here exprest under two Notions. 1. Heaving Christs commandments and keeping them, they must both concur to make a true indication of our love to Christ: It is possible that men may have Christs Commandments in their Ears, in their Notion, in their mouths, and yet not keep them; they may hear them, they may know and remember them, they may talk of them, yet they may not keep them; for keeping them denoces universal, diligent, and industrious, steady, and constant obedience to him; and this alone will speak our love to Christ: a And if any man thus declareth his love to Christ, Christ declareth that both he and his father, will take a pleain and delight in him: to him good: b and he shall not live only under the real benefits of his love to him, but under the sensible manifestations of it. Here is no mention of the Spirits coming with the Father and the Son, because the Son dwelleth in us by the Spirit.

22 Judas saith unto him not Iscariot o Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thy self unto us, and not unto the world?

c Jude the Brother of James, Jude 1. the Son of Alpheus, not Jude the Son of Simon, who from the City whence he was, was called Iſcariot, and was the Traytor; asks our Saviour, I know it was, or wherefore it was that he would manifest himself to them, and not to me? This question either proceeded out of Ignorance, or out of the undervaluing of what manifestation of himself Christ there spake; or out of a pious desire, that all might be made partakers of the what are We that thou shouldest speak of any more for special manifestation of thy love to us, than to the rest of the world?

23. Jesus answered, and said unto him *, If a * Ver. 19; man love me, he will keep my words e: and my Father will love him f; and we will come unto him g, and make our abode with him h.

e If any man love Christ, he will keep Christs words; that is, he will study and endeavour to keep the Commandments of Christ; for if nothing evidenced a true love to Christ, but a perfect obedience to his will, none could comfort himself from his obedience, or conclude his love to Christ it; but he that loveth Christ, will be bound to be obedient to him in those things that he hath commanded, and are within his power. And my Father will manifest his love to him in further dispensations of his grace; for it cannot be understood of Gods Eternal love, nor yet of his love in Justification, and Regeneration: for till the man or woman be justified, and regenerated, he will never study and endeavour his obedience to him. This will cause the love of God, the cause, not the effect of our obedience; but love in this verbe must be expounded by manifesting in the former verbe; and this is certain, that the manifestations of Divine love to our Souls, depend upon our walking with God. g This is also meant by God the Father, and Christs coming to those that love him, and keep his commandments; viz, a coming in the twofold influence of Divine grace, first, to give us the necessary instructions; & say, our Lord promitteth, not only his and his Fathers coming to, but their making an abode with such as love him, and keep his Commandments. Here the abiding of the first and second person in the Trinity with Believers, ver. 16. the abiding of the third person with them is also promised, which all the rest of the revelation of his word, with, and without, is intended to be understood. Thus our Father hath often promised to them of holy Writ: Thus our Father answered one part of what Judas said, How is it that thou wilt manifest thy self to us? because faith our Saviour, you love me and keep my words; for to those no love, no works of ours foreseen or felt, be the cause of eternal love, or the first grace; yet it is so much a cause of further grace, especially in Our Lord yet pursue the Message of the Vine, the Branches, and the Husbandman : Look, (with hee is with a Vine, when the time of pruning the Vine cometh, the Vine-dresser cutteth off the fruitless luxuriant branches, and throweth them by, which being done, their greenness presently abeth, and they wither, and after a time, some come and gather them up, and cast them into some fire, where they are burned : it will be with you ; if you do not prune forth God, God will take from you his common inheritance, which have for a while made you to look peculiarly, and your Profession, or your Parts and Gifts will wither and decay, and in the day of Judgment the Angels, as at 13, 40, 41. shall gather you up, and God shall call you to He, where you shall perish as miserably, my infinitely more miserably than if you were burned with fire.

7 If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you <sup>o</sup>, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you:

Here our Lord expounds what he meant by that abide in Him, which he before mentioned by another phrase. [And my words abide in you, my precepts and promises, for as you lay faith embrace the promises, and by obedience live to the precepts which I have given you:] for some men in this life, tho the words of Christ may receive the foundation of them, yet the Word doth not dwell and abide in them, as the Word abides in the souls of men and women, so then they may in prayer ask of God what they will, keeping to the conditions and limitations elsewhere required in holy Writ, according to God's Will, (1 John 5, 14, 15, 16, for the honour and glory of God,) which men believing, Matth. 21: 22: in the Name of the Father, shall do all things that they will, (John 15, 14, 15, 16, for the honour and glory of God,) which men shall do all our actions must be directed, and they shall be granted

9 As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love f.

Y<sup>e</sup> What our Saviour before called an abiding in him, and his words abiding in us, and a bearing and bringing forth much fruit, he here calleth a continuing in his love, tho indeed this phrase also may be interpreted by a continuance in the favour of God and Christ, in that state of love into which God hath put the souls of those who are his true Disciples: But I had rather interpret it of that love wherewith they loved Christ, than that wherewith Christ loved them. So the former words are an Argument to perfwade perfev-ranee, or a continuance in those acts of his life by which man alone can show their true love to Jesus Christ, from Christ's love to them that he loves expressly; As the Father loveth his last-born, so I have loved you; where the particle so, is only a note of comparison, but doth not denote an equality; only signifieth truth and greatness; As truly and lucrately as the Father loveth me; Or I have loved you with a great love, bearing some proportion to the love wherewith I great love the Father: love me to Christ is Eternal, Immutable, Constant, full, and perfect, Wife, and Juss, live in all these respects; Christ loveth his people as the Father loveth him: this ought to engage them again to love him, and to walk, as they may continue in that state of favour into which his goodness hath advanced them.

10 * If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Fathers commandments, and abide in his love.

commandments, and about in love. ☩
☩ Abiding in Christ's love: in this verse, and is interpreted as before, either actively; you shall continue your love to me according to what I have said. ☩ Christ's love: Obedience to the commandments of Christ, being the only way to them and declare the truth of our love to Christ. ☩ Or else passively; you shall keep your lives in my favour. I will love you. ☩ Thus I abide in my Father's love; I do not then love to my Father by my words and expressions only, nor by performance of some ceremonial ritual faces, which he hath required; but by fulfilling his whole Will and his Command; by yielding an Obedience to him, and by his love you shall yield an Obedience to him, and you shall abide in my love by the Father's love. ☩ And means that I abide in my Father's love. The Disciple is not above his Master, nor the Servant above his Lord.

11 These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and * that your joy * Chap. 16. 24 might be till'd x.

 ✕ The end of my preferring to be more the duty of holiness upon you, under the notions of abiding in me, abiding in my love, in my words, bringing forth much fruit, &c. is, that you might have a continual cause to rejoice in you, nothing in life but the satisfaction of the reasonable Soul in union with an object which it loved and desired. Christ willing and desiring the perfection of his Disciples, according to the rational workings of human nature; in property laid to rejoice in the satisfaction of his will, in which fruit joy and rejoicing, are often in Scripture attributed to God. ✕ Nor doth Christ press them to this, that he might rejoice in them, but also that their joy might be full: That joy and Peace which attends and follows believing, Rom. 14. 17. Called the peace of God. Col. 3. 15. A which joy and Peace all understanding, Phil. 4. 15. A which joy and Peace shall be yours. No man maketh Christ to rejoice in him, but he thereby also procureth unpleasant to himself, and so he is not able to be full of joy and peace to himself. As no man grieves for his Spirit, but also purchaseth grief and sadness to himself in the latter end.

12 * This is my commandment, That ye love * 1 Thel. 3. 9 one another, as I have loved you y. 1 Pet. 4. 8.

This is that which the Lord called the new commandment. 1 John 2:7-8. men, chap. 13: 34. (see the notes there.) He had before said, chap. 13: 34. that he loved them, continuing, and abiding in his words, keeping his commandments, &c. Here he tells them what was his commandment: not his only commandment, but that which he laid a very great stress upon; a commandment most necessary to be preſerved, becauſe it would keep up and uphold his Church in the World; (love being the very ligament of that Society) and becauſe there was a greater failure in obedience to this, than in ſome others, as may be learned from our Saviours correction of the Pharisees interpretation of the Law, Matth. 5. This is preſent to an higher degree, than that which he loved them; nor that it is possible for any of our lowly our Brethren, can rise up in any proportion to that love wherewith Christ hath loved us; but to mind us to eye him, to press forward toward this mark. As here again doth not signify equality, but a comparison; as truly and sincerely as I have loved you, and preſerving after the highest degree of love.

13 * Greater love hath no man then this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

3 The reason of this, because Life is the greatest Earth-ly good to men under ordinary circumstances; Skin for skin and all a man hath, for his life. Now it is impossible that a man should shew a greater love to another, than by parting man should then a greater love to allot to his neighbor with the greater good he is in possession of for his sake. Hence our Saviour proves, that he loved them with the greater love, because he for their sake was about to part with, what in the common judgment of men is the greatest good. The greatness of the love of Christ to us, is known by the love often commended to us in Scripture; and our love to our Brethren is prefigured upon this argument, Eph. 5: 2 1 John 3: 16. But how did Christ lay down his life for his friends? when the Scripture tells us, That the just die for the unjust, 1 Pet 3: 18, and that while we were enemies, we were reconciled unto God by the Death of his Son

Rom. 5. 10. Ans. Friends must not here be taken as a name of Relation, but only as it signifieth the objects of love ; persons we have let our love upon, whether they mutually love us, or no, as the World was the object of that love in God, which moved him to send his only begotten Son, John 3. 16. Those they for whom Christ dyed, were enemies by their wicked works, yet by his death they were reconciled ; but positively the first answer is best, for by Christs Death they were only meritoriously reconciled, and after this enemies to God, till they received the word of reconciliation, and believed in Christ.

14 *Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you a.

See Matt. 12.
50. a Our Lord prefeſth obedience to his commandments as a means, and indeed the onely means by which we can declare our love to Chriſt, and alſo uſeth a new argument to preſh their obedience, from his aſſuming them into the ſtate and dignity of his friends.

15 Henceforth I call you not servants, for the servant knoweth not what his lord doth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you.

b By his saying, I call you not servants, he doth not discharge them of that duty and service which they owed to him; for in preſſing them to obey his commandments, he diſtinctly that duty they owed to him; he only ſheweth that they were no ordinary ſervants, but taken into a ſtate of dignity, favour, and familiarity, beyond that of ſervants; and that he had not treated them like ſervants, but like intimate friends and familiars. c For look as ordinary maſters in the World, communicate their counſels, and whole heart to their friends, eſpecially in things which are of any concern, or may be of any advantage for them to know and underſtand : whereas they keep themſelves at diſtance from ſervants, and they only know to much of their minds as is by them to be done in their maſters ſervice : ſo he had not only treated to do their duty, what was to be by them done in his ſervice, but had been more free, giving to them to know the myſteries of the Kingdom of Heaven; as he told them, Matth. 13. 11. as well as to ſhew them his Fathers counſels on the behalf of them, and whatever he might communicate to them, as his Fathers Will; what he would have them to do in obedience to his commandments.

16 * Ye have not chosen me d, but I have chosen you, and † ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit f, and that your fruit should remain g: that || whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my Name, he may give it you h.

you b. 4 You have not chosen me to be your Lord, Master, Saviour, e but I have chosen and ordained you: fo we have it in confirmation: but the Greek is, ἡμεῖς, I have fet you, or placed you in a Lordship, and in a Saviour. I think that our Saviour here speaks of his choice of them to the Apostles: as at Luke 6. 13. Chap. 6. ver. 70. those who thus understand it, understand it of going, and bringing forth fruit; the Apostles going out, Preaching, and Baptizing all Nations, bringing forth fruit amongst the Gentiles. But others understand it, of election to eternal Life, and the means necessary to it: for our Saviour brings this as an argument of his grateful love: for ye have chosen me, ye have chosen, yet not beloved with any such love; and this seemeth to be favoured by Chap. 13. 18. I speak not of you all, I know whom I have chosen: and certain it is, Angeline, and others of the Apostles from hence proved the freedom of Election, and the Ancient Grace. Both senses may be united; for the Election, (to whom Christ was now speaking) were chosen in both senses; they were chosen f for this end, to bring forth fruit amongst the Gentiles, turning many to Righteousness, and that they might bring forth the fruit of holiness, in obedience to the Gospel of Christ; g Yea, not only so, but for this fruit, but that they might persevere in bringing forth h that fruit, and thus doing, they might have a freedom of access to the Throne of Grace, and obtain whatsoever they should ask of the Father, in the Name, for the merits, and through the Mediation of the Lord Jesus Christ. See the notes on Chap.

17 These things I command you, that ye love one another:

¶ This is but the repetition of the same precept we before had, unless we will understand it as a more special charge upon them, considered as Ministers of the Gospel; the mutual love of Ministers, being highly necessary for the good and peace of the Church of God, over which God hath set them.

Job. 3:13. 18 * If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before.

comfort those who were his true Disciples, against that gross trouble, from the prospect they had of that hatred which the World would pour out, and execute upon them, inasmuch as he should be withdrawn from them. Hate is rooted, and originated in the heart, and is properly a displeasure that the mind taketh at a person, which fermenting and boiling in the mind, breeds an abhorrence of that person, anger, and malice; and a desire to do him mischief, and root him out, and then breaks out at the lips, by lying, slanders, calumnies, curings, wishing of evil, &c. and is executed by the hands, doing to such persons all the harm and mischief, within the power of him that hateth: All this is to be understood under the general term Hate. By the World here, must be meant evildoers men, in opposition to good men, who are often in Scripture called the World, because they are of the earth. earthly men, they relish and favour nothing but worldly things, and pursue nothing but worldly designs. Against this our Saviour comforts them, first by telling them, That this part of the World hateth him before it hated them; which must needs be, because they hated him as his Disciples, and for that very reason.

men and Women may be in the World, yet not of the World. Of the World, here signifies carnal men, such as are like to the men of the World in their studies, designs, counsels, affections as of the Devil, and of God signifies, Chap. 44, 47. If you had affections, lulls, and dispositions like them, and draw to the designs that they drive you might expect that as it is of the nature of a serpent to devour men, so they are like to them in manners and humors; so they would love you, take a delight in you, be kind to you, and do you all offices of love: u but because you are not of such tempers, out of the World, have given you such tempers, fumes and dispositions, quite contrary to theirs: therefore the World disliking you, and seeing that your principles are quite opposite to theirs, abhor, and hate you, and will be ready to do you all that evil and mischief, which is the product of a rooted hatred and malice in the heart: This is a second argument by which our Lord convinceth us, that we have fallen from the cause and root of that hatred, which they would meet with: it was not for their faults or sins, but because they were the objects of Christs love, which being also shed abroad in their hearts by the holy Ghost, produced again in them holy affections and dispositions, making them wholly unlike to men in the World,

20 Remember the word that I said unto you,
The servant is not greater then the lord : If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you : || Ezek. 3. 7.
If they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also.

p The word that I said unto you, Chap. 13. 16. to prefer you to humility, and a mutual serving of one another in love, and which I spake to you, Matt. 10. 24. when I first sent you out, and I spake it then to you upon the very same account, that I now speak it. q You that are my servants, cannot look to fare better with the World, than I that am your Master, you know they have hated me, you must expect they should persecute you: if there be any of them whose hearts God shall incline to keep my sayings, they will also keep your words, which are but my sayings explained to them, and further pressed upon them.

21 But * all these things will they do unto you * Matt. 24:9.
for my Names sake, because they know not him Chap. 16:3.
that sent me.

For my Namesake, here signifies no more than for my, as Matth. 10. 22: for your Preaching, owning, and revealing me and my Gospel: and thus they would not do, if they had any true knowledge of faith in, or love for him at that time: for knowing (as hath been often said) in holy writ, and particularly in this Gospel, signifieth not the bare apprehension of the object by our understanding, but such comprehension of it, as is operative and efficacious, to the bringing forth of all such effects, as are proper to such apprehension and comprehension. So as this text contrainth us to argue more, to arm them against the hatred of the world: The first, from the honourableness of the cause, of Christs Names sake. The second from the ignorance and blindness of the perfors.

22 * If I had not come and spoken unto them, * Chap. 9 41
 † they had not had sin: † but now they have no † Rom. 1. 20.
 ‡ cloak for their sin ‡ || Or, Excuse.

The Lord had not had this particular sin, of not knowing that sent me: Or they had not had such degrees of sin, they now have; or they had had more to say in excuse, for a cover for their sin. Ignorance of the Will of God does not excuse sinners wholly, but it will excuse them in part; and this last seemeth to be the sense of the words by the

the latter part of the Verse, because it is opposed to an having no cloak nor excuse for their sin. If Christ had not come in his incarnation, in his Preaching the Gospel, &c. they could not have been guilty of that hatred, and malice, which they shewed against him, which was their greatest guilt; and they would have had this to say, Lord! we know not what Christ was, as March 22. 44. but now faith our Saviour, they have no cloak, no colour, no pretence, I am Saviour, I have revealed my Father's mind and will to them, yet they will not receive me: no, tho I have done those works before them, which no man ever did, nor could do but by a Divine Power.

* Joh. 2. 23. * He that hateth me, hateth my Father also.

10 This agreeth with what we had, Chap. 5. 23. It is a common error of the World, that many in it would pretend to love God, while yet they are manifest haters of Christ and his Gospel: Now faith our Saviour, This is impossible; whoever hateth him who is sent, hateth also him that sent him. God the Father, and Christ are one, and no man can hate Christ, or be an enemy to Christ, but he must be an enemy to his Father: and as this is an aggravation of their sin, so it is a great argument of consolation to the Disciples of Christ, that those who should be their enemies, were such as were in reality Gods enemies.

24 If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had faith in me: but now have they both seen, and heard both me and my Father.

25 Our Saviour often appealeth to his works, both to own his Mission from God, and also to prove the fein in execution, in their not receiving and embracing him, for which latter purpose he mentions them here, and faith, that he had done such works as no man did, and by his own Power and Power.

Christ did some works, as we do not read, that ever man did; such as the multiplying of the loaves, the giving sight to those that were born blind, the healing of so many desperate diseases: And for such as he did, which God had also given men a power to do, he did them in a quite different manner from that in which men did them. Elizab. raised the Shunammite child to life, but it was by Prayer. Peter cured the lame man, Acts 3. 6. but it was in the Name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth. We read indeed of Christ's raising at the raising of Lazarus; but his ordinary way, was by his word of command, which was a quite different way than that used by those men, by whom miracles had been wrought. Besides, it is manifest, that the generality of the fein did not look upon Christ as one sent from God, tho many of them did; and admit that there had been nothing in the miracles wrought by Christ, more than Elizab. or Elizab. or the Prophets had done, that he acted by a Divine Power, and must be sent and Authorized by and from God, tho to do what he did. Now faith our Saviour, if I had not done before their faces, such works as no man could do but by a Power derived from God, and some such as God never authorized men to do; their sin had been nothing to what now it is: y but now they have understood, that I am sent from my Father; and knowing this, yet going on in their most malicious designs against me, they both declare an hatred and malice against my Father who sent me, and me as sent by him.

25 But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law *<sup>26</sup>. They hated me without a cause.

26 The particle for here again denoteth not the final cause, but only the consequence; and the Law here signifies not strictly the Law of Moses, but the whole Scripture, (in which we have once and again met with the term) faith our Saviour, This is no more than was Prophesied of me, by the Prophet David; or no more than was fulfilled in me, being first told to David as my type; which also hath the force of another Argument upon the Jews, who also had their prophecies of their sufferings; that they were but the fulfilling of Prophecies, no more than was foretold in holy Writ.

26 * But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, he shall tell me of all things that the Father saith, whom I will send unto you from the Father, he shall tell me of all things that the Father saith, whom I will send unto you from the Father, he shall tell me of all things that the Father saith.

Concerning the Holy Ghost as a Comforter, we have spoken largely, Chap. 14. 16, 26. as also his mission from the Father and the Son, and in what sense he is called the Spirit of truth: See the Note on this Verse. What proceeding from the Father, is here meant, is questioned amongst Divines: Some understand it only of his coming out from the Father, and being poured out upon the Disciples in the days of Pentecost: Others understand it of the holy Spirit's Eternal proceeding. Those that Interpret of the latter, urge the use of the Greek word, here used to signify Gods manifestation of himself, by some external sign, (as they say the Synagoge useth the same word.) They also urge the same use of a parallel word, Chap. 8. 42. and 16. 18. But the generality of the best Interpreters think, it is best understood of the Eternal procession of the holy Spirit. Because Christ here distinguisheth the Spirits proceeding from the Father from his sending. 2. Having himself promised to send the Spirit, he seemeth further to describe him, as proceeding from the Father. 3. The word here used, is not any where used in the New Testament to signify a Temporal mission, some will say, but not the Spirit proceeding from the Son. 4. The Greek Church in latter ages hath denied this, and this is the principal text they rely on; but those Churches that are more Orthodox have constantly affirmed it. 1. Because here faith he would send it. 2. Because he is often called the Spirit of Christ, Rom 8. 9. Gal. 4. 6. 3. Because otherwise there were no personal relation between Christ and the Spirit. Our Saviour here having first said he would send him, here only nameth his proceeding from the Father; that they might not suspect his testimony, or think that he spake arrogantly. c The Spirit he faith should tell him, both by those gifts with which he was to fill the Apostles, and to the hearts of Gods people.

27 And * ye also shall bear witness, because * Acts 1. 8.

28 He adds also, They should testify, &c. The Apostles and their Successors by the Preaching of the Gospel; but particularly the Apostles. Acts 10. 39. 1 John 1. 2. 3. being chosen witnesses, Acts 10. 41. and they were competes witnesses, because they had been with Christ from the beginning of his publick Ministry. We shall find the Testimony of his Apostles, and of the Holy Ghost, both joined together, Acts 5. 32.

CHAP. XVI.

These things have I spoken unto you, that ye should not be offended.

a That is, when you see these storms of persecution arise, and fall heavily upon you, they may not give you any occasion, or be any temptation to you to desist from your duty, and be afraid, or ashamed to own me, and the profession of my Gospel. Evils might occur, of we are not ordinarily prepared for, so as being surprised by them, they the more sink us: Offending here therefore may signify, either immoderate trouble and affliction, or being tempted to any Apostasy, or remission of duty.

2 * They shall put you out of the synagogues: b * John 1. 9. yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you shall think that he doth God service c.

b The term Synagoge, as it is used often in Scripture to signify those places of publick Worship which they had in Country Towns and Cities, is proper to the Jews; but as it signifieth an assembly of people met together in any place it is well agreeth to other people as to them. Our Lord here, in pursuit of the argument which he hath been upon from the 18. Verse of the former Chapter, forewarneth his Disciples, that when he should be taken from them, the Jews first should Excommunicate them as Heretics, or Schismatics: and I know not why, what our Saviour here faith, may not also be extended as a Prophecy of what hath since been done, and is yet doing under the Tyranny of the Pope. c As also the latter clause, which, tho at first was applicable to the Jews, who Rom. 7. 12. upon a charge of blasphemy; in which it is apparent, that they thought they did God good service, and doubtless few many others, yet certain also referred to others; even as many as shall do the same thing to the end of the World.

3 And * these things will they do unto you, * Chap. 15. 1. because they have not known the Father, nor I c.

d This is but what our Lord said unto his Father, ver. 21. of the former Chapter, (see the notes on that Verse) and teacheth us, That all persecutions of good men speak in persecutors an ignorance both of God the Father, and of Christ; and who ever they are that continue in this ignorance under the light of the Gospel, the light of Religion, yet will be under daily temptations to run persecutors; for ignorance is here made the cause of persecution. And it is some allegation of trouble to Gods suffering people, to consider that the persons that are the cause of their sufferings, neither know God the Father, nor Jesus Christ; and it is no wonder if they know not God, that they will not know, love, nor approve of them.

4 But * these things have I told you, that when * Chap. 15. 1. the time shall come, ye may remember that I and the Spirit have said unto you at the beginning, because I was with you y.

e Whoever I have discovered to you formerly, of my going going to my Father, the coming of the Holy Ghost, your sufferings from the World I have told you of before; you will see that they will most certainly come to pass: then you will remember what I have said unto you, and I have told you then on purpose, that you may remember them, and thereby know, that altho I am in the form of a man, yet I also am God abided for ever: and did know things that should afterward come to pass, and could tell you the truth about them. f And having been with you, I have not from the first of your converse with me, told you these things; but I have told you these things, because I have been dealing with you, (which he had told them Mark 10. 14. &c. but that was after some good whiles converse with them) now yet had he spoken to them at their death, Resurrection, and Ascension, because he was with them, and to stay with them some time, during which time he bore the brunt of all; the whole hatred of the Jews was poured out upon him: and for those offences relating to his Death, and Ascension, and the sending of the Spirit; he who taught his Disciples, Acts 1. 33. as they were able to bear them, had concealed these things; till by the other Doctrine he had prepared them to receive this Revelation; and there was a necessity of his relieving them against his bodily absence, by the promise of that other Comforter the Holy Ghost.

5 But now I go my way to him that sent me, and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?

6 I did not tell you this from the beginning for many vile reasons; yet I now tell you, that I must die, but shall rise again from the dead, and go to my Father who sent me into the World to finish that work which I now have done, and so am returning from whence I came. b And tho I indeed some of you have curiously asked me, whither I go, (as Peter, Chap. 13. 36.) yet none of you seem to understand, or so seriously as you ought to inquire, whether I go, or so much to be builded in the thoughts of that.

6 But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your heart.

i But all your thoughts are taken up about your selves, what you shall do for want of my bodily presence; and sorrow for that hath so overwhelmed your hearts, that you cannot enough deliberate with your selves, as to consider either my or your own advantages, form my Death, Resurrection, and Ascension.

7 Nevertheless, I tell you the truth; it is expedient for you that I go away &c: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you m.

h He doth not say it was expedient for him, tho this was true; for his human Nature was not till his Ascension glorified, as afterward, Chap. 16. 10. but he hath it was expedient for them. The Saints may desire a disquisition, but it is for their own advantage, Phil. 1. 23. Christ desires for their advantage: I because the holy Spirit could not come upon them, (as in the days of Pentecost) until he by his Death had made reconciliation for iniquity; and God had so ordered the Councils of Eternity, that Christ should first die again, and ascend into Heaven, and then he would pour his Spirit upon all flesh, as one eminent fruit of Christs meritorious Death and Passion, Acts 2. 33. 39. Eph. 4. 11. We are not able to give certain reasons of the Councils of God; but the reasonableness of them in this very particular may easily be concluded: That the sending of the Spirit might appear to be the fruit of Christs Death: That the Advocate influence upon the sending of him jointly with the Father, might appear; for he was to be sent from Christ glorified, Chap. 7. 39. That the Spirit might glorify Christ, as we have it, 1 John 14. 17. (for faith that Verse) He shall receive of mine, and shall give unto you: and that the world might better understand the mystery of the Trinity. The Father was by all owned to be in Heaven. The Son Ascended up to Heaven in the presence of many witnesses. The Spirit descended from Heaven with great majesty and glory, as may be read, Acts 2. 2. 3.

8 And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment n.

9 When the holy Spirit is come in the days of Pentecost, he by his inward operation in mens hearts, and by his gifts bestowed upon you that are his Apostles, will reprove the World. By the World here may be meant all men and women, as it is used in some texts; neither is the operation of the Spirit here mentioned, to be restrained to carnal and wicked men. The Word translated reprove, not in the Notion mentioned Chap. 14. 16. as a Comforter, but in the larger Notion (there mentioned) as an Advocate, (which possibly had been a better translation of it, ver. 7. than Comforter as we translate it: for it is not the proper work of the Spirit considered as a Comforter, to reprove; but it is proper enough to the notion of an Advocate to do it.) The word here translated reprove, doth often to signify, and is so translated Luke 3. 19. Chap. 3. 20. Eph. 5. 11, 13. It signifies real rebukes, Heb. 12. 5. Rev. 3. 19. But it also signifies to convince, John 8. 9. 45. 1 Cor. 14. 24. 2 Tim. 4. 2. Titus 1. 9. and in several other texts; yet it is not to convince the understanding, and judgment, and conscience of our Saviour, so that we will not embrace what we conceive is true, nor do what we know is best; but through the stubbornness of our Will, we reject the light and conviction of our understandings. The holy Spirit is here promised, not only (as before) to bow the hearts of some of the World, to the embracing of it, and living up to it, which others yet remain without convince. o The things of which the Spirit is promised to convince the World, are Sin, Righteousness, and Judgment; which are further opened in the following Verses.

9 Of sin because if ye believe not on me p; ye may arise from doubt, whether the things import, that the Holy Ghost should convince the World in general, or of that particular sin of not believing on the Lord Jesus Christ; the first, seemeth best to agree with the eighth Verse, where convincing of sin is mentioned, without the addition which is here made; and it also best agreeth with the effect of the Spirit, for the holy Spirit doth not convince the World of one sin only. 2. The second seemeth to be favoured by the addition of those words, because they believe not in me; which yet may be understood, only as a particular great instance of sin, of which the Spirit convinceth the World. It was the great sin of charge, that, tho Christ was come into the World, and had given such manifest evidence that he was sent of the Father, yet the people of the men and women in that part of the World into which he was come, would not receive and embrace him as the true Messiah: Now faith our Saviour, when I am gone to my Father, I will send the Spirit, and he by his gifts given to my Apostles, shall convince a great part of the World, that they shall have nothing to say, but he wholly incredible in their not receiving me as the Messiah and Saviour of the world. Others, he shall by his inward influence upon their hearts, so convince of sin in his believing in me, that they shall believe in me, and be saved.

10 Of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more r.

q A second thing of which the Spirit is promised to convince the World, is Righteousness, by which all Interpreters agree, is meant the Righteousness of Christ. Only some would have it to be understood of Christs personal Righteousness, which is inherent in him; upon which account he is called the just one, the Righteous one, &c. Then the sense is this, The fein now say I have a Devil, and call our Devils by Belzebub; they accuse me as an Impostor and seducer, call me a friend of Publicans and Sinners; but when the holy Spirit which I will send shall come, he shall convince the World, that I was a just and righteous person, and not such a one as they have vilely represented me; which was fulfilled in a great measure, Acts 2. 23. Chap. 3. when so many were converted, and joined to the Church. 2. But the best Interpreters understand it of that Righteousness of Christ which is communicated to men in justification, of which so much is spoken in holy Writ, Gal. 3. 1. 2. 11. Dan. 9. 24. Rev. 23. 6. and in many other texts: So as the Spirit is here promised as introducing the World in that true righteousness, by which a Soul can be justified, and therein both correcting the errors of the Pagan World, who thought the light of Nature enough to shew them the way to Heaven; and also of the Jewish World, who thought the righteousness of the Law sufficient; by shewing them, that no righteousness would do it, but the Righteousness of Christ reckoned unto them for righteousness, and apprehended by faith. The Christians going to his Father, did both evidence him to be a just and righteous person, however wicked men in the World had represented and traduced him; for his Father would not have received him, if he had been such a person; and also evidence that as was Prophesied of the Messiah, Dan. 9. 24. he had finished the transgression, made an end of sin, made reconciliation for iniquity, and brought in Everlasting Righteousness: for it could not be imagined, that he should have an access to his Father, before he had finished the work which his Father had given him to do, Chap. 17. 4. and faith our Saviour, ye see me no more: That is after my Ascension you shall see me no more; or after my death ye shall see me no more, to have any such ordinary converse with me, as hitherto you have had: for I shall not ascend to return again to you: but to sit at the right hand of my Father, till I return again to the last judgment.

s The third thing to convince the World of which the Spirit is promised, is Judgment. There is a great variety amongst Interpreters in their senses, what is to be understood by Judgment in this text. Mr. Calvin thinks, that by it is to be understood a right order of things; the Devil, who is the Prince of the World, had made a great disorder and confusion in the World. Christ having judged him, brought in a Reformation, and restored things into order again. Others make him the term of that Judicial Power which Christ obtained after his Ascension into Heaven, when the Lord said unto him, See thou on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool, Psal. 110. 1. Acts 2. 34. 35. Others understand it of that Government which Christ exerciseth over, and upon the Souls of his people, once delivered out of the power of Satan by the obedience of Christ's Death. Others understand it of that power given to Christ in Heaven and under the altar, mentioned Matt. 23. 19. Phil. 2. 9. Others understand it of that perverse and corrupt judgment which the World exerciseth upon Christ and his Apostles: Others understand it of the Judgment of Condemnation. The wicked deride it by the Spirit be convinced, that they lay in wickedness, and exposed to eternal Condemnation: when they should see their Father the Devil, who arrogates to himself the title of the Prince of the World, and exerciseth a tyranny over them: cast out, and overcome.

12. I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. n Not any new Articles of Doctrine or Faith; for Chap. 15. 15. he had told them that he had made known unto them all things which he had heard of the Father, of that nature; but those things (probably) which concerned them, with reference to their Office as Apostles, the Constitution, State, and Government of the Church; but faith he, you cannot bear them now, in regard of their passion, or rather of their carnal imperfect faith.

* Chap. 14. 17. † Chap. 14. 26. 13. I tell thee, when he * the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will shew you things to come.

n The word which we here translate [Guide] δηγομαι is a word of great emphasis; it strictly signifies to be a guide of the way, not only to discover truth as the object of the understanding, but the bowing of the will to the obedience of it: it is said, that the Spirit should guide the Apostles into all truth; that is, all necessary truth, whatsoever Christ had revealed to them, because in their present state they were not able to bear it; whatsoever should be fit for them to know, in order to their planting, ordering, and governing the Church of God; which Christ had not while he was with them, acquainted them with and people were to be instructed from the Apostles, upon whom the Spirit should come in the days of Pentecost, and to influence them, that in those things they should not be at a loss to understand the Will of God, which they should communicate unto others; and they ought to look upon what the Apostles so revealed, as the mind of Christ: for the holy Spirit should not speak merely from himself, but as from Christ, with whom he was essentially one; as also from the Father, y<sup>e</sup> whatsoever the Father and the Son Will, he should communicate, that he should reveal to the Apostles: and he shall reveal to you things that are to come, being in you the Spirit of Prophecy. The Apostles in their Epistles, and in the book of Revelation, shewed not indeed all things, but many things which were, and are to come to pass.

14. He shall glorify me; for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you. n That is, he shall make me famous in the World; as by the extraordinary gifts which he shall dispense and give out, particularly by shewing you things to come: for he shall guide and lead you into no other truth but that which I have revealed, or which it is my will he should make known and reveal.

* Chap. 17. 10. 15. * All things that the Father hath, are mine: so therefore I shall, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you. c All the Divine Essence, Wisdom, Power, which is in the Father, are mine; I am in all things that concern the Deity, one, and equal with the Father; and that was the reason that I said, that he should take of mine, and shew it to you; which is the same as if I had said, He shall take of my Father, and shall shew it to you; for all that the Father hath, is mine; I and my Father are one in Essence, Wisdom, Power, &c.

16. A little while and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while and ye shall see me, because I go to the Father. c I must die, and so for two or three days you shall not see me; for after that, ye shall see me again, when I shall be risen from the dead; but because of the last words, because I go to the Father, which seem to give a reason of this absence; possibly by the little while mentioned, our Saviour means the whole time, from the speaking of these words to his Ascension into Heaven; for that time was not more than six weeks; and by the little while mentioned in the latter part of the verse, our Saviour intends the whole time from his Ascension, until his coming to Judgment; and to the reason is proper what is added, because I go to the Father, for being so Ascended, and sit down at the right hand of God, we are told that there he must sit, till God hath made all his enemies his footstool: and by the Apostle, that the last enemy to be destroyed is death, and that when the last enemy is destroyed, until the times of the restoration of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of his holy Prophets since the world began.

17. Then said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, A little while and ye shall see me: and, because I go to the Father? c Christ had used much the same expression to the Jews, Chap. 7. 33. Yet a little while I am with you; he had said the same to his Disciples, Chap. 13. 33: yet it is plain from this 17. ver. that his Disciples did not understand him; what need the best of us have of the Explanations of the blessed Spirit, rightly to conceive of, and understand spiritual things? These Disciples of his Ecce, Behold, Behold, Behold, and coming to know, our Lord had intended to his Disciples, not only in the two Texts aforementioned, but also Chap. 8. 21, 22. and 12. 33, 36. and 14. 2, 12, 25, and in this Chapter, ver. 5-7.

18. They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while? we cannot tell what he saith. c Still they do not understand what he meant. Who still hereafter arrogate to man reason or understanding, a power to comprehend spiritual mysteries? Had not the Disciples reasonable Souls? will any say they had no mind to understand? certainly none can say so. Some lay the fault of the Disciples not understanding these things, upon the obscurity of our Saviour's phrase, and his Parabolicall expression of them: others in their ignorance of our Saviour's Resurrection from the dead; others in their not understanding the circumstance of times, but certainly it is best inquired to the Disciples inability to conceive of these things, and the prejudices of their national error concerning the Temporal Kingdom of the Messiah. Let it lie where it will, the weakness of the Disciples may be reasonably conceived, not to be greater than is incident to the best of men; and if they were to dull of hearing and understanding, we may reasonably conceive, that we are not free from the like impotency and infirmity.

19. Now Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask him, and said unto them, Do ye enquire among yourselves of that I said, A little while and ye shall not see me: and again, A little while and ye shall see me? c In the terms of this Verse there is nothing difficult, but in the matter of it there is much instructive: We learn from hence, That the good men may as to some points be ignorant as to the mind and Will of God, yet they will be diligent of further instruction in it. To be willingly and contentedly ignorant, is not consistent with a root of saving grace. 2. Christ knows the desires of our hearts, before they are made known to him by the words of our lips; but yet it will not follow, that we may satisfy our selves with inward secret desires, without making them known by our lips; for God requireth the Cultures of our lips, as well as the desires and groans of our inward man. 3. Christ is very ready to reach those whose hearts he hath desired to learn; therefore he saith, Do ye enquire amongst yourselves? Are you inquisitive? I am ready to teach, and to instruct you.

20. Verily, verily I say unto you, that ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice: and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy. c Our Saviour's reply is no literal answer to their question, or explication of the term which appeared so difficult to them to understand; but yet it is a substantial answer, by which he let them know, that he should be absent from them for some time, which time would be to them a time of mourning, and sadness, as he had before told them; that when the Bridegroom should be taken from them, then they should mourn; that time would be to the wicked part of the World, a time of mirth and jollity: But their sorrow should be turned into joy when they shall see him again, both upon his Resurrection, and in the general Resurrection. The time of this life is the worldlings hour, and for the most part the power of darkness, to such as love and fear God; but as the worldlings joy shall at last be turned into sorrow; (they compass themselves about with pleasures, but they shall at last lie down in sorrow); so the godly mans sorrow shall be turned into joy; Christ will say to the good servant, Enter thou into thy masters joy, Math. 25. 23.

21. * A Christian, when he is in travel, hath for row, because his hour is come: but as soon as he is delivered of the child, he remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world. c Our Lord compareth the state of the Church in this life, and more especially in those first and most troublesome times, to the state of a woman that is big with child, and in travel: when he saith, the hath sorrow, that is great pain, because God when he curried the woman for her transgression, made this her passion, Gen. 3. 16. Unlawfully multiply thy sorrow, and thy conception, in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and when her weeks are fulfilled, her hour is come to feel the effect of this curse, the fruit of the first woman's transgression; but no sooner is the delivered of a child born into the World, she is thrown and pains, for joy of a child born into the World. Such (saith our Saviour to his Disciples) is your state; you are as a woman in travail, to will all those that believe in me, to the end of the World.

22. And ye now therefore have sorrow: but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man can take from you. c (The whole Church, Rev. 12. 1, 2. is compared to a woman with child, crying, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered); during this time of your travail, you must have sorrow. All those that will live godly in Christ Jesus, must suffer persecution. It is appointed for all men once to die. It is appointed for Gods people, (especially under some periods of time) to be dying daily, killed all the day long, as the Apostle expresseth the state of Christians in his time. Rom. 8. 36. quoting Psal. 44. 22. (which sheweth the state of the Church in the Old Testament to have been the same). But (saith our Saviour) it is but as the hour of the woman's travail; it will be sharp, very sharp, but it shall be short: For I will see you again, and then your heart shall rejoice, which cannot be understood of Christs seeing them again after his Resurrection; for before that time, we read of few or no sufferings of the Apostles or other Disciples. It must therefore be understood, either of the visitation of his Spirit, filling their hearts with joy and peace, or the visitation of his Providence, when all that have believed in Christ, shall feel away from their eyes, and they shall enter into the joy of their Lord, and sigh and sorrow no more, nor shall be in the power of all their enemies, to deprive them of their joy.

23. And in that day ye shall ask me nothing: Verily, verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my Name, he will give it you. c That the day here spoken of, is that before mentioned, when Christ promised to see them again, and that that day, when Christ should be without question; but what that day is, (as we before shewed) is not so well agreed: Some understand it of the general Resurrection, when Christ shall come to judgment, when all askings for satisfaction as to any thing of which we doubt, shall cease; and this seemeth at first the plainest sense: you shall then be made perfect; as you shall want nothing, (so you shall ask nothing). But because of the following words, which plainly refer to the time of this life: others distinguish concerning asking, and by asking here understood, asking by way of question; for further information, not by way of prayer for supply; and indeed the Greek word enforceth that sense; for it is not aiteseis, which signifies to ask or beg, as in prayer, but eroteseis, which signifies to ask for a resolution in case of doubting; now, tho it be true, that in the day of judgment when we shall see Christ as he is, and know God as we are become, we shall have no occasion to ask any questions; yet which is proper to this life; it should seem, that the day here mentioned, is some time before the last Judgment: that what should be, is the question. It is certainly best understood of the time after the effusion or pouring out of the Spirit in the days of Pentecost; of which time it was prophesied by Joel, Chap. 2. 28. That God would pour out his Spirit on all flesh: their sons and their daughters should prophesy, their young men should dream dreams, and their old men should see visions, Acts 2. 17. and to which time Jesus should be in his Prophecy, Chap. 11. 9. that the Earth would be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the Sea. So as these words, you shall ask me nothing in that day, signify the great light that should upon the coming of that they should no longer have any such doubts as they now had, and found much the same thing that we have, Chap. 2. 27. But the answering, [by which it is meant the Holy Spirit] which ye have received of him, abideth in you: and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same enlighteneth you of all things, We must not too rigidly interpret our Saviours words here, as if they were a promise of such a state in this life, when either the present or succeeding Disciples of Christ should be to filled with knowledge, as they should have no further doubts, or need not to ask any thing of Christ, (that is, to be resolved in any thing). Our Saviour here speaketh only comparatively, to signify the great difference would be as to knowledge, between them in their present state, and what should be after the pouring out of the holy Spirit; they should then fully understand what Christ meant by his Ecce, Behold, Behold, and you shall not see me; and again, a little while, and ye shall see me; because I go to the Father: and should not need ask him questions about that, or many other things which the Prophet saith, They shall cast no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know ye the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least to the least. It must not be interpreted (as some have done) to signify a needlessness of Ministerial teaching; for neither must this text be interpreted, to signify a needlessness of inquiry of Christ for further satisfaction; but only as signifying the vast difference in the degrees of knowledge, after the holy Spirit should be poured forth, from what was even in the best men, before that time. n In the latter part of the text another word is used, it is not aiteseis, but eroteseis. Our Saviour there plainly speaketh of their asking in Prayers, and their promise is, that to supply their defects of knowledge, and the want of his personal instruction, they should obtain by Prayer from the Father, all that was necessary for their discharge of the Propheticall Office, Math. 17. Chap. 15. ver. 7. Chap. 16. 24. See the notes on those Texts.

24. Hitherto have I asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye shall receive; that your joy may be full. c All the Prayers of believers under the Old Testament were accepted upon the account of the Mediator, who was Typified by the Temple, and the Ark, where their solemn Worship was performed by Divine appointment. But the explicit naming of him, was not usual in their requests. Indeed the Prophet David enforced his requests for the Lords sake; which may peculiarly respect the Mediator, the promised Mediator, our Saviour in the form of Prayer dictated to his Disciples, gave no direction of addressing themselves to God in his name. But now he was ready to accomplish the Will of his Father, by offering himself as an expiatory Sacrifice for sin, and thereby reconciling God to them; and the prevalence of his Intercession depending upon his Meritorious all-sufficient sufferings; he directs and encourages them to pray with humble confidence in his name, for all the blessings they stand in need of. And his matter of exceeding joy, that notwithstanding the unthankfulness of the least favours, yet they are assured of obtaining their petitions offered up in his name: for the Father was pleased with his voluntary obedience to the death of the Cross, that no blessing is so good or great, but he most willingly bestows for his sake to all humble supplicants.

25. These things have I spoken unto you in private; but the time cometh when I shall no more speak unto you in private, but I shall shew you plainly of the Father. n That by Proverbs is meant any dark sayings, is plain from the opposition in the text, of that term, plainly; Christ had spoken, then, not all things, yet many things to them in dark phrases, and under many figurative expressions; but (saith he) the time cometh, when I shall shew you plainly of the Father; that time is either Christs second coming, or after the pouring out of the Spirit, which latter is most probable what our Saviour doth here intend; and after that time were given out. He had before given to his Disciples to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God, far beyond others, Math. 13. 11. but yet it appears by Chap. 14. and many other texts, that they had a very confused, and imperfect knowledge of the Father, and Christs oneness with the Father, and their mutual Personal relation one to another.

26. At that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say unto you, that I will pray the Father for you. c When the Spirit shall come, then you shall fully and clearly understand how to put up your Prayers to the Father in my name; hitherto have you done it imperfectly, not fully, understanding what you did; but when I shall have poured out my Spirit, then you shall fully understand what it is to Pray in my name, and you shall accordingly do it: he doth not deny, that he would ask the Father: for the Scripture elsewhere plainly expresseth it, Rom. 8. 24. Heb. 7. 25. but he only tells them, that he had not so to them; the reason of which he tells us in the next words.

27 For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God.

28 I need not tell you, (to begot in you a confidence that your Prayers should be heard) that I will pray to the Father for you; for my Father himself hath such a love for you, that you may from thence alone conclude, that he will hear you; and tho my Fathers love to you is an everlasting love, which hath no cause in the creature; yet as to the manifestations of my Fathers love, they are further drawn forth by the love which he beareth you bear to me, and your receiving me who am the Messiah, and came forth from God, to perform the work of mans Redemption.

29 I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world; & again, I leave the world, and go to the Father.

30 Tho I be in the World, yet my original is not from the World; I am one with my Father, equal with him, God blessed for ever. I came forth from him, as one sent in the times of time, to discharge the Office of the Messiah; the Word, the place I called, was neither my original, nor is my home: I am presently leaving the World again, and going to my Father.

31 His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speak-est thou plainly, and speakest no more in parables.

Our Saviour having now plainly told them, that he was leaving the World, put an end to their inquiries, whither he was going, and testified them that in his former expressions of going away, not for a while to be seen, he meant no earthly motion; & this they confessed had no obscurity at all in it. These words are so intelligible, that there is no reason for any of us to ask thee any thing about the sense of them.

32 Now are we sure that * thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee: by this * we believe that thou comest forth from God.

33 This confirmeth us in that Faith or Perswasion, which we before had, tho it was in us but weak, that indeed thou art come forth from God.

34 Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe? & some read the words (not as a question) Ton do nunc believe. It is well you believe at last, you had reason enough to have believed before this time.

35 Behold the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that * ye shall be scattered, & every man to his own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

I too you profess that now you do believe, you had need look to your Faith: there is yet a trying time cometh upon you, when your Faith will waver, and you who have been so long my followers, will leave me to shift for my self, and every one of you shift for your selves; this came to pass presently after, Mark 26. 36. Those who think they stand, had need take heed lest they fall; those who think they are firm, ought to be thinking with their selves, what they shall do, when they shall be able to stand in a day of sharp Trials. Many in a calm time appear to be Professors, and Believers; who when Affliction and Persecution cometh for the Gospel sake, will fall away, and leave Christ alone; & yet with our Saviour, I am not alone, because the Father is with me. No man is alone, who hath the presence of God with him. Christ knew that in all his sufferings, he should have the Presence and Assistance of his heavenly Father.

36 These things I have spoken unto you, that in ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but of good cheer, I have overcome the world.

By Peace here, is not so much to be understood, Peace with God; which, yet we have from Christ, and through Christ, according to Rom. 5. 1. Being justified by faith, we have peace with God. through our Lord Jesus Christ. Not yet peace of conscience, which is the copy of our Peace with God: As a peace of mind, a quiet, serene calm temper, which indeed is the effect of the other, as the cause, that you might not be troubled and disturbed, neither for my sake, nor yet for your own. I Tho in the World ye meet with troubles, which you will certainly do, because the World hateth you, & Be of good cheer (saith he) I have overcome the world; where by World is to be understood, all Temptations, from, whether from the flatulencies of the frowns and troubles of it. We are said to overcome the World, but we overcome it as Soldiers, fighting under Christ, who is the Captain of our Salvation, and his Victory is our Victory, 1 Joh. 4. 4. & 5. 4. Christ overcame the Prince of the World, and cast him out, as we heard before; and he hath overcome Sin, and in him, in the midst of all Tribulations, are more than conquerors through him that loved us, Rom. 8. 37. This was our Saviours last Sermon, which we have upon record in Holy Writ.

CHAP. XVII.

These words spake Jesus; and lift up his eyes to heaven, and said, a Father, the hour is come, b, glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may and glorify thee.

a When our Lord had finished his Discourses, of which we have had a large account in Chap. 14, 15, 16, he goes to prayer, as he taught us when we pray, to direct our petitions to the Father; & in this he setteth us an example, and before he speaks, it is said he lifted up his eyes to Heaven, as his Fathers Mansion-house; who tho he filleth Heaven and Earth, yet doth in Heaven most manifest his glory; and therefore teaching us to pray, he commended us to say, Our Father which art in Heaven; not exclusively, as if God were not on Earth also: but eminently, as Heaven is the place where he most gloriously manifests himself. Lifting up the eyes was an usual gesture in prayer, and but an indication of the Souls being lifted up, Psalm 121. 1. and 123. 1. yet no necessary gesture; for we shall at another time find our Saviour, falling upon his face when he prayed, Mat. 26. 39. Mark 14. 35. The lifting up of the Soul to God, wherein the main and Spiritual part of prayer lies; doth not necessarily require the lifting up of the eyes. The Publican cast down his eyes upon the Earth, in the sense of his unworthiness. Our Lord lifts up his eyes, and said, Father, the hour is come; that is, the hour of my Passion, the time wherein thou hast determined that I should die; & now wherein thou shalt glorify, by raising me from the dead, by make thy Son glorious, by giving me assistance from thee to do the work which I have to do, to drink this bitter cup: that I to be risen again from the dead, and according to I Heaven, may make thy name famous, by publishing thy Justice, Goodness, and Truth, upon the Preaching of the Gospel to all Nations.

2 As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou wilt.

I see no reason for any to contend here, that by all flesh, the Elect only who shall be eternally saved, are to be understood: Christs power undoubtedly extendeth further than to the Elect, (for then only for Salvation) he hath a power over Reprobates, and unbelievers; he will, as well as over his Elect to bring them to Eternal Life and Salvation. The former part of the Text speaketh of the more general Power and Authority, by which the Father hath already made Christ Glorious; putting all things under his feet, and causing all knees to bow down unto him; which are other phrases by which the same things are expressed, 1 Cor. 15. 27. and Phil. 2. 10. This general Power our Saviour executeth according to the Counsel of God, with respect to their faith or unbelief. As to those given to Christ, that he should die in their stead, and with the price of his blood, purchase Eternal Life for them: Christ executeth his Power in giving them Eternal Life; under which notion, (as appeareth from many other Scriptures) is comprehended, not the end only, which is Eternal life and happiness, but all the necessary means in order to that end: from whence we are to observe, that Eternal Life is a free-gift, that the Son gives only to such as the Father hath given him by his Eternal Councils, & that all shall not be saved; for the term (as many as, &c.) is plainly restrictive, and limits the gift to a certain number. And to examine our right to it, we need not ascend up to Heaven, to search the rolls of the Eternal Councils; for all whom the Father hath given him, shall come unto him, and not only receive him as their High Priest, but give themselves to be ruled and guided by him, by a receiving of the Spirit of his grace; by which a receiving of Christ, and giving up of our selves to his Councils and Government, we shall know whether we be of the number of those that are given to Christ; and till we find this, we have no reason to conclude it, but to fear and suspect the contrary.

3 And * this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God; and Jesus Christ which thou hast sent.

Those who deny the Divine Nature of Christ, think they have a mighty argument from this text; where Christ (as they say) speaking to his Father, calleth him the only true God. By Inquires answer, That the term only or alone, is not to be applied to thee, but to the term God; and the sense this; To know thee, to be that God which is true, where by true God; and this appeareth from 1 John 5. 20. where it is said to be the true God, which he could not be if the Father were the only true God, considered as Father from the Son. The term only or alone, is not exclusive of the other two persons in the Trinity, but only of Lala, the Gods of the Heathen, which are no Gods; for 1 Tim. 6. 15. and in many other Scriptures, for Matth. 11. 27. where it is said, that none knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any the Father, but the Son; where the negative doth not exclude the only Spirit. Besides, the term alone, is in Scripture understood, not always to exclude all others, as Mark 6. 47. Our Saviour saith, it is I, I am the true God, who is the only true God; that is, it is the way to Eternal Life, which is an ordinary figure used in holy Writ. & He adds, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent; by which he lets us know, that the Father cannot be falsely known, but in and by the Son. Knowing in this Verse, signifieth not the meer comprehending of God, and of Christ in mens Notions, but the receiving Christ, believing in him, loving and obeying him, &c.

4 I have glorified thee on the earth; & I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do.

By Preaching the Gospel, by living up to the rule of thy Law, by the Miracles which I have wrought; God could not be glorified by Christ, by the addition of any thing to his Eternal glory; only by manifesting to the World his Fathers goodness, justice, mercy, truth, wisdom, and others of his Attributes. One way by which he hath glorified his Father, is express, viz. by finishing the work which he had given him in Communion. But how could Christ say this, who had not yet died for the sins of men, whereas the principal piece of his work? And. It was so high, that he speaks of it as already done; for ver. 11. he saith, I am now in the world, because he was to be a little time in the world. Again, he speaks of what he was fully resolved to do, as if it were already done.

5 And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.

Let the glory which as my Divine Nature I had with thee before the foundation of the World, be communicated also to my Human Nature, that my whole person may be made glorious; from hence is easily concluded against those which deny the Godhead of Christ, that Christ was glorified with his Father before the World was, which he could not have been, if he had not been Eternal God; he here begs of his Father, That that glory might shine upon his Person as Mediator.

6 I have manifested thy Name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: & thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word.

Here he openeth this former phrase, I have glorified thee upon earth; it was done by manifesting the Lords Name, proclaiming his goodness and mercy, publishing his Will, making known all whereby God can be made known; this Christ did both by his words, and by his works, as it he had done (as he saith) to all those whom the Father had given him, whom the Father had given him by an Act of his Eternal Council; and by inclining their hearts to love and receive him when he came into the World; he tells his Father, that his they were. His chosen ones, and he had given them unto Christ, that he should redeem them with his blood, and take the curse of their Salvation; and he saith, When I came and revealed thy Will unto them, they have not stubbornly and obstinately, as the generality of the Jews, shut their eyes against the light, and rebelled against thy Will revealed; but they have heard, received, imbraced, and obeyed thy word.

7 Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me, are of thee.

They have thus far made proficiency in the Doctrine which I have taught them; that tho the Pharisees say, that I cast out Devils by Beelzebub the Prince of Devils, yet I teach them is from thee, and that it is by a Divine Power that I have wrought those miracles which I have wrought; and so I have manifested thy Name unto them, and they have received the manifestation and Revelation of thy Name unto them.

8 For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, & they have believed that thou didst send me.

Our Lord here doth both justify himself, and commend these whom in this former part of his Prayer he is commending to his Father; he justifieth himself, that he had not delivered any thing to them, but what he had from his Father; thereby teaching all those who claim the Name of his Ministers what is their duty, viz. to give to their hearers no word, but what God hath given them. If Christ confined his discourses to words which his Father had given him, certainly we ought to do so also. We are not to speak what we list, nor what men would have us; we are tied up to Gods word. He commendedeth thus his Disciples, that they had received them, not only the found of them in their ears, not only the Notion of them in their understandings, but they had imbraced and believed them; & had from the force and authority of them, given credit to him as the true Messiah, who came out, and was sent from God. Tho they were not yet come up to a perfect faith in him as the Eternal Son of God; yet they believed him one that came from God, and was sent of God as the promised Messiah, which seemeth to have as to his Disciples, until by his Resurrection from the dead, he declared himself to be the Son of God with Power; tho all along this Gospel, his discourses, and the miracles which he wrought, had a particular tendency to prove himself one with the Father, and the Eternal Son of God; and the Disciples had some weak perfavision of this also.

9 I pray for them, I pray not for the world; but for them which thou hast given me, for they are thine.

The World seemeth here to signify all mankind, for whom Christ in this place doth not pray; tho some Interpret of Reprobates, others of Unbelievers. Christ afterward prayeth for the World, ver. 20. that is, for such who, tho they at present were Unbelievers, yet should be brought to believe by the Apostles Ministry; he was distinguishing, and prayeth for some things, for his chosen ones, which he doth not pray for on the behalf of others; there he doth himself to be such as his Father (whose they were) had given him, either by an Eternal donation, or by working faith in them.

10 And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in thee.

In the Greek, the Adjectives are of the neuter gender, so as the text is, omnia mea sunt tibi, et tua sunt mihi, et ego glorificor in te. All my friends, or all my Disciples are thine also; but, all my things are thine, and all thy things are mine; which is no more than he hath before often said. Christ and his Father have all things common, neither of them have any thing that is not the others. They are one, and they agree in one; they have the same Essence, the same Will, the same Attributes, the same Friends; and I am (saith our Saviour) glorified, or made glorious in them, by their owning, receiving, and embracing me, and accepting me as their Saviour. So as this Verse containeth two arguments more, enforcing his Petition on the behalf of this Elect. 1. His Fathers propriety in him, as well as his. 2. Their love to him, and the glory which redounded to him from their Faith and holiness.

11 And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world; and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name y, those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, & we are one.

The term World in this Verse, signifies not the men of the World, nor any particular party of them, (as it often signifies) but the habitable part of the Earth. Our Saviour saith, he is no more in the World, because he was to continue on the Earth but a very small time; but (saith he) a tiele my Disciples are like to abide in the World when I have left it; they will stand in need of this help, to be armed against all the temptations they will meet with from the World. I am coming to thee, therefore I commend them to thee, beseeching thee, that thou through thy Power wouldst keep those, who in giving themselves up to me, have also given themselves up to thee; let their owning thy Name (which is as a strong tower, Prov. 18. 10.) keep them from all the temptations and dangers, to which they will be exposed in the World, wherein they are to live and converse. That they may be one, one body, and in one Spirit, that they may own one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, &c. that they may be one in love and affection, as we are, in some proportion to that Union which is between thee and me, tho not in an equality. This Prayer of our Saviours doth both oblige all those who in any sincerity own Christ, to study Union both in Opinion and Affection; and also give ground of hopes, that there is a time coming, when there shall be greater measure of it than we have seen in those miserably divided times wherein we have lived, and do yet live.

12 While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy Name: a, those that thou gavest me, I have kept; b, and none of them is lost; c, but d, the Son of perdition; e, that the scripture might be fulfilled, f, that he who believeth in the Son of Man, shall not perish, but have everlasting life.

a Christ speaks here of himself as one who had already died, was Risen, and Ascended, tho none of all these things were past, because they were so suddenly to come to pass. I have (saith our Saviour) for all the time that I have abode

ing convinced in his own conscience, that he was an innocent man: r but the Jews double their clamors, and (according to the usual acts of Sycophants) quit their charge their malice; and pursue only the charge which was proper for the Cognizance of the Roman Governor of Sedition or Rebellion, and exactly accuse Pilate as a Traytor, and being false to his trust, if he should let our Saviour go; for no man could get up himself as a King, but he must proclaim himself a Traytor to the Roman Emperor.

13 ¶ When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment-seat, in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gabbatha.

¶ That saying, that if he let Jesus go, he was not Cæsar's friend. Pilate was a man that loved the honour that is from men, more than the honour and praise which is from God; and was more afraid of losing his place than his soul, and could no longer resist the temptation he was urged, u he brought forth Christ, and fate down in a place called the Pavement, because it was paved with stone, that is, an Hebrew, (mixed with the Syriack) Gabbatha, that is, an High place; for it was their manner to have their Judgment-seat higher than other parts of the room where they were.

14 And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour: and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your king.

¶ The preparation to any feast, signifies the day before it, because on that day they prepared whatsoever according to the Law was necessary for the Solemnization. Some much doubt, whether in this place the Passover signifies strictly the Paschal Supper, which it could not do, if the Jews strictly this year kept to the Law; for the fourteenth day of the month Nisan at evening, was the time when most certainly Christ kept it, who ate it the night before. It is therefore more probably thought, that by the Passover here, is meant their great Festival, which was upon the fifteenth day. (See the notes on Chap. 18. 23.) ¶ John tells us it was about the sixth hour; that is, in the latter part of the interval, between nine in the morning, and twelve at noon: for the division of the day according to the Jews, was in four parts; the first was from the rising of the Sun, till our nine in the morning, and was called the first hour; the other was from the third hour to the first, that is twelve a clock at noon; the third division was from their first hour to the ninth, that is, three a clock with us in the afternoon; the fourth division was from the ninth hour to Sunset, that is with us fix a clock in the evening, when the Sun is in the Equinox. Now, not only the time when any of these hours came, was called either the third or fix hour; but the space of three hours allotted to each division, was so called when the next division began; so the time of our Saviours Crucifixion is recorded by Mark to be the third hour: that is, the whole space from nine a clock to twelve, was not quite gone, so that it was near an end. And by the Evangelist, here 'tis said, that it was about the fix hour, that is near our twelve a clock. And thus the different relations are clearly recorded.

15 But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your king? The chief priests answered, We have no king but Cæsar.

¶ The more Pilate sought to quiet them, the more they rage, contrary to all dictates of reason; when God hath determined a thing, all things shall concur to bring it about. Pilate mocks them when he saith, Shall I crucify your King? ¶ Yet so fierce was their malice against Christ, that to compel the Governor to condemn him, who there were not a people under Heaven, more zealous for their liberties, nor more impatient of a foreign yoke; they cry out, We have no king but Cæsar: That is, the Roman Emperor who had conquered them.

16 ¶ Then he delivered him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus and led him away.

¶ This must be at or about twelve of the clock, for what must be signified by the sixth hour, ver. 14. ¶ Pilate condemned him, and delivered him to the executioner, who (as the manner is in such cases) led him away.

17 And he bearing his cross went forth into a place, called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew, Golgotha.

¶ See the notes on Mark 15. 22, 23. Where, whatsoever ends expounding on this Verse, may be found, and this Text is recommended to that, which telleth us, that one Simon, a man of Cyrene, bare his Cross. Their places of Execution (as usually with us) were without their Cities.

18 Where they crucified him, and two others with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

See the notes on Mark 15. 27.

19 And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS.

¶ See the notes on Mark 15. 27. This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin.

¶ As all their places of Execution were within two far-longs, or three-hundred paces: it was written in three Languages, that not the Jews only, but all such strangers as were come up to the Feast, might understand it.

21 Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, write not, The king of the Jews; but that he said, I am king of the Jews.

¶ The Jews thought it would be a disgrace to them, that Christ should be reported abroad as their king, therefore they desire an alteration of the writing.

22 Pilate answered, What I have written, I have written.

¶ But Pilate refused to gratify them, and lets them know he would not be directed by them what to write, nor alter any thing of it.

23 ¶ Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments and made four parts, to every souldier a part: and also his coat: now the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout.

¶ Both Matthew Chap. 27. 35. and Mark 15. 24. mention this parting of Christs garments amongst them, which must be understood of his inward garments; which some tell us might easily be done, because their garments were made up of four parts, but his outward garment which is called his coat, was all of a piece.

24 They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rent it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be: that the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots. These things therefore did the souldiers.

¶ This made them chuse rather to cast lots for that than to divide it, as they had done his inward garments: But there was something more in this than the Souldiers knew: Christ hereby proved a true Antitype to David, who said of himself figuratively, Psal. 22. 18. They part my garments amongst them, and cast lots upon my vesture; by which he meant no more, than that his enemies loaded themselves with his spoils: those words which figuratively were true of David, proved literally true as to Christ. Thus vile and wicked men are fulfilling the Scriptures, when they little think of it.

25 ¶ Now there stood by the cross of Jesus, his mother, and his mothers sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas and Mary Magdalen.

¶ I These words [the wife] are not in the Greek, but (applied by our Translators; which leaves it doubtful, whether that Mary was the wife, or the Mother, or the Daughter of Cleophas.

26 When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son.

¶ We have often heard that John was the beloved Disciple, and lastly expressed under the Notion of him whom Jesus loved. Our Lord commendeth his Mother to her, as if he had been her own Son; the tenth we know, that Joseph was dead some time dead, otherwise it is not probable, that Christ would have committed his Mother to any other Guardian.

27 Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother. And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home.

¶ He also reciprocally commendeth his Mother to John, to be cared for as his own Mother. From that time Mary went home, and lived with John.

28 ¶ After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

29 Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: And they filled a sponge with vinegar, and put it upon hyssop, and put it to his mouth.

¶ David said, Psal. 69. 21. to signify his enemies multiplying afflictions upon him, They gave me also gall for my meat, and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink; which he spake metaphorically; part of these words were without a figure literally fulfilled in Christ, who was the Son of David; for he crying out upon the Cross that he thirsted, there being no other liquor at hand, or this being set for purpose for this end, they dip a sponge in it, and give it to him to drink; whether to lull his senses, or to prolong his life in those torments, or barely to quench his thirst, is hard to determine. It is probable, that it was such a kind of refreshment as they allowed to ordinary malefactors in his circumstances, the particulars of which usage we are not able to determine.

30 When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished. It is finished r: And he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost.

¶ When Christ had tasted the vinegar, he said, It is finished. That is, I have now done and suffered all things which lay upon me in this life to do and suffer. Having said this, he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost. It is terms expressive of death; and our Saviours free surrender of his Soul unto his Father.

31 The Jews therefore because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath-day: (for that sabbath-day was a high day) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.

¶ It was the Preparation, not to the Passover, (for that was celebrated the night before) but to the weekly Sabbath; and they judged according to the Law, Deut. 21. 23. that the dead would be defiled, if the persons executed were not buried that day; but their bodies should remain on the tree all night, especially on the Sabbath which began immediately after Sunset. ¶ And this Sabbath was a more than ordinary Sabbath, for it was not only the weekly Sabbath, but also their second day of unleavened bread, which, and the last day, were both very solemn days as may be seen, Levit. 23. ¶ This makes them come and beseech Pilate, that the bodies might be taken down, and in order to it, that their legs might be broken, lest any life remaining in them, they should revive and escape.

32 Then came the souldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him.

33 But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs.

¶ They brake the two other malefactors legs, but not Christs, because they found him dead. It is very possible in a natural course, that of three men dying in the same manner, one may die sooner than another; but it is but rationally presumed, that the cause of our Saviours quicker death, was not the failure of his spirits sooner, but his own voluntary surrender of his Soul.

34 But one of the souldiers with a spear pierced his side; and forthwith came there out, blood and water.

¶ But one of the Souldiers to make sure of him, pierced his side, out of which it is said, that there presently came forth blood, and water: That there should come out blood is no wonder, nor yet that there should come forth water. Blood being congealed, it is ordinary to see water on the top of the vessel where it is. And besides, Anatomists tells us, that in the hollow part of the breast, there are watery, as well as bloody humours in the membrane that incompart the heart, which being pierced, and the water let out, the living creature dyeth necessarily. But yet in regard of the next words, He that saw it bare record, and knoweth that he saith true, he saw it bare record, that there was some mystery in this water and blood, which came out of Christs side pierced. Some would have the two Sacraments of the Gospel, signified by this water and blood. Christ in John 6. 16. is said to have come by water and blood; that is, by Interpreters, he brought in a true expiation of sin by his blood, and the laver of Regeneration, washing the Soul from its filthiness. And thus he proved the true Antitype, answering the Jewish Types in Sacrifices, and divers washings.

35 And he that saw it, bare record, and his record is true: and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe.

¶ Now was this a table, for John saw it, and bare record, and knew it to be true, and published it, that men might believe that he was he, in whom all the legal Types and Figures had their complement.

36 For these things were done, that the scripture might be fulfilled, A bone of him shall not be broken.

¶ Nor was there any thing of this, but in fulfilling of the Scripture; for it was Gods Law about the Passover, Exod. 12. 46. Num. 9. 12. concerning the Paschal Lamb, (which was a Type of Christ, Chap. 1. 29. 1 Cor. 5. 7.) that a bone of Christs body, they might have understood, that he was figured out by the Paschal Lamb.

37 And again another scripture saith, They shall look on him whom they pierced.

¶ So also by seeing Christs side pierced, (a thing not very usual) they might have understood, that he was the person mentioned, Zech. 12. 10.

38 ¶ And after this Joseph of Arimathea (being a disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews) besought Pilate that he might take away and take the body of Jesus: and Pilate gave him leave: He came therefore and took the body of Jesus.

See the notes on Mark 15. 43, 44.

39 And there came also Nicodemus which at the first came to Jesus by night, and brought a mixture of myrrine and aloes, about an hundred pound weight.

¶ The History of Nicodemus coming by night to our Saviour, and of his discourse together, we had Chap. 3. 9, 10. We again heard of him standing up for Christ in the Sanhedrim, Chap. 7. 50. We read no more of him till now, where he shows his love to his dead body; and bringing an hundred pound weight of Myrrine and Aloes, which were both of them drugs used in embalming dead bodies, as also in performing other things, Psal. 45. 8.

40 Then took they the body of Jesus, and wound it in linen clothes, with the spices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury.

41 Now in the place where he was crucified, there was a garden; and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid.

¶ As all their gardens were out of the City, as also their burial places; (which usually were Faults, or Caves within the Earth.

42 There laid they Jesus therefore, because of the Jews preparation-day, for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.

¶ There they immediately buried Christ, because the time, strictly called the Preparation (for the whole day was so called) was nigh at hand. See a fuller account of the History of our Saviours Passion, Death and Burial, in the notes on Mark 16. where what is said by all the Evangelists, is compared together, and made one complete History.

CHAP. XX.

The Evangelist St. John, giving a fuller account than the other Evangelists, of Christs Resurrection, and his Converse upon the Earth forty days, until he ascended up into Heaven, we have in our notes on the other Evangelists been shorter, referring our selves for a fuller account of it, till we should come to these two last Chapters of this Evangelist.

THE first day of the week a cometh Mary Magdalene early when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

¶ A Matthew saith, In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn, toward the first day of the week; also he mentions another Mary in company with Mary Magdalene. Mark tells us, that other Mary was the mother of James and Salome. Luke saith, Chap. 23. 55. They came, referring to the women, that came with him from Galilee. For the time, Luke saith, it was upon the first day of the week; Mark saith, it was when the Sabbath was past. ¶ Our Evangelist saith, it was while it was dark; so that Matthew's Sabbath, as before, which we translate, in the end of the Sabbath; must be interpreted by Mark, when the Sabbath was past; and indeed Matthew plainly expounds himself; adding, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week; which must be seven or eight hours after the Jewish Sabbath was ended; (for that ended, with the setting of the Sun the night before.) The other Evangelists tell us, that the design of their coming, was to show their last act of love, in anointing, or embalming the body of Jesus; for which purpose they had brought materials the night wherein he was Crucified, but rested on the Sabbath-day, which ending about Sunset, probably, they slept some hours, and early in the morning, in the twilight, they come with their spices. Hence appears, that there is no contradiction at all between the four Evangelists, about the time of these women bottom of it, remoter from Jerusalem. Hence Luke 24. 50. differs not from this place: from hence the rather our Lord Ascended, that he might receive his glory, high the place where he began his suffering; (in the garden where he endured his agony, and was betrayed) and in the view of Jerusalem, where he had been condemned and scorned. o About a mile or two, or such a space; as by Gods appointment was betwixt the Ark and the people, John 3. 4.

* Mat. 10. 13 And when they were p comein, they went up into an upper room, where abode both * Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James.

p To the City, and to the House: q The fame probably where they had kept the Passover, and partook of the Lords Supper: howsoever for its largeness, capable to receive so many. r As Elder, and first called to the Apostleship, is generally first named; and here especially his name first; and their names are repeated, to shew, that tho they fall in forsaking of Christ, they did rise again in professing of him; and that notwithstanding their Apostacy, they were continued after their recovery, in their former Office and Dignity.

r With great resolution, notwithstanding all opposition and contradiction they met with: Prayer and Supplications for mercies they wanted, or preventing of the evils they feared. s Their Wives, or such women especially, as we read of Matt. 27. 55, 56. u That is, his Relations and Kinswomen, which frequently in Scripture are called Brethren.

r q And in those days x Peter stood up y in the midst of the disciples, and said, (z the number of names together were about an hundred and twenty.)

x Betwixt our Saviours Ascension and Pentecost: y As generally spake for, and amongst the Apostles; but now especially, to express his zeal and faithfulness to our Saviour, whom he had so lately denied; he being also designed the Minister of the Circumcision, which place he began now to execute. z Or persons about an hundred and twenty; probably, Christ had converted many men, but these might be either men of name or quality; or men t of us, ver. 21. had accompanied with Christ and his Apostles, and were designed for the Ministry.

16 Men and brethren a, this Scripture b must needs have been fulfilled, which the holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas c, which was c guide to them that took Jesus.

* John 13. 18. and 18. 3. a An ordinary compellation; Speaker and Auditors were Hebrews of the Hebrews, b viz. Psal. 41. 9. must needs be fulfilled: yet Gods foreknowledge and prediction, excused not Judas his sin: c not only leading them in the way when they took our Saviour, but being director of their Councils against him. This the Apostle premises to abate the offence that the horrible fall of Judas might have occasioned.

* Luke 6. 16. 17 For e he was numbred d with us, and had obtained e part of this ministry f.

d Being one of the twelve Apostles. e That is, not as if Judas was made an Apostle by lot, as Matthias afterwards; but by the Providence of God, by which every lot and casual matter is governed: and to shew that the dignity did not befall him, or any of the other Apostles, because of their descent, (from Aaron) or from nature, or from any desert whatsoever, but merely from Gods good pleasure. f Then the Apostles Office is Ministerial, and they were not Lords over Gods heritage.

g Purchased a field; g which Judas might have agreed for at that price: and yet the chief Priests bought. (as Matt. 27. 7.) by a strange providence, leading of them to that purchase; howsoever eventually he bought it, as throwing back to them their money which they paid for it, Matt. 27. 5. It is said he hanged himself, which implying only his death by suffocation; whether he dyed out of horror of his fact, or laying violent hands on himself in such circumstances as may agree with this relation, it is not material to determine.

19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; inasmuch as that field is called in their proper tongue i, Acceldama, that is to say, The field of blood k.

i The Syriack Language then in use after the Babylonish Captivity. k As bought with the price of Christs blood, and sprinkled with his own blood.

20 For it is written in the book of psalms, l That his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and His m bishoprick let another n take.

l viz. Psal. 69. 25. What there is in general (spoken by David concerning his enemies, is here applied, particularly to Judas, who betrayed our Saviour: while Type David was, as Doeg was of Judas. His m Charge or Office, or Prefecture; as of a shepherd over his flock.

21 Wherefore of these men which have companied with us n all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out o among us.

n There were to be twelve Apostles in the Christian Church, to answer unto the twelve Patriarchs, and twelve Tribes in the Jewish Church; accompanied with us in ordinary conversation. o In discharge of his Ministry, and gathering of Disciples among us.

22 Beginning from the baptism of John p, unto that same day that * he was taken up from us, mult one be ordained to be a q witness with us of his resurrection.

p When Christ was Baptized by him, and by that Consecration began the Ministry, and publishing of the Gospel, (which the history of his Immaculate Conception did preface to.) q All other things being consummated in that, it being the most difficult to be believed; and therefore God was pleased to attest it by so many eye-witnesses.

23 And they appointed two, Joseph r called Barsabbas, who was surnamed Justus s, and Matthias t.

r Or Jesus, the same name called Barsabbas in their common tongue; and s probably for his integrity i amongst the Romans, who then ruled over them. t Some think the same with Nathaniel.

24 And they prayed, and said, Thou Lord u, which knowest v the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen.

u The other Apostles being chosen by God immediately, Jer. 11. 16. it was necessary that he who was to act in the same Office, and 17. 10. should be chosen after the same manner. Knowest the hearts, Chap. 15. 8. which is Gods Prerogative only; all others may be, and Rev. 2. 23. often are mistaken by outward appearances.

25 That he may take part of this Ministry x and Apostleship, from which Judas y transgressed, that he might go to his own place.

x u Agor, Or every ones Station in the World, is ordered by the Providence of God, and their part or portion is assigned to them; and so the Apostleship was unto the Apostles. y Hell or Destruction, not intended by Judas, but righteously by God appointed for him, whilst he was in the World, (especially after his betraying of our Saviour) he was an Ulcer in it; and as bad as the World was, it was too good for him. That these words should be understood of Matthias's succeeding into the Apostleship of Judas as into his own place, is the less probable, because as yet he was not chosen into it.

26 And they gave forth their lots z; and the lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbred with the eleven Apostles.

z The manner is not so certain, as necessary to be known; but the whole disposing of the lot being from the Lord, as Prov. 16. ult. they were thus as it were immediately chosen by God, and were Consecrated by Christ himself; no Apostles ordaining another, but all of them being called and ordained by Christ.

The rest of the Apostles, and the whole Church, agreeing with that Divine choice which was made.

CHAP. II.

And when the day of Pentecost a was fully come, they were all with one accord b in one place.

a This feast was fifty days after the feast of unleavened bread or Passover, as Levit. 23. 16. whence it had its name, and was called the feast of weeks, Exod. 34. 22. because it was to be observed seven weeks after the feast of unleavened bread, Deut. 16. 9. It was the feast of the fruits fruits of wheat Harvest, Exod. 34. 22. and on this day (to answer the Type) the spirit was poured out in such a plentiful manner, as the first fruits of Christs Ascending into Heaven; besides, the Law was given on this day, Exod. 19. 1, 11. and twas expedient that the Gospel (Christs Law) should be published on the same day: and it being on the first day of the week, it did commend and honour the Lords day, as our Saviour had before by his Resurrection on that day. b As if they had but one mind, as sent in so many bodies in one place; probably, that mentioned Chap. 1. 12.

* Chap. 4. 31. 2 And suddenly c there came a sound from heaven d, as of a rushing mighty wind e, and * it filled all the house f where they were sitting.

c The Apostles themselves not expecting it. d To prepare them to attend the more unto what they should hear and see afterwards: also to signify the unexpected and powerful progress which the Gospel should have, it may be to cause the greater concurrence to that place, it being an usual manner; and God would make this Miracle more publick. e To shew that the Spirit should be bestowed on them that were met there, and on all the Church throughout the World.

3 And there appeared unto them cloven tongues g, like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them h.

f To signify the variety of Languages which the Apostles should be enabled to speak; to qualify them to preach the Gospel unto all Nations, and to remove the obstacle which the confusion of Tongues caus'd: g which represented, 1. The light that the Apostles should impart. 2. The fervent heat and zeal which they should be endowed with. 3. The Gospel's spreading in the World, and carrying all before it, prevailing over all errors. 4. The purity and holiness which they and all that preach the Gospel ought to appear with. b Remained, as far as was necessary for the founding of the Christian Religion: and was not as the gift of Prophecy bestowed only occasionally, as on Nathan, Samuel.

i Those gifts and Graces which proceeded from him. k The Apostles having them all in a more excellent manner, than formerly, and the gift of Tongues superadded. l That they were vernacular or natural to them. m That they should speak each Language in its perfection, after an Excellent, Eloquent and powerful manner; as from the holy Ghost whole works are perfect, non omne loquimur sonas.

5 And there were dwelling at Jerusalem, n Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven o.

n Not only constant Inhabitants, but such as had on occasion their Lodgings there: partly, out of a constant respect, which both Jews and Proselytes had for that place (for the Temple and their worship sake); it being also a place for Learning and Education, as appears by the Colleges and Synagogues mentioned, Chap. 6. ver. c.) But especially now the concurrence from all parts must needs have been very great; it being one of those times in which all the Males were to appear before God. To which might be added, the great expectation they had of the Messiah, made them to omit no occasion of inquiring concerning him; the Prophecies concerning the time of his coming being fulfilled, and they could not be ignorant of the many and great things concerning the true Messiah. n Whether the Jews had been dispersed in the two or three greater, or other lesser dispersions: Thus in part was fulfilled what was prophesied, 14. 4. 5.

6 Now i when this was noised a abroad, the multitude came together, and were j confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language p.

i Either the miraculous winds was heard, or the report of what had hapned was spread abroad. n Either out of fame, that they had slain Christ, whom God thus extraordinarily glorified; or out of admiration of so extraordinary a matter. p Probably, not that the same words spoken by the Apostles, were diversified according to every ones understanding: for then the miracle had been wrought in this did speak to every one in their proper and most intelligible Language; and this was the gift of Tongues, which for some time after also was continued in the Church.

7 And they were all amazed, and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans q?

q Without Literature, or good Education, they being words thought of on that account, than the ordinary sort of that Nation were; besides, they thought no Prophet was to be expected from Galilee, John 1. 46.

8 And how hear we every man in our own tongue r, wherein we were born?

r Galileans, signifies commonly a different way of speaking, or pronouncing in the same Language; as our Southern and Northern men differ in some words and pronunciation, tho speaking both the English Tongue. Gods words being most perfect, the Apostles might speak, not only the same Language, which all understood, but in the same idiom and propriety of speech, which agreed to every one best.

9 Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, s, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judea u, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia x.

s Descended from Elam, Gen. 10. 22. thought to be the Persians. u Between the two Rivers Tigris and Euphrates. x The Apostles being Galileans, spake a differing Language from the rest of the Jews, till now enabled to do. y Some particular district, at which was called, as 1 Pet. 1. 1. otherwise, as in Asia in a larger sense.

10 Phrygia, and Pamphylia, z, and in the parts of Lybia about Cyrene, and strangers y of Rome, Jews and proselytes z.

y Who came either to Jerusalem to worship, or for any other business: It is evident, that many in or about the City of Rome, had embraced the Jewish Religion; and of them it may be understood Jewish. The other mentioned, ver. 9. were such as then dwelt in Judea, there were such as lived elsewhere, only now came to worship or sojourn there. These were of two sorts, The one, z such as came over from Paganism unto the Jewish Religion, and were bound only to observe the Precepts of Noah, and enjoy'd a liberty to buy and sell, Live and Converse amongst the Jews: hence they were called Proselytes of the gate; the other were called Proselytes of Righteousness, for these were Circumcised, and took upon them the observation of the whole Law of Moses, and had all the priviledges belonging to the people of God.

11 Cretes a, and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God b.

a Such as belonged to the Island of Crete, now called Candia. b The wonderful works of God; those things which God had wonderfully wrought, especially the Resurrection of our blessed Saviour from the dead, which was a most wonderful work; and the main argument whereby the World was Converted, and unto which the Apostles bare witness.

12 And they were all amazed c, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this?

c So ver. 7. i. knoweth, they were as in an extasy, (the object was too strong for the faculty) they could not fathom the cause or reason of these wonderful things; and therefore they desire one of another to be relieved concerning them.

d Viz. The Scribes and Pharisees, and also the Inhabitants of Jarry and Jerusalem; who not understanding the Languages of other Nations, might think the Apostles did but babble, and talk idly or rudely, when they spake with other tongues. e Or sweet wine; which done, may inebriate, and might be had at that time, tho the full Vintage was not yet.

14 f But Peter standing up g with the eleven, lift up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judea h, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem i, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

f It speaks his extraordinary courage; after his stumbling and fall, he runs the faster, being recovered; and begins to verify the name which our Lord had given him, shewing himself as firm and stedfast as a Rock. g The other Apostles, probably, spake too in divers Languages; but by reason of the shortness of St. Lukes intended Narrative, and it being to the same purpose, their Sermons are omitted. h Such as came from other parts of the Country; i such as were constant Inhabitants in that City.

when they were persecuted in one City, to flee unto another, especially such as were teachers amongst them, (better, especially such as were teachers amongst them, besides the Apostles) were forced to remove from Jerusalem; and by this means, do that what was intended for places whither they came; so that what was intended for the hindrance, God did over-rule towards the furtherance of the Gospel; as he did afterwards, Phil. 1. 12. and fill does, and ever will do. d Who were commanded to stay at Jerusalem, Chap. 1. 8. there they were to make their abode, Luke 24. 47. and from thence to proceed unto other parts, Acts 2. 3. and whilst God had any work for them to do at Jerusalem, they knew that God could and would defend and maintain them in the midst of their enemies: as he had done the bush in the fire; Exod. 3. 3.

2 And e devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and f made great lamentation over him.

e It was an argument that they were devout (Religious) that they durst amongst such a multitude of persecutors, and furious Zealots, own their esteem for Stephen; it was peculiar amongst the Jews, to touch the dead Corps of such an one as was put to Death for blasphemy; and these perform such Funeral rites for him, as were used for such only as were of note and Eminency As the Jews were wont to do at the Funeral, especially of Eminent persons; thus it was done at Jacob's Interment, Gen. 50. ult. and thus had been done more lately at Lazarus's Funeral, John 11. even by our Saviour himself, ver. 31. which lamentation was the greater, because of the Churches loss at such a time.

3 As for Saul, h he made havock of the church, carrying g into every house, and b haling men and women i committed them to prison.

f Saul was a degree beyond the ordinary sort of persecutors, and was, as he does acknowledge of himself, eminently inhumane, 1 Tim. 1. 13. g House after house, sparing none. h As by the chair of their heads. i This to be sure, the Jews had yet retained power from the Romans to do: All this is but as a foil, to illustrate more the riches of Gods mercy towards Saul.

4 Therefore they that were scattered abroad, went j every where preaching the word.

j Now the partition-wall was about to be broken down, and the Gentiles to be taken into the pale of the Church; Gods providence thus frame means towards it. The Disciples are forced to fly for their lives out of Jerusalem, and have an opportunity to Preach Christ and the Gospel, whosoever they come: thus God can make light to come out of darkness, and makes Japheth to dwell in the Tents of Sem, Gen. 9. 27.

5 Then k Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached l Christ unto them.

k Not the Apostle, but the Deacon of that name; for the Apostles remained at Jerusalem, as ver. 1. 3. a name both of a City, and a country, so called from the chief City, 1 Kings 16. 24. here is taken for that City, or at least a City in that Country. l The Doctrine of Christ, his miraculous Birth, holy Life and Death, and glorious Resurrection and Ascension, together with Remission of sins, only by faith in his name, &c.

6 And the people with one accord o gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing p and seeing the miracles which he did.

o A good preparation towards their Conversion; seeing faith cometh by hearing, Rom. 10. 17. p These Miracles were as to many evidences of the truth he spake; by which he shewed Gods Authority for what he said.

7 For unclean spirits q, crying with a loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken r with palsies, and that were lame, were healed.

q This is frequently mentioned, as Matthew 8. 29. Mark 1. 26. and 3. 11. and 5. 8. Luke 4. 41. to show how loath these evil Spirits are to be forbid, and kept from tormenting and destroying of us; and they are called unclean Spirits, because they delight in sin, and inflame men unto it, which is Spiritual uncleanness, and defile the Soul; r And other diseases and infirmities; this was promised, Mark 16. 16, 17, that they which believe should cure in Christs name, or by his power.

8 And there was s great joy in that city.

s Not only for the cures wrought upon their bodies; but much more for the word of reconciliation, and Salvation Preached unto their Souls; joy in the Holy Ghost, is one of the effects of the Kingdom of God, Rom. 14. 17. one of the effects of the Kingdom of God, the formerly beloved City of Jerusalem, rejoice at the Gospel; such strange alterations does the free grace of God make.

9 But there was a certain man called Simon, which before time in the same city b used sorcery, and c bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was y some great one.

a Magical incantations, as a wizard: c Bewitched them as men in an extatic to be amazed at, and afraid of him. y As if he had been God, or at least had some great favour with him, and had received some extraordinary power from him: Ecclesiastical Histories speak much of him, and tell us that he had a Statue set up in Rome for him, Justin 1. 20. Simon the holy God.

10 To whom they all gave heed z from the least to the greatest, saying, This a man is the great power of God.

z Shewing how general their mis-perfession was, and no condition is exempt from the grossest mistakes, if not prevented by the grace of God. a The faith of this Simon, that he gave out himself to be that God, which the Nation held to be the chiefest; and that he was the Messiah of the Jews, and the God of the Gentiles.

11 And to him b they gave heed, because that of long time he had c bewitched them d with sorceries.

b They acquiesced in what he said, and yielded obedience unto it: not attending only to his words with their ears, but with their hearts: to true it, that which our Saviour says, John 5. 42. If any man come in his own name, him will ye receive. These Samaritans set up in judgment against most men, who do not thus regard what was said by Christ, and such as he hath sent. c Made them as out of their wits, they were not themselves, and could not act their reason. d Such wonders as by the permission of God, and Satans power he did.

12 But e when they believed Philip, preaching the things f concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and g women.

e Before they were baptized, being adult and strangers from the Covenant, they must first receive their right unto it, and profess their Faith in Christ, and the Kingdom of Grace, and the Kingdom of Glory, which is one and the same, being begun here; but consummated in Heaven hereafter. f Women under the Gospel are as capable of this seal of the Covenant as men.

13 Then Simon himself b believed also: and when he was baptized, he c continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the d miracles and signs e which he did.

b Simon believed with an Historical faith, that it was indeed true, that our Saviour had done Miracles, and did rise from the dead, but his faith to be sure was dead all the while; neither did he believe with his heart, or purpose to live according to the Law of Christ, which is the life of Faith. c Kept him constantly company, and was amongst the forwardest of the Professors of Christs Faith. d Thus the Magicians of Egypt were brought to acknowledge the finger of God, Exod. 8. 19. altho their hearts were hardened.

14 Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem, heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them f Peter and John.

f These were sent that they might further confirm the Doctrine which Philip had Preached amongst the Samaritans, and by Apostolical authority, constitute a Church in Samaria.

15 Who when g they were come down, prayed h for them that they might i receive the holy Ghost.

g Peter and John: h In this particular they did not pray for all that believed, amongst whom there were many women, ver. 12. Those extraordinary gifts of Tongues, of Prophecy, of working Miracles, &c. See Chap. 10. 45.

16 For p as q yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized q in the name of the Lord Jesus.

p By which it is plain that the Holy Ghost, as the Author of saving grace, is no mere meat, for so he was fallen upon all them that did believe, for faith is the gift of God; but he was not yet bestowed upon them, as the author of those extraordinary gifts mentioned, Chap. 2. 38. q 1. They were baptized by his authority and commission, Matth. 28. 19. 2dly. By baptism they now belong unto him, and are united with him, Rom. 6. 3. They are baptized into Jesus Christ, &c.

17 Then r they laid their hands on them and they s received the holy Ghost.

r That this laying on of the hands of the Apostles was not intended here, as any rise whereby the Apostles did confirm some, or ordain others, seems evident from the context. s The power of speaking with tongues, and working of Miracles; which throughout this Book is so often spoken of in this acceptance.

18 And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles hands, the t holy Ghost was given, he o offered them money.

t Those extraordinary gifts before mentioned; for this appeared visibly and audibly; and by this indeed was signified the great change Gods Spirit makes wher he comes. o This notorious Hypocrite values these outward gifts; how much more valuable are the inward and Spiritual gifts of God?

19 Saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever u I lay hands, he may receive v the holy Ghost.

u Such an extraordinary power of working Miracles, he did not desire, that he might glorify God, or confirm the truths of the Gospel, (now professed by him) but out of an insatiable desire of gain, and ambition, to keep up his reputation; seeing how the Apostles had done beyond what he was able to do.

20 But Peter said unto him y, Thy money perish with thee, because z thou hast z thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money.

y A formal exaction or curse, not only on his money, but also upon Simon himself; but always to be conditional, ver. unless he repented. z Our hearts are to be watched over; our thoughts may be exceeding sinful, as here, which made his words or desires to be so ill taken.

21 Thou hast neither a part nor lot in this matter: for b thy heart is not right in the sight of God.

a No Inheritance or share in such a thing as this, to wit, either in the receiving, or conferring the Holy Ghost; or in that eternal Life which we Preach, though hath no part in it, neither art thou fit to be a Minister of it. b The Apostle had the gift of discerning of Spirits, which is mentioned, 1 Cor. 12. 10. which might cause the exaction in the foregoing verse, and in divers other places of Scripture, 2 Tim. 1. 14.

22 c Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee.

c The only remedy and help in his (otherwise) desperate case: This is not spoken as if it were doubtful, whether true repentance should obtain pardon; but whether Simon Magus's repentance were true Repentance is a condition, under which God propoeth our pardon, and forgiveness; but it is far from being the cause of it.

23 For I perceive that thou art in d the gall of bitterness, and e in the bond of iniquity.

d The same with gall and wormwood, Deut. 29. 18. or gall and bitterness; signifying a very bad constitution, and disposition of Soul or mind. Such as may be compared unto that meat, which the gall of any Creature hath corrupted. And for Simon Magus to be in the gall of bitterness, is yet worse than to have the gall of bitterness in him; as to be born in sin, which the Pharisee upbraided the blind man with; John 9. 34. denotes more intended thereby, than that he had sin from his birth in him; this David bewails, Thus he was shaven in inquiry, Psal. 51. 5. and thus may those expressions of St. Paul be understood, of being in the gall, and being in the pit, Rom. 8. 9. This also shews, (if any feasible or outward thing could there be) what a bitter and poisonous thing sin is, no gall so bitter, no poison so deadly. Either the judgment St. Peter had threatened to deter him from sin, was this bond, or his sin itself might be rather so called; thus we read of the bonds of iniquity, Isaiah 58. 6. One sin is twisted with another; hand to be severed or broken, and draws on judgment powerfully.

24 Then f he answered Simon, and said g, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me:

f Simon Magus was convinced, that he was indeed such as the Apostle had spoke him to be; and knowing this to be powerful with God, he desires this of them. g He resigns himself to be a true penitent, being terrified with the threatening of St. Peter, ver. 20. and probably, fearing the punishment of Ananias and Sapphira might befall him; which is likely he had heard of.

25 And they when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel in many g villages of the Samaritans.

g Not only in the chief City, but in the smallest Villages, these great Apostles spend their pains; for so it was promised unto them that they should receive power to do, Chap. 1. 8.

26 And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise and go towards the fourth unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert.

h Some speak of two Gazas, one distinguished from the other, by this epithet of desert; but rather there were two ways unto one and the same Gaza, and that it was not the City, but the way unto it, which is called desert; by which difference here mentioned, the Angel admonishes Philip, not to go the ordinary road; but the more unusual road over the Mountains, which was rarely travelled over; but was now necessary to be gone in, to meet with the Eunuch; God telleth our wanderings, and ordereth our steps.

27 And he arose and went: and behold a a man b of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had c come to Jerusalem d to worship.

a The Ethiopians were the most despicable unto the Jews; and Homer calls them, Æthiops Æthiops; but God would now shew, that there is no difference of Nations with him; but in every Nation, that he worketh righteousness, that is accepted, Chap. 10. 35. k In great esteem in Courts, especially to attend on Queens, to avoid all suspicion; here that prophesy was fulfilled, Isaiah 56. 4. 5. This both in the Hebrew, and (anciently) in the Greek tongue, an Eunuch signified more largely, ver. any attending in the Chamber. l A name common to the Queens of that Country; as all the Kings of Egypt were called Pharaohs, and the Emperors of Germany are called Cæsars, m being a Prophetie, he had been to worship God in that solemn Festival of the Passover.

28 Was returning, and sitting in his chariot, n read o Esaias the Prophet.

n He had some knowledge of the true God, whom he came to worship, and he endeavours after more; and to him that thus hath, shall be given: and they that thus seek, shall find: God will rather work a Miracle, than that any that sincerely desire, and faithfully endeavour to know him, or his will, should be disappointed.

29 p Then the spirit said unto Philip, q Go near, and r joyntly thyself to sit in his chariot.

p The Spirit, either by the Ministry of an Angel, as ver. 26. or by inspiration immediately by himself. q So near thee you may speak with him that sits in it. r Stick close unto it, and leave it not.

30 And Philip s ran thither to him, and heard him t read the Prophet Esaias, and said u, Understandest thou what thou readest?

s Running to obey the Divine command, and coveting to gain a Soul: t with a loud voice; u like, to instruct some of his attendants. v Without understanding, our reading is but as the tinkling of a cymbal.

31 And he said v, How can w I, except some man should guide me? and he desired Philip that he would come up, and sit with him.

w A wonderful modesty and humility in u to greet a man: he takes well Philip's interposing; and questioning with him; he acknowledges his ignorance, and desires farther instruction, and condescends to be taught by one so much his inferior.

32 These x place of the scripture which was read, was this, He was led as a sheep to the slaughter, and like a lamb y dumb before his shearer, z he opened not his mouth:

x Gods Providence is remarkable, that this Eunuch should be reading this very Scripture, which contains fundamental truths, and which he had most need to be informed of: The words referred unto, are in Isaiah 53. 7. whether read in the Hebrew tongue; which the Eunuch might have learned of many Jews living in Ethiopia; or whether they were read out of the Translation of the Seventy, which was then in common use, is not so necessary an inquiry; both being to the same intent and purpose.

y Christ was indeed as a sheep for his patience; Not opening his mouth to defend his own cause; but especially he was as a sheep, in being a Sacrifice for us; the true Paschal Lamb that causeth the destroyer to pass from us; and yet he is our Shepherd too; to supply and preserve us, Psal. 23. 1.

a When our blessed Saviour was in his lowest condition, and the utmost degree of his humiliation; his soul being made a sacrifice for us, and suffering that defilement for a time, we had merited for ever; and his body laid in the grave as in a prison; Then b his judgment, the punishment which was inflicted upon him in our stead, was taken away; for he brak the bonds of death, and opened the prison-door: this was foretold, also in somewhat of differing expressions, by the Prophet Isaiah, 53, v. 8. c Those that shall be brought forth by this travail of his soul, are innumerable, or his own Eternal generation; (who could do such great things, as overcome death it self for us) is inexplicable; but by generation, others (more to the scope of this place) understand Christ's duration, or abiding, notwithstanding that he died; vers 2, does often signify duration; and thus 'tis an ordinary expression with the Prophet; Isaiah 24, 10, 17. From generation to generation: now none can comprehend that eternal duration of Christ who is to end, Luke 1, v. 33. d Christ acquired his glory by his suffering; his very exceeding great weight of glory, was indeed wrought for him by his afflictions, (as for us, 2 Cor. 4. 17.) his becoming obedient unto the death, was the cause why he was so highly exalted, Phil 2, 8, 9.

34 And the Eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee of whom speakest the Prophet this? f of himself, or some other man?

e The modestly inquisitive man, does get understanding; this question, (God for ordering it) brings in the discourse concerning our Saviour: f This the Eunuch might well make a question, because Isaiah himself suffered much under Manasseh.

* Math 5. 2. 35 Then Philip g opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him h Jesus.

g So they were said to do, when they began to speak of some weighty matter. h Shewing that the Prophet in that most literal Prophecy, Isaiah 53, could not mean such things of himself, nor of Tyrann, or of any other. i Things in that Prophecy are applicable unto our blessed Saviour; but to none else.

36 And as they went on their way, they came unto a & certain water: And the Eunuch said, See, * Chap 10. 47. here is water b, what doth hinder me c to be baptized?

a This water is supposed to be a Fountain in a Town called Beisfara, or a River called Eleutherus, which in that road must needs be passed over; it being otherwise very dry and water very scarce there. b Altho it was not expressly mentioned, Philip had informed this Eunuch concerning baptism, its nature, and use, which made him express such desire after it; which else he had not believed.

37 And Philip said, If thou believest d with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, e I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

* Mat 16. 16. John 6. 69. Act 11. 27. Chap 9. 20. 1 John 4. 15. and 5. 5.

d A verbal profession is not a sufficient believing, Rom 10. 10. who we can discern no other, yet God can, and will not be mocked; Philip in Gods name requires a faith with all the heart, and not such as Simon Magus had, who is said to believe, and be baptized, ver 13. e This was the only thing necessary, either then or now, if rightly understood: The Eunuch was instructed concerning God out of the Law, and was one of them that waited for his Salvation; which here he acknowledgeth to be only found in Christ, whom he owns to be the Messiah, who made his soul an offering for sin, Isaiah 53. 10. and did bear our griefs; and carried our sorrows, ver 4. and was wounded for our transgressions, Isaiah 53. for all these things Philip had told him, I was meant of our Saviour, which he did believe were to be understood.

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still; and they went down both a into the water, both Philip and the Eunuch; and he baptized him b.

a In hot Countries this was usual, to baptize by dipping the body in the water; and to this the Apostle alludes, when he tells the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 6. 11. that they are washed; but God will have mercy, and not sacrifice; sprinkling being as effectual as washing, and as significant also, representing the sprinkling of the blood of the Paschal Lamb, of which we read, Exod 12. which pre-figured the sprinkling the blood of Jesus, that Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world; and our hearts must be it by sprinkled from an evil conscience, Hebr 10. 22. It is not the more or the less of the outward Element, which makes the Sacraments effectual; but they are effectually as they are Gods appointment, and attended upon according to his will.

39 And when they were come out of the water, the g Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the Eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way h rejoicing.

g Philip was suddenly, and extraordinarily taken away from the Eunuchs sight and company, that thereby the Eunuch might be the more assured of the truth of those things which had been taught by him. h The rejoicing was the effect of his faith; being now justified, he had peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, Romans 5. 1.

40 But Philip was i found at Azotus: and passing through, he preached in all the cities, till he came to Caesarea.

i Philip was set down by the Spirit at Affod of the Philistines, which is called by the Septuagint Azotus; names of persons and places, do in track of time vary. This place had been famous for the Idol Dagon, 1 Sam. 5. 3. and for being a chief place of the Philistines, those enemies to Gods Church; but Christ when he comes, can cast Satan out of his strongest holds: This Azotus is accounted thirty four miles from Gaza.

CHAP. IX.

And a Saul yet a breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciple of the Lord, went unto the b high priest.

a St. Luke intending a narrative of the wonderful conversion of St. Paul, lets us know what manner of person he was before his conversion, that none might despise of the grace of God, who earnestly and heartily seek it. b So full of rage within, that the stream was outwardly apparent, which that inward fire had sent forth; nothing less than destruction of the Church is aimed at by its enemies; whilst Saul was one of them, he hunted after their precious life too. c Who did actually preface in their great Council, in which they did take cognizance of such matters; the blood of Stephen did not quench their thirst, but increased it; they would spill more still.

2 And desired of him letters to Damascus d to the synagogues, that if he found any e of this way, whether they were f men or women, he might bring them g bound h unto Jerusalem.

c This Council, tho it sat at Jerusalem, had a power (whether commanding or recommending) over all the Synagogues within or without Judea. d This was eminently to be called, being the way of God, and the way of Life, and the only right and true way; any profession, pervasion, or manner of life, is called a way frequently in Scripture, 1 Kings 16. 26. Job 9. 11. e It speaks their extraordinary rage, that would not spare the weaker Sex, who are generally spared on that account: f Which shews that he carried many with him to the further aggravation of his sin. g Where they had power to judge of such things, and out of which it was impossible that a Prophet should perish, Luke 13. 33.

3 And a as he journeyed he came b near c Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about d him: e a light from heaven.

a He was near to Damascus before this wonderful vision, that being struck blind he might be the sooner led thither; as also, that the miracle might be more easily and publicly known, Damascus being the chief City of Syria; and tho about six days journey from Jerusalem, inhabited by many Jews. b This was done at noon-day, the rather that the light which Paul saw, might appear to be beyond that which the Sun gives; and this light was a symbol of that inward light, wherewith his mind was now to be enlightened; as also of the purity of the Doctrine he was to preach, and holiness of his Life which he was to lead, and most probably it was caused by the glorified body of Christ, which appeared unto him.

4 And he a fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him b, Saul c, Saul, why persecutest thou d me?

a Saul fell to the earth, struck with the amazing light and terrible voice of Christ; as also with the sense of the presence of God, which he knew was the Father of David 8. 17. and 10. 9. b The name Saul is the rather mentioned, to mind him and us of his persecuting of Christ in his members; as his name-like had persecuted David who was a type of Christ: c me is his ingeminated or doubled, not only to rouse and awaken Saul; but to tell the more his love to him, and commendation of him. d Christ was in Heaven, beyond Sauls rage; but Christ and his Church make but one body; thus Christ was hungry and thirsty, Math 23. 35. And in all their afflictions he is afflicted, Isaiah 63. 9. but me is here emphatically spoken, as if our Saviour had minded him of his great love and mercy to him, in dying and suffering for him; and why then should he persecute him? e And he said f, Who art thou Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus g whom thou persecutest: h Is it hard for thee to i kick against j the pricks.

a Saul was in a great consternation and doubting, whether it was God, or an Angel. b Tho he did not intend this persecution against Christ; yet our Saviour looks upon the good or evil done unto his members, as done unto himself. c This kicking against the pricks is a proverbial speech taken either from Oxen, or Slaves, whom they hated with goads to prick on to their work, which when they kicked against, or opposed themselves to, they did not hurt the goads or pricks, but themselves; so shall all persecutors find that their mischief recoil upon themselves; Christ and his members shall be made more glorious by it: This metaphor is common in Scripture, Deut 32. 15. 1 Sam. 2. 29. d The pricks Saul had kicked against, were the Sermons and Miracles of St. Stephen and others.

6 And he trembling and astonished, said, a Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go b into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

a Saul being thoroughly humbled, and brought to resign himself wholly to God, makes this question, giving up himself as a white paper, for Christ to write what he would upon: He had thought he had done God good service, as he said many persecutors thought off from his obediency; but he is now powerfully brought off from the obediency in that persecution. b Damascus, which was near at hand, where Christ revealed his Gospel now unto him, or in the three days in which he remained blind in Damascus, ver 9. is not so certain; but it is certain that he was Agrippa Agrippa, taught immediately by Christ himself, as he testifies, Gal 1. 12. and in that without any farther instruction he was baptized, ver 17, 18. very many things might be left for Ananias to confirm him in; and God by this sending of him to Ananias, would honour his own Ordinance, and commend the Ministry and use of means, which are the power of God unto Salvation, Rom 1. 16. and thus, the God could have instructed Cornelius by the Angel which appeared unto him, Chap 10. 3. yet he is commanded to send for Peter, and to hear from him what he ought to do, Chap 10. 6.

7 And a the men which journeyed with him b, stood speechless c, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.

a In Chap 26. 14. these men are said to be fallen to the earth as well as Saul, which they might at first be, and now rise up; or rather by standing still, here is only meant, they being soley amazed, they remained in the place in which they were, without going forwards: Thus the Angel forbid Lot and his family, to stay or stand in the plain, Gen 19. 17. meaning that they should hasten forwards. b The greater difficulty, is to reconcile these words with Chap 22. 9. where it is expressly said, that these men did not hear the voice; but it is there added of him that spake unto Saul, so that they might hear the voice of Saul, as 'tis said in this place, and wonder whom he spake unto, or whate he spake unto, they not hearing the voice of him that spake unto him, as in that Chap 22. 9. it is said; and it seems very likely that they should not hear the voice of Christ, for we read not that any of them were converted; and being left in their infidelity, they were in Rome respects the more undeniable witnesses of a great Christ: in both places, then they might hear it, as 'tis said here, inarticulately, or the noise which that voice made; but not hear it articulately, or so as to understand it, as in a parallel case, John 12. 29. The people are said to hear the voice that spake unto Christ from Heaven, yet they heard so confusedly, as that they thought it had only been their thunders: To be sure, they that are converted, and they who are not converted by the word of God, may hear the word; but after a very different manner: they that are converted by it, only hearing it inwardly, (spiritually), effectually. c These Fellow-travellers with St. Paul, are said to see no man; but the expectation here imports their doing their utmost for to see him that spake: thus God made a difference, Daniel 10. 7. in the vision we read of there.

8 And Saul arose from the earth a and when his eyes were opened, he saw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

a When he opened his eyes as at other times, when he did rise to see, the glorious light had so dazzled him, that he could see nothing; thus Saul was, and all men are before their conversion: He had the shape of a man, and of one learned in the Law, when notwithstanding he is blind, and sees or knows nothing as he ought to know.

9 And he was a three days without sight, and neither b did eat nor drink.

a Some have thought that in these three days Paul had that rapture into the third Heavens, which the speaks of, 2 Cor. 12. 2. but that seems rather to have been afterwards: God would howsoever by this humble and try him, and excite his dependance wholly upon him, and that he might value his reformed sight the more. b That by fasting he might be more intent in Prayer; for fasting does prepare for Prayer; and therefore fasting and Prayer is so often put together, Math 17. 21. Chap 13. 3. In those places they could fast longer without prejudice to their health, than amongst us, as and I might add, were more willing to fast for any Spiritual advantage, than we be.

10 a And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named b Ananias, and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said c, Behold, I am here, Lord.

a He was of good repute for zeal and holiness, as appears, Chap 22. 12. but whether he was one of the seventy Disciples which our Saviour sent out, Luke 10. 1. is some will have, is not certain. b Thereby shewing his willingness to be sent in Gods message, and to do as God should bid him, as Samuel to Eli, 1 Sam. 3. 4.

11 And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street, which is called straight, and enquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul a of Tarsus: for behold b, he prayeth.

a God telleth our workings, and knoweth our abode, and mindeth his, especially in his sorrows, which was Sauls case. b He spent those three days (spoken of, ver 9. in acts of great humiliation, in which he would also not taste any food; this is revealed to Ananias, that he might not fear to go unto him; a great change, is Saul also amongst them that pray: A greater wonder than that the other Saul formerly was amongst the Pharisees.

12 a And hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias, coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

a If this verse be the words of St. Luke, containing the History, then they must be included in a parenthesis, the sense being entire without them; but they seem to be the words of the Lord continued to Ananias, telling him, how he had provided for his welcome to Saul, contrary to his expectation.

13 Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard a by many of this man b, how much evil he hath done to thy c saints at Jerusalem:

a His design and commission could not but be noised abroad. b The Disciples of Christ are called Saints, because 1. They are dedicated unto the Lord in their baptism. 2. They are called unto holiness. 3. They did then live holily, and exemplarily. 4. And to mult all that hope for any benefit by their being Disciples of Christ, &c.

14 a And here he hath authority from the chief priests, to bind all that call on thy name. b Here Ananias shews the strength of his excuse; for flesh and blood cried in him as in Moses, Exod 4. 13. send by him whom thou wilt fend.

15 But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is a a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before b the Gentiles, and c kings, and d the men and e the children of Israel.

a The whole World is Gods Fabric, and the Church, Eph. 3. 8. especially is his house; not only in the whole World, but in the whole Church: there are all sorts of utensils, some Rom 13. for higher, others for meaner uses; Saul was to be a vessel set unto honour, Rom 9. 21. into which the treasures of Gods word was to be put, 2 Cor. 4. 7. tho he was but an earthen vessel: Paul was indeed chosen by God to Preach the Gospel, Gal 1. 15. To suffer for Christs names sake, 1 Thes 3. 3. In this mystery of the calling of the Gentiles began now to spread abroad, and to be made more known, which was hid in those promises, Isaiah 49. 6. Jer 1. 10.

16 For a I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my names sake.

a He shall suffer as great things as he ever did cause, or inflict; the hatred of his own Country-men the Jews, and the fury of the Gentiles; see the catalogue of them, 2 Cor. 11. 23. And were there ever so many sufferings heaped upon one man? and yet tho all these were foretold unto him, and certainly foreknown by him; yet he would Preach the Gospel for all that; much was forgiven him, and he loved much.

* Chap. 22. 12. 17 And * Ananias went his way, and entered * Chap. 8. 17. p into the house, and q putting his hands on him, said, Brother Saul, the Lord even s Jesus that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be || filled with the holy Ghost.

¶ The house of Judas with whom Saul lodged, as ver-11. q Concerning this, see Chap. 6. 6. besides, on what may be said of this imposition of hands elsewhere: The curing of St. Paul's blindness, was one reason of putting his hands on him here, for so it was ordinarily done towards the sick or infirm; they laid their hands upon them to heal them, as it was promised that they should do, Mark 16.
18. r Saul was become Ananias his Brother, as professing the same faith, and heir of the same promise with him. s Ananias mentions what had happened to Paul in the way, that Paul might be assured that he was sent from God, for none else could have told him what had happened.

18 And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been s scales; and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.

¶ As Scales of Fish: It was no ordinary blindness, nor from any ordinary cause, and could not have been cured by common means.

19 And when he had received meat u, he was strengthened. Then was Saul certain days x with the disciples which were at Damascus.

u St. Paul could not but be much weakened with his journey, fear, grief, fasting, and constant praying; his now he takes a prudent care of his health, that he might be further enabled for the service of God, to what place soever he should be appointed. x Saul is no longer changed, but he changeth his company and acquaintance; he resorts to none of the Rabbins of the Jews, but to the Disciples of Christ; he would love any, learn of any, that had Christ for their Master.

20 And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is z the Son of God.

¶ The Apostles spake unto the Jews first, either that they might convert them, or at least take away all excuse from them. q Which doubtless he spake largely unto, also it is not here expressed; but he had an abundance in his heart, having tasted the power of the grace of God in Christ, and out of his heart his mouth spake.

21 But all that heard him were amazed, and said a, Is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests?

¶ This great change is a most unaccountable thing, and might truly cause amazement; but ex quavis lignis fit Mer-curius, cum dignis Dei fit Saturnus; Nothing is too hard for that God in whose hand Saul's heart was.

22 But Saul increased b the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, c proving that this is very Christ.

b True grace thrives by exercise and opposition: The word here used, many take to be a Metaphor from builders, who in erecting their Fabricks, fit one piece or part to another, and then bring them, and joya them together;
thus St. Paul did, in bringing forth, or quoting the promises in the Old Testament, and shewing their exacting being fulfilled in the New Testament, or in the Gospel of our Saviour Jesus Christ; and he spake with such an evidence and demonstration of the Spirit, that he did as were constrain men to be of his opinion: c Which was the sum of the Gospel.

23 ¶ And after that d many days were fulfilled, the Jews took counsel to kill him:

d God would not presently expose him to conflicts, but inore him to suffer by degrees; as also it pleased God to spare him so long night unto that place where he had wrought so great a miracle for him; the sense of which miracle the more he upon himself and others also, for he continued here three years, as may be seen, Gal. 1. 17, 18.
excepting only a journey into Arabia.

24 But, their laying wait was known of Saul:
And they watched the gates day and night to kill him.

e The Jews, who stirred up Arctas the King of Damascus against Paul, 2 Cor. 11. 32, 33. now began those things foretold, ver. 16. to be fulfilled.

25 Then the disciples took him by night, and flet him down by the wall in a basket.

f As Rebekah did the spies, Job. 2. 15. and Michael the David, 1 Sam. 17. 12.

26 And * when Saul was come to Jerusalem he * Chap. 12. 17. assayed to joyn himself to the disciples: but they were b all afraid of him, and i believed not that he was a disciple.

¶ To be admitted to intimate fellowship and communion with the Disciples, b Paul was sufficiently known by name and face at Jerusalem, and many had felt his rage; i But how could the Disciples be ignorant of his conversion so long, if it was three years after? as it seems by Gal. 1. 17.
To answer which, may be considered, 1. The great distance betwixt Jerusalem and Damascus, (six days journey) 2. The little correspondence betwixt the Kings of those places, Herod and Arctas. 3. The persecution which was at Jerusalem, might hinder the Converts of Damascus from going thither. 4. Paul might have spent a great part of the three years in his journey amongst the Arabians, of which before.

27 But k Barnabas took him, and brought him l to the apostles, and declared unto them how m he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus.

¶ Of Barnabas mention is made, Chap. 4. 26. who is thought to have been Paul's Fellow-Disciple under Gamaliel.
These Apostles, to whom Barnabas brought Paul, were Peter and James, as Gal. 1. 18. who being the Apostles of the circumcision, or having Judas under their charge, were abiding at Jerusalem, whilst the other Apostles probably were absent, being founding of Churches elsewhere.
m Some take these things to have been related by Paul, others by Barnabas, who testified these things concerning Paul.

28 And * he was with them o coming in, and * Gal. 1. 18. going out at Jerusalem.

¶ Living amongst them, and freely conversing with them;
that is, with Peter and James, and the rest of the believers, who had now no suspicion of him.

29 And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed ¶ against the Grecians:
but they went about to slay him.

¶ Hellenists, of which Chap. 6. 1. such as were born foreign parts, but of Jewish parents; these Paul chose rather to dispute with, because these had raised the persecution against Stephen, and Paul had furthered them in it; and he was very desirous to unweave that web, and present them an Antidote unto whom he had formerly given Poison; being especially concerned for their Souls, whom he had helped to destroy.

30 Which when the brethren knew, they brought him down to q Cesarea, and sent him forth to r Tarsus.

¶ There were two Towns of this name, one a Coast-Town spoken of Chap. 8. 40. the other was called Cesarea Philippi, nigh Mount Lebanon. r St. Paul's birth-place, where amongst his Relations and Acquaintance, they might hope he would be safe.

31 ¶ Then had the churches rest throughout all Judaea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and were ed-ified, and u walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the s comfort of the holy Ghost, were multiplied.

¶ When Paul was sent away, against whom they had the greater spite, as having been as zealous a persecutor as any amongst them. ¶ The Church is frequently compared to a building, and every believer to the Temple of God, 1 Cor. 3. 16. and 6. 19. which God dwells in; from whence this Metaphor is taken. u Walking is a progress, free motion, and so is building, an adding, to a building till it come to perfection; which signifies, that those believers increased daily in the knowledge of God, in true Piety and Charity, &c. s The word also signifies the exhortation of the holy Ghost, such exhortations as were given from God by the Apostles; to be sure, the comfort of the Spirit, are not without our obedience to the commandments of God; and it seems to be given here as in reality, yet the Churches were edified, and did then increase; because believers walked in the fear of the Lord; and nothing persuades more effectually to the embracing of Religion, than the holy living of such as make profession of it.

32 ¶ And it came to pass as Peter passed ¶ throughout all quarters, he came down also to the saints which dwell at Lydda.

¶ Where the Disciples that were dispersed had planted Churches, 1 Cor. 17. 13. ¶ A little Town about the west

west bank of Judaea, not far from the Mediterranean Sea.

33 And there he found a certain man named a Eneas, which had kept his bed b eight years, and was sick of the palfie.

¶ A Tis supposed this Eneas was a Jew, tho now living at Lydda; and that St. Luke here names him by the name the Grecians called him by; he being amongst his own Countreymen called Hilith. b To shew the difficulty of cure, and greatness of the Miracle.

34 And Peter said unto him, Eneas, c Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and d make thy bed.
And he arose immediately.

¶ These words are not a prayer, (who they were not spoken without Peters lifting up his heart to Christ in prayer), but a promise to this sick man of health and recovery, declaring from whom he should receive it, that he might know whom to acknowledge, and thank for it. d Our Saviour bids the sick of the palfie to arise, and take up his bed, Mark 2. 9. and so he commands the impotent man, John 5. 8. Here St. Peter bids this Paralytick to make his bed, which seems more strange, being he was commanded previously, so that now he should have no need of having his bed made, but it easily answered, that being it was only intended to shew how fully that he was cured: the making of his bed, did as much prove both to himself and others, that he was recovered, as any thing else could do.

35 And all that dwelt at e Lydda, and f Saron, saw him, and turned to the Lord.

¶ Verse 32. f Saron is the name of a City, 1 Chron. 5. 16.
but here it usually the name of a Countrey, (which the margin article actually shews) lying between Mount Zabor, and the Lake of Tiberias, a very fruitful plain, 1 Chron.
27. 29. Cant. 2. To the owning of his truth. Error (if it be fundamental) keeps us from God.

36 ¶ Now there was at g Joppa a certain disciple named h Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas: this woman was i full of good works, and alms deeds which she did.

¶ A post-tow, see Chap. 10. 5. These circumstances of places and persons, are set down to evidence the certainty of the History. h Tabitha, according to the Syriack dialect name in use amongst the Jews, and Dorcas as she was called among the Grecians; it being common for the same person to have two names, one Hebrew and the other Greek, as Thomas who was called Didymus, and Cephas who was called Peter. i She was rich in good works, which are the best riches, laid longest, and good farthest.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died: whom when they had k washed, they laid her in an upper chamber.

¶ They washed the dead, and anointed them, to fit them for their burying, and especially to shew their hope of the Resurrection; which some think St. Paul alludes unto,
1 Cor. 15. 29.

38 And forasmuch as Lydda was nigh to Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent l unto him two men, desiring him that he would not m delay to come to them.

¶ They sent for Peter, that he might come to comfort those that were concerned in the great loss of so good a woman, and it may be not without some hopes of her recovery by a Miracle from St. Peter; which is the likelier, because they so much buffet his coming to them. m She being already dead, and they preparing for her burial.

39 ¶ Then Peter arose and went with them.
When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood by him o weeping, and shewing the coats and garments which Dorcas made while she was with them.

¶ It was strange that Peter should be sent for, or that he should go on such an account, viz. to raise one that was dead; but God, who had ordered this Miracle for the manifestation of his truth and glory, so wrought in their hearts, that they did this out of faith; tho if others should think to imitate it, it would be but presumption. ¶ Here needed no mourning women to be hired; the death of this good woman was a common loss: these coats were made by Dorcas in her life time, to cloath the poor and naked with all.

40 But Peter p put them all forth, and q kneeled down r and prayed, and turning him to the body, said; Tabitha, arise. And she opened her eyes: and when the saw Peter, she sat up.

¶ Peter put them out, that he might pray the more earnestly, without distraction, or interruption; thus Elisba thru the door to him, 2 Kings 4. 33 when he prayed for the Shunammite Son. ¶ This his kneeling is mentioned, to recommend reverence in our praying unto God. r Peter by his beseeching himself unto Prayer, would shew, that he could do nothing by his own power, but must come from above; and he had every mercy, as much preciously, and by prayer, as any other.

41 And he gave her his hand, and lifted her up;
and when he had called s the saints and widows, presented r her alive.

¶ Such who had sent for him, and now were gathered together, to see what effects his prayers might have.
¶ And in perfect health, as all were that were miraculously cured; for the Lords works are perfect. Deut. 32. 4.

42 And it was known throughout all Joppa;
and u many believed in the Lord.

¶ This cure was wrought, and all the other Miracles were done, to be a means to make the Gospel to be believed, which he published, and was an undeniable proof, that this Doctrine was from Heaven; for none could do such things, unless God were with him, or rather unless God did them by him; so that this Miracle wrought by St.
Peter, did more go to the Souls of many, than to the body of this relieved woman.

43 And it came to pass, that he tarried x many days in Joppa with one Simon a tanner.

¶ The Miracle had only prepared them to receive his Doctrine, which Peter tarried some time with them, to instruct them in: The Miracle had prepared the ground, and now he takes this season to sow the seed of the word into it.

CHAP. X.

T Here was a certain man in y Cesarea, called z Cornelius, a centurion of the band a called the Italian band,

¶ In Cesarea Palestine, as it was call'd in contra-distinction to Cesarea-Philippi. z A Roman by his name; which name was ordinarily to be found amongst the families of the Scipios, and Sullas. a A Band, answers either to a Regiment amongst us, or to a Legion amongst the Romans; (this latter was far greater than the former) it was called the Italian Band, as being composed of Italian Soldiers, and might be used as a guard of the Praetorium, who dwelt at Cesarea; who was that Felix we read of, Chap.
23. 24.

2 A b devout man, and one that feared God: with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God d always.

¶ b This Cornelius was a Profitee of the gate, or such as observed the seven precepts of Noah and lived without giving any offence to the Jews. c It was a very good sign that he feared God, in that he engaged all his house to do the like, at least outwardly, which was as much as he could do;
this was spoken by God in Abrahams commendation, Gen. 18. 19. d He did not neglect the seasons of prayer, especially the time of offering the morning and evening Sacrifice; which by prayer they desired to partake the benefit of, by which Christ our Sacrifice, and his merits were figured unto them; Cornelius indeed prayed always, or at all times, taking time in a moral sense, for the seasons and opportunities for such a duty; (as we are commanded to give always thanks, Eph. 5. 20) but he could not pray always, or at all times, taking time in a natural sense; for then he must have neglected all other duties; howsoever, his indevour was to keep his heart always in a praying disposition.

3 He saw in e a vision evidently, about f the third hour of the day, an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius.

¶ Not in a dream or rapture, but sensibly and plainly.
¶ Their ninth hour, was with us about three a clock in the afternoon, being the ordinary time for the evening Sacrifice; and by consequence their time of prayer, Chap. 3. 1.
And this devout man doth not seek Gods face in vain; Cornelius had been faithful in a little, and God would give him much; rather than he should want further instruction, who had improved what he had already; God here sends an Angel, and soon after an Apostle unto him.

4 And when he looked on him, he was g afraid, and said h, What is it Lord? And he said unto him, Thy prayers i and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God.

¶ The Angel appeared in so great splendor; all admiration hath some fear with it. h This is equivalent to slaves to our neighbour; and both describe a truly good and holy man, such as Cornelius was; unto whose care this is to be applied.

36 The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: He is Lord of all.

d The word of reconciliation betwixt God and man, not only betwixt God and the Jews, but betwixt him and the Gentiles also; he had sent unto Israel by his Prophets formerly, Isaiah 57. 19. God is said to create peace to him that is at ease; the Gentile, as well as to him that is near, the Jew, Isaiah 54. 6, and that Salvation was not limited to the Jews only, might be known unto them by the examples of Melchisedech, Job, and Naaman, who did no ways belong unto them; but this was now more manifest: God Preaching this peace betwixt himself, and all Nations indifferently by Christ, 1. In his own person Preaching this, Mark 8. 11, 12, and telling them that by his death he would draw all men unto him, John 12. 32. 2dly. Christ by the Angels themselves, Luke 2. 14 through Christ by the Angels and Ministers of the Gospel, And 2dly, by all the Apostles and Ministers of the Gospel, Eph. 2. 13, 14. Speaking to the Gentiles, St. Paul says, Ye who were afar off, are made near by the blood of Christ; and it was their constant Doctrine, that there was no way into Heaven by which men could be saved, but the name of Christ, Chap. 4. 12. and that it was all one whether they were Greeks or Jews, Gen. 12. but Christ is all, and in all, Coloss. 3. 11. so that in this Doctrine, there is an exact harmony betwixt the Old and New Testament, the Prophets, and the Apostles. Christ is Lord, not of the Jews or one people only; but of the Gentiles, all Nations also, as Mat. 23. 19, 20. Rom. 8. 29.

37 The word I say you know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached.

f They had heard of the Doctrine of the Gospel by common fame and report, (which could not but spread abroad) all might know that Christ and his Apostles did Preach, tho' they might be ignorant of the particular Doctrines which they taught, and which Peter was now sent to instruct them in; or by the word, (in an usual hebraism) the matter of the Gospel may be meant, as the Life, Death, and Resurrection of our blessed Saviour, which they could not but have heard several reports of: g Who, as the Elisabeth which was promised, Malachi 4. 5 was the forerunner of the Lord.

38 How God b anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the holy Ghost, and with power, who went about doing good, and healing all m that were oppressed of the devil: n for God was with him.

k It was usual to anoint their Kings, Priests, and Prophets, unto all which Office Christ was anointed by his Father; hence called Christ, as in the Old Testament the Messiah. l The Apostle is not ashamed of this name, tho' given to our Saviour by way of contempt; he gloried in the cross of Christ. Christ was indwelt with the Almighty Spirit of God, and with the power of it. All the miracles our blessed Saviour wrought, were works of mercy, for the benefit and relief of those upon whom he wrought them; he could have wrought miracles to destroy and ruin such as would not believe in him, which he was often provoked unto; (nay, his Apostles would have had him but to permit them by fire from Heaven to destroy the Samaritans, Luke 9. 54, and he would not.) m The deliverances our Saviour so often wrought upon such as were possessed of Devils, was to shew unto them that he was come to destroy the works of the Devil, and to call him out of the Souls of men, who were Spiritually possessed by him, which also our Saviour did, so that it was a happy calamity, which brought them to Christ. n God was with our Saviour, 1. By his might and Power doing such miracles. 2. In his extraordinary love to him, Matth. 3. 17, and always hearing of him, John 11. 42, and also 3. God was with Christ, 1. John 1. 14, in the fulness of the Godhead, Coloss. 2. 11.

39 And we are w witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; p whom they slew and hanged on a tree:

o The Apostles, whom Christ had chosen to go in and out with him, and to be eye and ear-witnesses of all that was done by him, or against him. p Their killing of our Saviour, is the rather here spoken of, to shew how right fully the Jews were now to be forsaken, and that they had no cause to complain of the calling in of the Gentiles, being themselves had in such a manner rejected Christ, but else, if they had been wise, and we, all might consider, how much it cost our blessed Saviour to deliver up him for sin, and hell, Gal. 3. 13. He was made a curse for us, as Deut. 21. 23, that the blessing of Abraham might come upon us, Gal. 3. 14.

40 Him q God raised up the third day, and r shewed him openly.

q Left these Gentiles be deterred from believing in Christ, and take offence at his Cross: St. Peter Preached unto them the Resurrection, which suddenly and powerfully followed. r And this he tells them was unquestionable, as appeared by all the ways that any thing can be proved by; Christ was seen, and heard, and felt after his Resurrection; the below Disciple tells us, 1. John 1. 1, and manifested his victory over death for us.

41 Not to all the people, but unto w witnesses, chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

s Christ after his Resurrection appeared not to the wicked Jews; for being to suffer no more, his enemies were not vouchsafed a sight of him; and thus he did not manifest himself unto the world, John 14. 22. t These witnesses were the Apostles, who were chosen by God himself immediately; and the vacancy supplied by lot, which was at Gods direction, Chap. 1. 24, 26. The metaphor here used is taken from the ordinary way then in use of choosing men into offices, which is here alluded to. u Thoin the Gospel here History, we do not read that our Saviour drank after his resurrection; yet it is sufficiently implied, being he did eat, and make a meal with his Disciples, Luke 24. 30, 42, 43. John 21. 12, and eating is put in Scripture for the whole refreshment, Mat. 15. 2, compared with Luke 7. 36.

42 And he x commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is y he which was ordained of God to be the judge of z quick and dead.

x Our Saviour gave this charge to his Apostles before his Ascension, Matth. 28. 19, Mark 16. 15, Luke 24. 47, and foretold that they should execute this charge, Chap. 1. 8. y That God hath ordained to judge the world by Jesus Christ, Scripture abundantly testifies, John 5. 26, 27. 2. Tim. 4. 1. 1. Peter 4. 5. And this by our Saviour to be principally, and was given in charge by him to his Apostles, and of Christ, and by them all, because the Resurrection Preached of by them all, because the Resurrection of Christ, and the glory of his Kingdom in this world, is clouded by the blindness and hardness of men: as also, because it is of the greatest concernment unto all, that at any time hear the word of God, to be persuaded of this, that Christ, whose Gospel and word they hear, will judge them according unto it. z Such as shall be alive at the coming of our Lord to Judgment, 1. Thes. 4. 15.

43 To him a give all the Prophets witness, that through b his name whatsoever believeth in him, shall receive remission of sins.

a This our Saviour had told his Apostles, which St. Peter here Preaches to his Auditors: It was included in the very first promise recorded by Moses, Gen. 3. 15: The seed of the woman shall break the Serpents head; and to continued through all ages of the Church, to be manifest in such degrees as it pleased the wisdom of God to make it known; 'tis certain that all the ceremonial Law concerning Sacrifices, did testify this very thing; for by it it did appear, that without shedding of blood there was no remission of sin, as Heb. 9. 22, and 'tis manifest by the light of nature, that the blood of bulls and goats, could not take away sin, as Heb. 10. 4. c But through Christs name, by his sake, and by use of his merit, who died for our sin, and rose again for our justification, Rom. 4. 25. We shall receive remission of sin, Heb. 9. 13, 14.

44 While c Peter yet spake these words d, the holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

d That God might miraculously show his approbation of what Peter had said, and to assure Peter of the real Conversion of these Gentiles, which all the Jews did make such a difficulty to believe. e Such fiery tongues in a visible shape, as had appeared unto the Apostles, Chap. 2. 3, whereby the inward powerful effects of the Spirit upon their hearts, was signified what wonderful effects had in short sermon? And doubters, were practised but as sincere, and hearers as intent, now a days, as then, we should think that the hand of the Lord is not shortened.

45 And they of the circumcision which believed, were astonished; as many as came with Peter, because f that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the holy Ghost.

f Such as were not once themselves circumcised, but some of circumcised parents, who are thus called, Gal. 2. 12. g These not minding, or understanding the many predictions of the calling of the Gentiles, thought that Christ was only promised unto the Jews; and were amazed to see now such an Argument as might convince them to the contrary. g Pouring out, speaks the abundant measure in which the Holy Ghost was given unto them.

46 For they heard them speak with h tongues, and magnify God. i Then j answered Peter,

h With variety of Languages, or strange Tongues, as in the day of Pentecost, Chap. 2. 6. i An ordinary reason for speaking, tho' the first part of any Discourse. And Peter knowing that this miraculous fiery Tongues did shew, that these Men did partake of the same Spirit from whom the Apostles had received them, he makes an inference from thence.

47 Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

k This question, as Chap. 8. 36, is without question, and denies that any can forbid Water, that is in order to Baptize such as these. As if the Apostle had argued thus: They that have the Grace signified or promised, have a right unto the Seal of the promise: But these Gentiles have the Grace signified or promised in Baptism; they had the inward part, and therefore the outward part could not be denied unto them. He that hath the Inheritance, may claim the Writings, Wax, and Parchment that belong unto it.

48 And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed m they him to tarry n certain days.

m That is, in the Name of our Saviour. But this does not imply, but that they were Baptized according to our Saviours prescription, Matth. 28. 19. but the Jews by their Baptism, they were become the Lords, (and had given up their names to Jesus Christ) under which Title the Lord, not only our Saviour, but the Father who Anointed him, and the Spirit by whom he was Anointed, it is to be understood. n Cornelius and the rest of his Friends, which he caused to be present. At their entreaty he tarried there, that they might further instruct, confirm, and comfort them: (as the best have ever need to learn, and to grow in Grace and Knowledge) and by this Peter shewed that he looked upon himself and others as not bound to observe those Precepts (of the Wise Men, as they called them) forbidding them all familiarity with the Uncircumcised.

CHAP. XI.

AND the apostles a, and brethren that were in Judea, heard that the p Gentiles also had received the word of God.

a The rest of the Believers, who had not only one God to their Father, but one Church to their Mother, and were born of the same Spirit, and were fed by the same Milk of the Word of God. p This was a most incredible thing unto them who were of the Seed of Abraham according to the flesh, and were not acquainted with that Mystery that Abraham should have a Seed of his Faith, upon whom all the Promises were entailed. These looked upon the Gentiles as most execrable persons, such as the Apostle describes Ephes. 2. 12, that had no hope, and were without God, and therefore no less than a Miracle, and that well attested, as this was, could make them change their Opinion.

49 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they q that were of the circumcision, contended with him,

q They were few Jews as converted with them of the Church, and argued against them for taking in the Gentiles into any fellowship with them. But it may be that the believing Jews might for a time be very weak, and offended at it, until they were further satisfied by the following Relation of St. Peter. Till then they disputed and brought many Arguments they could against it.

50 Saying, Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.

r This is the Objection they made against Peter, That contrary to the Tradition of their Elders, and Precepts of their Wise Men, he had familiarly conversed with the Gentiles. See Chap. 10. 28. this they look upon as Pictorial, although no conversation in order to the gaining of the Gentiles unto God, was ever forbidden; but only such as might withdraw the Jews from God.

51 But Peter s rehearsed the matter from the beginning, and expounded it by order unto them, saying,

t This great Apostle condescends to the least and weakest amongst them, and gives an Account of what he had done, and the Reasons that moved him unto it, if by any means he might gain some, and confirm others.

52 I was in the city of Joppa praying, and in a trance I saw a vision, A certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners, and it came even to me.

See this whole Narration spoken to in the foregoing Chapter. u To shew that he was especially concerned in this Vision, it being for his instruction and regulation.

6 Upon the which when I had v fastened mine eyes, I considered, and saw four footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

v It speaking his great intention of mind upon it; God fo ordering of it, that it might leave the greater impression upon him.

7 And I heard a voice saying unto me, Arise, Peter, slay, and eat.

x He might now use them without any distinction indifferently.

8 But I said, Not so, Lord: for nothing y common or unclean hath at any time entered into my mouth.

y St. Peter here avoucheth, that he had lived in this ceremonial Righteousness, tho' he thought himself far from being justified thereby. z He obtained from all the appearances of that Evil.

9 But the voice answered me a again from heaven, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

a This is twice spoken to St. Peter, that it might be the more unquestionable with him and others; it seeming otherwise very strange; and it may be therefore twice by St. Luke recorded.

10 And this was done b three times: and all were drawn up again c into heaven.

For the same reason but now mentioned, That God might more abundantly manifest this Mystery of the calling in of the Gentiles, which had been so long hid. d All this was from Heaven; unto which also it tended, namely, to bring the Gentiles thither.

11 And behold, immediately there were e three men already come unto the house where I was, sent from Caesarea, unto me.

e So many sent: and such a Journey willingly undertaken, for to gain Instruction in the way of Life.

12 And f the Spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting: Moreover, these g six brethren accompanied me, and we entered f into the mans house:

g Whom they might hear testify in the same thing, that in the mouths of so many it might be established. h This Man meant, is Cornelius, concerning the entry into his House, and converse with him, the double controversy was that he was now speaking to.

13 And he shewed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter:

i Who by reason of his appearing a Man, is in Chap. 10. 30 called a Man.

14 Who shall tell thee b words, whereby thou, and all thy house shalt be saved.

b God promises that upon his obedience to this Oracle, in tending for Peter, he should tell him those things that were necessary to be known. c By him and his whole Family unto their Salvation. Whatsoever was formerly the case of such as obeyed the Precepts of Noah (as they were called) after Christ's come, and Preached unto the World, there is no other way unto Salvation, but through him.

15 And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them as it had done upon me.

d Whilst Peter was speaking, as Chap. 10. 1. e The Holy Ghost fell on them, as in the day of Pentecost, Chap. 2. 4. he had fallen on the Apostles, either visibly by fiery Cloven Tongues; or rather by extraordinarily enduing them with the Gift of Tongues; enabling the most illiterate amongst them to speak in any Language, needful for day to understand, towards their Salvation.

16 Then remembered I the word m of the Lord, how that n he said, John indeed baptized o with water; but p he shall be baptized q with the Holy Ghost.

m Of Christ, who is every where so called. n But these words seem rather spoken by St. John himself, Mark. 3. 11. Mark 1. 8. which makes no difference. For, First, Whosoever a Disciple of Christ says in his Name, it is as if it were the Power, Assistance, and Working of God expressed by the Hand; which is the Organ or Instrument of Life in Working. This Hand, or Work of God was manifested: First, in the Miracles which they wrought. Secondly, in the Conversion of any by these Miracles. Thirdly, these alone cannot soften a heart; as appeared in Pharaoh, whose heart was hardened by them. Fourthly, Faith and Conversion are wrought by the Hand of the Lord, and are the Work. But in vain is Faith pretended unto, when there is no change in Heart and Life. What God hath put together, none may put asunder.

By a resolution from the Spirit, as one of his Gifts, and not by Judicial Astrology, or any other means real or pretended. For it is a Prerogative of God only, to foresee things to come, as Iſa. 41. 22, 23. In this Famous Salm tomius and other Heathen writers make mention of the foretelling it one year, and (some in another year of Clau- g There were sixteen Soldiers appointed to keep Peter; the Roman using four Soldiers to keep Peter, and the Jews dividing their nights into four watches, there were enough to relieve the other, and to fix a new watch as often as was required for every night; of which four at a time, two were with the prisoner, and perhaps for the greater security, bound with the same chain; and two did always stand at the door or gate; and this they might the rather do, out of great caution, having heard what Miracles Peter did; and that he had been delivered by an Angel out of prison. Chap. 3. 19. b That day in which the Paschal Lamb was eat, on which the Jews would put none to death, that they might not eclipse the joy of that day. i To do with him what they would, leaving him, to their mercy; or rather cruelty.

10 When they were past the a first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate b that leadeth unto the City<sup>c</sup>, which d opened to them of his own accord, and they went our, and passed on through one street, and forthwith the angel departed from him. e A Guard or Sentinel. f The sunnith gate <sup>of the</sup> of the prison into the City, (not that the prison is <sup>in</sup> the City, but out of the City.) g Work <sup>of</sup> godhead: a series of miracles in their fit place and time; he could have done any all, so he conducted Peter through the first, then through the second watch; but it is good for Peter and us, to be convinced, that we stand every moment in need of Gods conduct and deliverance.

11 And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

12 Out of that amazement, which so many wonderful things had wrought in him, that he could compose himself to reflect upon what he had heard and seen; he knew his deliverance was real and effectual. From Herod who had resolved to have killed him, as he had done James, ver. 2. and from the peoples expectation, who had heard the report of Herods resolution, and longed for the fulfilling of it.

13 And when he had considered of the things, he came to the house of Mary the mother of John, whose surname was Mark, where many were gathered together, praying.

14 Peter being delivered, meditates upon the greatness of the danger that he had been in, and the goodness of God that had delivered him, and this whilst walking in the street, and going along; no place can exclude good thoughts, and holy meditations. The Mother is here described by the Son, as the more known person; here the parent gains reputation, and to be remembered in this Scripture for her Sons sake. Thus a wife Son made a glad Mother, as Prov. 10. 1. Some think, this was the wife that wrote the Gospel called by his name. In this time of persecution the Christians met secretly, and in small numbers as they could; these here mentioned, are thought to be private Christians, because it appears by the 17. ver. that James, &c. were not there.

15 And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to him to hearken, named Rhoda.

16 This was the outwardmost door to the Porch, or Court before the house. Being in a great fear of a surprisal, they ordered one to observe, and give an answer unto any that should come to the house; which was her Sons sake. Thus a wife Son made a glad Mother, as Prov. 10. 1. Some think, this was the wife that wrote the Gospel called by his name. In this time of persecution the Christians met secretly, and in small numbers as they could; these here mentioned, are thought to be private Christians, because it appears by the 17. ver. that James, &c. were not there.

17 And when the knew Peters voice, the opened not the gate for gladness, but ran in and told how Peter stood before the gate.

18 As one from her self, not knowing what to do for gladness; great and sudden passions, have caused friends estranged, and death it self sometimes. The Spirits in grief flowing too fast unto the heart to fortify it, and in joy leaving the heart as fast, to meet the object that caught it.

19 And they said unto her, Thou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. Then said they, It is of his angel.

20 Thou speakest thus knowest not what; thinking her, out of fear to have been discomfited in her mind. Some have thought, that by Peters Angel, no other was meant than Rhoda, Messenger from Peter, which they might expect from him in such a case as he was in; now Rhoda, (the word here signifies a Messenger or an Angel, indifferently, yet how could Rhoda then know it to have been Peters voice? A messengers voice being no more like his than that of him, than another mans. They did probably mean, some Angel that had assumed Peters shape, and imitated his voice. And the Jews having had a constant opinion, that at least every good man hath a guardian Angel, which God appoints to him for a means of his preservation, might be apt to imagine, that this was that Angel, whose charge St. Peter was, Mat. 18. 10. who then Angel looked on, Gr. 18. 16. most probably was the Angel, of the New Covenant, and not a created Angel, being flesh and blood in his name; yet the opinion of tutelars Angels, tho' not certain or needful, is to this day thought probable.

21 But Peter continued knocking: And when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished.

22 Peter might be unwilling to have his entrance into the house deferred, 1. Out of fear of being taken again, and his life concerned upon it. 2. Out of an earnest desire to see his brethren, whom he might hope to meet with there. 3. Out of zeal to declare the mercy of God towards him; this fire was kindled in him, and he fought vent for it.

17 But he beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, declared unto them how the Lord had brought him out of the prison. And he said, Go shew these things unto James, and to the brethren. And he departed, and went into another place.

18 It was usual by the motion of the hand, both to desire silence, and to crave audience. Peter gives God the glory, tho' an Angel had been the means of his delivery. This James was the Son of Alphaeus, Mat. 10. 3. Mark 3. 18. and succeeded the other James, (the brother of John, of whom ver. 2.) in governing the Church at Jerusalem. Peter could not but know he should be sought after, and therefore durst not abide in one place, lest he should ruin himself, and endanger his friends that should harbour him. Thus the great Apostle, as David formerly, was hunted, as one hunter a partridge in the mountain, 1 Sam. 26. 20.

19 Now as soon as it was day, there was no small stir among the soldiers, what was become of Peter.

20 The Soldiers, who were bound with Peter in the same chains, could not but miss him as soon as they did awake, and with admiration find the chains still holding them, tho' loosed from Peter. What strange imaginations they might have, is not to be expressed, tho' some guess at it.

21 And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, he examined the keepers, and commanded that they should be put to death. And he went down from Judea to Caesarea, and there abode.

22 That is judicially; proceeding against them for the escape of St. Peter. They were sentenced to be laid away, and his most probably thought, unto the place of execution. The instruments in persecution, God many times meets with in this world; and sometimes by the persecutors themselves.

23 And Herod was highly displeased with them of Tyre and Sidon: but they came with one accord to him, and having made Blastus the kings chamberlain their friend, desired peace; because their country was nourished by the kings bounty.

24 These were two coast Towns in Phoenicia; famous, especially the former, for her great trading; and being rich, might be insolent, or possibly might tempt Herod to war against them, whose conquest would pay the charge of it. Or chief of his Bed-chamber: or begged pardon; there being no war yet begun. b These Cities lying upon the Sea, had little land belonging to them, and of old were forced to have their provision from other places, especially from Judea; thus Solomon gave Hiram (King of Tyre) twenty thousand measures of wheat for his household, and twenty measures of pure oil yearly, 1 Kg. 5. 9, 11. and long after that; they of Judah and Israel are said to have traded with their wheat in Tyre, Ezek. 27. 17.

25 And upon a set day, Herod arrayed in droyal apparel, sat upon his throne, and made an oration unto them.

26 This was (says Josephus cap. 19. lib. 7.) the second day of the sports or games, which Herod had instituted in honour of the Emperor Claudius; or it may be such a day as Herod had appointed to determine the difference in, between him and the Tyrians. d Such, faith Josephus, as were made of Silver, woven with extraordinary art, and did reflect strangely the beams of the Sun shining upon it: and varied place, from whence he might the better be seen and heard.

27 And the people gave a shout, saying, It is the voice of a god, and not of a man.

28 The impious flatterers destroy whom they exalt; for God will pull down his idols.

29 And immediately the angel of the Lord smote him, because he gave not God the glory: and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost.

30 An Angel had delivered Peter; and here an Angel destroys Herod; all that have overly built upon Gods will for the deliverance of his Church, and the destruction of his enemies.

31 Priding himself in the acclamation the people had made, and not attributing his eloquence and glory to God, as the giver of them; or rather not repressing or punishing their blasphemy; whereas Peter durst not accept of undue honour from Cornelius, Chap. 10. 26. nor did Angel from St. John, Rev. 19. 10. and 22. 9. b These Angels from the Spirit, as the most probable way, as the manner; as its recorded of Herod the great, that he was eaten eaten up of Lice. No Creature so little or contemptible, but it can execute Gods Judgments on whom he pleases.

24 ¶ But * the word of God grew and multiplied. d The Word of God is compared here to Seed, as in our Saviours Parable, Mat. 13. 19. The number of believers multiplied through the Word, which was sown as Seed is scattered abroad. So true it is, that Persecution by their pulling down of the Church, do but build it up.

C H A P. XIII.

NOW there were in the church that was at Antioch, certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called ¶ Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul.

28 The true Church, which hath a being, and whose builder and master is God. Other Churches (as that of the Circumcision) are no Churches or Congregations of the Faithful. ¶ These two Offices might be in the same person, as he that had the Gift of Prophecy, had in the same person things to come, might be a teacher to instruct the People; but yet they were frequently appertaining to several persons, one excelling in one Gift, another in another. ¶ And Simeon this distinguished from Simon Peter, and from Simon the Canaanite, this name of Niger being given him by the Romans. ¶ This hath been thought the name of Luke, it being more after the Latin termination; and that it might be he that wrote the Gospel called by his name, and this Book of the Acts. Howsoever we meet with this name, Rom. 16. 21. And St. Paul sends salutation unto him that was so called. Born at a place so called, or brought up in the Synagogue of the Cyprian. Of which Chap. 6. 9. Either this Manaen was Herods Foster-Brother, or had the same Tutor and Instructor with him. Their Education being together. This Herod was Herod Antipas, who set at naught our Saviour, and killed the Baptist. And yet Manaen, as another Mark, kept his integrity in that Pharisees Court, and Mat. 23. 15. he chose rather to suffer affliction with the People of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Thus there was an Obadiah in Ahab's House, 1 Kg. 18. 3. and divers believe in Neros Family, Phil. 4. 22.

29 As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the holy Ghost said, ¶ Separate me o Barnabas and Saul, for the work whereunto I have called them. ¶ The word Importeth the exercise of any public Office, Sacred or Civil. But in the former verse mention being made of Prophets and Teachers, these words are said to conjoin d with them, and informs us, that whilst they were Preaching, teaching, and instructing of the People, (for there is no Ministry or Service which God likes better than to convert and save Souls) and that all might be more effectual, as being done with greater earnestness and intention of mind, whilst they fasted. ¶ The Holy Ghost by some inward instinct in those Prophets before spoken of, who had warrant to declare it as from him. ¶ These two were to be separated as the first-born under the Law, Ex. 13. 12. and after them, or in their stead, the Levites, Numbers 3. 12. So were Saul and Barnabas in special manner separated for the calling of the Gentiles, that great Ministry or Service which God had for them to do.

30 And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

31 A good preparation to enter into any business with, whereby they acknowledged that all success must come from God. Our Blessed Saviour himself would not enter into his Ministry till he had fasted four days, Mat. 4. 2. as compared with the 17th. ¶ Barnabas and Saul being called to be Apostles already. This laying off of their hands upon them signifies, First, Their being set apart to this particular employment they were now to be sent a-bout. Secondly, The Approbation of the Church to their Heavenly call they had. Thirdly, Their praying for Gods Blessing upon them, and Success upon the work they went for.

32 ¶ So they being sent forth by the holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to Cyprus.

33 A Sea-town of Cilicia, high unto Antioch, and over-against Cyprus, built by Seleucus, and was a Town of some note, but mentioned here only as in their passage to Cyprus.

34 And when they were at Salamis, they preached the word of God unto the Jews in the Synagogues of the Jews: and they had also John to their Minister.

35 The chief City of Cyprus, now called Famagusta, situate on the East-side of the Island, over-against Syria. ¶ They preached here, and elsewhere in the Synagogues, either because they found no such convenient places to preach in; (the being large Structures, and many resorting to them;) or rather, because tho' they were sent unto the Gentiles, yet it was not till after the Jews should have refused the Gospel, as may be seen throughout all this Book, and in the conclusion of it, Chap. 28. 28. as Chap. 12. 25.

36 And when they had gone through the Isle unto Paphos, they found a certain sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Barjesus:

37 This City was on the West-end of Cyprus. So that going from Salamis they went through the Island; this place was famous for the worshipping of Venus. ¶ There were many Magicians about this time amongst the Jews, who by their false Miracles endeavoured to bring the Jews, and Sorcerers of Egypt, by their enchantments for a while, did seem to do such wonders, as Moses had wrought by the Finger of God, Exod. 7. 11.

38 Which was with the deputy of the country Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired ¶ to hear the word of God.

39 Whether he was Pro-Consul, or Proprietor, it is in effect the same; for he was that Governed the Island. ¶ This desire was extraordinary, and wrought by God, in order to the fixing him for the further mercy of his Conversion, and Salvation; where such a desire is, it shall be granted: ask, and ye shall have, Luke 11. 9.

40 But ¶ Elymas the sorcerer (for so he is called by interpretation) withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith.

41 This is another name of him that was called Barjesus, which was not unusual, as Simon Bar-Jonah, Mat. 16. 17. This Elymas; may be taken appellatively, and signifies the Magician or Sorcerer; but being it was a proper name unto others we read of, it may be so here.

42 Then Saul (who also is called Paul) filed f with the holy Ghost, set his eyes on him, 43 It is observable, that St. Luke never before called this great Apostle by the name of Saul; and henceforth never calls him by the name of Saul; tho' there be no great difference in these names. Saul might be more acceptable to the Jews, amongst whom hitherto he had converted. And Paul a more pleasing name unto the Gentiles, unto whom he was now sent, and with whom for the future he should converse. He was called Saul as he was a Jew born, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; and Paul as he was a Denizen of Rome. The Romans having that name in good account in general of their chief Families; ¶ Zeal for Gods Glory, and Faith and Power to work the ensuing Miracle.

44 And said, O fellow of the devil, thou enest michief; ¶ thou art child of the devil, thou enest michief; and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness; and he went 46 ¶ To make the way of God crooked, which is straight; and rugged, when indeed it is smooth; that is, to lay what rule he could, to keep any from coming unto, or continuing in the way of God.

yet God over-ruled these very divisions betwixt Paul and Barnabas, for his own Glory, and the enlargement of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ. Several places being by this means blessed with the Gospel. And this reflection upon this John Mark, is thought to have made him for the future more diligent and valiant in the cause of the Gospel, which occasioned that kind Salutation from St. Paul unto him, Coloss. 4. 10. An Island in the Mediterranean Sea.

40 And Paul chafe Silas, and departed, being recommended by the brethren unto the grace of God.

The favour of God, as Chap. 14. 26. which the wife and holiest Men stand in need of in all their undertakings; as also his gracious conduct and assistance.

41 And he went through Syria, and Cilicia, confirming the churches.

Where there were several Brethren by reason of the dispersion that was upon Stephen's death, Chap. 11. 19. and 15. 23. unto whom also the fore-recited Letter was wrote, putting them in mind of the Gospel of Christ, which they had heard and believed; and encouraging of them to persevere in the profession of it, and being ready to answer any Objection that could be brought against it.

C H A P. XVI.

Then came he to a Derbe and Lystra: And behold, a certain disciple was there, named b Timothy, the son of a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and b believed; but his father was a Greek:

Of these Cities see Chap. 14. 6. Who was known unto Paul from his Childhood, 2 Tim. 1. 5. and accompanied him in many Journeys, 2 Tim. 3. 10. and being by him, his work-fellow, Rom. 16. 21. c Called Eunice, d Being one of them that had believed in Christ in Judea, and had a holy Woman to her Mother, named Lois. Altho it was not lawful for a Jew to marry a Woman of another Nation, yet some think that a Jewess might marry to a stranger, as Ephraïm married to Asaphus, e Of Gentile extraction, and therefore not Circumcised; yet he is accounted to have been a Profelyte.

2 Which was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium.

The Timothy was well known unto Paul, yet ye would not Ordain him without the testimony of others concerning him, of his holy life, and knowledge in the Scripture, 2 Tim. 3. 15. which he did excel in.

3 Him would Paul have to go forth with him; and took and circumcised him, because of the Jews which were in those quarters: For they knew all that his father was a Greek.

Who could not yet be perwaded that the Law of Circumcision was abrogated. Paul who became all things to all Men (that he might save some) Circumcised Timothy that he might not offend the Jewish Converts, 1 Cor. 9. 22. but would not Circumcise Titus, Gal. 2. 3. lest that he should harden them, and offend the Gentiles. These different things require a single Eye, to the Editing of the Church, and the Salvation of Souls. b Timothy was uncircumcised, altho his Mother was a Jewess; for according to their Tradition, the Mother could not cause her Child to be Circumcised against the mind of the Father.

4 And as they went through the cities, they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the a apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem.

The determination of the Council, mentioned Chap. 15. 20, 29. k By common consent, and not of one only, whosoever he were.

5 And so were the churches established in the faith, and m increased in number daily.

Being rightly perswaded in the nature and use of things indifferent; and in general of things necessarily to be believed. m So that this visitation of the Churches had a double benefit. First, It strengthened them that were already converted. Secondly, It added more unto their number.

6 Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia, and the region of Galatia, and were a forbidden of the holy Ghost to preach the word in p Asia.

Phrygia and Galatia were parts of Asia minor. They were forbidden of the Holy Ghost by divine Revelation, (the manner is not known). p For that time, tho afterwards Paul preached there about two Years together, Chap. 19. 10. Thus God (the great Householder) orders the Candle to be removed from one Room unto another; sends, or takes away the Light of the Gospel, to whom; and as often as he pleaseth. Our Calling, as well as our Election, is free; and we may say for our Saviour, Math. 11. 26. Even so Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight.

7 After they were come to q Myfia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not.

A little Country near Troas. r Another Province nigh unto the same place, over-against Thracia, bordering upon the black Sea. s The Spirit of Jesus, or of God, as some Copies read. t The Journeys of them that preached the Gospel, as well as their words, were directed by God; they might not say, Do, or Go, but according to the will of God.

8 And they passing by Myfia, came down to u Troas.

u Either the relics of the famous City of Troy; or, the Country thereabouts, in which the City of Anigenia was built.

9 And a vision appeared to Paul in the night: There stood w a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over unto Macedonia, and y help us.

An Angel in the appearance and likeness (in habit and demeanour) to one of that Country. x A Grecian Province in Europe, extending to the Archipelago. y As to our Souls with the saving Light of the Gospel; God sends the Ministers of the Gospel to help such as would otherwise perish; with the Gospel, Salvation comes.

10 And after he had seen the vision z, immediately a we endeavoured to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering, that the Lord had called us for to preach the Gospel unto them.

As soon as Gods will was manifested, they make no delay, not objecting against the Journey. s The Luke, the Penman of this Book was one of them that went, (they were Paul, Silas, and Timothy) and therefore speaks in the Plural Number.

11 Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to b Samothracia, and the next day to c Neapolis;

An Island so called, because the Inhabitants came partly out of Thrace, and partly from Samos. d This Neapolis was a City in the confines of Thrace and Macedonia.

12 And from thence to d Philippi, which is the e chief city of that part of Macedonia, and f a colony: and we were in that city abiding certain days.

A City so called from Philip the Father of Alexander the Great, who repaired a ruined Town, and caused it to be called by his name. e Or the first City in the passage from Samothracia unto Macedonia. f Where many Roman Citizens went to inhabit: and whose Inhabitants had the freedom of the City of Rome. To the Church in this City Paul wrote an Epistle.

13 And on the sabbath we went out of the city by a river side g, where prayer was wont to be made; and we late down, and spake unto h the women which resorted thither.

In those places where there were not enough to build a Synagogue, or could not obtain leave to do it, the Jews in those Countries chose more private places to meet in, which usually were near Rivers, or by the Sea-side, removed from the noise and observance of the Multitude; and these places were called Prædicules, from the Prayers which were usually made there; and to one of these Paul and the rest went, taking that occasion to meet with them whom they might preach the Word of Life unto. The Women are here named, as being more numerous in those Oratories, or such as most willingly heard and attended unto what was spoken.

14 ¶ And a certain woman named i Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of k Thyatira, which l worshipped God, heard us: whose m heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.

So called from the Country of that name, the being born in Thyatira. k A City therein, and now lived in her Family at Philippi. l Being a Profelyte, and one of them who had left the Heathenish Idolatry, and owned the only, and true God; but as yet unacquainted with the Gospel of his Son our Saviour. m Heart, in Scripture sense, signifies both the Understanding and the Will: thus with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, Rom. 10. 10. Her understanding was enlightened, her heart changed; the now loved what she before hated, and hated what before she loved. n This was the Lords work: according unto what our Saviour himself had said, John 6. 37, 44. No man can come unto me, except the Father, which hath sent me, draw him. o We may in a sense open our hearts; by using such means as God hath promised to succeed for that purpose, Revel. 3. 20. and especially when in a sense of our inability and necessity, we implore the free Grace of God, and engage him to work in us according unto all his good pleasure. Otherwise creating a clean heart within us, he called, Psalm 51. 10. is beyond the power of Nature. p Hearing is an instructive sense, and Faith cometh by it, Rom. 10. 17. but it must then be accompanied with attention.

15 And when she was baptized p, and her household, she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house and abide there. And q she constrained us.

When Lydia had right to Baptism, by reason of her Faith in Jesus Christ, all her Family, whom she could undertake to bring up in the knowledge of Christ, were admitted to that Ordinance also; as all the Servants, and such others as were born in his House, or bought with his Money, were Circumcised with Abraham, Gen. 17. 12. 13. Now the Gospel does not contract in any respect, but enlarges the privileges of Believers in all things. And if they might under the Law have their Children and Servants admitted into a Covenant with God (which could not but rejoice Religious Patents and Masters, who value the Relation they and theirs have to God, above all Earthly things) surely under the Gospel none of our Families are excluded, unless they wilfully exclude themselves. g As the two Disciples that were going to Emmaus constrained our Saviour, Luke 24. 29. with all earnest intreaties, and loving violence.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, as we went to pray, r in Phylippi, a certain damsel, possessed with a spirit s of divination, met us, which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying:

Towards the place where their publick Prayers was usually made. t Or, of Phylippi, the name of Apollo, from the place where he was worshipped (which was afterwards called Delphi) and from whom all Evil spirits, that pretended to Divination, were called Phylippi; as that the Woman made use of to delude Saul by, 1 Sam. 28. 7.

17 The fame followed Paul, and us, and cried, saying, t These men are the servants of the most high God, which shew unto us the way of salvation.

The Devil might be forced by God to confess this; or, he might do it voluntarily by Gods permission: First, To draw men on to believe him in other things, being he commended the Servants of God, and spake the truth in this. Secondly, That by flattering of St. Paul, he might puff him up, and occasion him to sin. But an Evil spirit (or an Evil Man) when he dissembles as if he were good, is then worst of all.

18 And this she did many days. But Paul being grieved, turned and said to the spirit u, I command thee, x in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And he came out the same hour.

St. Paul was grieved; either, for the Maids sake; who suffered to much by her being possessed with this spirit; or, for their fakes who were seduced by him. w St. Paul (as our Saviour had done, Mark 1. 25.) refused the testimony of the Devil; for he being the Father of Lies, John 44. makes every thing he says to be suspected; as 'tis an usual punishment of Lyars, that they are not believed when they speak the truth; and the Devil never speaks any truth, but with an intention to deceive. x By the Authority and Power of Christ.

19 ¶ And when her y masters saw that the hope of their z gains was gone, they caught Paul and Silas, and drew them into the || market-place, unto the a rulers.

For she was a servant, or slave; and being very advantageous, might have many that had a share in her. z The profit could not but be considerable, for they were to come with the rewards of divination in their hands; as they did to Balaam, Num. 22. 7. a See the next Verse.

20 And brought them to the b magistrates, saying, These men c being Jews, do e exceedingly trouble our city,

The same who are called Rulers: and the word here shews, that they were under the power of the Sword, and ruled by the Romans; tho the Rulers spoken of in the former Verse, might be the Civil Magistrates of the City, and the Magistrates here mentioned might be the Commanders of the Forces therein; they carried them, as they did our Saviour, from one to the other, the more to disgrace them, and to obtain the greater punishment for them. e They mention their being Jews, because it was a most odious name unto all Men, by reason of their different Opinions in Religion, and diversity of manners in conversation from all.

21 And teach customs which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe; being d Romans.

d There was at Philippi, as appears, Verse 12. a Colony of the Romans; and they were governed by their Laws, by which they might make no innovation in Religion, without the consent of the Senate, and afterwards of their Emperors; which here their persecutors alledge.

22 And the e multitude rose up together against them: and the magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them.

Generality, and Unanimity alone, cannot Authorize Opinions or Practices. f Pauls and Silas's Clothes, to disgrace them the more, or in order unto their being scourged, the some think that the Magistrates rent their own Clothes in detestation of the pretended Blasphemy which was laid to Pauls charge; as the High Priest did, Mark 14. 65.

23 And when they had laid g many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison, charging the h Jaylor to keep them safely.

Partly, by the Licentious Executioners; and partly, by the furious Rabble. b This Jaylor (of whose Conversion we read hereafter) his name was Stephanas, as may appear if you compare 1 Cor. 1. 16. with what follows by St. Luke in this Story. Of him also we read, 1 Cor. 16. 15, 17.

24 Who having received such a charge, thrust them into the i inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.

Thus they dealt with Joseph, Gen. 39. 20. compared with Psalm 105. 18. and with Jeremiah, and with John Baptist. Sanctum fori est, et non molite foras.

25 ¶ And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang i praises unto God: and the prison heard them.

No time or place where Prayer is not acceptable unto God, and prevalent with him: nay, it finds the sweetest when on the Waters of affliction a good Man pours it forth unto God. j That they were counted worthy to suffer for Christ: And being all things are over-ruled for the good, and conduce to the advantage of them that are good, Rom. 8. 28. they owe unto God thanks for all things through Jesus Christ; which is also required of them, Ephesians 5. 20.

26 ¶ And suddenly there was a k great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately e all the doors were opened, and every ones bands were loosed.

How soon is Prayer answered, when thefulness of times come? So might this Word unto all that call upon him, Psalm 34. 17. & 135. 18. n An Earthquake did usually precede some wonderful matter; as Mark. 28. 2. And altho God could have delivered these his Servants without an Earthquake; yet to shew the more that their deliverance was his Work, and it was no artifice, or force of their own, he manifested his Power after this manner. o Either, by God himself immediately, that the Apostles and others might know, that the Souls of Men should be unloosed and set free by them, whose Bodies for this purpose were now freed by God.

27 And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison-doors open, he drew out his sword, and would q have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled.

By the Earthquake, which being upon an extraordinary occasion, could not fail to do all that God intended by it. q For fear of suffering a more cruel death for all Jailors, who let any Prisoner escape; were to suffer the same punishment that the Prisoners were thought to have deserved; and self-murder was very ordinary amongst both the Romans and Grecians. But whatsoever their Philosophers have said of it, it must needs have been a very great provocation against God, to shew so great an aversion from Gods Will, disposing of them, and to do worse by them in the Way to come. Men must have had comforts, and take divine resolutions; that come to this once.

¶ Moved, and charmed, being highly affected with divers passions, 1. With grief for so leaved, and yet blind and miserable a place. 2. With zeal, and an holy desire to instruct and inform it. 3. With anger and indignation against the idolatry and sin that abounded in it. 4. As for the marginal reading full of idols. For we read, that there were more idols in Athens, than in all Greece besides; and that it was easier to find a God there (that is, an idol) than a man; y<sup>e</sup> Images being as numerous as their inhabitants.

¶ As ver. 2. still giving the Jews, if there were any, the priority; or having by that means an opportunity to speak unto the Proletyds of the Commons. Who are the devout persons here meant, see Chap. 13: 42. Because of the concourse thither; throwing the Net of the Gospel where there were most Fish; and he himself preaching, as he exhorted others to do, in Iteon and out of Iteon, 2 Tim. 4: 2.

18 ¶ Then certain u<sup>o</sup> philosophers of the Epicureans, and of the Stoicks, encountered him: And some said, What w<sup>ill</sup> this <sup>blab</sup>ler say? Other some, He seemeth to be a fether forth of s<sup>c</sup> strange gods: because he preached unto them y<sup>e</sup> Jesus, and the resurrection.

¶ Both these sects of Philosophers were the most opposite to Christianity of all others: 1. The Epicureans (so called from one Epicurus) did generally deny, that the World was made, or that it is governed by God; as also, that there were any Rewards or Punishments for men after death, holding nothing to be good but what was to their senses: And if so, were indeed finer re- than men. 2. The Stoicks were so called from the place where they met at first; and held as bad Opinions as the other did; and denied, that their Wife men were inferior to their Gods; and in some respect preferred them before their Gods; which their Sense was not free from, Eph. 3: 73. And no wonder if such men oppose the Gospel what they may. ¶ They make Paul to contem- pte, comparing him to such as live by the off-hand of Catech, which was used to be gathered up as they fell down, and left to be fed upon by the meanest and poorest of the people. ¶ They might amongst the Athenians bring in by public Authority as many Gods as they would, but none out of their private Opinions; which was the fault charged upon Socrates. ¶ So ignorantly, or maliciously did they pervert St. Paul's words, that they accuse him for making the Resurrection a God too. Probably they heard him often naming the word, and magnifying it the Resurrection, as without which, we were without hope.

19 And they took him, and brought him unto Arcopagus; saying, May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?

¶ The City of Athens was divided into five Wards, or parts; one of which was called Arcopagus, from the Temple of Mars, which stood upon an hill in it; high unto which Temple, or in some part of it, was their chiefest Court kept; and here they judged of all Religious Affairs: here they condemned Diogenes, Protagoras, and Socrates; and hither they bring Paul, who rather to enquire of him (there being the resort of Learned men) concerning his Doctrine, than to condemn him for it.

20 For thou bringest certain s<sup>c</sup> strange things to our ears: we would know therefore what these things mean.

¶ The greatest Objection which these men had against the Gospel, was that it was strange and new. That it was new, was apparent, it having been in the Old Testament (as the ripe fruit is in the blossom) so long ago; and their own Superstitions were but so many Apish imitations of God's Worship. And these things were strange unto them, they might thank themselves, who had not made due enquiring after them; and had by their not improving the light of Nature, provoked God to withhold further manifestations unto them, Rom. 1: 24, 28.

21 For all the Athenians, and s<sup>c</sup> strangers which were there, spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell or to hear some new thing.

¶ Which must needs have been a considerable number, Athens being then a famous Haven-Town and University; and these strangers might easily take this inch after. News from the Natives, who are noted for it by Thioplareus, Demetrius, &c.

¶ See ver. 19. d Sometimes this word is taken in a good sense; many then, as now, taking Superstition to be Religion. But it is often taken in a bad sense. Thus Thioplareus says, that a truly pious man is a friend of God; Ida Demetrius Abas &c. Ida; but the superstitious man is a flatterer of God. Now this word being then of a kind of middle signification, the Apostle would seem to bear too hard upon the Athenians, who were devout and religious, according to the measure of their knowledge, and whom he desired to win by love and gentleness.

23 For as I passed by, and beheld e<sup>o</sup> your i<sup>o</sup> de-<sup>Or, Godlike</sup> votions, I found an altar with this inscription, <sup>ye</sup> <sup>Or, saying</sup> TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom there-<sup>That</sup> fore ye g<sup>r</sup> ignorantly worship; him declare I unto you.

¶ Any thing unto which Divine Worship and Honour is given. ¶ It is Hebrew. This is a Plaque, when the Athenians had wearied themselves with their supplications unto all the gods of their Country, they were directed by Epimenides (a devout man amongst them), to erect an Altar unto that god who had the power over that Dilect, whosoever he was; which because they did not know, and would be sure not to omit in their devotions, they erected an Altar unto him under the Name of the Unknown God. Some say, there was a more general Inscription, To the Gods of Athens; the Inscription the Apostle mentions in the singular Number, might be usual: for the Athenians, who entertain'd all manner of Gods, fearing lest there should be any which they had not heard of, for their greater security, as they imagined, would have an Altar for such also. Now this Unknown God, St. Paul says, which was worshipped by them, was the true God; For, 1. They had an apprehension, that Christ was the true God, whilst that wonderful Eclipse at his Death was effectually considered amongst them. Hence it is said, that Dionysius cried out, Deus ignotus in carne pascit. Now the unknown God, suffers in the Flesh. 2. The God of the Jews, whose Name the Jews took to be so inestimable, that they would not undertake to speak it; and who was not wholly unknown to Plato and Pythagoras; and who is truly invisible and incomprehensible, might upon that account be thus filled amongst them.

24 God that made the world, and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, s<sup>c</sup> dwelleth not in temples made with hands.

¶ This seems to be directed against the Epicureans, who held, that the World was without beginning. As if he should be tied to them, or circumscribed by them: Yet God did in some respect dwell in his Temple, where he did manifest himself more clearly than in other places: But that was a type of Heaven, the Throne of God.

¶ God is not worshipped or served by holy men, because he wants their service, or any thing that can be offered unto him by them; but because it is their duty and advantage to be employed in his service and worship, Eph. 5: 10. 11. I. The breath of life, Gen. 2: 7. And in this respect God is called the God of the spirits of all flesh, Numb. 16: 22. as the cause of life and breath in all creatures, but especially in man, which made that charge to be great against Balaazar, Dan. 3: 23, 24, that his breath was in Gods hand; and yet he had not glorified him.

26 And hath made of o<sup>n</sup> one blood, all nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined s<sup>c</sup> the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation:

¶ To teach all charity and compassion towards one another, being so nearly allied to one another. 2. As also to advance God more in that variety that appears in mens fashions and voices, but especially in the dispositions of their minds; whereas they all come from one stock and stem. ¶ The Apostle asserts the providence of God against the Athenians Philosophers, that nothing come from chance, or a fortuitous concourse of Atomes; but that God chance is in every thing, the men know it not. This Doctrine was confuted by Aristotle, 1. and 12. 3. 14. This Doctrine was preached by Abel, who tells the people, that God is their Lord, and the length of their days; that they might love him, as also as man he is thus highly exalted for his him, and obey his voice, and cleave unto him, Deut. 30: 20. 27 ¶ That they should teck the Lord, it haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be s<sup>c</sup> not far from every one of us:

¶ The Apostle tells these Philosophers, to whom he spoke, the true use of their Philosophy, to improve their knowledge of natural things; to begin in them by it an admiration of the God of Nature, as from him, so for him are all things. Rom. 11: 36. ¶ And although God himself is incorporeal, yet the things which he made are palpable; and did they teck what they ought, they might find a great deal of God out by the creatures, in which his Wisdom, Power and Goodness is manifested. Rom. 1: 20. ¶ God filleth all things, especially he is near in the effects of his Wisdom, Goodness and Faithfulness, by which he orders and disposes of all things, to the falling off of a hair from our Heads.

28 For in him w<sup>e</sup> live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are all of his offspring.

¶ He is the God that made us, that preserves us, and not we our compasses; he keeps us as in the hollow of his hand, and our lives are in his power. ¶ Our lives are in his power, and when we fend it forth, we have none to take in again, as Aratus a Greek Poet; not that St. Paul thought to derive any Authority from these Poets, unto what he had said; but that he might shame them the more by the Testimony of their allowed Authors. Such Quotations as these are (as the bringing in of a Greek into the Temple) very rare; yet besides this, we meet with the like, 1. Titus 1: 12.

¶ Forasmuch then as we are the off-spring of God, w<sup>e</sup> ought not to think that the Gadhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone graven by art and mans device.

¶ This is spoken by the Apostle in a Poetical expression; according unto what he had cited. Where indeed the Children, and in our Souls bear the Image of God. But as many as have the spirit of Adoption, they picture of Gods Holiness, and imitate his Goodness, and are more like unto him, by whom they are begotten again unto a lively hope; 1 Pet. 1: 3. and at the Resurrection they will appear unto all to be his Children, when they shall be acknowledged his Sons, and Coheirs with Jesus Christ, Rom. 8: 17. ¶ In Talking in his natural principles, consisting of Soul and Body, he is not made of Gold and Silver, much less can God be made of them. Our Soul, in which we bear the Image of God, cannot be expressed by any Graving or Painting; much less God whole Image is it. There are two things to be considered in every Image, its matter, and its form or shape. The matter of an Image, let it be never so precious, is much inferior to Man; for it lies in the earth (be it Gold or Silver) for man to trample upon, until he dig it up, and take it out. As for the form of the Image, it is that which men cease to give it, and man is a kind of Creator of it; howsoever it is his workmanship, and the work is more ignoble than the workman; at least not to be adored by him. ¶ According to mans will and pleasure, for the Image cannot determine its self to be made as it would.

30 And the s<sup>c</sup> times of this ignorance s<sup>c</sup> God winked at; but s<sup>c</sup> now commandeth all men every where to repent:

¶ To prevent an Objection, lest any should think that they might continue in their unbelief, and far as well as their Progenitors, y<sup>e</sup> God is said to have overlooked them; if he had counted them unworthy of his Care and Providence. And therefore he did not correct or instruct them. When any are left to go on in their sin, without Gods instruction or correction, it is a sad sign that God seems to look upon them, or to use any means to recover them. ¶ Under the Gospel we are so far from having liberty to do what we list, that we are more nearly concerned to repent and become Holy, Rom. 13: 11. Titus 2: 11, 12. 1 Pet. 1: 14, 15; and that all men, every where, without exception of time or place, are under this command of Repentance; and cursed indeed will be he that does not observe it.

31 Because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world b<sup>y</sup> a righteous one, s<sup>c</sup> by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given s<sup>c</sup> assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.

¶ That God will judge the world, his enemies have with trembling acknowledged; but when God will judge the world, he hath concealed it from his friends; yet the time is already set, 1st Cor. 6: 3. 2 Cor. 5: 10. and we ought to be daily prepared for it. ¶ Shall not the Judge of all the world do right? ¶ Our blessed Saviour, called here man, suitably to his death and resurrection which St. Paul Preach- ed of, as also as man he is thus highly exalted for his debauching of himself for our sakes, Phil. 2: 9, 10, 11. ¶ An undeniable proof or argument, it being so difficult a matter as to believe a world to come, when we see all things remain as they did in this world; and especially to believe, that in the general judgment, Christ whom they had judged, Condemned and Executed, should be Judge; God therefore did glorify him, by raising him from the dead, that they and we might not be faithless, but believe, Rom. 1: 4.

32 ¶ And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, s<sup>c</sup> some mocked; and s<sup>c</sup> others said, We will hear thee again of this matter.

¶ The Epicureans, whom Paul had posited against in his Doctrine of the Resurrection from the dead; and Judgment to come. ¶ The Stoicks, who did not think the Resurrection to be impossible, but did acknowledge Rewards and Punishments in the world to come; yet, tho' his seem most like any unto us in fact. We are sure that there be different Souls into which the Seed of the Word is cast, Math. 13.

33 So Paul departed s<sup>c</sup> from among them.

¶ Leaving what he had said, to Gods Blessing, and their Consideration.

34 Howbeit, certain men c<sup>l</sup>ave unto him, and believed: among the which w<sup>as</sup> Dionysius the b<sup>e</sup> A-<sup>Or, A-</sup>reopagite; and a woman named Damaris, and o-<sup>Or, D-</sup>thers with them.

¶ In more than ordinary friendship, they were as grieved to him; great was their love to the Apostle, by whom their eyes were opened; nay, by whole Ministry they were raised from the dead. ¶ One of that great Council mentioned ver. 19, whose conversion might have s<sup>c</sup> great influence upon many. ¶ Who is thought to have been an honourable person. Such are mentioned ver. 12, or the might have been specially eminent for some Grace or Goodness, like called in, and therefore hath a name upon record in the Word of God.

CHAP. XVIII.

AFTER these things, Paul departed from Athens, and came to a Corinth;

¶ The Metropolis of Achaia, being a rich Sea-Town, and situate in the very Isthmus which joins Peloponnesus unto Achaia, made a Roman Colony, and now flourishing with learned men. Here St. Paul gathered a famous Church, unto which he wrote two of his Epistles.

2 And found a certain Jew named s<sup>c</sup> Aquila, born b<sup>e</sup> in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome) and came unto them.

¶ A Country between Cappadocia and the Black Sea, Act. 2: 9. whether the Progenitors of Aquila, in one of the dispersions, might flee from Judaea to inhabit there. ¶ The Roman Emperor, who, at the beginning of his Reign gave liberty to the Jews freely to exercise their Religion, but about eight years after took away that privilege from him, which Sextus makes mention of, the very much mistaking the reason: With the Jews, his thought that the Christians were banished too; for the Pagan Romans did not care to distinguish betwixt them, they both worshipping but one God, and agreeing in opposing their Idolatry.

3 And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and s<sup>c</sup> wrought (for by their occupation they were c<sup>l</sup>ave-makers).

¶ The most learned amongst the Jews did always learn some handy-craft, and it was one of those things which they held a Father was bound to do for his Child, viz. to teach him some Trade. And one of their Rabby's sayings is, Thas whosoever does not teach his Child a Trade, does as bad as if he did teach him to play the Thief. St. Paul wrought with his hands, not so much because as yet there was no Church there that could maintain him; but 1. because he would not be burdensome unto them, they being, probably most men persons that believed there, as appears, 1. 26. Or 2. That he might show how that he did not covet theirs, but them; and to gain nothing but Souls amongst them. Yet he asserted his right, and the right of Ministers, by Divine appointment, to live of the Gospel, 1 Cor. 9: 6, 11, 12. ¶ Tents were used by Soldiers, and in those hot Countries by others also, being usually made of Skins sewn together to keep off the violence of the weather.

4 And he reasoned in the Synagogue every sabbath, and b<sup>e</sup> persuaded the Jews, and the Greeks.

¶ Or Argued and Disputed, giving his Reasons out of Scripture, and answering their Objections, not only using coherent Arguments; but, as some understand the Verb, such as did prevail upon him. i Not such as were of the Jewish race, and after the dispersion used the Scripture in the Greek Tongue; but such as were Gentile-Greeks, Greeks by descent.

5 And when Silas and Timotheus k were come from Macedonia, Paul was i predestinated in spirit, and testified unto the Jews, that Jesus i was m Christ. k According as was ordered by him, Chap. 17. 14. 15. I More than ordinarily affected, the Spirit of God infused his Spirit; so that he felt an anguish or pain at the heart (as 2 Cor. 2. 4.) such was his grief for the contumacy of the Jews; to great was his desire that they might be saved. m 1. The Christ, or Anointed, that excelled all other Christs or Anointed ones, being anointed with Oil above measure. 2. The Christ that was promised by the Prophets.

* Math. 10. 16.

6 And * when they opposed themselves, n and blasphemed; o he shook his raiment, and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads; p I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.

n They blasphemed Paul, mistaking of him, but especially Christ, whose dishonour grieving Paul most. o His upper Garment, as the manner was, Mat. 26. 65. that none of the dust of that place where such blasphemy was spoken, might stick unto him. See Chap. 13. 31. p Or not guilty of your own deaths and damnation; 2 Sam. 1. 16. Mat. 27. 25. Job. 4. 6. q This expression is borrowed from the Wise-men, laying their hands on the head of the guilty person, or the Sacrificer's laying his hand on the head of the Beast which was to be slain, Exod. 29. 10. Lev. 1. 4. q Free from their blood, or the loss of their Souls, having warned them, and shewn the way of Life unto them, Ezek. 33. 4. He had blown the Trumpet, and warned the people.

7 And he departed thence, and entered into r certain mans house, named r Justus, one that worshipped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue.

r Some read Titus, some both Titus and Justus, making Justus a surname, as Acts 1. 23. Col. 4. 11. either the manner of the Romans. s Had forsaken the Polytheism of the Heathen.

8 And Crispus t the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and u many of the Corinthians, hearing, believed, and were baptized.

t There were several Rulers in a Synagogue, which we find frequent mention of, as Mat. 9. 18. Mark 5. 22. Their Office and place was to advise, and give order about the affairs of the Synagogue, that all things might be performed according to their prescribed Rules; amongst whom are reckoned Gaius, Sosthenes, 1 Cor. 1. 1. and Epaphroditus, Rom. 16. 5.

9 Then v spake the Lord to Paul v the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and w hold not thy peace:

v As Chap. 16. 9. it may be by an Angel. w This doubled again and again, as of greatest consequence, 1. To the Corinthians, whose Salvation by this means might be procured. 2. To Paul himself, whose Soul howsoever should be delivered, he having discharged his duty, Chap. 20. 26. 27. The fierceness of the enemies of God, and his Truth, should kindle a greater fervour in his Servants, and his Glory. Should Satan have better in his Servants than God? Should they dare for their Master, beyond what the Servants of God are willing to do or suffer for him? Isa. 62. 1. Jer. 1. 17. 18.

10 For I am y with thee, and no man shall set on thee, to hurt thee: for I have z much people in this city.

Christ, in this Vision, used two Arguments to persuade Paul to continue Preaching the Gospel at Corinth. 1. y Because he would be with him, to supply, support and deliver him; as Isa. 43. 2. z much people, as Isa. 43. 10. and to all the faithful Ministers of Christ, Mat. 23. 20. This promise was fulfilled to Paul, and to other of Gods Servants, whatsoever troubles they met with, even when they were killed, they were not hurt, Rom. 8. 36. 38. The other reason why Paul was commanded to tarry, was that there were many that God would have called by his Ministry, and thus those who were not his people, God calleth his people, as Heb. 1. 10. & 2. 23.

11 And he aa continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them. ab He fate there, as his fix place; which implies his continuance and constancy in the work of the Ministry.

12 And when b Gallio was the deputy of d Achaia, the Jews made insurrection e with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgement-seat.

b This Gallio was Brother to that deservedly famous Seneca, (who was Tutor to Nero) and hath great commendations given him, as being a man of an excellent disposition, beloved by all men, an enemy to all vice, and especially a hater of flattery. c This man was Proconsul, d Governing Achaia and all Greece absolutely; or with the power of a Consul. e Wicked men in their evil deeds are unanimous for Satan knoweth that his Kingdom would not stand, if it were once divided.

13 Saying, This fellow perverteth men to worship God f contrary to the law.

f Of the Romans, who, to avoid tumults and confusions, did forbid any to set up any new worship without leave; and the Jews in these parts having here no power to punish St. Paul as they had at Jerusalem, maliciously incite the Government against him: Or by the Law here he meant the Law of Moses, which he accule Paul to have broken, and so not to be comprehended in that license which they had to exercise their Religion.

14 And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, g If it were a Chap. 13. 45. matter of g wrong, or wicked law, h ye Jews, I reason would that I should bear with you.

g To make his Apology, and to speak in his own defence. h As Murderer, Theft, or any such injury, which Judge do usually determine of. i I would endure any trouble to hear and understand it, I should think it my duty to suffer you to say as much as you would in your case.

15 But if it be a question of k words and l names, and m of your law, look ye to it: for I will be no judge of n such matters.

k Which have been spoken about the controversies of Religion; l as whether Jesus was to be called Christ or the Messiah; and whether his Disciples might be called Christians. m Concerning Circumcision, as whether none may be saved without it. n He acknowledges himself not to be unwilling to determine such things as did not belong unto him, or he did not understand.

16 And he o drove them from the judgement-seat.

o He commanded them to be gone, having dismissed their Cause; and if need were, added threatening and force.

17 Then all the p Greeks took q Sosthenes, the chief ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgement-seat: And Gallio cared r for none of those things.

p Not the converted Greeks, the St. Anstus thought they beat Sosthenes as an enemy to Paul (yet surely they had not so learned Christ) but the unbaptized or Gentile-Greeks, who cared for neither Paul, nor Jesus, but satiated Gallio, who would have them driven away. q Some think Timothy have been the time with Crispus, Verse 8. others to have succeeded him in that Office: And some think that he was chief Ruler of another Synagogue (for in great Cities there might be more than one) r and others, that there might be several called chief Rulers over one and the same Synagogue. r Either slighting the Jews and all their controversies, or prudently to decline intermeddling with them.

18 And Paul after this tarried there yet s a good while, and then took t his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and came u unto Priscilla and Aquila: having v shorn his head in Chap. 13. 45. w Cenchrea: x for he had a vow.

s A year and an half in all, as some think, which is mentioned, verse 11. by a Prophecy; or besides that year if he an half there spoken of. t Ordering every thing as if he were to have taken his last farewell of them. u Priscilla accordingly: Howsoever holy men live in a constant expectation of their dissolution, have caused various conjectures; and 'tis observed, that in St. Paul's Epistles, whereas there are three times only mention of them both together, 1 Cor. 16. 19. 2 Tim. 4. 19. the Wives name is twice placed first, to shew, that in Christ Jesus there is neither Male nor Female, Gal. 3. 28. w Which was a Town as the entering into the Haven belonging to Cenchrea, Rom. 16. 1. x To wit, St. Paul had; and therefore had shaven his head according unto the Law, Numb. 6. 18. To the Jews he became as St. John.

19 And he came to y Ephesus, and left z them there: but he himself entered aa into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews.

y The Metropolis of the lesser Asia, where afterwards that famous Church was; unto which St. Paul wrote an Epistle, 1 Cor. 1. 10.

10 As also St. John wrote another, Rev. 2. 1. z Priscilla and Priscilla, at Ephesus, to confirm the believing Ephesians: whilst Paul, a out of an extraordinary love for his Nation, although he had suffered all those indignities from them, yet he would give them precept upon precept, and line upon line.

20 When ab they desired him to tarry longer time with them, c he consented not:

b That is Aquila and Priscilla, whom Paul would not yield unto. c By Gods wonderful Providence (which over-ruled all our inclinations) Paul having greater things to do and suffer for the Glory of God elsewhere.

21 But bade them farewell, saying, I must by all means keep d this feast that cometh, in Jerusalem: but I will return again unto you, e f if God will. And he sailed from Ephesus.

d The Feast of the Passover; which is meant where Feast is put absolutely, unless some after expression qualify it: not that this Holy Feast did out of Conscience to the Paul, intend to observe it; for Christ is the end of the Law, in them that believe, Rom. 10. 4. but because of the vast concourse from all places to Jerusalem at that time; which would give him an opportunity of making Christ known to such multitudes, and to gain their Souls unto him. e Tho he was an Apostle, and had the Spirit of Prophecy, and might know whether he should return or no; yet he does not absolutely promise them to return to them; but conditionally, if the Lord will, to teach us what caution we should use in all our Promises and Resolutions, as 1 Cor. 13. 11. being we know not what a day may bring forth. Besides, in our owning of Gods Will and Pleasure, we acknowledge a Providence of God in all things, especially in our concerns; which we desire to refer all unto.

22 And when he had landed at f Cefarea, and gone up, and saluted the g church, he went down h to Antioch.

f Most that Cefarea was in Syria, but that which was in Palestine, called Cefarea Stratonis; and which was the first way to Jerusalem; for the way by Joppa, tho shorter, was accounted more dangerous. g Either the Church of Cefarea in his Journey, or that at Jerusalem at his Journey; and which for its piousness might be called, eminently, The Church. h That Antioch that was in Syria.

23 And after he i had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all the country of j Galatia and k Phrygia in order, l strengthening all the disciples.

i This work might take up the constant care and indefatigable pains of the Apostle. k Where he had converted many. l See Chap. 16. 6. m Tho the Seed be duly sown, yet it must be seasonably watered: and redes labor ad in orbem.

24 n And a certain Jew named n Apollos, born at o Alexandria, an p eloquent man, and q mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus.

n Who is thought also to be called Apelles, Rom. 16. 10. o His Parents having lived there. p A rational, prudent, and learned Man. Tho the Kingdom of God is not in any excellency of Speech, 1 Cor. 2. 1. q yet this Egyptian Jew may be used to adorn the Tabernacle. q In quoting, explaining, and urging of them.

25 This man was r instructed s in the way of the Lord; and being t fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, u knowing only the baptism of John.

r Catechized, or taught, u John, who hath by his Precepts and Example, taught us the way to happiness; s very zealous to promote Gods Glory, and mens Salvation, as Rom. 12. 11. t Who Baptized with Water, but could not baptize with the Holy Ghost, Mat. 3. 11. that is, they had not those extraordinary Gifts of the Holy Ghost, which followed upon Baptism after that Christ was Ascended, and the Spirit poured out, Chap. 2. 4. But John was a preacher of repentance, and of faith in Christ, which was the Lamb of God; and he Baptized his Disciples into this Doctrine, which is the same with the Baptism and Belief of the Apostles afterwards. Only now they knew many things more fully than were revealed in the Baptists time.

26 And he began to speak boldly in the Synagogue. Whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly.

u If we allow Priscilla to have contributed towards the instruction of Apollos, as doubtless we may, it is certain it was only in private discourses; which being joined with a meek and humble behaviour, might be very effectual for the Conversion of Souls, 1 Pet. 3. 1. 2. Thus Timothy was instructed for his knowledge in the things of God, to his Mother and Grand-mother, 2 Tim. 1. 5. but otherwise it is not Lawful for a Woman to Teach, 1 Tim. 2. 11. 12.

27 And when he was disposed to pass into x Achaia; the y brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: Who, when he was come, z 1 Cor. 16. helped them much which had believed through z grace.

x To Corinth, which was in Achaia. y Who were at Ephesus. z Apollos helped them much by his eloquence, Zeal, and Constancy; which all are the Gifts of God; but especially, that they believed, was through Grace; for Faith is the Gift of God, Eph. 2. 8. and it was given unto them to believe, Phil. 1. 29.

28 For he aa mightily convinced the Jews, and ab thus publicly, shewing b by the scriptures, that c Jesus was Christ.

a With great constancy, perseverance, and enduring of opposition. b As Chap. 17. 3. c some think that Christ ought to be the Subject, and Jesus the Predicate; and then sense is, That Christ is our Jesus or Saviour. The Messiah that was sent from God, is the Saviour of the World.

CHAP. XIX.

And it came to pass, that while a Apollos was 1 Cor. 1. 12. at Corinth, Paul having passed through the b upper coasts, came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples, a The North parts; in which were Pemys, Bithynia, Phrygia, and Galatia, Chap. 18. 23.

2 He said unto them, Have ye received b the holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard c whether there be any holy Ghost.

b The extraordinary Gifts of the Holy Ghost, as Prophecy, speaking with Tongues, healing of the Sick, &c. as appears by Verse 6. and John 7. 39. for it could not be, that they who were Instructed and Baptized by John, should be ignorant of the Evidence or Testimon of the Holy Ghost; for the Baptist had seen him descending upon our Saviour; as is remembered by all the Evangelists which speak of his Baptism, Mat. 3. 16. Mark 1. 10. Luke 3. 22. beside other Scriptures which testified of him; and St. John had spoken of him unto all he Baptized, That our Saviour would Baptize them with the Holy Ghost, and with fire, John 1. 32. 33. c This answer might be understood, according to the question, of those Gifts now mentioned; and which by the imposition of the hands of the Apostles were given, especially at the Ordination of such as were sent to Preach the Gospel; it being necessary for the Planting of the Church, (those miraculous Gifts assuring those, unto whom they were preached, that their Doctrine was from Heaven) as also to assure the Apostles themselves of the success of their Ministry, and the conversation of such they Preached unto, as Chap. 10. 44. 47. And this acceptance of these words is parallel, 1 Sam. 3. 7. where it is said, That Samuel knew not yet the Lord; the meaning is, That he knew not that God was wont to speak unto any; other wise that holy Man, as young as he was, both knew God, and served him.

3 And he said unto them, Unto d what then were ye baptized? And they said, e Unto John's baptism.

d What Doctrine did you make profession of? And what Religion did you Seal unto at your Baptism? e The Doctrine that John taught, and the Religion that he professed and preached. Thus the Jews are said, 1 Cor. 10. 2. to be Baptized unto Moses, being engaged to believe the Doctrine, and observe the Law delivered by Moses. Now the Baptists, as Chap. 18. 25. preached indeed Christ, but many things concerning him he could not preach, unless as of things to come: as his Death, and Resurrection. The Baptists being Redeemed before our Saviours Death, and the Holy Ghost was not poured out in that extraordinary manner, until after our Saviours Resurrection and Ascension; which pouring out of the Spirit, these Disciples at Ephesus, having been Baptized by John in Judea, and afterwards returning home, might not have heard of.

4 Then said Paul, f John verily baptized with Math. 3. 11. the f baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, That they should believe on him which g should come after him, that is, h on Christ Jesus.

f At which the Baptists did edify them to Repentance; and they by it were obliged to repent; by which is manifest, that the Baptism of John, and of Christ (which he commanded manded, is one and the same. Johns Baptism did respect Christ, and oblige the Baptized to believe in him, as also Christ, and more, it was a Seal unto them of the Remission of their sins, as is expressly observed, Mark 1. 4. For mission of their sins, and the Baptism of the Apostles, afterward, had the same sign, and the same thing signified in them both (the inward and outward part, the Heavenly and Earthly part were the same in both;) as also they had both the same end; and therefore they were both the same. Add to this, That unless the Baptists and the *A-*postles (the Church) are not Baptized with the same Baptism: it must be acknowledged, that there are some Circumstances in which they differ; Johns Baptism respected Christ to come; that is, in the exercise of his Ministry; which was not fully exercised till after Johns death; and especially, those great things (his Death, Resurrection, and Ascension, &c.) were to come in Johns time, which now are accomplished. b Including the Father, and the Holy Ghost, and mentioning Christ, to difference him from the several Baptisms and Washing then in use.

5 When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

The Disciples, or not those that John preached to, (for these Ephefians were not amongst those few that Paul baptized, 1 Cor. 1. 14.) who when they heard what the Baptist said in the foregoing Verse, they were Baptized; as in the same terms 'tis said, Chap. 2. 37. when they heard what St. Peter had said, they were pricked in their hearts, &c. and were Baptized. As for Pauls imposing his hands upon them that are said here to be Baptized, it might very well be, that Paul, and now Receive the Holy Ghost in those extraordinary Gifts by the laying on of the hands of St. Paul: for to what end should these Disciples who were Baptized with St. Johns Baptism, be again Baptized by Paul? It is true, they had further manifestation of the Mystery of the Gospel brought unto them; but if men should be Baptized for every degree of Knowledge or Grace which they do acquire, how many Baptisms had they need to have, who ought daily to grow in Grace and in Knowledge? It is evident, that the Apostles themselves were only Baptized with the Baptism of John, for there were none else to Baptize them. And Baptism being an Ordinance for our Regeneration, and New Birth; as we can be born but once in the Flesh, we can be but once also born in the Spirit; and no more may Christians be Baptized twice, than the Jews could be twice Circumcised.

6 And when Paul had said his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues and prophesied.

7 Thereby Ordaining and Authorizing of them to preach the Gospel. In those extraordinary Gifts of Tongues, &c. whereby they were fitted to preach the Gospel unto any Nation, or People unto whom they should be sent. m They Prophesied, either in their proper sense, being enabled to foretell things that were to come; or in a larger and more improper sense, praising and magnifying of God, and declaring the hidden Mysteries of the Gospel; expounding the Scriptures; especially the Prophecies concerning Christ, as 1 Cor. 14. 1.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and perverting the things concerning the kingdom of God.

9 Of the fact at Ephefus. For in the greater Cities the Jews had their Synagogues, in which they had their Prayers, read, and expounded the Law; as also a School for teaching of their Theology; in which they treated of hard Questions, and more difficult matters; which might occasion the Apostles frequenting that place. p The Gospel; which is so called, Rom. 14. 17. because the Kingdom of Grace is by it (as we see in us here); and we are saved by it for the Kingdom of Glory hereafter. But it might be also so called, because the Jews had dreamed of a political Kingdom of the Messiah, and the Christians would own that Christ was indeed a King, but that his Kingdom was a Spiritual Kingdom.

9 But when divers q were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.

10 So he hardened, what is, doth not soften, and caused a schism, from Duns-Hills; as well as a schism from the Mountains of Siles, and Cords in the hills.

as well as for the rifting of many. r So the Doctrine of the Gospel, by reason of its excellency above other ways. By way, the Hebrews understand any course or means to an end. Hence we read of the way of Peace, the way of Salvation, the way of the Lord. s Not frequenting any more the Synagogue of the Jews, where he met only with contradiction of their Doctrine, and blasphemy against their traditions. t Some have taken this word Apprentice, as denoting some great Man or Ruler, who maintained a School, or place for Instruction; but it's rather a proper name of some private Teacher amongst them; for the Jews had not only publick Schools, where their Confidaries did meet, but private Schools, where their Law was Taught.

10 And u this continued by the space of two years; so that v all they which dwell in Asia, heard z the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

u Many of all sorts: u Asia the letter, or Asia strictly so called, lying about Ephefus; the Hebrews come thither to worship their Diana; the Jews come about their Affairs together, either in their Trade or Law-fairs. x The Gospel, which is the Word concerning the Lord Jesus; or, the Word which he appointed to be preached and published.

11 And y God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul:

12 Not common or ordinary things, or such as might happen by chance. y As Chap. 9. 12. by his Meas and Ministry.

12 So that from his body were brought a unto the sick, handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.

a Our Habit and Attire being different from what was used to long since, it cannot but occasion some variety in rendering these words. Which some think to signify two things; and some but one and the same part of their Cloaths or Dress; the words are both Originally Latin; the former so called from its use to wipe away sweat; the other from its being usually tied about such as wore it. b God by this small and unlikely means wrought these Miracles: 1. That the Power of Christ (whom Paul preached) might the more clearly appear. And that, viz. Such as were about might have a high value for Christ and the Gospel, do they had never seen Paul, or heard him preach. Such extraordinary works were also wrought by God, to manifest the words preached by Paul, Chap. 5. 15. as our Saviour had foretold and promised, John 14. 12.

13 Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits, the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preached.

c Who wandered up and down, making it their trade and livelihood: as Jugglers amongst us. d So called from their obtruding the evil spirits in the name of God. Of their Jeptus tells strange Stories, Antiq. lib. 8. and thinks that the way of their exorcising was derived unto them from Solomon, and that they used the Name of the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; as also of Zebaoth, and Adonai, as Origen tells us. Some think, that tho' there is certainly no power in the Words and Syllables which they pronounced, yet that the True God being rather willing to be known and named by those Names, than that any should call on the names of the false gods, did sometimes put forth his power in casting out of Devils at such times, as Mark. 16. 17. Howsoever, there being no warrant in the Word of God for any such practice, and no promise in it; act Faith in Prayer upon; were the words never so solemn, and the Name of God and his Attributes never so mighty (seemingly) manifested, it is a most abominable language.

e Instead of, or together with those other Names formerly mentioned.

14 And there were seven sons of one Satan, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.

f One of the chief of the 24 Courses into which the Priests were divided. g Chrom. 24. 4. as such an (according to the corruption of those times) had been High Priests, and were laid aside, or were of the High Priests family, and hoped to succeed him.

15 And the evil spirit answered and said, g Jesus I know, h and Paul I know; but who i are ye?

g I acknowledge that Jesus hath Power to command us to obedience, and h know that Paul, as his Minister, hath Authority over men; but what pretensions have ye to command us now? i Tho' the Devil is a liar, and the Father of lies, yet none so to their own disadvantage, but rather to their advantage, as they take it; and Satan may therefore be believed in what he here says, because it is to his disadvantage that will he, nil he, is under the command of God, tho' he signified to him by the least of his Ministers or Servants.

16 And the man in whom the evil spirit was, leapt on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

k By the power of the evil spirit, which by the permission of God did act in him, Matth. 8. 28. Mark 5. 4. Luke 8. 29. Satan returns still his natural power, tho' he hath wholly lost his moral or spiritual power unto any good; and that his violence proceeded no further, is to be ascribed only to the bounds which God had set him; which he, being in Chains, could not exceed or go beyond; nor for his want of malice, but power.

17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephefus; and I fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

l They feared (after this example of Gods not holding them guiltless that had taken his Name in vain) to revile the Name of Christ, and much more to blaspheme or speak against it. m His Authority, which the unclean spirit could not resist; and his Doctrine and Ministers, whose Defence God had undertaken.

18 And many that believed came, and n confessed, and shewed their deeds.

n That believed the power which God alone had over Satan, and were convinced of their sin and danger in being led captive by him. o Openly declared their evil deeds. They durst keep the Devils counsel no longer, but expose and manifest it, that their loves being laid open, the Balm of the Gospel might more effectually be put into them. Thus Rom. 10. 10. with the mouth confession is made unto Salvation.

19 Many also of them which used q curious arts, brought their books together, and burned them before all men; and they counted the price of them, and found it r fifty thousand pieces of silver.

p Thus their good works justified their Faith, without which it had been dead, James 2. 24. 26. q Or rather idle and vain Arts, as Judicial Astrology, calculating Nativities, and all Magical Arts, which the Ephefians, of all others, were most addicted to; and famous for, and may be here called various Arts, because they were so called by the Ephefians, who practised them; as also because these Arts are about Christified, not necessary for us to know. r Otherwise they are Diabolical Arts, or rather devilish Crafts. These Books were not sold, and the price of them brought unto the Apostles, because it was looked upon as the price of a Whore, which was an abomination, and might not be offered unto God, Deut. 23. 18. f What sum amounts to is not so certain, because it is not agreed what these pieces were. Some make them Roman, or Grecian Coins; and others understand by them, Shekels, which are the Jewish money, and would make this sum much the greater. Take them for so many Pence, a piece of money commonly so called, which weighed the Eighth part of an Ounce of Silver; as Matth. 18. 28. They make 6250. Ounces of Silver, or so many Crowns, and so much more as Silver is worth more per Ounce. Such indignation have true Converts against the sins they have been guilty of, that they will not retain any thing that might occasion their return unto them: Were it a right Eye, they would pull it out.

20 So s mightily grew the word of God, and prevailed.

t The increase which the seed of the Word had made, was very remarkable; or it is a great instance of the power of Gods Word, when it makes men willing to part with their beloved and accustomed sins, and not to stand upon saving on gaining; as Isa. 55. 11.

21 After these things were ended, Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia, and Asia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, u I must also see Rome.

v Resolved with himself, or purposed in his heart, as Dan. 1. 8. Yet in this determination he had the influence and guidance of the Holy Ghost, and that in a more than ordinary manner; as we may see by the continued series of this History, how he came to all these places here mentioned. w Paul travelled thorow their Countries, and went to these Cities, because he hoped for a greater Harvest, where he might scatter the seed for a great abroad.

22 So he sent into Macedonia two of them that x ministered unto him, Timotheus and Erastus; but he himself stayed in Asia for a season.

x That great Apostle Paul, not any to minister unto him, out of State, but out of Necessity, because he could not himself attend to all the Offices of the Church. These were employed by Paul, not so much to procure any Accommodation for himself, by the way, as to further a collection for the poor brethren at Jerusalem, 2 Cor. 9. 3. 4. y There seems to have been two of this Name mentioned in Scripture: The one, Rom. 16. 23. and the other, 2 Tim. 4. 20. The latter is here spoken of. z In Ephefus, which was in Asia, where Paul now was.

23 And z the same time there arose no small stir about z that way.

z When all things seemed to have been quiet: so incertain are the servants of Christ to have any quiet here. z The Doctrine of the Gospel; as Chap. 18. 25.

24 For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made a silver shrine for Diana, brought no small gain unto the craftsmen.

a These shrines were only, either: 1. Portraits of the Temple of Diana, in which was graven, or (by any other Art) represented that famous Structure which was afterwards burnt by Brutus: Or 2dly, They were Medals in which their Idol Diana was expressed according to her Image, spoken of, ver. 22. And they are called here, Temples, or Shrines, because they did resemble and represent that Shrine or Temple. And these the superstitious people carried home to their houses and friends; not only to evidence what a pilgrimage they had performed, but to incite the more their devotions towards this Idol.

25 Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, b Sirs, ye know that b by this craft we have our wealth:

b Gain. Getting, or keeping a livelihood are great temptations; and a little pretext of piety with them, do keep up the superstition and false worship that abounds in the world.

26 Moreover, ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephefus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath periwaded and turned away much people, saying, that they be no gods which are made with hands:

c He tells them indeed what was St. Pauls Doctrine; but he conceals the Reasons of his Doctrine: for there can be nothing more evident to any considering man, than that there is but one God who made all things; as Isa. 44. 34. Jer. 10. 10.

27 So that not only this our craft is in danger to be d set at naught; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be d destroyed, whom f all Asia, and the world worshippeth.

d Not only that we shall have no more to do, and be without work; but that it will be a reproach unto us to have had such an employment. e This is made an aggravation to the loss of their all, that Religion should suffer too. How much more ought it to concern those who have a sure foundation for what they do profess? f This Temple, is said to have been burnt down the same day that Alexander was born; and that it was two hundred and twenty years in re-building, at the charge of all Asia. g Tho' the Romans might worship any God (of those multitude) which they allowed; yet they might leave the Idols of the Ephefians was one of those few; as also one of those twelve whom they accounted (tho' not Dionysius Gentium) Gods and Goddesses of the highest quality, or of high rank.

28 And when they h heard these sayings, they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephefians!

h The Argument from their profit wrought very much upon them, especially meeting with their prejudicate Opinions; having perceived antiquity and inviolability to confirm them. i To their their abhorrence of what Paul had taught; and desiring her glory might be perpetual, whom Paul thought not worthy to be honoured as a god.

29 And the whole city was filled with confusion: and having caught j Gaius and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Pauls companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the theatre.

k Tumults and noise. All conditions of men, high and low, promiscuously being met in such uproars. l One born at Derbe, but living at Thessalonica; as Chap. 20. 4. o Of whom we read, Chap. 27. 2. Coloss. 4. 16. p A place or 37 And as Paul was to be led into the castle, he said unto the chief captain f. May I speak unto thee? Who said, Canst thou speak Greek?

f A common expression in that Language, whereby he craves leave, and speaks attention. g After the Grecian Empire, their Language became and continued to be very common in Asia and Egypt, and very well known amongst all the Remains of any Education or Quality.

* Chap. 5. 36. 38 * Art not thou b that Egyptian which before these days made an uprose, and leddest out into the wilderness four thousand men that were murderers?

b A famous Ring-leader of a Rebellious Crew, as some think, in the Reign of Tiberius; but as others, in the Thirtieth Year of the Emperor Claudius, and continued till Nero's Reign, and came from these Four Thousand mentioned here at his first setting up, to have Thirty Thousand Followers, pretending himself to be a Prophet; of whom Josephus, Antiq. lib. 20. cap. 11. c Or Assassins, that did wear Daggs or Stiletos.

* Chap. 9. 11. and 22. 3. 39 But Paul said, I * am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no k mean city; and I beseech thee, suffer me to speak unto the people.

k It being the Metropolis, or chief City in Cilicia, built by Persus, as some think; howsoever having the privilege of the Roman Freedom; as Chap. 22. 31. St. Paul begs leave to speak unto the people, that he might not seem to affect popularity, or to be guilty of any Insurrection or Tumult. Thus he had leave also of Agrippa, before that he made that famous Apology, Chap. 26. 1.

40 And when he had given him licence, Paul stood m on the stairs, and n beckoned with the hand unto the people: And when there was made a great silence, he spake unto them o in the Hebrew tongue, saying, m As he was now about to be carried into the Castle, Anania before mentioned; n signifying, that he craved their audience; as Chap. 12. 17. and 13. 16. o The Hebrew Tongue being understood by all of them, and most grateful unto them. Yet this was not the pure and ancient Hebrew, which had been corrupted ever since their Captivity; but the Syriack Tongue, which they there learned, was called Hebrew, it having at first been derived from the Hebrew, and being then in use by those who were Hebrews.

C H A P. XXII.

MEN brethren, and fathers, hear ye me diligently, which I make now unto you.

a Although we were wicked men, and cruel persecutors, St. Paul gives them their titles of respect, which by the places God had put them in, are due unto them; see on Chap. 7. 1.

b And when they heard that he spake in the b Hebrew tongue to them, they c kept the more silence (and he said)

b The ordinary Hebrew; that which was taken for Hebrew, and spoken by the Hebrews after their return from the Captivity, so mixt with the Syriac; as Chap. 21. 40. c It being more grateful unto them to hear Paul speak in their Mother Tongue; especially they having so great a prejudice against all other Nations and Languages.

* Chap. 21. 39. 2 Cor. 11. 22. 39 I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city d, at the feet of e Gamaliel, and taught according to the f perfect manner of the law of the g fathers, and was zealous b towards God, as ye all are this day.

d The Apostle allude unto the posture that the Disciples of any Rabbi, or teacher, in those times did use; the Matter sitting in some high or elevated place; did teach his Scholars, who fate at his feet on the ground; and as they grew in knowledge, were advanced to sit nearer to their Master. Deut. 33. 3. And Abraham is thus said to be called to God's foot, Isaiah 41. 2. And Mary fate at our Saviour's feet, Luke 10. 39. e The name Gamaliel, who made this moderating speech in the Apostle's defence, Chap. 5. 34. f This perfect manner of the Law is Pharisaism, which the Apostle was brought up in, and before his conversion made a profession of, Phil. 3. 5. Not that the Apostle reckoned upon any perfection in this profession; but because, as Chap. 26. 5. it was the most strict sect of their Religion, observing a great deal of punctuality and accurateness, making, what they called, a Hedge about the Law. g Not observing only the Law, which was given by God to their Fathers by the hand of Moses; but the Traditions of their Fathers he was exceeding zealous in; as Gal. 1. 4. b Or as some Copies read, zealous towards the Law; both in the same sense. His zeal for the Law was sincere; not out of by ends, but out of his love to God, tho it was not according to Knowledge, Rom. 10. 2. It was truly according unto what he knew or believed; but it was not according to true Knowledge.

* Chap. 1. 4. 4 * And I persecuted i this way unto k the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women.

i The Doctrine and Practice of Christianity. k As much as in him lies, being one of the most furious persecutors that hunted for the precious life; breathing out threatenings and slaughters with every breath, Rom. 9. 1.

l As also the high priest doth bear me witness, and all the l estate of the elders: from whom also I received m letters unto the n brethren, and went to Damascus, to bring them which were there, bound unto Jerusalem, for to be punished.

l Their Sanhedrim, or great Council. m Commission or Orders. n The Jews of Damascus are called brethren, and because defended from the Patriarchs as well as he. And as ver. 1. he would overcome that stubborn people with Civility, heaping up coals of fire on their heads, Rom. 12. 20. that they might be melted, and then formed after a more excellent manner.

6 And * it came to pass, that as I made my jour- * Chap. 1. 4. ney, and was come nigh unto Damascus about noon, suddenly there o shone from heaven a great light round about me.

o As Lightning it suddenly encompassed him. But see Chap. 9. from the 3d verse; where this History is set down by St. Luke. And here little more can be taken notice of, than some small variety in the expressions.

7 And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me p, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

p As men that call another earnestly, repeat his Name; as when the Angel of the Lord called Abraham, Abraham, Gen. 22. 11.

8 And answered, Who art thou Lord? And he said unto me, I am Jesus of q Nazareth whom thou persecutest.

q That contemned (tho not contemptible) Name is owned by Christ from Heaven, that they might not be ashamed when they were reproached by it on Earth. Of the rest, see Chap. 9. 5.

9 And they that were with me, saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they r heard not the voice of him that spake to me.

Of this, see Chap. 9. 7. r This may be added to what was formerly said, that the men who travelled with Paul, may be said not to have heard the voice of him that spake, because they did not understand it, as others did: They were not converted, as Paul was, by it; the Hebrew Language putting hearing for obeying; as in many Scriptures: And both St. Paul, who here spake, and Luke, who penned this History, understood exactly the properties of that Tongue.

10 And I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and get thee up to Damascus, and there it shall be told thee of f all things which are appointed for thee to do.

See Chap. 9. 6. f Such things as Ananias told him from Christ, were as if Christ himself had told him them: And by Ananias our Saviour satisfied St. Paul's question, What shall I do, Lord?

11 And when I could not see for the glory of s that light, being a led by the hand of them that were with me, I came into Damascus.

s The Excellency of the Object over-powering his sight. It was a strange work of God that enabled St. Paul to see Christ (who is now so glorious) Chap. 7. 51. And it will be according to God's wonderful power, when he shall be enabled to look upon Christ in his glorious glory. u Behold the goodness and severity of God upon Paul: Severity upon him in striking of him with blindness in his body; but goodness indeed to him, in enlightening, converting, and saving of his soul.

12 And o one Ananias, a devout man w according * Chap. 9. 10 to the law, having a good report of all the Jews which dwell there, w This is added to distinguish him from a Profelyte, and to let them know that he had received the Gospel, not from a Convert out of Gentilism (who tho they admitted, yet they had a great jealousy over, and less kindness for), but from one like unto themselves in all things.

13 Came unto me x, and stood, and said unto me, Brother Saul, receive thy sight. And the same y hour I look'd up upon him.

x That in this posture he might more conveniently put his hands upon Paul, which we read that he now did, Chap. 9. 17. and was ordinarily done upon the miraculous curing of any. y Or, as Chap. 9. 18. immediately. The suddenness of the Cures, spake the power from whence they came: None but God saves and delivers after this manner.

t Nothing could please the people better than to hear God so foiled: For this they gloried in, above all things, that they and theirs had God to their Father, John 8. 41. And nothing could better suit St. Paul's purpose, who would not lie under that scandal of endeavouring an Apology from the Jewish Religion for the Gospel which he preached, was but the substance and perfection of the Law; or that he served or worshipped any other God than the God of Abraham. u He hath taken thee as by the hand, and by his wonderful Providence brought thee into that condition in which thou art. v Christ is the Holy One, spotless and without blemish; God's righteous servant, Gal. 3. 11. But this is here rather spoken, that he might convince them of their sin, in imputing their Lord to death: For tho he sweetned his speech to them in what he might, he would not flatter them to their destruction; Like a skillful Chyrurgion, he would not heal too fast. Now St. Paul faith Christ with the Eyes of his mind, it being a lighted to believe him. And he saw him in his journey also with the Eyes of his body. Some read, tho not the sense. And then Ananias tells St. Paul, that he was sent to them him that which was just and right in Gods sight; which he being blinded by his zeal for the Law, could not perceive.

15 For thou shalt be his e witness unto all men, of what thou hast d seen and heard.

e The Apostles were in a more special manner Christ's Witnesses; as Luke 24. 48. John 1. 7. Chap. 1. 8. God giving them extraordinary gifts, not for their own sakes chiefly, but to profit others vital: As the tree bears no fruit, nor the field yield its increase for its self. d Not that St. Paul's Commission extended only to the publishing this Wonder at his conversion: for he was entrusted with the Gospel, and had that Treasure in his Earthen Vessel: But this Miracle is expressly mentioned, because it was unto him and others a great confirmation of the Truths which he believed himself, and recommended to the Faith of others. And therefore in the course of his Ministry he mentions this frequently; as here in this place, and before King Agrippa, Chap. 26. 12. and 1 Cor. 9. 1. As also 1 Cor. 13. 8.

16 And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away f thy sin, calling on the Name of the Lord.

f As washing away the spots to disappear, and to be as if they had not been, Isaiah 1. 18. to be done pardoning mercy, or remission of sins, which accompanies Baptism, as in the due receiver, Mat. 3. 11. 1 Pet. 3. 21, 22. Where true Faith is, together with the profession of it by Baptism, there is salvation promised, Mark 16. 16. In the mean while it is not the Water (for that only signifies), but it is the Blood of Christ which is thereby signified, that cleanseth us from our sins; as 1 John 1. 7. Yet Sacraments are not empty and deceitful signs; but God accompanies his own Ordinances with those great things for which he intended and appointed them. g Christ, to whom by Baptism he was to be dedicated.

* Chap. 9. 28. 17 And * it came to pass, that h when I was come again to Jerusalem, even while I prayed in the temple, I was in a i trance;

i This was probably about three years after his conversion; as Gal. 1. 18. and was one of the Visions and Revelations he makes mention of, 2 Cor. 12. 1. a Rapture and Ecstasy; as Chap. 10. 10.

18 And saw him laying upon me *, Make haste, and get thee quickly k out of Jerusalem; for i they will not receive thy testimony concerning me.

k This St. Paul takes notice of, that it might appear unto the Jews that he did not out of choice, or because he bare a grudge against them, decline them, and preach to the Gentiles. l As if Christ had said, They who were appointed unto Life, and were curable, are already cured; but the rest who are hardened, nothing remains for them but utter destruction.

19 * And I said, Lord *, they n know that I am * Ver. 4. prisoned, and bear in every Synagogue them that lived on thee. m This was Paul's Objection which he made against the Will of God concerning his leaving Jerusalem, and the Jews in it; and shews how apt carnal Reason is in the very best men to setup its self against the Wisdom of God, and to argue for what we fancy best to be done, or left undone. n The sum of his reasoning is this, That he was most likely to do more good amongst the Jews than amongst the Gentiles, whither God was sending of him; because the Jews knew how zealous he had been not only to observe the Law himself, but to procure its observation by all others; And that it was no less than a Miracle which changed his mind about it. He shews also by this, his great love unto the Jews, whom he would have staid withal, had it been at his choice; and also only remove from by Gods command.

20 * And when the blood of thy o martyr Ste- * Chap. 7. 58. phen was shed, I also was standing by, and p consenting unto his death, and kept the raiment q of them that r flew him.

o Martyr is a Greek word that signifies a Witness; and is here, and since by the Ecclesiastical Writers, appropriated unto such as suffer Death for the Testimony they give to the Truths of God, or Doctrine of the Gospel. p As Chap. 8. 1. q That is, of the Witnesses against Stephen; as Chap. 7. 58. For the Witnesses did slay him not only by the Testimony which they gave against him, but they were to be the first who stoned him, r or murdered him.

21 And he said unto me s, Depart *: for I will s * Chap. 13. 2. find thee s far hence unto the Gentiles.

s God repeats his Command, and by that answers all Eph. 3. 8. Paul's Reasonings, whatsoever the event be, whether the 1 Tim. 2. 7. Gentiles will hear, or whether they will forbear, he must 2 Tim. 1. 11. go unto them. When the Will of God is manifest, we must do it, whatsoever success we are like to have. t This was verified. God sent Paul, and he went very far; as appears, Chap. 9. 15. Rom. 15. 19. Gal. 1. 17. and 2. 8.

22 And they gave him audience unto u this word, and then list up their voices, and said w *, Away with * Chap. 21. 36. him: so flew from the earth: for it is not fit that he should live.

u They had heard all the rest of St. Paul's Discourse without any gain-saying; either thinking it did not much concern them whether it were true or false; or else being convinced of the truth of it, they were silent. But when the mercy of God unto any but themselves is mentioned, they are not able to bear with it. Tho they themselves refused the Offers of Gods Mercy, yet they could not endure that it should be tendered unto others, especially that others should be preferred before them in the sending of it. w That is, kill him; encouraging one another to so barbarous a Murder, or exciting their Rulers unto it.

23 And as they cried out, and x, cast off their clothes, and x threw dust into the air.

y They that stoned the Blasphemer, cast off their upper garments, that they might be the readier to do that Executable and so call, or rend them off, in sign of grief and detestation of Paul's (supposed) Blasphemy. z Out of raging madness, having no stones at their place to throw at him, or stamping on the ground first with their feet, and taking thence the loofed of Earth, threw it up, to shew that Paul had sinned against Heaven, and provoked the God who dwells there: And that he was not worthy to tread on the Earth; which as well as they could, they took from him.

24 y The Chief captain commanded him to be brought into the z castle, and bad that he should be examined a by scourging: that he might b know wherefore they cried to against him.

z Of whom, Chap. 21. 31. o For Fort called Antonia; as Chap. 21. 34. a Of torturing (being put to the Question); as the Ermen Expression is agreeable to the Greek word here used; which went no further than by scourging.

ing; which was for this purpose used upon the blessed body of our Saviour, Matth. 27. 26. b The chief Captain took it for granted that he was some notorious Malefactor whom he called out against himself, accounting Vox Populi to be Vox Dei: And because in that confusion he could not know the certainty from his Accusers, he would write a confession out of St. Paul, whom they accused.

25 And as they e bound h m with thongs, Paul said unto the centurion that stood by, Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and undominate?

e They who were to be scourged, were bound to a Post or Column (amongst the Jews) of a Cubit and an half high, inclining downwards upon it: And these Thongs were such wherewith they bound Paul to this Column or Pillar; and with which also they intended to scourge him. d That is, it is not lawful to scourge a Roman; much less undominate: See on Chap. 16. 37. This latter, the Laws of no Nation that was civilized did ever allow.

26 When the e centurion heard that, he went and told the chief captains, a saying, Take heed what thou doest: for this man is a Roman.

e There were several Centurions under one chief Captain or Chiliarch; as there are several Captains under one Colonel: and this Centurion might be deputed to examine Paul. The Reason why they presently desisted from binding Paul, and informed the Commander in chief of what he had alleged, might be, because as it was very penal to challenge this privilege, so it was Treason for any to deny it to such as whom it was due.

27 Then the chief captain came, and said unto him, Tell me, art thou a Roman? He said f, Y.

f It is very reasonable that a good man should make use of such lawful privileges as the place in which he lives doth afford, and his condition may be allowed. And it is part of that Wisdom our Saviour does recommend, if it does not destroy the Innocence of the Dove, Matth. 10. 16.

28 And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I this freedom. And Paul said, But I was g free-born.

g The Historian relates, that the Emperor Claudius sold this privilege to such Foreigners as had not by any notable service merited to have it conferred upon them. At first it cost them very much to obtain it, as it did this chief Captain; but afterwards it was more cheap and contemptible. h The Paul was born of Hebrew Parents, yet he was born at Tarsus, to the Naives of which Town Augustus had given this privilege, for the assistance that the Citizens afforded him in his Wars with Bruus and Cassius; or as some will have it, for favouring of Julius Caesar, this privilege was granted unto that place by him: And they on the other side, to continue the sense of his favour, called their Town to be called Julianopolis, or the City of Julius.

29 Then straightway i they departed from him which should have examined him: and the chief captain also was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and because he had bound him.

i Who had bound him, and would have scourged him. k The Crime of breaking the Privileges of the Roman Citizens, being accounted no less than Treason, and Suo, as they called it, against the Majesty of that People; at afterwards it was as great an Offence against their Emperor.

30 On the morrow, because he would have known the certainty wherefore he was accused of the Jews, he looked him from his bands, and commanded the chief priests and all their counsel to appear, and brought Paul down, and set him before them.

l That he might not continue, after knowledge, in that (accounted) Crime of binding a Roman Citizen; as also that Paul might speak with the greater liberty and freedom in his own defence. m The chief of the four and twenty courses amongst the Priests, according to their Families, or such as in place and dignity did excel in the Sanhedrim.

CHAP. XXIII.

And Paul earnestly beholding the council, said, Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God e, until this day.

a Acknowledging himself to have defended from the Patriarchs as well as they; and bespeaks, as much as he could, their favour and attention. b Not that he thought himself to have been without sin or fault; for he acknowledges and bewails his Captivity to the Law of sin. Rom. 7. 23. but that he was not conscious to himself of any notorious Impiety (as Sacrilege, which they accused him of); Nay, he had not suffered willingly any sin to be, much less to reign in him. And as for his persecuting of the Christians, he did it not to flatter any with it, or upon any sinister design whatsoever, but thinking to serve God by it. 1 Tim. 1. 13. c In the sense of Gods seeing of him, and whom St. Paul acknowledges to be the searcher and knower of the heart and conscience.

2 And the high priest Ananias commanded them that stood by him, to smite him on the mouth.

d The Officers probably. e Thus Micaiah was smote by Zedekiah the false Prophet. 1 Kings 22. 24. and Jerusalem by Pashur, Jer. 20. 2. And our blessed Lord escaped not this suffering and indignity, John 18. 22. Now this was the rather inflicted on Paul, because of his protesting of his Innocency; which did reflect upon the Council, as being injurious: But it was indeed no more than what was necessary in his own just defence, and for the glory of the Gospel.

3 Then said Paul unto him, God shall smite thee, if thou wilt; for I see thee to judge me after the law, and e commandest me to be smitten g contrary to the law?

f An excellent similitude to represent wicked men, especially Hypocrites by, who counterfeit zeal for Gods word and worship, whilst they intend only their own profit or grandeur. Thus our Saviour censured the Seribes and Pharisees who whitened Sepulchres, Matth. 23. 27. Whited Graves and Walls, tho they seem fair and comely, have within nothing but rottenness and useless rubbish. Now these words are not to be looked upon as a Curse or Imprecation upon the High Priest; which does not conflict with the temper of the Gospel; but they are rather to be taken as a Prophecy or Prediction, St. Paul having on occasion had the gift of Prophecy among the other gifts of the Holy Ghost. And accordingly, h he observed, that this High Priest either died, or was put out of his place by the High Priest himself, mentioned, 2 Tim. 4. 14. is to be understood: as also several other Curses (seemingly wished) by holy men, especially in the Psalms; as Psal. 109. 6, 7, 8. and many other places; which are by no means for our imitation; neither were they spoken so much as the Wishes or Prayers of such as uttered them, as they were their Prophecies and Predictions; which we know came to pass: as that now mentioned was fulfilled in the person of Judas. i It was contrary to all Law, Divine and Humane, that any should be punished before that he was heard; and especially to their own Judicial Law, which in matters of this nature they were yet governed by under the Romans. Now the Jews were fitter to hear and enquire diligently, whether the matter any was accused of, were true, before they might give sentence, or inflict any punishment upon them, Deut. 17. 4.

4 And they that stood by, said b, Revilest thou Gods high priest?

b These partial Parasites take no notice of the real injury done unto Paul by the High Priest, and readily catch at the seeming calumny spoke by Paul against him.

5 Then said Paul, I wist not, brethren, that h he was the high priest: For it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people.

i Paul does not here ironically say this, because the High Priest had, contrary to his Place and Office called him to be smitten; but either, 1. Because he knew now no High Priest on Earth, but on Christ Heavens; or 2. Because the High Priests being so often changed (informing as in one year sometimes they have had three), and they being in a confusion at this time, and not meeting or sitting in their due place and order, Paul might very well be ignorant who that was, who in such a multitude had commanded that they should smite him. k The Scripture here cited by St. Paul, is Exodus 22. 28.

6 But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the council, Men and brethren, a I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee. b of the hope and c of the resurrection of the dead d I am called in question.

l In his former Protestation, Opinion, and Consecration; and now also in the points that were controverted betwixt them: And St. Paul, with his Dove-like Innocency; does in this but make use of the Serpentine subtilty, to preserve himself, and to gain credit unto the Truths of the Gospel. m The son of Pharisees in the Plural; either for several Different his Ancestors had been of that Sect; or that both his Father and his Mother were of it. n Or for the hope of the Resurrection, an Hebraic idiom: altho he did not agree with the Pharisees in all their Opinions, yet in this he did: and the Resurrection was the common Subject he preached upon: and the Gospel does give us the best proof and evidence of it; inasmuch that Paul was taxed for preaching Jesus and the Resurrection, Chap. 17. 18. And unless there was a Resurrection, his preaching was vain, and his faith vain, 1 Cor. 15. 13, 14.

7 And when he had said, There arose a dissention between the Pharisees and the Sadducees: and the multitude was divided.

Not only of the common people, or standers by, but of the Senators and Judges; God by this means dividing and infatigating of them, that they could not bring about Paul's intended destruction.

8 For the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither of angel nor spirit; but the Pharisees confess both.

a Against this our Saviour argued, Matth. 22. 23, 28. g It seems strange, that they should deny that they were angels, whereas they owned the Pentateuch, or Five Books of Moses, in which mention is made frequently of Angels: But it seems that they understood those places Allegorically; either for good Intincts or Apparitions caused by God to manifest his mind by them unto men, wresting those places to their own destruction. h They denied the Existence of the Soul of man, as different from the Crass and Temperament of his Body; and therefore believed that the Soul perished with the Body. Nay, they were far from believing there was any Spirit, that they held blasphemously, that God himself was Corporeal. i The three things here mentioned, which the Pharisees denied, may be well spoken of as but two, viz. the Resurrection and the Existence of Spirits: When men sin with much Obstinacy against supernatural light, God justly withdraws from them even natural light, and they are punished (as the Egyptians were) with such darkness as may be felt, Exodus 10. 21.

9 And there arose a great cry: And the *s*cribes that were of the Pharisees part arose, and strove, saying, We find no evil in this man: but a if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God.

s Scribe is a Name denoting an Office or Place; and the Scribes were men skilled in the Law. a Some take the latter to be Exegetical of the former; and that a Scribe is only meant an Angel, by such Messengers God many times sending his Messages to the children of men: Yet others by the Spirit understand Prophetic Revelation, and the Spirit of Prophecy, which was expected to be shed abroad in large measures about that time; as appears, John. 39. See Chap. 5. 39.

10 And when there arose a great dissention, the chief captain fearing lest Paul should have been pulled in pieces of them, commanded the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle.

a Feuds about pretended Religion are usually among all men very sharp, because their Opinions being the Issues of their own Brains, are more beloved than their children, the fruit of their bodies. b From the Fort or Castle, unto which there was an Ascent or Stair, to go up and down by.

11 And the night following, the Lord s stood by him, and said, a Be of good cheer, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

i In a Revelation appearing inwardly to his mind; which is rather thought to have been so, because it is here said to have been in the Night; but whether by Vision, or Revelation, it is all one as to this purpose, and neither were infrequent unto Paul, 2 Cor. 12. 1. a So true it is, what our Saviour had promised and foretold, John 16. ult. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but in me ye shall have peace.

12 And when it was day, certain of the Jews were banded together, and bound themselves under a curse, saying, that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul.

b If they did not kill Paul before they did eat or drink any more, they wished that they might become a Cleron, or Anathema; as Jericho, and the Inhabitants thereof were, being devoted to utter ruin and destruction. c If they did not execute this their wicked design, they would yield themselves to be Anathematized, or Excommunicated, as those that had broken their Pact or Agreement.

13 And they were e more than forty which had made this conspiracy.

e They made themselves sure (they thought) of killing Paul: There were above Forty to One. The Churches Enemies are unanimous and resolute. As David formerly, Jo might now Paul say, They that are mad against me, are Jews against me, Psalm. 102. 8.

14 And they came to the chief priests and elders, and said, We have bound our selves under a great curse, that we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul.

d Whose Place and Office it was to have disallowed such an abominable Murder: For the priests ius should preserve knowledge, Malachi 2. And they could not but have been guilty of the Blood of St. Paul, had it been shed, but by encouraging the Design, became accessory unto it. But they had drank Blood very largely before now; viz. the Blood of St. Stephen, and the Blood of our Saviour; and 'tis no wonder that they thirst for more: Such wild Beasts (rather than Men) when they have once tasted of Blood, are never satisfied with it. But at what a low ebb was Religion, when the Chief Priests themselves combine with Assassins?

15 Now therefore e ye e with the council signify to the chief captain, that he bring him down unto you to morrow, as though i ye would enquire something more perfectly concerning him: and we, or g ever he come near, are ready to kill him.

e The Chief Priests are to join with the Council in this design to the Chief Captain: for they had no Authority to command him. f The Plot against Paul's Life was laid very deep, and not easily to be discovered; it being usual to send for Prisoners to re-examine them, especially when Religion and the publick Peace is concerned; as they pretended that here they were. g The space between the Castle and the place where the Council met, being considerable, it gave the greater advantage to the Conspirators.

16 And when Paul's sisters son heard of their laying in wait, he went and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

h Who is thought to have been one of Paul's Company; but the hatred against Paul by the Jews being so general, because of his (supposed) prophaning of the Temple, they were not so curious who they spoke to of this Concocted and Design. Or rather, there is no Council against God: the very Birds of the Air, if need were, shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter, Ezeke. 10. 2. For he that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision, Psalm. 2. 4.

17 Then Paul called i one of the Centurions unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief captain: for he hath a certain thing to tell him.

i The Chief Captain having the Command of a Thousand Soldiers, there were Ten Captains under him: One of these Paul enrolls with his Message to the Chief Captain, not making any particular Request unto the Chief Captain, supposing him to have so much of the Roman Justice in him, that when he understood his case, he would provide for his safety; which he was not mistaken in.

18 So he k took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and said, Paul the prisoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath something to say unto thee.

k The Centurion took Paul's Kinsman, and went with him, as was desired, unto the Chief Captain: that there might be no mistake, but that he might hear all out of the young mans own mouth, and be the more affected with it. l On the chained: For it was customary to chain their Prisoners for their greater security. And God is now remembering of Paul in his bonds.

19 Then the chief captain m took him by the hand, and went with him aside privately, and asked him; What is that thou hast to tell me?

ther to Drusilla and Bernice here spoken of, and lived in incest with her, whom Juvenal in his Satyrs speaks of:

Barbarus incestu dedit hunc Agrippa Sorori.

14 And when they had been there many days, Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix:

* Chap. 24. 27.

1. Either amongst common Discourse, or matter of Novelty, and for the strangers of it, or for his advice about it. However, by this means the wickedness of the Jews was published, and the safety of St. Paul provided for, and God's design of publishing the Gospel at Rome its self furthered.

15 About whom when I was at Jerusalem, the chief priests and elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgement against him.

16 To wit, judgement of Death upon Paul, that he might be sentenced according to the Crimes they had laid against him: Paul being put for adulterum. Neither do they at all matter that Paul's Cause was not yet heard; they would rather have had him condemned unheard, as they had gotten our Saviour to be condemned, tho the Judge declared, that he found no fault in him, Luke 23. 4. which their unjust desire appears by Festus his Answer.

17 To whom I answered, It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused, have the accusers face to face, and have license to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.

18 To condemn any man indicta causa, without sufficient cause alleged and proved, is not only against the Laws of the Romans, but of the Jews, Deut. 21. 4. Nay, against the Law of Nature and of all Nations. Yet Malice had so far blinded the Enemies of St. Paul, that they go about such things as an Heathen reproves, and the very light of Nature condemns.

19 Therefore when they were come hither, without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgement-seat, and I commanded the man to be brought forth.

20 Festus had gratified the Jews in what lawfully he might, not detaining them at Charges from their habitations: And that not only commends Festus his own Justice, but Paul's Innocence: For if Paul had not appeared guilty, he would have left him to the Rage of the Jews, whom he desired to gratify what he could.

21 Against whom when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed.

22 For Festus knowing how Paul had been prosecuted by the Jews before Felix; and what Charge they had been at, and what Journeys they had made about him, could not think less than that he was a Capital Offender.

* Chap. 23. 25.

23 But had certain questions against him of their own superstition, and of one Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

24 So this Heathen Governor prophesied call the Religion and Worship of God's own Institution, and that in the presence of Agrippa and Bernice, who were both Jews, or at least, brought up amongst them. To have been raised again from the dead; acknowledging with them, that he had been indeed dead.

25 And because I doubted of such manner of questions, I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.

26 Festus friends, that he knew not by what Rule those Cases were to be decided, nor before what Judges; whether before himself or the Jewish Sanhedrim. But this is only his pretension: The true Cause why he would not acquit Paul, that he knew him to be innocent, we read, verse 9. viz, that he might do the Jews a pleasure. For he asked Paul this question, Whether he would go to Jerusalem, but with a Resolution to have sent him whether he would or no, had he not appeared; but then he durst not: For in certain Cases none could hinder Appeals, from any Judge, to the People in the former times, &c. to their Emperor in the latter times.

27 But when Paul had appealed to be referred unto the hearing of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept till I might send him to Cesar.

The Emperor who now reigned, and to whom Paul appealed, was Nero, who was called Augustus; this Title being at first appropriated to Octavius, who succeeded Julius Caesar; but out of honour unto him, or because of his signification, it became an Appellative, and was given unto all the Emperors successively: Nay, the Emperor of Germany to this day is called Sacred Augustus. As from Octavius, the Emperors of Rome had the Name of Augustus, so from the first Emperor Julius, they have the Name of Cesar. This word Cesar, which was the proper Name of the first Emperor, is, in acknowledgment of him, made an Appellative to all his Successors.

22 Then Agrippa laid unto Festus, I would also hear the man myself. To morrow, laid he, thou shalt hear him.

23 Agrippa being well acquainted with the Jewish Religion, if not a Jew, could not but have heard of our Saviour, his Doctrine, Death and Resurrection; and yet makes his desire but out of Curiosity; as Herod desired to hear John Baptist, Mark 6. 20. and to see our Saviour, Luke 23. 8.

24 And on the morrow, when Agrippa was come, and Bernice, with great pomp, and were entered into the place of hearing, with the chief captains, and principal men of the city, at Festus commandment Paul was brought forth.

25 The State, Attire, and Retinue used in this Solemnity is much undervalued by the term the Holy Ghost here gives it (paraklesis); intimating, that all worldly glory is but in opinion and appearance merely; and that as it is so passeth away. Here is a great difference indeed between these great persons thus adorned and accompanied on the one side, and Paul, the Prisoner (deusque), the chained, as he is called, Chap. 23. 18, on the other side: Yet Holy Paul, with great Reason, prefers his Condition before theirs. He does not desire to partake with them in their ease and splendor, but with Christ in his disgrace and sufferings, Phil. 2. 10.

26 And Festus laid, king Agrippa, and all men which are here present with us, ye see ye this man, about whom all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both at Jerusalem, and also here; crying that he ought not to live any longer.

27 Well might Paul be able, to be friends in so great multitude, and to be shewn and pointed at as a Miracle, being made a spectacle to the world, and to angels and men as 1 Cor. 4. 9. But he found freely the benefit and efficacy of that promise, Mat. 28. 20. I am with you unto the end of the world.

28 But when I found that he had committed nothing worthy of death, and that he himself had appealed to Augustus, I have determined to send him.

29 The Calumny of the Jews adds to the Reputation of St. Paul: So many Enemies, and so long in finding or making a Fault that might reach his Life, and yet to be disappointed! Paul and his Religion are vindicated by the Testimony of Lysias, the Chief Captain, Chap. 23. 29. and of Felix, the Governor, Chap. 24. 25. and here by Festus, as afterwards by Agrippa too, Chap. 26. 32. So mighty is Truth and Innocence, that they do prevail sooner at last.

30 Of whom I have no certain thing to write unto my Lord. Wherefore I have brought him before you, and specially before thee, O King Agrippa; that after examination had, I might have somewhat to write.

31 Nero, the present Emperor, whose Deputy Festus was in this Province; the same of the former Emperors reified this Name, as favouring of too much Arbitrariness; the latter did accept of it. Agrippa being brought up in the knowledge of the Jewish Law, tho it was not his business to judge Paul's Cause, yet he might instruct and inform the Judge about it.

32 For it seemeth to be unreasonable to send a prisoner, and not wish to signify the crimes laid against him.

33 So great a clamour, so hot a Pursuit, and yet after all this the Judge (who would willingly have condemned Paul, and gratified the Jews) knows not wherefore all this had been: But the more must he have been self-condemned that durst not absolve or free a Prisoner who was detained only by the power and multitude of his Adversaries.

CHAP. XXVI.

Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Thou art permitted to speak for thy self. Then Paul stretched forth the hand and answered for himself.

1 This stretching forth of his hand was, 1. To obtain silence of others whilst he spake; or, 2. To shew his innocence, whilst he uses this modest confidence: or, 3. As other Orators when they begin to speak, move their hands. The Providence of God wonderfully procures Paul a liberty to publish the Gospel, and to make his Cause and Religion known.

2 I think my self happy, king Agrippa, because I shall answer for my self this day & before thee, touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Jews.

3 Paul thought it to be his advantage to speak before Agrippa, who could not be unacquainted with the Law or the Prophecy, by which St. Paul would have his Cause determined. Paul Agrippa was not as Judge in this place, yet his Opinion and Judgement could not but prevail much with Festus.

4 Especially, because I know thee to be expert in all customs and questions which are among the Jews: wherefore I beseech thee to hear me patiently.

5 This is not flattery, but a plain confession of what was true; for Agrippa, by reason of his birth and breeding, could not be wholly ignorant of those things in question. 1. About the Messiah; 2. About the Resurrection; 3. About the giving of the Holy Ghost. 4. It being a matter that concerned Religion, and the Life and Liberty of a man, nothing but ignorance or impiety could take him off from attending unto it.

6 My manner of life from my youth, which was at the first among mine own nation at Jerusalem, know all the Jews,

7 Paul appeals to his enemies, the Jews themselves, whether they could tax him with any enormity whilst he was of their persuasion; whereby he vindicates his holy Religion from being the first and off-scouring of other Religions, as some would make it; as also to intimate, that it was his Religion which made him so hateful unto them, and not any ill practices done by him.

8 Which knew me from the beginning, (if they would testify) that after the most straitest sect of our Religion, I lived a Pharisee.

9 Of this Heretic, Sect, Opinion, or way of the Pharisees, St. Paul rightly commends, if we consider it comparatively with the other Sects of the Sadducees and Essenes; he had called this before, Chap. 22. 3. the most exact manner of the Law of his Fathers: For it is certain it was more learned and strictly, and came nearer to the Truth in many things than the other did.

10 And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers:

11 The posture of such as are held for guilty. St. Paul brings in the discourse of the Resurrection, which, as hath been observed, is the foundation of all Religion, 1 Cor. 15. 14. Chap. 23. 6. and 24. 15. now is called the hope of the promise; because God's Promise did raise them up to this hope: for God having promised to be the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, gave them rather less than other in this world; neither had they any property in all the Promised Land, but only to a burying place; whence they might certainly infer, that there was another Life to be expected, in which God would make us his Word good. Paul was also judged for the hope of the Promise, taking this hope for the Salvation which Christ did purchase, and Paul Preach, which was also promised unto the Fathers, tho in under types, and obscure representations. The term Paul was judged for one of those two Articles of our Faith, viz, the Resurrection of the Body, or a Life everlasting.

12 Unto which promise our twelve tribes incessantly serving God day and night, hope to come: for which hopes sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews.

13 So St. Paul still reckons them, notwithstanding that the Tribes had been led captive, without returning again to their own Land. Yet, 1. There were many left by the King of Ashur in their own Land; and tho for a while they joined themselves unto the Samaritans rather than to the Jews, yet a Century or two before our Saviours time, they returned to the Jewish Religion and Worship; at least a very many of them. 2. Tho the Ten Tribes never returned (as Tribes) intirely back again; yet many of them doubtless had that love for their Religion and Country, as they took all opportunities of coming back. 3. At their first defection in Jeroboam's time, God touched the hearts of a great many, who rather changed their Habitation than their Religion: So that St. James might well dedicate his Epistle to the Twelve Tribes, for there were some who at the dispersion were scattered out of every Tribe. 4. Now these with great intention and earnestness of desire, as when any stretcheth himself to his utmost length to reach hold of ought) endeavoured to obtain that very Salvation which God had promised, and the Gospel revealed.

14 Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?

15 This St. Paul seems to have spoken in regard of Festus, and many other there present, who were Heathens; or of any of the Sadducees (if any such were amongst them); as for Agrippa, he believed the Prophecy, verse 7. and had out of them learned and observed this promise, verse 7. However God did not leave himself without a Witness to testify so much unto all, as should make the Doctrine of the Resurrection credible, whenever it should be revealed unto them. The works of Creation evidence it; for he that can give Life unto that which had it not, can restore it unto that which had it; and the works of Providence argue it. In every Spring there is a Resurrection of such Plants or Trees, as seemed dead. Nay, the Bread which we daily feed on, was made of that grain, which was not quickened except it died; 1 Cor. 15. 36.

16 I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth, 17 The Religion which teacheth Christ is to be worshipped, and his Name to be Magnified. So they called our Saviour, of which see, Chap. 23. 8.

18 Which thing I also did in Jerusalem; and many of the saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority from the chief priests; and, when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them.

19 The Professors of the Religion of the Holy Jesus, who are called to be Saints, Romans, and have him for the great example of holiness, who fulfilled all righteousness, and from him they have the Spirit of holiness, being sanctified in him, 1 Cor. 1. 2. and whoever hath not his Spirit, he is none of his, Rom. 8. 9. Paul was not one of the Council; nor, that we read of, in any Office or Place to judge any Person. Besides, the Jews are thought to have had no power of Life and Death; and that St. Stephen was slain rather in a popular tumult, than legally; but Paul may be said to do this, by carrying the suffrages or Sentence to the Roman President, or any others to get it executed (for so the words will bear) and however: by his approving, rejoicing at, and delighting in their condemnation (which was indeed giving his voice, as much as he could, against them) this was verified.

20 And I punished them oft in every synagoga, and compelled them to blaspheme; and being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities.

21 Paul confesses that he compelled them to blaspheme, either, 1. by the Torments he made them to be put unto; or, 2. by his own example: for he confessed, that he had been a blasphemer himself; 1 Tim. 1. 13. This blasphemy was either, 1. denying of Christ, and acknowledging that he was justly condemned. 2. Drove them out of Jerusalem and Judea; and according to what Paul then believed, he drove them from the worship of the true God, and laid, in effect, as David's Adversaries when they expelled him from Jerusalem, Go, and serve other Gods, 1 Sam. 26. 19.

22 Whereupon I went to Damascus, with authority and commission from the chief priests:

23 With procuratory Letters recommending him, to the Jews abroad; and deputing him as their Agent.

24 At midday, O King, I saw in the way a light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun, shining round about me, and then which journeyed with me.

25 This appeared at noon-day, that it might not be suspected to be a dream or vision: For our Saviour's face in the transfiguration did shine as the Sun, Mat. 17. 2. and he was yet on earth in his mortal body: How much more resplendent must it have been now, when he appeared from Heaven with his glorious body? And if the Righteous shall shine as the Sun, Deut. 18. 31. Matth. 13. 43. how much more does their Prince and Saviour? See concerning this History, Chap. 9. 3. &c. and Chap. 22. 6.

40 And when they had taken up the anchors, they committed themselves unto the sea, and loosed the rudder-bands, and hoisted up the main fail to the wind, and made towards shore.

41 Rudder is in the Plural Number put for the Singular: Or rather, in those times they having Two Rudders (as by several passages amongst the Ancients do appear), they were both loosed, that now they might use them to direct the ship to the best advantage in making the shore, they having been tied whilst they were a-drift, or at Anchor. 42 And falling into a place where two seas meet, they ran the ship a-ground; and the fore-part stuck fast, and remained unmovable; but the hinder part was broken with the violence of the waves.

43 A Shoal, Sand, or Isthmus, where the Sea was on both sides of it. 44 And the soldiers counsel was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim out and escape. This speaks their great ingratitude, that they would take away Paul's Life, who had preferred theirs. But Christ's Apostles and Ministers must not look for their Reward in this Life: To men cannot, or do not recompense them, they shall be recompensed at the Resurrection of the Just, Luke 14. 14.

45 But the centurion willing to save Paul, kept them from their purpose, and commanded that they which could swim, should cast themselves first into the sea, and get to land:

46 Because Paul was a Roman Citizen, whose Death he durst not be accessory unto. It may be also, that this Centurion (if there were no more), as the Samaritan that was cleansed, did this in thankfulness unto Paul: That they might be helpful to others in getting on shore.

47 And the rest, some were on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship: And so it came to pass that they escaped all safe to land.

48 Still using means, tho it was of God only that they had them; and that they were effectual to them. In this History is lively verified that of the Psalmist, Psa. 107. 19, 20. Their soul adhered all manner of meat, and they drew near unto the gates of death. Then they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, he saved them out of their distress. He sent his word and healed them, he delivered them from their destruction. And what follows, but, ver. 21. O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, for his wonderful works to the children of men. God hath a Tribute of Praise which is due unto him from the Readers of this Story, that they would acknowledge that there is of none else who can deliver after this manner, Dan. 3. 29, and then to be sure they will desire that this God might be their God for ever and ever, Psa. 48. 14.

CHAP. XXVIII.

And when they were escaped, then they knew that the island was called Melita.

4 This was foretold by Paul, Chap. 27. 26. And therefore though the Mariners knew not the Land, ver. 39. and were not able to direct the ship, as ver. 19. yet God did so ordered it, that not a word spoken by Paul did fall to the ground, but the Wind and Sea obey him. 5 Now called Melita, a little Island between Sicily and Africa. There is another obscure Island in Ithymus, that was called by this name, which some have mistook for this place of Paul's shipwreck, by reason that this Tempest was in the Adriatick Sea: but not only the Gulf of Venice, but the Sea about Sicily, and this Coast, was so called; as Strabo witnesseth: See Chap. 27. 27.

6 And the barbarous people shewed us no little kindness: for they kindled a fire, and received us every one, because of the present rain; and because of the cold.

7 So the Grecians and Romans called all other Nations that did not receive their Customs, nor speak their Language, 1 Cor. 14. 11. And to this day the African Coast over-against this Island, is called Barbary. 8 How far is this Humanity of heart beyond that Inhumanity which some that are called Christians use towards those that are shipwreck'd, and their Goods that come on shore?

9 And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks, and laid them on the fire; there came a viper out of the hear, and fastened on his hand.

10 A Creature so venomous, that not only its biting, but (some say) its breath is deadly: This upon the warmth of the fire, being benumbed with the cold, and now refreshed, began to stir itself. 11 As it used to do when it biteth, God by this Miracle prepares this People not only to be civil and courteous unto Paul, but to believe the Gospel which he preached, wheresoever he went. And this wonderful work of God was (as Gods seal to his Ministry) to shew his Authority to be from him.

12 And when the barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on his hand, they said amongst themselves, No doubt this man is a murderer, whom though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth not to live.

13 So the Viper is called by that Appellative word; from whence also comes Tortoise, or Trecle, which is made out of flesh, or Trachules of Vipers. And if men can make an Antidote out of Poyson, much more can God bring good out of evil. 14 It is a strange sense that men by the light of Nature had of Divine Vengeance; especially of Gods revenging of Murder. Hence they called one of their Furies, Iphigene; as one that punished and revenged Murder. Yet they were to blame in this case, 1. Because they confine the punishment of wicked men wholly unto this Life. 2. In that they did not expect the event: They judged before they knew what would be the event of Paul afterwards. 3. They erred, in that they censured the goodness or badness of a man's state or cause by his prosperity or adversity.

15 And he shook off the beast into the fire, and felt no harm.

16 A Daniel in the Lion's Den. God is the God of Nature, and the most natural properties are restrained when he please, and cannot be exerted without his concurrence. Thus the promises our blessed Saviour made, Mark 16. 18. Luke 10. 19. were fulfilled according to the Letter.

17 Howbeit they looked when he should have swollen, or fallen down dead suddenly: But after they had looked a great while, and saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and said that he was no God.

18 The word signifies primarily to be burnt: and then by burning or scalding to swell, which is accounted the ordinary symptom of the biting of a Viper; to swell both, as if the part was burnt with fire. 19 In those places where there is much more heat, there is more Venom in the Viper. And thence some are said to live several days after they are bit by them, yet others die very suddenly upon this biting; as the known story of Cleopatra's death. And condemned persons were sometimes put to death by Vipers let unto their breasts. 20 A strange Extreme; so incertain and unequal are mens minds.

21 In the same quarters were possessions of the chief man of the island, whose name was Publius, who received us and lodged us three days courteously.

22 This Publius is thought to have been Governor for the Romans in this Island. However, he was a man of great Account and Estate, that could provide for so many as were in the ship, and receive them into his own house.

23 And it came to pass that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever, and of a bloody flux; to whom Paul entered in, and prayed, and laid his hands on him, and healed him.

24 A painful and dangerous Disease: the torment in the bowels frequently causing a Fever. 25 Paul could do nothing of himself; and therefore begs of God the Recovery of Publius his Father. It is God only that kills and makes alive, Sam. 2. 6. 26 This Imposition of Hands was commonly used, in miraculous Cures; as Math. 9. 18. Mark 6. 5. and is joined with Prayer, Math. 19. 13. which it might be a Symbol of. Thus Publius was well payed for what he did for Paul and his Company. Relieving of the poor and distressed is frequently rewarded in this World, and not only in the World to come. And God now recommends the Gospel and the Ministry of Paul by this Miracle also:

15 For none could do such things as these, unless God were with him.

16 So when this was done, y other also which had diseases in the island, came, and were healed.

17 The fame of this Cure, wrought so suddenly, perfectly, and only with the laying on of Paul's hands, could not but spread far and near; especially being done upon the Governor: And men are usually very careful about their bodily health and welfare. So that their Diseases were blifted Occasions to bring them to the knowledge of God in Christ, whom Paul preached. And they might have perished eternally, if they had not perished (or been thus near unto perishing) temporally.

18 Who also honoured us with many honours; and when we departed, they laded us with such things as were necessary.

19 They who were cured, rewarded or presented the Apostle and his Company very liberally. And this was the effect of that inward Respect and real Esteem they had for them; and was a fruit of their Faith.

20 And after three monthes we departed in a ship of Alexandria, which had wintered in the isle, whose sign was w Castor and Pollux.

21 These Three Monthes that St. Paul staid at Melita, he spent like a true Labourer in the Lord's Vineyard, planning a Church that was famous for its steadfastness in the Truth. 22 It was their wont to lay up their ships all the Winter season; as we may see, Chap. 27. 12. And to this day the Gallies seldom go out on those Seas in Winter. 23 Feigned to be the Sons of Jupiter, and to have the ordering of Temples, and the care of Mariners, and were chosen for the Patrons of that ship, by the Pagan Owners of it.

24 At landing at Syracuse, we tarried there three days.

25 The chief City of Sicily, famous for Archimedes. 26 To sell probably some of their wares, the ship making a trading Voyage.

27 And from thence we set a compass, and came to S Rhegium: and after one day the fourth-wind blew, and we came the next day to a Puteoli.

28 A City in the Kingdom of Naples, over-against Messina, in Sicily; so called because that Sicily was believed to be thereabouts rent and plucked from the main Land, unto which they held it to have been formerly joyned, until by a Tempest it became an Island. 29 Puteoli is a Sea-Town not far from Naples.

30 Where we found b brethren, and were desirous to tarry with them seven days: And so we went to ward c Rome.

31 b Christians, as some think; for so they mutually called one another. But it is not so probable that any should profess Christianity to near unto Rome, and that it should be so more known, or believed in Rome. Others therefore think that the Apostle means Jews, whom he calls brethren (being, as himself, descended from Abraham): for so he calls the Jews he found at Rome (Brethren, ver. 7.) who yet called the Christians a Sect; adding, that it was every where spoken against, ver. 22. c Rome is known to be the chief City in Italy, and to have been the Empress of the World, and famous for the Church to whom St. Paul wrote his Epistle; known by its Inscription unto them.

32 And from thence, when the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us as far as d Appii-forum, and the three taverns: Whom when Paul saw, he thanked God for, and took courage.

33 A place about One and Fifty Miles, or Seventeen Leagues from Rome; so called from Appius Claudius, who made a Way from Rome thither, called from his Name, The Appian-way; and had his Statue there set up; which is the Reason why it is called thus: For the Romans did call those places Fora, where such Statues were placed (The concourse to see those Statues might bring them to be come Markets). 34 As that was a place of resort for the buying and selling of other Commodities, so this for the affording of necessary Provision. A little Town, hence so called, about Three and Thirty Miles, or Eleven Leagues from Rome. So that some came a greater, some a lesser way to meet with Paul, and shew their Respect unto him. These brethren are thought to have been converted by such as at the day of Pentecost were present, when those Marcellus were wrought, Chap. 2. 10. it being expressly said, that there were strangers from Rome. 35 God moving so many not to be ashamed of his bonds.

16 And when we came to Rome, the centurion delivered the prisoners to the captain of the guard: but Paul was suffered to dwell by himself, with a soldier that kept him.

17 The Praefectus Praesidis being Commander in chief over the Soldiers, and unto whom the Prisoners of State were usually committed. b God by this means giving Paul an opportunity to go abroad at his pleasure, tho chained, as ver. 20. Yet he might preach the Gospel; and that was he bound, 2 Tim. 2. 9. And now God is with Paul, as he was with Joseph in Prison, Gen. 39. 21. and procures him favour.

18 And it came to pass, that after three days, Paul called the chief of the Jews together. And when they were come together, he said unto them, Men and brethren, though I have committed nothing against the people or customs of our fathers; yet was I delivered prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans.

19 Paul does this not only out of an extraordinary Love which he had for that People, but also because the Apostles were commanded to go rather into the left hand of the house of Israel, Math. 10. 5, 6. The whole Oeconomy of the Gospel is a doing good for evil. So did our Saviour, who is the Author and Subject of it; and to make his Messengers or Ministers do; or they are not like to do any good at all: for the World will hate them, 1 John 7. 7.

20 Who when they had examined me, would have let me go, because there was no cause of death in me.

21 As Felix did in the presence of King Agrippa, Chap. 26. 29. who, though they were both Unbelievers, yet justified Paul; acknowledging that he had not committed any thing worthy of Bonds, much less of Death. Thus our Saviour was declared innocent by Pilate, Luke 23. 4, 14.

22 But when the Jews spake against me, I was constrained to appeal unto Caesar: not that I had ought to accuse my nation of.

23 The Jews used all their Oratory and Interest against Paul, both before Felix and Festus. And had it been in Felix's power (which after Paul's Appeal it was not), he would have sacrificed Paul to the malice of the Jews; and by that means got their favour, whom he had so incensed against him. 24 Paul did not so much want matter, as mind to accuse the Jews. And he declares, that whatsoever he had suffered, his intentions were not to calumniate them, but to vindicate himself.

25 For this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you: because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with. This Chap. 26. 29.

26 I see Chap. 23. 6. and 24. 21. This Hope is either, 1. of the Resurrection, as in the forementioned places; and Ch. 26. 6, 7. or 2. the Messiah, Christ is the Hope of Israel, for they pretended for many ages, and him now Paul preached. 27 For he had his liberty to go abroad, yet he was chained with his Right hand to the Soldiers Left hand who went with him; and could not possibly be loosed unwillingly from him.

28 And they said unto him, We neither received letters out of Judea, concerning thee, neither any of the brethren that came shewed or spake any harm of thee.

29 The High Priest and the rest of them that had persecuted Paul, did either disown of their Cause, when it should come to be impartially heard; or were supine and negligent in a matter which they pretended so highly to concern their Religion: But self-ends, their present ease and reputation, were the main matters they contended for.

30 But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: for as concerning this grief, we know that every where it is spoken against.

31 O: Herein, for so they called the Christian Religion, Chap. 24. 5, 14. 32 Of all conditions of men, Governors and people, and in all places, as Luke 2. 34. Christ is said to be a sign that shall be spoken against.

33 And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him into his lodging: To whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, 34 expounding them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the Prophets, 26. 6. 35 from morning till evening.

36 The House which he had hired, as ver. 16. and 30. 37 Expounded the Scriptures, and by them proved our Saviour

17. But God be thanked, that ye were the Servants of sin; but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you.

* Joh. 8. 32. Gal. 5. 1. 18. But as for you, God be thanked, that though once you were the Servants of sin, viz. when you were ignorant and unregenerate, yet now you are freed from that bondage, and set at liberty from the power and domination of sin. This Phrase expresseth the efficacy of Divine Doctrine in the hearts of Believers; it changes and fashioneth their hearts according to its likeness, 2 Cor. 3. 18. Hence in James 1. 21, 'tis called an ingrafted word, it turns the heart and life of the Hearer into its own nature, as the Rock doth the Clon that is ingrafted into it. The Doctrine of the Gospel is the Mould, and the hearer is the metall, which when tismelted and cast into the Mould receives its form and figure.

19. I speak after the manner of men, because of the infirmity of your flesh: For as many ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity, unto iniquity; even so now yield your members servants to righteousness, unto holiness.

u. q. d. I accommodate my self to your capacity, because of the weakness of your understanding in spiritual things; therefore I use this familiar similitude of service and freedom, that by these secular and civil things you might the better understand such as are spiritual. vid. Job 32. 12. u. q. d. The great thing that I desire of you (and tis most reasonable) is this, that you would be as sedulous and careful now to obey God, as you have formerly been to obey and serve sin, to do good as you have been to do evil. * To fleshly lust which defile you. y. i. e. Adding one sin to another, or else by the former you may understand Original, by the latter actual sin. He yields three stand orders; the service of sin, and but two about the service of God; wicked men take great pains for Hell. Oh that we would take the same for Heaven.

20. For when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness. z. q. d. When you served sin, you knew that God and Righteousness had no whit of your service, why then should sin have any of your service now. When ye have delivered up your selves to Righteousness or Godliness, to be the obedient followers thereof? Why should not ye now abstain as strictly from all sin, as then ye did from all good?

21. What fruit had ye then in those things, whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death. a. q. d. And this will be much more equal and reasonable, if you consider these three things. 1. How little fruit and satisfaction your former Sins have afforded you in the very time of committing them. 2. How nothing but shame and sorrow doth follow upon the remembrance of them. 3. How death, ye eternal death and damnation (unless pardoning Grace and mercy prevents it) will be the certain conclusion of them; and whether these things are true or no, I appeal to your selves.

22. But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. b. q. d. But now on the contrary, being set at liberty from the service of sin, and admitted to be the Servants of God, You plainly perceive a difference. 1. In your life time you inherit in Grace and Holiness, and that is no small fruit or advantage. And then, 2. At your death you shall have everlasting life.

23. For as the wages of sin is death: but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

* Gen. 2. 17. Chap. 5. 12. Jam. 1. 15. || Or, the gracious and free gift. c. q. d. Now therefore compare the Office of both these Services together, and you shall easily see which Master is best to serve and obey; the wages that Sin will pay you, in the end is Death; but the reward that God will freely bestow upon you (if you be his Servants) is eternal Life, through Jesus Christ our Lord. d. The word properly signifies Vindicta. The Remains of old paid their Soldiers with Provision and Victuals in recompence to their service; afterward they gave them Money, but still the old term was retained, and now it is used to signify any reward or stipend whatsoever. e. By death here we must understand not only temporal, but also and more especially eternal death, as appears by the opposition it hath to eternal Life: This is the just and true hire of Sin.

26. But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead, wherein we were held; that

He doth not say that eternal life is the wages of Righteousness, but that it is the gracious or free Gift of God. He varies the Phrase on purpose, to shew, that we attain not eternal life by our own merits, our own works or worthiness, but by the Gift or Grace of God; for which cause he also added, through Jesus Christ our Lord. vid. Aug. lib. de gratia & libero arbitrio. c. 9. Let the Papist (if they can) reconcile this Text to their definition of Mortal and Venial Sins, and to their Doctrine of the Meritoriousness of good Works.

CHAP. VII.

Now ye not brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law) how that the law hath dominion over a man, as long as he liveth?

The Apostle having shewed in the former Chapter how Believers are freed from the Dominion of Sin. He proceeds in this Chapter, to declare, that they are free also from the Yoke of the Mosaic Law, because that was dead to them, and they to it. This he illustrates, and proceeds by the familiar Allegory of a Husband and his Wife: Look as a Wife is free from her Husband when he is dead, and may then marry another, and be no Adulteress; So Believers are dead to the Law, and are free to be Married to doother, even to Christ, that is raised from the dead, that upon their happy Marriage, they may bring forth fruit unto God. y. i. e. By the Law here he means the Law of Works, or the Law of Moses about that matter, as appears by the instance given in the next verse. f. The word Man here is common to both Sexes, and may be applied to either, for both are subject to the aforementioned Law.

2. For as the woman which hath an husband, is bound by the law to her husband as long as he liveth: but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the Law of her husband.

e. He here exemplifies and illustrates the foregoing assertion. d. See a parallel place, 1 Cor. 7. 39. This is the general rule; yet there is an exception in the case of Fornication or Defilement, vid. Mat. 5. 32. 1 Cor. 7. 15. e. From the obligation of the Law of marriage.

3. So then if while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man.

4. Wherefore my brethren, ye also are become as dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to him, that ye should be raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God. h. i. e. Ye are taken off from all hopes of Justification by it, and from your confidence in obedience to it. Gal. 2. 19. The Opposition seems to require that he should have said The Law is dead to us. But these two Phrases are much the same. Q. What Law doth he mean? A. Not only the Ceremonial, but the Moral Law, for in that he is flacceth, u. 7. the moral Law is in force still, Christ came to confirm, and not to destroy it: But Believers are the imitation thereof. Of this last he speaks, u. 8. p. and from it we are freed but in part. g. i. e. By the Sacrifice of Christ's Body upon the Cross; thereby he delivered us from the Law, in the sense before mentioned. b. i. e. Fruits of Holiness and good Works to the Glory and Praise of God.

5. For if when we were in the flesh, the motions of sins which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death. i. q. d. For bringing forth of which Fruit unto God, we have now better helps than formerly we had; or we are in much better Circumstances than formerly we were: And so he proceeds to shew how our present State doth differ from the former. k. i. e. In our Carnal Fleshly State before we were Regenerated, or under the Carnal Pedagogy of the Law; for in the next Verse he speaks of our being new delivered from the Law. l. i. e. The corrupt Inclination new delivered from the Law. m. i. e. The Law as it is in Vapours, as raised out of a Dugthill by the Sun, or which are irritated by the Law; of which by and by. m. d. c. 6. 13. 16. n. i. e. Such ill Fruits as ends in Death, c. 6. 21.

6. But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead, wherein we were held; that that we should serve in * newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter. o. i. e. Being brought out of our Fleishly State. p. See the Notes on ver. 4. q. The Relative is not in the Greek Text, but it is well supplied to fill up the Sense. The Antecedent must be either Sin or the Law; by both of these we were held or detained whilst Unregenerate: But now neither of these have any Power to hold us with. Some read it, He being dead, the Old Man of which he spoke in the foregoing Chapter. r. i. e. That we should serve God or Jesus Christ our New Husband in true Holiness, which is wrought in us by the renewing of the Spirit; or serve him in a new Spiritual manner. s. i. e. Not in an outward and ceremonial manner, according to the Letter of the Law; which Service or way of Worship, is now Antiquated, and grown out of date. The word Oldness intimates the abolishing thereof, because of insufficiency, Heb. 8. 13.

7. What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I * had not known sin, but by the Law: for I had not known I lust, except the law had said, * Thou shalt not covet. t. Here is another Anticipation of an Objection, which might arise from what the Apostle had said; ver. 5. That Sin was powerful in us by the Law. Some might Object and say, That the Law then was Sin; i. e. That it was the cause of it, and a Father for it. To this he Answers, by his usual Note of Detestation, God forbid, u. i. e. I had not known sin, but by the Law: for I had not known I lust, except the law had said, * Thou shalt not covet. u. i. e. I had not known it to be sin, By Lust here some understand, that concupiscence, which the Schoolmen call ungodly concupiscence, which hath not the content of the Will: For the concupiscence to which we Consent, the Heathens themselves know to be sinful; but that which hath not the Content of the Will, or the first motions to sin, they held to be no Sin; as neither did the Pharisees, amongst whom Paul lived; nor do the Papists to this very day. Some by Lust do understand original Sin, which is the fountain from whence all particular Lusts do flow; the Lusts from whence all sinful Actions, in so many Sparks continually Arise: This is called Lust likewise, in Jam. 1. 14. and this is forbidden in every Commandment: where any Sin is prohibited, there the Root also is prohibited; but more particularly it is forbidden in the Tenth Commandment. x. Some understand the Law in general; but the Article used in the Greek, seems to restrain it to a particular Precept. Besides, they are the very words of the Objects that are specified in that Commandment, as Thy Neighbour's House, Wife, &c. The Answer is, That Law was not Material; for the Apostle speaking of inward Concupiscence; which without the Law is latent and undiscovers itself; it was enough to name the sin itself, feeling the Objection, about which it is Conventant, are of all sorts, and so hardly be numbered.

8. But sin y taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence, for * without the law sin was dead. y. i. e. The Corruption of our Nature, the depraved Blood and Bys of the Soul, called before Lust. z. i. e. Being stirred up or detoured by the prohibition of the Law. The Law did not properly give occasion, but sin took it. The Law (as before) is not the cause of sin, but by accident it is the occasion of it. In a Druph, it is not the Drink that is to be blamed for increasing the Disease, but the ill habit of Body. Such is the depravedness of Man's Nature, that the things which are Forbidden, are the more desired. The more the Law would damp up the Torrent of Lust, the higher do they swell. The Law was given to restrain sin, but through our Corruption it falls out contrary. The Law inhibiting sin, and not giving Power to avoid it: Our impetuous Lusts take occasion of advantage from thence, the more eagerly to pursue it. a. i. e. Inordinate Affections, and Inclinations of all sorts. b. i. e. Without the knowledge of the Law. c. i. e. Comparatively Lust, sin hath not so much Power, either to Terrify the Conscience, or to stir up inordinate Affections: it is like a Druph, when that first not.

w<sup>s</sup> yet in such a State. But now he cometh to speak of himself, as he then was; and to declare what though Remainers of sinfull E<sup>n</sup>f had till then been the following part nered, and in part Renewed.

This Chapter is to be Appoyed to a Regenerate Person, is evident, because he useth the Prater perfess Tongue, or speaker of which was Puff; but here he changeth the Tongue to be the Prerfume. From the prerfume the prerfume to be the fourteenth, he tells us how it had been with him formerly; and then from the fourteenth to the End, he relates how it was with him now. I was so and so, I thus relate how it was with him now. I was so and so, I thus relate how it was with him now. I was so and so, I thus relate how it was with him now.

The changing of the Prerfume to be the fourteenth to argue a Change in the Person. They that lift to be farther advanced in this Point, may find it fully Discussed in our new Language, by Mr. Anthony Rogers, in his underrstand Discourse of Original Sin, Part 4. c. 6. In that underrstand, in his Hesitate in Locum; and in his underrstand the Latine Tongue, may find it Argued pro et con, Synops.  from a polluted Nature; and from which we can never be thoroughly Cleared in this Life.

16. If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good a.
a This very thing is an Argument, that the Law is such as I have before Asserted, ver. 12, 14. This shewms my Consent to the Holiness and Goodness of the Law: I Vote with it, and for it, as the only Rule of Right, or Righteousness.

 when he would do good, evil ſhould be preſent with him.

4 The word signifies one wearied out with combats. 7 It is not the voice of one depending on doubting, but of one breathing and panting after rest. 8 The like pathetic exclamations are frequent in Psalm. 55. 6. One calls this verbe, Gemius Sacerdotum or Groans of the Godly, 8 Or from this Body of Death, and Herbspring from this dead Body. This carcase of Sin which I am inseparably farned, as noylone every where my Soul, as a dead carcase to my Senses. This is an circumlocution, or denomination of Original Sin, depression is called the Body of Sin, and here the Body of Death ties and binds over to death.

the Apostle saith, I am renewed, I yield Obedience to the Law of God; and so far as I am unregenerate, the dictates and Suggestions of the Law of Sin. No man can serve two contrary Masters. A. The did not serve these two in the same part, or the same faculty; nor did he do it at the same time ordinarily, and for the most part he served the Law of God, sometimes through the power of Temptation and the Law of Sin, he was enforced against his will to follow the Law of Sin.

CHAP. VIII.

do not allow themselves in Sin, chap. 7, 15, and are part delivered from it, v. 25, therefore it follows is here, 6 Or no one Condemnation. He do not find there is no matter of Condemnation, or nothing damnable in them that are in Christ, there is enough and enough stated; but he saies, there is no actual Condemnatio to those who are in Christ, as Paul saies in the words of 1 John 3, 18, and 5, 24. There is a Condemnation in the word more is understood than Condemnation; he means, that Justification and eternal Salvation is the portion of such, who are in Christ; it is included in the negative; it is Gods Condemnation only, from which such as are in Christ are exempted; they are nevertheless condemned, and consumed by men, and sometimes by their own consciences to the death. So we fill it up, but in the Original 'tis only to those who are in Christ 3 John. The Phrase imports, that there is a Mystical and Spiritual Union betwixt Christ and Believers, which is sometimes expressed by the words, being in Christ, 1 John 10, 20, 2 Cor 13, 5, and here by their being in Christ, see 1 Cor 1, 30, 1 John 5, 20. Christ is the Saviour, and Believers are in Christ, by Faith.

2 For * the law of the Spirit of life <sup>e</sup> Christ Jesus <sup>f</sup>, hath made me free from the la of sin <sup>g</sup> and death <sup>h</sup>.

Some understand hereby the Doctrine of the Gospel which is called the Law of the Spirit of Life, because it is the Ministry of the Spirit of Life. Others understand the Efficacy and Power of that Grace and Holiness, whereby with the living and quickening Spirit of God hath full Power and Authority to overcome and subvert all the Works of the Humane Nature, and bringing the New and Heavenly Life into regenerating and quickening the Soul, and eternal Redemption, with great Power and Efficacy. f. f. Wherein was poured, our upon him, and doth fill re side in him, and is a very eminent manner, vid. J. 1. 2. Luke 4. 1. or in Christ Jesus, is as much as by Christ Jesus, that he gives and conveys this Spirit, how, when, and to whom he pleases. Ch. 1. 14. Ch. 1. 15. Ch. 1. 16. Ch. 1. 17. he doth not say, that those who are called are simply and absolutely delivered from Sin, but from the Law of Sin, i. e. the Power, Dominion and Tyranny thereof. b. i. e. From Sin that is deadly or of a deadly Nature, as the Spirit of Life is the living Spirit; for Sin and Death is no more, say I, come, than deadly Sin. Other men think to be diffident from Sin, and think he speaks of Sin that is deadly, and not of Sin that is venial, and therefore of the second death. vid. Revel. 20. 6. The force of the whole is this, That the mighty power of the renewing and quickening Spirit, did free the Apostles and doth free all Believers from the command and rule of Sin; so that it doth not reign over them, as former it did; and being thus freed from the power of Sin, they are also freed from the power of Sin that is eternal damnation. So it seems as a proof of the foregoing proposition. That there is no Condemnation to them, &c.

In this Verse is a farther proof of the main proposition
It vs 1. There are two things in sin that may induce vs 2. to Commendation, the power and guilt of it. As to freing us from the former, vs 3. The power of sin, as he had broken in the foregoing verse; as to taking away the guilt of sin, that he speaks in this verse. i
The Law here he means the moral Law, the Righteousness whereof is to be fulfilled in us, vs 4. What is it sin cannot do? there are several answers: but this principally meant, it cannot infuse us before God.

Seeing

nation. vid. Ath. 13: 38, 39; Gal. 3: 21. Heb. 7: 18. & By Flesh, as before, we must understand the corrupt Nature; that is, every man falls the fail. This is that which puts a weakness and inability upon the Lam. The impotency of the Lam is not from its self, but from the condition of the Subject with whom it has to do. The Lam is weak to us, because we are weak to the Subject. It give light to a blind eye, not from any impotency in its self, but merely from the incapacity of the Subject it shines upon. I To justify and save fallen Man, was impossible for the Law to do; therefore God will find out another way, that shall do it effectually. What his own Lam cannot do, his own Son can; and therefore Him he will send. m. i. e. Such Flesh as sin hath made it now to be subject to many infirmities and weaknesses. Flesh in this sense differs quite another sense, than it did in the first verse, and in the other part of the chapter. It did in the following verse, that it is taken morally for the corrupt nature of man, here physically for the Humane Nature of Christ. The word physical is to be linked, not with Flesh, but with sinful Flesh; he had true and real Flesh, but he had only the appearance and likeness of sinful Flesh.

1st Cor. 5, 21. & 15, 17. Heb. 7, 26. 1 Pet. 1, 19. <sup>10</sup> Either this clause is to be joyed to what goes before, and then the sense is, that God sent his Son in the likeness of sinful Flesh, that he might take away Sin. Or, else it is joyed to what follows, and then there is an ellipsis in it. Something is cut off, or left out, which must be understood. The margin of our Common Bibles infer the word Sacrifice, q. d. by a Sacrifice for sin, or by a sin Offering he condemned Sin, &c. This ellipsis is usual in Scripture. Isa. 43, 10. when thou shalt make his soul Sin; that is (as our translation renders it) an Offering for sin, Ezek. 45, 19. The Priest shall take of the blood of the Sin, we read it of the Sacrifice. See the like in Heb. 4, 8. 2 Cor. 5, 21. Heb. 10, 6. <sup>11</sup> The Syriac reads it in his Flesh. The meaning is, that he severely purified Sin, and inflicted death upon the person who was guilty to us; in, and by the penalty of his own Son. God laid on him the iniquities of us all, and he bore them in his body upon a Tree. Isa. Gal. 3, 13. 1 Pet. 2, 24.

4 That the righteousness of the Law might be fulfilled in us p, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit q.

Here is another end of Gods sending his Son as before, that he might perfectly fulfil the Righteousness of the Law in or for us, which for us our felves to do in our own Persons was utterly impossible. And yet upon which (as being imputed unto them, and accepted of God on our behalf) we shall be accounted Iust and Righteous, as if we had done it our felves. Christs being a Sacrifice for sin was not sufficient to answer all the ends and demands of the Law; there must be doing of what he commanded, as well as suffering of what he suffered. Therefore Christ was sent for both, and both were accomplished by him; and what he did and suffered is accounted unto us as if we had done and suffered it. This is the imputed Righteousness which was so often spoken of Chap. 4. and in reference to this he is said to be made Righteousness for us, 1 Cor. 1.30: and we are said to be the Righteousness of God in him, chap. 5. 19. 2 Cor. 5. 21.

q This was the description before of those that had Union with Christ, and exemption from Condemnation; and 'tis again let down as the description of those who partake of the righteousness of Christ in this way of imputation; and 'tis added here again, to fears all that fears all, and claim to this grace. None but holy walkers can war-rantly apply Christs fulfilling or satisfying the Law to themselves, because Christ hath fulfilled the righteousness of the Law for us; none may infer there is nothing for us to do; we may live as we list: for though Christ hath fulfilled the Law in all respects, yet for those that will heath to done, at least, in benefit thereby, are, and be such as walk after the flesh, but after the spirit: for the opening of which terms, vid. p. 1.

5 For * they that are after the flesh r do * 1 Cor. 2.14.

In this verse we have an account of the different end of those that are carnal and spiritual, as in the former we had a description of their different carriage and disposition. m. i. e. To be of that temper before described, v. 5. to mind and affect the things of the Flesh, do such carnal, or will end in it; the second or eternal death is chiefly intended. x. i. e. to mind and affect the things of the Spirit, to find a sweet satisfaction of the mind shall therefore, as that the best satisfaction of the mind shall therefore, v. 1. It is the way to Eternal Life hereafter, and to a sound peace here; Eph. 1:19, 125; Prov. 3:17; Gal. 6:16.

7 Because v. the carnal mind is enmity a against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.

a. q. d. Neither can the carnal man look for any better life, because a carnal mind is enmity against God. a. He doth not say it is an Enemy, but in the abstract, it is enmity, which heightens and intends the fence; and enmity may be reconciled: as Eph. 2:16, but enmity cannot be reconciled, as black may be made white, but blackness cannot. b. This carnal mind is a reason of the foregoing affection, and it is taken from the property of enmity. Those that are at enmity, cross each others wills, and won't submit to one another; and the carnal mind is rebellious in the highest degree against the will of God, unless it be changed and renewed; it is impossible it should be otherwise. There is in it a moral impotency to obedience. vid. John 8:43; 1 Cor. 2:14.

8 So then v. they that are in the flesh d cannot please God e.

e. This verse is a consequence, or it follows from that which went before. d. Not they which are married, as a Pope once expounded it. The next verse tells such an absurd conception; but they that are carnal and unregenerate, the same with those, who in ver. 5. are said to be after the Flesh. e. Neither they, nor any thing they do, is pleasing unto him: their best works are dead works, and silken sins, (as one expreth it) it may be understood with this limitation, so long as they continue in such a State. vid. Eph. 1:11, 11, 6.

9 But v. f are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, g, if h so be that h the Spirit of God dwell in you i. Now if any man have not the h Spirit of Christ, he is none of his i.

f. Here he applies what he had laid down more generally to the believing Romans in particular. g. i. e. Not after the Flesh, but after the Spirit (as in v. 5. or carnally, but Spiritually minded. b. The Conjunction here is causal not conditional; it may be rendered, seeing that, or forasmuch as. vid. v. 17, 8:31. 2 The. 1:11, 6. The Spirit of God dwells in the regenerate, not only in the immensity of his presence, so he is every where and in all things; but by the presence and efficacy of his grace; the indwelling of the Spirit in Believers, denotes two things: 1. His ruling in them; where a man dwells as Lord, there he doth command and bear rule. 2. His abiding in them, and that for ever. John 14:16. d. If he hath not the same Spirit which in the foregoing verse is called, the Spirit of God; it is called, the Spirit of Christ; because it proceeds from him, and is procured by him. John 14:26 and 16:7; Gal. 4:6. When he saith such a one is none of Christ; he means, that he doth not peculiarly belong to Christ, he hath no special interest in him, is no true Member of him. As a Merchant sets his Seal upon his Goods, so doth Christ his Spirit upon his followers. Eph. 1:13.

10 And if Christ l be in you, the body m is dead because of sin; but the Spirit n is life, because of righteousness o.

l. Before, he said the Spirit of God and Christ dwells in them, here Christ himself. Christ dwells in Believers by his Spirit. m. By body some understand the corrupt and unregenerate part in the body, as if that were as good as dead in them. But others take the word in its proper signification, and think no more is meant thereby than that the Bodies even of Believers, are mortal Bodies; so they are called in the next verse. They are subject to death as the bodies of other men. n. Some by Spirit here do understand the Spirit of God, and he is life; that is, he will quicken and raise up your bodies again to an immortal life. Others by Spirit do understand the Souls, yet not simply and absolutely considered, but as renewed by grace; that is life, or that doth live: it lives a life of o by Righteousness, here understood, either imputed Righteousness, which gives us a right title to Salvation, or inherent Righteousness, which is a necessary condition required in every Person, that shall indeed be saved. The sum is, if you be Christians indeed, though your bodies die, yet your Souls shall live, and that for ever; and your dead bodies shall not finally perish, but shall certainly be raised again; so it follows in the next verse.

11 But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead p dwell in you q; he that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal bodies q, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you r.

p. A Periphrasis of God the Father. The Son raised himself, John 2:19, and 10:18, and yet the Father is said here to raise him from the dead. vid. notes on chap. 1:4. q. Raise them from a State of Mortality, & all the attendants to a glorious immortal life. r. q. d. If you are sanctified by the Spirit, you shall be raised up by the Spirit also, as the Christ was. The wicked also shall be raised at the last day. But the Righteous shall be raised after a peculiar manner, they shall be raised as by the Almighty Power of God; so by virtue of their Union with Christ as his members; and by virtue of their relation to the Spirit as his Temples. They only shall partake of a Resurrection, that is definitely and beneficial to them. Therefore he called Emphatically the Resurrection of his Son, John 14:14, and these two are joined together, as belonging one to the other; the Children of God, and the Children of the Resurrection, Luke 20:36.

12 Therefore s brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh t.

s. This illative particle lends us to the things before delivered. q. d. Seeing we are not in the Flesh, but have the Spirit of God dwelling in us; not only sanctifying and enlivening our souls for the present, but raising and quickening our bodies for time to come, therefore we are not debtors, Eccl. 1:10. t. We are not Debtors to sin, or the corrupt and sinful nature that is in us. We owe it no service, there is nothing due to it from Believers, but blows, and the blowy eye that the Apostle gave it. The Antithesis is omitted, but it is necessarily implied and understood; and that is, That we are debtors to the Spirit, to live and walk after it.

13 For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die u; but if ye through the Spirit v, do mortify x the deeds of the body y, ye shall live z.

u. viz. Eternally, and never partake of the glorious Resurrection before spoken of. The Godly themselves need this caution; they must not think, that because they are elected and justified, &c. that therefore they may do as they list. m. i. e. By the grace and assistance of the Spirit. x. i. e. Kill and put to death, not enough to forbear the workings of Sin, but we must kill and crucify it. Sin may be left upon many consideration, and yet not mortified. y. Evil deeds are called the deeds of the body, because the body is so instrumental in the doing thereof. There are some, that by body here do understand the corrupt nature, the same that before in many places he calls the flesh; this was called, chap. 6:6. the body of Sin, and here 'tis called the body. z. viz. Eternally. See a parallel place, chap. 6:22. Gal. 6:8. vid. v. 6.

14 For a, as many as are led b by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God.

a. This proves the latter part of the foregoing verse, such as by the Spirit do mortify Sin, shall live; for they are the Sons of God; and that appears, because they are led by the Spirit of God. b. He doth not say as many as live by the Spirit, but as one led by the Spirit; to shew (says one) that the Spirit must be the guide & ruler of our Life, as the Pilot is of the Ship, and as a Rider is of his Horse. The Phrase is borrowed (says another) either from those which are guided and directed as a blind man in his way, or from those who wanting strength of their own, are borne and carried of others: so we are both ways led by the Spirit, for we can neither see our way, unless the Spirit directs us; nor have we strength to walk in it, unless the Spirit assist and draw us along. The Spirit leads and draws us irresistibly and necessarily, and yet not violently or against our wills; though we were unwilling before, yet we are made willing afterwards; so we are led by the Spirit (so some read it) by a direct and immediate testimony, and witnesseth with our Spirit (so the word properly signifies), by a conjunctive and concurrent testimony.

15 For c, ye have not received the Spirit of bondage d again to fear; but ye have received the e Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father f.

c. The verse proves the former, that we are led by the Spirit of God, and are his Children, and that by an effect of the Spirit in them, which is to enable them to call God Father. d. He doth not here speak of two distinct Spirits, but one & the same Spirit of God in different person; & at different times, is both the Spirit of Bondage, and the Spirit of Adoption. The Spirit of Bondage seems to respect either that State of servitude, which the People of God were under in the time of the Ceremonial Law, vid. Gal. 4:3-9. Or it respects the Publishing of the Moral Law upon Mount Sinai, which was with horror and fear. Comp. Exod. 19:16. with Exod. 12:18, 19, 20, 21. vid. Gal. 4:24 or else it respects that horror and slavish fear, which the Spirit of God doth work in mens hearts and consciences, by the Ministry of the Law; when he opens the eyes of men, to see that they are in bondage and slavery to Sin and Satan; and that they are subject and obnoxious to the Wrath and Vengeance of God; this is many times preparatory and introductory to their conversion; but when they are regenerated they are delivered from it. vid. Luk. 7:34. Heb. 2:15. 1 John 4:18. Objct. Many of Gods Children are full of doubts and fears. A. These are not all ways from the suggestions of Gods Spirit, but the misgivings of their own Spirits. Some distinction between the Spirit of Bondage and Desolation; the Children of God are delivered from the former, but exercised with the latter. e. The Spirit of God is called, the Spirit of Adoption, both because he works and effects it in us, and because he testifies and assures it to us. He might have said, the Spirit of Liberty. The Antithesis required it; but he said as much, when he calls him the Spirit of Adoption, for Children are free. f. Or by whom we cry, Acceptable prayer is wrought in us by the Spirit, q. 26. Abba is an Hebrew or Syriack word, signifying Father; why then is the word Father added in the Greek? To signify that God is the Father both of Jews and Gentiles, chap. 3:29, and 10:12, or to shew the double Paternity that is in God, he is the Father of all Men by Creation, of Believers only by Grace and Regeneration: Or, rather to denote the importunity and earnestness which ought to be in Prayer, and so it agrees with the former word crying. Imaginations carry an earnestness with them. There are two places more, where these two words are repeated or joined together, Mar. 14:36. Gal. 4:6.

16. * The Spirit g if it self beareth witness g with our spirit, that we are the children of God.

g. The Spirit of Adoption doth not only excite us to call upon God as our Father, but it doth also ascertain and assure us (as before) that we are His Children. And this it doth not by an outward voice, as God the Father to John 3:34; nor by an Angel, as to Daniel and the Virgin Mary; but by an inward and secret suggestion, whereby he raises our hearts to this persuasion, that God is our Father and we are his Children. This is not the Testimony of the Graces and Operations of the Spirit, but of the Spirit it self. Conceives it thus; A man owns his Spirit doth witness to him his Adoption, he finds in himself upon diligent search and examination, the manifest signs and tokens thereof. But this testimony of its self is weak, and Satan hath many ways and wiles to invalidate it, therefore for more assurance it is confirmed by another and greater testimony, and that is of the Spirit himself, he witnesseth with our Spirit, and seals it up unto us. He first works grace in our hearts, and then witnesseth to it. This Testimony is not alike in all Believers, nor in any one of them at all times; it is better felt than expressed. It witnesseth to our Spirit (so some read it) by a direct and immediate testimony, and witnesseth with our Spirit (so the word properly signifies), by a conjunctive and concurrent testimony.

17. And if children, then heirs h, heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ i; if so be that we suffer with him k that we may be also glorified together l.

h. There is a parallel Text in Gal. 4:7. 'tis not so with Children of earthly Princes, 2 Chron. 21:3. Or Cadmus with his Children, Eccl. 1:7. Brother, and is not called with ad brother; the inheritance is his by Nature, ours by Grace. i. The Cross of Christ is the condition of our Heavenly inheritance. The pronoun him, is not in the Original, but suitably supplied in our Translation; suffering with him, is much the same with suffering for him; suffering Believers do but pledge Christ in the Cup, but he began to them. 1 Cor. 10:16. Glorified with him, not with equal glory, but according to our proportion; he was glorified in this way, Luke 24:26. 2 Cor. 1:12. Three things are implied in our being Glorified together. 1. Conformity, we shall in some measure be like him in Glory. John 17:22. Phil. 3:21. 2. Concomitancy, we shall be present with him in Glory. John 17:24. 1 The. 4:17. 3. Consequence, our Glory will be from him; his Glory will reflect on us, and we shall shine in his Beam.

18 For I reckon m, that the n sufferings of this present o time, are not worthy n to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us o.

m. i. e. I make account, I certainly conclude. vid. chap. 3:28. The word is borrowed either from Arithmeticians, or who by calling their Accounts do find the true and total Summe: Or, from Legians, who by considering the Prelimiles do draw the Conclusion. a. The word properly signifies that part of the Bala which goeth down, q. d. If the sufferings of this life be weighed with the Glory to come, they will be light in comparison. Their words to be compared are to be supplied in our Translation to make up the sense. o. It is revealed to us, and it shall be revealed in us. This Text is a consolation of the Pish Doctrine of Merit and humane Satisfaction.

19 For the earnest expectation of the creature p waiteth q for the manifestation of the Sons of God r.

The Apostle Peter speaking of the Epistles of our Apostle in 2 Pet. 3:16, he saith, that there are some things in them hard to be understood, and some think by reflecting upon some particular passages in that Chapter, he doth more especially respect this Context. There is indeed a great deal of obscurity in it. q. This word is four times used in this and the three following verses, only in the 22. verse, it is rendered Creation; that is the subject of which all that followeth is predicated. One main question therefore is this, Of what Creature the Apostle here speaks of? Divers answers are or may be given, I will run upon two only. 1. By the Creature or the Creation (and v. 22. the whole Creature or every Creature) is meant all mankind, both Jews and Gentiles, and especially the latter. vid. Mar. 16:15. there Christ gives it in Commission to preach the Gospel to every Creature; 'tis the same word. And in 1 Pet. 2:13. They are commanded to submit themselves to every Ordinance of Man. In the Original it is to every humane Creature, the same word which is in the Text before us; he meant the Gentle or Heathen Magistrates in Authority over them. In the Scripture the Gentiles are sometimes called the World, chap. 11:13, 15. and sometimes the Creature or the Creation. 2. By the Creature is meant the whole World with all the Creatures therein, or the whole Frame and body of the Creation. The Creature in this sense by a Propriety is here (spoken of as a rational Person); it is usual with the Spirit of God in Scripture, to fasten upon unreasonable Creatures, sensible, vid. Eph. 2:11, 12. Heb. 2:11. James 3:4. So here the Creature (in this sense) is said to expect, 4. Eccl. 3:1. The expectation of the Creature is here, as if it were stretched out, Phil. 1:20. v. 1. o. The time when the Sons of God shall be manifested. The Arabic Interpreter puts thus the Word Glory into the Text, and reads the word the manifestation of the Glory of the Sons of God; their Glory for the present is hidden, but it shall be discovered and manifested, 2 Cor. 3:18. The Creature in the sense of the word (as above) waiteth for this, because then it shall be restored to its primitive liberty and lustre, at that time there will be a Reformation of all things, 2 Cor. 3:21. But those who understand the Creature in the first sense, do give a quite different interpretation upon this last clause; and that is, that the Gentle world are now earnestly expecting and waiting to see what the Powers will do, whether they will discover themselves to be the Sons of God, or not, by their receiving or rejecting Christ.

20 For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly s, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope t.

s. If these words be understood of the World, and all the Creatures therein contained, then they shew the Creatures present condition, it is subject to vanity, and that first in regard of its insufficiency, it falling short of that for which it was first created and ordained; then a thing is said to be vain, when it doth not answer or reach its proper end; Or in respect of its transiency and uncertainty, of which see, 1 Cor. 7:31. Eph. 1:11. 1 John 2:17. The next verse tells us it is subject to the bondage of Corruption as well as Vanity. Now this must needs be an unwilling subjection, therefore 'tis here said it is not subject willingly. t. e. of its one accord, or of its proper Inbred inclination; what the Will is in those that are rational, the Inclination is in those things that are natural; how comes it then into this condition? The answer is, that it is by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope. i. e. God for the Sin of Man hath curst the Creature, and subjected it to vanity and corruption. vid. Gen. 3:17, and 4:12. Levit. 26:19, 20. And though he hath done this, yet there is ground to expect and hope that the Creature shall return again to its former estate wherein it was created, that it may be delivered and restored into a better condition, as in the next verse. Those that by the Creature understand the Gentle World, give a different interpretation of these words; they say that the Gentiles are made subject to Vanity. i. e. To idleness or a vain Superstitious Worship. (Idols are called Vanities, Eccl. 14:15.) or to a miserable wretched estate that (as Hefhins

* The Apostle begins this Chapter with another Proposition or rhetorical Inflation; professing his unfeigned Love to his Nation, and his hearty desire of their Salvation, q. d. As before (c. g.) so now again I declare openly (O ye Christian Gentiles my Brethren) that what ever the generality of the Gentiles do think of me, as if I hated them, or were their Enemy; yet there is none more passionately and tenderly Afflicted to them, than I am: and from hence it is, that I do so heartily desire and pray in God, for all that Pagan that they might be saved. b. That they may obtain Eternal Salvation, and escape that Deluge of Wrath and Destruction that hangs over their Heads.

2. For I bear them record, e. * that they have a zeal of God, but d. not according to knowledge. e.

c. i. e. I must Testify this of them, or of many of them, d. That they have a fervent desire to maintain the Law of God, with all the Moral Rites and Ceremonies, as thinking thereby to promote the Glory of God e. i. e. true and right Knowledge. Though it be a warm, yet it is a blind Zeal. They know not the Will of God, or what that Righteousness is, which He will accept. They know the Law for what end the Law and Worship of God, under the Old Testament was Instituted. They knew not that Christ, in, and by whom, that Law is fulfilled.

3. For they being ignorant of Gods righteousness, f. and going about to establish their own righteousness, g. have not submitted themselves h. to the righteousness of God.

f. Here he shewes more particularly what Knowledge the Gentiles wanted. They knew not the Righteousness of God of which see Chap. 1. 17. with the notes there. This was abundantly manifested, being manifest by the Law and the Prophets, esp. 3. 21. and a thing very needful to be known, as being that wherein Mans Happiness consisted; but they were ignorant of it. g. Their personal and inherent Righteousness, a home-made-Righteousness, which is of their own spinning; this they designed to set up in the room of Gods Righteousness. h. This notes the Pride that accompanied their Ignorance, and that is in the hearts of men by Nature. They went go about for that, which they think they have or may have at home: They want be beholding to another, for that which they suppose they have in themselves. They have Righteousness enough of their own working; and therefore they Reject and withdraw themselves from that which is of Gods Appointing.

4. For i. Christ is the end of the law k. for righteousness, to every one that believeth.

i. He proves. That the Gentiles were ignorant of the Righteousness of God, because they were ignorant of Christ, the true end of the Law. k. q. d. The Law was given for that end, that Sinners being thereby brought to the knowledge of their sins; and their Lost and damned Estate, by reason thereof, should fly to Christ, and his Righteousness for Refuge, vid. Gal. 3. 29. Or else, Christ is the end of the Law, i. e. the Perfection and Consummation thereof. The Word is taken in this sense: 1 Tim. 1. 5. He perfected the ceremonial Law, as being the substance whereof of all the Ceremonies of the Law were shadows; they all referred to him as their scope and end. He perfected also the moral Law, partly by his Active Obedience, fulfilling all the righteousness thereof, partly by his Passive Obedience, bearing the Curse, and punishment of the Law, which was due to us. What ever the Law required, that we should do or suffer, he hath perfected it on our behalf. vid. esp. 8. 2.

5. For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, * That the man which doth those things shall live || by them l.

* Ezek. 20. 11. 13. 21. || Or, item. 1. In this and the following verses, he shews the great difference that is between the righteousness of the Law, and the righteousness of Faith; and this difference is Taught us in the bookes of Moses himself. As for the righteousness of the Law, that is plainly described by Moses, Levit. 18. 5. And it tells us expressly, That the Man, who doth personally, perfectly, and constantly observe, and keep the Law requires, shall be rewarded do whatsoever the Law requires. Lev. 18. 5. And it tells us, that who so shall, shall incur Death and Damnation. This also it declares in other places, Deut. 27. 26 Gal. 3. 10. This is a hard saying; who can hear it? It thuts us all out of Heaven, it turns us into Hell, it lays upon us impossible Conditions. Let us hearken therefore to the righteousness of Faith. Of which in the next.

6. But the righteousness which is of faith, speaketh in this wise m. Say not in thine heart n. who shall ascend into heaven o? that is to bring Christ down from above p.

m. By a periphrasis (a frequent figure in scripture) he puts the person of a reasonable Creature upon the righteousness of Faith, and bringeth it in speaking and declaring itself, as followeth; or else the meaning is, That the Scripture or Moses speaks thus of the Righteousness of Faith. These words are taken out of Deut. 30. 12. 13. The question is, Whether Paul doth properly alludge this place in Deut., or only allude to it; some think the Latter. That Moses directly speaks of the Law, and that the Apostle, by an Allusion, or by way of Accommodation, applies it unto Faith; Hence it is, that he doth not cite the very words of Moses, but alters and adds to them, as best served his Purpose. But Others think, That this would extend to the force of St. Pauls Argument, if he should only allude unto this Testimony of Moses, and not confirm that which he intended by the same. Therefore their Opinion is, That these words are properly cited; and, That Moses himself, in that place; doth speak (though very obscurely) of the righteousness of Faith; yea, the foregoing words in that thirteenth Chapter of Deut., do belong to the times of the Gospel. Some of the Jewish Rabbies have counted, That Moses in that Chapter, especially the beginning of it, hath reference to the days of the Messiah. He speaks there of the Israelites being driven among all Nations, and unto the utmost parts of Heaven, which chiefly happened to them a little after the Ascension of Christ, and will abide upon them till their Conversion; of which see the 11 chap. of this Epistle, and then God will Restore them again to the Land of Promise, that is, Jerusalem, which is above, the true Church of Jesus Christ; then He will Circumcise their Hearts, and the Hearts of their Seed, to love the Lord with all their Heart, and with all their Soul; then will the Lord rejoice over them to do them good; as he rejoiced over their Fathers; then according to Gods Covenant Promise, the Law of God shall be written in their hearts; it shall not be hidden, or afar off, but right then, in their Mouths, and in their Hearts. Thus the Apostle convinceth the Gentiles by a Testimony out of Moses, in whom they Trusted. n. i. e. Think not arrogantly and dependently within thy self. o. i. e. To learn the Will of God there concerning our Righteousness and Salvation; and then Teach it to us: or to see if there be any addition or room for such as I am there, and to carry me thither. p. This is in effect to deny, That Christ has already come down from Heaven to Reveal it to us; and that He must now come to do it: Or else, that is, as much as to deny, That Christ hath already Descended from Heaven, to procure and purchase Salvation for us; and that he must come down again for that purpose. It were to deny the Ascension of Christ into Heaven; for he is gone thither, not as a private, but as a publick Person; He is gone thither as our Head, and thither He will bring all his Members; he is there as our forerunner, as one that is gone before to prepare a place for us. For Christians to distrust their going to heaven, is to doubt Whether Christ be in Heaven; he had never gone thither if he had not perfected our Redemption, and Salvation here.

7. Or, Who shall descend into the deep, q. that is to bring up Christ again from the dead r.

q. By the Deep, here understand Hell, vid. Luc. 8. 31. Rev. 20. 1. 3. and q. 1. q. d. Don't enquire dubitantly, and despairingly, whether thou shalt go to Hell, or who shall go thither to see, and bring thee word, if such as thou are there. r. This were in effect to frustrate, and make void the death of Christ; tis as much as to say, He never died for us, or he must come again, and suffer, and shed his Blood for the Remission of our sins. He died to deliver us from Death and Damnation; he endured the wrath of God, that we may escape it. The sentence of the whole is this, That the Doctrine of Justification by Faith, doth not propose such difficult and impossible Terms, as the Doctrine of justification by works. The righteousness of the Law, that speaks terror, and puts us into a continual fear of Hell, and despair of Heaven; but the righteousness of Faith, that speaks comfort, and forbids all amazing fear and troubles about our Salvation or Damnation.

8. But what faith it s? The word is might thine t, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: That is the word of faith which we preach u.

s. i. e. What faith the Text in Deut. 30. 14. Or what faith the Righteousness of Faith? what is its Title and Language? In the Jews and Jewes Verbes, he did but tell us what it said not; but here he tells us what it faith. t. i. e. The matter required of thee, in order to Life and Salvation: He seems in these words, to Declare the reality, and easiness of the way of Salvation, as taught us in the Gospel, and by the Righteousness of Faith. God requires no hard thing of us; To Cross the Seas; to Climb the Mountains; to take long and painful Journeys, to find it out.

out The way of Salvation under the Gospel hath but a short cut; it requires not so much the labour of the hand, as the confession of the mouth, and the belief of the heart; or the word that teacheth, it is at hand, it is as if it were in thy mouth and heart, a proverbial speech (as some think) to shew the readiness of it. u. By the word of Faith, he means the Gospel, and the Doctrine of it: and the Gospel is so called, either effectively, because it works Faith; or objectively, because it is a received Faith, and is the proper Object of it.

9. That * if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart, that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. w.

w. q. d. There are but these two things, which the Gospel principally requires in order to our Salvation. The one is, the Confession of Christ with our mouth, and that in sight of all Perfection and Danger, to own Him for our Lord, and for our Jesus; and to declare, that we are and will be ruled and saved by him, and by him only. The other is to believe in our heart, That God hath raised him from the dead, and that he is now seated in the right hand of Christ, prepossessing all the rest, and fullness together, as by a Link, all the Antecedents and Consequents; this Affection, Jesus, at the right hand of God, and Intercession, which followed after. This Article therefore, by a Figure, is put for all the rest; and this is mentioned, because the death and passion of Christ, had availed us nothing, unless He had risen again; for thereby He obtained a perfect Victory over Sin, Death, and Damnation, for all the elect. This is the principal Ground of our justification, as hath been said, chap. 4. ult.

10. For with the heart man x believeth unto righteousness y, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation z.

x. In the former Verse, Confession was set first in this believing. Faith indeed goes before Confession. I believed, says the Plaintiff; and the Apostle after him, Therefore I say: Yet our Faith is discerned, and known by our Confession. y. i. e. Unto justification. This Phrase may be expounded by chap. 4. 5. or 9. 30. z. Our Adversaries the Papists, make great use of this Text: To prove that good Works, as Confession, &c. are the cause of Salvation. Whereas Confession is required here, not as the Cause, but as the Means thereof. The Apostle makes Faith here to be the cause, as well of Salvation, as justification; because Confession of the mouth, to which Salvation is here ascribed, is it self an Effect, or fruit of faith; and so according to that known Rule in Logick, the cause of the cause, is the Cause of that which is caused thereby.

11. For the scripture saith a, * Whosoever believeth on him, shall not be ashamed.

a. The saving Effect of faith and Confession, spoken of immediately before, is here proved by Scripture. Either he refers to Isa. 28. 16. or Psal. 33. Or else he means, That this is the general Doctrine of the Scripture. See Notes on chap. 9. 33.

12. For * there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek b: for the same Lord own all c, * is rich unto all d that call upon him e.

b. He gives a Reason for that universal Term (whosoever) which he had added in the precedent Verse, and is not found in Isaiah, as was noted before in chap. 9. 33. c. These words are a Reason why there is no difference now between Jew and Greek. This Title is to be referred more especially to Jesus Christ, who was called Lord, ver. 9. and is called, Lord of all, Act. 10. 36. He is Head of all the Church, in all Nations of the World. d. i. e. is Bountiful unto All. So that the Gentiles need not envy the calling or the coming of the Gentiles. They have never the least thing to lose; the Lord hath an inexhaustible Store of Grace and Mercy. The Fountain is above our thirst. e. Not to All, had over head, but to such as call upon Him in Faith.

13. For f whosoever g shall call upon the name of the Lord, shall be saved h.

f. That the Lord is rich unto all that call upon him, is Confirmed here by a Testimony out of Joel 2. 32. which is also cited by St. Peter, Act. 2. 21. The Apostles Argument may be thus formed: If whosoever calls on the Name of the Lord shall be saved; then the Lord is rich to all that call upon him; for no Riches are comparable to Salvation; but the Former is true, therefore the Latter. g. Whether Jew or Gentile. h. i. e. On him whose Name is the Lord. Jesus Christ is principally meant, as appears by many Passages in the Prophet. Compare this with 1 Cor. 12. 2.

14. i. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed k? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard l? and how shall they hear without a preacher?

i. The Connection of this Verse, and the following Verses of this Chapter, is very obvious. Some connect these Words with the 12. verse; there he said, There is no difference between Jew and Greek, &c. And this he proves, because the Means to attain Salvation by the true Invocation of God, hath been made common to All; and consequently Faith; and so from time to time, the hearing and preaching the Word of God, according as the one is occasioned by the other. Others make this the Coherence, seeing the Righteousness of Faith, is the only true Righteousness, and doth, in common, by the Promise of Salvation, belong to Jew and Gentile (as hath been said): It was therefore necessary, that some must be sent of God to both People, which is the ordinary way and means to beget Faith, and to bring Men to Christ. His way of Arguing is such, as Logicians call Sorites, Rhetoricians a Gradation; and tis very forcible, promised Salvation, on Him, there is no Salvation; and without Faith, there is no Prayer; and without Hearing, there is no Faith; and without a Preacher, there is no Hearing; and without solemn Mission, there can be no Preacher. His manner of speaking all along, is by way of Interrogation, which is the more Convincing, because it carries in it, a kind of an Appeal to the Persons spoken to. Every Interrogation is Equivalent to a Negation. k. There is no Foundation then for the Jewish Election of God, there may be some that are born Deaf; and in these, God doth supply the want of outward Means, in an extraordinary way: But ordinarily, Hearing is necessary to Faith, as Faith is to Prayer, or Prayer to Salvation.

15. And how shall they preach, except they be sent m? as it is written, * How beautiful are the feet of them n. that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things.

m. Viz. Immediately by God or Christ; or the Prophets, and the Apostles, vid. Gal. 1. 1. Or mediately by Men. i. e. By such as have Authority from Christ, to Separate and Ordain Others to this Work; without this orderly Mission or Ordination, How can they Preach, faith the Apostle? i. e. How can they do it Duly or Profitably, or in the Name, and by the Authority of Christ? For otherwise, there were, and still are, those that Run before they are sent, Jer. 23. 21. * Their Arrival or Approach. The Persons of such are meant, though their Feet be named, because they carried them out and down to do this Work. The Scripture referred to, is found in Isa. 52. 7. The Apostle here leaveth the Septuagint, and followeth the Hebrew Text. Yet he doth not Cite the Place in all Points, as the Prophet hath it. He leaveth out some words, as (upon the Mountain) which had respect to the Situation of Jerusalem; and he changeth the Number, turning the Singular into the Plural. Obj. But the Text in Isaiah speaks of such a Messenger, as was sent to testify the Deliverance of the Jews, from the Bondage of the Affliction. d. Though that be granted, it is applied and accommodated apply enough to the Preaching of Peace and Salvation by Christ; because that Deliverance (as all other Temporal Deliverances) had its Foundation in the Redemption purchased by Christ.

16. But they have not all obeyed the Gospel o. For Eliaias faith, * Lord p, who hath * Gr. our hearts believed + our || report q?

o. He here preventeth a Cavil of the Jews. Thus they might Reason, if the Apostles and Preachers of the Gospel, were sent with so great Authority from God, and bring such a welcome Message. How comes it to pass, that so few Receive it, and yield Obedience thereto? To this he Answers. That it need not seem strange, because it was foretold long ago by the Prophet Eliaias. i. e. It is not to be understood, as if this was the Cause of their Unbelief, because Isaiah said thus. The Parable (For) was doth not shew the Cause, but the Consequence: It was not because the Prophet so said, that they did not Believe; but because they believed not the Prophet to foretell. This is added by the Jewes for Explanation. q. i. e. Very few, none in Comparison. Compare this with John 3. 32.

17. So then, faith cometh by hearing r, and hearing by the word of God s.

r. This is the Conclusion of the former Gradation v. 14. He speaketh here of the ordinary Means, whereby Faith is wrought; not Confining or Limiting the Spirit of God, who Worketh, or may Work, by extraordinary Means; yea, without any Means at all. See the Notes on ver. 14. s. By the Command of God. q. d. The Gospel could not be lawfully Preached to them, for them to Hear it, but by Gods command; and therefore the Apostles and Others, in Preaching the Gospel to the Gentiles, had good Authority for what they did.

18. But

Unto both Jews and Gentiles; First the Jews, and then the Gentiles; and then at last, both to Jews and Gentiles. By All here, he means, Those that shall believe, whether of one sort or of the other, as appears from that parallel place Gal. 3. 22. Luther, in a very great Conflict, had much Support from this Text.

* 1st. 36. 6. 33. o O * the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God p * how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways || pass finding out q ?

o In this, and the following Verses, is the Conclusion of that he had delivered, especially in this, and the Two preceding Chapters. He had spoken of many profound Mysteries, and Answered many critical Questions: And here he makes a Pause, and falls into an Admiration of God, his abundant Wisdom and Knowledge. He seems here to be like a Man that wades into the Waters, till he begins to feel no Bottom, and then he cries out, till he begins to go no farther. p i. e. The unsearchable, unconceivable Abundance of his wisdom and Knowledge. Some distinguish these, Two: Others take them for the same, vid. Col. 2. 3. q Some distinguish betwixt the Judgments and ways of God; By the former, understanding his Decrees and Purposes concerning Nations or Persons: By the latter, The Methods of his Providence in his Dealings with them: Others think the same thing is meant by an Imagination, which is Familiar amongst the Hebrews. He lays, of God's judgments, That they are unsearchable; therefore, not to be Complained of, Censured, or to be narrowly Pried into; and of his ways, that they are past finding out; the same in Sense with unsearchable: 'Tis a Metaphor from Hounds, who have no Footstep or Scent of the Game which they pursue: Nor can Men trace the Lord, or find out the Reason of his Doings; as men cannot find out the Way of a Ship in the Sea, or an Eagle in the Air, &c. Some restrain the Sense, to the ways of God in disposing and ordering the Election and Rejection of Men.

* Jer. 23. 18. 34. For * who hath known the mind of the Lord, or * who hath been his counsellor

i. e. who knoweth what God is about to do, or who hath given his Advice about the Doing of it? This is taken out of Job. 40. 13. 14.

35. Or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed to him again s ?

q. d. If any Man hath obliged God, by any thing he hath done for Him, he shall have an ample Reward. Alluding (as some think) to Job 41. 11. But seeing this cannot be, and that God is indebted unto none; therefore the Salvation of all, is of mere grace and mercy; and there is no cause of Complaining, if He deal more Bountifully with some, than with others.

* 1st. Cor. 8. 6. 36. For * of him, and through him, and to him are all things: || To whom be glory for ever. Amen u.

i. e. All things are of him, as the efficient Cause; through him, as the disposing Cause; to him as the final Cause. They are of him, without any other Motive; through him, without any assistance; and to him, without any return, except, i. e. For his Sake alone. u An usual Doxology in Scripture, vid. Gal. 1. 5. 2 Tim. 4. 18. Heb. 13. 21. 1 Pet. 5. 11.

CHAP. XII.

|| Or, I exhort i. a. || Beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God b, that ye c * present your bodies d a living sacrifice e, holy f, acceptable unto God g, which is your reasonable service h.

a Hitherto the Apostle hath Discouraged of matters of Faith; in this, and the following Chapters, he sets down precepts of Holy Life. He weth the word in the plural number, to amplify and set forth the manifold Mercies of God, in election, Justification, Adoption, &c. q. d. Seeing you Gentiles have received so many, and so great Mercies from God; seeing he hath preferred you to his Ancient People the Jews, and hath chosen and called you, when he hath rejected them; and you value these Mercies, let the consideration of them engage you to all manner of Holiness and New Obedience. c That you Give, Dedicate and Offer up, as spiritual Priests, a. Your selves, or your whole man, a part is put for the whole; the body is named, because it is the souls Instrument in the service of God. e The Sacrifices of Old were Proposed alive to God, and their Blood was shed at the Feet of the altar; A Beast that dyed of its self, or was Torn by wild Beasts, was not to be Sacrificed: Nay, it was not so much as to be eaten. Exod. 22. 31. Levit. 22. 8. Conformable hereto, God will have us offer up our selves a living sacrifice, i. e. We must be quickened and alive to God, and not Dead in Sin and Trespases. f As the Sacrifices under the Law, were to be without blemish or defect, Levit. 22. 6. Levit. 1. 10. Dent. 15. 21. g Or well pleasing unto God. So were the appointed Sacrifices under the Law, Levit. 1. 9. So was the Sacrifice of Christ the Lamb of God, Eph. 5. 2. and to all spiritual Sacrifices under the Gospel, Phil. 4. 18. Heb. 13. 16. h Or which is agreeable to Reason; Nothing is more reasonable, than that you should Devote your selves to God in this manner. Some think this is added, To show a difference betwixt the Sacrifice here required, and that of the Jews, which was of uncleanly Beasts. Others, by reasonable service, understand spiritual service, and Expound this place by 1 Pet. 2. 5. where you read of spiritual Sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. Others think, That by reasonable, you must understand such service, as is according to the word of God, and this Suits best with the Greek Phrase in the Text. λογικη λατρευσις. The same word is used, 1 Pet. 2. 2. and there 'tis rendered the Milk of the Word, and not reasonable Milk. And for the Service or Worship here spoken of, is opposed to that will worship, of which you read in Col. 2. 23.

2. And * be not conformed to this world i; but ye j * be transformed by the renewing of your mind k, that ye may * prove what is that good, and acceptable and perfect will of God.

i Do not Fashion or Accommodate yourselves to the corrupt Principles, Customs, or Courses of worldly and wicked Men; and what they are, you will find in chap. 12. 13. Eph. 5. 18. 19. 1 Pet. 4. 3. You have somewhat like the Counsel, Exod. 23. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 14. k q. d. Be you Regenerated, and changed in your Whole Man; beginning at the Mind, by which the Spirit of God works upon the inferior Faculties of the Soul, viz. the Will, &c. By proving, understand Discerning. By the will of God, this revealed will in his Word; and to be it self Accords with the reasonable Service spoken of, ver. 1. and with the Scope of the Text it self, which is, to exhort unto holiness and obedience, which is according to the Rule of the word. He annexeth Three Adjuncts to the will or Word of God; 1. It is good; Revealed only for our Benefit. It is desirable, i. e. By Obedience thereto, we shall be blessed. It is Perfect, and the Observance thereof will make us so. 2. It is good, 1 Tim. 1. 5. There are different Readings of these Words, but all to the same Sense. Some thus, that you may prove the will of God, which is to do, God, Acceptable, and Perfect. Others thus, That you may prove what the will of God is; and what is good, acceptable, and perfect.

3. m For I say n, * through the grace given unto me o, to every man that is among you p, * not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think q; but to || think soberly r, according s as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith s.

m Before he Exhorted to a Holy Life in general, now he comes to more particular Exhortations. n i. e. I Enjoin and Command, vid. Gal. 5. 16. I do not only beseech you, as ver. 1. but I also Require you as one that hath Authority. o See on chap. 1. 5. p More particularly to him, that hath any particular Gift or Office in the Church. q i. e. Not to be Drunk with a proud and overbearing Conscience of himself, his own Wisdom, Ability, &c. Or Conceit of himself, let him contain himself within Bounds, and let him not take upon him what does not belong to him; let him not Contemn others, and pretend to more than he hath. There is an elegant Paronomasia in the Greek, which our Language cannot reach. s Faith here is put for the Knowledge of God and Christ; and all other spiritual Gifts and graces bestowed upon the Faithful: These are called Faith, because they are given with Faith, and exercised by Faith; of these, God deals to every Man his measure or Portion: Not all gifts to one, nor the same gift to every one in the same measure or proportion, vid. ver. 6. and Eph. 4. 7.

4. For * as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office;

5. So * we being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another t.

i These Verses are a Reason against Arrogancy. All Christians are members of one and the same Body; therefore they should not Pride themselves in their gifts, but employ them for the Common Good. It is with the Church, the Mystical Body of Christ, as with a natural Body that hath many members, and all these (as the word says) are one, or the same Action or Operation (as the word signifies) The Eye hath one office, the Ear another, the Hand a third, &c. So the Church of Christ, though one body body in him who is the Head, hath many Members; many in regard of their Persons, and many in regard of their Offices, which are various and diverse; and which is more, The members are every one members one of another. i. e. They are joynt and fellow Members; as they have a common Relation to the same Head, so a mutual Relation to one another. Therefore Christians, especially Church-Officers, should not contemn one another, or intrude upon the Office of each other; but all should use their Gifts to the Good and Edification of others.

6. * Having then gifts, differing according to the grace that is given to us u, whether v properly, let us w prudently x according to the proportion of faith x:

u Or seeing we have different gifts and offices, according as the grace of God hath bestowed them upon us, let us use them Aright. This is added to prevent Pride and Envy: None should be proud of that he hath himself, or envy what another hath, seeing all is of Grace. w These words, let us Prudently, are not in the Text; but they are put by our Translators, to fill up the Sense. There is an Ellipsis here, and something must be inferred. Some make the Supply, let us use them in the foregoing Verse, Let us be one another's Members in Prophecy, Teaching, Exhorting, &c. Others think, it ought to be supplied out of ver. 3. q. d. Whether we have Gifts, let us use them unto sobriety in Prophecy; and so in all the rest that follow: In all the several gifts and offices, let us have this gift of Prophecy, which they should be themselves. The Greek σωφροσύνη, will have supplied in this place, may be understood an extraordinary Gift, that some had in Understanding divine Mysteries, and Old-Testament Prophecies, with a wonderful Dexterity in applying the same; to which was joynted, sometimes the Revelation of Secret, and Future things, viz. 11. 27. and 21. 9. x i. e. They that have this gift of Prophecy, must exercise it according to the measure of Knowledge, in heavenly mysteries, that God hath given them: Or else, if in their Prophecy, they must have regard to the Articles of Christian Faith, and see that they regulate themselves according thereto. Some think, he calls the Holy Scripture in general, an Analogy or Proportion of faith; by these, the false Prophets of Old, were discerned, if they delivered any thing contrary thereto. (Dent. 13. 1. &c.) Others think, he speaks of certain Principles, or Heads of Christianity, (vid. Eph. 6. 1.) from which the Prophecy and others, were not to (swerve; Yea, some think, he aims at the Symbol and Creed, called the Apostles; which, from the beginning, was called the Analogy of Faith.

7. Or ministry y, let us wait on our ministring z; or he that teacheth, on teaching a.

y Under this Word, are comprehended, all ordinary Ecclesiastical Functions, which afterwards divideth into two sorts: The first relating to the Word; The second to other pious Work. z The words let us wait are not in the Text, but fully supplied. q. d. Let all that are called to the office of the Ministry, be diligent in it, and attend to it, vid. Act. 20. 28. 1 Pet. 5. 2. a Teaching, in the latter end of this Verse; and Exhorting, in the beginning of the next, are mentioned, as the Two great Parts of those, that minister and labour in the Word and Doctrine: Some think, they are distinct Offices, particularly in the primitive Church, (vid. Eph. 4. 11.) and that in the primitive Church, where they had variety of Ministers; some had the office of Teachers, and chiefly exercised themselves in Instructing their Hearers in the Principles of Religion; in laying down found Doctrine, and Confuting of Errors. Others had the office of Pastors, and attended chiefly to Exhortation and Admonition; pressing Points of Practice, and making Application thereto. Others think, that they are distinct Gifts, but not divers offices; some have a gift to Teach, that have none to Exhort and c. contra. The Apostle, ver. 6. calls them differing gifts; sometimes these Two are found in the same Persons, and they are excellently Gifted, both for Teaching and Exhorting.

8. Or he that exhorteth, on exhortation b: he that || giveth, let him do so || with simplicity; c that he ruleth d, with diligence; e he that sweeth mercy, * with cheerfulness e.

i See the Notes on the foregoing Verse. e i. e. He that hath the office of Collecting and Distributing the Church-Arms (which was the Deacons Work or Charge, Act. 6. 1. &c.) Let him discharge it with simplicity, or without hypocrisy of Heart. (So the word is rendered, Eph. 6. 5.) Let him do it Faithfully and Impartially, and without Favor or Affection. d Or he that is a President, and set over others: There is great difference amongst Expositors, who is meant by this Ruler. It is not meant of State-Rulers (of them, 'tis said in the next Chapter) but of Church-Rulers. Some understand, all Church-Officers in general. Others think, such are meant, as were not properly Pastors and Teachers, but together with them had the oversight of the Church, to Rule the same; to regulate Misdemeanors, to rectify Differences, to administer Discipline in Admonition, and Censures: These, they call Seniors or Elders, or the Careful of Manners; and are the same the Apostle calls Governments or Governors, 1 Cor. 12. 28. vid. 1 Tim. 5. 17. e Some understand this generally of all Christians, that they should be Charitable, and that with such as have had special Gifts: These, they call Seniors or Elders, or the Careful of Manners; shall Love thy Neighbour as thy self, vid. Mat. 22. 39. Gal. 5. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 5.

 10. Love worketh no ill to thy Neighbour: therefore * love is the fulfilling of the law.
 * This Verbe is an Argument to prove what was proposed, ver. 8. It may thus be formed, That which worketh no ill, or doth no hurt to our Neighbour, fulfilleth the Law: But Love worketh no ill to thy Neighbour. Ergo, That this is the property of Love, vid. 1 Cor. 13. 5. When he saith, Love doth no hurt, this is imply'd, That it doth good to thy Neighbour. Where only Negative are mentioned, the Affirmative also is included; and the Negative is only set down in this place, that it may the better correspond with the foregoing Verbe.

11. And that as knowing the time b, that now it is high || time to awake out of sleep: c for now is || our Salvation nearer than when we believed d.

Or Moreover, the Speech is Elliptical, something must be understood, as (1 sty or add) q. d. Unto this Exhortation, to Christian Love, I further add what followeth. i. e. Considering, it is a Time of great Trial, or Time of Gospel-light, i. e. To shake off Slothfulness, Security, and all former Sinful Courses. See the like, 1 Cor. 15. 34. Eph. 5. 14. 1 Thess. 5. 6, 7. 8. q. d. Confidant, now is the hour or season to Awake or Rise up, to lay aside thy Night-Cloaths, as it is in the following Verbe. d. Our Salvation is nearer to us, than when we first began to Believe. Some would understand it of Temporal Salvation, and Deliverance from those Persecutions, which befall the Christians in the Infancy of the Church; from these they were saved and Delivered, by the Destruction of the Jews their Persecutors. This was foretold by Christ, and expected by the Christians; and it was night, i. e. hand, when they first embraced the Christian Faith. But Most understand it of eternal Salvation, which he says, was nearer than when they first believed. In which Words, is couched another Argument to Awaken or Stir up the believing Romans: The First was taken from the Consideration of the time or season. The Second, from the nearness of the word. Therefore it should be with them, as with those that Run in a Race; the nearer they come to the Goal, the faster they Run, lest others should get before them.

12. The night is far spent, the day is at hand e; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness f, and let us put on the armour of light.

* Come, by Night and Day, do understand the night of Jewish Persecution, and the day of Deliverance and Salvation, vid. Act. 10. 24. Others, by Night, understand the time of Ignorance and Infidelity; This he says is far spent, or for the greatest part it is past and gone: Darkness is not perfectly done away, in this Life, amongst Believers themselves, 1 Cor. 13. 9, 10. By Day, they understand the time of Gospel-Light, and Saving Knowledge: So in the next Verbe, and in 1 Thess. 5. 5. This he says is at hand, and is come nigh, it was Dawning upon the World, and would shine brighter and brighter, till it were perfect Day. f. i. e. All our former Sins, which are called Works of darkness, here, and in Eph. 5. 11. They are so called, because they are usually Committed by those that are in Ignorance and Darkness; and because some Sins, such as he speaks of in the next Verbe, were wont to be Committed in the darkness of the Night, Men being ashamed of them in the Day-time; vid. Job 24. 15. 1 Thess. 5. 7. They he exhorts the believing Romans to cast off: The Word implyeth, cast and knead, 1 Jo. 3. 22 and 31. 7. g. i. e. All Christian Graces, which are bright and living in the Eyes of the World, Mat. 5. 16 and which will be as so much Christian Armour, to Defend us against Sin, and all the Assaults of Satan.

* Phil. 4. 8. 1 Thes. 4. 12. Or, rather, or decently, 1 Cor. 13. 8. Or, in cleanness and simplicity, 1 Jam. 3. 14.

13. * Let us walk || honestly as in the day b, not in rioting and drunkenness c, * not in || chambering and wantonness, * not in strife and envying d.
 * g. d. Let us behave our selves decently, and with a holy temperance, as becomes those to whom the Grace of God, and the glorious Light of the Gospel, hath been given. This honest walking is expressed by three Verbes in this Verse, i. e. Sobriety, Righteousness, and Modesty. He intimates divers Vices, which are contrary to this honest walking, and he sets them down by pairs: He makes three pairs of them. The First, is Rioting and Drunkenness, by which he means Intemperance, or excess in Eating and Drinking, vid. Luk. 21. 34. The Second, is Chambering and Wantonness, by which he means Actual uncleanliness, and all Impure and lascivious dalliances, vid. Gal. 5. 19. 1 Cor. 6. 18. 1 Tim. 4. 3, 4. The Third pair is Strife and Envying. All these Vices are excluded and corrected, by the temperate, patient, unchangeable, and both charitable Contention and Emulation, Prov. 23. 29, 30. The famous St. Augustine confesseth, that he was Corrupted by Reading, and Pondering this Text.

14. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ b, and * make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof c.

He Exhorted, v. 12. To put on the Armour of Light, now he put on Jesus Christ: This is necessary, for though Grace may help to defend, yet it is Christ and his Righteousness only that can cover us (as garment doth our nakedness) In the fight of God, to put on Christ, is to receive him and rest upon him by Faith; as also to profess and imitate him. You have the same Phrase, Gal. 3. 27. By Faith, here some understand the corrupt Nature: Others the Body. When he says, Make no provision for the Flesh, he doth not mean, That they should not provide things necessary for the Body; this is allowed Eph. 5. 29. 1 Tim. 5. 27. We are no where commanded to neglect or macerate our Bodies; but he means, that we should not gratify it in its sinful Lusts or Longings, vid. 1 Cor. 9. 27. Sustain it we may, but pamper it we may not; we must not care, eat, or make projects for the Flesh, to fulfil its Inordinacies and Cravings.

CHAP. XIV.

1. Him that is * weak in the faith a || receive you b, but not to || doubtful disputations c.

In this Chapter and part of the next, The Apostle || treats of some lesser matters of Religion, about which there were great Contentions in the Church of Rome. Some of the fewer, though they embraced the Gospel, did fully adhere still to the Jewish Ceremonies; and though a difference in meats and days should be conscientiously observed; yet they were ready to censure those that were contrary minded, as profane Persons and Contemners of the Law of God. On the other side, the believing Gentiles, being better instructed about their Christian Liberty, when they saw the Jews inflicting upon such things as these, that had never any real goodness in them, and were now abrogated by Christ, they were ready to despise them as ignorant and Superstitious, and to deny Communion with them. The Apostle therefore doth feebly endeavour to arbitrate this matter, and make peace amongst them. a That is wavering and undecided in some lesser points of Faith, particularly in the Doctrine of Christian Liberty, 1 Jo. 4. 10. The Apostle here means the Scrupulous and Erroneous Judgment, though yet in proportion, they may be applied to other scrupulous and doubtful Christians. b Or receive him to you, take him into your bosoms, admit him to Communion with you, bear with his weakness, better instruct him with the Spirit of Meekness, vid. chap. 15. 1. Phil. 3. 15, 16. Bucer received all though differing from him in some Opinions, in whom he found, aliquid Christi, any thing of Christ. c. q. d. Don't entertain him with disputes and vain tanglings, which will not edify, but perplex and prejudice him. Don't make him question Scis, as 'tis in 1 Tim. 4. 3. This passage may be expounded by Tit. 3. 9. The marginal reading, would make this to be the fence, That a Scrupulous Christian should be received unto Communion; yet not so as to encourage him to judge and condemn the thoughts of those that differ from him.

2. For one believeth that he may eat all things d, another, who is weak, eateth herbs e.

d. i. e. One that is informed aright of his Christian Liberty, is fully persuaded, and that upon good grounds, that he may eat any thing that is wholesome, though forbidden by the Ceremonial Law; that there is now no difference of clean and unclean Meats, vid. Mat. 23. 19. 1 Jo. 3. 14, 15. 1 Jo. 4. 19. e. i. e. He that is before is weak in the Faith, and not so well informed, such a one for fear of offending God by eating any thing that is forbidden, will rather content himself with the meanest diet. The meaning is, not, as if any in those times, thought it lawful only to eat herbs, and so abstained altogether from other meats; but they would rather practise themselves with Herbs, and other Fruits of the Earth, in which the Law of Moses, made no difference then eat meats that were forbidden, or not cleared from blood, or offered to Idols, vid. Mat. Dan. 1. 8.

3. * Let not him that eateth; || despise him || that eateth not f; and let not him which eateth || not, judge him that eateth: for God hath received him g.
a. i. e. Let not one make use of his Liberty in eating any thing indifferently, wisely or otherwise, than that of a contrary mind; as one that is ignorant and over scrupulous, and let not him that forbears such meats as were of old forbidden, judge and condemn him that is contrary minded, as profane and overventurous. Christian standing such little difference, in opinion, as the Jews did, and communicate with another. g. i. e. It is disputed, whether that be meant of the weak or strong Christian, the word judging, which immediately goes before and follows after, carries it rather for the latter. But some think it is meant of both. He that eateth, and he that eateth not, is received by God into his Church and Family, and indifferently accepted with him, upon another and a higher account.

4. Who art thou that judgest another mans servant? To his own master he standeth or falleth b: Yea he shall be holden up: For God is able to make him stand c.

A sharp reprehension of the forementioned evil. You have the like, James 4. 12. q. d. This Phrase is repugnant not only to the Law of God, but to the very Law of Nature, that tells us, that one Man must not condemn the servant of another, nor man be both his right or power, much less his man; 1 Cor. 7. 23. In the Lords Service: Every Christian hath Christ alone for his own, or his proper Master; and it is his Judgment by which he must abide; it is to him that he standeth or falleth, that he doth well or ill. q. d. If (as thou thinkest) he be fallen or falling, he shall be upheld and supported; For God is able, &c. But how doth this follow? Because God can make him stand, therefore he shall be holden up. a. i. e. It is a Rule in Divinity, that in all God Promises, his power is joined with his Will; so that where the latter is once revealed, there is no question of the former: Now of the word of God in this matter, there was no doubt; for he had said, v. 3. That God had received him. You had the like way of Arguing, chap. 11. 23. where the Apostle proves the calling of the Jews, by an Argument taken from the power of God, because he is able to graft them in again. vid. chap. 4. 16. Phil. 10. 23.

5. One man esteemeth one day above another b; another esteemeth every day alike c: Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind d.

There were differences in the Church of Rome, about the observation of Days, as well as the choice of Meats; and in this he endeavours an Accommodation as well as in the other. The converted Jews was of opinion, that the Festival days appointed in Moses Law, were holier than other days, and that they should still be observed, vid. Gal. 4. 10. Col. 2. 16. On the other side, the Believing Gentile was of opinion, that the difference in days under the Old Testament was now ceased, and he (the Text says) disputed or argued of all days, the word (alike) is not in the Original, but is aptly supplied by our Translators. i. e. Let every man be satisfied, as by the grounds of his practice; let him act by his own, and not another mans Judgment and Conscience: Let him be fully persuaded in his own mind, of the lawfulness of what he doth, as to find no doubting or scrupulous hesitations in the doing of it; let him be able to say, as the Apostle himself doth v. 14. The reason of this Counsel, you have in 1 Jo. 4. 19. He that doth what he thinks is a sin, is an offender against God, whether it be a sin or no. And yet a man may sin in that, whereas he is fully persuaded he sineth not. A full persuasion must be had, but it is not sufficient, to make an Action good or lawful.

6. He that || regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it m. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for * he giveth God thanks n; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks o.

In this Verbe, you have a Reason why Christians should not censure one another, upon an account of different Opinions and Practices, because they have all the same End and Scope, which is the pleasing and glorifying of God; it is with regard to Him, that they eat, or eat not; that they observe those Festival Days, or observe them not; and so far they are on both sides || he Commended; for that indeed should be our End, in all our Actions, to glorify and please the Lord, vid. 1 Cor. 10. 31. Col. 3. 17. He is thankful unto God, for the bountiful and free Practice of his Creatures. Some would ground that laudable Practice of giving Thanks at Meals, upon this Text, but it hath a clearer Warrant from Mat. 14. 19. and 15. 36. and 26. 26. Mat. 27. 25. Because he hath Meat enough besides, which he is not forbidden to eat, 1 Cor. 10. 28.

7. For * none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.

8. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord b; and whether we dye, we dye unto the Lord c: Here he proves what he had before asserted, That Christians have regard to God and his Glory, in their particular Actions; and that from their general End and Do-

sign, which is to devote themselves, and their whole Life to Death by God. He tells them first in the Negative, that none of us || lives to himself, i. e. That none of us Christians and Believers, do live or die to our selves; we are not our own Lords, nor are on our own disposal. And then in the Affirmative, he shews, That We live or dye to the Lord; we spend our Lives in His Service, and part with them at His Appointment. His Glory is the White, at which we Aim, Living or dying: He is the Center, in which all the Lines in the whole Circumference of our Lives do meet, 2 Cor. 5. 9. Phil. 1. 21. q. d. This is an Inference from what he had said before, 1 Cor. 10. 31. That in all that we do, whether of health or sickness, abundance or in all other, we are the Lords Property, and at His Disposal: We have an absolute Dominion over us, living or dying in this world, or in the next.

9. For * to this end Christ both dyed, and rose b; and revived c, that he might be || Lord both of the dead and living d.

q. d. This is the Fruit that accrues to Christ, by His Death and Resurrection, that he might, &c. The Vulgar Latin leaves out this Word. Christus left out the former word, be Some, Ambrosius inverts the order of the words, and Reads thus, Thy to this end he lived and died, and rose again. Some think, this is here put for the Frederic-Teste, he revived, i. e. He fell Lives, to Intercede for us, and to exercise Dominion over us. Others think, That Christ's reviving here doth denote, that new State of Life, which He had after his Resurrection. 1 Cor. 15. He may Govern and Lord it (Ita regemus) over all His, whether dead or alive. That He might obtain Dominion, He had the Exercise of His Dominion over all; Act. 13. 48. He hath an Universal Dominion over all; but as Mediator, He hath a more special Dominion over us. Therefore gave to Him: This Dominion He purchased at his Death, and He had the full Exercise of it, when He Rose again, Mat. 28. 18. Phil. 2. 9, 10.

10. But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy Brother? for we shall all || stand before the judgment-seat || Or, be || of Christ ||.

He goes on to persuade them to a Mutual Forbearance, to Dehort them from Condemning or Contemning one another, about indifferent things. He suggests Two Arguments against it in this Verbe; One (which is more properly) is taken from the Relation they bore one to another, they were Brethren, by natural Generation, but by Regeneration and Adoption; This he says is a Father, even God. The Second Argument is more plainly Explicated; and 'tis taken from the Consideration of the Day of Judgment, when all shall stand before Christ's Judgment-seat, vid. 2 Cor. 5. 10. All both the Strong and the Weak: And then He will determine who hath done Well or Ill. The mean while, Who are thou that darest to stir up His Place or Office? The reason of this Counsel, hath not only the Force of a strong Denial, q. d. Have you no more Grace, Charity, or wisdom, than to do so.

11. For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God w.

This Verbe Proves what was before asserted, That all must stand before the Judgment of Christ: The Proof is from Isa. 45. 23. The Prophet speaks only of Gods swearing; the Apostle lets down the Form of his Oath, which Form is frequently mentioned in Scripture, vid. Mat. 24. 21, 28. Joh. 22. 24. Ezek. 5. 11. and 14. 16, 18. and 20. 3. And instead of every Tongue shall Swear; the Apostle, following the Second, saith, Every Tongue shall confess; and we are told, Phil. 2. 11. what it shall confess, viz. That Jesus Christ is Lord. That which is generally spoken of Jesus, being here in a peculiar manner applied to Christ, it evidently sheweth, That He is supremus Judex, and sovereign Lord, unto whom all Knees must bow in token of Subjection; and before whose Tribunal, all Persons, will they, or will they not, must appear.

12. So then * every one of us shall give account of himself to God x.

* Here you have the End of his standing before the Judgment-seat of Christ, which is to give an Account, vid. Mat. 12. 36. 1 Pet. 4. 5. He saith, Every one of us shall give an account, whether he be Great or Small, Strong or Weak; and that he shall give an account of himself, i. e. Of his own Actions, and not of others. He shall give an account of himself, in his Natural Capacity, as a Man; and in his Capacity, as a rich or great Man; and in his Religious Capacity, as one that hath enjoyed such Education; such means of Grace, &c. 1 Jo. 1. 10. For all shall give an account of their Negligence, and want of Care, where by they suffered their Sheep or Flock to miscarry; but every particular Sheep shall also give an account of his own personal Wanders.

13. Let us not therefore judge one another y, any years returned to Dimas, and from thence to Jerusalem; from Jerusalem he went to Cæsarea, and so to Tarsus; from Tarsus Barabas brought him to Antioch, and from thence to Jerusalem to carry relief to the Jews: from Jerusalem they returned to Antioch; from Antioch he and Barabas went to Selyucia, then to Cyprus, and to some Cities of Pamphylia, and so to another Antioch in Pisidia: From thence to Lyconia, and then returned to Antioch: from whence they had been recommended by the Church. From Antioch they were sent to Jerusalem about the question of the Uncircumcised, and returned to Antioch with the Apostles Decree. From thence he went through Syria and Cilicia visiting the Churches. Then he went through Phrygia, Galatia and Mysia; then to Troas, where by a Vision he was called into Macedonia, and so came into the parts of Europe: First to Philippi in Macedonia, then to Thessalonica; from thence to Athens, and then to Corinth; from thence to Ephefus; and going to visit the Churches of Galatia and Phrygia, returned to Ephefus: From Ephefus he went again to Macedonia, from thence to Troas and Asiaticum; and thence by Tyris and Cæsarea, and other Cities, he came to Jerusalem, where he was taken and put in bonds. Thus you have an account of the Apostles Travels which he abridgeth here, when he says, This is how from Jerusalem round about unto Illyricum, &c. i. e. I have filled all these Countries with the Gospel of Christ. The words signify that he fulfilled all. Col. 4. 8. This he calleth the finishing his Ministry. Act. 20. 24.

20. Yea, so have I strived to preach the Gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another mans foundation.

21. But, as it is written, To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard, shall understand y.

He gives a reason why he chose to preach the Gospel in these places, because Christ had not been named there before; this he saith was his Ambition, and a thing that he greatly coveted; he was unwilling to build upon another mans foundation, to put his sickle into another harvest, to derive the Glory to himself, which would be due to others, 2 Cor. 10. 15, 16. Again, another reason why he preached the Gospel where Christ had not been named, was this, that so by him, as an Apostle of Christ, and in his Ministry, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, which you have in Act. 13. 26. To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see, &c. See the Notes there.

22. For which cause also I have been much hindered from coming to you z.

He hitherto he had excused his manner of Writing, now he makes an Apology for his not coming unto them. They at Rome might be ready to say, if he hath travelled into so many Countries, Why could he not all this while give us a visit? To this he answers, it was not from any want of respect or good will to them, but for another cause which he had already assigned, and that was, the Preaching of Christ where he had not been named; for this cause, he says, he had been much hindered; he looked upon that as more necessary work, the planting of Churches is more then the watering of them. He told them, chap. 1. 13. of his being hindered from coming to them; and now he acquaints them more particularly with the reason which he concealer before. The word (καταστά) rendered much, signifieth many; and it implies that he was many times hindered, and many ways; but this was the chief.

23. But now having no more place in these parts, and having a great desire these many years to come unto you z.

Having given the reason why he came not to them hitherto, the following words he assures them, he would do it hereafter. And here he saith, He was the more inclined to do so, Yea, because he had no more place in those parts, &c. As before in those places where Christ had not been named, or his Gospel Preach'd, he had no new Churches there to be found, and he had obtained places in every City to build upon his Foundation, the word rendered parts, signifieth Cities. 2. 2. The word Yea, is the Greek word καὶ, and it implies that he was much longer to do so, he had desired it for many years, chap. 1. 10, 11.

24. Wherefore I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you: For I trust to see you in my journey, & to be brought on my way thitherward by you z, if first I be somewhat filled with your company d.

Here he lets down the time when he would visit them. i. e. When he took his Journey into Spain. He saith, he trusted he should see them then, he was not assured of it, he had no revelation from God concerning it, he he could make no absolute promise. See 25. 2. e. i. By some of you; this he did promise himself from them, and indeed it was usually done by the Churches he visited. vid. Act. 17. 15. not that he affected any train or pomp, but it was done for his guidance and safety, as he travelled through unknown and dangerous ways. 4 This he adds, lest they should think he meant to make no stay with them, he gives them to understand, that he did not intend to leave them, till they were mutually filled and satisfied with one anothers company and society.

25. But now I go unto Jerusalem to minister unto the Saints e.

Some might be ready to say, if Paul hath no more place in those parts where he is, and hath such a longing desire to see us, why then doth he not presently come to us? To this he answers, that for the present he could not come, because he had a weighty affair upon his hands, which was to go up to Jerusalem to Minister to the Saints, &c. To carry thither certain Collections and Contributions from the Gentile Churches for their relief. He useth a Participle of the present tense in the Original, to shew that this work is now in hand, and it would not stay or hold him long. Though indeed his work was to preach the Gospel, and not to serve Tables; yet it seems, likely that the Churches of the Gentiles, who were moved by him to this Contribution, had committed the same to his care. 2 Cor. 8. 4.

26. For I hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia; to make a certain Journey for the poor faints which are at Jerusalem f.

For the understanding of these words, you need only to read 2 Cor. 8. 1. and 9. 2. When he said, I have pleased them, it is implied, that it was not extorted or questured out of them; but that it proceeded from a ready and willing mind, and that they took delight therein. In the word here rendered Contributions, properly signifieth Communication, which implies a mutual exchange, or intercourse between the givers and the receivers; the one Contributing Alms, and the other Prayers and Intercessions to God. He speaks elsewhere of communicating concerning Giving and Receiving, Phil. 4. 15.

27. It hath pleased them verily g, and their debtors they are h, For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, Gal. 6. 6. their duty is also, to minister to them in carnal things i.

He makes this repetition, as to commend the Gentiles, so also to admonish the Romans to the like benevolence. 1. i. e. The Gentiles are Debtors to the Jews; though what they sent them was a Gift, yet it was also a Debt, it was due by the Law of Charity, chap. 13. 8. and by the Law of Gratitude and Equity, they had received from them, and they were obliged in some sort to make returns to them. 1. i. By the spiritual things of the Jews, of which the Gentiles were made partakers you may understand all those things of which mention is made, chap. 9. 4, 5. More particularly, that they received the Ministry, and Ordinances thereof: The Gospel was first Preach'd to the Jews, and from Jerusalem it was spread abroad among the Gentiles, vid. Luke 24. 47. Act. 1. 8. By the carnal things of the Gentiles, you may understand their Gold and Silver, with all things needful for the sustentation of the body: you have a parallel place in 1 Cor. 9. 7.

28. When therefore I have performed this, and have sealed to them this fruit k, I will come by you into Spain l.

k. i. e. After that I have dispatched this business, and safely delivered the Alms of the Greek Churches to the Jews, whereover I am intrusted, it is put into my hands as a Treasure sealed in a bag or chest, that it may not be diminished or imberbered; he calls it Fruit, because it proceeded from their Faith and Love, and because it would abound to their account, Phil. 4. 17. it would benefit them that received it, but much more them that gave it. 1. i. e. I will take you, or your City in my way thither, to tell them as much before. v. 24. This he really intended, but it is generally concluded, that he was prevented; that he never went this journey into Spain. The purposes of men are ruled and over-ruled by the Providence of God, Prov. 16. 9.

29. And I am sure that when I come unto you, I shall come in the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ m.

m. i. e. As some expound it, I shall find you furnished with all Spiritual and Gospel Blessings: This sense agrees with v. 14. But others rather think, that he speaks of what he should bring with him, and not of what he should find there. Therefore it may better be expounded by chap. 1. 11, 12. He assures himself he should impart unto them much Knowledge, Grace and Comfort; that he should enrich, and fill them with all the Blessings of the Gospel of Christ.

30. Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christs sake o, and for the love of the Spirit p, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me q.

In the Conclusion, he commends himself to their Prayers. This is usual with him, in his other Epistles, vid. Eph. 6. 18. Col. 4. 3. 2 Thes. 3. 1. Heb. 13. 18. 1. i. e. If not for my sake, yet for his sake, who is most dear to you. p. q. d. If you love the Spirit of God: Or, submit the Grace of Love be wrought in you by the Spirit, shew it in this thing. This rhetorical way of speaking is frequent with this Apostle, vid. chap. 12. 1. Phil. 2. 1.

That you strive, as those that be in an Agony; it is a Military word: He bespeaks their earnest and importunate Prayers in his behalf. Each prayed after this manner, for id. Eph. 6. 18. Eph. 6. 12. He Prayed himself, and he desired them to join with him, and help him; as Aaron and Azar helped Moses.

31. That I may be delivered from them that do not believe in Judea, and that my service which I have for Jerusalem, may be accepted of the saints r.

There are two things more particularly, which he desired them to pray for God in his behalf. First, That he may be delivered from them that did not believe: Or were disobedient, and refractory in Judea. He knew that the Jews were incensed against him; that Troubles did abide him, or wait for him in Judea, whether he was going, vid. Act. 20. 23. And it happened accordingly, for the Jews went about to kill him, Act. 21. 31. Therefore this, that he desires their Prayers, That he might be delivered from them, 2 Thes. 3. 2. Secondly, That the Alms he brought the Poor Saints at Jerusalem, might be taken by them in good part: That they might be reconciled, both to the Gentile Churches that sent it, and to him that brought it. It denotes greatly from a Gift, when it comes, either from one, or by one; against whom we are prejudiced.

32. That I may come unto you with joy s, by the will of God t, and may with you be refreshed u.

s. q. d. This would be a means to make me come unto you with the more comfort if God will, or if God grant it to our Prayers. This condition (if God will) he had before inserted upon this very occasion, chap. 1. 10. See the like 1 Cor. 4. 19. James 4. 13, 14. This he did to free himself from the supposition of infatigability, in case it should fall out otherwise: as also to shew, that always, and in all things he referred himself to the good Pleasure and Providence of God. i. e. With your Company and Consent. This hath the same sense with chap. 1. 12. See the Notes there.

33. Now the God of peace w be with you all x, Amen x.

This is a frequent Title of God in Scripture, he is called the God of Peace, chap. 16. 20. 2 Cor. 13. 11. Phil. 4. 9. 1 Thes. 5. 23. 2 Thes. 3. 16. Heb. 13. 20. Here it fits his great argument, which was to persuade the Believing Romans to be at peace amongst themselves, and not to contend about indifferent things. w Three times in this Chapter doth the Apostle lift up a Prayer for the Believing Romans, id. 5. 1, 2. And this is more comprehensive than the other two. If God be with us, no good thing can be wanting to us. Gods presence is inclusive of all good, and exclusive of all evil. x. vid. chap. 16. 11.

CHAP. XVI.

I commend unto you a Phoebe b our sister c, which is a servant of the Church which is at Cenchrea d.

This Chapter is in the nature of a Post-script. The Apostle begins it with the Recommendation of a certain Woman to them. 1. i. She went upon some occasion to Rome, and by her (as some have supposed) this Epistle was sent to the Church there. The Poets Name is Phoebe, as they did the San Phoebe. This Name is likely to have been imposed by her Parents, being Chastity, 1. i. e. in Christ, and by the Profession of the same Faith. vid. Tit. 2. 15. A Port or Haven being ascribed on the Ways file towards Africa: There by reason of this double Haven, Cenchrea was called by the Poets, Maris. Here Paul paid a Vow, which he had made, Act. 18. 18. Here also he Preached and Converted many; amongst whom, this Phoebe (as is probable) was one. When he saith, She was servant of the Church, it is not meant, she was a Deaconess, or one of the College of Widows, of whom he speaketh, 1 Tim. 5. 9.

But she served the Church, in Harboursing and succouring the Saints that were driven out of their Country; yea, as appears by the next Verse, she was a Succourer of the Ministers of the Gospel, and of the Apostle himself: we read, Luk. 8. 3. of some that ministered unto the Lord of their substance; there the same word is used. And this Phoebe seems to have been employed in the same Work: she ministered unto Paul as Onephebus did, 2 Tim. 1. 18. There the same word is used again.

2. That ye receive her in the Lord z, as \ 1. i.* Joh. 6. becometh faints f, and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you g. For she hath been a succourer of many, and of my self also h.

i. e. In the Lords Name, or for the Lords sake, vid. Mat. 18. 5. Or else tis, as if he had said, Receive her Christianly. As it is fit that Saints should be received, or as it is fit for them, who Profess themselves to be Saints, to receive one another. g That you stand by her, and afford her your Council, or any other assistance. She might have some business in the Empireans Courts, by reason of Fraud, Oppression, or some unjust Vexations; and there might be those amongst them, that could stand her in some head. There were Christians of Cæsarea Household, Phil. 4. 22. The word signifieth a Parasite; she had been Hostess to many, and in particular, to the Apostle himself. This sheweth, she was a Woman of some Account; it was but equal, that the Saints at Rome should assist her, who had been Assist unto so many others.

3. Great Priscilla and Aquila, my helpers in Christ Jesus k.

In the next place, he salutes several persons by Name; the first are Priscilla and Aquila. Sometimes she is called Prisca, 2 Tim. 4. 19. And by a Diminutive Priscilla. This was usual amongst the Romans. So Lucretia was called Lucretia, Tullia, Tulliola, Perona, Peronella, &c. The wife is named before her Husband, so she is, Act. 18. 18. 2 Tim. 4. 19. Some think she was first Calced, others that she was most Reverend for her zeal and Charity. We need not to be curious in our Enquiry after the Reason; we find in other places Aquila is far before Priscilla, Act. 18. 26. 1 Cor. 16. 19. Hence it may appear how weakly the Popish Argument for Peters primacy, because he was placed first on the Catalogue of the Apostles, before he was Husband, the wife should be preferred before her Husband. This Aquila was a Jew of Pontus, and by Occupation a Tent-maker: With him the Apostle Paul abode, and wrought as a Tent-maker. Act. 18. 2. 3. Though Claudius the Emperor had commanded the Jews to depart from Rome, yet now it seems, they were returned thither again; possibly, because Claudius was dead, or because that severe Edict was relaxed. 4 In propagation of their Place and Calling, and as they had opportunity. Though they Preached not publicly, yet they furthered the Gospel many ways privately. vid. Act. 18. 26.

4. Who have for my life laid down their own necks l: unto whom not only I give thanks, but also all the Churches of the Gentiles m.

i. e. They hazarded their own Lives to save mine. The Scripture speaks of this as the duty of Christians, 1 Joh. 3. 16. He refers (it may be) to that Uproar that was at Corinth; of which, see Act. 18. 12. Or that in Africa; of which, see Act. 19. 23. n Because he was the Apostle of the Gentiles, and his Preservation redounded to the benefit of them all.

5. Likewise greet the Church that is in their house n. Salute my well-beloved Epeneus, o, who is the first-fruits of Achaia unto Christ p.

The word Greet is supplied to fill up the Sense. q. d. Declare my good Will to them, and Desires of their welfare. You have the same Salutations, 1 Cor. 16. 19. And the like in Col. 4. 15. Philim. 2. By the Church in their house, is generally understood, their Family or Household; which he calls a Church, because of the Godly Order and Religious Worship, that was exercised amongst them. May Aquila and Priscilla be a pattern unto other House-keepers; may the families of Christians be every where a little Church. The House of George, Prince of Archie, for the good and Godly Order therein observed, was said to be, as well a Church, as a Court. There are some that think, that by the Church in their House, is meant the Christians that were wont to assemble there for Solemn Worship; but this is not likely, because of the particular Salutations of so many unto other House-keepers; o Epeneus, in the Greek Tongue, is Laudable and Praiseworthy; so was this Person; both in name and in deed. p The name is affirmed of the house of Stephens, 1 Cor. 16. 15. The meaning may be this Epeneus was the first Person, and Stephens his Family, was the first Family that embraced

|| Or, such an Ambition have I had.

* 1 Thes. 2. 17, 18. || Or, many ways, or often times.

|| Or, climates. || Chap. 1. 17. ver. 32.

|| Or, with you ver. 32.

|| Or, fellow-labourers.

|| Or, soul. || Or, have you under their necks.

only the word (AE) is added: Some have thought, that the former was written with the hand of Tertius, the scribe or Notary, and this with the Apollies own hand. It seems to be like a loving and tender Father, who bids his Children farewell once and again; and being loath to leave them, returns a second and a third time to discourse with them.

* Eph. 3. 20. Jude. 24. Now * to him that is of power to stablish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ (according to the revelation of the mystery, which was kept secret since the world began *).

He Concludes All with an excellent Doxology; wherein First He Describes God, and then He Ascribes eternal Glory to Himself. He describes Him by two of his Attributes or Perfections, the first is his power, He is able to establish you, i. e. in grace, and in Truth; to keep you from falling into sin and into error: The Scripture often Attributes our Establishment unto God. vid. 1. Thes. 3. 13. 2. Thes. 2. 17. and 3. 1. Pet. 5. 10. Our own weakness and Satans Power is such, that unless God did Establish us, we shall soon Tatter and fall, vid. cap. 14. 4. and the Notes there. Our Establishment is further amplified by the instrumental Cause thereof, which is the Gospel; Touching which, several things are here to be noted. First, He calls it his Gospel, because He was the Preacher and Publisher thereof, vid. cap. 2. 16. and the Notes there. Secondly, He calls it the preaching of Jesus Christ, which may be taken, Actively, for the preaching of our Lord himself: so the Doctrine of Salvation is called, the word that was spoken by our Lord, John. 1. 1. and Acts. 4. 23. & 9. 35. Or rather passively, for the Gospel which was preached concerning Jesus Christ, vid. cap. 1. 3. and the Notes there. Thirdly, He calls it a mystery which was kept secret since the world began, but now is made manifest: see parallel places, 1. Cor. 2. 7. Eph. 3. 9. Col. 1. 26. Some restrain this to the calling of the Gentiles, but it is better understood of the whole Doctrine of the gospel, concerning the Trinity, the Incarnation of the Son of God, &c.

* 2 Tim. 1. 10. Tit. 1. 2. * 1 Pet. 1. 20. * Act. 6. 7. - 26. * But * now is made manifest, and by the scriptures of the prophets according to the Commandment of the everlasting God, * made known to all nations for the * obedience of faith.

* Which, although it was in some sort made known under the Old Testament, yet in respect of the present Right and revelation, it was a hidden mystery. Concerning the revelation of this mystery, four things are further recorded. (1) The means whereby it was made known, viz. The Scriptures of the Prophets, vid. Act. 10. 43. and 16. 30. and 28. 23. (2) The Authority by which it was made known, The command of the Everlasting God. (3) The persons to whom it was made known, the Gentiles, or The Inhabitants of all Nations. (4) The end for which it was made known, viz. For the obedience of Faith, i. e. That it may be believed and obeyed. vid. cap. 1. 5. and 15. 18.

27. To God only wife &c, be glory through Jesus Christ for ever y. Amen z.

* The Second Attribute in the description of God, is his wisdom. He is said to be wife, and only wife. See the like 1 Tim. 1. 17. Jud. 25. 50. He is said to be only wife, Joh. 17. 3. and to be the only Ruler, 1 Tim. 6. 15. And only to have Immortality, 1 Tim. 6. 16. And this doth not exclude the wisdom of the Son, and of the holy Spirit, but the wisdom of the Creatures. He is said to be only wife, because none is as wife as he; and all the wisdom of others is from Him: the wisdom of Men and Angels is but a ray from his Light. Again, He is said to be only wife, because He is originally wife; His wisdom is of himself; yea, his wisdom is himself; Here he ascribes eternal glory to God. You had the same before, chap. 11. 35. Only here is added, Through Jesus Christ; to show, That our praise and thanksgiving, is accepted of God through him, vid. cap. 1. 7. Eph. 3. 20. 21. 2 This word is six times us'd in this Epistle; cap. 1. 25. & 9. 5. & 11. 36. & 15. 33. & 16. 20. 27. It is an Hebrew word, but retain'd in all Languages. It cannot be Translated without losing much of its Weight. It may be taken three ways, 1. As a Name, and so it is, a name of Christ, Rev. 3. 14. 2. As an adverb, so it is us'd in the beginning of Speech, and signifies verily: or in the end of Speech, and so it notes Assent: Therefore it was us'd of old by the Jews, not only at Prayer, but at all the Sermons and Expositions of their Rabbins, to testify that they assented and agreed to all that they Taught, vid. 1 Cor. 14. 16. 3. As a verb, and so it is as much as, to be it, having the nature of a Prayer: Hence Jeremias said, down to the prophecy of Hoseas; though false, concerning the sudden return from the Babylonish captivity, to show how earnestly he desired it might be so, Jer. 28. 6.

¶ Written to the Romans from Corinth, and sent by Phoebe servant of the church at Cenchrea.

¶ This was not added by the Apostle Paul, nor by Tertius his amanuensis; but by a latter and unknown hand: yet there is nothing in the Epistle it self, nor in any ancient or Modern writers, that may induce us to question the verity thereof.

ANNOTATIONS ON THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

The ARGUMENT.

Corinth (the Inhabitants of which are called Corinthians) was an eminent City of Achaia, that is Achaia which is now called Morea, and was situated in an Isthmus, or neck of Land, betwixt the Aegean and Ionian Sea, so was very convenient for merchandise, and by merchandise came to great riches, which gave them great temptations to luxury, drunkenness, whoredom, &c. They were very infamous for the latter, as we read in Writers, and grow to that impudence, that they made the incest of Whores a part of their Prayers to their Idols, and made the bringing of Whores into the City a part of their Pious. Lais was an Harlot amongst them, very famous in Civil History. And as Pride usually ascendeth wealth, so they also were a people very proud and puffed up. They were also extremely famous for Pagan Learning, and had amongst them Stoicks and Epicureans, who laughed at the Resurrection of the body, and looked upon Incest, Adultery, and Fornication, as very venial things, if at all unlawful. We read of Paul's first coming thither from Athens, Acts 18. 1. where v. 11. Paul continued eighteen months, there he converted Crispus, v. 8. and Sophronius, and many believed and were baptized: Paul went from thence to Ephesus, v. 18. 19. To the Church thus planted at Corinth, Paul writeth this Epistle, at what time is not certain; but he is thought to have writ it from Ephesus, whither he came, Acts 19. 1. the second time, and as appears from v. 10. was going and coming to and from that City between two and three years. The occasion of his writing this Epistle will appear to any who consideringly reads it, he had heard from some who were of the house of Chloe, chap. 1. 11. of factions and divisions that were amongst them, and had heard it reported, that they suffered at incestuous persons to abide in their Communion, Chap. 5. 1. They had also wrote to him for his resolution in several Cases and Questions about Marriage, Divorce, &c. he had also heard of several disorders amongst them relating to their Communion in the Lords Supper, and of some amongst them who denied the Resurrection, for the allaying of these heats, and quieting their divisions, and for the direction of them in those Cases about which they wrote to him, and the setting them right in the Doctrine of the Resurrection, and directing them in the true and profitable use of their gifts, and in the right Celebration of the Lords Supper, and the quickening the exercise of their Charity, he writes this Epistle, which is supposed to be placed in our Bibles next to the Epistle to the Romans (though plainly written in order of time before) because that as that Epistle most fully discourses the Doctrine of Justification: so this most fully resolves questions concerning Church-Order and Government. It is a Book of holy Wit concerning the Divine Authority, of which there was never any doubt, nor hath any portion of holy Wit (for the quantity of it) a greater variety of matter, nor more of those Subtleties [things hard to be understood] which St. Peter in his 2 Epistle. 3. 16. tells us are in this Apostles Epistles, the difficulty of which much ariseth from our ignorance of some Rites, used in the Primitive Church, but long since disused, and the usages of that Country different from ours.

CHAP. I.

Paul called to be an Apostle of Jesus Christ, through the will of God, & of Sothenes our brother &c.

Our common custom is to subscribe our name to the bottom of our Letters, it seems by the Apostolical Epistles, that their fashion was otherwise, he elsewhere telleth us. That it was his mark in every Epistle, which makes some doubt whether that to the Hebrews was wrote by him; but others think it is there contended, for the particular figure the Jews had to him. He had the name of Saul as well as Paul, as we read, Acts 7. 58. & 9. 1. whether he had two names (as many of the Jews had) or Saul was the name by which he was called before his conversion; and Paul his name after he was converted, since he was made a Citizen of Rome (for Paul is a Roman name, as we do we read that after his Conversion, he was ever called by the name of Saul) is not worth our disputing. He was a man of Tarsus in Cilicia, by his Nation a Jew, both by Father and mother an Hebrew of the Tribe of Benjamin, a Pharisee, bred up at the feet of Gamaliel, one of their great Doctors; he was also Citizen of Rome, as himself tells us, Acts 22. 3. 27. & 28. 39. Phil. 3. 5. By his trade a Tent-maker, Acts 18. 3. a great Zealot for the Jewish Ceremonies and Law, and upon that score a great Persecutor, suffering at the hands of Stephen, and breathing out threatenings against Christians. Of his miraculous Conversion we read, Acts 9. as also of his being called to be an Apostle, not one of those first sent out by Christ, but yet called, he gives King Alexander a full account of his calling, Acts 26. from v. 12. to 19. So is he was an Apostle by the will of God, Gods special Revelation from Heaven: he did not thrust himself into the employment, but was sent of God in an extraordinary manner, not only mediocrity (as all Ministers are), but by an immediate Call and Mission. In the Situation prefixed to this Epistle, he joined Sothenes, whom he calls his Brother. Of this Sothenes we read, Acts 18. 26. he was a chief ruler of the Synagogue, but converted to Christianity, Paul did earnestly not to call him his Brother. Acts 18. 27.

2 Unto the Church of God which is in Corinth:
* to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, * called to be Saints: * with all that in every place * call upon the Name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours f.

4 Unto those in Corinth, who having received the Doctrine of the Gospel, and owned Jesus Christ as their Saviour, were united in one Ecclesiastical body for the worship of God, and communion one with another. Corinth was a famous city in Achaia, (which Achaia was joyed to Greece by a neck of land betwixt the Aegean and Ionian Seas) it grew the most famous Mart of all Greece. Paul came thither from Athens, Acts 18. 1. Crispus the chief Ruler of the Synagogue there believed, upon Pauls preaching, so did many Corinthians, and were baptized, v. 9. he stayed there eighteen months, v. 11. there Sosthenes (mentioned v. 19. was converted) from thence Paul went to Ephesus, v. 1. These Believers were those here called the Church of God in Corinth, to whom he writes this Epistle (as the Church of God in Corinth, v. 16. 8.) The members of this Church three years after, are sanctified in Christ Jesus called to be Saints: whether by the term the Apostle meant only such as by the preaching of the Gospel, are separated from the Heathens at Corinth, and professed Faith in Christ (as Acts 15. 9. the Apostle faith the Gentiles hearts were purified by faith.) Or such in Corinth as were really regenerated, and had their hearts renewed and changed, is not easy to determine, both of them are Saints by calling, the former are called externally by the preaching of the Gospel of Grace. It is most probable, that S. Paul intended his Epistle for the whole body of those that professed the Christian Religion in Corinth, though in writing of it, he had a more special respect to those who were truly sanctified in Christ by the renewing of the Holy Ghost. f Nor does Paul only respect those that lived in Corinth, but he reaches his Epistle to all those who in any place of Achaia call upon the Name of Jesus Christ, whom he calleth their Lord, and our Lord, which is an eminent place to prove the Divine Nature of Christ: he is not only called our Lord, our common Lord, but he is made the object of invocation and Divine worship: and he teacheth us, that none but such as call upon the Name of Jesus Christ our Lord, are fit to enter for a Gospel-Church, which he excludes such as deny the Godhead of Christ, and such as live without God in the world, without performing acts of Religion homages, to God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ, and own him as their Lord.

3 * Grace be unto you, & peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ b.
* This is the common Salutation in all Pauls Epistles, only in one or two; Mercy is also added: Grace signifies love, in one; and unity each with others. (see the Notes on Rom. 1. 7.) The Apostle wisheth them spiritual blessings, and the greatest spiritual blessings, Grace and Peace, and that not from, and with men, but from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

* Rom. 1. 8.

4 * I thank my God always on your behalf, for the grace of God which is given you by Jesus Christ f.

1 Left his former Salutation should be misapprehended by them, as signifying, that he thought they were without grace, he here clears his meaning by blessing God for that Grace, which they had received: no man hath to much grace, but he is still capable of more, and stands in need of further increase. Therefore as he here blest God for the grace of God, which they by Jesus Christ received: so he before prayed for Grace and Peace for them, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ is both the Author, and Finisher of our Faith: he gives both will and is do. The beginnings, increases, and fulfillings of Grace are all from him. Grace is increased by Faith by Jesus Christ: it flows from him who is Love, but it is through his Will and Will. No man hath the love of God, but by and through Jesus Christ.

* Chap. 12. 8.
* Cor. 8. 7.

5 * That in every thing ye are enriched by him * in all utterance, and in all knowledge m.
* In every Grace and in every good gift: (for he is manifestly speaking of spiritual things) so as this general Particle, must not be extended to the things of this world, but restrained either to spiritual Gifts or spiritual Blessings. v. 1. Eph. 1. 3. we read of the riches of Grace: (see the Notes on Eph. 1. 3.) 2. we read of the spiritual riches, whether by consider Riches as signifying plenty of abundance, or that which accommodates a man in this life, and is fitted to meet wants, to give them a supply. The world may be translated in every thing, or in all things: but the first having been said before, it seems more proper here to translate it, In all word of Faith, or in all utterance (as we translate it) It is not taking the word Grace, as if it were understood in the Doctrine of the same, but the abundance which Paul and Achaia, who preached among the Gentiles the riches of Christ, Eph. 3. 8. If we interpret it, as riches, which our Translators prefer, it signifies an ability to use that knowledge which God hath given us to the glory of God, and the good of others, either in Prayer or spiritual discourse. Some by knowledge here understand the gift of Prophecy, but it more properly signifies the ability God had given them to comprehend in their understanding the Myseries of the Gospel, the great and deep things of God. The Apostle blest God both for the illumination of their minds, by the Ministry of the Gospel, so as they knew the things of God, and also for the ability which God had given them to communicate this knowledge to others.

6 Even as the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you n.

7 By which knowledge and utterance the Testimony of Christ, that is, the Gospel, which consisteth both the Testimony which Christ had given of himself, and which the Apostles had given concerning Christ: (the Gospel is called the Testimony of God, Chap. 2. 1. 2 Tim. 1. 8.) others understand the gifts of the Spirit (for the Spirit is one of the Witnesses upon Earth, 1 Joh. 5. 8.) is confirmed in you by the miraculous operations wrought by the Apostles (as some think) but the way of communicating here spoken of by the Apostle, seemeth rather to be understood of their knowledge and utterance. The Gospel, and the Doctrine of it, and the Mission of the Holy Spirit, were confirmed to them and to the world, by the knowledge which God had given the Apostles, and these Corinthians, of the great things of God, and their ability to communicate this knowledge unto others, for the honour of God, and the good of others.

7 So that ye come behind in no gift: * waiting for the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ p.

8 * Who shall also confirm you unto the end, * that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ r.

9 Which Lord Jesus Christ (mentioned immediately before) or which God, who is faithful, mentioned immediately after, v. 9. shall confirm your labours of your unto the end, approving himself the finisher of your Faith: (you being engaged in your duty and endeavour.) So as either you shall not fail, or at least not totally and finally, but so as you shall not appear in the day of our Lord without blame, as if you will accept you, as if you had never finished against him.

10 * God is faithful y: by whom ye were called to the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord z.

11 Faithfulness is the same with Prerogative: This is a word, which renders a person fit to be credited. It is a great Attribute of God, Chap. 10. 13. 1 Thess. 5. 9. This implies promises of God for the perseverance of Believers (of which there are many to be found in holy Writ. But one promise concerns not all, but such only whom God hath chosen out of the world, calling them to a communion with Christ, which necessarily supposeth union with him. So as here is a double question to confirm them, that God would keep them to the end, so as they should be blameless in the day of Christ. For God had called them into that state of Grace, wherein they were, and would not leave his work in them imperfect, he had called them into the fellowship of Jesus Christ. See 1 Joh. 1. 9. into a state of friendship with Christ; and into a state of union with him, into such a state, as he would, daily by his Spirit be communicating the blessed influences of his Grace unto them.

12 Now I beseech you, brethren, by the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ u, * that ye all speak the same thing w, and that there be no divisions x, but that ye be perfectly y joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment y.

13 By the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ: as much as by Christ, by the Authority of Christ: for this is his will, or by the love which he hath in the Lord Jesus Christ, who hath to others recommended to you peace with, and brotherly love, one towards another. That in matters of Doctrine you all speak the same thing (for we that in matters of Doctrine you all speak the same thing, is capable of no other sense.) And that you neither be divided in judgments, or opinions, nor yet in affection, that there may be no divisions amongst you. Which is also true, there may be in the same judgment. An union in judgment is the necessary and indispensable duty of all those who are disciples of Christ, and such a duty as not only concerns Gods glory, but the peace and unity of the Church: which reason alone should be sufficient to convince all Nations, and may be attested, if by words we do not hinder it. An union in opinion, as to the fundamental Truths Truths of Religion is (though not so easy) yet what the Church of God hath in a great measure arrived at. But for an union in every particular proposition of truth, is not a thing to be expected, though we all are to labour for it. God hath neither given us all the same means: nor the same natural capacities.

11 For it hath been declared unto me of you, my brethren, by them which are of the house of Cloe z, that there are contentions among you a.

12 The Apostle cometh to them one reason, as why he wrote to them, so also in the preceding verse he so zealously pressed only upon them, because of an information he had received from some of the family of Cloe; for it is far more probable, that Cloe was the name of a person head of a family in Corinth, than of a City or Town. A What their divisions were about, the next verses will tell us.

12 Now this I say, * that every one of you faith, b I am of Paul, and I of Apollos, and I of Cephas, and I of Christ c.

13 Every one here signifieth no more than many of you, or several of you: so Chap. 14. 26. from whence, he saith that they have such a mighty argument from this 2. 9. where the same Particle to prove Christs dying for all individuals, and underscore themselves, and find that they have need of better arguments to prove their assertion. We may hence observe, that the divisions amongst the Corinthians were not in matters of Faith, but occasioned from their having various opinions in administration. This was probably caused either from Gods making of Paul the instrument of some of their conversion, and Peter the instrument of others conversion, and Peter the instrument of others conversion, or else from the difference of their gifts. Of this we read Acts 18. 24. he was a Jew of Alexandria, who (as may be seen there v. 28.) mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, and probably was as useful to the Corinthians, and that Ministry of Christ may be justly preferred to another. We ought to honour those most whom God most honoureth, either by a more plentiful giving out of his Spirit, or by a more plentiful success upon their labours; but we ought not so far to approve any Ministers to our selves, as for them to despise us: we are not bound to make every Minister our Father, we are bound to have a just respect for every Minister, who by his Doctrine and holy life answereth his Profession and holy Ministry.

14 Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul? d.

15 How came these Parties to rise there is but one Christ, but one God, and one Father, and one Lord, and one Saviour, and one Faith in whom, and a Profession unto whom you were baptized, nor baptized you into the Name of Christ, so did I, did not we Christ Banners. The head is but one, and the body are not to be divided.

16 I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus, and Gaius e.

17 Concerning the Apostles baptizing Crispus we read, Acts 18. 8. he was the Ruler of the Synagogue of the Jews: why Paul baptized him that he baptized none, he tells us, v. 19. v. 19. Left any should say, that I had baptized in my own name f.

18 Because by that Providence of God it so fell out, that very few of them could preced any such thing, as that he had baptized any in his own name.

19 And I baptized also the household of Stephanus, besides, I know not whether I baptized any others g.

20 I corrected himself, remembering that he also baptized the household of Stephanus, a family, who had added themselves to the Ministry of the Saints. v. 18. He did not remember, that he had baptized more at Corinth, though it is very probable, he had baptized many more in other parts of the World, where he had been travelling.

21 For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the Gospel h, not * with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect i.

22 A Reason was not his principal work, not the main business which he was sent to do, it was his work, otherwise he would not have baptized Crispus, or Gaius, or the household of Stephanus, (which the Apostle) baptized. It is hard to conceive how he had baptized them all in a day to be added to the Church, if he were to do so.

23 As touching how he preached the Gospel, and thereby instructing all faithful Ministers how they ought to preach. * Not with wisdom of words or speech. Wisdom of words must signify that which we call Rhetoric, or Logic, delivering the Myseries of the Gospel in lively, unadorned expressions, or going about as evidence, then from rational demonstrations and arguments. This was the way (he faith) to have taken away all being nothing else but the Souls ascent to the Divine Revelation, the object of it from Principles of Reason, and the colouring of expression to be used in the communicating the Will of God unto men: but we must take heed, that we do not diminish the Authority of Gods revealed Will, either by puerile flourishings of words, or philosophical argumentation.

24 For the preaching of the Cross is to * them that perish, foolishness i: but unto us which are saved, it is * the power of God k.

25 I know (saith the Apostle) that plain discourses about a Christ crucified, are to some persons foolish things, and accounted carnal; but to those who are saved, it is the power of God, who shall be eternally saved, and are at present in the true road to eternal life and salvation, it is, that is, the preaching of the Gospel is, that instruction of God, by which he sheweth his power in the salvation of those who shall be saved. The Apostle faith the same, Rom. 1. 16.

26 For it is written, * I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring * to nothing the * understanding of the prudent l.

27 When Jesus said of the wise-men among the Jews, in his time, I will destroy their wisdom, and make their understanding appear to be no better than foolishness. So it is not at all to be admired, if the Philosophers of this World count the Gospel, and the preaching of it foolishness; the taking away the wisdom and understanding of men worldly-wise, is but an ordinary dispensation of Gods Providence, no more than God threatened to do in Isaiahs time to the men of that generation.

28 Where is the wise? where is the Scribe? where is the disputer of this world? * * * * * Hach not * God made foolish the wisdom of this world o.

29 He alludeth again to that Isa. 39. 18. Where is the Scribe? where is the Disputer? Where are the wise-men amongst the Heathens? Where are the Scribes? The learned men in the Law amongst the Jews. * Where are those amongst the Gentiles that are the great inquirers into the reasons and natures of things, and manage debates and disputes about them? They understand nothing of the Myseries of the Gospel, or the way of Salvation, which God holds out to the World in and through Jesus Christ; or, where are they? What have they done by all their Philosophy and moral Doctrine, at the way of righteousness, in comparison of what we the Ministers of Christ have done, by preaching the Doctrine of the Gospel, and the Cross of Christ? 30 Do not you see how God hath foiled the wisdom of the World, making it to appear vain and contemptible, and of no use, as to the saving of mens Souls, making choice of none of their Doctrines and great abilities, to carry that Doctrine abroad in the World, and convincing men, that without Faith in Christ, all that can be learned from them will be of no avail to the Soul.

31 For after that, in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God g, it pleased See Mat. 11. 19. God by the foolishness of preaching, to save them a: that believe h.

32 Some here by the wisdom of God understand Jesus Christ, and make the Epistle thus. When he knew the wisdom of God came and preached to the World. Others say he found the Gospel, which is foaled, v. 24. 2. Chap. 2. 7. but I take the wisdom of God in this Text to signify the wise administrations of Divine Providence in the Government of the World to his will and pleasure. The unregenerate part of the World would not come to a knowledge of, and an acquaintance with God; in that way whereby he chose to reveal himself in and through Jesus Christ, as to which they were blinded by their own reasonings and knowledge and apprehended still in things, and capacity to comprehend them, it pleased God to signify the great Ordinance of preaching the Gospel, which they count foolishness: as the sacred means by which he would bring all those that give credit to the revelation of it, and receive Christ faith therein i, to eternal Life and Salvation.

33 For the * Jews require a sign, and the Greeks * seek after wisdom j.

34 The Jews were not without some true Divine Revelation, and owned the true God, and only desired some miraculous operation from Christ, Mat. 12. 38. Joh. 4. 48. to confirm them, that Christ was sent from God, without signs and wonders they would not believe: giving no credit at all to the words of Christ, and the Greeks (by whom the Apostle understand the Gentiles, especially the more learned part of them (for Greece sufficient by which they might have come to the knowledge of him, and have understood what he was, so as their ignorance was affected and voluntary.

9 But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

The place where this is written is by all agreed to be Job 42. 3, where the words are, For since the beginning of the world man hath not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, I beseech thee, what he hath prepared for him that waits for him. It is to be usual with the Penmen of Holy Writ, to quote the letters of Texts in the Old Testament, not tying themselves to letters and syllables, that it is mildly right in the Old object against this quotation, as so where written in the Old Testament, but taken out of some Apocryphal writings the sense of what is written. Job 42. 3 is plainly the same with what he speaks in this place, the greatest difference is, the Apostle faith, That if love him, the Prophet, That that wait for him (which is the certain product and effect of love.) The whole 64. Chap. of Isaiah, and some Chapters following treat concerning Christ, so doth this Text. Christ and his benefits are to be understood here, by the things that God hath prepared for them that love him: which are set out as things not obvious to flesh, that love him: to be comprehended by reason. It could never have entered into the heart of men to conceive, that God should give his only begotten Son out of his own-below, to take upon him our nature, and to dye upon the Cross; or, that Christ should for humble himself, and become obedient unto death.

10 But * God hath revealed them to us by his Spirit: g For the Spirit searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God. g God by his Spirit hath opened our understandings to understand the holy Scriptures, the Types, and Prophecies of Christ, and what the holy Prophets have spoken of him both as to his Person and Office. For the holy Spirit being the third Person in the blessed Trinity, and so equal with the Father and the Son, he searcheth the deep things of God, and is able to reveal to us all the Counsels of God, whatsoever God would have men to understand concerning the Lord Jesus Christ. So as this Text is an evident proof of the Deity of the holy Spirit, he searching the deep things of God, and being alone able to reveal them unto men, so as they shall acknowledge, comprehend, and believe them.

* Prov. 20. 27.
* 29. 19.
Jer. 17. 9.

11 For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of a man that is in him? g even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. Look as it is with a man, No man knoweth his secret thoughts, and counsels, and meanings, save only his own soul that is within him. So it is to the things of God, until God by his Spirit hath revealed them to men, none knoweth them but the holy Spirit of God. It is true as it is with man, when he hath by his tongue discovered his mind to others, they know it as he: so he hath to delivered it; but there is no man that discovereth all his thoughts and counsels; so God having in his Word revealed his Will, so far as he hath plainly revealed it, men may know it; but there are deep things of God, Mysteries in Scripture, which all the Spirit of God hath revealed to men, they know not nor understand; for none knoweth them originally, but the Spirit of God, who is himself God, and searcheth the deep things of God.

* Rom. 8. 15.

12 Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. By the spirit of the world come understand the Devil, that evil spirit which is in the world, and ruleth those that are worldly, carnal men: others understand a meer humane spirit, by which men understand and comprehend meer worldly things. The sense certainly is, we have not a meer worldly instruction and teaching; we are not taught and instructed from the world (the Spirit is put for the effects of the Spirit of the world). g But we are taught and instructed by the holy Spirit, by which we are taught, and know the things that are freely given us of God, whether they be Divine Mysteries, or Divine benefits, both what God hath done for us, and what God hath wrought in us.

* 2 Pet. 1. 16.
See Chap. 1.

13 Which things also we speak, not in the words which mans wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual. Reason and all practice directeth men to speak and write of subjects in a title and phrase fitted to the matter about which they write or discourse. Our subjects, faith the Apostle, were sublime spiritual subjects; therefore I did not discourse them like an Orator, with an ornament of words or wisdom (as 1. 18.) or with the enticing or persuasive words of mans wisdom, as he had said 1. 18. nor with words which mans wisdom teacheth (which is his phrase here) but with words which the Holy Ghost hath taught us, either in holy Writ, or by his inspirations upon our minds, where they are first formed. g Fitting spiritual things to spiritual persons who are able to understand them, or fitting a spiritual language to spiritual matter, speaking the Oracles of God as the Oracles of God, 1. 18. not declaring like an Orator, nor arguing philosophically like an Athenian Philosopher, but using a familiar, plain, spiritual style, giving you the naked Truths of God without any paint or gawdery of Phrase.

14 But the natural man z receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, z they are foolishness unto him: z neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. There are great disputes here, who is meant by the natural man, λογικῆς διανοίας. Some think that by the natural man here is meant the carnal man: thus 1. 2. 15. 44. the natural body is opposed to the spiritual body; βελτίους, they say, that in the constant flux of the holy Writ, man who is made up of flesh and spirit, as his essential parts, hath constantly his denomination from one of them, and all men in the world are either carnal or spiritual, and that the Greek word λογικῆς signifies that soul and life which is common to all men, from whence all common motions and affections are, and is opposed to the holy Spirit, which dwells in the souls of them that are sanctified, by which they are led and governed, &c. Thus, say they, the natural man is one who is a servant to his lusts and corruption, under the perfect government of his Soul, considered merely as natural, all whole motions in that estate of sin and corruption are inordinate. Others think that the Apostle here speaks of such as are weak in the Faith, little ones, babes in Christ, who had need of milk, not of strong meat, and are natural men in comparison of those more spiritual and perfect. In this sense indeed the Apostle, chap. 3. 1. 4. calleth them carnal. But there is nothing more plain, than that the Apostle under the notion of λογικῆς διανοίας (which we translate natural man) here, understandeth all such as were not perfect and spiritual, both to whom God had not by his Spirit revealed the deep things of God, 1. 18. such as had only received the Spirit of the world, not the Spirit of God, by which alone men come to know the things that are freely given them of God, as 1. 18. all, though some of them are much better than others, having their minds more cultivated and adorned with worldly knowledge and wisdom, yet do not in their hearts (though they may with the carnal) receive, that is, believe, understand, and desire, or approve of spiritual and Divine Mysteries, such Doctrines are purely matters of Faith, standing upon a Divine Revelation.

15 But he that is spiritual, z judgeth all things, z yet he himself is z judged of no man. He that is spiritual, in this verse, is opposed to the natural man, in the former verse λογικῆς διανοίας. So that by spiritual here is understood, he that is taught by the Spirit of God, and is by him specially and savingly enlightened. z neither receiveth or judgeth all things, that is, of this manner of things of God, which concern eternal life and salvation, not that every good Christian hath any such perfect knowledge or power of discerning, but according to the measure of illumination which he hath received. z Yet he himself is judged of no man; it may as well be translated of nothing, and the sense judged, as well as he hath been translated examined, or judged, as it is in Acts 4. 9. and 12. 19. and 17. 11. and 24. 2. and understood. The wisdom that is of God is not to be subjected to the spiritual of men, nor to be judged of any man, z yet he himself is judged of no man. The truth, which the spiritual man counsell and profiteth, dependeth only upon God and his Word, and is not subjected to the authority and judgment of men, nor the dictates of humane reason: So as the spiritual man so far forth as he is spiritual, is neither judged by any man or by any thing. There are some that say he himself understand the Spirit of God, he indeed is judged of no man, nor of any thing; so that he teacheth a much more strained sense.

16 For who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he z may instruct him? z But we have the mind of Christ. This phrase is taken out of Job 40. 13. and was quoted by our Apostle before, Rom. 11. 34. the sense of it is here used, z for that natural man that never was taught and enlightened by the Spirit of God, could ever know the secret Counsels of God, and the Divine Mysteries of mans Salvation. Nor can any instruct him what to do. It is by some observed, that λογικῆς διανοίας signifies by arguments to bring one over to be of his mind, which indeed is a kind of instruction. z But (saith the Apostle) we who have the Spirit of God given to us, dwelling and working in us, and instructing us, we have the mind of Christ; for the Spirit of Christ, which is our Teacher, knoweth his mind, and hath revealed it unto us.

17 And I brethren, could not speak unto you as unto babes z Christ. The Apostle plainly returneth in this Chapter to reprove them for their divisions and seditions, for which he had begun to reprove them, Chap. 1. 2. 11. and (as some think) here he anticipates an objection, which they might have made against him, against his reproving and judging of them, when as he saith z spiritual (as he had now said) is judged of no man. z I (saith he) brethren, could not speak unto you as spiritual, that is, as Christians, who had made any great proficiency in the ways of God, and had arrived to any just degrees of spiritual perfection. z But as unto carnal, that is, persons, who though they are not under the full conduct and government of the holy and justifying spirit, yet are far from being perfect, either in Faith or Holiness, in Christ, but nor as grown men, but as babes, as the Apostle fully explaineth this term, Heb. 5. 12. 13. Such as had need be taught again, which are the first principles of the Oracles of God, and have need of milk, and not of strong meat; for every one that tasteth milk, is unprofitable in the word of righteousness, for he is a babe.

CHAP. III.

18 And I brethren, could not speak unto you as unto babes z Christ. The Apostle plainly returneth in this Chapter to reprove them for their divisions and seditions, for which he had begun to reprove them, Chap. 1. 2. 11. and (as some think) here he anticipates an objection, which they might have made against him, against his reproving and judging of them, when as he saith z spiritual (as he had now said) is judged of no man. z I (saith he) brethren, could not speak unto you as spiritual, that is, as Christians, who had made any great proficiency in the ways of God, and had arrived to any just degrees of spiritual perfection. z But as unto carnal, that is, persons, who though they are not under the full conduct and government of the holy and justifying spirit, yet are far from being perfect, either in Faith or Holiness, in Christ, but nor as grown men, but as babes, as the Apostle fully explaineth this term, Heb. 5. 12. 13. Such as had need be taught again, which are the first principles of the Oracles of God, and have need of milk, and not of strong meat; for every one that tasteth milk, is unprofitable in the word of righteousness, for he is a babe.

19 I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: z for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. z Milk signifies what the Apostle to the Hebrews calls the first principles of the Oracles of God, and so is opposed to sublime spiritual Doctrines here set out under the notion of meat, called strong meat; Heb. 5. 14. fit for those of full age, as young children from babes will not endure strong meat, so neither are babes fit to receive spiritual Mysteries fit for new Converts, until they have been exercised to discern good and evil; and therefore the Apostle gives this as a reason, why he had not communicated the deep things of God to them, because z as yet they had not been able to bear the notion of them, nor indeed were they yet able, it should seem that there were many in the Church of Corinth, who though they were true Christians, yet were not grown and judicious Christians, but had great imperfections, as indeed it will further appear in this Epistle.

20 For ye are yet carnal: z for whereas there amongst you envying, and strife, and z divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk z as men? z Not wholly carnal, but in a great measure so, not having your lusts and corrupt affections entirely subdued to the Will of God, nor yet so much subdued, as some other Christians here, and you ought to have. z As an evidence of this weakness of them, the envyings, strifes, and contentions that were amongst them. Strife and envyings are, Gal. 5. 19. reckoned amongst the works of the flesh, they are all opposite to love, which the perfection of a Christian lyeth: he told us before, that strifes and contentions be meanly and tells it again in the next verse.

21 For I am one faith. z I am of Paul, and another. I am of Apollos, are ye not carnal? z Not that Christians in so large a City as Corinth, might not themselves under several Pastors, or as to themselves prefer one before another, either in respect of the more eminent gifts of God bestowed upon one (as doubtless Paul was preferable to Apollos) or in respect of the more suitableness of one man to the Minister of the Gospel, than for his sake they visited and despised all others, that were also true, and faithful servants of God in the work of his Gospel, this was their sin, and spake them to have vicious and corrupt affections, and to walk more like men than like Saints, not having a true notion of the Ministers of Christ, nor behaving themselves towards them as they ought to do.

22 Who then is Paul? and who is Apollos? but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man. z Neither Paul, nor yet Apollos, are Authors of Faith to you, nor yet Ministers. It is the Lord that giveth to every man power to believe; or else that latter phrase, as the Lord hath given to every man, may be understood of Ministers, who are appointed to the work of the Ministry, and success in it, both depend upon God. The sense of the words is this, their God giveth them his Ministers, variety of gifts, and different faccess; but yet neither the one nor the other of them are more than the Servants of Christ in their Ministry, persons whom God maketh use of to call upon, and to prevail with men, to give credit to the Doctrine of the Gospel, and to receive and accept of Christ. The work is the Lords, not theirs.

6 I have planted, Apollos watered: but God gave the increase.

I God honoured me first to preach the Gospel amongst you, Acts 18. 8. and blessed my preaching to convert you unto Christ, then I left you, Apollos staid behind, and he watered what I had planted, daily preaching amongst you. See Acts 18. 24. 25. 26. he further watered you, as the seed, the first fruit, the first increase is drawn from Planters, whether Husbandmen, or Gardeners, they plant, they water, but the growing, the budding, the bringing forth flowers or fruit by the plant, doth much more depend upon the soil in which it stands, the influence of the dew and rain, and the increase of the sun, and the drops of the dew and rain, and the increase of the sun, which the God of Nature hath created in the plant, than upon the hand of him that planteth, or him who uteth his waterings upon it. So it is with Souls, one Minister is useful for Conversion, or the first bringing of Souls; another is useful for Edification, or the further building up of Souls; but both Conversion and Edification are infinitely more from the new heart and new nature, which God giveth to Souls, and from the influence of the Sun of Righteousness by the Spirit of Grace, working in and upon the Soul, than from any Minister who is but Gods instrument in those works.

7 So then, neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth: but God that giveth the increase.

So that, look as it is in earthly plantations, God hath the greatest influence upon the growth and fruitfulness of the plant, and the Husbandman or Gardener is nothing in comparison with God, who hath given to the plant planned its life and nature, by which it flourisheth up, budbuds, and bringeth forth fruit, and maketh his Sun to shine, and his rain to fall upon it. So it is in the spiritual plantation; z God is the principal efficient Cause, we are little instrumental causes in Gods hand. Nothing in comparison with God, z I have planted, Apollos hath watered; but if we see a soul changed, or grown, and make any spiritual proficiency, we must say, Not unto us; z O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy Name be given the glory. God hath done the main work, we have not done any thing in comparison with him. Their words do no more need to vilify the Ministry of the Gospel, or make it useless, than calling them in their native sense; as they respect earthly plantations, they would grow, that there is no need of the Husbandman or Gardener hand to plant or to water plants, because all that he doth of that nature is no purpose, unless God first gives to the plant its proper nature and virtue, and then followeth the plantation with the influence of the Sun, dew, and rain. But yet it is observable, that the Apostle doth not mean to vilify them in their Ministry, from the good use of the power that is naturally in his own will, but God gives the increase, which argues the necessity of special Grace both to Conversion and Edification; superadded to the best preaching of his Ministers. Though Paul himself by preaching plants, and Apollos watereth; yet God must make the soil to increase with the increase of God. Hence the Apostle argueth their unreasonableness, in adoring one Minister, and magnifying him above another, when indeed neither the one nor the other had any principal efficiency in the production of the blessed effect, but a meer instrumental causation, the effect of which depended upon the sole blessing of God, in comparison with whom in this working, neither the one, nor the other Minister, was any thing.

8 Now he that planteth, and he that watereth are one: z me every man shall receive his own reward, according to his own labour.

The Ministers of Christ, though one be first in planting, and another in watering, one in laying the foundation, and another in building thereupon, yet are one; one in their office and work: one, in their Ministry; being all Servants to Christ, who is one, all serving one and the same Lord, z all doing the same business, proposing the same end, and with all their might labouring towards it; and therefore as they ought not to divide into Parties and Factions, so you ought not for their sakes to be so divided. z Yet they are not to one, but that one may labour more than another, and every one shall receive a reward proportioned to his labour: the Apostle faith z reward, according to the success of his labour (that is not in his power) but according to his labour.

9 For z we are labourers together with God, z ye are Gods z husbandry, z ye are Gods z building. z Though compared with God we are building, yet our labour is no mean station; God works as the principal efficient Cause; we work with God as Gods instrumentally God worketh.

one way by his secret influence upon the heart; yet another way by publication of the Gospel in peoples ears, but the Gospel and end of the work is the same. The Lord is said to work with his Ministers, Mark 16. 20. and they are here said to work with him. Hence he proveth what he had before said, that they should be rewarded, God will not suffer those, who work with him, to be without their reward: as also that they were not to think you selves our husbandry, for you are Gods husbandry: thus Gods building; thus the Church is called the house of God, 1 Tim. 3. 15. Still the Apostle minds them, that they were Gods, not their Ministers; it was God to whom they were beholden for their conversion, for their edification, &c.

10 * According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wife master-builder I have laid * the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. * But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. 11 X<sup>den</sup> here signifies either the ability which God hath given Paul to preach the Gospel, or the Apostolical Office, to which God had called him. he maketh both to proceed from God, and to be the effects of his free love and favour to him. According to this he faith, Look as a wife Master-builder first layeth the foundation, then buildeth upon the foundation which he hath laid. So he being the first, whom God pleased to employ in this his work at Corinth, had laid the foundation, that is, had first preached the Gospel in this famous City: thus the first preaching of the Gospel is called, a laying the foundation, 1 Cor. 15. 20. Heb. 6. 1. Afterwards Apollus and other Ministers further carried on that work of preaching the Gospel amongst them. But (saith he) whoever cometh to preach since me, had need take heed what he buildeth; for, Gal. 1. 8. Though we or an Angel from heaven preach any other Gospel unto you, than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

11 For other foundation can no man lay, than that is laid, * which is Jesus Christ. 12 Now if any man build upon this foundation, gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble. * The Apostle is discouraging metaphysically, he had compared the Church of Corinth to a building, &c. and called them there Gods building: they were built upon the Doctrine of the Gospel, the Doctrine of the Apostles and Prophets, who had preached Christ to them, this was the foundation, which he had told us, that none, by any pretence of right, could lay any other foundation. But there was to be a superstructure upon this foundation, which might be of various materials, he names fix; three very good and excellent, gold, silver, and precious stones; three others vile and invaluable, wood, hay, stubble. By these he either means good or bad works; or rather good or bad Doctrines. Good Doctrine is signified by the gold, silver, and precious stones mentioned. Bad Doctrine by the wood, hay, and stubble mentioned; by which may be understood various degrees of bad Doctrines, as some Doctrines are more pernicious and damnable than others, though the other also be false, unprofitable, trivial; and of no signification to the good of Souls, but bad, as they are unprofitable.

13 * Every mans work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, * because * it shall be revealed by fire, and the fire shall try every mans work of what sort it is. 14 Now, faith he, there will come a time when every mans, that is, every Teachers work or Doctrine, shall be made manifest. As the metal is brought to the touchstone to be tried, whether it be gold or silver, or some baser metal; so there will come a time, when all Doctrines shall be tried and made manifest, whether they be of God or no. * What day shall declare it is not so freely agreed by Interpreters. Some say a day for the world, a long time, in process of time it shall be declared, as indeed various Doctrines have not used to obtain or prevail long. Others say the day of the last Judgment, the day of Gods vengeance; and indeed thus it is often seen, a false faith or a false belief, will not carry a man through the difficulties which he meeteth with in an evil day; the Truths of the Gospel are of that nature, that they will give a Soul relief and support in a day of affliction, and when God severeth the hypocrites, but errors and falsehoods will not do so. Others understand by the day here mentioned, the day of Judgment, which is indeed often called the day of the Lord, 2 Pet. 2. 12. and described by fire, 1 Pet. 1. 7. 2. 12. But this Text faith not, The day of the Lord, but only this day. It seemeth therefore rather to signify the bright shining out of the Gospel, for the Text seemeth to speak of such a manifestation as shall be in this life, not in the day of Judgment. The same thing is also to be understood. 15 By the fire here mentioned, the fire of Gods wrath, or the fire of affliction and adversity, nor the fire of the last Judgment, but the truth of the Gospel shining forth in the Word, and burning up the dross and fubble of corrupt false Doctrine, that shall bring all the Doctrines which men teach, to the tryal.

14 If any mans work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. 15 If any Preacher be the foundation, and the Doctrine which he hath built upon that foundation, prove continuance in the will of Christ, he shall receive him for his labour. He shall hear the voice saying, Will thou, good and faithful servant, enter thou into thy masters joy.

15 If any mans work shall be burnt, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved: yet so, as by fire.

But if his work do not abide, if he shall appear upon the more clear and bright shining out of the truth of the Gospel, that though he hath held the foundation right, yet he hath built upon it wood, hay, and stubble, mixed faiths and false faiths, and corrupt Doctrines with the Doctrine of the Gospel, he shall suffer loss by it, either by the afflicting hand of God, or by a loss of his reputation, or some other way. But yet God will not cast off a Soul for every such error, if he keeps to the main foundation Jesus Christ. He shall by fire, though it be as by fire, that is, with difficulty, which experience is a more natural sense of this Text, than those give, who interpret as by fire, of the fire of the Gospel, or the fire of Purgatory, of the fire of the Papists understand it. For, 1. It is, and always hath been a proverbial form of speech to express a thing obtained by difficulty, we say, It is got out of the fire, &c. For the fire of Purgatory, it is a fiction and meer imaginary thing, of so further significance, than to make the Pope Chaceys frock. 2. That pretended fire, only purgeth Venial sin, this fire tryeth every mans work, the gold as well as the stubble.

16 Know ye not that * ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? 17 The Apostle, &c. had called the Church of Corinth, and the particular Members of it, Gods building, after this he had bargained in a discourse concerning the builders, and the foundation and superstructure upon that foundation, now he returns again to speak of the whole Church, whom he here calleth the temple of God, with a manifest allusion to that temple and splendid house which Salomon first builded, and was afterwards rebuilded by Zerubbabel, Ezra, and Nehemiah at Jerusalem, as the public place for the Jewish Church to meet in to worship God according to the precepts of the Levitical Law, in which House God was said to dwell, because there he met his people; and called them, and there he gave answers to their prayers. Mercy here, he calls them the Temple of God, because they were built, that is, effectually called for this very end; that they might be with praise of the glory of his great, whereunto he had made as accepted in the world, Eph. 1. 6. And as the Apostle Peter further expoundeth this Text, 1 Pet. 2. 5. The temple of God, as a spiritual house, as holy priests, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. And God by his Spirit dwells in them, both by his person, and by his graces, which is a far more noble dwelling in them, than the dwelling of God was in the Jewish Temple. From this Text may be fetched an evident proof of the Divine Nature, of the third Person in the blessed Trinity; for he is not only called here the Spirit of God, but he is said to dwell in the Saints: which dwelling of God in his people, is that very thing which maketh them the Temple of God, and those who are here called the Temple of God, are, Chap. 6. 19. called, The Temple of the Holy Ghost.

17 If any man defile the temple of God, him I will destroy: for the temple of God is holy, * which temple ye are.

The word which we translate defile and defile (for the Greek word is the same for both) signifies to violate, corrupt, or destroy. Our Translators generally render it corrupt, 1 Cor. 6. 18. 11. 3. Eph. 4. 22. 1 Pet. 1. 10. The people of God which are here called, The Temple of God are defiled, either by imbibing false Doctrine, or being tempted to any looseness of life and conversation. Now (saith the Apostle) if any one goeth about to do this, which all Preachers do, who teach any false Doctrine, or any Principles that lead to a liberty for the flesh, or lead an ill and scandalous life, God shall destroy them. 18 For as the Temple of God of old time was a place builded and set apart for holiness, and therefore not without great peril to be abused and profaned: so those that are the people of God, are by God called and set apart in a more immediate eminent manner for the honour and glory of God, and therefore cannot be destroyed or defiled by any instrument in that action, without exceeding great peril and hazard to them that endeavour and attempt any such thing.

18 * Let no man deceive himself: b if any man among you seemeth to be wife in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise k.

There are some that with their Elegance, and flourishes of words, or with their philosophical notions, and reasonings (which, Chap. 2. 8. the Apostle calls vain deceit) or with their traditions after the rudiments of the World (as the Apostle addeth in that place) would cheat and deceive your Souls, under a pretence of making you wonderfully wise: the wisdom of the World is foolishness with God. 19 If any of you seemeth unto others, or seemeth unto himself, that is, thinketh that he is endowed with true wisdom, wife unto God, and to eternal life and Salvation, let him be contented by the wife men and philosophers of this World to be looked upon as a fool, and let him be willing to deny himself in any notions or opinions of his, which he hath taken up upon the credit of his natural Reason and philosophical Principles, which agree not with the Divine Revelation, that so he may be truly and spiritually wise, truly understanding, favouring, and believing what God hath in his Word revealed, and is alone able to make the man of God wife to Salvation, thoroughly furnished unto every good work.

19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God: for it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness m.

God accounteth that folly, which the World calleth wisdom, and indeed it is so (for God cannot err, nor be mistaken in his judgment) the Philosophers and wise men of the World pursue the happiness of this man as their end, which indeed is the end which all men aim at, and do propound to themselves, are wisdom directeth the best means in order to the best end. Whosoever directeth not to the best end, or to what is not the best mean in order to that end, is not wisdom, but real folly: worldly wisdom neither directeth to the best end, for it looks as no further happiness than that of this life, nor yet to the last man, and therefore is truly what God accounts it, foolishness. And so to see the wife and learned men of the World thus misled in their judgment and practice, is no wonder at all for God is the lord of old by Eliphaz, as one that taketh the wise in their own craftiness, Job 5. 13.

20 And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain n.

And again it was said by the Psalmist, Psal. 94. 11. That he knoweth the thoughts of man as vanity: mans counsels, imaginations, reasonings, these are all vanity; they propound to themselves ends which they cannot attain, and pursue them by means that are ineffectual with reference to their ends.

21 Therefore let no man glory in men: for all things are yours o.

Being therefore that Christ is but one, his Ministers but one, no more than Ministers, by whom you believed, &c. the principal efficiency of any living work being, or carried on in your Souls to any degree of perfection, is from God, and the Ministers work in that effect nothing, compared with his, seeing you are Gods husbandry, Gods building, not meekness, and the Temple of God, nor mens Temple, leave your glorying in men, and saying, I am of Paul, or I am of Apollus, glory only in this, that you are Christs; besides, o why do you glory in a particular Minister who is all yours, as if two joyne-ment is an Estate should glory in this or that particular house or inclosure, when the whole Estate is jointly theirs, all theirs.

22 Whether Paul, or Apollus, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come, all are yours.

23 And * ye are Christs, and Christ is Gods p.

Here are in these two verses three things asserted: 1. The believers Title to all things. 2. The speciality of their Title. 3. The first of the Apostles argument from hence, why they should not glory in men. He had said before, All things are yours, which he repeats again, &c. They have a right and title to all things, and all things are to their good use, and advantage. Although they be first reckoned Ministers. Every one of them rightly a claim to Paul, to Apollus, to Peter; for they were all Brethren of Christ for the use of his Church, a part of which they were, then he goes on, and faith, the world, that is, the things of the world are theirs; that is, whatsoever portion of them the Providence of God orderly disposed to them, they had a true title to, as to their good use, and advantage; so were the lives and deaths of Gods Ministers, their own lives and deaths, all things present, and all things that were to come, they were all theirs by a just title: if the Providence of God gave them to them in an orderly way, they might comfortably be their own. They themselves were Christs, they were not of Paul, nor of Apollus, nor of Peter. He that had the Bride was the Bridegroom, the Ministers were but the friends of their Bridegroom: and Christ is Gods, the Son of God by an eternal Generation, the Servant of God as man, and born under the Law; so yielding obedience to his Father, the Father, or appointed, and first of God as Minister. All things are Gods, by God given to Christ, by Christ given to, and sanctified for you, that makes the Believers special title to all things. The men of the world derive their title to what they have, from God alone as Creator, they derive not from Christ, as being ingrafted and planted into him. Hence the Apostle rightly concludes their vanity, in glorying in their Relation to this or that special Apostle or Minister, whereas they had a true and just right to the labours of all Ministers, and ought to look upon all faithful Ministers, as Gods gifts to his whole Church, and for the advantage and benefit of all; yet this hindreth, and but that people ought to have their particular Pastor and Teacher, to whom they ought ordinarily to attend in their Ministry; but they ought not to have their persons in such admiration, as for them to despise or slight any other faithful Ministers, nor to make Parties and Factions in the Church of God.

CHAP. IV.

Let a man so account of us, as * the ministers of Christ, i. and * stewards of the mysteries of God k.

The Apostle here gives us the right notion of the Preachers of the Gospel, they are but Ministers, that is, Servants, as to the honour, that is proper to their Master, for a principal efficiency in the conversion and building up of Souls, belongeth not to them, they are Ministers of Christ, to have their primary relation to him, and only a secondary relation to the Church to which they are Ministers, they are Ministers of Christ, and so in that ministerial capacity can only execute what are originally his commands, though the commands of Christ may also be enforced by men. Ministers of the Gospel, nor of the Law, upon whom lies a primary obligation to preach Christ and his Gospel unto people. 2 They are also Stewards of the mysteries of God, such to whom God hath committed his Word and Sacraments to dispense out unto his Church. The word mystery signifies any thing that is secret, but more specially it signifies a Divine Secret, represented by signs and figures; or a Religious Secret, not obvious to every capacity or understanding. Thus we read of the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, Mat. 13. 11. The mystery of Godliness, 1 Tim. 2. 16. The mystery of Christ, here, and Eph. 3. 4. The wisdom of God: Col. 2. 2. The incarnation of Christ, 1 Tim. 3. 16. The calling of the Gentiles, Eph. 3. 4. The resurrection from the dead, 1 Cor. 15. 21. Christs mystical Union and Communion with his Church, Eph. 5. 32. The hidden Councils of God, 1 Cor. 13. 2. are all called Mysteries. Ministers are the Stewards of the mysterious Doctrines and institutions of Christ, which we usually comprehend under the terms of the Word and Sacraments.

It is required of all Servants, but especially of chief Servants, such as Stewards are, who are intrusted with their Masters goods, to be diligent out to others. The faithfulness of a Steward in dispensing out his Masters goods lies in his giving them out according to his Masters order, giving to every one their portion, not despoiling any thing from others, which it is his Masters will they should have. As Paul gloried, 1 Cor. 4. 20. 21. That he had kept back from the Ephesians nothing that was profitable for, nor refused to declare to them all the counsel of God, nor giving only things to days, or casting pearls before swine, contrary to Christs direction, Mat. 7. 6.

3 But with me it is a very small thing, that I should be judged of you, or of mans judgment: I desire, I judge not my own self m.

Those who said, I am of Apollus, and I am of Cephas, did at first easily judge Paul, and prefer Apollus and Cephas before him, and it is probable, that they were very inconsistent concerning Paul: he therefore tells them, that he valued very little what they or any other men said of him. In the Greek it is me day; but it is generally thought, that our Translators have given us the true sense, in translating it mans judgment, day being put for judgment, as Jer. 17. 16. where Iudah day signifies mans judgment. So the day of the Lord in Scripture often signifies the Lords judgment, and the reason of that figure of speech seems to be, because persons cited to a Court of judgment are to be cited to appear on a certain day. 4 Yea, faith the Apostle, I pronounce no Sentence for my self, I leave my self to the Judgment of God. I may be deceived in my judgment concerning my self, and therefore I will affirm nothing as to my self.

4 For I know nothing by my self, * yet am I * persuaded: not hereby justified f; but he that judgeth me, is the Lord g.

Nothing am I, nothing that is evil; yet this must not be interpreted universally, as if St. Paul knew nothing that was evil and sinful by himself: himself, Rom. 7, tells us the contrary; B b b b b cious Interpreters think) became hardly any Nation would have endured a son openly to have married the widow of his father. And in 2 Cor. 7. 12. there is mention made not only of us that had done, but of another that had suffered the wrong; which latter must be the father himself, for as there was both incest and Whoredom in this fact.

2. And ye are puffed up d, and have not rather mourned, that he hath done this deed, might be taken away from amongst you e.

3. You are so conceited of your own parts and gifts, and are full of your contentions about the preference of Ministers, and things of little concernment to your Souls, and the interest of the Church, that you have not been able to let defile to deal with this scandalous person, as a Church of Christ ought to have done. This seemeth rather the reason of their not mourning, than any rejecting iniquity, as if they had thought the Gospel had opened that door against this licentiousness which the Law had shut, or triumphed in this incestuous person, being one of their Teachers (which can hardly be denied). They ought rather to have mourned, keeping times of Fasting and Prayer; on the behalf of this scandalous Member amongst them; that his sin might (upon his due sense of it, and repentance for it) have been forgiven him, and the blot upon their Church, by their having such a one in their fellowship, might be washed out, and by his being cast out of their fellowship and communion. It was no time for them to glory in their gifts, and be puffed up with the parts of their Teachers or Ministers, when they had such a blot upon them by a purged Member that was amongst them. They had a great deal more cause for humiliation, than for pride and glorying.

* Col. 2. 5. Forasmuch as 3. * For I verily as absent in body, but present in spirit f, have I judged already, as though I were present, concerning him that hath so done this deed g.

f Though I be absent as to my bodily presence, yet God having intrusted me with a superintendency and care over his Church amongst you, out of the care and sollicitude which I have for you, as well as the other Churches of Christ, and in discharge of that trust which God hath reposed in me, g I do determine, and have determined as much as if I were present amongst you, what ought to be done by you concerning this person so notoriously scandalous.

It may be referred either to what went before, I have judged or determined by the Authority of Christ, or to what follows after: i When you are gathered together by the Authority, or according to the Institution of Jesus Christ, and my spirit with you, you having my judgment in the case, k and the Power, and Authority of Christ committed to me and to you as a Church of Christ.

5. To deliver such a one unto Satan l for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus m.

1. What this delivering up to Satan is (of which also we read, 1 Tim. 1. 20.) is something doubted by Interpreters. That by it is to be understood Excommunication, or casting out of the Communion of the Church, can hardly be doubted by any that considereth, That the Apostle speaketh of an action which might be, and ought to have been done by the Church of Corinth when they met together, and for the not doing of which the Apostle blameth them. 2. to return no more to them, breaks also the bond of marriage, frustrating it as to the ends for which God hath appointed it; and after all due means used, to bring again the party departing, to their duty, doth certainly free the correlate. So that although nothing can justify repudiation or putting away of one wife or an husband, and marrying another, but the authority of the church, yet the church may so use that authority, as to either of husband and wife without the others consent for a long time, and refusal to return after all due means used, especially if the party going away, doth it out of an hatred and abomination of the others Religion, will justify the person so defamed after due waiting and use of means to reduce him or her to their duty, wholly to cast off the person deserting, for no Christian in such case by Gods Law is under bondage. B For God hath called Christians unto peace, and in his ordinance of marriage aimed at the quiet and peace of his people in their service of him in their families and relations; and therefore as Christians ought not to disturb the peace of their own consciences, turning away from their relations, though they be Unbelievers; yet neither are they bound, if such will leave them, to court their own continual trouble and disturbance.

i The Apostle having before defined the lawfulness of a Christian husbands or wives abiding in a state of marriage with a wife or husband that was an Infidel, if he or she were willing to abide with the Believer, now argues the great advantage which might be from it, for the glory of God, and the good of the Soul of such husband or wife: *What knowest thou, O wife (saith he) it is not certain, that God will so far bless thy converse with thy husband or wife, as that thou shalt, by thy instruction, admonition, or example, be an occasion or instrument to bring them to Christ; but it is neither impossible nor improbable, and their willingness (notwithstanding their difference from thee in Religion, yet) to abide with thee, may give thee some hopes that they will hearken to thee. They are often (in the language of holy Writ) said, to save others, who are instrumental to bring them to Christ, Ch. 9. 22. 1 Tim. 4. 16. Jam. 5. 20. We ought to bear with many inconveniences to our selves, where our bearing with them may any way promote the glory of God, or the good of Souls.*

17 But as God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk: And so ordain I in all churches 1

i Calling in this place signifies that station and course of life, wherein by the Providence of God any man is set. Some think, that this precept hath a special reference to what went before, as if the sense were this, If God by his Providence hath so ordered it that thy heart be engaged, thy wife or thy husband heart being not yet changed, but he or the remaining Pagan, yet let not this cause any separation betwixt you, but, unless the Unbeliever will depart, live yet as man and wife together, mutually performing conjugal offices each to other. But the following verses where the Apostle, v. 21, speaks of calling being a servant, shew this interpretation to be too narrow. The sense of the Text is: That the Profession of Christianity is a sufficient with any honest calling or course of life, and it is the will of God that Christians should not pretend their profession of Religion, to excuse them from the duties of any relation wherein they are set. This is an universal Rule, I and concerned not the Church of Corinth only, but all other Churches of Christ, being an Apostolical Constitution.

18 Is any man called being circumcised? let him not become uncircumcised: Is any called in uncircumcision? let him not become circumcised m i Is any one who was a native Jew, and do circumcised according to the Jewish Law converted (while he is in that state) to the Faith of Christ, let him not affect the state of him, that having been formerly a Gentile, was never circumcised. On the other side, is any, being a native Gentile, and so not circumcised, converted to Christianity, let him not affect the state of one converted from him, who was circumcised. This is doubtless the sense of the verse, not (as some would have it) let him not endeavour by art to make himself uncircumcised, which was the wicked practice of those (for a better compliance with the Gentiles) of whom we read, 1 Maccab. 1. 17.

19 * Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing n, but the keeping the commandments of God o i Circumcision was an Ordinance of God, a sign of Gods Covenant, as necessary to Salvation in its time, as the fulfilling of any precept of the Law contained in Ordinances; and Uncircumcision also was something; by the Law relating to that Ordinance, the uncircumcised male is determined to be broken Gods Covenant, and determined to a cutting off. Gen. 17. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. But in the present state of the Church, Circumcision was of no value or moment in the business of Salvation. Gal. 5. 6. In Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but faith which worketh by love.

20 Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called p i Let every man abide in the same state and condition of life in which he was when he was first converted to the Faith of Christ, that is, supposing that he was in an honest course of life

(for we read that the Counters in the Acts burned their books, and unlawful courses of life must not be adhered to after conversion once given up their names to Christ). The Apostles desired only to shew, that the Profession of Christianity maketh no state of life unlawful, which was before that profession lawful, nor discharge any from such as were before the duties of persons in their circumstances and relations. They too all strain this Text who interpret it into an obligation upon all men, not to alter that particular way and course of life and trading, to which they were educated, and in which they formerly have been engaged, though such a thing be of too great moment and consequence for any to do without just advice and deliberation. The world is a mutable thing, and trades and particular courses of life wear out, and what will now bring in a due livelihood, possibly seven years hence will not furnish any with bread, and is unreasonable in such a case to think, that the Rule of Christian profession ties up a man under those changes of Providence to such a particular course of life, as he cannot in it, in the face of his fact set his bread.

21 Art thou called being a servant q? care not for it: but if thou mayst be made free, it is rather r i If whilst thou art a servant to another in any honest employment, thou art converted to the Christian Religion, let it not trouble thee, matter is not. A man may be the servant of Christ, and yet a servant to men in any honest employment. But if thou mayst be made free by the favour of thy friends with the consent of thy master, use it rather, that is, (say some) rather chuse to be a servant still (which indeed in some cases may be the duty of a good Christian) than, if thou fallest, that in that station thou canst better serve God and the interest of thy masters or other Souls. But it is more probable the sense is, make use of thy liberty with care; for certain it is, that the man who is ordinarily at more advantage for the service of God than he that is a servant.

22 For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant s, is the + Lords free-man: likewise also he that is called being free, is * Christs servant t i For the state of a servant to men, so was prejudicial to a man as to his spiritual liberty: a servant and a free-man considered with reference to Christ, are both one; a servant may be as near the Kingdom of Heaven as a free-man, and let a man be in never so good a state of civil liberty; yet if he be a Christian, he is still a servant of Christ, and bound in all things to obey him. As to the new man, there is neither head nor all, the Christ is all and in all.

23 * Ye are bought with a price, be not yet the servants of men u i What price we are bought with, we heard Chap. 6. 20. the Apostle there pressed it upon us as our duty to glorify God with our bodies and our spirits: here he presses upon us another duty, viz. upon that consideration not to be the servants of men: by some folk some think he forbiddeth the selling themselves as slaves to Infidels; others think that he only forbiddeth procurio, as the Apostle calls it, 1 Eph. 6. 6. while in the mean time they might be the servants of men, if they served them as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart, with good will doing service as to the Lord, and not to men. But the most probable interpretation is, Be not servants to the lusts of men, wherein you can serve men, and in the same actions also serve God, and be obedient to his Will: you may be the servants of men, but be not servants of men in such actions wherein to serve them, you must disobey God.

24 Brethren, let every man wherein he is called, therein abide with God v i In whatsoever state or condition, whether he be married or unmarried, whether he be a master or a servant, whether he were before circumcised or uncircumcised, let him not think Christianity obligeth him to alter it, he may abide in it; only he must abide in it with God, as one who remembereth Gods Eye is upon him, and feeth him, and that he is bound to approve himself in it unto God, and to keep a good conversation towards him, as one that is a Member of the Church of God, and under the Laws of it.

25 Now concerning virgins w, I have no commandment of the Lord x: yet I give my judgment y, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful z

i He had before spoken of married persons and widows, now he comes to speak concerning Virgins; and though he mentions only the present state, yet the following words shew that his advice extended to both. x As to them he saith; he has no special direction from Christ, none that would stir the case of every Virgin, y but yet he would give his advice, who seemed to him best. And he would have them look upon him as one that himself had received mercy from the Lord, and as he desired to be faithful in the discharge of his duty, in which case we read in Scripture of a faithful saying, a faithful Governor, a faithful man, &c.

26 I suppose therefore that this is good for a the present || distresses b, I say, that it is good for a man to be c

i A Good here signifies convenient (as before) if other circumstances of particular persons make it not sinful; or better with respect to the present distresses or necessity, by which, without doubt, the Apostle meant, not the common necessities of all men that are born unto to die, (which is the more easy the fewer relations we have to part from) nor yet of families and concerns; for there is none who hath a family in this world to look after, but will have trouble in the flesh, but the continual troubles with which the Church of God was afflicted, as the Ark upon the waters, and the more frequent troubles of the Primitive Church; for though their great Persecutions from the Heathen were not possibly at that time begun, yet Christ had foretold them, and the Apostles had them in a very near prospect (Paul is thought to have dyed the tenth or eleventh year of Nero). For this present necessity or distress, the Apostle gives his opinion, That it was convenient and better for those that could honestly abstain from marriage, to keep themselves in their single and unmarried condition.

27 Art thou bound unto a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife d

i Art thou bound by marriage, or bound by contract, do not use any sinful ways to be loosed from that bond, either by divorce or by a voluntary departure: if the Unbeliever will depart, he or she may, you are not obliged to court their stay, but do not you put him or her away. Are you free from a wife, either as yet unmarried, or by the hand of God separated, in case you can without sin, obtain. If your circumstances be such, as they do not oblige you to marriage, do not seek a wife. The times are like to be full of trouble and difficulty. Our Master said, Wo to them that are said to be single, and give place to the devil, Matt. 24. 19.

28 But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned, and if a virgin marry, the hath not sinned: Nevertheless, such shall have trouble in the flesh e; but I spare you f i I would not have you mistake me, as if I judged marriage sinful for persons in any state or condition, or of any sex; for those that are married in any time, will find troubles about the things of this life, and those that marry in such times as these, are you are like further to see, will meet with more than ordinary troubles of this nature. I only would spare you, and have you keep your selves as free as you can; or I spare you any further discourse of that nature, not willing to torment you before the time cometh.

29 But * this I say, brethren g, the time is short h. It remaineth, that both they that have wives, be as though they had none i i He had before spoken to what concerned some, now he comes to what concerned all. The time which he is short, is not like to last, when the Mariner comes near his life, he either meaneth the time of this life, or the time of the World's duration, we often find the Apostles speaking of their times as the last times (and in these senses all are concerned.) Or the time of the Churches rest and tranquillity, which they had hitherto enjoyed in a far more perfect degree, than they enjoyed them soon after this, when ten Persecutions followed immediately one upon the neck of another. g Therefore (saith the Apostle) it is the concernment of all Christians, not to indulge themselves too much in the pleasures and contentments of this life; but if ye be married, or shall marry, you will be contented to keep your hearts as loose from the contentment and indulgence men use to take in their wives, as if you had no wives at all.

30 And they that weep, as though they wept not j; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not k; and they that buy, as though they possessed not l i This consideration also should weigh with those who have a more afflicted portion in this life, and are mourners for the loss of their near relations, they shall not let what they cannot long have kept, and for the time they keep them, must have enjoyed them probably with a great deal of sorrow and bitterness. And for any of those who rejoiced in any worldly enjoyments, the shortness of the time they are like to have them to rejoice in, should admonish them to govern and moderate their joy, for it is like to be but like the crackling of thorns under a foot. And those who have liberal possessions of good things in this life, they should look upon them as none of theirs, and use them as not like to be their possessions long.

31 And they that use this world, as not abusing it: For * the fashion of this world passeth away m i While you have any thing of this worlds goods you may use them; yea, you must use them, without them you cannot live in the world; but the consideration how little the time is you are like to have them to use, should govern you in the use of them, so as you ought to take heed you do not use them to any other purpose, or for any other end, than that for which God hath appointed and given them to you. n For this world is like a Stage or Theatre where are diversities of States, and the present Scene abideth but for a little time, then passeth, and another Scene or figure of things appeareth: those who appear this day in the form of Princes and Nobles, to morrow appear as beggars and persons of a low estate and degree.

32 But I would have you without carefules n. * He that is unmarried, careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord o i The reason why I have advised (during the present distressed estate of the Church) a single rather than a married life, for those to whom God hath given the gift of continency, is, that those who are Christians might live as free from such cares as divide and distract men and womens minds, as they possibly can. p The single person that hath a spiritual heart disposed to pious performances, being free from other distractions and cares, caused by worldly concerns, will spend all his thoughts about his duty toward God, and how to please him.

33 But he that is married, careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife p i But he that is married, hath other things which he must take care about; for besides that he is obliged to provide for his family, husbands and wives are under time obligations to please each other by diversificaments, which though not in themselves sinful, yet take up time, which thole free from such relations, may spend more religiously.

34 There is a difference also between a wife and a virgin q. The unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that the may be holy both in body and in spirit: but she that is married, careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband r i There is the same difference betwixt a married woman and a single woman, as there is betwixt a married man and a single man. r If a woman be unmarried, and be piously disposed, she hath leisure and opportunity enough to mind the things of God; but if she be married, she will then be obliged to attend husbands. It is the same thing that was before said of the man. The sense is, That a conjugal relation draws along with it many diversions, from which a single life is free.

35 And this I speak for your own profit s, not that I may call a share upon you t, but for that which is comely u, and that you may attend upon the Lord without distraction v i For your advantage both as to your converse in the world, and also for your religious conversation; and the performance of those duties which you owe unto God; for those that are married, must meet with more troubles and cares in this life, and cannot have so much time and leisure for religious cares, as others have that are not inangled in the domestic cares of a family. y Yet I would not bring you under a yoke, imposing what God hath not imposed, and obliging you where God hath not obliged you. z The word here is yugavon, it strictly signifies a kind of a good figure, and is translated in Scripture honourable, 1 Thim. 4. 12. 1 Tim. 5. 12. 1 Tim. 5. 12, where it signifies what is of a fair and good repute in the eye of the world, which is also the sense of it, Chap. 12. 24. where we read of the comely parts of mans body; but in this place the word signifies most largely the same with profitable and convenient. For marriage is a state which neither is in it self indecent, nor ever was so reputed in the World by any Nation, and the Scripture tells us here of the same significance with honourable, which in the beginning of the verse is translated profitable, and Chap. 6. 12 is translated expedient.

z The phrase in the Greek is very difficult to be translated properly into our English language, word for word it is, To fit well to the Lord without distraction; our translators render it, To serve the Lord. We have something like it in our language, when we express our diligent attendance to a thing, under the notion of fitting close to a business, which is opposed to such an attendance to business, as we give when we have many avocations and callings away; so we cannot fit close to it. The Apostle saith, That this was the end of his advising thole who could contain not to marry under that state of things in the World referring to the Church, that they might with more ease and convenience attend to the great concerns of their Souls, without thole distracting and dividing thoughts, which they must have who were inangled with domestic business and relations.

36 But if any man think that he behaveth himself uncomely x towards his virgin, if the passeth the flower of her age y, and need not so require z, let him do what he will, he smeth not; let them marry a

* There is a general and a particular uncomeliness, some things are uncomely with respect to all persons, of such things the Apostle doth not here speak; but of a particular uncomeliness with respect to the circumstances of particular persons. Neither doth uncomely here signify a meer indecency and unhandloms, but such a behaviour as is unfit the general Rules of the Gospel, which judgment is to be ruled by the circumstances of persons, as they more or less defile marriage, y<sup>e</sup> if he be of marriageable years, or rather if he be beginning to grow old, & be desirous of marriage, so as the parent will feel reason to fear that if he gives not her in marriage, he will depose of her without asking her fathers advice or leave, and be exposed possibly to worse temptations: which two things seem to interpret that term, if uncomely require. In such a case as this a Christian parent shall not sin, if he dispelth her in marriage, let her marry to such a person as the father, and her parent feel proper for her. He speaks in the Plural number, because marriage is betwixt two persons. The reason of this determination is, because the Apostle in his former discourse doth not where condemned a married estate during the present distress of things, as sinful or unlawful, but only as inexpedient, or not so expedient as a single life during the present distress, he had before determined, y<sup>e</sup> v. 9. That it was better to marry than to burn. Now no inexpediency of a thing can balance what is plainly sinful. If therefore the case be such, that a man or woman must marry, or sin, though marriage brings with it more care and trouble, yet it is to be preferred before plain fornication.

37 Nevertheless, he that standeth stedfast in his heart b, having no necessity c, but hath power over his own will d, and hath to decreed in his heart that he will keep his virgin e, doth well f.

If a man be resolved to keep his daughter a Virgin, not uncertain in his own mind, and wavering what he should do, upon a just consideration of circumstances, & doth not rest a necessity to dispose of her, either for the avoiding some sin against God, or for the better providing for himself and the rest of his family, & but hath a perfect freedom in his own will, so that his will be not contradicted by his daughters fondness of a married life, for in such a case the father, though he would willingly not dispose of his daughter in marriage, yet ought to be over-ruled by the will of his daughter, and to have not a power over his own will, being forced by the rules of Religion to take care of the soul and spiritual welfare of his child; for though the parent hath a great power over his child, and ought to consent to the marriage of his child, yet he hath no such power, as wholly to hinder them from marriage. If he be fully resolved upon a due consideration of all circumstances, and the Virgin be satisfied, and yields up her self in the case to her fathers pleasure, & in such a case, if the father doth not put her upon marriage, but resolves to keep her unmarried, but he doth that which is more eligible, considering the present circumstances of things, and better than if he did find out an husband for her, and give her to him (as it is expounded in the next verse).

38 So then, he that giveth her in marriage, doth well g; but he that giveth her not in marriage, doth better h.

There is no general rule for parents in this case, where the duty or sin of parents may arise from their, or their childrens different circumstances. But supposing that a parent having duly weighed all circumstances, be fully resolved, and he finds the child well concurring, that the case forbear, and is willing to do in the case what her parent desires; in such a case the parent shall sin, if he may do so. But with reference to this, if the parent dispelth her in marriage, I cannot say he sinneth, but he doth what he may do. & But with reference to the present distress of things in the Church and in the World, and with reference to the young womans liberty for the service of God, he doth better, if he doth not to dispose her. The thing is in it self indifferent, and Christians must be in it ruled, and inclined one way or another from circumstances.

39 * The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth: but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will i, only in the Lord k.

The Apostle all along this Chapter hath been speaking to several cases, which the Church of Corinth had put to him concerning marriage: some that concerned persons already married: others that concerned such as were single, having been never married, he sheweth up his discourse with advice, which relateth to such as had lost their husbands, with reference to second marriages. As to this he determineth, That no woman might marry again while her first husband lived, that is, unless that her husband be legally divorced from her for Adultery, or unless her husband, being an Heathen, had voluntarily deserted her: but if her husband were dead, she might marry to whom she would; & yet she was not at such liberty, as that she might marry an Unbeliever. Unbelievers are either Heathens, or Christians in name; but such as are Idolaters, or profane persons, or Heretics, who hold such Tenets as are inconsistent with any true Faith in Jesus Christ. This phrase, only in the Lord, seemeth to oblige godly women, not only to avoid marrying with Heathens, but with nominal Christians, that is, such who, although they have been baptized, and own Christ with their tongues, yet hold such damnable Opinions, or live such profane lives, or worship God in such an idolatrous manner, as is inconsistent with any true Faith in Christ. The reason of the precept holds as well to the latter, as to the former.

40 But it is the happier if she so abide, after my judgment l: And * I think also that I have the Spirit of God m.

But if other circumstances concur, that a widow can abide without marriage without waning woman, and running into temptation, and so as to manage her outward concerns without the help of an husband, my opinion is, That this is more happy, if she keeps her self a widow, and doth not marry again, up happy, because more holy, or in a fairer road to the Kingdom of Heaven, but upon the two accounts before mentioned, more happy, because free from troubles and distractions, and because the will be more free and at liberty to mind heavenly things. And faith he, I think I know as much of the mind of the holy Spirit of God, as either those who teach you otherwise, or who may have opinions contrary to mine in this case.

CHAP. VIII.

Now * as touching things offered to idols n, we know that we all have * knowledge o.

The Apostle proceedeth to a new Argument, about which the Christians had warr'd to him, viz. whether the eating of meat offered to Idols. Of this meat offered to Idols we have this account given us. Feasts upon Sacrifices were very usual amongst the Heathens; they first offered oxen, sheep, or other beasts to the Idols: Then the Priest offered another, burning it upon the Idols Altar, other parts they restored to the offerers, or took it to themselves, the Priests made a Feast in the Idols Temple of their pure, and sanctified friends to eat, the offerers, either he feasted with them, or restored to them, in the Idols Temple, or carried it home, and there feasted their neighbours with it, or else carried it into the market, and sold it (as other meat) in shambles. The Question was, Whether it was lawful for Christians, being invited to these Feasts by those amongst whom they lived, to go to them, and to eat of such meat, whether it were in the Idols Temple, or at the Pagans houses, or if any such meat were brought in to them, whether they might eat of that. Some amongst the Christians at Corinth thought, that these were lawful, because they knew an Idol was nothing but a block or piece of wood or stone, so could not defile any thing. The Apostle tells them, that he knew, & that very many of them had good degrees of knowledge, and every one understood that an Idol was nothing: & yet he warr'd them to take heed they were not puffed up with their knowledge, that is, swollen in such a confident opinion of their knowledge, that they could not be mistaken, and be betrayed by their conceits of it, to do that which is sinful; for a Church edifieth. Charity signifieth either love to God, or love to our Neighbour: here the latter seemeth to be intended, and the sense this, That they were not only concerned in the good of their own Souls, but of their Neighbours also, and to do that which might tend to their profit and edification, not to their ruine and destruction.

2 And * if any man think that he knoweth any p, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know q.

Let it be in this or any other matter, if any man be proud of his knowledge, and be conceited that he knoweth enough, and needeth none to instruct him, he may indeed have a notion of things, but it will do him no good, & man ought to use his knowledge for the glory of God, and the edification of others. Let a man have never so large a notion of things, if he be not humble, if he sets not his knowledge to the honour of God, and the advantage of others, he knoweth nothing as he ought to know it. Knowledge is a Talent not to be laid up in a napkin.

3 But if any man love God, the same is known of him r.

It is of much more advantage to a Soul to be known of God, than it is, owned, acknowledged and approved, than of man, and to be known of God in his opinion. A man may comprehend much of the things of God in his opinion, and may know much of God, and yet be one to whom God will not give day pay. Depart from me, I know you not, you workers of iniquity: but if any man love God, that man is beloved of God, and shall be owned and acknowledged by him. In this sense know is taken in a multitude of Scriptures, Job 19. 23: our Translators render this word know, Rom. 7. 15.

4 As concerning therefore the eating of those things that are offered in sacrifice to idols s, we know know that an idol is * nothing in the world t, and that there is none other God but one u.

Mean while it is to be eaten in the Idols Temple, or in a private house. & We know that an Image or an Idol, the representation of some other thing, though in respect of the matter it be something, either wood, stone, or earth, and in respect of form it be something, yet it is nothing formally, or representatively, it is set up to represent to us a Deity, there is nothing of a Divine Nature in it, or the representation of a Divine Nature in it. It is nothing of what the poor blind Heathen take it to be, and therefore in the Hebrew it hath its name from a word that signifieth nothing, Job 13. 14. Zeph. 1. 17. Or it is nothing that can either fascinate, or pollute any meat that is set before it. & And we know that there is none other God but one: the Apostle may be conceived to have spoken these words as from himself, granting what those folk, who took themselves to be men of knowledge, Or else in the language of those who thus spoke, repeating their words.

5 For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, as there be gods many, and lords many v.

There are many whom Heathen call Gods, and whom God himself calleth Gods: the Angels that are in Heaven are called Gods Holl. Gen. 32. 2. The heavenly Host, Lucy 2. 13. The Sons of God, Job 1. 6. & 2. 1. Magistrates are also called Gods, Psalm 82. 6. because God hath committed a great part of his Power unto them. Thus there are many Gods and many Lords.

6 But * to us there is but one God w, the Father, of * whom are all things x, and we y in him, and * one Lord Jesus Christ, * by whom are all things z, and we by him aa.

Whoever the idolatrous Heathens think or believe, to us (who are Christians) there is but one who is truly and essentially God, (though indeed there be more than one Person in the Trinity, & the Father, who is the Fountain of the Deity, communicating his Divine Nature to the other two Persons, and all things are all things. It is a term which signifieth the primary Cause and Author of all things: we submit in him, according to what the Apostle, in him we live and move and have our being, and we are in him, created for his honour and glory (as the phrase may also be translated.) And one Lord Jesus Christ, who is the object of our faith, and the Father, who is the Father of all things. It is the second Person in the holy Trinity, the Name of God be often given to Christ, yet no where by Paul where he maketh mention of God the Father, whence he concludes, That the term of Lord given to Christ, signifieth his preeminence above all things (the Father excepted) according to what the Apostle speaks chap. 15. 27. By this Christ, saith the Apostle, all things are, John 1. 3. All things were made by him, and without him was nothing made that was made: yet the difference of the phrase is observable to denote us in the order of working in the holy Trinity. All things are (as the Father by the Son. And we (saith the Apostle) are by the Son created, redeemed, &c.

Howbeit, there is not in every man that knowledge ab: For some * with conscience of the idol unto this hour, eat it as a thing offered unto an idol ac, and their conscience being weak, is ad defiled ae.

Though some of you know that there is but one living and true God, and that an Idol is nothing in the world, and meat is neither sanctified nor polluted, by being fed before it; yet every one doth not know so much, and though the Gospel hath been a long time preached amongst them, yet to this day they may have some superstitious opinion of the Idol, & thus their conscience will be defiled or polluted. It is much the same case as this day as to the business of Image-worship, or Veneration of the Saints, and Invocation of Saints amongst the Papists. The wisest, and most knowing of them will declare against giving Divine Adoration to the Image, or to the Saint, and tell us, that they worship the true and living God upon the sight of the Image only, and make use of the Name of the Saint only to desire him or her to pray to God for them. Now not to settle with that Question, Whether in our worshipping the true God, it be lawful to set a Creature before us as our motive or inducement to Worship, or use any Mediator but Christ, yet the things are united upon the same account that the Apostle here determineth it unlawful for stronger Christians to eat meat offered to Idols, though they knew and professed, that an Idol was nothing, & for all people that come to worship, have not this knowledge, there are, without doubt, multitudes of simple people amongst the Papists, that plainly in this kind of Veneration and Adoration venerate and adore the Creature, and not such consciences are defiled by Idolatry, because they have not such knowledge as others have, supposing that what those others did, were lawful as to their practice, which indeed it was.

8 But meat commendeth us not to God: for neither if we eat it, [are we the better; neither if we eat not, [are we the worse af.

The Apostle here speaketh in the person either of those Teachers amongst them, or those more private persons amongst them, who made no difficulty of eating meat offered to Idols; they which commended any man to God, they were not the better if they did eat, or the worse if they did not eat. The Apostle himself had suffered this, Rom. 14. 17. That the Kingdom of God was not meat or drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

9 But * take heed, lest by any means this [liberty of yours become * a stumbling-block to them that are weak ag.

The word Liberty is here well translated Liberty, though it also signifieth Right, and seems in either sense rather to signify a supposed, than a real liberty or right; for we shall see in the next verse, that the Apostle is here speaking of their eating in the Idols Temple, which chap. 10. 21. he determineth to be having a Communion with Devils, and therefore could not be lawful; the Apostle therefore seemeth here only to suppose (as they pretended) that in their eating simply in the Idols Temple they did not sin, because by eating, men are not made the worse; yet as we shall see afterwards, he declareth their action was not free from guilt, as it was a violation of their brotherly love which they were obliged to their neighbours.

10 For if any man see thee, which hath knowledge, sit at meat in the Idols temple, shall not the conscience of him which is weak ah be emboldened ai to do those things which are offered unto idols aj.

Here the Apostle sheweth how they sinned in eating meat in the Idols Temple, which had been before offered to the Idols, admitting the thing in it self lawful (which indeed it was not), accidentally, by keeping a stumbling-block before their brethren, who either were really weak in their knowledge, or at least they were looked upon as such. For (saith he) if any of these, who, they think, hath knowledge, or who boasts of his knowledge, sit at meat in the Idols Temple, will not he be encouraged to do the same, though possibly he judges it is not lawful? The word translated emboldened, is the same which is elsewhere often in the New Testament translated edified: & Metaphorically signifies to make a progress or proficiency at their in good or evil, (though this be the only Text in the New Testament wherein it is taken in an ill sense.) This the Apostle means when he saith, which less us know the obligation that lieth upon every good Christian, not to use his liberty to the prejudice of others Souls, by doing any actions which we may do or let alone, which done by us, may probably become a snare to them.

11 And * through thy knowledge shall the * weak brother perish ak for whom Christ died al.

Through thy knowledge, that is, in the use of thy knowledge, God hath not given thee place in the use of thy knowledge, that they thereby should be a means to harm and to destroy, but to good; and save others; it is a most absurd thing for any one of their knowledge therefore to the destruction of others. By perishing is here meant, be led into sin, by acting contrary to the judgment of his own conscience; for (as the Apostle writ elsewhere) His death is damned if he eateth, for whatsoever is not of faith, that is, done out of a true persuasion in the purity doing, that it is lawful, is sin. Though he be weak, yet if he be a true Believer, Christ died for him, and there can be nothing more contrary to the duty of a charitable Christian, than to be a means to damn him whom Christ came down from Heaven, and died for, that he might save him.

12 But when ye sin so against the brethren am, and wound their weak conscience an, ye sin against Christ ao.

Sin is properly against God, for it is a breach of the Divine Law; but the violations of that part of the Divine Law, which concerneth our duty to our Neighbour, are called sins against our Brethren, that is, sins against God, in matters which concern our duty towards our Brethren. The giving the weak judgments of others, by your examples, an occasion of sin, by venturing upon actions which they think sinful, is that which is here called sinning, or a wounding their weak consciences, because it is indeed an hurting and defiling of them. & This the Apostle determineth to be a sinning against Christ, both against the Law of Christ, concerning loving one another, and against the love of Christ, who in dying for the weakest Believers, hath shewed the highest degree of love imaginable to us, whom they are very far from following, who will not abuse themselves a small matter of liberty, where the use of it is that or that way may very probably be an occasion of sin, and ruine to their brethren Souls.

13 For * by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, * whether we be Jews or 4 Gentiles, whether we be bond or free y: and * have been all made to drink into one Spirit z.

y The Apostle proveth the Oneness of the Church, as the Body of Christ, from the same Sacraments of the New Testament instituted for all Christians, and whereunto jointly participate. He saith, we are baptized into one body, by which he must mean the universal Church, for Christ is the Head of that; particular Churches are but parts of that Church, of which Christ is the Head. Let men be of what Nation they will, whether Jews or Gentiles, turning to the Christian Religion, and of what condition they will, when they are baptized they are by it made Members of that one Body, of which Christ is the Head; though for the more convenient administration of it, participation in the Ordinances, they are divided into smaller Societies, which still have the decomposition of Churches, as the smallest drop of water may be called water, though there be but one Element of Water. z And, saith the Apostle, we have been all made to drink into one Spirit, which some interpret as if it were, we have all drank of one Spirit, that is, been made partakers of one Spirit, whose benefits are sometimes felt out under the notion of water, living water, Joh. 4. 14. and 7. 38, 39. and in the Old Testament, Isa. 55. 1, 2. Ezek. 47. But many others rather chuse to interpret drinking in this place, of drinking at the Table of the Lord, partaking of that whole Action being felt out here by one particular act there performed. This is probable, considering that the Apostle, in the former part of the verse, had been speaking of the other Sacrament of the Gospel, and that he speaking of the Lords Supper, Chap. 10. 17. had used this expression, For we being many, are one bread, and one body.

14 For the body is not one member, but many.

a As the natural Body is Trism integrum, a Whole consisting of many members; so the Body (spiritual), the mystical Body of Christ is not made up of one single Member, but of many Members.

15 If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body: is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body: is it therefore not of the body? b b It should seem by these expressions, that one great cause of those divisions, which the Apostle hath charged the Church of Corinth with, was their difference in Gifts, Ministries, and Operations; which was to that degree, that either those who were higher in Gifts and Ministries, and more famous for their miraculous Operations, despised and vilified those that were inferior to them; or those who were lower in Gifts, or in their station in the Church, or their power to work Miracles, would not own themselves Members of the Church at Corinth, because they were in those low, and inferior orders and degrees. The Apostle argueth the unreasonableness of this, by a further comparing of the natural with the spiritual mystical Body of the Church; and sheweth, it was altogether as unreasonable, for men so to disdain the Church, and their relation to it, because they had not the most eminent gifts, or were not in the most eminent places and Offices; as for the foot to say, It was not of the body, because it was not the hand; or for the ear to say, It was not of the body, because it was not the eye.

17 If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole body were hearing, where were the smelling? c c There are several actions to be performed by the Body of a man, either for the support and the upholding of it in life, or for the accommodation of it while it lives; Sleeping, Hearing, and Smelling (which are the three actions here mentioned) are highly indispensible necessary for the upholding of life, but they are highly useful for a man better being, and the accommodation of body-life; therefore there is need of a variety of bodily members, Organs, or Instruments of Sight, as well as of Hearing, and Organs of Smelling, as well as Hearing; the wise God hath created no member of mans body in vain, each one hath its use in order to the being or well being of the body: So is it in the Church of God, as the Apostle, 1. 26. argueth; but he saith yet further on, first in his compassion of the natural, and mystical Body.

18 But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him.

The infinitely wise God, who hath made the body of man, and ordered all the members of the Body for several uses and offices, either for the upholding, or accommodating the life of man, hath likewise appointed the order in the body, in which every member shall stand; that the head should be uppermost for the better guidance of the whole body; the feet lowermost to tread upon the earth, and to bear the weight of the whole body; and none must repine at the Wisdom of God, which hath not only created mans body, (consisting of a variety of members) but also appointed every member its place, and there set it, that it cannot fill its station or office.

19 And if they were all one member, where were the body? d d The body is a Whole consisting of many members, it could not therefore be a body, if there were but only one member. Or how could the body perform the several actions necessary either for the being, or the well being of it, if it consisted but of one member?

20 But now are they many members, yet but one body f.

f The multiplicity of members, having several uses and offices for the service of the whole body, do not make a multiplicity of bodies, the body still is but one.

21 And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you g.

g He names two of the most noble and useful members of the body, the head and the eye, which yet cannot tell the hand or the feet, they have no need of them: the wife God having created nothing in vain, but made every member in the body of a man for use, as to the whole, so to the several parts of the body, the hand is useful to the eye, and the feet are of use to the head. The application of this similitude, which the Apostle to much enlargeth upon, we shall have 1. 26, 27, 28.

22 Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary h.

h By feible, the Apostle here doth not only mean weak, but which seem to us most abject and contemptible, in which sense the word is used 1. Cor. 12. 10. such are the belly and the curials; the Eye also is a feeble member, &c. yet these parts are most necessary for the use of the body, being such without the use of which the body cannot live.

23 And those members of the body, which we think to be less honourable, upon these we'll be 10, 16 flow more abundant honour, and our dignity parts have more abundant comeliness i.

i All know what those parts of the body are, which are commonly judged less honourable and less comely, upon these we bestow more abundant honour and comeliness, by hiding them and covering them, that they are not, as the hands and feet, and head (which we esteem more honourable parts of the body) exposed to the publick view of those with whom we converse.

24 For our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honour to that parts which lacked k.

k God hath in the Wisdom of his Providence, to order it, that as we have some parts of our body, which are judged uncomely, and not for those noble uses that others are; so we have other parts that are, for use, more noble, yet in common repute more ignoble and uncomely; and the same wise God hath so builded the body of man, as of both these to make a temperance to, as they all concur in the composition of the same body, and more abundant honour in covering and clothing them, is given to those parts, that in the judgment of men, seemed most to lack honour, that their uncomeliness might by some artificial means be taken away.

25 That there should be no schism in the body, but that the members should have the same care for one another l.

l By Schisme is here meant division, and that also what is expounded figuratively, and it is expounded in the next work, that the members should take the same care one for another. That though the members differ in honour and office; yet they might mutually take care for each other, as if they were all in an equal degree of honour.

26 And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it, or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it m.

m The same union of the members in the body natural of all the members proceedeth a natural Sympathy, that if one member (if it please), all are afflicted, and ready to contribute to the relief and help of each other; and likewise the honour that is reflected on the body, is reflected on all the parts, and all rejoice in the good that affecteth any one single member.

27 Now ye are the body of Christ n, and members in particular.

n Considering you in the whole, as a Church, so you are the Body of Christ: o Considering you particularly as individual Believers, so you are Members of Christ. Some think 26. 16. signifies in part, intending that true Believers amongst them were Members of Christ, but not others. The Apostle in these words begetteth to apply to them what he had before discoursed concerning the Body natural, and the parts thereof, you are the mystical Body of Christ, which hath a great Analogy with that natural body which you carry about with you.

28 And God hath set for some in the church, first apostles p, * secondarily prophets q, thirdly teachers r, after that miracles s, then gifts of healing t, helps u, * governments w, || diversities of tongues x.

p The Apostle, Eph. 4. 11. seemeth to make a different enumeration, there he saith, And he gave unto us Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers. He reckoneth up there Evangelists, whom he doth not there mention. He here first mentioneth Apostles, by whom he meant those Servants of God who were sent out by Christ to lay the first foundations of the Gospel Church; and upon whom an universal care lay over all the Churches of Christ, having not only a power in all places, to preach and administer the Sacraments, but to give Rules of Order, and direct in matters of Government, though particular Churches had a power of Government within themselves (otherwise the Apostle would not have blamed this Church, for not setting out the incontinent person.) q Prophets signifies persons (as I have before noted) that revealed the Mind and Will of God to people, whether it were by an extraordinary impulse or Revelation, or in an ordinary course of Teaching; whether they revealed things to come, or opened the Mind and Will of God already revealed. But in this Text, and in Eph. 4. 11. Prophets seem to signify, either such as from the Spirit of God, foretold future contingencies (such was Agabus, of whom we read in the Acts of the Apostles, and others in the Primitive Church) or else such as interpreted Scripture by extraordinary and immediate Revelations. Some think, that Prophets signify the ordinary Pastors of Churches; but they seem rather to be comprehended under the next term of Teachers, unless we had better grounds, than we have, to distinguish betwixt Pastors and Teachers, making the work of the Teacher to speak by way of Doctrine and Exposition, and the work of the Pastor to speak practically. r Thirdly, Teachers: Some by these words understand Governors of Schools; others, such Ministers, whose work was only to expound the Scriptures, or the Mysteries of Salvation; but the Apostle in this Enumeration (which is the largest we have in Scripture) not mentioning Pastors; it seemeth to me that he meant the fixed and ordinary Ministers of Churches, or the Pastors, whom the Apostles left in every City, which by their Ministry had received the Gospel. s After that Love as he impowered to work miraculous Operations, and those of a more remarkable nature, for otherwise the healing next mentioned, come under that notion also. t Then such persons as he gave a power to in an extraordinary way to lead the sick, u Who the Apostle means by Helps, and w by Governments, is very hard to determine. Certain it is, that he doth not mean the Civil Magistrates; for the time was not yet come for Kings to be saving Fathers, and Queens saving Mothers to the Gospel Church. But whether he meant Deacons, or Widows, elsewhere mentioned, as helpful in the care of the Poor, or some that assisted the Pastors in the Government of the Church, to those that were extraordinary helps to the Apostles in the first Plantation of the Church, is very hard to determine.

s Such as spoke with divers Tongues, that Faculty being a gift, as we heard before, not given to all, but to some in the Primitive Church. The Apostle, by this Enumeration, sheweth what he meant by those diversities of Gifts, differences of Administrations, and diversities of Operations, of which he saith in 1. 2. 4, 5, 6.

29 Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all workers of miracles? are all gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret?

s That is, all are not, nor can be, any more than all the body can be an Ear, or an Eye, or an Hand, or a Foot; you cannot expect that in a governed Body, all should be Governors; and you see by experience, that all cannot work Miracles, prophetic, speak with Tongues, or heal those that are sick.

31 But * covet earnestly the best gifts z: And yet flow I unto you a more excellent way.

z The word may be translated Indignitively, to covet the best gifts; or as we translate it impudently, Covet ye, I would have you be so desirous to excel in the best gifts, that is, those which will make you most useful and profitable to the Church of God. But yet (saith he) gifts are not the best things, the habits of giving Grace are much more valuable than Gifts; Love to God and your Neighbour, ought to be by you preferred before Gifts. To a discourse of which; the Apostle thus shortly passeth.

1 Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity a, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

a The Apostle had promised in the close of the former Chapter, to shew them a more excellent thing, than Gifts, or a more excellent course, than that they were to glory pursuing, in their emulation of the best Gifts; he now cometh to them that way, that course: the way was that of Love, the course was the study and pursuing methods how to shew their Love to God, and to one another; for (saith the Apostle) though I speak, that is, if I could speak, or admit I did speak, with the Tongues used in all the Nations of the World, and with the Tongues of Angels; by which some understand the best and most excellent ways of expressing our selves. Angels have no tongues, nor make any articulate audible sounds, by which they understand one another; but yet there is certainly a Society, or intercourse among Angels, which could not be upheld without some way amongst them, to communicate their minds and Schoolmen say, it is by way of sympathy, that way God indeed communicates his Mind sometimes to his people, making secret impressions of his Will upon their minds and understandings; but whether Angels can do like, or what their way is of communicating their minds each to other, is a great Secret, and we ought to be willingly ignorant of what God hath not pleased, in any part of his revealed Will, to tell us. Neither do I judge it a question proper to this place, where the Tongues of Angels unquestionably signify the best and most excellent ways of expressing and communicating our selves to others, as excellent food; for Angels being spiritual Substances, need no food, have no mouths to eat, nor bellies to fill, and this the Apostle meaneth. Though I could express my self, or communicate my mind to others in the most excellent way, or in the greatest variety of expressions, yet if I have not (charity), which we translate Charity, but possibly might be better translated Love, because we usually by Charity (in common speech) understand that indication of brotherly Love, which is in acts of bounty, feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, giving to those that are in want, which is it possible that men may do out of mere humanity, or a superfluous opinion of meriting thereby, without any true root of love to our Neighbours; which is never true, if it doth not grow out of a Love to God. e If I want Love (saith the Apostle), a true root of love to men, flowing from a true Love to God, and out of obedience to his Precept, I am but as sounding brass, &c. that is, I only make a noise, but it will conduce nothing to my Salvation, it will be of no use to me: But if I have this true root of Love, then it will be of avail to me. And thus the Apostle proveth, that the habit of Love to God and man in the heart, is far more excellent than the gift of Tongues, which many of the Corinthians had, or coveted, or boasted in, despising those who had it not.

2. And though I have the gift of prophecy d, * Chap. 12. 10, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge e, 9, 10, and though I have all faith, * to that I could remove mountains f, and have not charity, I am nothing g. * See Matt. 7. 27, * Luke 17. 6.

h It hath been before shewed, that the Gift of Prophecy signifieth an extraordinary power or faculty, by which men in those Primitive Times were enabled to reveal the Mind and Will of God, either as to future contingencies, or things which should afterwards come to pass in the World, or by further explication or application of the Mind and Will of God already revealed in Holy Writ. i Though, faith the Apostle, I had a vast knowledge, and could in any notion comprehend the most sublime and hidden things, whether Divine, or humane; I And though I had all Faith (except that which is saving and justifying); he further opens what Faith he meant, viz. Faith of Miracles, a firm persuasion, that God would answer upon my prayer those things beyond the power, and contrary to the course of Nature, (the Apostle alludeth to the words of our Saviour Mat. 17. 20) yet, faith he, if I have not Love, that true Love to God and man, by which that Faith, which is profitable to Salvation, worketh and sheweth it self: g It will all signify nothing, he of no profit nor avail unto me in order to my eternal Salvation: I may perish for ever notwithstanding such gifts.

3 And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor h, and though I give my body to be burned i, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing k.

l The Apostle proceedeth from common gifts, powers, and habits, to actions, and influences in the world, the latter may be a great service to men; the latter, a great service to God. Though, faith he, I feed the poor with my goods, and that not sparingly, but liberally, so as I spend all my Estate in that way, and make my self as poor as they. m Though I die in the Cause of Christ, for the Testimony of his Gospel, or for forwarding of his Ways, and that by the Harsh and most cruel sort of death, Burning, and be not dragged.

dragged to the stake, but freely give up my life to that cruel kind of death. ¶ Yet if I have not a faith and Principle of Love to God in my heart, that carrieth me out to these actions and these sufferings, they all will signify nothing to me, as to my eternal Salvation and Happiness. From whence we may observe, That, 1. The highest acts of beneficence or bounty towards men, (which we usually call good Works) are not meritorious at the hand of God, and may be separated from a true root of saving Grace in the Soul. 2. That the greatest sufferings too and in the Cause of Religion, may be separated from a true root and Principle of saving Grace. 3. That no actions, no sufferings, are sufficient to imitate any Soul to Heaven, further than they proceed from a Principle of true Love to God, and a desire to obey and to please Him in what we do. Faith and Love must be the roots and Principles of all those works which are truly good, and acceptable to God, and which will be of any profit or avail to us with reference to our eternal happiness.

* Prov. 10. 12. ¶ Charity suffereth long, and is kind; ¶ charity envieth not, ¶ charity is not puffed up.

I Left the Corinthians should say to the Apostle, What is this Love you discourse of? Or how shall we know if we have it? The Apostle here gives thirteen notes of a charitable person. By Love or Charity he either meaneth a charitable person, a Soul possessed of that love, which he had been commending; Or he will take the term love, to signify the habit it self, the inclination it to do these things: To suffer long, not to be too quick and easily with brethren that may offend or displease us; the charitable man will withhold and refrain his wrath, not be rash in the expressions of it, and hasty to revenge. ¶ And a kind, it disposeth a man to desire to deserve well of all, and to do good to all, as he hath occasion and opportunity, for as it is impossible there should be in a man any thing more opposite to this Grace, than a curst, churlish temper, with a study and desire to do others mischief. ¶ A Though a charitable person seeth others in an higher and more prosperous condition than himself, yet it doth not trouble him, but he is glad at the preferment, good, and prosperity of other men, however it fareth with himself. Every envious man, that is discontented at anothers faring well, is an uncharitable man, there is no strife root of Love to God or to his Neighbour in his heart. ¶ A He that doth not prefer himself before others, ambitiously glorying or boasting, and stiling rashly to promote his own glory, and satisfy his own inordinate desires or lusts. ¶ He is not puffed up, proudly lifting up himself above others, and swelling with high conceits of himself.

* Chap. 10. 34. ¶ Doth not behave it self unseemly, ¶ seeketh not her own, ¶ is not easily provoked, ¶ thinketh no evil.

He doth not behave himself towards any in an uncomely or unbecoming manner, and will do nothing towards his brother, which is in the opinion of men to be a filthy or indecent action. ¶ He doth not seek what is his own, that is, what is for his own profit or advantage only; he hath an eye to the good, and advantage of his brother, as well as to his own profit and advantage. ¶ Such a man is not rashly provoked; he is not without his passions, but he is not governed by his passions, and over-ruled by them to fly out extravagantly against his brother upon every light and trivial occasion; he knows how to bear injuries, and is willing rather to bear lesser wrongs, losses, and injuries, than to do any thing in revenge of himself, or to the more remarkable prejudice of his neighbour. ¶ He thinketh as raff, that is, as unselfish, nothing that may be hurtful and prejudicial to his neighbour. Or else, he doth not rashly suspect his neighbour for doing evil, (which postivity may be the better interpretation) and so to teacheth us, That lightly to take up evil reports of our neighbours, is a violation of Charity; for the man that hath a true love to his brother, though he may believe evil of his brother, and charge him with evil, when it evidently appears to him that he is guilty; yet before he be evident to him, he will not suspect, nor think any such things of him.

* Gal. 10. 3. ¶ Rejoyceth not in iniquity, ¶ but rejoyceth in the truth.

He doth not rejoice in the sinful falls of others. ¶ But he rejoiceth in all truth, and in the success and prospering of him from being credulous to his prejudice. ¶ He endureth all things that a good man ought to endure, that is, any evils done to himself. In the same sense Salomon saith, Prov. 10. 12. Love covereth all charity.

8 Charity never faileth; ¶ but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; ¶ whether there be tongues, they shall cease; ¶ whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

The Apostle, from another Argument, commendeth the Grace of Love, in our hearts, is full go with us into another World, and have its use and exercise there; where there is no prophesying, no speaking with divers Tongues, nor will the Saints shall love God. And this maketh it evident, that by Charity or Love (before mentioned) the Apostle doth not signify mean bounty or beneficence to those that stand in need of those good things of this life, in which we can help them. ¶ By Knowledge here, I understand the communicating of knowledge to the Church by preaching; others, the means we now have by meditating in, and fluting of the Scriptures; others better, of the imperfect degrees of our knowledge, or the way of our procuring it; the following verses would incline us to interpret it of the former, though it be true all of the latter.

9 For we know in part, ¶ and we prophesie in part.

It was truly said, as to things humane, That the greatest part of those things that we know, is the least part of those things which we are ignorant of. A great measure of Divine things is also unknown to us, and the knowledge of them referred to the Resurrection Day of Judgment, Job 11. 10. Now can the communication of our knowledge to the Church, be larger than what we by Prophecy communicate, we having ourselves but a short and imperfect communication of Divine things, we can communicate but an imperfect degree of knowledge to others.

10 But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

But when we come to Heaven, we shall be in such a state, as nothing shall be added to us; then our partial and imperfect knowledge shall be swallowed up in a knowledge perfect and complete.

11 When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; ¶ but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

The Apostle compareth the state of Believers in this life, compared with their state in another life, to the state of a child, compared with that of a man. Look on some, when he is a child, knoweth things imperfectly, and discoureth of them in the same, and according to the knowledge of a child: But when he is grown up, he discoureth of them at another rate, according to the degree of knowledge which he hath acquired by instruction of others, or his own experience and observation. So is with all of us, in this life we, like children, have a poor, low, imperfect knowledge of spiritual things, and accordingly discoure of them: But when we come to Heaven, we shall know them, and discoure of them in a more perfect manner.

12 For ¶ now we see through a glass, ¶ darkly, but then ¶ we shall see face to face: now I know in part, but then I shall know, even as I am also known.

The Apostle pursues his former Theme, comparing the imperfect state of Believers, as to knowledge in this life, with what shall be in the life that is to come. In this life it is as in a Looking glass, (where we only see the images and imperfect representations of things) and darkly, in a riddle; it is but a little knowledge that we have, and what we have we get with a great deal of difficulty, but in Heaven we shall have full knowledge as two men have, who see one another face to face, and shall know God fully, in some measure, though not in the same degree, of the fulness and perfection wherein God knoweth us.

13 And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three: ¶ but the greatest of these is charity.

Take us according to our state in this life, we have, and shall have the exercise of three Graces; Faith, to evidence us to those things which we do not see, either by the eye of Sense or Reason; Hope, by which we wait for the receiving of the greatest, either in respect of its use and profitableness unto us, or in respect of its duration and abiding, (which left the Apostle teacheth chiefly to intend.) Faith shall cease, when we come to the vision of God; and Hope, when we come to the fruition of God in Glory; Love also will cease, as to some acts, but never as to a pleasure and a delighting in God; that will be to Eternity.

CHAP. XIV.

1 Follow after charity, ¶ and desire spiritual gifts, ¶ but rather that ye may prophesie.

That Love to God and your Brethren, concerning which I have been speaking so much, as preferable to all common gifts, follow that with your utmost diligence, as the Perfection which follow you; for it is the same word that I formerly did to signify the violent persecution of Perfection, though I have applied also to things which we ought eagerly to follow, Rom 12. 10.

14-19. But rather, or principally, that you may be able to reveal the Mind and Will of God unto others. Some think by foretelling things to come; but that is not very probable, such an ability of prophesying being given but to few under the New Testament: it is therefore more probable, that he speaketh of an ability to open the Scriptures, either by immediate Revelation (as to which they could use no means but Prayer and an holy Life) or by ordinary Meditation, and study of Scripture. For though the former Species of Prophesying, by prediction of future things, when the truth of it was justified by such Prophecies accompaniment, was of great use to confirm the Doctrine of the Gospel; yet the latter was of greater and more general use for the good of others, which makes that Apostle put them upon the coveting, and earnest desire of that faculty or ability, because, of all others, it made them most eminently and generally useful to others, as well those within the Church, as those without; and thus the Apostle expoundeth himself, vs 2.

2 For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue, ¶ speaketh unto men d, but unto God e; for no man understandeth him f, howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries g.

By a Tongue (for unknown is not in the Greek, but necessarily added by our Translators, for he speaketh of such a Language) he meaneth a Language not known to all, or at least to the most of them that hear him. It may be asked, what unknown Language the Apostle here meaneth? Shall we think that any Psalms or Tracts in the Church of Corinth were to vain, as to preach in the Arabic, Syriac, or Persian Language, to a people who understood only the Greek? Our Learned Lights think this not probable, and that if any had been so vain for ostentation, the Apostle would rather have said them for suffering such an abuse, and have forbidden such further practice, than have given direction, that if any so spoke, he should interpret, as he doth vs 5. He rather thinks therefore, that the Apostle meaneth the Hebrew Tongue; the use of which, though it was by this time much lost through the Jews mixture with other Nations, yet was restored in a great measure to the Guides of Churches, for their better understanding the Scriptures of the Old Testament; and continued amongst the Jews that their resting of the Law in the Synagogues. Now there being many Jews in this Church, and the Service of God being ordinarily in the Jewish Synagogues performed in that Language, it is very probable, that some of these Jews that were Christianized, (to show their skill) might, when they spoke to the whole Church of Corinth, use to speak in Hebrew, though few or none understood that Language. The Apostle saith, he that doth d, he saith not to men, that is, not to those who did not understand that Language, and not to the generality of his Hearers, though possibly here and there some might understand him. ¶ But unto God, who being the Author of all Languages, must necessarily know the significance of all words in them: ¶ For (he saith) scarce any man understood him. ¶ Howbeit he may speak mysterious things to himself, and to the understanding of his own Soul and Spirit. Others think that the possibility, that some who thus spoke, being but the instruments of the holy Spirit, might not themselves understand all which they said; but that is hardly probable.

3 But he that propheseth, speaketh unto men h, to edification i, and exhortation k, and comfort l.

That is, to the understanding of men, and for the good and profit of men. ¶ To Edification, for their increase in knowledge and all habits of Grace. ¶ And Exhortation, to quicken them in the exercise and practice of such duties, as God hath in his Word, required of them. ¶ And for the relief of such as under their burdens, to support and uphold their troubled or wounded Spirits. These expressions make it probable, that the Apostle, by Prophecy in this Text, understandeth ministerial Preaching, which more properly tends to Edification, Exhortation, and Comfort, than the foretelling of things to come.

4 He that speaketh in an unknown tongue, edifieth himself m; but he that propheseth, edifieth the church n.

Knowledge or understanding of the things that any man speaketh, is necessary to the improvement of them, by their being a means to promote Faith and Love; for how shall what is in the heart be known, either my Faith in God or Christ, or my Love to him, if I understand not what they say? Rom 10. 14. How shall men believe on him of whom they have not heard? So then, though he that speaketh in an unknown Tongue, (if he understand what he says) has his own heart affected with what he saith; yet it is not possible he should affect another. But he that preacheth in an intelligible Language and saith to all that hear him, he doth what in him lieth to edify all that hear him.

5 I would that ye all spake with tongues o, but rather that ye prophesied: ¶ for greater p is that which propheseth, than that which speaketh with tongues, except he interpret q, that the church may receive edification r.

I would in this place signifies no more than either I would wish, or I could be content that you could all speak with Tongues, if God pleased. It should seem by this speech of the Apostle, that this speaking in unknown Tongues, was that extraordinary Gift, which, above all others, this Church, or the several Members of it, were proud and ambitious of. S. Paul p But of the two, he rather wished them all to power to open and apply the holy Scriptures to mens understandings and consciences. He addeth the reason, because it was a more honorable gift and work, and made men truly greater. But he adds, Except he interpret, for then he prophesied all. ¶ That, faith might be edified. Whence we learn, 1. That spiritual growth, and proficiency in Divine knowledge and habits of Grace, ought to be the great end of all Preachers; and who doth not promote this as his end, abuseth his Office, and trifies in a Pulpit. 2. That who maketh this his end, will make it his business to the best of his skill, to use such a language, life, and method, as the generality of his Hearers may best understand; and without their understanding, there can be no edifying. And this use of the word of using much Latin, or Greek, or a lofty style, or a Cypriote method, not obvious to poor people in popular Sermons, where the people understand not those languages; or Philosophical ratiocination, before a plain people that understand none of these things. Such preaching is neither justifiable by Reason, nor by the practice either of Christ, or his Apostles.

6 Now, brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you s, except I shall speak to you, either by revelation t, or by knowledge u, or by prophecy v, or by doctrine w.

God hath given me an ability to speak with tongues, I suppose I should come to you speaking in the Arabic, Syriac, or Persian language, what good would it do you? How should in any way profit you? ¶ I except I should speak to you, either by revelation, &c. Some make the four things distinct each from others: others think, that they all signify no more, than the interpreting mentioned in the former verse. Those who by revelation, say, By revelation is meant the Exposition of the Types and Figures of the Old Testaments, or some such Revelation as John had in Patmos; or the expounding the Mysteries of the Gospel. ¶ By Knowledge they understand the knowledge of History, or any other ordinary knowledge, ¶ By Prophecy, the Exposition of the difficult Texts of Scripture, ¶ By Doctrine, ecclesiastical or practical Doctrine. But these are all but uncertain guesses; that it is plainly no more, than if I should come speaking with unknown Tongues, and no way by interpretation make what I say intelligible unto you.

7 And even things without life giving sound, whether pipe, or harp, except they give a distinction in the sounds, how shall it be known what is piped, or sounded? ¶ Or, Testis.

In the Sounds which are artificially made by the use of Wind-Musick, or other Musick, nothing could be understood, if Art had not also devised a distinction in the Sounds; that our Sound should signify one thing, another Sound should signify another thing: So unless the Voice of the Teacher, be significant to, and understood by the person instructed or taught, the Sound is of no use at all.

8 For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle? ¶ y.

The Trumpet is made use of in Battles, and that variously; it is used to give Soldiers notice to march on against the Enemy, and also to sound a Retreat: If there were not a distinction in the one sound, and in the other, how should the Soldier know when to go forward, and when to come back by the sound of it. To instruct them what to do, the Trumpet must not only sound, but sound intelligibly to those that hear it, which it could not, if there were no distinction in the sound.

9 So likewise you, except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? ¶ for ye shall speak in to the air z.

By words υποκειμενα is meant words which signify well to those that hear them; for words may be significant enough to themselves, yet nothing at all significant to those that hear them being unlearned; such sounds of words can contribute nothing to peoples knowledge, but are to much lost labour. This is a Text that deterreth the thoughts of those who affect in preaching, if not the use of Languages, yet the use of a Sylla, or Method, which is not one of many of those who hear them, understand. It is all one to speak in an unknown Tongue, as in a file, or method that people do not understand; and truly, such is the generality of Ministers Hearers, that words most significant to themselves, and to learned Ears, are least significant to them, being unintelligible to be understood; so as they know nothing of what they say, and the Minister doth but, as to the far greater number of people, bear the air (which is a dreadful misfortune.)

The ARGUMENT.

CHAP. I.

* Gal. 1. 3.

Churches of Christ, are what you know must owe and acknowledge to be true; and I hope you shall acknowledge them to be so to the end both of this life and yours.

14 As also you have acknowledged us in part, that * we are your rejoicing, even as * ye also are ours in the day of the Lord Jesus c.

<sup>& 4. 1.</sup>
In part, may either refer to persons, or things; part of you have owned and acknowledged us, though others of you have abused us. Or you have in part, or at some times, owned us, that you had called to bless God for us, and to rejoice, that God ever sent us to preach the Gospel amongst you. And as some have owned us as their joy, or all of you have at some times acknowledged us as such; so you are also our rejoicing; we rejoice that God hath made our labour fruitful to your Souls, and trust in the day when the Lord Jesus shall come to judge the World, you shall be more our rejoicing.

15 And in this confidence I was minded to come to you before, that you might have a * second benefit d.

Being confident that my presence with you, would be means of rejoicing both to you, and also to me, I purposed to come unto you before I went into Macedonia, visiting you shortly in my journey thither, that so you might have a second longer visit in kindness to you. We find, Acts 16. 9. that Paul received his first Call into Macedonia in a Vision; we read again of his passing through Macedonia to go to Jerusalem: The Apostle seemeth to speak here of the latter.

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia and, * to come again unto of Macedonia unto you, and of you to be brought on my way toward Judea e.

He had purposed to take Corinth in his way unto Macedonia, and after he had finished his business in Macedonia, his resolutions were to have come back to Corinth, and to stay with them some time; hoping to have some of their company some part of the way toward Judea: But it seems, though we read this purpose, yet God had otherwise ordered his motions.

17 When I therefore was thus minded, did I life lightness f? Or the things that I purpose, do I purpose according to the flesh g, that with me there should be Yea, yea, and Nay, nay? b.

<sup>f</sup> Though the Apostle doth not in so many words tell us so, yet it is apparent from this verse, that some of the Corinthians had taken occasion from his not coming at this time to Corinth, to charge him with levity and inconstancy; as if his words were not to be regarded. It is very observable, how little these men of the World will take advantage from to vilify and sneer the reputation of Gods faithful Ministers and People. How many others might have promised to be in such a place at such a time, and have failed, without the reproach of the men in the World? Who would have been so charitable to them, as to have excused them, by saying, They spoke according to their present intentions and resolutions; but they were hindered by the Providence of God: but Paul fails, they will interpret it to be from the lightness and inconstancy of their mind. So charitable is the World to its own, so uncharitable to those who are not of the World, but by God called out of the World. From this imposition the Apostle cleareth himself, denying that he used lightness, and that his not coming proceeded from any levity or inconstancy of mind; for he fully did purpose to have come: c. Or did (saith he) I purpose after the manner of carnal men, who make no confidence of their word; I who promise and deny both in a breath? d. Should there be in me such a Spirit, as to speak a thing with my lips which my heart doth not agree to? This less we know, that Truth and Steadiness are things which do highly commend either a Minister, or a Christian; but especially him who is a Minister of the Gospel.

As God is true to his Promises, so he hath taught me to be true to mine. Some make these words not to be merely declarative of the Truth of God, but a kind of an Oath, or calling the God of Truth to witness, that his Word towards them, by which they understood the Gospel, or the Word which he had preached amongst them, had been justified in word, and indeed in the next verse, but to me it seemeth much less strained, to interpret Pauls word in this verse of that word of promise, of which he had before spoken; the promise which he owned before that he had made them of his coming to them. That word, he saith, was not yea, and nay, that is, he did not make it with a quite contrary intention; or when he promised, he secretly intended to have justified his word, and indeed to have come; but the Providence of God, to which all men are subjected, had otherwise ordered him and disposed of him; which was the cause why he had not yet been as good as his word. It is very observable, how careful this great Apostle was to clear himself from any imputation of levity and falshood; and it should teach us to be careful to maintain our reputation in the World, for truth and steadiness.

19 For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me, and Silvanus, and Timotheus k, was not Yea, and Nay, but in him was Yea l.

<sup>k</sup> The Apostle here gives a reason, why he had made Truth and Sincerity so much his business (which reason obligeth us also, who are as much bound as he, to study a conformity to Christ) faith he, The Son of God who was preached among you, that is, Christ Jesus; (who, though (as some observe) is in these Epistles no where called God, but Lord) is here called the Son of God, which can be understood in no other sense, than by Eternal generation; for he is only the Son of God by Adoption, are not the subjects of Ministers preaching. We read of this Sitomon, 1 Thess. 1. 10. 1 Pet. 5. 21. Some think that he was the same person who is called Silas, Acts 16. 19. Of Timothy we have heard before. They were both Ministers, who (as well as Apollus before mentioned) had laboured in the Gospel amongst the Corinthians. Now (saith the Apostle) that Christ whom both I, and other Ministers of the Gospel, have preached to you, is an incorrupt and inconstant, one thing at one time, and in one way, another thing at another time, and in another place. I was only one and the same; his Doctrine was always certain and uniform, and consistent with itself; and our conversation ought to be suitable to him and his Doctrine.

20 For all the promises of God in him are Yea, and in him Amen, unto the glory of God by us m.

<sup>m</sup> As Christ was yea, and all his Doctrine certain and uniform, so all the Promises of God are yea; and the Promises of the Messiah have their yea and Amen in him; all the Promises of Grace, whatsoever is promised to Believers, shall be verified by him, that so God may be glorified, and have from men the honour of being always effectuated a true and faithful God; one that cannot fail and falsify his word. But are the Promises of God yea and Amen in Christ by us? Yes, if the Ministers of the Gospel are the Ministers of Christ in the explication and application of them. The Promises are from the Father, through Christ as the meritorious Cause, and internally applied by the holy Spirit, while they are externally applied by the Ministers of the Gospel.

21 Now he which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God n.

<sup>n</sup> The Anointing here mentioned, is doubtless the same anointed by S. John, 1 John. 2. 20, 27. by which it is understood the holy Spirit: so as Gods anointing his people signifies his giving them his holy Spirit, to dwell and to work in them; which holy Spirit doth itself throughout the whole sal of the Believers; (as the Oil of oil doth poured out upon the heads of the Kings, High Priests, and Prophets.) Believers are said to be anointed, because God hath by his Spirit, given to them, declared, that he hath set them apart to be Kings, and Priests, a Royal Priesthood. The same God also shall sanctify their Souls both in Faith, and Love: and all in Christ; him as our Head, and through him as the meritorious Cause of that Grace wherein we stand. It is observable, the how much fewer vain men may ascribe to the power of the mans Will, yet the blessed Apostle ascribeth all to God; both our Anointing, the first infusion of gracious habits, and also our Establishing. It is Grace by which we stand.

22 Who * hath also sealed us, and * given us the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts o.

<sup>o</sup> The use of a Seal is for confirmation of the thing to which it is affixed; the effect of it is the making the impression of it self upon the Wax: so as sealing us, both in this and other Texts, signifies both the confirmation of the Love of God on our Souls, and also the renewing and Sanctification of our Natures, imprinting the Image of God upon our Souls; making us (as the Apostle Peter faith) partakers of Gods Holy Spirit, but the first Seal is hereby made manifest here. p We have the same expression Chap. 5. 5. Eph. 1. 14. We read of the First-fruits of the Spirit, Rom. 8. 23. The giving unto Believers the holy Spirit, and these earnest (or First-fruits), which are his effects in the Soul, are both the First-fruits, and the Earnest; for as the First-fruits afford the Harvest, and the Earnest is a sure pledge of the harvest, when those who give it are honest and faithful; so the First-fruits habits, wrought in the Soul by the Spirit of Holiness, are a certain pledge of that Glory which shall be the portion of Believers.

23 Moreover, * I call God to record upon my soul, that * I spare you I came not as yet unto Corinth q.

<sup>q</sup> Here a perjured person of an Oath, which is nothing else but a solemn calling of God up, witness the truth of what we speak, whether promising, or threatening. These words, swear ye, swear ye, have the force of an imprecation; but it is in a very serious thing: the Apostle was deeply charged with levity, for not making good his promise in coming; and because he reasonably presumed, that time amongst them would be difficult to believe the true cause; to gain credit with them, he takes a voluntary Oath, which in weighty matters is lawful, (though sometimes it be done not before a Magistrate.) The thing he thus swears is, That he himself had chosen to come out of kindness to them; to spare them (as he placeth it) which may either be understood of their persons, (for he could not have gotte without some charge to them, though he could not standing Salary from them for preaching: or (as others possibly judge better) to spare their persons; for if he had come before, they had reformed those abuses that were amongst them, he saith (as he before saith) have come unto them with a rod.

24 Not for * that we have dominion over your faith r, but are helpers of your joy s: for * by faith ye stand t.

<sup>r</sup> Not (say some) that we pretend or boast of any dominion over you, because of your Faith, as if upon that account we would be chargeable, and exact monies of you: But their interpretation is better, who think that by these words the Apostle removes from himself, and much more from all inferior Ministers, any power of imposing upon people to believe any thing, but what God had in his Word revealed as the object of Faith. He had in the verse before used the Phrase have you, which he thought might found harsh in their ears, and give some occasion to carp at him, as if he deigned some Lordly power over them: No, (saith the Apostle) though I speak of forcing you, I intend no exercise of Lordly power, but only to promote your joy, by removing those things which hinder your true rejoicing. Your profane glorying in God, not good, while these disorders, contrary to the Will of God, are amongst you; and you are full of contentions and divisions, which hinder your comfortable society and communion together, as one Body. t The most of you stand in the Faith, (so some interpret the latter part of the verse.) I should rather make this the sense, By Faith you must stand; if you are in manner of Faith, (as some of this Church had done in the business of the Restoration, as the Apostle told us in the 15. Chapter of the first Epistle) you fall; you no longer stand, than you keep the Faith pure and incorrupt. For, because of their Errors, as to the Restoration, I cannot tell how we make the Apostles sense to be what some Learned men make it to be, that he had nothing to blame in them in matters of Faith, but only in some things relating to Order; and therefore they need not so suspect his exercise of any dominion over their Faith.

CHAP. II.

But I determined this with myself, that I would not come again to you in heaviness u.

<sup>u</sup> One reason why I put off my formerly intended journey to you, was, That I might give you time to repent, and reform those disorders that were amongst you, that my coming to you might neither cause heaviness in you, (seeing me come with a rod,) chide and reprove you; nor yet in my self, who do but delight in censures and chidings, but must yet tell them how sad to have seen such errors and disorders amongst you, as I must by my paternal and Apostolical Authority have corrected.

2 For if I make you sorry, who is he then that maketh me glad, but the same that is made sorry by me? b.

<sup>b</sup> When I am there, I have to refreshment, or joy in that sort of the Citizens who are Pagans, all my joy is in that part which are Christians, and comfort the Church of God in that sort. So as I could have had no pleasure or joy in my being there, if I had had nothing but occasion of sadness and heaviness from you, in whom was all my expectation of any joy or refreshing.

And I wrote this same unto you, lest when I come, I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice, * having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all c.

<sup>c</sup> This hath been the cause of my writing this second Epistle unto you, before I myself came in person, that you might have a time more fully and perfectly to reform their things as we write amongst you, and I have formerly given you notice of; lest when I come, instead of rejoicing in you, as I ought to do, by having any just occasion to do so, I might meet with what would give me anything but trouble and sadness; which would not only be grievous to me, but would be contrary to your duty, for I ought to rejoice in you, and you ought to be to behave yourselves, that I may have cause to rejoice in you. And I have confidence in the most of you, as in all you who are sincere, that you would all be glad to see me glad and cheerful, rejoicing in my society with you.

A For out of much affliction and anguish of heart,

I wrote unto you with many tears, not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you d.

<sup>d</sup> Every man that deriveth from God, is in this made partaker of the Divine Nature, that like as God doth not give willingly, nor willing to his office or trust reposed in him, he be under an obligation sometimes to speak unwill to his chastise and punish others for their Errors; yet he will so do it, as one that hath no pleasure and delight in it. This the good Judge weepeth, or at least sheweth sorrow and compassion, when he giveth Sentence against Malefactors. So (saith the great Apostle) to whom God had committed a care over all the Christian Churches, he saw a necessity of reproofing this Church that was at Corinth, for enduring the iniquities present in their Communion, and not calling him out; for their Errors about the Restoration, for their Divisions, Schisms, and Contentions, &c. but he protested, that he did this with many tears; and that he did not sile in hypocrite, but forced from the anguish and affliction of his heart; that he had nothing less in his design, than to put them to any excessive grief or trouble, but that he was moved out of a Principle of Love and good Will, both to the welfare of their whole Church, and to the good of the particular Souls of those that were the Members of that Church. Ministers or others do no good by their censures or reproofs, if they do not so dispense them, as people may love that what they do, or say, is out of their abundant love to their Souls.

But if any hath caused grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part: that I may not overcharge you all f.

<sup>f</sup> The Particle [if] doth not here signify any doubting or uncertainty; (for the Incestuous person, of whom the Apostle here, and in the following verses, speaks, had certainly caused grief both to the Apostle, and also to the Church whereof he was a Member.) It is as much as although; or the Apostle (speaking in this form, because by his repentance his grief was somewhat allayed. But how doth the Apostle say, That he had grieved him in part. Some think he saith so, because the Apostles grief for his sin, was now turned into joy by his repentance: Others think, that those words, in part, signify that it was not the whole Church that had grieved him, but only a part of it, viz. this incestuous person, and those who took part with him. Others say, the Apostle saith, in part, to let us know, that it was not a grief to him only, but to them also. The last would bid us pay fair for the sake of the place; if the Apostle had not in his first Epistle, Chap. 2. 8. 9. said, That they were puffed up, and had no mourning. So as I judge the former more like to be the sense of the Apostle, viz. That it was not the whole Church that had grieved him, but a part of it only; and therefore the next words are added, f That I may not overcharge you all, that is, that I might not load you all with that imputation, as if you were all involved in it.

<sup>g</sup> This verse maketh it clear, that by my, vs. 5. he meant the incestuous person, mentioned in the first Epistle, Chap. 4. whom he had ordered to be cast out, and delivered to Satan; which (as appears from this verse) they had done; which is the punishment mentioned in this verse. They who think, that the punishment here mentioned was not Excommunication, but another being delivered to Satan, and cited by him: 1. They gave Question, viz. Whether delivering to Satan in this place signifies any more, than a casting of the person out of Christs Kingdom on Earth (which is his Church) and making him one of the World again, of which Satan is the God? 2. They seem not to consider, That if this Church had delivered him to Satan, they could have done no more: So as the Apostle would not have said, Sufficient is this punishment, when it was the greatest that they could inflict. Some object, That it is not probable that the Apostle (had he been cast out of the Communion of the Church, for so notorious a crime) would have given order for his being reformed in so short a time, as was that betwixt his writing the first, and this his second Epistle. 1. Some think, that he was as yet only under a suspension, and that Church had not proceeded to Excommunication: This Opinion is favoured by the Greek word here used, which is ἐπιτίμια, the gentler of all the words in use in that Language to express punishment by. 2. Though in the times following the Apostles, a longer time was set after Excommunication, for testifying the repentance of sinners before their restoration, yet this was so in the Apostles time, it is more than apparent. Forbids it might be in order afterwards, when, as the Church multiplied, so in more abundance; and they might from many experiences of relapses, be quickened to make such Orders. 3. The Gift of discerning Spirits was more usual in the Apostles times than afterward; that though in following times, when the Apostles were dead, and the extraordinary Gift of discerning Spirits was failed or abated, the Church being able any other way to judge of the truth of sinners repentance, than from their change god life and conversion, which asked time, might let a longer time for such Penitents; yet there might not be the same reason for the Apostles doing it. 4. Notwithstanding anything that appears, there might be the distance of a year or two between Paul writing these two Epistles. b Who these many were, by whom the Apostle said this punishment was inflicted, is a little disputed; whether the Presbytery, or the Community. Their Opinion (seemeth to me) both, who think that the Officers of the Church of Corinth heard and judged of matters of Faith, and reported it to the Community; but we was not cast without the consent and approbation of the Community.

7 So that contrariwise, ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him; withal, lest perchance you should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow k.

l Forgive him in this place doth not signify the taking away, or remitting of the guilt of sin, (that is, the work, not man), but remitting of the punishment. And this maketh that probable, That they had not as yet proceeded with this person to excommunication; only kept him (like a suspected Leper, without the Camp) out of a Communion with the Church: Or if they had actually cast him out, forgiving here can signify nothing, but restoring him again to a full Communion with them; which is also the comforting which is here mentioned. k It is plain from hence, That the Apostle had intelligence that this person expected abundance sorrow; otherwise he would not have expressed his fear of his being drowned in his own tears. Though the condition of such, at this day, is sad enough, who are regularly cast out of the Communion of any true Church of Christ, for crimes which deserve such a punishment; yet we must imagine it much sadder than this. For Christians are multiplied, whole Cities and Nations of Christians; and though a person be cast out of a Church, yet it is not to taken notice of, but he may yet have converse with other Christians, &c. but there, the greater part of the City being Heathens, and the whole Countries of Achaia and Greece (contiguous to it) being Heathens; one cast out of the Communion of the Church, (if he had the least taste of Religion) could not but be deeply afflicted to be in such a case, as he was here. Heathens and professed Idolaters would keep him company, or have any intimacy with him.

8 Wherefore I beseech you, that ye would confirm your love towards him l.

l That you would restore him to a Communion with you in your Church-Assemblies, and take him into the bosom of your Church again, and be (as before) friendly towards him. The word which we translate confirm is καταστήσω, which signifies authoritatively to establish or confirm. Some observe, That the Apostle speaks to them as judges, to gain their good opinion, and make them more pliable, whereas he might authoritatively have absolved him. It is hard to say, what Authority the Apostles had or had not, to excommunicate; but we want a Precedent in holy Writ of the Apostles, or any of their Paul, exercising such a Power, as being able; and so in fact, the proof of any such act against scandalous persons. Paul, 1 Cor. 5, writes to the Church of Corinth to do it, and doth only himself command them to do their duty, and here again he writeth to them to forgive him, and restore him. There being no mention, either in the former Epistle, or here, of any Command that the infectious person should put away his Writ taken uncharitably; or that he did any such thing in testimony of his Repentance, makes it very probable, that his crime was not using his Fatherly Wife, as his Harlot; had it been otherwise, we should, very probably, have read of something in the one or the other place, signifying such a Command of the Apostle, or the thing done by him.

9 For to this end also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things m.

m As for other ends, so for this also I wrote my former Epistle to you, and I now write this second Epistle to you also, that I might have an experiment of you, what regard you would show to that Apostolical Authority, wherewith God had invested me.

10 To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also: for if I forgive any thing, to whom I forgive it for your sakes I forgive it, || in the person of Christ n.

n The word is often repeated in this verse, and translated forgive, is ἀφίημι, which signifies to give, or graze, or do a kindness, as well as to forgive. So as it needeth not always to be interpreted of any judicial act of Absolution. If ye see reason to remit any thing of the punishment inflicted upon the infectious person, I am satisfied with what you do; I shall take no offence at you for it. If I have shewed any favour to any person, I shall be ready to shew the same favour to you, if you shall have fallen under my reproof and chastisement. It hath been for your sakes, for the good and advantage of your Church, or upon their motion and intercession; and I have done it sincerely in the sight of Christ (the Greek is, in the face of Christ.)

p As I have done it in kindness to you, so I have also done it for the advantage both of that person, who is so forgiven, and of your whole Church, which is concerned in the welfare, or miscarriage of every individual Member. Left Satan should get advantage of us; The Greek is, That we be not overcome by Satan: ἀναστρέφω properly signifies to get again, or to gain a superiority, to get the upper hand. The advantage Satan was like to get by their continuing severity to this offender, we either by his over-much grief, or by the hardening of his Heart: So as he seeing no probability to be restored again to his Communion with the Church, should be exposed, either to temptations to some desperate course, (which are often the effects of minds full of sorrow and affliction) or else to the effects of Idolatry or looseness, in giving up himself to the Devil in the Kingdom of the World, because he could not be admitted into the Church, which is the Kingdom of Christ. p For (saith the Apostle) We are not ignorant of his devices, οὐκ ἄγνοοι, his thoughts and counsels, how he continually walketh about like a roaring Lion, seeking whom he may devour; and like an old Serpent, seeking whom and how he may deceive. This lets us know, with how much more caution, those who are troubled with the Souls of others, ought to manage their Reproof, or severe dealings with others; the end of all this is the amendment and reformation of such persons, not their spiritual ruin and destruction: and all Reproofs and Censures must be given, and made, and managed with reference to that end. We have not only the concern of Gods Glory (which is the main) to be looked at, but the good of all their Souls, whom we are to deal with. We cannot confute Gods Glory; who hath our confuting him. Thus he deserveth not the death of a sinner, but rather that he should turn from his wickedness, and live: and therefore we must have an Eye about us, and beneath us, to the Devil, as well as above us to God; and prudently judge how such effective and harsh actions may be done by us, that in the mean time Satan get no advantage, and we lose the Souls of those with whom we deal, instead of gaining them to God; which is the main and principal End we ought in all those actions to aim at, 1 Cor. 4: 4. so 1 Tim. 1: 20.

12 Furthermore, * when I came to Troas to preach Christs Gospel, * and a door was opened unto me of the Lord q.

q This Travels was either to the City, or the whole Country called Troas, or Ilion, or the latter Philippi, Acts 20: 6, 7, and of his living being there, 2 Tim. 4: 13. He tells us, That the business which he went thither, was to preach the Gospel; for it was none the Apostles business to fly, as fixed Ministers, in any one place, but to carry the Gospel up and down the World to several places; which they did by virtue of their general Commission to go, preach, and baptize all Nations; though sometimes they had a more special Call and Commission, as Paul had, to go into Macedonia. The door opened, either signified that the Lord gave him leave to preach, or the great success which he found him in his work; which he elsewhere calleth an Effectual door.

13 I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus my brother; but taking my leave of them, I went from thence into Macedonia r.

r He tells us, That when he came there, he was much troubled, because he did not find his Brother Titus, where the humility of this great Apostle is considerable, in that he desired not to call Titus (a person, though a Minister, yet inferior to him as an Apostle) Brother. Several reasons are given of Pauls trouble. That which is most probable, is, That he had expected at Troas to have met with Titus come from Corinth, from whom he might more perfectly have understood the affairs of that Church: not finding him there, he tells us, he went forward into Macedonia; whither, after the uproar at Ephesus, he designed to go, (as we read Acts 20: 1.) He was first into Greece, and stayed there three months, intending to come to Macedonia in his return, v. 3.

14 Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ s, and maketh manifest the favour of his knowledge by us in every place r.

s The Translation of the Greek here, is not certain: For to translate it word for word, it is, But thanks be to God always, triumphing us in Christ; which is uncertain, whereas, triumphing us in Christ; which makes it uncertain, whether there be not a defect of Preposition; upon the supply of which, it would be, Who triumpheth over us in Christ; having subdued our hearts to the Kingdom and Obedience of Christ. But the most Interpreters rather agree with our Translation, and think the sense of the Apostle is, Who maketh us to triumph. In the Hebrew there is a Conjunction, where the Active Verb is used to make another to do a thing; and there are several instances brought by Learned men that testify; that which the Active Verb in the Greek also look that sense; that which cometh nearest it in the Original in holy Writ, is, That, Rom. 8: 26, where the Spirit is said to make intercession for us, because it causeth us to make intercession. According to this, the sense is, Blessed be God, who, though we meet with many Enemies, yet through Christ he maketh us more than Conquerors, Rom. 8: 27; so that we are not overcome by any of our Enemies, but, on the contrary, we triumph over them as conquerors, by us. 1 And this by manifesting by us in every place the favour of the Knowledge of Christ; that is, of the Gospel. He calleth it a Savour, either with allusion to that sweet perfume Ointment, with which the High-Priest, under the Law, was anointed, Exod. 30, 23. Plal. 133: 2. or with reference to the favour used also under the Law; or with relation to Salomon's expiation, Cant. 1, where we read of the Savour of Christs good Ointments, and that his Name is as anointed, perfumed, by the Saviour of the Knowledge of Christ here mentioned, the Apostle plainly meaneth the Reputation or good report that the Gospel had in every place: see Heb. 14: 7.

15 For we are unto God a sweet favour of Christ t, in them that are saved, and in them that perish u. t For the God whom we serve, doth not judge of us by our faithfulness and diligence in his work. We give unto all a good favour by our Doctrine; and our labours are a sweet favour in the nostrils of God, whatever effects they have upon Souls. God accepteth of our labours as to good men, to whom we are Instruments of Eternal Life and Salvation; and though others despise the Gospel, and refuse the favour of God, yet as to them also we are a sweet favour in the nostrils of God: Though first be not saved (saith the Prophet) yet it shall be glorified. It is not for any neglect in us, as to our duty, if any perils, but from their own wilfulness and perverseness.

16 * To the one we are the favour of death unto death; and to the other the favour of life unto life w: And * who is sufficient for these things x.

x As sweet Smells, which are so free pleasant and comfortable, are to others pernicious and deadly, so it is with the favour of the Gospel. The Report which we in all places make of Christ, to some, through their unbelief and hardness of heart, and fondness of their lusts, proveth but the favour of death unto death; hardening their hearts to their eternal ruin and destruction: but to such, who being ordained to Eternal Life, believe our reports, and embrace the Gospel, and live up to the Precepts and Rule of it, our preaching proves a cause of spiritual and of Eternal Life, which doth leadeth. x And O how great work is this? What man? What Angel is sufficient for it? It is a mighty work to preach the Gospel as we ought to preach it.

17 For we are not as many, * which || corrupt the word of God; but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God, I speak w || in Christ y.

y Left the false Apostles and Teachers in this Church should fight this Exclamation of the Apostles, and the pretended difficulty he made of the Ministerial work; and the Apostle adds these words, I confess (saith he) it is no very difficult thing to speak of Christ, and pretend to preach and do as much as I do; but there are many καταστάσεις, we translate it, steps the Word; the Greek word signifies, To follow one by another for money, and because such kind of people make no conscience to deceive, cheat, and deal fraudulently with their Customers: it is sometimes used to signify corrupting or deceiving. We are not (saith the Apostle) of the number of those who in preaching merely serve their own bellies, and turn the Church into a Tavern or Whetting-house, making a gain of the Gospel, and discounting a little while in a Pulpit for gain; and so making no conscience, either what they speak, or how they speak. But we speak by Authority from Christ, and in Christ Name; clothed with his Authority, and as his Ambassadors; and so dare not say any thing unto people, and deliver to his people what he never gave us any Commission to speak; nor yet to speak whatever cometh at our tongues end, but we remember, that we are in the sight of God, and speak w from God of God; and that not fraudulently, but sincerely; sincerely aiming at the Glory of God in what we do, and the Salvation of the Souls of men to whom we speak. This is a great work, first to consult the Mind and Will of God, and then to set it out by study and meditation; then faithfully to communicate it unto people, without any vain or corrupt mixtures (which do but adulterate the Word preached) when to apply it to the consciences of those that hear us. Who is sufficient for these things? that is, to discharge the Office of the Ministry in the preaching of the Gospel, as men ought to preach it.

CHAP. III.

1 * DO we begin again to commend our selves a, or need we, as some others, epistles of commendation to you, or letters of commendation from you? b.

a The Apostle, in the former Epistle, had spoken much in the vindication of himself and of his Office; he saith reason to return again to something of the like Discourse, being provoked by the many imputations, which the false Apostles and Teachers, in this Church, had laid upon him: therefore he saith, Do we begin again? Or else these words may have a special reference to the last verse of the former Chapter, where he had commended himself, as being none of those who corrupted the Word of God; but had preached as of God, and in the sight of God. b No (saith the Apostle) though some others stand in need of commendatory Letters, and are very careful to procure them, (by which others he very probably means the false Apostles and Teachers, which were Pauls great Enemies) yet I trust I need not any Letters commendatory to recommend me to you, any more than Letters of recommendation from you to commend me unto any other Churches of Christ.

2 * Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, * 1 Cor. 9: 2, 3 known and read of all men c.

c Your Christianity, and embracing of the Gospel of Christ, your Faith and Holiness, are instead of an Epistle to me, to let the World know, both with what Faithfulness, and with what Blessing of God, and success upon my labours, I have preached the Gospel; And you are such an Epistle as I do not carry about in my pocket, or lay up in my Closet, but it is written in my heart, where I carry continually both a thankful and honourable remembrance of you. Nor are you only taken notice of by me as a famous Church, so to the pleasing and watering of which God hath blessed my labours, and the labours of other Ministers; but (as he saith to the Romans, Chap. 16) Our faith is spoken of throughout all the world; so he saith here, You are our Epistle, known and read of all men; that is, all Christians take notice of you as a Church to which God hath particularly blessed my Ministry; so as I need no other recommendation, than what I have from your testimony, and the proficiency you have made in the Gospel. Nothing but commendation as a Minister, as the proficiency of his people.

3 Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us d, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God, * Exod. 24: 12. * not in tables of stone, but in || fleshly tables of the heart e.

f He had told them before, That they were his Epistle, his Epistle recommended; the change which God had wrought in their hearts, did more recommend him, than all the Epistles in the World could; but here he tells them, That they were the Epistle of Christ; it was Christ that wrote his Law in their hearts, (which Writing was that which commended the Apostle) who himself had but a Ministerial in the work, nor was it a Writing with ink, but the impression of the Spirit of the living God. e An Epistle, not written in Tables of Stone, but in the Fleshly Tables of the heart; he alludeth to the writing of the Law, which was written in Tables of Stone, Exod. 31: 18, 30, and also to the Promiser, Etch. 11: 19, 26, 28, as a work of Grace in the hearts of these Corinthians, which recommended the Apostle, was wrought by Christ; and the Apostles were but Ministers in the working of it; it was a work more admirable than the writing of the Law in Tables of Stone, and this work (he saith) was manifestly declared.

4 And such trust have we through Christ to Godward f.

g We are not infallible in the case; but I tell you what confidence we have, hoping in God concerning you, through the Merits of Jesus Christ.

5 * Not that we are sufficient of our selves; but * our sufficiency is of God g.

h I would not have you think, that we judge our selves sufficient to work a change in the hearts of men; we are so far from that, that we have no sufficiency so much as to think one good thought (which is the lowest humane act) though the subject upon which the Apostle is here discoursing, be a sufficiency to work a work of Grace in the hearts of men; yet here is a strong proof to prove the impotency of mans Will unto any thing that is truly and spiritually good: For though the Apostle declares here his own and all other Ministers insufficiency to the change of men's hearts, yet he proveth it by an Argument, consisting from the lesser to the greater; for if they be not sufficient of themselves, and of themselves, they are then much less sufficient to be great a work, as the Conversion of Souls. Nor doth that term [as of ourselves] any thing alter the matter; for if we can think good thoughts, in any sense, at our selves, it is not of God, in the sense which the Apostle is speaking of, Who is not here speaking of God, as the God of Nature, (from whom indeed we derive our power of thinking) but as the God of Grace, from whom we derive our power of thinking good thoughts, and such as are truly and spiritually good. The Apostle determineth all our sufficiency to spiritually good actions.

pride, railing, denying of your selves in some lawful things wherein you may have offended, or the too free use of which may have been to you occasions of offending. P By these Acts, though some of you have been to be blamed, yet the Body of you have shewed your selves clear of this matter; or though all of you have been formerly guilty of some things, I have charged you with, yet you have cleared your selves both to God, (who imputeth no sin to him that confesseth his sin, and forsaketh it) and to me, who am abundantly satisfied with your declared sorrow, repentance, and reformation.

12 Wherefore though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cause that had done the wrong r, but that our care for you in the sight of God might appear to you s.

g For the cause of him that had abused his Father's Wife, not out of any particular hatred or ill will I had to him, r nor for the sake of him whose Wife was so abused; r nor for my own sake who had been so abused, and suffered wrong by you; s but only out of a love to your Souls, and a care I had for you, that in all things you might approve your selves unto God. Or possibly this Text is more generally to be interpreted, Without respect either to the incestuous person in particular, or to his Father; and the sense of the Verse no more than this. Though in my former Epistle I wrote something sharply to you, yet I did it not in any passion, nor was I drawn aside by any prejudice or hatred of any person, nor out of any partial affection to any, as to any thing for which I blamed you; but out of that general love and affection which I have to you all, which produceth in me a care of, and a solicitude for you, that you might do no evil, which care I was willing should appear to you.

13 Therefore we were comforted in your comfort; r joy, and exceedingly the more joyed we for the joy of Titus, because his spirit was refreshed by you all u.

t The comfort which your Letters brought us, and so came from you; or the comfort which you received upon your reformation of those things which were amiss amongst you. u And we also joyed for the joy that Titus conceived, upon his understanding of your affairs, and your ready obedience to the Epistle which I wrote to you; such is the union bewixt the true Members of Christ, that they are comforted with one another's comfort, and afflicted with one another's sorrows and griefs.

14 For if I have boasted any thing to him of you, I am not ashamed; but as we speak all things to you in truth, even so our boasting which I made before Titus, is found a truth w.

w The Apostle here multiplieth expressions to sweeten the Carinthians, by all manner of ways declaring his value for, and affection towards them. It appeareth by this, that the Apostle had at some time before spoken something to Titus in commendation of this Church of Corinth, which he here calleth a boasting of them; he now again boasting, that he had said nothing but the truth, which Titus had experienced, and reported to him.

15 And his inward affection is more abundant towards you, whilst he remembreth the obedience of you all, how with fear and trembling you received him x.

y By your obedience to my admonitions and exhortations, you have not only obliged me in a debt of Love to you, but Titus also; who joyfully remembereth, with what fear and trembling you received him, left he should find any thing amongst you that should grieve and offend him.

* Chap. 2. 9.
Phil. 2. 12.
2 Thess. 3. 4.
Philim. 21.

16 I rejoice therefore that I have confidence in you in all things y.
z That I can write and speak to you with confidence, that you will hearken to my admonitions and exhortations, and that I can confidently boast and glory concerning you.

CHAP. VIII.

1 *M*oreover, brethren, we do you to wit of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia a.

a The Apostle in this Chapter proceedeth to a new Argument, viz. The proffing of this Church to alls of Charity. This is that which he here calleth the Grace of God, bestowed on the Churches of Macedonia, putting the Cause for the Effect. Bounty or liberality to the poor Saints and Members of Christ (as such) flowing from that habit of Love, by which men are taught of God to love one another; for though men, from a natural Goodness, or habit of moral Vertue, may relieve men as men, compassionate persons in misery; yet none, from any such Principle, do good to any Members of the Household of Faith, as such; such rather feel from them the effects of their hatred, in taking what is their own from them.

2 How that in a great trial of afflictions b, the abundance of their joy c, and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality d.

b How great the afflictions of the Churches in Macedonia, both from the Jews and Pagans, may be read in Chap. 16, & 17. of the Acts. Afflictions are called Trials, because under them God maketh a trial of our Faith, Patience, and Constancy; and the Devil also, ordinarily by them, to reach to our lusts and corruptions. c God made them to have peace and joy in the Holy Ghost to abound in them under their trials, that though they were poor, (deeply poor) yet they abounded in the riches of liberality; not minding the necessities of their poor Brethren, in proportion to their abilities, or as might have been expected from men under their circumstances, but shewing themselves rich in their liberality, though poor in their Estates, and as to what they had of this World's goods.

3 For to their power e, I bear record, ye, and beyond their power they were willing of themselves e.

e Two things the Apostle commendeth in the Charity of the Churches of Macedonia. First, the Quantity of their Gifts, which, was to their power, viz. (on God knowledge) beyond what they were able. Secondly, their Freedom in them; as they did not need the Apostles Exhortations and Arguments, but did it of themselves freely and cheerfully.

4 Praying us with much intreaty, that we would receive the gift f, and take upon us the fellowship of ministering to the Saints g.

f Bringing what they had freely collected amongst themselves to the Apostles, and impugning them to receive it at their hands, g and to take upon them the work of distributing it.

5 And this they did, not as we hoped h, but first gave themselves to the Lord, and unto us, by the will of God i.

h We might have hoped for something from them, though they were in that poor afflicted condition; but what they brought was much beyond what we could hope for, or expect from them. Or else this Phrase may refer to what followeth: i They did not only bring us their Gift, but they also gave up themselves to us, to be disposed of for the good of the Church, according to the Will of God; for they first gave themselves up to the Lord, devoting themselves to his Service and Glory, and then to us, the Will of God for ruling and directing them.

6 Inasmuch that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same grace also k.

k The first Grace, in this place signifies no more than the same Gift, or the same good Work, in collecting in the Church of Corinth. If by Grace here be understood the Grace of God, the Cause is put for the Effect, (as we had it in the first Verse) but the Gift being not here added, possibly it may have been translated Gift or free Contribution; for how a Minister should finish the Grace of God, is hard to conceive, and the Phrase is at best very hard; but he may be an instrument for completing a good work, which is done from an habit of Divine Graces, by Exhortations and Arguments, which he may use to press the performance of it. Titus (if I remember) had been diligent in some other places to make this Collection, going to Corinth; the Apostle presseth him to go on with it there also.

7 Therefore, as ye abound in every thing l, in faith m, in utterance n, and in knowledge o, and in all diligence p, and in your love to us q, for that ye abound in this grace also q.

l Though the Apostle made little use of Oratory in his ordinary Discourses and Epistles, yet he knew how to use it when it might be of probable advantage for the Ends which he aimed at, viz. the glory of God, and the good of the Souls that were under his care. He did not turn Divinity into mere words, and Rhetorical flourishes; yet he made use of these sometimes, as a waiting Maid to Divinity. Being therefore to press upon these Carinthians this great duty of Charity, he infinitely himself into them, by telling them, that they abounded in all other spiritual habits. m Faith, by which they had both readily adhered to the truth of Gospel Propositions, and also received Christ. n Utterance, by which they were enabled either to speak with Tongues, or to God in Prayer, or to men by Prophecy and Exhortation. o Knowledge both of things Divine, and humane. p And in Love to the Ministers of the Gospel, which if it did not appear in all, yet it did in many of them. q And from hence he fetcheth an Argument to press them to be complex in this habit of Grace. The force of the Apostles Argument lies in the duty of all Christians, to live after perfection, and that natural desire, which is in all generous people, to be perfect in that good of which they have a taste in less perfect degrees.

8 I speak not by commandment r, but by observation of the forwardness of others s, and by approving the sincerity of your love r.

r I do

r I do not speak in an imperious way, as one that commandeth you; or rather God hath no where given an express command as to the quantity of what you should give: s but the forwarding of others makes me thus speak to you, as not being willing you should in good works come behind any Churches. And that I might prove the sincerity of your love, 2d God, to me, and to the poor afflicted Saints that are in Judea. Though God hath not directed the particular Summs we should give to those that are in need, yet he hath given us general Rules; That we should give as God hath prospered us, 1 Cor. 16. 2. And so as there may be some equality, (as the Apostle speaketh v. 14.) So as the sincerity of our love to God dependeth in some measure upon the proportion of what we give at his command, to doth also the sincerity of our love to those poor Members of Christ that are in want; that there may be a moderate supply for their want, from our abundance.

9 For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ u, that though he was rich w, yet for your sakes he became poor x, that ye through his poverty might be rich y.

u Call to mind the free love of your Lord and Master Jesus Christ, which you know, believing the Gospel, which gives you a new account of it, and having in your own souls experienced the blessed effects of it. w He was rich, being the Heir of all things, the Lord of the whole Creation, Heb. 1. 2. all things were put under his feet. x Yet that he might accomplish the work of your Redemption, and purchase his Fathers love for you, he took upon him the form of a Servant, stripped himself of his Robes of Glory, and clothed himself with the Rags of Flesh, denied himself in the use of his Creatures, had not where to lay down his head, was maintained from alms, people ministering to him of their Substance. y And all this that you might be made rich; with the Riches of Grace and Glory, rich in the love of God, and in the habits of Divine Grace; which was all effected by his poverty, by his making himself of no reputation, and humbling himself. If after your knowledge of this, by receiving and believing the Gospel, and experiencing this in those Riches of Spiritual Gifts and Graces, and hopes in that Glory which you have, you shall yet be found selfish-hearted in compassionate the poverty and afflicted state of his poor Members, or strait-handed in ministering unto them, how will you in any measure answer this great love, or conform to this great Example?

10 And herein i give my advice z: For z this is expedient for you, who have begun before not only to do, but to be forward a year ago z.

z Giving to those that were in want, was matter of Precept, (it being what the law of God and Nature did require); but giving as the Macedonians had given, not only so, but beyond their ability, was not so. Or possibly, the Apostles saying, I give my advice, doth not suppose what he advised to be no commanded duty; Friends may advise us to what is our duty to do, for which the Apostles, this is expedient for you; for your profit, honour and reputation. A precept alone ought to oblige us to this doing of the thing commanded, but the profit, credit, and honour of the action adds an edge to the duty, and lyeth us under a double obligation; the first of obedience to God, the second, of being wise for our selves. b The Apostle proveth the expediency of it from the concern of their reputation in it; that they might not be thought to have gone backward, or to become worse of well doing, in regard they had begun this charitable work some time before. c Gift. But how could he here be put doing before willing, (for so it is in the Grk. not only to do but also to will?) Some tell us that they hate willing, or putting things after, which should be in order before, are usual in holy Writ; but possibly it is better answered by others, that to will here doth not signify the mere intention of the will, but a forwardness; (thus our Translators understand it, and therefore translate it to be forward.) or a spontaneous willingness, without argument, but by others to persuade them to it. So as the sense is this, you not only began to do the thing a year ago, but you did it of your own accord without our Exhortations and Arguments, of your own free mind and will: So as if you should now be behind hand, it would be a reproach to you. This sense is favoured by the next Verse, where he calls a willing, he calls a readiness to will there.

11 Now therefore perform the doing of it c, that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which you have d.

d Ye shewed your gifts some time since free to will the thing which I am now pressing you unto, you have now opportunity to do it, and the Example of other Churches going before you in the doing of it; new your selves now constant by the doing of it. e That seeing God hath given you something of this World's Goods, and that in proportions beyond your poor Brethren, as you pretend to a great readiness a great desire to relieve them, it may be by your performance justified that was not all a mere pretence.

12 For e if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to what a man hath, and not according to what he hath not e.

e He had before directed them to give out of that which they had, that is, in a proportion to what God had blessed them with; for he tells them that it is the willing mind which God accepteth, not the quantity of the Gift. God doth not require of people things not in their power; yet bare volentes or pretended willings are not accepted; there must be an acting according to our power to justify the sincerity of our willing mind; and men vainly pretend to will that towards the performance of us things that they are not able to perform, yet he requireth of us the purging forth of our power in doing what he hath commanded us, so far as we are able; which indeed can alone justify the willingness of our mind to be more than a mere pretence. A present impotency, if contradicted by our own fault, will not excuse us from the performance of those Acts as to which it doth extend, to which some are bound by the just Laws of God or men; but it is very unreasonable to think, it should excuse us as to those Acts to which it doth not extend, and as to which it cannot be pleaded.

13 For I mean not that other men be eased, and you burdened f.

f I do not press you to such proportions in giving as should make your afflicted Brethren rich, and you poor.

14 But by an equality g: that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want h, that their abundance may be also a supply for your want i, that there may be equality k.

g But only to bring you and them to some equality, that they might not starve, while you have plenty, and what you may well enough spare. h I do not urge you to make you necessary a supply for others wants. I would only have a supply for their wants out of your abundance. i That their abundance may also be a supply for yours: Some by their abundance understand their abundance in the good things of this life: They are now indistressed by reason of the great Famine that is in Judea, or by reason of the great storm of persecution that is there raised against Christians; yet God may turn the Scales, he may send a Famine in those parts where you live, and there may be plenty in Judea; then their abundance may supply your wants. Others interpret their abundance, of the abounding of their Grace, which may quicken them up to pray for you, for the supply of such Grace to you as you stand in need of. k That there may be an equality, they being Instruments of Spiritual Blessings to you, as you are Instruments of temporal Blessings and good things to them.

15 As it is written, He that had gathered much, had nothing over; and he that had gathered little, had no lack l.

l This Quotation would incline us to think, that the abundance mentioned in the latter part of the former Verse, as also the equality mentioned in the end of it, is rather to be understood with reference to the good thing of this life, than with reference to Spiritual Blessings; or to temporal, and spiritual together, balancing one another to make an equality. For certainly it is, that this Quotation referreth to Manna, which was the Bread God afforded for the Bodies of his people in the Wilderness, though considered specially it is rightly by the Apostle called spiritual bread, 1 Cor. 10. 3, signifying that Bread which came down from Heaven, which helped could not give (as Christ tells us, John. 6. 50, 58.) These words are quoted from Ex. 16. 18, though more agreeably to the Septuagint than to our translation. The History is this. The Manna being fallen, the Text Ex. 16. 17, that some gathered more, some less; but it so fell out, by the Providence of God ordering it, that when they came, and gathered what they had gathered, He that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack. Now of this the Apostle makes an argument to press the Carinthians to this charitable Aid. The force of which lies in this. As it was in the case of Manna; in there were some that gathered more, others that gathered less, yet all had enough; So it will be as to the riches of the World that men gather, though some gather more, and others gather less, yet men will find, that those that have gathered little (have less Estates than others) using what they have to the glory of God, and according to the divine rule, will have no lack: And those that have gathered much, if they do not distribute it according to the will of God, will find that they have nothing over; God will shrink their heap into some equality to those whom at Gods command they would not relieve, Ecc. 4. 10. He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver. The wisdom of the Divine Providence, hath not ordained hoarding, but have all men equal in their portions of the good things of this life; but he hath so blessed such an equality as every one may call, (unless he or she that will not work) either from the sweat of their own faces, or from the charity of others. Besides, nature craveth no great things, but is satisfied with a little. So as he that hath gathered little shall have no lack, if he can but moderate the excesses of his Appetite. And he that hath gathered much hath nothing over, what is either necessary for himself causeth Thanksgivings to God by many persons, and upon many accounts, (which he further openeth in the following verses)

13 Whilt by the experiment of this ministration x, they glorifie God for your professed subjetion unto the gospel of Christ y, and for your liberal distribution unto them, and unto all men z.
x Upon their receiving of what you sent them. y They will see how ready you are to obey the Gospel of Christ, (which hath in so many places called you to this duty) and this will give them occasion of blessing God, who in the day of his power, hath made such a willing people, willing at Gods command and in the confederation of the Love of Christ, to strip themselves to cloath his naked Members, to refrain their own appetites to feed them. The Grace of God bestowed on others, is matter of great thanksgiving to every gracious heart. z Another cause of thanksgiving will be Gods moving your hearts towards them; they will see reason to bless God, who hath raised them up such friends in their great straits, so as they will both bless God for your behalf, for his Grace bestowed on you, that out of the Gentils he hath picked out a people to be subject to the Law of his Gospel; and also on their own behalf, that God hath stirred up a people to compassionate them in their deep distresses.

14 And by their prayer for you, which long after you for the exceeding grace of God in you a.
a Another way, by which the Glory of God will be promoted, by your simple, free, and liberal Contribution, is, that by this he will have more Prayers, which also will redound to your advantage, for it will procure Prayers for you: and not Prayers only, but a great deal of fervent Love; so as they will long after your good, and after your acquaintance, when they shall receive such an Thanksgiving of the exceeding Grace of God in you.

15 Thanks be unto God for his unspokeable gift b.
b Interpreters are not agreed what the Apostle here meaneth by Gods unspokeable Gift. Some by it understand Christ, who is the Gift of God, and the Fountain of all Grace: and to this, the Epistle (unspokeable) doth best agree. Others understand the Gospel, by which the hearts of men are subdued, effectually afflicted, and inclined to obey the Will of God.
Others think it to be understood of that habit of brotherly Love, which from the Spirit of Christ, by the Gospel, was wrought in the hearts of these Corinthians. If the latter be meant, (to which the most incline) the Apostle declareth his firm persuasion of them, that they would obey him in this thing, and give God thanks for giving them such an increase of the Communion which he made, though a year before he had declared their readiness to it, I should rather incline to interpret it concerning Christ; and that the Apostle concludeth this whole Discourse about contributing to the relief of these poor Members of Christ, with a general Doxology, or blessing of God for Jesus Christ, who is the Author and Finisher of all Grace, without such a particular reference to the ceding Discourse; yet hereby hinting to them, that without the influence of his Grace they would, they could do nothing.

CHAP. X.

1 Now I Paul my self beseech you by the meekness, and gentleness of Christ a, who || in presence am bafe among you b, but being absent, am bold towards you c.

His first Epistle, (who in his former Epistle had blamed this Church for so many things, and dealt sharply with them) in this Epistle, hath treated them as if they had been a people that had had no faults, or none but what in obedience to his former Epistle they had reformed, and become a new lump: which argues, that the major part of the Members of it were a good and an obedient people, by whose prevalence Paul they had reformed much that was amiss. But in this last Chapter, to let us know that there was yet some of the old leaven amongst them, he useth another style; telling us, that by his former Epistle there was amongst them another (though possibly the latter) Party who had much vilified him; and justifying himself against their whisperings and calumnies, not without some sharp rebukes upon them.

a Meekness respecteth the Spirit or inward man, being a Virtue that moderateth inward anger and rash passions. Gentleness more respecteth the outward conversation. The Apostle men-tioneth both these Vertues, as eminent in Christ, who is our great Example, and to whom all Christians are bound to be conformable. b He here repeateth the words of those who,
in this Church, reproached him; they reported him a man, when he was there in presence with them, was lowly and humble enough: c but when he was absent from them, then he wrote imperiously and confidently enough. The sense of the words is plainly this, I Paul (of whom some amongst you say, That when I am there with you I am low and humble enough, even to some degrees of baseness; but when I am absent, then I write like a Lord, boldly and confidently) I beseech you to consider the temper of our common Lord and Saviour, to remember how free he was from rash anger and passion, how gentle he was in his conversation, and by the obligation that is upon you, to love and practise those Vertues which you saw, or have heard of, in him.

2 But I beseech you, that I may not be bold when I am present d, with that confidence which with I think to be bold against some, which || I think of us as if we walked according to the flesh e.

d It is true (saith the Apostle) when I have been with you,
I have made it my business to behave my self with all obliging freeness, not using that Authority which I might have used; and I beseech you, as not to blame me for that, (remembering the meekness and gentleness of Christ) so by your conversation not to force me to another kind of conversation amongst you; that you would not constrain me to a feverish behaviour towards you when I am present with you, so to be so free with some of us, as at present I am resolved to be; such, I mean, as have traduced me, as if I walked according to the flesh, that is, not guided by the holy Spirit of God, and the directions of his Word, but by some external, carnal considerations, respecting my own profit, pleasure, or reputation, indulging my own passions or corrupt affections. walking after the flesh is opposed to a walking after the Spirit, Rom. 8. 4. He walketh after the flesh, to whom the fleshly appetite is the Principle, Rule, and End of his Actions: as he, on the contrary, to whom those habit of Grace, which are wrought in the Soul by the holy Spirit, or the Spirit himself more immediately by his motions or impulses, are the Principle of his Actions; and the Word dictated by the Spirit, is the Rule of his Actions; and the Glory of God is the End of his Actions, is truly said to walk after the Spirit.

3 For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh f.

f There is a great difference betwixt walking in the flesh, and waring after the flesh. The best of men in this life walk in the flesh, as their Souls are not in a state of separation from, but united with the body; but they do not walk after the flesh, as their fleshly appetite is not the Principle of their actions, nor the satisfaction of it the End of their actions. The Apostle, in the latter part of the Verse, changeth the Verb; in the former part he called our conversation, a walking; in the latter part he calleth it a Warring; which he describeth Negatively in this Verse, Positively in the following Verses. In calling it a Warring, he lets us know that it is, and will be a life of opposition, in which a Christian will have many Enemies: though his hand be against none, yet many hands will be against him. But though they be men of flesh and contrition, in a Passive sense, yet they are not in an Active sense, according to the usual notion of warring: For they war not after the flesh, neither as fleshly men, nor in a carnal fleshly manner, nor yet for fleshly ends. The men of the World war for their honour and glory, or for revenge and satisfaction of their lusts, or for the enlarging of their Territories and Dominions; but we do not thus war after the flesh.

g (For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty || through God, * to the pulling down of strong holds h.)

g As our End is spiritual, so are our Means: the Means by which we manage our spiritual Fight, are spiritual. Whether by these Weapons he meaneth the Word of God, and his preaching the Gospel, or the Centures of the Church duly administered; it is true, they are not of a carnal nature, or fitted to the subduing of mens bodies, and bringing them into subjection; they are of a spiritual nature, and have their effects upon the mind and inward parts of a man; yet b through the countenance of Divine Grace, there is in them a mighty force and power, to pull down strong holds. By which Metaphorical expression he understandeth whatsoever opposed the Gospel, and seemeth to defend and uphold men in their sinful courses; subduing the Will of man, which is so strong an hold, that all the power of Hell cannot storm it.

h Casting down || imaginations i, and every high thing that exalteth it self against the knowledge of God k, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ l.

i Arguments, Reasonings: k and every high thing, every height of reasoning, which exalteth it self against the knowledge of God. The great Troublers of this Church of Corinth were the Heathen Philosophers, and such as had sucked in their Principles; with whose Notions, which were Conclusions drawn from Reason not sanctified and subdued to the Will of God, divers Doctrines of Faith would not agree. S Paul tells them, that the Gospel (which was the great weapon of his warfare) through the Power of God, was mighty to pull down the strong holds, which Unbelief had in the carnal Understanding of men, to overthrow their Reasonings, the heights of them, which exalted themselves against the Doctrine of Faith. I And to bring into captivity, every thought or counsel into a captivity to the obedience of Christ; so as whatsoever was revealed by the Apostles from the Spirit of God, men readily agreed and yielded obedience to; what-ever their thoughts or reasonings about it were,

were, they gave credit to it: not because it appeared rational to them, but upon the divine authority of the Revelation (submitting their reason to that, and believing it the most rational thing in the World, that they should believe what God affirmed, and do what God commanded, and this blessed effect the Gospel had in all those who heartily embraced it: for indeed to give an assent to a Proposition, merely upon a sensible or rational demonstration, is no Faith; that is, no divine Faith; I truly to believe, in a divine sense, is to assent to a Proposition upon the credit of the Revelation, though we cannot make out by our Reason: and this it is to have our thoughts brought into a Captivity to the Obedience of Christ. That whereas Reason, as it is since the Fall subjected in man, riseth up in Arms against several divine Propositions; and faith, How can this things be? How can one be three, and three one? How can this the divine and humane nature, and one in person? How can the dead rise? &c. The Believer saith, verum Dei &c. tacet, readeth these things and others of the like nature, plinly affords credit to these things merely because God hath said them, and cannot fly. Thus our sanctus thoughts, counsels, reasonings, deliberations, conclusions, all the product of our understanding, is brought into a Captivity to the Obedience of Christ; and reason itself, which is the Governess and Mistress of the Soul of man, is made a Captive to Revelation. And in this appeared the mighty power of the Weapons of the Apostles Warfare.

6 And having in readiness to revenge all disobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled m.

m The Apostle certainly means by this, Excommunication; which was the Rod which he had before mentioned: asking them, if they would he should come unto them with a Rod;
This Rod he there threatneth them with; telling them, that he had another Weapon of his warfare of a spiritual nature, to be used against such as preferred themselves to be Believers, but walked disorderly; Only he at present spared them, because though a great part of them were obedient, yet there were some amongst them of whose Obedience he could not yet glory; but yet he hoped well, and therefore should wait, until by the use of all fair means (such as Exhortations, and Arguments) he had reduced as many of them, as he could unto Obedience. But that being done, God had intrusted him with another Weapon, with which he would, in the name and by the authority of God, revenge his glory upon the disobedience of others. Herein the Apostle hath set a Rule and a Pattern to all Churches, where as multitudes that walk disorderly; not to be too hasty in Excommunicating them, but to proceed gradually; first using all fair means, and using with all patience for the reducing them to their duty, who will by any gentle, and fair means be reduced; and then revenging the honour and glory of God only upon such as will not be reclaimed.

7 Do ye look on things after the outward appearance n? || As if any man trust to himself that he is Christs, let him of himself think this again, that as he is Christs, even so we are Christs p.

n Are ye so weak as to judge of persons and things merely after their Faces, pretences, or outward appearances? and so to magnify these false Apostles and Teachers, merely because they seem forth, and magnify themselves; or because they take up a great breath in the World, and live in a little state and splen-dour? o If any of them do judge that he is the servant, or the Minister of Christ, why should he not think the same of me? what hath he to say to prove his relation to Christ more than I have? what hath he to glory in upon that account more than I have?

8 For though I should boast somewhat more of our authority (which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction q) *
I should not be ashamed r.

q Here is a remarkable Maxime, a Rule from which all Ecclesiastical Superiors ought to measure their actions. God hath given to no Superior a power for destruction of the flock, but only for edification; so as that no such can pretend to a power received from God, to do, or exact any thing which may impair the salvation of the Souls put under their trust; they ought to command or exact nothing, not to do any thing, but what may probably tend to the promoting of peoples Faith, and Holiness, and Eternal Salvation. This Maxime the Apostle puts in a parenthesis in this Verse, to shew what he had before spoken, concerning his readiness to revenge the disobedience of such who should appear to be stubborn and contumacious. b Because he tells them, he should not be ashamed if he did both these things, more of a just and due authority than the false Apostles and Teachers had, who vilified him; for he was an Apostle, and had a more immediate authority than they who were ordinary Teachers.

9 That I may not seem as if I would terrify you by letters s.

t This was one imputation upon the Apostle (as we may learn by the next Verse.) I tell you (saith the Apostle) that I have an Authority, and a further Authority than those who vilified me can pretend unto: but I also tell you, I have no Authority to do any harm to any of you; all the Authority I have is for your Edification, as much as lyeth in me to promote the business of your Salvation; so that I need not be reported as one that went about to terrify you by my Letters; yet I know there are some who lo represent me unto you.

10 For his letters (t say they) are weighty and t powerful, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible f.

f There are some amongst you that tell you, that indeed (when absent) I write fervently, and with authority; but when I am there with you, neither my behaviour, nor my speech, speaks any such Authority.

11 Let such a one think this, that such as we are in word, by letters when we are absent, such will we be also in deed when we are present u.

u I would have no such person think so of me, for he shall find me the same in deed when I come, that I have spoke my self to be by my Letters. I do not write vainly, merely to terrify you, but what I truly intend to do; and when I come he shall find that I will do.

12 For we dare not make our selves of the number, or compare our selves with some that commend themselves: but they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves amongst themselves, are || not wise w.

w This whole Verse is a reflection upon the false Teachers of the Church of Corinth, from whose manners Paul purgeth himself. I (saith he) durst not, as some others, magnify my self, nor compare my self with those that do so. Neither is it any wisdom in them to commend and despise others, in comparison of themselves; for observe, what measures they take, they only measure themselves by themselves, and compare themselves amongst themselves, that is, with Birds of their own Feather, such as are like unto themselves, and of their own Faction and Party: which no wise men would do.

13 But we will not boast of things without our measure, but according to the measure of the rule || or, li-which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you.

x The Apostle may be understood, as speaking both of Spiritual gifts, and also of his Travails to the several places whither he had gone preaching the Gospel. He reflecteth still upon the false teachers who were crept into this Church, who (as it should seem) had much boasted of their gifts and abilities, and of their labours, and successes. In opposition to wisdom (he saith) that he boasted not without his measure, or (as it is in the Greek analogos) unmeasurable things; but he kept himself within the measure of the rule; that is, according to that regula-ture which God hath set for us. Which measure extendeth even to you. You have those amongst you who boast unmeasurably of the gifts which they have, and of the great things which they do; I durst not do so (saith the Apostle) God hath given me a measure and a rule, according to that I have acted, and of those things only I will glory. And in my so doing I can boast of you, for to you my measure and rule hath reached. God hath made me an instrument to raise him up a Church amongst you.

14 For we stretch not our selves beyond our measure, as though we reached not unto you, for we are come as far as to you also, in preaching the Gospel of Christ y.

y For in our boasting of you as our Converts, amongst whom I have preached the Gospel, and God hath made my preaching successful; we do not stretch our selves beyond our measure, and argue that to you (which belongeth not to us: for we have come as far as unto you, and that God hath given our Labours success amongst you).

15 Not boasting of things without our measure, thats is, of other mens labours, but having hope,
when your faith is increased, that we shall be || enlarged by you, according to our rule abundantly z.

z So that though we have boasted of you, we have not boasted of things without our measure; that is of things that are not, or (as the Apostle expounds himself) of things that were not done by him but by other men; for his line did reach unto them, and his Labours had been employed, and made successful amongst them. And he declares his hope, that their faith should have had its full success amongst them; and that their faith should be increased; (either by the addition of more persons to the Church amongst them, or by the perfecting of their Faith, and other Graces.) they, who were Apostles and the Ministers of the Gospel to them, should by it be magnified, or made great:
to wit by their means, who using much Navigation, would have opportunities

For outward appearance.

opportunities to commend the Gospel, and the Ministry of it, to other people, among whom they should come: Wherein yet they should not exceed their Rule; for though ordinary Ministers be fixed in particular Churches and places, yet the Apostles were to go and preach the Gospel over the whole World, being tied to no certain people or places.

16 To preach the gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in another mans line of things made ready to our hand.

The Apostle here expoundeth what he meant by the term maquid or intarged in the preceding verse, viz. to have a door opened to preach the Gospel in places whither it was not yet come. God honoureth persons when he maketh them so influential to bring any to an acquaintance with, and to the embracing of his Gospel, who formerly had been ignorant of it, and not acquainted with it. He here seemeth to reflect on the false Teachers crept into this Church, who had nothing to boast in but a pretended building upon other mens foundations, and carrying on a work by others made ready to their hands; and seemeth to prefer the work of Conversion, and an instrumentality in that, before an instrumentality merely in edification, and carrying on the work of God already begun in peoples Souls.

17 But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

But we have none of us any thing to glory in; neither I Paul who plant, nor Apollos that watereth; whether God maketh use of us as the first Planters of the Gospel, or as Instruments to carry on the work of the Gospel already planned, we have nothing of our own to glory in. God gives the increase; we have therefore no reason to glory in our selves, or in our own performances, but only to give thanks to God, who maketh use of us poor earthly Vessels to carry about and distribute that heavenly Treasure, by which he maketh Souls rich in Faith and good Works; all that we do is only instrumentally; God is all, and in all, as our primary Efficiency.

18 For, not he that commendeth himself, is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.

A Solomon, Prov. 27. 2. faith, Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thy own lips. Self commendation is an ungrateful found to ingratiate ones self, but always hath the worst opinion of him for such boasting; but this Text speaketh of a higher approbation, viz. from God. No man is approved of God for his speaking well of himself; the business is, who they are who approve themselves in the work which God hath committed to them; to whom the Lord will say, well done, good and faithful servants; to whom the Apostle refers both himself, and those who magnified themselves, but vilified him.

CHAP. XI.

1 Would to God you could bear with me a little in my folly; and indeed I bear with me.

That which the Apostle here calls his Folly, was his speaking so much in his own commendation; which indeed is no better than folly, unless there be a great reason; which was here; for it was the false Teachers, vilifying his Person and Office, that put him upon it. The Prov. in the latter part of the Verse, may be read either imprimitively, (and so we translate it) as if it were an intreaty of them to excuse him in speaking so much good of himself; or indicatively, you do bear with me.

2 For I am jealous over you with godly jealousy; for I have espoused you to one husband, &c. that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ.

Jealousy is a passion in a person which makes him impatient of any Rival or Partner in the thing or person beloved. The Apostle tells them, that he was jealous over them, and thereby lets them know, that he so passionately loved them, as that he was not patient that any should pretend more kindness to them than he had for them; and whilst, that he had some fear of them, lest they should be perverted and drawn away from the simplicity of the Gospel; upon this account he calls it a godly Jealousy. For (saith he) I have been instrumental to bring you to Christ; this he calls an espousing of them, (the union of persons with Christ being express in Scripture under the notion of a Marriage, Eph. 5. 32, &c.) And he expresseth his earnest desire to present them to Christ incorrupted, like a chaste Virgin.

3 But I fear lest by any means as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.

In all Jealousy there is a mixture of love and fear: the Apostles love to this Church, together with his earnest desire to presecute them in the Day of Judgment unto Christ pure and in-corrupted, caused him to write; because he was afraid, lest that as the Serpent by his subtilty deceived Eve, so some false Seducers should corrupt them, and so withdraw them from the simplicity of their Faith in Christ, and obedience to him. This danger was partly from the Pagan Philosophers, mixing their Philosophical Notions with the plain Doctrine of the Gospel; and partly, from some that were tenacious of the Judicial Rites, and would not understand the abolition of the Ceremonial Law.

4 For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him.

How our Translators have interpreted καταβαλεται, you may well bear, I cannot tell: the words manifestly are to be interpreted, you have well born, and so are plainly a reflection upon some in this Church, who had patiently endured false Teachers, who had preached other Doctrine than what he had preached. And this the Apostle gives as a reason of his fear, lest they should be corrupted and drawn away from the simplicity of the Gospel. This certainly is more obviously the sense of the words, than what others incline to, who make the sense this: If any other come to you, who could preach to you a better Jesus, a more excellent Saviour than we have done; or a more excellent Spirit than whom you have received; or a more excellent Doctrine than the Doctrine of the Gospel, which we have preached, you might bear with him. For (in no pretence to interpret the Prov as in the Potential Mood, it is manifestly the Indicative Mood, and declareth, not what they might do, but what they had done; which made the Apostle jealous of them, lest they should be perverted. And our Saviour, Job. 8. 43, hath taught us, That those who with the most difficulty receive those who come to them in Gods Name, are always most easy to receive those who come in their own name, without any due Authority or Commission from God.

5 For I suppose, I was not a whit behind the very chiefest of the apostles.

The Apostle, doubtless, meant those that were the true Apostles of our Lords; those who were immediately sent out by him to preach the Gospel, behind whom the Apostle was not, either in respect of ministerial Gifts and Graces, or in respect of Labours, or in respect of the Success which God had given him in his work. Our Method, that false Teachers used to vilify Paul, was, by magnifying some others of the Apostles above him, and preferring them before him; which he makes him bare here, and in Gal. 2. & Rom. 11. 13, to magnify his Office, by shewing them, there was no reason why they should make a difference between him and other Apostles: for he had the same immediate Call, was intrusted with the same Power, furnished and adorned with the same Gifts, (as he elsewhere saith) he had been more than they all; nor had God been wanting in giving him success in his labours, proportionable to the chiefest of them. So as he was not a whit behind them.

6 But though I be rude in speech, &c. yet not in knowledge; & but we have been thoroughly made manifest among you in all things.

Admit (saith the Apostle) that I be no Orator, speaking to you in high language, or in a neat flow and phrase; either to give you facility that way, or if I have, yet chusing rather to speak plainly and home to your Conscience, than flatterly to tickle your ears with a fine sound and chiming of words. I yet I bless God, I am not defective in knowledge; and, as God hath enlightened me with a large knowledge of his Will, I have communicated to you the whole Counsel of God. And in all things, which may declare me an Apostle, one sent of Christ about the business of the Gospel, I have been made manifest among you; preaching among them the whole Doctrine of the Gospel, and having been an Instrument to convert many of you from Paganism to Christianity.

7 Have I committed an offence in abusing my self, that you might be exalted I, because I have preached to you the gospel of God freely?

What is it that hath made you take such offence? feeling you cannot say, that either in my Call, or in my Gifts and Graces, or in my Labours, or in the success of my labours, I have been inferior to the chiefest of the Apostles? Doth this offend you, that for your sake I have velleid my Authority, and departed from my Right; which makes me of you say, I am hinc in present. Is it for my putting you to no charge in preaching the Gospel? This was a thing wherein he gloried, and told them, 1 Cor. 9. 6, 12, 14, that he would rather die, than have his glorying void in this particular.

8 I have robbed other churches, taking wages of them, to do you service.

He interpreteth the term of Robbing other Churches, by taking wages of them, (which indeed is no robbery, as he had proved 1 Cor. 9.) All the robbery that was in it lay in this, That that his maintenance, in strictness of Right, should have been proportionably from this, as well as from other Churches; but for some reasons, (which he thinks fit to conceal) he refused to receive any thing from this Church; & spared them, and lived upon the maintenance he had from other Churches, while he was doing them service. Either he saw the Members of this Church were poor, or that there were some in this Church who would sooner have taken advantage to reproach him for it, and so have hindered the success of his Gospel. Whatever it was that caused the Apostle to do it, certain it is, that he did it, and made it a great piece of his glorying.

And when I was present with you, and wanted, I was chargeable to no man: for that which was lacking to me, the brethren that came from Macedonia, supplied, and in all things I have kept my self from being burdensome unto you, and so will I keep my self.

The word which we translate Chargeable, signifies to be a burden to man: Or (as others) I was not my self more burdened in any thing. If we take it in the first mentioned sense, it lets us see a reason why Paul refused to take wages of the Church of Corinth, lest he should cool and lessen them as to the receiving of the Gospel, when they saw it would be chargeable to them. If, in the latter sense, the Apostle seems to reflect upon such whom wages only edged to their work, who preached merely for gain and filthy lucre. To distinguish with them, and laboured amongst them in preaching the Gospel, he put them to no charge; yet he was not negligent in his work, but as laborious as those who did take wages. As to himself, he had want enough whilst he was amongst them; but the Providence of God ordered him a supply from the Churches of Macedonia, and by that means he kept himself from being burdensome to them. And he tells them, so he was relieved that he would fill be.

10 As the truth of Christ is in me, I shall not stop me of this boasting in the regions of Achaia.

The Apostle often repeateth this, glorying much in it, that in this Region of Achaia, he had preached the Gospel without charge to the hearers; he did also at Thessalonica, 2 Thess. 3. 6, 7. But concerning them, he saith, what he no where saith of the Corinthians, that they received the word in much affliction; which might (probably) be the cause. It is most likely that he either discerned this people to be more covetous, and too much lovers of their money; or that there was a general among them, who, if he had taken wages for his labours, would have reproached him as one that was an hireling, and who did all that he did for money. And indeed, himself seemeth in the next Verse to give this as a reason.

11 Wherefore? because I love you not? God knoweth.

Can you possibly interpret my not being chargeable to you, as proceeding from a want of love in me to you? God knoweth the contrary.

12 But what I do, that I will do, &c. that I may cut off occasion from them which desire occasion, that wherein they glory, they may be found even as we.

I know (saith the Apostle) that there are some amongst you, who, out of their hatred to me, would seek any occasion to asperse me to vilify themselves. If I had (as I might) have taken wages amongst you for my labours, they would either have taken occasion from it to have aspersed me (as doing what I did from a mercenary spirit) or at least to have justified themselves in their exactions upon you. I had a mind to prevent any such occasions of boasting. It should seem by these words that false Teachers in this Church, being (probably) men of Estates, required no maintenance of the People; and would have taken advantage against the Apostle, if he had taken any. Or possibly some others exalted upon them unreasonably; who, had Paul taken wages, would have justified themselves by his Example. The Apostle therefore was resolved to cut off from them any pretence, or occasion of boasting; and to do what every one of them did, in spurning the Corinthians as to the business of their Purse.

13 For such are false apostles, &c. transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ.

That is, persons pretending to be sent of Christ, but were indeed never sent of him. & deceitful workers; who, in their work is but to cheat and deceive you; and that, both with reference to their Call and Authority which they pretend to; and also to the Doctrine which they bring. They were never Apostles of Christ, only they put themselves into such a shape and form, that they might have more advantage to deceive.

14 And no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.

It is not at all to be admired, that the Emulists of Satan dissemble, and pretend themselves to be what they are not, for even Satan himself, who is the prince of darkness, in order to the deceiving and seducing of Souls, transformeth himself into an angel of light; that is, puts on the appearance and form of a good Angel. He calls them angels of light, because they were wont to appear in a lightsome brightness, or because of that glory in which they beheld the Face of God; or because of those great measures of Heavenly knowledge which those blessed Spirits have. All tempted Souls have an Experiment of this; for none is tempted to Evil under the appearance of Evil; (Evil is Evil being what a reasonable Soul cannot be coerced to.) The Devil therefore, in all his temptations to sin, though his end be to ruin and destroy, yet he appears as an angel of light; moving the Soul to Evil under the notion and appearance of good.

15 Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works.

It is no wonder if there be like Servants, like Masters; And as the Devil, in order to the deceiving of Souls, pretends to what he is not, viz. a friend to them: So those who seek to their own profit, not your good, they themselves to be his Ministers, driving the false design with him, also do the like, and change their shapes, pretending themselves to be Ministers of the Gospel, and to aim at the good of your Souls, by teaching you the way of righteousness, a but God will one day judge of their works, and their reward at last will be according to their works.

16 I say again, Let no man think me a fool; if otherwise, yet as a fool I receive me, that I may boast my self a little.

I know that he, who is much in magnifying and praising himself, ordinarily is judged to be a Fool; but though I do so, let me not lie under that imputation. There is a time for all things; a time for a man to cease from his own praises, and a time for him to praise himself. The time for the latter, is, when the glory of God, or our own just Vindication is concerned; both which concerned here: the Apostle was out of measure vilified by these false Apostles; and the glory of God was eminently concerned, that to great an Apostle and Instrument in promoting the Gospel, should not be exposed to contempt, as a mean and delpicable person, or as an knopker and Deceiver. But if you will judge me a Fool, be it so; Yet receive me as such while I boast a little.

17 That which I speak, I speak it not after the Lord, &c. but as they were foolishly in this confidence of boasting.

I do not pretend to have any special command of God; to speak what I shall now say my own commendation; God hath left that to our liberty, which we may use or not use, as circumstances of time, place and occasion direct. Or I do so speak according to the ordinary practice of Christians and Ministers of the Gospel; whose ordinary practice is to abate and vilify, not to exalt and set forth themselves, according to the more general Rules of the word. Yet (what the Apostle faith) is not contrary to the Lords, or to the directions of his Word; which hath no where commanded us to vilify our selves, or to conceal what God hath wrought in us, and by us. This my confident boasting hath an appearance of foolishness in it, though really it be not so; for nothing can be truly called Foolishness, which hath a direct and immediate tendency to the glory of God, and is designed for that End.

18 Seeing that many glory after the flesh, I will glory also.

By the flesh is meant, carnal and external things; which though they be the gifts and favours of God, yet do not at all commend a man to God. The Apostle faith, there are many that glory after the flesh; and there needs must be such in all places; because there are many that walk after the flesh: now it is but natural for men to boast and glory in their attainments; which hath been the business of their lives to pursue after. Such there were doubtless in this famous Church; who gloried that they were Native Jews, or in their riches, or in their knowledge and learning. Now though (saith the Apostle) I know there is nothing in these things truly to be gloried in, yet others glorying in them, I will glory also; and let them know, that if

¶ The second Epistle to the Corinthians, was written from Philippi a City of Macedonia, by Titus and Lucas.

But it is observed, that even in this Subscription there is a certain evidence, that the Subscriptions of the Epistles are no part of Canonical Writ; for in some Greek Copies it is said to be sent by Paul, and Timothy; whereas Paul was the Writer of it. not the Messenger, and in Macedonia when it was sent; and Timothy is joined with him in the writing, Ch. 1. 1.

ANNO-TA-

GALATIANS.

The ARGUMENT.

Galatia, (to the Churches in which Country this Epistle is directed) is by all agreed to be a part of Asia the Lesser, now under the power of the Turks, and by them called Chiangare; Geographers tell us, it is bounded on the West by Phrygia the greater, (now called German) Bithynia (now called Beckland) and Asia propria a Country of Anatolia. On the South with Pisidia (now called Veriageli) and Liconia (now called Cogni.) On the East with Cappadocia, (now called Amasia.) And on the North with Paphlagonia (now called Bolli.) The whole Country was anciently called Gallo-Grecia, from some French, who leaving their Country, and coming to inhabit there gave it that name. It had in it several Cities, amongst which Geographers reckon Ancyra, Synopa, Pompeiopolis, Claudiopolis, Nicopolis, Laodicea to which also some count Antioch. When or by whose ministry this People first received the Gospel, we do not read. Paul Travelled thither, Acts 16. 6. but was at that time forbidden of the Holy Ghost to Preach there, but Acts 18. 23. it is said, that when he had spent some time at Antioch, he departed and went over all the Country of Galatia, and Phrygia in order, strengthening all the Disciples. This was about two years after that he was forbidden to Preach there, in which time, the Gospel was planted, and Disciples made in this Country.

At what time Paul wrote this Epistle to them is very uncertain; some think, that it was wrote much at the same time when the Epistle to the Romans was wrote (the argument being much the same with that of that Epistle.) Others think it was written at Rome during his last imprisonment, because he saith ch. 6. 17. That he bare in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus. It is manifest that it was written at some distance of time after the first plantation of the Gospel there, for the Enemy had had time to sow Tares.

The Occasion of writing it, was partly to reprove the members of this Church, for their Apostacy from the Doctrine of the Gospel, as to Justification; partly to set them right again in it, and to vindicate himself from the aspersions and imputations which their false Teachers had cast upon him, in order to their better success with their new Doctrine.

The New Doctrine brought in by these false Teachers, was the necessity of Circumcision, and other works of the Law, as well as Faith in Christ, in order to the Justification of the sinner before God; which they pressed rather upon a politick, than any religious consideration, as being the way to avoid that Persecution which at that time attended all Christians: from which imputation, those who were Circumcised, though they also professed faith in Christ saved themselves. To buy up themselves they visited the Apostle Paul to these Churches, as being no Apostle, one that had learned all which he knew from James and Peter, and John; yet varied from them as to his Doctrine and Practice, yea from himself also.

The two first Chapters of this Epistle are mostly spent in the Apostles vindication of himself; proving himself to be a true Apostle, and not to have learned what he taught, from Peter or James or John, but that he had it by Revelation from Jesus Christ. In the two following Chapters he proves the Doctrine of Justification by Faith in Christ, (in opposition to the Justification taught by these false Teachers, by the works of the Law,) by various arguments. In the two last Chapters, he presseth their standing fast in the liberty, wherewith Christ had made them free, together with several other things, which are the common duties of all Christians. Then closeth his Epistle, with praying Grace, Mercy and Peace, to be their, and all true Christians portion.

CHAP. I.

Paul an Apostle, not of men, neither by man, but * by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead &c.

1 The term Apostle in its native signification signifieth no more than one sent, in its Ecclesiastical use, it signifies one extraordinarily sent to Preach the Gospel; of these some were sent either more immediately by Christ, (as the twelve were sent, Matth. 10. 1. Mar. 3. 14. Luk. 9. 1.) or more mediately, as Matthias who was sent by the suffrage of the other Apostles to supply the place of Judas, Acts 1. 25, 26. and Barnabas and Silas and others were. Paul saith he was sent not of men, not by men, that is, not merely; for he was also sent by men to his particular Province, Acts 14. but he was not immediately sent by Jesus Christ, (as we read Acts chap. 9. and 26. 14, 15, 16, 17, of which also he gives us an account in this Chap. v. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, none of them till he had been a preacher of the Gospel to the wild Arabians three years. <sup>a</sup> And then he returned to Damascus; the word is Arabs, which is by some observed to signify his being compelled to return, (as they judge) by some persecution raised amongst the Heathens; but of this the Scripture saith nothing.

Or, Itinerary.

18 Then after three years, I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

<sup>f</sup> These three years were spent partly in Arabia, partly at Damascus, whither he returned; and his being there, was not idle, but as Lake informs us, preached Christ in the Synagogue, Acts 9. 22, 26. <sup>g</sup> Confessed the Jews, proving that this was the very Christ, which made the Jews also count him for a heretic: Here it is that he disputed them, by being let down over the wall in a basket. Then he went to Jerusalem, where his Convention, and call to preach the Gospel was not heard of; (possibly in regard to the remoteness of Arabia, where he had spent most of those three years; or in regard to the troubled state of the Church at Jerusalem at this time,) inasmuch that the Disciples were afraid to admit him to join with them, until Barnabas had given Testimony concerning him, Acts 9. 27. <sup>h</sup> As well as here that he stayed there, but fifteen days during which time, Lake Acts 9. 29, tells us, He laboured in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the Grecians.

19 But other of the apostles saw none, save James the Lord's brother.

* Mark 6. 3.

<sup>i</sup> The Apostles were at this time scattered, either through the persecution, or for the fulfilling of the work of their Apostleship; (so as probably there were at this time no more of the Apostles at Jerusalem, except Peter, and James the Lord's brother, who is here called the Brother of our Lord.) It is generally thought; according to the Hebrew idiom, who means to call near himself, James is here called the Brother, which Paul made use of, Jerusalem, the brethren others, (as we shall hear in the next chapter;) but that was several years after this his first journey thither.

* Rom. 9. 1.

20 Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God I lie not.

<sup>k</sup> Whether those words (before God) make this sentence an Oath, is not material to determine, they are either, an Oath, or a very serious Affirmation. If the Apostle designed to call God for a witness, to the correspondence of his words, with the truth of the things he had spoken, they made up an affirmation Oath, which was lawful enough (though without solemnity) in so serious a matter as this, where the Apostle is vindicating his Apostleship; (from some Acts of which probably he had no witness at hand to produce; but they may be understood by the supplement of I truth, or I say the only as a form of serious assertion, to confirm the truth of what he asserted.) He minds them, that he was sensible of Gods presence in all places, and particular, taking notice of the presence of God, as being spoken before him, who knew that what he spoke was truth.

21 Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria, and Cilicia.

<sup>l</sup> After that I came from Jerusalem, I came into the Country of Syria, probably not to Damascus, the chief City of Syria, (where he had to narrow an escape in a basket) but into the Country parts of Syria; (for Syria lay in the way betwixt Judea and Cilicia.) It appears by Acts 9. 30, that Paul was designed for Tarsus, his Native place; where we are also told, that the Brethren concluded him to Cesarea, which stood upon the confines of Syria. It is probable that he stayed some time at Tarsus; for there Barnabas found him, Acts 11. 25. <sup>m</sup> And brought him to Antioch; so that Paul had not fifteen days at Jerusalem to converse with the Apostles, and in that time he saw none of them, but Peter, and James the Son of Alphaeus.

22 And was unknown by face unto the churches of Judea, which were in Christ.

<sup>n</sup> To be in Christ signifieth, 1. Their being Christians indeed; they having received Christ by a true and lively Faith, and given themselves to the obedience of his Precepts. In this sense the Apostle saith, if an man is in Christ he is a new creature. 2. Their being Christians in name, by Baptism, and outward profession. These Churches are said to be in Christ in this latter sense. We have a parallel Text, 1 Thess. 2. 14. They do not judge improperly, who think that by Judea here, is not meant the Province, but the whole Country of Judea; which comprehended not Judea only, but Samaria and Galilee. John Baptist and our Saviour, (who both mostly preached in Galilee) had prepared their discipules for Gospel Churches. Peter and Paul, and Philip, preached the Gospel in many Villages of the Samarians, Acts 8. 25. 40. Of all these Churches Paul speaks; telling us, he was personally unknown unto them. So far he was from learning the Christian Doctrine from the Apostles, or them.

23 But they had heard only, That he which persecuted us in times past, now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed.

<sup>o</sup> I thought those Churches in the country of Judea, had never seen Paul person, yet they had heard of him. 1. That he had been a persecutor of those which professed the Doctrine of the Gospel, which he here calls the Faith, it being the object, and the means of Faith. 2. That there was such a change wrought in him, as that he was now become a preacher of the Doctrine, for the protection of which he had formerly sought and destroyed the Churches of Christ.

24 And they glorified God in me.

<sup>p</sup> And they glorified God on his behalf, for working to great a change in him.

CHAP. II.

Then fourteen years after, I went up again to Jerusalem, with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also.

<sup>q</sup> Either fourteen years after the three years before mentioned, and the fifteen days; or fourteen years after the death of Christ. This journey seeming to be his last, Acts 15. 2. It seems rather to be understood of fourteen years after the death of Christ. 6. Motions to Jerusalem are usually in Scripture called ascendings or goings up; either because of the Mountains round about it, or in respect of the eminence of the place, see Acts 15. 2. and 21. 4. The occasion of this journey we have Acts 15. 2. 4. It was to advise with the Apostles and Elders, about the necessity of circumcising some that came from Judea, having sought the Disciples at Antioch, that except they were circumcised, they could not be saved. Barnabas was chosen to go with Paul, verse 3. and some others, whom Lake nameth not, but it is plain by this Text, Paul was one.

2 And I went up by revelation, and communicated to them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but privately to them which were of reputation, I left by any means I should run, or had run in vain.

<sup>r</sup> Revelation signifieth Gods immediate declaration of will to him, that he would have him take this journey; which is not at all contradieted by Lake, Acts 15. 2. 3. Their journey was determined by the Christians at Antioch, God, to incourage Paul, had let him know it was his will he should go; and also put it into the Christians hearts at Antioch, to chide him to the journey. His motions from one place to another, were much by revelation, or immediate order, and command from God, Acts 16. 9. and 22. 18. and 22. 11. He faith, he communicated, or made a report or relation (in which sense the word is used, Acts 25. 14.) the Doctrine of the Gospel which he had preached amongst the Gentiles; He doubtless more particularly means, the addition of Circumcision, and no necessity of the observance of the Law of Moses contained in Ordinances. 1. But he faith that he did it privately, and to men of Reputation; by which he meant the Apostles, or some other Christians of great eminence. 2. Left he should have prejudiced himself, as to the course of the Gospel, which he metaphorically comparh to a race, (1 Cor. 9. 26.) Object. If any ask how his influenced Paul, as to make him privately to communicate the Doctrine which he had amongst the Gentiles preached publicly? It is easily answered, 1. That the content of those who were Apostles before him, to the Doctrine which he preached, was of great moment to persuade all Christians to imitate it; and by this means he obviated the scandal of being singular in the Doctrine which he preached. 2. Besides that Paul was now at Jerusalem, which was the chief place of the Jews residence, to whom God indulged a greater liberty for the ceremonial usages, than to the Gentiles, who had not been Educated in that Religion. And had Paul openly there declared the liberty of Christians from circumcision, and the ceremonial usages, he had both injured those who as yet continued in the Jewish Religion, and possibly given no small offence to those who had been Educated in that Religion, though they were converted to the Faith of the Gospel; they not fully yet understanding the liberty of Christians from that yoke. By one, or both of which ways, had Paul openly at Jerusalem published the Doctrine which he had publicly preached in Damascus and Arabia, and other places of the Gentiles, his labours might have been rendered useless, and he might also have been less successful in his further course of preaching it.

3 But neither Titus who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised.

<sup>s</sup> The Apostle brings this as an instance of the Apostles at Jerusalem, agreeing with him in his Doctrine, as to the non-necessity of Circumcision, for though Titus was with him, who was a Native Greek, being a Greek, and a Minister of the Gospel, (and possibly Paul carried him with him for an instance) yet the Apostles at Jerusalem, did not think fit to impose upon him Circumcision; no, nor upon a fellow disciple of that quality, who if shall object that Paul himself circumcised Timothy, who was a Greek, Acts 16. 3. 2. The answer is, that the same Text letteth us know that his Father was a Jew; and verse 3. that he did it because of the Jews in those quarters. As to the first, it was a matter of liberty at this time, they might, or might not be circumcised. Now in matters of this nature, where men have a liberty, they ought to have regard to circumstances, and to do that which they from a view of circumstances, judge will be most for the glory of God, the good of others, and give least offence, 1 Cor. 10. 28, 29, 30, 31.

4 And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty, which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage.

<sup>t</sup> He gives the reason why Circumcision was not urged upon Titus, very because there were some got into that Meeting, where Paul debated these things with the Apostles that were at Jerusalem; who though they had embraced the Christian Religion; (and upon account were Believers) yet were joined with the Jewish Law, and were desirous for all Christians to observe the Jewish Rites of Circumcision, &c. Upon which account it is that he calleth them, false Brethren. 2. These (he saith) came in privily, to spy out that liberty which all Christians had, and Paul had preached and used, as to these Jewish Ceremonies: Who, could they have obtained to have had Titus circumcised, they had had a great advantage to have declared Paul, as teaching one thing to the Churches, and practising the contrary, when he came at Jerusalem to the Apostles, and amongst the Jews. And this being a liberty which he and all Christians had, in and from Jesus Christ, he would not part with it, for they aimed at nothing, but the again bringing of Christians under the bondage of the Ceremonial Law. Some may say, It being a thing wherein Christians had a liberty, why did not St. Paul yield to avoid their offence? Answer, I bring in things in all men to gain the Gospel. In the use of our liberty, all circumstances are to be considered, as well as that of freedom and affairs. The valuable opposing circumstance in this case, seemeth to be the validity and success of the Apostles Ministry; the efficacy of which would have been much weakened; if his enemies had from hence gained an advantage to reproach him, and setting one thing in one place, and the contradictory in another. Besides, though at this time, the use or not use of the Ceremonial Rites, by the Jews, was a matter of liberty, by reason of Gods Indulgence to them for the prejudices of their Education; yet whether they were at all to the Gentile Churches, may be doubted, see chap. 2. 3. Further, yet these Brethren urged the observance of these Rites, as necessary to Salvation, (as appears from Acts 15. 1.) for they were of the sect of the Pharisees, verse 5. And to use them under that notion, was no matter of liberty.

5 To whom we gave place by subjection, no not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel might continue with you.

<sup>u</sup> To these Judaizing Christians the Apostle did not think fit to yield one jot; nor for the least time, nor in so small an affair. 1. Having a desire that these Gentile Churches might not be perverted. Or (as others think) to which man of Reputation we yielded not in the least: It is very probable, that Peter and James upon their first arguing the cause, to avoid the scandal and offence of the Jews, would have had Titus circumcised: St. Paul would not yield to it, that he might preserve the Doctrine of the Gospel, which he had planted amongst the Gentiles, and other Gentile Churches, and not to number those Churches with the Jewish Rites. But the most, and best Interpreters rather judge the persons here mentioned, to whom Paul would not yield, to be some Judaizing Christians, rather than the persons of Reputation, mentioned verse 2.

6 But of these who seemed to be somewhat, whatsoever they were it maketh no matter to me; * God accepteth no mans person, for they who seemed to be somewhat in conference added nothing unto me.

<sup>v</sup> The word Translated seem, is the same with that verse 3. which we there Translated Reputation. The Apostle meaneth the same persons that were of the greatest reputation, and to the following words to be something, do import, Acts 5. 26. and 8. 9. We must not understand the Apostle by this expression, to detract from the just Reputation that the Apostles, and their Eminent Christians at Jerusalem had, he only taketh notice here of them, as magnified by the false Teachers of this Church, to the letting of himself; and as those that seem to be something, must be interpreted as relating to their mens estimation of them; [that seem to you to be something] though I seem nothing to you. 2. Whatsoever they were formerly, suppose (as probably some of the Galatians had said) that they seem Christ in the flesh, were immediately called to him, when John Baptist, see God accepteth no mans person, hath no regard to what a man hath been, but to what he is: When I am to confer and discourse with them, about the Doctrine which I and they had taught, I learned no new Doctrine from them, different from what I had before taught; neither did they reprove or correct me, for any thing which I had taught amiss, we were all of the same mind.

7 But contrariwise, * when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter.

* Rom. 11. 13.
1 Tim. 2. 7.
2 Tim. 1. 11.

<sup>w</sup> These were so far from contradicting any thing that I had preached, that when they understood from me, and Barnabas, (who Acts 15. 12. Disputed in the council what miracles and signs God had wrought amongst the Gentiles by them;) that the business of preaching the Gospel to those who were no Jews, (for that is meant by uncircumcision; not simply those that were not circumcised (for some of the Heathens were circumcised) yet all go in Scripture under the name of uncircumcised) was committed to me, as the preaching of the Gospel to the Jews was committed to Peter, and not up him only, but to James and John. It must not be understood, as if Paul might not preach to the Jews, or Peter might not preach to the Gentiles; (for the contrary is evident from Acts 9. 14, as to Paul, and from Peter preaching to Cornelius, Acts 10.) but because God assigned the Gentiles to be more especially his Province for Paul to exercise his ministry in Acts 26. 17. (and accordingly he was specially sent out by the Church, Acts 13. 4.) as Peter's chief work was among the Jews.

8 (For he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, the same was mighty in me towards the Gentiles.)

* Acts 9. 15. &
chap. 1. 16.

<sup>x</sup> As Paul called was equal to that of Peter; both of them being Divine, (so faith the Apostle) my ability and success was equal, as God wrought effectually in and by Peter in the discharge of his Apostleship in the Province entrusted to him, (which was preaching to the Jews.) so he wrought effectually, and mightily in me, or by me in the Province wherein I was employed, viz. carrying the Gospel to the Gentiles. This efficacious working of God both by Paul and Peter, was seen in the conversion of multitudes by their Ministry, as well as in their miraculous operations, by which they confirmed the Doctrine of the Gospel, which they preached.

9 And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given to me, they gave to me, and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.

<sup>y</sup> James (called the Less) the Son of Alphaeus (before called the Brother of our Lord) as is thought because he was the Son of the Virgin Mary; Sister: who first issuing here in the first place, poseth the Popes argument for Peters primacy, because in some other places he is first named. 2. That is, Peter, called here Cephas in the Syriac; possibly because he is named with others, who had Syriac Names; in most places he is by this Apostle called Peter. 3. John the Apostle and Evangelist, who is also known by the Name of the Beloved Disciple. 4. Paul in saying, they seemed to be pillars, doth not deny them to be so, being such as God made use of in the first founding and building of the Gospel Church; as also to bear it up, (in the same sense that the Church is called the pillar and ground of truth;) and as by them the Gospel was carried out into the World; but the word seemed, because the false Teachers had magnified their ministry, but disparaged his. When then, he faith, I understood the great grace given to him; by which, he either understands his Office of Apostleship, which God gave him, or his Office in the Ministry, which God had given to his labours amongst the Gentiles. They looked upon him, and Barnabas, as such Pillars as themselves; and in token of it gave them their right hands, (a token of admiring into fellowship, 2 Kings 10. 15. Jer. 50. 15.) And agreed; that it should be their special work to go and preach to the Gentiles; as they, (James, John, and Peter) would make it their special work to preach the Gospel to the Jews.

10 Only they would that we should remember the poor; * the same which I also was forward to do.

3 Are ye so foolish? having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh g?

<sup>g</sup> The Doctrine of their false Teachers was, that to Faith in Christ, an obedience also to the Law of Moses was necessary to justification; they did not deny Christ, or the Doctrine of the Gospel, only they pleaded for the works of the Law as necessary to be superadded. The Apostle calls this first owning of Christ, and embracing the Doctrine of Faith, a baptism of the Spirit; they adding the necessity of obedience to the Law to this Spirit, a baptism of the Law. And argueth the unreasonableness of it, that their Justification should be begun by a more noble, and made perfect by a more ignominious cause. He calls the Doctrine of the Gospel, Spirit, because (as he said in the former verse) they had received the Holy Spirit, by the hearing of Faith; that is by hearing and receiving the Gospel. The works of the Law he calls Yoke, because a Yoke is that which binds, as the Apostle calls them, Tit. 2. 12. Carnal Ordinances imposed on the Jews till the time of reformation. He elsewhere calls them the rudiments of the World, Col. 2. 20. and in this Epistle, chap. 4. 9. he calls them beggarly Elements. For though the Ordinances of the Law were in their feasting spiritual, they being commanded by God; yet they being but temporary constitutions, never intended by God to continue longer than the coming of Christ, and the Law being but a Schoolmaster to lead to Christ; Christ being now come, and having died, and rose again from the Dead, they became useless. Besides that God never intended them as other than Rudiments and first Elements, the end of which was Christ; and the observance of which without Faith in Christ, was weak and impotent, as to the noble end of justification: It spake great weakness therefore in the Galatians, to begin with what was more perfect, (the hearing of the Gospel, and Christ there exhibited for the justification of sinners) and to end in what was more imperfect, thinking by that to be made perfect; or else the Apostle here chargeth them with a defection from Christ, as chap. 4. 9, 10, 11. and chap. 5. 4. and to call them foolish, for beginning in the Spirit, (the Holy Spirit inwardly working in them the change of their hearts, and regenerating them) and then poluting from the grace of justification to a carnal Life: But I had rather interpret Spirit in this Text, of the Doctrine of the Gospel, dictated by the Spirit; and with the receiving of which, the Holy Spirit was given. And so their folly is argued from their thinking to be made perfect by the beggarly duties, and worldly rudiments of the Law, when as they had first begun their profession of Christianity with embracing the more perfect Doctrine of the Gospel.

* Joh. 8.
|| Or, per se.

4 * H ave ye suffered for many things in vain b? if it be yet in vain i.

<sup>a</sup> There is no doubt, but these Churches in the Regions of Galatia, had their share in the sufferings of Christians by the Jews, for their adherence to, and profession of the Doctrine of the Gospel, which they might either wholly, or in a great measure have avoided, would they have complied with the Jews in the observance of those legal rites. Therefore, (saith the Apostle) to what purpose have you suffered for much for the owning of the Christian Religion, if you now bring your selves under the bondage of Circumcision, and other legal observances? If it be in vain, by which words he either corrected himself, as if he had said, but I have had better things of you, that I shall find that you did not suffer them in vain; or else he hinteth that their suffering so much would not be in vain, because by their apostasy from the true faith for which they suffered, they would in effect deny it, as if it had been false, and their former suffering would rise up in judgment against them.

5 He therefore that ministrerth to you the spirit, and worketh miracles among you k, doth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith l.

<sup>k</sup> Per. 2. He had asked them, whether they had received the Spirit by the works of the Law, or by hearing the Gospel? Some think what he saith here to be a continuation of the same argument, but it rather seems a new one. There he spake of their receiving the Spirit, here he speaks of the Ministration of the Spirit: Some understand it of God, who gives his Spirit to them that ask him, and who was the Author of those miraculous operations wrought by the Spirit. I should rather understand it of the Ministers of the Gospel, to whom God hath committed the ministration of the Spirit; and to some of whom God in the Primitive times gave a power to work miracles. I doth God concur with our Ministry upon our preaching the Law, or upon our preaching the Gospel? So that though there be a great cognation betwixt the Apostles arguing, ver. 2. and his arguing in this verse, yet there is some difference; the Apostle there arguing from the success of preaching the Gospel, here from the ministration it self.

* Gen. 15. 5.
Rom. 4. 3.
Jam. 2. 23.
|| Or, imputed.

6 Even as * Abraham believed God m, and it was || accounted to him for righteousness n.

<sup>m</sup> As Abraham was justified, so must all the children of Abraham; that Abraham believed God, (that is, agreed to the truth of all those promises which God gave him, and trusted in God for the fulfilling of them; for both those acts of the mind are included in believing God.) and he was justified alone. This Faith it self was not imputed to him; it self that put this faith upon the words, either forget that faith it self is a work; or that the Apostle here is arguing for justification by Faith in opposition to justification by works, and cannot be imagined to have gone about to prove that justification is a legal work, by proving that it is by a work. The meaning is no more than that he was upon it accounted righteous; nor that God so honoured the work of Faith, but that he forwarded it, as being the condition annexed to the promise of justification. His faith was not his righteousness, but God forwarded his exercise of Faith, as that upon it reckoned, (or imputed) that to him which was his righteousness, viz. the righteousness of him in whom he believed as revealed unto him in the promise.

7 Know ye therefore that * they which are Rom. 4 of faith o, the same are the children of Abra- 12, 16. ham p.

<sup>q</sup> Those who are Believers, and receive Jesus Christ, is exhibited and tendered to them in the Gospel, trading not to any Righteousness of their own arising from their Obedience to the works of the Law: p They are the children of Abraham, justified as the Father of the faithful, that is, they are accounted as Abraham was justified; who was justified not by his Circumcision, but upon his believing in Christ exhibited to him in the promise; nor by works, but by imputation. This argument came very close to the Jews, whose great glorying was in having Abraham to their Father; for it is in effect a saying, that they were no true children of Abraham, none of that seed to whom the promise was made, if they expected justification from the works of the Law, which Abraham never had expected.

8 And the Scripture q foreseeing, that God would justify the heathen through faith preached before the gospel r unto Abraham, saying, * In thee shall all nations be blessed s.

<sup>r</sup> The Holy Ghost in Scripture, (by whose inspiration the Scripture was written) foreseeing, or knowing the Councils and designs of God, that the Heathen, (when the fullness of time as to them should come) should be justified through Faith in Christ; preached the same Doctrine beforeunto Abraham, for it is no new Doctrine; the Gospel which we now preach unto you, was long since revealed unto Abraham by law Christ's day, and rejected. Ysa. 8. 26. To prove which, he quotes the promise, Gen. 9. 9. where God tells Abraham, Thou art the father of many Nations, of the Faithful should be blessed, which question d it by the Apostle in this place informeth us, that it is to be understood of those Spiritual Blessings which are in Christ Jesus. For all the Nations of the Earth were no otherwise blessed in Abraham, than as Christ, (who is called the father of all Nations, and he in whom the Gentiles should trust, and a light is shined to the Gentiles,) descended from Abraham.

9 So then they which be of faith t, are blessed with faithful Abraham u.

<sup>v</sup> Those that believe in Jesus Christ with such a Faith as the Gospel doth require, they, and they alone, are blessed with spiritual blessings, justified from the guilt of sin; but Abraham, that is, in the same manner, that Abraham, the Father of the faithful, and who himself was a believer, was justified; which was not, (as was before said,) by his Circumcision, or by any works that he did, but by imputation upon his believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, exhibited, and held forth in the promise made to him.

10 For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse, for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them w.

<sup>x</sup> The Argument is this, Those that are under a curse, cannot be under the blessing of justification. But those that are under the Law are under the curse. This he proves out of the Law, Deut. 27. 26. where it is pronounced, Cursed shall continue not in all things written in the book of the Law to do them. To be under the Law, is under the Covenant of works, or under the expectation of Life and Salvation only from obedience to the works of the Law. These (he saith) are under the curse, the reason of which the Apostle gives us, Rom. 8. 3. Because it was not weak through our flesh, could perfectly fulfil the Law, he might expect life, favour, and salvation from his obedience to it; but the Law curseth him that continueth not in all that is written in it; if a man keepeth the whole Law, if he offendeth in one point, he is guilty of all; and as liable to the wrath of God, as if he had broken it in many things. Hence it necessarily followeth, if no man can keep the Law of God perfectly, that all under the Law must be under the curse, and consequently cannot be blessed in faithful Abraham.

11 But * that no man by the law is justified in the sight of God, it is evident *, for the just shall live by faith x.

<sup>y</sup> The Apostle by another Argument proveth that sinners are not justified by works. He grants, they may be justified by their good and blameless living before men, so as that they may have nothing to lay against them, but he says they cannot by such works be justified in the sight of God. His Argument is from the opposition that is between Faith and works. He proves it from Heb. 2. 4. That we are justified by Faith: Where the Prophet saith, that the just (or righteous man) shall live by Faith, fetch his Life from Faith, live his Spiritual life by Faith, and obtain Eternal life by Faith, the life of his righteousness shall be by Faith.

12 And * the law is not of faith y, but the man that doth them, shall live in them z.

<sup>z</sup> The Law faith nothing of Faith in the Mediator, though Faith in God be commanded in the first precept; yet Faith in Christ is not commanded by the Law as that by which we shall live. For that which the Law saith is, do this and live. The man that doth the things contained in the Law, shall live in them; Life in the Law is promised to those who do the things which it requireth; not to them, who having failed in their performances, yet accept of the Lord Jesus Christ as the Redeemer which God hath sent, and believe in him who justify the ungodly. For thereby the Life promised to the observation of the Law, not a temporal Life only to be understood, but Eternal Life also, is plain from the same Saviours application of it to the young man, inquiring about the way to Eternal Life, Matth. 19. 17. Luk. 10. 28.

13 * Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law a, by being made a curse for us b, for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree c.

<sup>d</sup> If the Law curseth all those who continue not in all things contained in the Law, (as the Apostle had said, ver. 10. and proved from Deut. 27. 26.) It might be objected, how will Believers then escape more than others; for none of them continue in all that is written in the Law: The Apostle here overleth this Objection, by telling the Galatians, that as to Believers Christ hath redeemed them from this curse. The word generally signifies deliverance; here it signifies a deliverance by a legal curse. This was b by being himself made a curse for us; not only excusable to men, but bearing the wrath and indignation of God due for sin: For so it was written, Deut. 21. 23. He that is hanged is accursed of God; that is, hath born the wrath or curse of God due to him for his sin. The Apostle applying this to Christ teacheth us, that Christ also hanging upon the Cross, bore the curse of God due to the sins of Believers; in whose stead, as well as for whose good and benefit, he died. And indeed he could no otherway redeem believers from the curse of the Law, but by being made himself a curse for them, for he thought, that under the Law he who was hanged was made a curse, not only politically, but typically; as signifying that curse which Christ should be made on the behalf of the Red.

14 That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ d, that we might receive the promise of the spirit through faith e.

<sup>f</sup> The Apostle, by the blessing of Abraham, here understands those spiritual blessings of justification, Reconciliation, and Adoption, which came to Abraham upon his believing, and the imputation of righteousness thereupon unto him. Christ (he saith) was made a curse for us, that all those blessings through him might come on the Gentiles; and so all the Nations of the Earth might be blessed in him. Particularly e that the Gentiles might receive the promise of the Spirit; which promise is not to be interpreted so narrowly, as only to signify its miraculous gifts, but to be extended to all those gifts and habits of grace which are the effects of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of Believers, whether in signifying or feeling them; which Holy Spirit is received upon persons believing: See chap. 4. 6. Rom. 8. 13.

15 Brethren, I speak after the manner of men, though it be but a mans || covenant f, yet if it be confirmed g, no man disannulleth or addeth thereto h.

<sup>i</sup> The word here translated Covenant, Diathesis is ordinarily translated Testament; Matth. 26. 28. It signifies in the general, an ordering or disposing of things; more specially, a disposing of things in disposition the Testament made after his Death. Now (saith the Apostle) I here argue according to the ordinary meanings and doings of men; who have such a respect for a mans Testament; as that if it be once confirmed med, according to the methods of Law and civil Sanctions of men, or rather by the Death of the Testator, (for a Testament is of no force while the Testator liveth,) nor will men alter the Will or last Testament of a deceased person, though it be not as yet confirmed according to the methods of humane Laws. b No man that is no just man, will show to disannul it, nor will any just Government endure any such violation of it. Hence the Apostle argueth both the certainty and inalterableness of the Covenant of Grace with Abraham, and until the death of Christ it was but a Covenant, or a Testament not fully confirmed, but yet inalterable, because the Covenant of that God who cannot lie, nor repent, but by the death of Christ it became a Testament, and a Testament ratified and confirmed by the Death of the person that was the Testator, therefore never to be disannulled, never capable of any additions. Those words, no addidit there, are fitly added, because these false Teachers, though they might pretend not to disannul Gods Covenant, holding still justification by Christ; yet they added thereto, making circumcision, and other legal observances necessary to justification; whereas by Gods Covenant or Testament, confirmed now by the Death of Christ, Faith in Christ only was necessary.

16 Now * to Abraham, and his seed were the promises made i, he saith not as of seeds as to ver. 8. many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which was Christ m.

<sup>n</sup> The promises, Gen. 12. 3. chap. 22. 18. In the one of which places it is said, in thee, in the other, in thy seed shall all the Nations of the Earth be blessed. He saith, promise, here because of the repetition of the same promises, or raking in also other promises. m Some may object against the Apostles conclusion, that the promise respected only one, and that was Christ; because God said not seeds of many, but seed: whereas the Term Seed is a Noun of multitude, and signifieth more than one: Besides that the Hebrew word which is used Gen. 22. 18. admitteth not the Plural number. But it is answered, That though the word translated seed, admitteth not the Plural Number yet had God intended more than one, he could have expressed it by words, signifying children, or Generations, &c. 2. That the Term Seed, though a Noun of multitude, yet is often applied to a single person as Gen. 3. 15. (wherein also signifieth Christ.) Sith is called Antichrist 1st. 2. 22. (and so in many other places.) Some think that by Sith the meaneeth Believers, and to interpret it of Christ mystical. And that the scope of the Apostle in this place is to prove, that both the Jews and Gentiles were to be justified the same way; because they were justified in force, and by virtue of the promise, which was not made to many, but to one Church, which was to consist both of Jews and Gentiles; for (according to the prophetic of Isaiah, 44. 11. 52.) Christ dwelt in us might gather together into the children of God that were scattered abroad. The promises made to Abraham, were but the exhibition of the Eternal Covenant of Grace, made between the Father, and his Son Christ Jesus, (who was in it both the Mediator and Surrogate) which Covenant was promulgated, as to Adam and Noah, so to Abraham; in their words, In thy seed shall all the Nations of the Earth be blessed, that is, in Christ. From whence the Apostle proveth, that there is no justification by the works of the Law, but in, and by Christ, and the exercise of Faith in him.

17 And this I say, that the covenant that was before confirmed of God in Christ n, the law a, * which was four hundred and thirty years a†, cannot disannul a, * that it should make the 14th promise of no effect p.

<sup>q</sup> The word translated Covenant, is the same as before; ordinarily signifying ones disposal of things in his last Will and Testament. Which names given to the Covenant of Grace, with respect to the Death of Christ; for though Christ as yet had not died, yet he was, by virtue of the Covenant of Redemption, and in Gods councils, The Lamb slain from the foundation of the World, Rev. 13. 8. This (he saith) was in Christ, as Abraham promised to give him, confirmed of God to Abraham, by Gods Oath, Heb. 6. 17. 18. by frequent repetitions of it, by such solemn Rites as covenants use to be confirmed by, Gen. 15. 17. 18. By the Seals of Circumcision, Gen. 17. 11. Rom. 4. 11. By a long prescription, &c. though it received indeed its final and ultimate consummation by the Death of Christ, yet it was before many ways confirmed. o The Law was given 430 years after the giving this promise to Abraham, though Gen. 15. 13. the round number of 400 years only be mentioned: which are to be counted from the birth of Isaac; yet Exod. 12. 40. they are reckoned (as here) 430 years; from Abraham going out of Canaan, Gen. 12. 4. from whence to the birth of Isaac were 25 years; Gen. 21. 5. compared with chap. 12. 4. From the birth of Isaac till Jacob was born, 60 years; Gen. 25. 26. From thence till Jacob went down into Egypt, 120 years; Gen. 47. 9. where they denote 125 years; p Hence the Apostle concludes, that it was impossible that the Law, which was not given till 430 years after the confirmation of God intended to fend his Son into the world : And during the time of their nonage they were kept under the Law, as a Tutor and Governour, leading them unto Christ. He chiefly intendeth the Ceremonial Law ; which Abs 15. 10. Peter calleth a yoke, which neither they, nor their Fathers were able to bear. He calleth these ordinances the Elements of the World ; for Colo 2. 20. he means that Discipline by which God instructed, and united which God by *Mys*a at first tutored the World, that is, the Jews, who were the first part of the World to whom God revealed his Oracles known. He calleth them Elements ; because he pleased to make his Oracles known. He calleth them Elements, Elements, or Rudiments, because they were the first Instructions God gave Believers, leading them to Christ ; like the first Elements, or Rudiments in Grammar Learning.

4 But *when the fulness of the time was come d, * Eph. i. 10.
God sent forth his Son made of a woman e, * made * Matth. 5. 17, under the law f.

a Tullius, which answered the time appointed of the Earthly Father, mentioned cor. 2. when that time came in which God had designed to bring his people into the most perfect state of liberty, which in this life they are capable of: He that first was born, who was exilent before; (being brought forth before the Mountains or Hills were created; Prov. 8. 25.) but not first until this fulness of time came. And then a male of a Woman, conceived in the Womb of the Virgin, by the Power of the Holy Ghost overshadowing her; He that under the Law, to which as God he was not subject, (being himself the Law-maker;) but he subjected himself. He was born in a Nation, and of a parent under the Law; he was circumcised; and submitted to the Ceremonial law: He in all things conformed his life to the rule of the Law; and subjected himself to the curse of the Law, being made sure for us. Nothing of this is questioned, except the last which yet appears to have been necessary by what follows in the next verse; for how else could he have redeemed those, who were under the Law, and this agreeeth with what we had, chap. 2. 12.

* that we might receive the adoption of sons.

3. This makes it appear, that Christ's being under the Law must be understood as well of the Moral as of the Ceremonial Law, that is, subject to the precepts of it, as well as to the curse of it: For if the end of this being born under the Law, was to redeem those that were under it, that had not reached by being merely under the Ceremonial Law. For the Gentiles were not under that Law, but only under the Moral Law: & they also were to be redeemed, and to receive the great privilege of Adoption, or rather, the rights of adopted children which (some think) is to be understood here, rather than what is strictly to be understood by the term of Adoption, viz: a right to be called, and to be the Sons of God. Others Adoption is understood that full state of liberty which the Apostle has been before speaking in opposition to that state of childhood and non-age: in which believers were until the times of the Gospel; for chap. 5. 1. we find that that: was a liberty where-with Christ made us free: And indeed this last free-ness hath to agree with what the Apostle had before said, viz. 2. 3. (though the other senses are not to be excluded.)

6 And because you are sons w, God hath sent forth * the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, cry- * Rom. 8. 14:

7 Left the Jews should claim the Adoption as peculiar to them, the Apostle tells them that their Gentiles were also Sons, and in confirmation of their faith, that God had sent the Spirit of his Son into their hearts : Not that, the Holy Spirit is now the Spirit of the Father as well as of Christ; he calleth him into the Spirit of Christ, because he had made Adoption the end, and Fruit of Redemption ; and Redemption is every where in the Gift of the Son, "Henceforth faith Remains," that the Angels themselves belonging to the Church, the Jews were the first People whom God dignified with the name of his Sons, his first-born; Rom. 8. 22. and many of them as believed also received the Spirit, Eph. 36. 29. but the full effusion of the Spirit was reserved to Gospel times, and until the time that Christ Ascended, Joh. 7. 39. and 16: 7. After which the Spirit was poured-out in the days of Pentecost, Acts 2., whose effects were evident, not only in private individuals, but in the Church itself, Pet. 1. 22. Tongues, (which walked in all believers) but there were still in a variety of spiritual gifts and habits, amongst which this was one teaching them to cry, Abs Father, by crying it they acknowledged Rom. 8. 15. thereby that they are, through whole

7 Wherefore thou art no more a servant y, but a son z, and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ a.

x Thou art a believing Gentle, as well as the believing Jew. y Art no more a Servant, not in that state of liberty (subjection to the Law) z but in a more excellent state of liberty, like unto that of Sons that have attained to a full, and ripe age. Christ told his Disciples, John 15: 15, that he did not call them Servants, for Servants, knew not what their Lord did; but he had freely communicated to them what he had received from the Father. The Apostle here saith, they were free, received from the Father, which is the highest notion of freedom and liberty. a And this entitled them to an inheritance; if Sons then Heirs. Which agree with Rom. 8: 17, and as it is with Sons and Heirs, though the Inheritance cometh not fully to them till the death of the Parent, yet while they live they are in a far better condition than Servants: so the believing Gentiles being made Sons and Heirs of God through Christ, though they were to stay a while for the Inheritance reserved for the Sons of God in the Heavens, yet their state was much better than that of Servants; for though they were obliged to serve the Lord, yet they served him without servile fear, and were no otherwise Servants than Sons are also Servants to their Father.

8 Howbeit then when ye knew not God b, ye did service unto them which by nature are gods c.

b When ye knew not God, as he is, or as ye ought to have known him, or as since, you have known him, (for even the Heathen have some knowledge of God, Rom. 1: 21.) c You paid religious honours unto Idols: which are Gods, not by nature, and essence, but only in the opinion of Idolaters. Which was a more miserable bondage and servitude than the Jews when under, who knew the true God, though in the time when the Church was like the their under age, it was subject to the Law contained in Ordinances, and under the yoke of the Law.

9 But now * after that you have known God d, or rather are known of God e, * how turn ye f again to * the weak and beggarly g elements, wherunto ye desire again to be in bondage f?

d After that you are come to a true, and saving knowledge of God in Christ, and know God as he is. e Or rather after you are received of God, approved of him, through Christ, his Son of God in your notion and true comprehension of him, which is much more than a true comprehension of God in your notion and understanding. f How turn ye back again to the legal services of the Ceremonial Law, which he calleth Elements or Radiments, because they were Gods first instructions given to his Church for his Worship, to which he intended afterward a more perfect way of Worship. He calls them weak, because they brought nothing to perfection; and the observance of them was impotent as to the justification of a Soul, as all the Law is. He calls them beggarly in comparison of the more rational, spiritual way of worship under the Gospel. f Be faith that they desired to be in bondage, unto things, which they would not see and make use of the liberty from them, which Christ had purchased. Observe it may be objected, that the Galatians were not educated in Judaism; how then doth the Apostle charge them with turning back to them? Answer. This hath made long discourse, but by the words, and Hebrew Elements mentioned in this verse, the Apostle meaneth their Gentile superstitions and idolatries; but this is not probable, the Apostle all along the Epistle charging them with no such Apostasy. Others think, that he in this verse chiefly reflected on the believing Jews, who afterwards returned again to the life of the Law. But why may not we rather say, that he calleth their law practices, not so much with respect to the Jews, as to the State of the Church, which was once under those Elements; but by the coming of Christ was brought into a more perfect state. So that for them who were called by the Church in the time of this less perfect state, for them to return to the bondage of the Law, that was truly to turn back; if not to any practice of their own, which they had cut off, yet to a State of the Church, which the Church of God had now outgrown.

10 Ye observe days g, and months h, and times i, and years k.

g If we had any evidence that these Galatians were under to their Gentile superstitions, these terms might be understood of such days, &c. as they kept in honour to their Idols. But the Apostle throughout the whole Epistle, not reflecting upon them for any such gross Apostasy, (as according to the vulgar of the Heathen in which they formerly lived; ) but only for Judaizing, and using the ceremonies of the Jewish Law, as necessary to be observed, besides their believing in Christ, for their Justification; it is much more probable that he meant, by days the Jewish Festivals: such as their New Moons, &c. By Months, the first and the seventh month, when they religiously fasted. By Times, their more solemn times such as were their Feasts of First-Fruits, Tenets, &c. And By Years, their years of Jubilee, the Levitical and the Levitical. This meaning is, that they took themselves to be under a religious obligation to observe these Times as still commanded by God.

11 I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labour in vain l.

l Paul knew that with reference to himself, he had not laboured in vain; he might say with Isaiah, Though I should be as gathered, yet I shall be glorified. We know he should be a great favour to God, as well then that he perceived as in them that should be saved; but he speaks with reference to them. A faithful Minister accounteth his labour lost when he seeth no Fruits of it upon the Souls of his People. Nor was Paul afraid of this as to the finer part of this Church, who truly believed, and were justified, but he speaketh this with reference to the Body of this Church, in which he was, who were still falling back into their previous condition of Christianity to Judaism; as judging the observance of the Jewish days necessary by Divine precept to Christians. Nor doth he speak of the observance of such days, as was their duty in obedience to the Moral Law to observe, which commandeth the observance of a seventh day for the weekly Sabbath, and gives a liberty for fasting upon other days, and commanding the observance of them, to take notice of, and acknowledge God in emergent Providences. But he only speaks of days imposed by the Ceremonial Law, and men's religious observance of them as being tied to it by a Divine precept, by which they made them a part of Worship. We have a liberty to set apart any day for Gods Worship, and Magistrates have a liberty to set apart particular days for the acknowledgment of God in emergent Providences, whether of Mercy or judgment. But none hath a power to make a day holy, so as that it shall be a sin against God for all to labour therein, much less hath any liberty to keep Jewish Holy-days.

12 Brethren, I beseech you be as I am, for I am as ye are e, you * have not injured me at all d.

e Be as friendly to me as I am to you, (see the like phrase, 1 Kings 22: 4.) d But how doth the Apostle say they had not injured him at all? When it is manifest they had defamed him. He had forgiven, or was ready to forgive this to them, he had no desire or design to be revenged on them, or in this particular thing of Judaizing, for which he had been testifying upon them, they had done him no personal injury, it was only his care for, and love to their Souls, which had drawn out this discourse from him; not any particular prejudice to them, or any desire he had to take any revenge upon them, for any personal injury done to himself.

13 Ye know how * through infirmity of the flesh I preached the gospel to you at the first e.

e The Scripture having not given us a particular account of Paul's circumstances, when he first preached the Gospel to the Galatians; we are at a loss to determine what his infirmities were, which Paul here speaks of, more than that he calls them, infirmities of the flesh. By which may be understood either the pains, and contemptions of his person, (which the false Teachers at Corinth objected to him, 2 Cor. 12: 10.) or some bodily sickness which Paul had at that time, (as some of the Antients say.) For his sufferings for the Gospel, which were those infirmities, were his choice to glory, 2 Corinthians 11: 30.

14 And my temptation, which was in my flesh ye despised not, nor rejected e; but received me * as an angel of God; * even as Christ Jesus g.

g If the Apostle saith they were to be from infirmity (as he had said verse 12.) that they had expressed great kindness to him: For though when he first came amongst them to preach the Gospel, he was a man of no great presence; but in the judgment of John, John 1: 14, and John 1: 15, he was full of grace, and his weakness and infirmity was persecuted by men. Yet they did not reject nor despise him, for the things he said in the flesh, by which he seemed, the same things he meant by infirmities, for both bodily weakness and sufferings for the Gospel, are temptations, as the word signifies Trial. e Nay

(saith he) you were so far from rejecting, or despising me upon that account, that (on the contrary) you received me, as if I had been an angel; yea, if Jesus Christ himself had come amongst you, you could not have been more kind to him than you were to me. This he tells them, partly to let them know, that what he had spoken he had not spoke out of any ill will or prejudice to them; partly to retain their good will, that they might not themselves uncertain and inconstant in their judgement and affections, and partly, (as the following verse signifies) to shew the levity of some of them; who had too much forgotten their first judgement of him, and value for him.

15 Where is then the blessedness you spoke of h? For I bear you record, that if it had been possible you would have plucked out your own eyes and given them to me i.

h Some understand the blessings here spoken of in a passive sense; you were a blessed and happy people, receiving the Doctrine of the Gospel in the Truth and Purity of it; what is now become of that blessedness? But both the preceding, and the following words, seem to rule the sense otherwise, yea, where it is said, that if it had been possible you would have plucked out your own eyes and given them to me; that is, that if it had been possible you would have done me good; have parted with what was dearest to you.

16 Am I therefore become your enemy because I tell you the truth k.

k What hath now altered your mind? or made you have a worse opinion of me, wherein have I offended you or done you any harm? I have done nothing but revealed to you the truth of God, am I therefore become your Enemy? or do you account me your Enemy upon that account?

17 They I * zealously affect you m, not well n: yea, they would exclude || you o, that you might affect them p.

l The false Teachers, that have perverted you as to the Faith of the Gospel. m Pretend a great warmth of affection for you; but in this they do not wish, nor for a good end, they would exclude you from our good opinion and affection. p That they might have all your loves, and respect; and so by the rule of their reputation with you, they might build up their own reputation.

18 But it is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing g, and not only when I am present with you h.

g The Apostle in the former verses had been speaking of a great zeal, or warmth of affection, (for that zeal signifies,) which these Galatians had for, and declared towards him, when he first preached the Gospel amongst them; and also of a great warmth and degree of affection which these false Teachers had pretended to this Church. These words are so delivered that they are applicable to either of these; but the latter words seem to term them most properly applicable to the former; for the term zealously is emphatical: There was a time, when you were very warm in your love to me; this zeal being good, your warmth of affection ought not to have abated, but continued always, and not so coldly while you saw me, and I was present with you.

19 * My little children: of whom I travel in birth again e, until Christ be formed in you f.

f By calling them little children, he both hints to them that he was their Spiritual Father, and had begotten them to Christ; and that they were as yet weak in the Faith, not grown men, but as yet like Children; and also hints to them, the tender affection he had towards them; which was the same as of a mother to her little children: though they did not owe and honour him as their spiritual Father, yet he loved them as his little Children. e For whom I am in as great pain, through my earnest desire for the good of your Souls, as the Woman that is in travail for the bringing forth of a Child. I tell Christ is fully and perfectly formed in you; that is, you be brought off from your Judaized and opinion of the necessity of superadding the works of the Law to the Faith of Christ in order to your Justification, and be rooted in the Truth and established in the liberty of the Gospel, with which Christ hath made you free.

20 I desire to be present with you now m, and to change my voice n for, I || stand in doubt of || you o.

m I with circumstances so concurred that I could be present with you. n That I might use my tongue towards you as I saw occasion; either commending, or reproving, or exhorting, as I saw cause. o For I do not know what to think of you; I am afraid of your falling away from the profession of the Gospel to Judaism.

21 Tell me ye that desire to be under the law p, do ye not hear the law q?

p You that cannot be content to receive Jesus Christ alone, for Justification; but have a mind to maintain a necessity of obedience to the Law of Circumcision, and other Judicial Rites; q Do you not hear the Law, the Law which curseth every one who continueth not in all that is therein written to do it? or rather the story which follows; which is taken out of one of the Books of the Law, which the Apostle makes a mystical Revelation of the divine Will, that there should come a time when circumcision should be cut off.

22 For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, the one * by a bondmaid; the * other by a free-woman r.

r The substance of this is written, Genesis 25, where we read of Abraham having Ismael by Hagar his bondwoman; and Genesis 21: 2, where we read of the birth of Isaac whom he had by Sarah who was his Wife.

23 But he who was of the bond-woman * was born after the flesh s, but he of the free-woman was by promise t.

s They were both (in a sense) born after the flesh, viz. in a natural way and course of generation; but after the flesh is plainly in this verse opposed to promise; and the meaning is that Ismael, the son of Hagar, was not that son of Abraham to whom the promise was made, that in him all the Nations of the Earth should be blessed, Genesis 17: 16, Genesis 22: 17. Isaac is said to have been born after the promise, either because God gave Isaac to Abraham, in compliance, or fulfilling of the promise made to him, that he should have an Heir out of his own loins, or because the mighty and miraculous power of God was seen in his production, insubduing Abraham at those years to beget, and Sarah to bear a child, when both their bodies were as dead.

24 Which things are an allegory u; for these are the two covenants w, the one from the mount || Or, Testament, † Sinai, which gendereth to bondage *, which is † Gr. Sin. Agar.

u That is called an Allegory when one thing is turned out of another, or something is mystically signified, and to be understood further than is expressed. The Scripture hath a peculiar kind of Allegories, wherein one thing is signified by and under another thing. The thing here signifying, was Abraham Wife and Concubine, Sarah and Hagar. w The Apostle saith, these signified the two Covenants; for that the meaning of etc. So therefore we have one Covenant which is the only free will, is pure for freedom; and it will be hard to assign a reason why it should not be so interpreted in the institution of the Lords Supper; (notwithstanding the Pauline and Lutheran to the contrary, contending to the contrary.) The very word is here used, signifying, that is used in the institution of the Lords Supper. Here it is said that the two Covenants or Testaments; there it is the New Covenant. The Apostle calls them the two Covenants, whereas they were but one, with reference to the time of their establishment and manner of their Administration, in which they chiefly differed. Nor must we understand the Apostle as signifying to us by these words, that Moses wrote the History of Sarah and Hagar; with such a design and intention; but only that that History is verily applicable to the two Covenants, and we shall find Genesis 22, the Apostle justifying this application from the analogy of the Prophet Isaiah. And Isaiah he comforted with the general sense of the Jews; who judged that there was not only a literal; but a mystical sense also of those Histories of the Patriarchs. x The one Covenant was that of the Law delivered from Mount Sinai; this was like Hagar, for as Hagar was her self a bond woman, and so her child had partake of the condition of the Mother, and Hagar bare a Bond woman in Servant to the Law (which he calls a Covenant, because of the obligation of obedience from the people to the Will of God revealed, and declared.) left those that were under it in a state of bondage or servitude.

25 For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia y, and an answereth to Jerusalem which now is z, which is in bondage with her children a.

y Agar the bondwoman filly represented Mount Sinai, the Mountain in Arabia, from which the Law was given: z And Jerusalem which now is answereth to Mount Sinai; for as in Mount Sinai the Law was given in a terrible manner, so now Jerusalem is the seat of the Scribes and Pharisees, who are the Doctors of that Law, and rigidly press the observation of it. a By which the Jews are in bondage: The Apostle speaketh not here of the civil servitude that the Jews were in under the Romans, to whom they were now Tributaries, but of that Religious servitude in which the Scribes and Pharisees kept them to their legal services.

26 * But Jerusalem which is above, is free b, which is the mother of us all c.

b The new Covenant, or the dispensation of the Gospel, or the Christian Church, which is above, or from above, which answereth to Sarah, and is said to be above, because revealed from Heaven by Christ, sent out of the bosom of the Father, not as the Law was revealed upon Earth, upon Mount Sinai. Hence Apostles from the Doctrine of the Gospel, are said to turn from him who speaks from Heaven, Heb. 12. 25. Or else it is said to be above, because it is the ally of the first born written in Heaven, ver. 23. Hence the Gospel Church is called the Heavenly Church, that it is free, i. e. free from the yoke and bondage of the Ceremonial Law, as from the Covenant and curse of the Law. c Which Church he faith is the Mother of all Believers, they embracing the same Faith, and walking in the same steps, from whence was safe for the Galatians to conclude, their freedom and liberty also from the Law.

27 For it is written, Rejoyce thou barren that bearest not, break forth and cry, thou that travailest not, for the desolate hath many more children, than she which hath an husband b.

b It is written Isa. 54. 1. Some think that the Apostle doth but allude to that of the Prophet, and that the sense of the Prophet was only to comfort the Jews, whose City, though it should be for a present time barren, thin of Inhabitants, during the time of the Babylonish Captivity; yet it should be a place replenished with people, and be more populous than other Cities. But the Prophet seemeth rather to interpret that Promise, then merely to allude to it; so that verse is one of those Prophetical passages about the calling of the Gentiles, (of which are many in that Prophet.) In this sense, the Christians are to be understood under the notion of the woman that was barren and desolate. The Church of the Jews is represented under the notion of a Woman that had an Husband and Children. The Prophet, by the Spirit of Prophecy, calleth upon the Gentiles, that brought forth no children to God, and to whom God was not as Husband, to Rejoyce, and to cry out for joy, for there should be more Believers, more children brought forth to God, amongst them, than were amongst the Jews: So as the Church of the Gentiles are compared to Sarah, who was a long time barren, but then brought forth the child of the Promise, the Seed in which all the Nations of the Earth were to be blessed.

28 Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise c.

c Isaac was the promised Seed, Gen. 21. 12. Rom. 9. 8. the Apostle tells the Galatians that the believing Gentiles were (as Isaac) the children of the promise. Isaac being born, not by virtue of any preceptive virtue in his Parents; who were now dead in Heaven, Rom. 9. 7. but by virtue of the promise, and by a power above nature, was a Type of the believing Gentiles, who are a Spiritual Seed, and that Seed to whom the promise was made, being the Members of Christ by Faith: So as the Jews had no reason to much to glory as they did, that Abraham was their Father, for those amongst them that believed not, were but his carnal Seed, believers only were the Spiritual Seed, the children of the Promise: To which the believing Gentiles had the same claim with the believing Jews, and a much better than those of them that believed not in Christ.

29 But as then he that was born after the flesh is perfected him that was born after the spirit z, even fo it is now f.

f As it was in Abraham's time, Ismael, who was born in a meer carnal and ordinary way of Generation: z Perfectioned Isaac, by mocking at him, Gen. 21. 9. who was born by virtue of the promise, and the mighty power of God, inhabiting Sarah at that time to conceive, and Abraham to beget a Child. f Even fo it is now, the carnal Seed of Abraham, the Jews persecute the Christians which are his Spiritual Seed. From whence we may observe, that the Holy Ghost accounteth mockings of good people for Religion, Perfection. So Heb. 11. 25. others had trials of cruel mockings, and we know that there were one kind of the sufferings of Christ. By this also the Apostle doth both confirm, what he had before said, in making Agar a Type of the Jews, and Sarah a Type of the Gentiles, the Jews persecuting the seed of Christ, as Agar's seed persecuted Isaac.

30 Nevertheless, what faith the scripture? Cast out the bond-woman and her son, for * the son of the bond-woman shall not be heir with the son of the free-woman g.

g We read Gen. 21. 10. that when Sarah saw Ismael mocking at her Son Isaac, she was not able to bear it, but spake to her Husband Abraham, saying, Cast out this bond-woman, and her Son, for the Son of this bond-woman shall not be heir with my Son Isaac. The principal design of the Apostle seems to be, by that Type of the ejection of Ismael out of Abraham's Family, to let them know the mind and will of God. 1. Concerning the exclusion of the Law from a partnership with Christ, and the Gospel, in the justification of sinners before God. 2. Concerning the rejection of the Jews, upon the calling of the Gentiles. 3. Concerning the total destruction of the Jewish Church and Nation, for their persecution of Christ, and the Christian Church.

31 So then brethren, we are not children of the bond-woman, but of the free h.

h The Church of the Gentiles, was not Typified in Agar, but in Sarah; from whence the scope of the Apostle is to conclude, that we are not under the Law, obliged to Judicial Observance, but are freed from them, and are justified by Faith in Christ alone, not by the works of the Law. By this conclusion, the Apostle maketh way for the exhortation in the following chapter, pressing them to stand fast in their liberty.

C H A P. V.

1 Stand fast therefore in * the liberty where- with Christ hath made us free a, and be not intangled again with the yoke of bondage b.

a The liberty here spoken of, is a right which a person hath to action, that he may do, or forbear the doing of things at his pleasure, as he apprehends them suitable or not, without the aid or hindrance of another: This is either in things of a civil nature, or of a spiritual nature. The former is not understood here, for it is none of the liberty, with which Christ hath made us free, for subjects to be free from the lawful commands of Princes, or children to be free from the laws of their Parents, or servants to be free from the commands of Masters. There is hardly any body to be free from the Law, where in Obedience of this nature, in things that are lawful, as is often exemplified as our duty in Christ and the Apostles; or urged by very strong Arguments. The liberty here, is that freedom from the law, of which the Apostle hath been speaking all along this Epistle: From the curse of the Moral Law, and from the coercion of it, and principally from the Ceremonial Law contained in Ordinances: This is the liberty which Christ hath purchased for us, and in which the Apostle willeth all Believers to stand fast. b Not being again intangled with a yoke, which God had taken off from their necks. The Apostles in their Synod, Acts 15. 10. had called it a yoke, which neither they, nor their fathers were able to bear.

2 Behold, I Paul say unto you, that * if ye Ab. 15. 10 be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing c.

c It is manifest, that the Apostle is speaking here concerning circumcision, looked upon as necessary to justification, now under the Gospel State. For under the Old Testament undoubtedly Christ profited the Fathers, though circumcised, yet, Christ undoubtedly profited Timothy, even under the Gospel, though he was circumcised, Acts 16. 3. being done to prevent a scandal, and desiring a time, whilst for the gaining of the Jews to the Christian Faith, the Jewish ceremonies though dead, were (as it were) kept above ground, unbared for a time. But for men, after a sufficient time indulged them for their satisfaction, concerning the abolition of the Ceremonial Law, still to adhere to it, and Religiously to observe the use of it, as in obedience to a Divine Precept, and as necessary, over and above Faith in Christ for justification, was indeed to deny Christ, and disclaim his sufficiency to save. Who is able to save to the utmost them that come to God by him, and Jesus whom there is no name given under Heaven, by which men can be saved, neither is there salvation in any other, Acts 4. 12. 11. 12. and who is the end of the Law, for righteousness to every one that believeth, Rom. 10. 4. So that to keep any thing with Christ, and Faith in him, for the justification of the Soul before God, is plainly to deny, and disclaim him, and to make him insignificant to us. This Paul affirms with an Apostolical authority and gravity, I Paul say unto you.

3 For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law d.

d This must be understood either of the Gentiles only, (who were never under any obligation to circumcision, or of such as were circumcised, with an opinion that it was necessary at this time to justification and Salvation. Of these (the Apostle faith) that by they they made themselves debtors to the whole Law. They were obliged to one part of the Law, they must also be obliged to all the other parts of it. Besides that circumcision was an owning and professing subjection to the whole Law. As the receiving the Sacrament of Baptism is a professing subjection of ourselves to the whole Gospel. Obj. But a man may say I ought not then all Christians to observe the law? Answer. Not the Ceremonial and Political Law, which were peculiar to the Jewish Church and State. 2. It is one thing to be under an obligation to our utmost to fulfil the law, another thing to acknowledge our selves debtors to the law. Obj. But did not the Fathers then by being circumcised, acknowledge themselves debtors to the law? Answer. Yes, they did acknowledge themselves bound to the observation of the law, and to endure (upon the breaking it) the curse of it: But they were discharged from this obligation by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ; who was made a curse for them, that he might redeem them from the curse of the law: But if any disclaimed Christ, (which whosoever added any thing to the Righteousness of Faith, as to the justification of the Soul, did, (as the Apostle had said in the former verse) they laid themselves under an obligation to fulfil the whole Law of God, if they would be saved.

4 Christ is become of no effect unto you, whofoever of you are justified by the law e, ye are fallen from grace f.

e The word here translated, become of no effect is used Rom. 3. 3. by those, who are justified by the Law, are to be understood such as feel, or decide to be justified by the Law, for actually none is so justified. The sense is, who ever seeketh to be justified by the works of the Law, he disclaimeth the righteousness of Christ; to him Christ's death signifieth nothing, nor is of any virtue at all: For he had told us before, chap. 2. 21. If Righteousness were by the Law, then Christ is dead in vain, and Rom. 8. 3. What law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for us condemned to it in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, &c. The very end of Christ's coming and dying was to supply us with a righteousness, which (apprehended by Faith) should be reckoned to us as ours; wherein we might stand before God. Which end of Christ's Death had been frustrated, if through our flesh, there had not been such a weakness, or impotency in the Law as to justification. So as if any still looked for justification by performance of the Law, as such, made the death of Christ in vain, because if such a thing could have been done, that way, there had been no need of Christ's dying: So they also made it, which was not in vain in itself, yet in vain, and of no effect to their Souls, because Christ would not be a partial cause in the justification of a Soul. f And they, by this renounced the Grace of God established in the Gospel, and fell from the grace of it. For by Grace here is not to be understood, a state of grace, (from which none can fall totally and finally,) but the Grace of the Gospel; by which is signified the free love of God in it exhibited, offering Christ to sinners for Righteousness.

5 For we g, through the Spirit h, wait for the hope of righteousness i by faith k.

g We Christians, who have truly embraced Christ. Or (as others think) we that are turned from Judaism to Christianity; and so are more concerned in the Law, which was not given to the Gentiles, but to us Jews: Yet, h by the guidance and direction of the Spirit, or through the operation of the Spirit in us. i We wait for the hope of Righteousness; that is, We hope for righteousness; that Righteousness whereby we shall be made righteous before God; or, (as some will have it) the Grace of Righteousness: I had rather understand it of Righteousness itself, that having been all along the argument of the Apostles discourse here, and not of our observance of the Law, but by Faith in Jesus Christ.

6 For * in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision l, but faith which worketh by love m.

l This is the same as the former, that neither circumcision nor uncircumcision is of any avail to us, but faith which worketh by love.

l Under the New Testament (established in Christ, and confirmed by the death of Christ, there is no difference betwixt Jew and Gentile; there is but one way of justification, one of Salvation for them both. m And that is, by believing in Christ Jesus, which Faith is not an idle, inactive, inoperative Faith; but such a Faith as worketh by love, both towards God and towards men in an obedience to all the commandments of God: yet is not the Soul justified, nor shall it stand righteous before God in and for this obedience, which neither is Faith, nor good before it, but followeth it, as the true, proper, and necessary effect of it.

7 * Ye did run well n, who did * hinder you * 1 Cor. 9. 24; that you should not obey the truth o.

n This was once your Faith, your profession, and according to this you directed the course of your Life and Actions; who hath hindered you in your course, or turned you out of your way, or given you a check in your race. o And hath made you disobedient to, or to sever from the truth which you formerly owned and professed.

8 This perswasion p cometh not of him * that * chap. 1. 6; calleth you q.

q This new opinion into which Seducers have misled you, which by imbracing it, you have made yours; it is not from God, who hath called you out of darkness into marvellous light, unto fellowship with himself, into a state of Grace and Favour with him, and to the hopes of Eternal Life; and who yet calleth you by his Gospel: it must therefore be from the Devil and his Instruments, who go about to seduce and pervert you.

9 A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump r.

r This is a proverbial expression, which (as others of that nature) is applicable in more cases than one. The Apostle made use of it, 1 Cor. 5. 6. to persuade that Church to purge their Communion, by calling out the incontinent person: he maketh use of it here to persuade them to take heed of admitting any principles of false Doctrine, which he compareth to leaven, (as our Saviour does, Matth. 13. 33.) And that very, both in regard of the force, and of the diffusive nature of it: the latter of which is here chiefly intended. The truth of God having such dependence one upon another, that who erreth in any one Doctrine of Faith, seldom continueth long found as to other points.

10 * I have confidence in you through the * 2 Cor. 2. 3; Lord, that you will be none otherwised minded s, & 8. 22; but * he that troubleth you shall bear his judg- * chap. 1. 7; ment, whofoever he be t.

s The Apostle (according to his usual method) sweareth his sharp reproof of this Church for their deviations from the Faith of the Gospel, with a declaration of his good opinion of them; declaring that he had confidence in them, that through the Grace of God they would be reduced to the truth, or kept from wandering from it, and that in matters of Faith they would be all of the same mind. t And for those who endeavoured to seduce and pervert them, the Apostle would reward them according to their works. He seems to aim at some particular false Teacher, (whose Name he concealeth,) who gave this Church this trouble.

11 And I brethren, if I yet preach circumcision u, why do I yet suffer persecution w? then is the * offence of the cross ceased x. * 1 Cor. 1. 23;

u It should seem by what the Apostle faith in this verse, that some of these false Teachers had quoted the Apostle for them, as if he himself had preached circumcision; possibly taking advantage from his circumcising Timothy, not distinguishing betwixt what was done by Paul as of liberty, and to avoid the offence of the Jews, and what they pressed as necessary to be done, besides believing in Christ for justification. Now (saith the Apostle) if I yet preach up circumcision as necessary to be observed, w Why am I then persecuted by the Jews, as one who preacheth their Religion? z By the cross, he either means the cross of Christ; then the sentence, it is my opposing the observance of their law, that more offendeth them than my preaching of Christ crucified. Or else, he meaneth, the suffering which he suffered for the sake of Christ, and the Gospel; (in which sense the term is used, Matth. 16. 24; 2 Cor. 12. 10; them. And so it agreeth with that precept, Rom. 12. 15. f By the Law of Christ, he means the Will of Christ revealed in the Gospel; particularly the Law of Love so much enjoyed by Christ, John 13. 15. 33. 34. 35. and 15. 12. Which is not called the Law of Christ, because first given by him; (for himself maketh it the sum of the Ten Commandments;) but because he received it and vindicated it from the corruption of the Pharisee interpretation, Matth. 5. 43. 44. because he so often urged it, and so seriously commanded and commended it to his Disciples; and for us the highest precept, and example of it, and hath by his Spirit written it in the hearts of his People.

7 * Be not deceived, God is not mocked n * 1 Cor. 5. 13. 14. 15. Rom. 2. 6. For * whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap s.

a The Apostle addeth this, to terrifie those who find out vain, and false excuses to save their purges, he advieth them not to cheat themselves, for though they might deceive many they could not deceive the All-seeing, and Heart-teaching God. a Further to encourage them to this communicating, he maketh them, that what they dishonour in this nature, was no more lost, then the seed which the Husbandman casteth into the ground; which in its season springs up, and cometh into the Husbandmans hand with increase. This Metaphor of Sowing, is made use of also, Proverbs 11. chapter. 18. verse. 2. 1 Cor. 9. 6. to expresse mens actions, and lets us know that our actions when done, are not done with, but as our seeds shall rise again, so what we have done in the Field shall be revived and judged, whatsoever either for quintity, or for quality men sow, the same shall they reap; As to quintity, he saith in 2 Corinthians 9. 5. that he who sows sparingly, should reap sparingly, and he that sowed bountifully should reap bountifully: As to quality he here further addeth.

8 For he that soweth to his flesh p, shall of the flesh reap corruption q; but he that soweth to the spirit r, shall of the spirit reap life everlasting r.

p He that layeth out his Estate, or spendeth his time and talents, for the gratifying of the flesh, q shall of it reap some carnal satisfaction, of a corruptible, dying, perishing nature. r But he who layeth out his Estate, or spendeth his time, strength, talents, whatsoever God hath given him, for the Glory of God, in obedience to the commands, motions, and dictates of the Spirit, or the Revelations of the Divine Will; he shall not of merits, but of Grace from the Spirit reap everlasting Life, Reward and Satisfaction. So that as in the World, man doth not suffer loss, that layeth out his money, time, or strength, about good things of a valuable, and enduring nature; but he onely who layeth them out about things perishing, and transitory, and of a corruptible nature: so that man shall not loose his Estate that layeth it out for the maintenance of the Gospel and upholding the Ministry of it; for the soweth to the spirit, and shall thereof reap eternal Life and Salvation: he who loseth his estate, &c. who spendeth it to gratifie his lusts, and please his flesh, for all the return which he shall have, will be in poor sensible perishing good things; which perish with the using, and will be of no significance to him beyond this Life.

9 And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season, we shall reap if we faint not n.

a We have the same precept, a Thessalonians 5. 12. As he not executing of judgement speedily imboldens himself, and encourage them to go on in courses of sin, so Gods delaying the rewards of the righteous, often proveth a temptation to good men to be weary of well doing. Against this the Apostle cautioneth us here. a By minding us, that there is a due season for all things, (which is best known to the wise God) r and assuring us that though as we see not the Husbandman presently reaping as soon as he hath sown, but waiting patiently in hope, that in a due season he shall reap, so we, though we be not presently rewarded, yet in Gods season shall as certainly reap as he doth. But he also mindeth us, that if we will reap we must not faint, but go on and persevere in our course of well doing; otherwise we can no more expect to reap, then the husbandman can that hath sown well, but out of impatience before the time cometh for him to reap, shall go and plow up again all that he hath sown, Ezek. 33. 13.

10 As we have therefore opportunity w let us do good unto all men x, especially unto them who are of the household of faith y.

a As we have objects before us, or as God gives us time, and ability. 2 Let it be our business to harm none, but to supply the necessities of all men; either with our spiritual advice and counsels, with all the assistance we can give them that may in any way be of spiritual profit or advantage to them; or with our worldly Goods, ministering to their necessities. y But all in an order preferring Christians before others: those that belong to the Church, (which is called the household of God, 1 Tim. 3. 15. 1 Pet. 4. 17. and the household of Faith, Eph. 2. 19.) before such as have no such relation to the Church.

11 Ye see how large a letter I have written to you, with my own hand z.

2 Paul made use of the hands of others in the writing some others of the Epistles as appears from Rom. 16. 22. and sometimes he himself only wrote the salutation, 1 Cor. 16. 21. but he tells them he wrote this Epistle to them wholly with his own hand; that he might thereby more commend his Love to them and care over them.

12 As many as desire to make a fair shew in the flesh a, they constrain you to be circumcised b: * only lest they should suffer persecution for the cross of Christ c.

a The Apostle here reflecteth upon those false Teachers, who had perverted this Church, and discovereth their hypocrisy under all their pretences of good will to them. These are those who (he saith) desired to make a fair shew in the flesh; that is, to make a fair shew to the world as men very devout (which Formalists and persons over-zealous for Rituals ordinarily do.) b These would constrain, were very urgent to perswade these Believers to be circumcised, not out of any Love they had to the Law of God, or to the souls of these Galatians. c But only to avoid Persecution; for as the Jews were more favourable to such Christians, who together with the Doctrine of Christ observed all their Rites, and Legal Ceremonies: so we are told by some of the Ancients, that some of the Roman Emperors by their Edicts gave liberty to the Jews in the Provinces subject to them, to use their own Religious Rites, now all who were circumcised went under that notion, so had more liberty then those who were not circumcised, who were persecuted both by the Jewish and the Heathen Magistrates. The Apostle saith, that these false Teachers, who so zealously urged circumcision upon this Gentile Church, did it for no other end but for the avoiding the danger of Persecution; which they law would follow their standing fast in their Gospel liberty, and not bringing themselves under the Law: which Persecution he tacitely hinteth ought not to be so industriously shunned and avoided, because it was for Christs sake, who had endured the cross for them.

13 For neither they themselves who are circumcised keep the law d, but desire to have you circumcised, that they may glory in your flesh e.

d In this the Hypocrisy of your false Teachers discovereth its self, that whereas by their being circumcised, they had declared themselves Debtors to the whole Law, and under an obligation entirely to keep it if they would be saved; yet they themselves did not keep it, only were very zealous for this one thing, not out of any love they had to the Law. e But that they might Glory of you, as their Converts being by them perswaded to be circumcised.

14 But God forbid that I should glory in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ f, by whom the world is * crucified unto me, and I unto the world g.

f For my part I have no such ends, I have no Ambition to glory in you as my Converts; all that I desire to glory in, is in the Doctrine of the Gospel, and my sufferings for the propagation of it, and my conformity to Christ in suffering for Preaching the Gospel. g By the cross of Christ the World is crucified to me, and I to it, I care no more for the World then it careth for me; the World despiseth and contemneth me, and the Doctrine of the cross which I Preach and publish in it, and I contemn it, with all its vain pomp and splendor. And this I do through the Cross of Christ, remembering how the World dealt with Christ; and how little he regarded the world, or through the Grace of Christ who hath enabled me to it, for the particle Translated, by whom may be indifferently Translated by whom or by which.

15 For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing h, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature i.

h Under the Gospel state as settled by Christ, with reference to salvation, it is of no moment whether a man be a Jew or h a Gentile. i But whether a man be Regenerated or no, and be Renewed by the Holy Ghost, so as old things with him be passed away, and all things become new. He had said the same chap. 3. 28. and y. 6. See also 2 Cor. 5. 17. under the Law indeed there was something in Circumcision, as it was Gods Covenant in the flesh to that people to whom he gave it, and the Uncircumcised were strangers to the Covenants of promise, and aliens to the Church of God, but under the Gospel, Circumcision and Uncircumcision are of no significance; God neither regards any for the former, nor rejecteth any for the latter, he only looketh at the heart and inward man whether that be Renewed, and sanctified, yea or no.

16 * And as many as walk according to * Psal. 125. 3. this rule k, peace be on them, and mercy l, and upon the * Israel of God m. \ Rom. 4. 12. Chap. 3. 29.*

k He either meaneth the Rule of Scripture, the whole Word of God; or the Doctrine which he had taught them throughout this Epistle, or what he had said in the words immediately going before, where the Apostle had given them this Rule, not to regard either Circumcision or uncircumcision, or any thing in the flesh, but only the change of their hearts. l To these he either Prophesieth Peace and Mercy, or he Prayeth Peace and Mercy for them, under which large terms, he comprehendeth all good things whether internal or external. m Upon the true Israelites, whom he calleth the Israel of God; hereby intimating and confirming the Truth of what he had said, Rom. 2. 28. 29. and what our Saviour had said of Nathaniel, John 1. 47. calling him an Israelite indeed because in him was no guile. And establishing a distinction betwixt such as were so really, and those who were only Israelites in name, because descended from Jacob to whom God gave the name of Israel. Hereby also checking the vanity of the Jews, who gloried in the name of Israelites, and thought there could no water come out of the Fountains of Israel which God would cast away. The Apostle doth not promise, or prophesie Mercy and Peace to all Israelites, but only to the Israel of God; that is, to Believers that received, and embraced Jesus Christ offered in the Gospel.

17 From henceforth let no man trouble me n, for * I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus o. \ 2 Cor. 4. 10.*

n Let no man trouble me, either with questions about circumcision, or with imputations as if I were a Friend to their opinion, of the necessity of adding to the Doctrine of Faith, circumcision and other observances of the Law. <sup>a</sup> I sufficiently declare my judgment to the World, suffering for my profession, and Preaching the Gospel. These sufferings he calls the marks of the Lord Jesus Christ, because he endured them in Testimony to the Gospel, as well against the Jews as against the Gentiles.

18 Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirits p. Amen.

<sup>p</sup> The Apostle closeth this Epistle with this Prayer, as he generally concludeth all his Epistles, with wishing them Grace, the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ: Under which, he comprehendeth all the effects of the Free love of God upon Believers Souls, for the sake, and in, and through the merits of the Lord Jesus Christ: this he prayeth that they might feel in their hearts, and that it might be in their spirits, to quicken, strengthen, comfort, and establish them according to the different manifestations of the spirit of Grace.

¶ Unto the Galatians written from Rome.

It hath been said before that we are not to look upon these dates of Apostolical Epistles as part of Holy Writ, (for in some of them there are manifest mistakes.) But most think that this Epistle was written from Rome, while Paul was a Prisoner there, who are in part guided to it from ver. 16. thinking that it was wrote at a time when Paul was there suffering imprisonment. But of this there is no certainty.

EPHESIANS.

EPHESIANS.

The ARGUMENT.

Ephesus was the most considerable City of the lesser Asia; famous first for sin, witchcraft, Act. 19. 19. Idolatry (especially the worship of Diana, v. 24.) and persecution, 1. Cor. 15. 32. and 16. 9. then for piety, having received the Gospel by Paul's Preaching, Act. 18. and showed great zeal, ch. 19. 17, 18. &c. Rev. 2. 2, 3. But lastly it was noted for Coolness and Declining, v. 4. leaving her first Love. The Apostle seems to have foreseen this as like to come to pass among them by means of false Teachers, grievous Wolves that would not spare the Flock, Act. 20. 29. and some that would arise from among themselves speaking perverse things, v. 30. Hereupon he not only admonished the elders of the Church to look to themselves and all the Flock, v. 28. but afterward when a Prisoner at Rome, out of his care of these Ephesians, and concern for them, he writes this Epistle to them, to confirm and settle them in the faith they had received, and persuade them to an holy Conversation as best suited to a holy Gospel. In the Epistle there are two principal parts. 1. Doctrinal in the 3 first Chapters, where he lays down and commends to them the Doctrine of the Grace of God in Election, Redemption, Vocation, Justification, Adoption, ch. 1. illustrating it by the deplorable condition in which before their conversion they had been, ch. 2. and assuring them of the truth of their call by asserting against all objectors and cavillers, his Apostleship with respect to them Gentiles, and his Commission from God to Preach among them the unsearchable Riches of Christ, ch. 3. 2. Practical in which he exhorts them to walk worthy of their calling in the diligent Practice of Christian duties, whether more General and which concern all believers, or special, such as belong to them in their several relations, especially Oeconomical, ch. 5. 6.

CHAP. I.

<sup>a</sup> This may be understood either, 1. by way of Restriction, of those that are fawere and constant to Christ, and so not only Saints by profession, but true to their profession; or, 2. rather, by way of Explication: he defines those Saints he spake of, and calls them faithful in Christ here, whom he called Saints before. <sup>b</sup> The Author and Fountain of that holiness which denominates them Saints.

<sup>c</sup> Grace be to you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

<sup>e</sup> i. e. Thanked, praised. We bless God when we praise him for, and acknowledge him in his excellencies or benefices. <sup>f</sup> Hath vouchsafed or communicated all spiritual Blessings to us. God blesseth us when he doeth good to us; and so the word Bless is taken in a different sense from what it was in the former clause. <sup>g</sup> Of all sorts or kinds.

<sup>h</sup> In opposition to temporal and worldly, which the carnal Jews principally expected, and the Law mostly promised, (Dut. 28. 1, 2. to v. 15.) and which were but types and shadows of those spiritual Blessings which immediately relate to the spiritual Life and Salvation of Believers. <sup>i</sup> Gr. Supercardinal or Heavenly, understand either, 1. Things; and then it seems to be the same as spiritual Blessings, only in other terms. Or, 2. Places, in opposition to earthly Places, particularly the Land of Canaan, in which God had formerly promised to Bless his people. These spiritual Blessings are in heavenly places, because, though they reach us here on earth, yet they are derived to us from God and Christ in Heaven, and in Heaven only have their full perfection and consummation hereafter. <sup>b</sup> By, or through Christ. Upon the account of whose merit, and by whose efficiency these spiritual Blessings are derived from God to us. <sup>c</sup> Or, in Christ as our head, the repository, and seat of all divine Blessings, from whom they flow down upon us as his Members, receiving all we have, out of his fullness. He seems to have respect to the promise made to Abraham, Gen. 22. 18. That in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed, pointing out Christ as that Seed, and those Blessings as Spiritual. Vid. Act. 3. 25, 26.

<sup>i</sup> God blesseth us with all spiritual Blessings according as he hath chosen us; Election being the fountain from whence those Blessings come, so that God doeth nothing for us in carrying on the work of our Salvation, but what he had in his eternal council before determined. <sup>k</sup> Separated us in his purpose and decree from others (whom he left out of that gracious act of his will) and determined that we should be holy and unblameable. <sup>l</sup> Either, 1. as in the former verse, by, and through Christ, for his sake, and upon the account of his merit as the procuring cause, not of our Election, but Sanctification; <sup>g</sup> i. e. God hath chosen us, that we should be made holy and unblameable by Christ. Or, 2. rather, in Christ as the foundation on which he would build us (his spiritual house) and by which both we might be united to God, and he communicate his influence and Grace to us; or as our head, by which he might convey Grace, and strength, and life to us as Christ's Members. <sup>m</sup> Either before God's Decree of creating the World, or rather, before his executing that Decree in the actual creation of it, i. e. from Eternity, when, nor we, nor the world had a being. <sup>n</sup> By inherent Grace begun in Regeneration, and carried on in Sanctification and Mortification in this life, though not perfected till the other. <sup>o</sup> Holiness in us is declared here to be not the cause, but the effect of our Election: we are chosen that we may be holy, not because we are, or God foresees we will be holy. <sup>p</sup> In the sight of God who is not deceived with an outward appearance, but looks to the Heart. <sup>q</sup> As a principal part of our Sanctification, and the best evidence of the fear of God in us, and our obedience to the whole Law.

<sup>y</sup> Having appointed us unto a state of Son-ship and right to Glory. This seems to be more than the former, a greater thing to be the Sons of God, as Heirs of Heaven, than to be Holy. <sup>z</sup> As Mediator, and Head of the Elect, and the foundation of all Spiritual Blessings vouchsafed them, and so of this relation into which they are brought, by being united to him. The adopted Children come into that that state by the intervention of the natural Son. † Either, 1. in himself, i. e. looking no farther than to himself for the cause of, and motive to his adopting them. Or, 2. according to our translation, to himself, i. e. to God. Or, rather, 3. for himself, (as the Syriac renders it) God would have the honour of having many adopted children that should all call him Father. † His Sovereign grace and good will as the only spring from which predestination issued, God being moved to it by nothing out of himself.

6 To the praise of the glory of his grace † wherein u he hath made us accepted in † the beloved x.

\ Gal. 3. 17.* † Glory of Grace, by an usual Hebrewism, for glorious grace, i. e. a large abundance, admirable. The praise of this Grace the Apostle makes the end of God's chusing and predestinating us to the Adoption of Children. God hath chosen us, &c. and therein manifested his Grace to us, that such as it is in itself, such it may be acknowledged to be, and therefore praised and adored by us. u In, or through, or by the same Grace out of which he chose us. † Having chosen us in Christ, he likewise favours us, is well pleased with us in Christ, to whom we are united, whose Spirit we are, and in whom God looks upon us. We are hateful in our own eyes, but accepted in Christ as Sons.

\ Act. 20. 28.* † In whom w we have redemption a through his blood b, even the forgiveness of sins c, according to † the riches of his grace d.

† Christ Godman the immediate worker of this Redemption; for though the Father and the Spirit concurred to it, yet the Redeeming work was peculiarly terminated in the second person. The other two persons have a right of propriety to Redeem us. Christ only is a right of propriety as assuming our nature, and being of kin to us. † We elect before mentioned, a Freedom from the Wrath of God, and Curse of the Law to which we are obnoxious, and consequently the Power of Sin, and Tyranny, as the effects of the former. b † By the Sacrifice of his Death upon the Cross where his Blood was shed. This was the price of Redemption paid to God for us, and where his Justice being satisfied, we could no longer be detained under the custody of the Devil, or the dominion of Sin. c Redemption is not formally forgiveness, but Causally, forgiveness being the effect of it; and it is mentioned not as the only, or adequate, but as the prime and principal fruit of Redemption, and upon which the other depend. d What he called Glorious Grace, e † here he calls Riches of Grace, meaning plentiful and superabundant Grace, by a Phrase frequently used by him elsewhere in the same sense, Rom. 9. 23, ch. 2. 4. 7.

8 Wherein he hath abounded † toward us in all wisdom and prudence g.

† In which Grace before mentioned he hath abounded toward us, i. e. out of abundance of Grace in himself (called Riches of Grace, v. 7.) he hath bestowed upon us wisdom and prudence. The like expression we have, 1 Tim. 1. 4. 5. † This denotes either, the perfection or excellency of it, being in itself all other wisdom, and more excellent than all else, or all in comparison of what was under the Old Testament. They then had Divine Truths revealed but by parts, and parcels, and so a more sparing measure of spiritual wisdom, but under the Gospel, Believers have it more fully and largely, the Spirit of Wisdom, and Revelation being poured out on them. g Either the Doctrine of the Gospel which contains more perfect, and higher wisdom than that the Greeks sought after, 1 Cor. 1. 22. and for lack of which, they counted the Gospel Foolishness; or rather, by wisdom is understood that Knowledge or Faith whereby we receive so as to their excellency, and have our hearts affected with them; and by Prudence the Knowledge of the rule of our Duty with skill to govern our selves according to it: And so Wisdom is no other than Faith, and Prudence, the same in effect with Holiness; the former relates to the things we are to Believe, the latter to the things we are to Do. In the working thereof two in the Soul, consists inward and effectual calling, which the Apostle mentions in this Verse as he doth the outward likewise, by the Preaching of the Word of the Gospel in the next.

\ Rom. 16. 25.* † Having made known g unto us the mystery of his will b according to his good pleasure c which he hath purposed in himself d.

† Having revealed to us outwardly by the Preaching of the Gospel; inwardly by the Illumination of the Spirit. b The whole Doctrine of Grace and Salvation by Christ, which is a secret to others, and had till been so to us, had not God discovered it to us in the Gospel. † The good pleasure of God, is the Fountain of all spiritual Blessings which flow out to us, as well as it is of our being first chosen and appointed to be the Subjects of them. † This signifies a firm fixed will in God, either merely of God, and moved by nothing out of himself, or his keeping this purpose in himself till the time appointed for the publication of it.

10 That in the dispensation l of the fulness of times m, he might gather together in one n, † all things o in Christ p, both which are in † heaven q, and which are on earth r, even in † him s.

\ Col. 1. 5.* † Some Copies join the last clause of the former Verse with this, leaving out the relative which, and concluding the sentence at good pleasure, and then read He purposed in himself that in the dispensation, &c. but must read it as our Translators have rendered it, only some under stand an explicative particle in in in the beginning of this Verse, 2 Tim. 1. 10. † in the dispensation, &c. but either way the scope of the words is the same, viz. to give the sum of that mystery of God's will mentioned before. l In that dispensation or distribution of the good things of God's house, which he had determined should be in the fulness of time. † It is a Metaphor taken from a Steward who distributes and dispenses according to his Master's order to those that are in the house, Luk. 12. 42. The Church is the House of God, God himself the Master of the Family, Christ the Steward that governs the Church, those spiritual Blessings mentioned, v. 3. are the good things he gives out. These Treasures of God's Grace had been opened but to a few, and dispensed sparingly under the Old Testament, the more full communication of them being reserved till the fulness of times when they were to be dispensed by Christ. m The time appointed of the Father for the appearance of Christ in the flesh (according to former promises) the promulgation of the Gospel, and thereby the gathering together in one, all things in Christ. n It is spoken in opposition to the time and ages before Christ's coming, which God would have run out till the full time came he had pitched upon, and Believers expected; see Gal. 4. 2, 4. n To recapitulate; either to sum up, as men do several letter numbers in one total sum, which is the foot of the account, but called by the Greeks the head of it, and set at the top; or Orators do the several parts of their Speeches in fewer words than all former prophecies, promises, types and shadows centers and were fulfilled, and as it were summed up in Christ; or rather, to unite unto, and gather together again under one head things before divided, and scattered. o All intellectual beings, or all persons, as Gal. 3. 22. p As their head under which they might be united to God, and to each other, g Either Saints departed, who have already obtained Salvation by Christ, or rather the Holy Angels that fill keep upon earth in their several administrations. The meaning of the whole seems to be, that whereas the order and harmony of God's principal Workmanship, Intellectual Creatures, Angels and Men had been disturbed and broken by entering of Sin into the World; all Mankind, and many of the Angels having Apostatized from him, and the remnant of them being in their own nature liable and mutable; God would in his appointed time, give Christ (the Head of all things) the Honour of being the repairer of this breach, by gathering together again the disjointed members of his Creation in and under Christ as their Head and Governor; confirming the good Angels in their good estate, and recovering his Elect among men from their Apostate condition. Though it be true, that not only Believers under the Old Testament were saved, but the Elect Angels confirmed before Christ's coming, yet both the one and the other was with a respect to Christ as their Head, and the foundation of their Union on God, and out of whom, as the one being lost could not have been restored, so the fall of the other could not have been prevented, nor their lapses secured.

11 In whom we f also have obtained an inheritance r, being predestinated u according to the purpose of him who worketh u all things after the counsel of his own will y.

† We Apostles and others Elect of the Jewish Nation, we who first trusted in Christ, v. 12. † A re called, or brought into the participation of an Inheritance, or have a Right given us to it as by lot. In allusion to the twelve Tribes, having in the Division of the Land of Canaan their Inheritances assigned them by lot. He shews that they did not first seek it, much less deserve it, but God cast it upon them: their lot fell in the Heavenly Inheritance when others did not. † This, as well as the forementioned privileges, was designed to us by eternal Predestination, and though it be free, yet without our procuring, yet in respect of God, it is not casual, but of his order, u † Powerfully and effectually; y. i. e. That infinite wisdom of God which is always in conjunction with his will, whereby he acts wisely as well as freely, and though not by deliberation which falls beneath his infinite perfection, yet with his greatest reason and judgment.

12 That we should be to the praise of his glory z who first † trusted in Christ a.

† Either 1. Passively, that the excellency and greatness of God's Wisdom, Power, Grace, Mercy, &c. might be shewn forth in us by our being predestinated, called, sanctified, saved: or 2. rather Actively, that we by the holiness, obedience, and fruitfulness of our conversions suitable to such privileges, might manifest and set forth the Glory of him that bestowed them to us. † u † We were the fruits of the New Testament Church, the Gospel having been first Preached to the Apostles by Christ himself, and by them to the Jews (their own Nation) and having been first believed by them.

13 In whom ye b also † trusted after ye heard the word of truth c the gospel of your salvation d; in whom e also after that ye believed, † ye were sealed with that holy spirit f of promise g.

† There is a defect of the Verb in the Greek, which may be supplied either from v. 11. which seems to be the principal Verb in the sentence, and then it must be read, In whom ye also have obtained an Inheritance: or from v. 12. † trusted, which is the nearest Verb, to our Translation, In whom ye also trusted, but neither way makes any difference in the scope of the words. b Ye Ephesians and other Gentiles. c The Gospel, so called either by an usual Hebrewism from the true word, or by way of Eminency, as containing the most excellent and necessary of all Truths, the Doctrine of Righteousness and Life by Jesus Christ; or 2. with respect to the Law and its shadows, the truth and substance of which, is held forth in the Gospel, d both in respect of the matter contained in it, the Doctrine of Salvation, and in respect of its efficiency, as being the means whereby God works Faith, and brings to Salvation, Rom. 1. 12. Heb. 2. 3. † In whom either is to be referred to Believers: g † after ye believed in Christ, or to Sealing, and then it shews by virtue of whom this benefit of Sealing is bestowed, viz. by virtue of Christ. e Ye were secured and strengthened in your Right to the Inheritance; which we may understand to be done either by the Spirit's impressing upon the Soul, the Image of God in the Work of Regeneration, or (because that cannot so well be understood to be after believing) rather by his Testimony in mens own Conscience afterward, whether immediate by an overpowering light, shining into the Soul, and filling it with assurance of its Interest in Christ and Heaven, or mediate, enabling a man to discern that Image of God in his Soul, by which the Spirit bears Witness to his Interest in the Inheritance, and assures him of it; see ch. 4. 30. Rom. 8. 16. Gal. 4. 6. f Because the Spirit's coming was before promised, or because he verifies and confirms the Promises, in and to the Hearts of Believers.

14 Which is the earnest of our inheritance g until the redemption of the purchased possession h, unto the praise of his glory i.

† The Spirit given to, and dwelling in Believers by his Gifts and Graces is the earnest or pledge whereby their Inheritance is secured to them; as Men are secured the payment of a promised Sum, by a part given beforehand in earnest for the rest. h Either 1. the Redemption of the Possession is put for the Possessing of the Redemption (by an Hyperallage) viz. full and final Redemption from Sin, and Death, Hell, and Satan; which Redemption though perfectly wrought by Christ, is but in part applied in this life, and is to be fully enjoyed in the other; or 2. rather (though to the same sense) to the full and final Redemption in the end of the World, of all God's people who are here called his Purchased Possession: see the same word to Isa. 44. 20. 28. and 1 Pet. 2. 9. † The final Salvation, and complete Redemption of God's people, will be especially for the Glory of God, 2 Thess. 1. 10.

15 Wherefore I also, † after I heard † of your faith in the Lord Jesus l, and love to all the saints m.

† He was an Eye Witness of their first believing, but here he speaks of their sincere and constancy in the Faith since, of which he had heard by others: l. i. e. not barely a Belief of Christ's Excellencies, but a belief of his being their Saviour, their receiving and relying on him as such, and so a Believing in him as the immediate object of their Faith, and him by whom they believed in God, 1. Pet. 1. 21. † This is added to shew the Truth of their Faith which works by love. Love to the Saints is mentioned as an Evidence of their Love to God, and to all the Saints, to shew the sincerity of that Love in working partial, but respecting all Saints, and therefore Saints as Saints.

16 † Cease not to give thanks for you n, making mention of you in my prayers o.

† For your Faith and Love, and all the spiritual Blessings God hath bestowed upon you. o I not only acknowledge what ye have received, but pray that what is yet lacking in you may be made up.

17 That † the God of our Lord Jesus Christ p, the Father of glory q may give unto you the Spirit of wisdom r, and revelation † in the knowledge † of him s.

† He is the God of Christ not according to Christ's Divine Nature, but his Humane, and as Mediator, in which respect he was subject to the Father. † The most glorious Father, and the Author of all Glory, and glorious things, and to whom all glory is due. † A greater measure (for some they already had) of Faith (as v. 9. where it is called Wisdom) or of the Knowledge of the things of God, whereof the Spirit is the Spirit works effectually, and so to give the Spirit of Wisdom. † By Revelation he means not extraordinary, such as the Prophets had, but ordinary, such as was common to Believers, and expresseth the manner of the Spirit's working this wisdom, that he doth it by removing the covering or veil of natural Ignorance, (Isa. 119. 18. Luk. 24. 45.) shining into the mind, and making it see what before it saw not; sometimes new objects, sometimes new excellencies in objects before known. Thus the Spirit works not only in the beginning of Faith and spiritual Knowledge, but in its farther progress he lets in new Light into the mind, and removes some remaining degree of natural Darkeness. † Or Acknowledgement, which may imply an owning, approving, and embracing things before known. † u. i. e. God or Christ, or God in Christ: and so either he declares here wherein the Wisdom he mentioned consists, viz. the Knowledge of God and Christ, in whom are hid all the treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge; or rather the end of that Wisdom and Revelation, viz. the acknowledgement of God or Christ, when we do know him, as to own him as ours, to embrace, and love, and wholly subject our selves to him, Col. 1. 9. 10.

18 The eyes of your understanding being enlightened x, that ye may know what is the hope of his calling y, and what the riches of the glory z of his inheritance b in the Saints c.

† viz. By that Spirit of Revelation: and to this clause explains the former. What the Eyes † to the Body, that the Understanding is to the Soul. He prays for a farther degree of Illumination for them. † Either 1. the object of Hope, the thing hoped for, as Col. 1. 5. Gal. 5. 5. and then the meaning is, What it is the hope of which God hath called you by the Gospel. Or 2. the Grace of Hope, g † that ye may know how great, and sure, and well grounded the hope is, which by the Gospel is wrought in you. † The glorious riches, or the abundant glory; Riches of Glory, and Riches of Grace, v. 7. and Riches of Glory, Rom. 9. 25. † because he is the Father of it: he gives this Glory as the Father of Glory. As Men give Inheritances suitable to their Estates, so God as the God of Glory, and Father of Glory, gives a Glorious Inheritance. h Heaven, called an Inheritance both in respect of Believers Title to it by virtue of their Adoption being Heirs of God, and in respect of the perpetuity of their enjoying it, on which account it is called an Eternal Inheritance, Isa. 9. 15. or among the Saints, those namely that are perfect, who alone are possessed of the Inheritance, which Saints on earth have only in hope.

19 And what † the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe † according to † the working † of his mighty power †.

† He means that Power of God which is put forth in the might of his power whereby he can do whatsoever is possible to be done, but his ordinate power, or power joined with his will, whereby by not only he will work in raising us up at last, and finally saving us, but hath wrought in beguering Faith in us, and doth work in ill preferring that Faith (1. Pet. 1. 5.) and carrying us on in the way of Salvation. And this he speaks for the encouragement of the Ephesians, that they should not fear falling short of the Riches of the Glory of the Inheritance mentioned, seeing God who hath by his power brought them to Christ, is able likewise by the same power to bring them to Glory. † Some point the words after us-ward, and render them, Who believe according to the working of his mighty power, &c. and then the meaning must be, that the working Faith in Believers, is an instance of his mighty power: he hath shewn his power in working Faith, and therefore will shew it in the remainder of Salvation which is to follow. But our Translation favours the former sense, and then as

We Believers both Jews and Gentiles, O Not only as men, but especially as Saints, which is the proper measure here, The Judaistic People formerly were God's Chosen, Matt. 22: 6. Ijai. 43: 21. and 44: 21. The Apostle confirms what he said before, Rom. 8: 17. We are saved and not of works, in that we are God's workmanship, and are formed by Him so that we can do any good work, and his forming us in our Regeneration is a part of the Salvation mentioned v. 8-9 Who as our Head enlivens us as members united to Him by Faith. As the first Creation was by Christ the second Person in the Trinity, John 1: 2. so the second Creation is by Him who is the Father, Col. 3: 10. The Head of the New Creation; in whom we live, and move, and have our new being, and nor in our self, 2 Cor. 5: 17. g As the immediate end for which we were new created. We receive our new being that we may bring forth new works, and have a carriage prepared to our new principle. Or rather, as the Margin, prepared, i. e. prepared and fitted up for them, as the new-born mind knows how to will, disposing and enlivening our minds, and making us ready, 1 Pet. 1: 2. A Third Covenant in which the great promise of Christ and Salvation by him was made. The Covenants were several, as that with Abraham, and that by Moses; and differs in some accidents, but the promise in them was one and the same, which was the guidance of care. ¶ Viz. Beyond this Line, as they could not but be who were without Christ, and without his promises. c. Noe: without knowledge of him, as they could not but be who were without general knowledge of a God, but without any favour or grace of him, as not knowing him in Christ: or they lived as without God, neglecting him, and being neglected by him, and suffered to walk in their own ways. d. Which is the Exposition of the wicked, and is here opposed to the Church.

It seems to be an allusion to that Wall of the Temple which parted between the Court of the People into which the Jews came, and the outermost Court, that of the Gentiles, who when they came to Worship, might not come into the outer Court, and were excluded by this wall.

The Ceremonies had their accomplishment in Christ, and so their abolishment by him. o By a Metonymy he calls the Ceremonies, which were the cause and the sign of enmity between Jew and Gentile. The Jews hated the Gentiles as Uncircumcised, and the Gentiles despised the Jews for being Circumcised. p Either by the Law of Commandments, the Apostles means the Law of Ceremonial Rites, and by the word which we render Ordinances, he means Doctrine, and then (the word contained not being in the Gr) the sense is, that Christ by his Doctrine or Commandments abolished those Ceremonial Rites: the word Commandments seems thus to be used, Deut. 16. 12. and 1 Kings 2. 3. Ezek. 18. 21. Or else (which yet comes to the same) the word rendered Ordinances signifies such Ordinances as depended upon the sole will of the Law-giver; and then, Col. 2. 14, taken for Ceremonial ones, and so to be taken here. They are said to be of the Household that belong to it, but especially the Children. Among Men, Servants are counted Donelicks, but with God none but his Children.

FOR this cause * I Paul * the prisoner of Jesus Christ y † for you Gentiles z. x i. e. Philim. 1. 9. z For your Cause and Salvation; having preached and declared the Grace of God to be Free, and to belong to you Gentiles as well as to the Jew (the middle wall of partition being taken away) and so equalled you with them. There is no small difference among Expositors about the connexion of these words; the fairest and easiest seems to be: Either 1. that the Substantive Verb can be here supplied, and the words read, I Paul am the Prisoner of Jesus Christ, q. d. I have for some time been and fill am the Prisoner of Jesus Christ. Or 2. that this Verse be joined to the 14. (all the rest from v. 2. to the 13. being included in a Parenthesis) where he begins with the same words as here, and so we may read it thus, v. 1. For this cause I Paul the prisoner, &c. and then v. 14. I say, For this cause I bow my knees, &c. viz. praying that ye may be strengthened with might by his Spirit, &c. i. e. See the like, 1 Pet. 2. 2. b Either by Grace he means his Apostleship, as Rom. 15. 14. Gal. 2. 9. or the Free Grace of God for Salvation revealed in the Gospel which was to Preach, and then by Dispensation we must understand his Commission, or Ordination of God to that work, viz. to publish that Grace whereby the Ministers of the Gospel are the Dispensers, 1 Cor. 4. 1. c To you Ephesians and other Gentiles for whom particularly I am appointed an Apostle, Act. 9. 15. & 26. 17. 18. 8 Unto me who am less than the least of all saints: is this grace given, that * I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ t.

Thus modest is the Apostle, when speaking of himself, and not of his Office. u All that Grace of Christ which he was to make known to the Gentiles in his Preaching, Wisdom, Righteousness, Sanctification, Redemption, 1 Cor. 1. 30.

The Divine Wisdom is in itself one simple thing, but appearing in so great variety of Works, it is said to be various. This may be best understood of the whole Economy of Men's Redemption, and God's governing his Church in several Ages, the several Forms of the Church, the various ways of revealing the Divine Will, the different measures of Light let out in different times, the different Dispensations of the Covenant of Grace before the Law, under the Law, under the Gospel, to the Jews, to the Gentiles, &c.

11 According to the eternal purpose f which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord g.

f All that God doeth in the work of our Redemption, whereby he sets forth his manifold wisdom, he doeth according to what he had from eternity purposed to do, and therein likewise shews his wisdom to which it belongs to order and determine things before the doing of them, and then to do them as they have been ordered. g Not only to the eternal Wisdom of the Father, but as designed in God's Decree to be the Head of the Church, and he by whom God would in time execute his eternal purpose.

13 * Wherefore I desire n that ye faint not at * my tribulations for you o, which is your glory p. i. Theif. 3. 1. I pray you. This is an exhortation to the Ephesians, Verse 1. not a Prayer to God, for that follows, v. 14. e The Truth I have Preached to you being the cause of my sufferings, and your Salvation (to which they tend as a mean to confirm your Faith) being the end of them. p Either he means, that their not fainting, or not falling away from Christ by reason of his sufferings was their glory, or rather, that his sufferings were their glory, in that he did by them (see the Truth of the Doctrine he had Preached, being still ready to suffer for what he delivered to them).

14 For this cause q I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, q This may be referred either to the former Verse, for this cause, viz. that ye faint not, &c. or rather to the fifth Verse, the Apostle here resuming what he had been beginning there.

¶ He adds a further argument to move them unto that he had exhorted, from God's freely bestowing of his mere grace what he had required of them. ¶ Upon the account of Christ's Merit, and Mediation; not that they could have either Evangelical Faith, or Patience, by virtue of that own strength, ch. 4. 13. b That they did not only believe Christ, but believe on him, was not from any power of their own, Eph. 6. 37, 44. but of God's free gift, Eph. 2. 8. as they had an influence amongst them in Lydias, Act. 16. 14. unto Her and others was this victorious Grace of Faith freely given by the hearing of the Word, which was not unto many others that heard, Mat. 13. 11. 2 Thess. 3. 2. Tit. 1. 1. and as the grace it felt was given, so was the exercise of it. c Sixth, upon the account of Christ's patience was given, that to suffer here, doth not only import a power to suffer, but actual suffering; not only the habit of Faith, but the act of Believing, even as the Fruits of Trees at the first Creation were produced, as well as the Trees which had a power to bear them; wherefore, if by the Grace of God, and Spirit of Faith, they were empowered actually to believe, Mark 9. 24. 1 Cor. 15. 10. 2 Cor. 4. 15. having truth through Christ's Word, 2 Cor. 3. 4. and upon the same account they were continually enabled to suffer not simply, but in bearing testimony to Christ, Act. 5. 41. 1 Pet. 3. 14. & 16. They might be of good comfort and courage, to the daunting of their Adversaries.

30 Having the same conflict d which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me e.
d And be hearted to partake with him in the trials he sustained when amongst them, Act. 16. 19, 22. e And which he now was enduring at Rome, v. 13. an example of suffering unto them, if they would but await the blessed issue of his agony.

CHAP. II.

I F there be therefore any consolation in Christ a, if any comfort of love b, if any fellowship of the Spirit c, if any bowels and mercies d.

The Apostle resuming his exhortation in the former Chapter to unanimity, v. 27. doth here by way of inference from what went immediately before, press them in a very affectionate manner, with a kind of Rhetorical Relation, and Obsecration as it were, advise them. If any such exhortation (as the word is rendered, Act. 13. 15. 1 Thess. 4. 3. 1 Tim. 4. 13.) in the name of Christ, might avail with them to cheer him and one another by their loving concord and being unanimous. Or as we rendering it consolation (so Act. 13. 15. Rom. 15. 4. 2 Cor. 1. 4.) if he which may well suppose and strongly affirm that he took it for granted the main Body of them had in some measure, found by his Ministry, what he here moves them to complete (compare, ch. 1. 6, 7, 27.) in expectation to find more, of what they had experienced, what ever indignation might have crept upon some by the insinuations of the false Apostles, yet, this Consolation in Christ may be considered either (1.) Alively, ch. 4. If ye would comfort me afflicted, in the concerns of Christ, or if ye have any Christian comfort which doth only proceed from those that are in Christ, (not from moral Philosophy) or which is wont to be in those who worship the same Christ, let me his Apostle be a partaker thereof. Or (2.) Passively, 2 Cor. 4. 4. Philim. 9. If you being in Christ, find any consolation against your affliction, for as much as you have received it by my Ministry, we being both in like circumstances, should be further comforted by a sweet agreement. b The Sympathy render it any speaking to the heart, any Solace from good and comfortable words did reach your hearts, Job 11. 19, 31. 1 Cor. 14. 3. 1 Thess. 1. 11. & 5. 14. cheered with the love of God or Christ, or the Brethren: or refreshed with my love to you, ch. 1. 8, 9. or would that I should be comforted with your love to me, (as he himself and others were with the gracious affections of the Circumstances, 2 Cor. 7. 7.) which ye ought unanimously. c If ye have any Communion with me in the Graces of the Spirit, and stand fast in one Spirit, ch. 1. 27. and would shew that you do persevere in the same Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 4. which acts in all the Members of the Mystical Body of Christ, that do in him their head partake of it. d If ye are daily affected with my real Sympathy, and Communion towards me in my bonds for Christ, such inward affections as were moving in him towards them, ch. 1. 8. with Link, 1. 7. 8. 2 Cor. 7. 15. Col. 3. 12. the latter word Emphatically expressing the sense of the Metaphor in the former. Then he having thus Pathetically urged these Arguments, and closely follow'd them to embrace the matter propos'd purs them upon.

2 Fulfill ye my joy: a that ye be like minded b, having the same love being of one accord c, of one mind d.

e *W*ix. The exercise of those Graces had been joyful for, which would be an Addition to that joy he had for them, and the making of it much more abundant, contributing as much as the Friends of the Bridegroom here can to the completing of it, Job. 3. 29. f Which is when they believe and affect the same things agreeable to the mind of God, ch. 3. 15. Act. 4. 32. Rom. 12. 16. 2 Cor. 13. 11. g Having the same mutual Christian Charity, ch. 4. 2. Col. 3. 14. be being unanimous in their honest designs, Job. 17. 22. 1 Pet. 3. 8. Agreeing as to the main in the same judgment and opinion to promote the interest of Christ, 1 Cor. 1. 10. Gal. 5. 7. 10.

3 Let nothing I be done through strife or vain-glory m, but in lowliness of mind let each of them other better then themselves n.

1 Here the better to engage them to embrace what he had so pathetically exhorted them to, he doth disuade them from animosity, an affliction of displeasure, and self-seeking; and direct them to modesty and self denial. m Intimating they should by no means indulge an inordinate affection to live and quarrel with one another, provoking each other by an ambitious emulation to cross or excel others. This arguing a carnal temper opposite to true Christianity, Rom. 2. 8. v. 14. Gal. 5. 16, 24. being the very bane of true Christian Concord, Rom. 13. 13. Jam. 3. 16. and destructive to Faith, Job. 3. 44. 2 Cor. 12. 16. n But cherish and exercise true Christian modesty and meekness (which is another Mod that than that the Heathen Philosophers did prescribe) in a due preference of each other, Mat. 11. 29. Rom. 12. 10. Eph. 4. 2. 5. 21. 1 Pet. 5. 5. as the Apostle himself gave example, 1 Cor. 15. 8, 9. Q If any say, *How is this consistent with what the Apostle writes to them to think of praise and good report, ch. 4. 8. and of himself not a whit, and nothing behind the very chiefest Apostles? 2 Cor. 11. 5. & 12. 11. and further, how can some think others better than themselves in truth, unless they reckon good evil and evil good? 1 answer (1.) Be sure Christian modesty and real Humility, with prudence and mildness, are very commendable Graces, and in the sight of God of great price. 1 Pet. 3. 4. And therefore what he doth afterwards exhort to in this Epistle, doth very well agree with what he doth write here. Where (2.) He is treating of Grace and Godliness, whereas in those places to the Corinthians, he writes of some certain gifts, which by reason of the insinuations of false Apostles against him, he was necessitated in magnifying of his Apostolical Office and Authority (so 2 Cor. 10. 8.) to mention, being as it were compelled to, by the ingratitude of some of them at Corinth who had less influenced by the false Apostles, 2 Cor. 12. 5. yet they may see there, he doth not glory of himself, or his Person, but acknowledge his infirmities, 2 Cor. 11. 30. and that unfeignedly, speak the truth, every where, 2 Cor. 12. 16. which he makes evident to them from the nature of the thing it self, 2 Cor. 10. 12, 13, 15. 16. & 12. 12. appealing to God, as witnesses in the case, 2 Cor. 11. 31. referring all the glorying they put him upon, to the Grace of God through Christ, 1 Cor. 15. 10. 2 Cor. 12. 11. when they had cast contempt on his Ministry, 2 Cor. 10. 10, 11, 12, 13, 18. So that in respect of gifts and external Privileges, wherein are distinctions of Superiours and Inferiours, ch. 3. 4. he doth not urge that every Christian should prefer every other to himself, wherein is evident there is a real difference: but in respect of the Persons the Honesty and piety of others in God's sight (left left a Man by thinking himself something when he is nothing, should devalue himself, Gal. 6. 3.) Sixth in his Judgment they may be endow'd with some hidden quality, we know not, and be accompanied with him. Hence (3.) Our Estimation and preference of others to our selves who as Christian Brethren are oblig'd to serve one another, Gal. 5. 13. is not taken from, and with an absolute Judgment, as it was necessary to give them the preeminence in all things: but as to this, that a Man may think there is some defect in himself, which it may be is not in another; or with a suspension perhaps he is not better in truth; but considering mine heart is deceitful, and possibly he may be more without guile, I judge it not meet to prefer my self to him God will, I will praise mine own black Legs, and being bound in love to confess mine own, and cover the infirmities of my Brother, who labours to walk unwearily to his profession: 'tis safe for me to prefer him who may have some good latent which I have not, and whereupon he is to be esteemed by me. Wherefore (4.) The right management of the duty which the Apostle calls for to preserve Unanimity, depends upon a right and due Estimation of God's divers gifts and Graces which flow from the same Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 4. and an honest confession of our own infirmities: so that however one Christian may excel with some singular endowments: yet he ought to think they were not bestow'd upon him, that he should be puff'd up, or value himself above what is meet upon that account before God, he has the receipt of them of God, 1 Cor. 4. 7. but judge himself for his own defectiveness and failings: which will afford himself matter of abasement and humility; when yet with respect to others, whose hearts he knoweth, and in charity thinketh the best, 1 Cor. 13. 4, 5. and if in this case he should be mistaken, his modest apprehensions would be acceptable to God, (designing to approve that which he doth) and profitable to himself. *he doth engage them further unto Christian concord, he here directs them them as to their aim and scope (according to the import of the word) that it should not be their own private interest but the common good of Christianity, becoming those who have true Christian love, 1 Cor. 10. 24. & 13. 5. not as if he did disallow providing for their own, 1 Tim. 5. 8. or studying to be quiet, and doing their own business, 1 Thess. 4. 11. but that every member of Christ, whilst he considers his own Gifts, Graces, honour and advantage, would remember that he is not born only to serve himself or Pharisaically to conceal work of himself in the contempt of others, Link. 18. 11. but also and that such rule he should consider the contribution to the head, and every other member of the Body, and to consult the Gifts, Graces, Honour, and Edification of others, especially when more eminently useful, knowing that members should have the same care one for another, 1 Cor. 12. 24, to 28.

4 Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.

5 Let g this mind be in you g which was also in Christ Jesus.

1 Most Christians do express the causal or rather illative Grati, Particle, which own doth here omit as an expressive. However the Apostle doth urge them to the exercise of self love, mutual love, and an hearty condescension to one another from the great example of Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. 8. 9. g That to the mind which was in Christ, may be perceived in us, who if spiritual judge all things and have the mind of Christ, being enlighten'd by the same Spirit, we do judge as he coming in the flesh did, or Let the same affection be found in you, that was really in him, *Min. 11. 28. Neither indeed can he deny himself who is one, and besides whom there is no other true God, or God by Nature, Deut. 4. 35. & 6. 4. 2 Tim. 2. 12. who only doth wondrous things, Job. 72. 18. For to all Divine Operations a Divine power is requisite which is inseparable from the most simple essence and its properties. Being, or subsisting in the form of God, imports not Christ's appearance in exerting of God's power, but his real and actual essence in the Divine essence, not in accidents wherein nothing doth subsist, neither the vulgar Learners do use to say any one doth subsist, but appear in an outward habit, why then should any conceit the Apostle means so? The Genetists might speak of the Gods as appearing; but then, even they thought the Deity was one thing, and the habit or figure under which, or in which the appear'd was another, Act. 14. 11. so that subsisting in the form intimates in the Nature, and essence of God, not barely, but as it were clothed with properties and Glory. For the Apostle here treats of Christ's Condescension, proceeding from his actual existence, as the term wherein he is Co-eternal and Co-equal to God the Father, before he, abated himself with respect unto us. For he says not the form of God in Christ, (however that might be truly said) that the Advantages might not have occasion to say only there was wherein Christ was, viz. in the form of God, and so that form is predicated of God, as his essence and nature and can be no other thing. None can rationally imagine that God was an external figure, wherein Christ was subsisting. For subsistence implies some peculiarity relating to the substance of a certain thing, whence we may conclude the Son to be of the same, (not only of like) substance with the Father, considering what signifiably follows. Ue thought it not robbery, esteemed, counted, held, (so the word is used, 2. c. 3. 7. 8. 1 Thess. 1. 10. & 3. 15. 1 Tim. 1. 12. & 6. 1. Heb. 10. 29. & 11. 26.) it not Robbery, it being his right by eternal Generation) i. e. He did not judge it any wrong or usurpation, on that account of his being in the form of God, to be equal to his Father, being a subsistence in the same nature and essence with him. From openly shewing equal Majesty with whom he did not for a time obtain, in that he could reckon Robbery, as if such Majesty were that which did not agree to his nature, ever presupposing this inherent right, to his great condescension, or abasing himself, which follows as the term to which: or he reliev'd for a time not to shew himself in that glory which was his own right, but freely condescended to the vailing off. He did not really foregoe (neither was it possible he should) any thing of his Divine Glory, being the Son of God still, without any Robbery of Rapine, equal to his Father in Power and Glory, Job. 12. 3. & 1. 26. 3. 7. 20. 10 Paul doth not say as the divine of God would pervert his sense) he robbed not, or snatched not, held not fast equality with God, or (as the Societians since) Christ thought not to do this Robbery to God, or commit this Rape upon God, so as that he might be equal to him, but acknowledge'd he had it of the free Gift of God, chipping in the Adversative particle, but where it really is not: whereas we read not in the sacred Text, he thought not to do this robbery, but he thought it not robbery to be equal to God; which two are vastly different (even as much as to have the God-head by usurpation, and to have it by nature) In the former 'tis, g d Christ did not rob or snatch away the equality; in the latter, the equality which Christ had with God, he thought it not Robbery; he reputed not the Empire, he might have always continued in the exercise of, equal with the Father, as a thing usurp'd, or taken by force, (as one doth hold that he hath taken by spoil, making thereof his) For when he had said he had subsisted in the Form of God, he could (before he condescended) say also, he was equal to God, i. e. the Father, without any Robbery, Rapine or Usurpation. And if Societians urge that it is absurd and false in any sense to say, God thought he had robb'd, or taken by robbery the Divine essence; then this contradictory, God thought not he took by robbery the Divine Essence, is rational and true; as when it is said, God cannot lie, or God change his mind, as 1 Sam. 15. 26. Job. 33. 8. Mal. 3. 6. What Christ denied of God, doth imply the opposites are affirmed of him. The particle But which follows in its proper place before, made his self of no reputation, may be fairly joined with this sense. For if Christ should know that by rapine and unjust usurpation he was equal to God, (as likely the attempt to be so), was the Sin of our first Parents, which robbery of theirs Christ came to expiate) he had not emptied himself, nor vouchsafed to abate himself. Neither is Christ said to be equal to God only in respect of his works (which yet argues the same cause and principle, Job. 19. 21. 29. & 38. 37.) but absolutely he thought it not robbery to be altogether equal with God, as subsisting in the same nature and essence, the original phrase connoting an exact Parity. All the things of Christ (though he chose to have some of them void for a time) are equal to God, so some expound the Newer plural emphatically (as usual amongst the Greeks) to answer the Masculine singular foregoing, to express the ineffable sameness of the nature and essence of the divine subsistents. It may be read, He counted it not robbery that the things which are his own should be equal to God, i. e. the Father; or rather, that he himself should in all things be Equal or Parity to God. For had Christ been only equal by a delegated power from God, why should the Jews have consulted to kill him, for making himself equal with God? which with them was all one, as to make himself God, Job. 5. 18. & 10. 33. But that he spake of his eternal Generation, as owning him for his own Father, with whom he did work Miracles, even as the Father did in his own name, by his own power, of himself, for his own glory: neither by the Evangelists saying, The Son can do nothing of himself, infer an inequality with the Father, when what he doth, is equally perfect in power, and glory with the Father's, whence as Seneca, he hath it by nature. For (looking lower) though every Son receives from his Father, humane nature; yet is he not less a Man than his Father, or his Father more a Man than he; The Son having a being of the same per-

to Christ in purity and unity, to shew how necessary it was to avoid their iniquities, against which he is more sharp in his Epistle to the Galatians.

For we are the circumcision a, which worship God in the spirit b, and rejoice in Christ Jesus c, and have no confidence in the flesh d.

In opposition to, and confutation of the Concilium, he speaks of himself, and all true Believers in the fellowship of the Gospel, partakers of the same Grace and Spirit with him, ch. 1. 5, 7, 2. 1. and faith W. 4 Using a Metonymy, as the Circumcision now acceptable, and not displeasing to God, i. e. we are what is really signified by it, and therefore as to the main intent of it are the Circumcised (it being usual as to put Circumcision for Chremisid, Aff. 11. 2. Rom. 3. 30. and Col. 2. 10. Gal. 2. 7, 8, 9, 12. Col. 4. 11. Tit. 1. 10.) he doth not mean with respect to carnal Circumcision, i. e. which is outward in the flesh, but which is inward in the Spirit, Rom. 2. 28, 29. made without hands by the Circumcision of Christ, with whom we are buried in Baptism, Col. 2. 11, 12. and being Christ's are Abraham's spiritual Seed, and Heirs of the Promise, Gal. 3. 29. b. i. e. Who having cut off all carnal confidence of salvation, in any external service (which they of the concision contend for) and do worship God not with carnal, but spiritual Worship, such as ship God the Gospel he doth require, Job. 4. 23, 24. Rom. 1. 9. from a renewed heart, Job. 3. 8. 1 Pet. 3. 15. yielding peculiar adoration to the Lord our God, with a sincere mind, and by the assistance of his Spirit in the exercise of Faith and Love, Rom. 8. 5, 6, 26, 27. Eph. 3. 16, 17. & 6. 18. Heb. 10. 22. according to the same rule he hath prescribed, v. 16. with Rom. 12. 1, 2. Gal. 6. 16. and through Christ, Eph. 1. 15. c. In whom alone (not in Mosai also as acceptance Teachers would join them) glorying we trust for fellowship with God, 2 Cor. 5. 9. Gal. 6. 14. in communion with whom is ground of rejoicing through Christ, who is the substance or body of Mosai shadows, v. 9. and not self, or trust, or place our hope in any carnal or external privilege or performance, or any other besides Jesus Christ to commend us to God, Gal. 3. 2, 11, 12, 13.

4 Though I might also have confidence in the flesh e. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more f.

To prevent any cavil about what he said as if he did magnify Christ, and forbear glorying in those external privileges that he did much bear themselves upon, out of envy to them for what they had; he here argues upon supposition (as often where to cut off occasion from Boasters, 1 Cor. 11. 12, 18, 21, 22.) that if they were lawful, and would turn to any good account to confide in the flesh, he had the same ground the Impious had, and might build up that in himself which he had destroyed in others, Gal. 2. 13. f. yea, and to compare things by a just balance, if he thought he had justly taxed, or any other that in conceit might hold his head higher in that way, he could produce not only as much, but much more ground of trust in those external Rites, Eccl. 3. as that was most excellent; only that it was in vain, and of no value, v. 7.

5 Circumcised the eighth day g, of the stock of Israel h, of the tribe of Benjamin i, an Hebrew of the Hebrews k: as touching the law, a Pharisee l.

g Or there was, or I had the eighth day Circumcised: so it may be a usual supply of the Verb be read, (as also what follows) without a Metonymy. He begins with birth Privilege, intimating that he was not professed, but Born within the pale of the Church, and dedicated to God under the seal of the Covenant at the day of God's Appointment, Gen. 17. 12. h Not sprung from Ethiopic Parents, not an Israhel, nor Edemite, but a genuine Israhel, Rom. 11. 1. 2 Cor. 11. 22. i Of that more honest favour, and benefits whereof an eye of faith can discern transcendent mysteries, Is. 12. 11. Job. 17. 3. 1 Job. 5. 20. 1 Tim. 3. 16. 1 Pet. 1. 12. to be adorned by the sincere favours of so excellent a Lord, Mark 5. 30, 33. to have an interest in whom, and to enjoy whom every thing besides is defensible. f. yea whom (he adds) he did not only account them loss (as v. 7.) in his judgment and readiness to lose them, but he actually sustained the loss of them, Aff. 20. 23. 1 Cor. 4. 13. 2 Cor. 11. 23. g. i. e. as to any plan for his acceptance, he suffered them all to go in this life, which he could not do till God of his rich and inexpressible grace, wrought this resolution in him, by his holy Spirit, then he willingly did it: Yea and unto a right stating of the accounts he reckoned it was no looser by the exchange, in that he did esteem them in a just balance comparing spiritual things with spiritual, 1 Cor. 2. 13. in point of truth, those excellent things, with an excellent Christ, no better than dung (as we with the Syriac and others translate the word) or Dogs-meat, refuse call to the Dogs, with others might agree with the gift of those, v. 2. whom he calls in Not lukewarm, but exceeding fervent in the strictest observance of the Pharisee Order, which was much to be external Devotion, Luk. 12. very zealous for Proficiency, Mat. 23. 15, 23. Herein he was above his equals for years, being exceedingly zealous of the Traditions of the Fathers, Gal. 1. 13. (and his zeal had been very commendable had it been in a good matter, Gal. 4. 13.) that which the false Apostles contended much for. Which he shewed all manner of ways in his rage against the Church of Christ, (conceived by the Pharisees to be opposite to the Jews of Mosai, Aff. 9. 1. & 22. 3. 4. & 26. 9. 10, 11, 12. Gal. 1. 13.) h He rises higher yet in his personal Objection; he might have been a Zealot in his Sect, and yet an Hypocrite, if not of a scandalous life; but it seems in the external observation of those things which the Ceremonial or Moral Law did prescribe, he was in the eye of Men, of a blameless conversation, resembling Zachariah and Elizabeth, Luk. 1. 6. Men could not tax him, he had believed himself to conscientiously, Aff. 23. 1. yet when he had his eyes opened, he found there was no such matter of confidence for him before God, 1 Sam. 16. 7. 1 Cor. 4. 4. This external performance he found when enlightened, was far short of internal and perfect obedience, Rom. 7. 7. and therefore he saw it necessary to change the ground and foundation of his confidence, all that he before rested on unto Christ alone, 1 Cor. 3. 11. 2 Cor. 5. 17. not seeking to receive honour from Men, but that from Christ only, Job. 5. 44.

7 But what things p were gain to me q, those I counted loss for Christ r.

Having argued how he might have had as great a plea for confidence of his acceptance with God as any, if it would have held from the rectified particulars, he now shews q How advantageous formerly they had, in the judgment of men, as well as himself, being reckoned to be, before he was effectually called. r Yet, since the scales fell off his eyes that he could discern the truth, he was so far from accounting them profitable, that indeed he accounted them prejudicial, so far from an advantage, that they were a damage to him, looking for Salvation by Christ alone, Mat. 21. 31. Rom. 9. 30. They were but as pebbles that hide the Pearl of price, Mat. 13. 44. as cyphers to this figure, that can make any thing valuable; therefore by Paul prefer'd to all before him.

8 Yea doubting s, and I account all things but loss t, for the excellency of the knowledge u of Christ Jesus my Lord v: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things y, and do count them but dung z, that I may win Christ a.

He very emphatically in the Greek expresses his stronger resolution upon further deliberation. f. yea he had reckoned and rated when he was first wrought upon to embrace Christ, for at present he did not alter his judgment, in the valuation of any thing he had rejected; yet he speaks universally, what he did but indefinitely using the present tense with a definitive particle: he discerned, not only his Jewish privileges and exercises before, but his Christian after privileges, as of any worth to commend him to God, or as any matter to be rested on for his justification before God, shewing he did not ascribe his being accepted to eternal Life, unto his own works after he was renewed, and now had to many years served God in his Apostolical ministry, performed such excellent works, planted so many Churches, gain'd so many Souls to Christ, as he put'd through perils for the name of Christ. He remarks, u puts in all not only which he had before recited, but to all works as such whatsoever, y and to all whatsoever could be thought on besides Christ. v Whatever they be in themselves they are but loss or damage, of no worth to me, as to any dependence on them for acceptance with God. s Compar'd with the surpassing worth, and excellency in the fiducial, experimental (as is plain from what follows) knowledge of Jesus Christ in his person, Office, and benefits whereof an eye of faith can discern transcendent mysteries, Is. 12. 11. Job. 17. 3. 1 Job. 5. 20. 1 Tim. 3. 16. 1 Pet. 1. 12. to be adorned by the sincere favours of so excellent a Lord, Mark 5. 30, 33. to have an interest in whom, and to enjoy whom every thing besides is defensible. f. yea whom (he adds) he did not only account them loss (as v. 7.) in his judgment and readiness to lose them, but he actually sustained the loss of them, Aff. 20. 23. 1 Cor. 4. 13. 2 Cor. 11. 23. g. i. e. as to any plan for his acceptance, he suffered them all to go in this life, which he could not do till God of his rich and inexpressible grace, wrought this resolution in him, by his holy Spirit, then he willingly did it: Yea and unto a right stating of the accounts he reckoned it was no looser by the exchange, in that he did esteem them in a just balance comparing spiritual things with spiritual, 1 Cor. 2. 13. in point of truth, those excellent things, with an excellent Christ, no better than dung (as we with the Syriac and others translate the word) or Dogs-meat, refuse call to the Dogs, with others might agree with the gift of those, v. 2. whom he calls calls Dogs, Mat. 15. 26. Mark 7. 28. Those much conversant in Greek Authors do criticize largely upon the word, which is acknowledged on all hands to import things it not loathsome, yet evil, and contemptible, as Chaff, or Excrement, or not absolutely but in their respect, did Paul account all things in comparison of Christ, even our guilt and works proceeding from an heart furnished here in part; he doth not mean of the substance, but quality of the good or merit placed in them, not in themselves, but in regard of confidence in them, as to pardon and acceptance with God: not in point of sanctification, but justification on the Apostle is here speaking. So to rely upon them would not only comparatively, but positively be great loss, as keeping from Christ, who is the greatest gain for which the loss of all beside was to be sustained. f. That he might gain him, and be assured of an interest in him, whom he had as before described in his state of humiliation and exaltation, and enjoy Communion with him, Mat. 11. 28. Luk. 14. 26, 33. 2 Cor. 4. 6. 1 Job. 5. 12. of whom he would receive more, and for whom he would do more, aiming at the making of Christ himself his own, by some kind of propriety, 1 Cor. 1. 30.

9 And be found in him b, not having mine own righteousness c, which is of the law d, but that which is through the faith of Christ e, the righteousness which is of God by faith f.

A learned interpreter reads it actively, and may find, or recover in him, all my losses. But following our own translation. By winning of Christ, the Apostle doth not only mean the profession of the faith of the Gospel but his union with Christ, and participation of him, which in the judgment of the all seeing God, will answer all damages, when a man comes to stand in judgment at his tribunal here or hereafter, Rom. 8. 1. this being the only course can be taken to be found him in peace at the last, 2 Pet. 3. 14. for out of him is to be under the curse, Gal. 3. 10. Eph. 2. 3, 12, 13. It is necessary therefore that a man be implanted into him who in his priestly Office acted in our name towards God, Heb. 5. 1. & 10. 7. and that he abide in him, our head, Job. 6. 36. & 15. 4. Eph. 5. 30. Col. 2. 6, 7. 1 Job. 5. 12. and not be found in himself. c That we might more fully understand his meaning of being found in Christ. He defines it negatively, and positively, by distinguishing of a useful righteousness, supposing one necessary to his acceptance with God. i. e. inherent within him, which he called his own as being personally perform'd by him. d Who describes it to be in a conformity to the law, and the righteousness which the law requires, and those works of it, which if a man do, loving God with all his heart, he shall live in them, Rom. 2. 13. & 3. 27, 28. e. yea He makes no distinction of any works done by him before or after conversion, but declares he dares not pretend to be found in any person, inherent righteousness of his own, as to the special and of his justification before God, Gal. 3. 10, 11, 12. He doth not say not having good works, unto which he was created in Christ Jesus to walk in them, Eph. 2. 10. but not having mine own righteousness, he could not trust to anything within him, as to his standing before God, however he was now enlightened, and acted by a better principle, having a better end than whilst a Pharisee, he could not upon that account have confidence towards God, no more than Noah, who was a Prophet and preacher of righteousness, and in his generation, as to his inherent righteousness, the most perfect and just man, or Abraham, Gen. 15. 6. Rom. 4. 3. or David, Psal. 130. 2. & 143. 3. But 2. that which is through the faith of Christ, having him for its object, which he doth elsewhere apply to the deeds of the law, or works of righteousness that he had done, Rom. 3. 28. Gal. 2. 16. Tit. 3. 5. as doth believing unto doing, which he describes these two sorts of righteousness, in the one of which he would be found at his Tryal for justification, in the other he would not, Rom. 1. 17. & 10. 5, 10, 11. hence, f He doth by the following expression signify more clearly the righteousness he stays himself upon, wherein he would be found at God's tribunal, viz. the same righteousness, which Noah had an Eye upon (typified by the Ark) when by preparing an Ark, he became heir of the righteousness, which is by faith, Heb. 11. 7. the righteousness which is of God by Faith, not his own, but counted unto him for righteousness, as unto Abraham who believed God, Rom. 4. 4. as unto David, unto whom God imputed righteousness without works, Rom. 4. 6. This righteousness of God which he imputes upon believing, is not originally the believers own inherent righteousness, but the righteousness of another in another, and theirs only derivatively from him, in whom believers are made the righteousness of God, 2 Cor. 5. 21. (who are not said to be made the righteousness of God) unto them being in Christ Jesus, he is made righteousness, 1 Cor. 1. 30. yea the righteousness of God, Rom. 1. 17. (these are spoken of by the Apostle distinctly, as he do elsewhere, Rom. 10. 2. with 9. 31, 32.) as not only freely given, and imputed of God, but as being only of value in the judgment of God to justify, because performed by him who is not only man but God, Aff. 20. 28. & Rom. 3. 21, 24, 25. & 10. 3. Not that it can be meant of the essential righteousness of God, for the righteousness by the faith of Christ, Rom. 3. 22. or that which constitutes them righteous in God's sight, upon their receiving of Christ and being implanted into him, was that obedience which he yielded unto God for them voluntarily doing and suffering his will, Job. 15. 13. Rom. 5. 6, 7. Phil. 2. 8. 1 Tim. 6. 15. Heb. 9. 14. For this obedience in their stead being fully performed by him Who had the divine and humane Nature conjoined in himself was of infinite value, for that his mediatorial righteousness being some way imputed to those who are found in him, they are found righteous before God in his just judgment, as living Members of Christ, to whom they are united by the Spirit and Faith, Job. 6. 56. & 15. 4. Eph. 5. 30, 32. Col. 1. 27. This mystical head and body making but one Christ, and thereupon his righteousness is reputed theirs (and thereby they are set right with God) in such a measure as is meet for it to be communicated from Head to Members, who partake of the thing imputed, the righteousness which satisfied the law, and therefore most proper to justify against it, and answer the demands of it. And in that it is said to be the righteousness of God by faith, we consider faith as the means whereby we come to be interested in it. Faith itself is not the righteousness, which is upon, not in the believer, Rom. 3. 22. entering into judgment with God: but the righteousness which believers find in Christ, which was ordain'd of God to denominate them righteous. The law (which requires obedience) having its end in nothing but the righteousness which satisfi'd it, called the righteousness of Christ, Rom. 10. 4. with Tit. 2. 13. 2 Pet. 1. 1. wherein the law is established, Rom. 3. 31. and its righteousness fulfill'd, Rom. 3. 31. & 8. 3. inherent graces are not called the righteousness, but our own, Mat. 5. 20. Luk. 21. 19. Rom. 10. 8. 2 Cor. 8. 1. Col. 1. 4. 1 Pet. 1. 21. Christ is so far righteousness as he is the end of the Law, and that he is in the satisfaction itself, not in remission which is an effect of it.

10 That I may know him g, and the power of his resurrection h, and the fellowship of his sufferings i, being made conformable to his death k.

As consequent upon the former he had by winning of Christ, he doth here insist upon Sanctification, which would result from Faith's exerting itself, in a further saving experimental knowledge of Christ, to be found in whom, he undervalued all besides conformity to Christ in holiness, being to have communion with him in righteousness, 1 Cor. 1. 30. and having appointed those to be found in Christ, to be conform'd to his image in holiness, Rom. 8. 29. 2 Cor. 3. 18. This saving knowledge is express'd elsewhere in scripture by the senses, Job. 10. 4. 2 Cor. 4. 6. 2 Cor. 2. 14. Eph. 1. 18. 1 Pet. 2. 3. All and only those found in Christ, do so know him, Job. 5. 20. & 6. 46, 69. Heb. 8. 11. and desire so to know him, c. 1. 9. that they may have a lively sense of his power, communion and conformity. i. e. The power of his Resurrection in us, i. e. from the dead of the Soul, under a Privation of spiritual life, and the image of God, unto newness of Life by the effectual working of the same Spirit which raised Christ himself from the dead, Rom. 6. 4. 10. Eph. 1. 20. & 2. 5. g Called the first Resurrection, Rev. 20. 5. When the Soul is raised from under the dominion of sin where it lay. h By communion of Christ's sufferings; is not meant of bearing a part in the merit of his personal sufferings, but of being partaker of his sufferings in his Members, or mystical Body, whether inward or outward (though this chiefly) *Mat. 20. 23. did still press for more, upon that ground that Chril't has 15 Let us therefore as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you.

16 Nevertheless whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing.

|| Rom. 12, 16.
8. 15. 5.

c However let us, or we ought to walk in obedience to Christ, love to him and each other, according to the light we have already received, trusting he would make known his mind more clearly to us: our using the light we have well, is the ready way to have more: it behests us to use it fully to that degree of our understanding as we are able, Gal. 1. 9. but fill with our lines in regard to the same rule. Whether in this Metaphorical allusion the Apostle do borrow his phrase from Architects, Souldiers, or Racers, is not much material. Be sure he had an Eye to that same rule well known to them, and by which he regulated himself, and therefore was such a Cannon as really had a divine stamp upon it, that very Cannon in exact conformity whereunto, Gods Jewel might be sure of the best peace, Gal. 6. 16. Phil. 4. 7. The understanding of Gods exhortation is not to be taken too literally, as if we should be bound to the imitation in whom he was found, and be uphold to the whole sufferings, he desired to know more perfectly being heavenly minded, in opposition to those who became enemies to his Cross, v. 19, 20. with Gal. 6. 14, 15. The rule of Faith, love, and a Christian life, or heavenly Conversation, which he doth elsewhere call a walking in the spirit, and according to the Spirit in Gal. 5. 16. in walking in and after the flesh, Rom. 8. 1, 5. Gal. 5. 16. in the flesh, or in the fleshly nature, Gal. 5. 17. In conditions, should be so affected, being of one second, one mind, and one judgment in imitation of Christ, so far that the adult, or better grown Christians, should not despise the weak or less grown, neither should they judge the adult, but in the fundamental Articles, those main principles of the Christian institution wherein we all agree, in that common

Salvation towards which we all press, agreeable to the Analogy of faith, we should find to be perfecting holiness in the fear of God, by the same rule of faith, and loving and mutual condescension, by the unity of our judgments in the main business of Religion, the concord of our affections, the concurrence of our ends, our consent and delight in the same truth: we should declare to the Church of God, in our differences Christ is not divided, but in the variety of perfection.

Chap. III

in leifer matters (not fundamentals) the purity, holiness and peace of the Church is best preserved, c. 2, 14. The main principles asserted are wherein differing parties agree, being the basis of all other doctrines, to hold nothing inconsistent with the Majesty or truth of the foundation, to walk circumspectly and in order, according to that wherein is an harmony, not to break our rank, or leave our station contrary to received precepts, wherein every Christian is to exert a judgment of discerning for himself, Rem. 14. 23, and not impose on each other (as that sort of Christian foes who did compel the Christian Gentiles, Gal. 2. 14, 15, &c.) but peradventure no preter-Evangelical Doctrine, Gal. 1. 8, 9, to live godly, agreeable to known truths, to serve God soberly and prudently (with due moderation) in our conformity to the measure of our knowledge, 1 Cor. 13. 12, to agree in love, unity, and confanctity. It being more reasonable that the many truths wherein we agree, should cause us to join in love which is a Christian duty, rather than the few opinions wherein we disagree should cause a breach in affection, which is an humane infirmity.

rances you have desired (implying that no prayer is acceptable to God, without this ingredient of thankfull remembrance of his favours.) d Our affectionate desires should be opened to God, and powered forth before him, not that he is ignorant of us, or our wants in any circumstances, but that he accounts himself glorified by our addresses to him, in seeking to be approv'd and assisted of him in every condition.

7 The peace of God e which passeth all understanding f shall keep g your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

e He adds an encouragement to prayer for the peace of God, who was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, to that upon believing and obeying the Gospel, they who really do so are reconciled to him, 2 Cor. 3, 19, 20, and at peace with him, Rom. 5, 1. through Christ who leaves and gives peace to his, John. 14, 27. It is then the peace of God, which is the peace of his will, which is the peace of his spirit to those who persevere in the Communion of Christ and in v. have the God of peace with them, and a sense thereof in their own spirits. f And how it transfigures a finite understanding? may be answered 1. In that he who hath perceived it, before he had done so, could not sufficiently conceive in his own mind what at length it might be, 1 Cor. 2, 9. hence 2. After it is perceived it cannot be that it should be understood as it is, but only as it is known; according to the worth and excellency of the matter. Not that the peace should affect the heart, the will without the intervention of the understanding; fifth is said to keep the heart and mind, & Rev. 2, 17. The white gown given to believers (whereby this peace signified) is of that kind which no man knoweth, save he that receives it: and it is no new thing in Scripture to say that such things are above our understanding, as in the affairs of God, both not and not to conceive as to be able to express it, as, Eph. 3, 19. So many mind doth receive that which is taken into admiration, that it perceives something always to remain, which it hath notice of, yet cannot so perceive as to express the whole of it. g Before they that are more interested in this peace shall be kept as in a Garrison, i. Per. 1, 5. so their whole soul shall be kept from the assaults of Satan, the afflictions of the world, reasoning, shall be kept in order, that through Christ they shall not finally fall.

y He signifies that he had been much vexed in true spiritual (not carnal) joy, that the Lord was by his spirits wrought in them such enrichments of heart, as did their wills if they were in their care oft him for the sake of Christ. ¶ What follows, I leave to you. Red Man writes may be rendered, that now at last, y<sup>e</sup> could bring to maturity the care of me; for whom indeed ye have been careful, but had not the ability. The Apollites party is borrowed from trees, which in the Winter season keep their sap withheld in the bark, in the spring and Summer grow Green, and yield their fruit; so was the Philippians crew of Paul suffering in Christi's cause, for the Greek word we translate flourish'd or green'd, or revived is sometime used actively, and transitively.

¶ Rom. xix. Exek. 17. 24. (with the Apocryphal writer, Eccl. i. 18. Gen. 1. 11. Job. 1. 11.) and it may be expounded here, nor only of growing up, but also of maturing, and budding again (which is less than the first), but of bringing forth fruit. For their care of Paul was in their hearts, but by reason of troubles it could not exert it self, or yield fruit, but only in the season, (as Mat. 21. 34.) which the Apollite softening his speech, allegeth as an Apology for them: he doth not say there was not any opportunity in respect of himself, but a seasonsableness in respect of others. They being destitute of a faculty of bringing forth fruit, w. m. they shall yet further always nourish in their most intimate affections, and desires, all that is present, when at length they had a seasonsableness and time given them of God, to the perfecting of that fruit for the Apostle.

rejoice solely for power upon Christ, being found in whom, when he said he can do all things, we are not to understand it absolutely, but restrictively to the subject matter, he had before mentioned in the precedent verses, intimating he could by the Lord's help use well both prosperity and adversity: or all those things the Lord called him to and put him upon. Not this the Papists urge that any man may since the fall is able in this life, perfectly to keep the commandments of God: but that he by his faith being united to Christ, by the power of his spirit dwelling in him, hath in the Lord righteousness and strength, Heb. 4. 5. 24. and thereupon hath a sincere respect to all God's commands, as David had, Psal. 119. 6. So also had Zachariah, and Elizabeth, Luk. 1. 6. in opposition to pharisaical obedience: not by any power he had of himself but through Christ strengthening of him, so that God would accept of his sincere performance (though not every way perfect) of what was incumbent on him.

14. Notwithstanding n, ye have well done o that y ye did communicate with mine affliction p.
n Left any should suspect from what he had suggested of his contentment, that he was not much affected with their liberality, but might have done as well without as with it, and they might have spared their Christian commendation, o His doth perfectly commend their Christian commendation, as the phrase is, Act. 18. 23. and give them to understand how acceptable, their reasonable supply was to him. p Who did so joyfully resent their kindness to him, in that it was well-pleasing to God, Rom. 12. 15. they did so effectually sympathize, and take a share in the oppression he sustained for the cause of Christ, 2 Cor. 1. 7. and remember him in his bonds as if it were their own care, Heb. 13. 1. Rev. 1. 9.

15. Now ye Philippians know also q, that in the beginning of the gospel r, when I departed from Macedonia s, no church communicated with me, as concerning giving and receiving but ye only t.

He amplifies the present favour the Christians at Philippi had vouchsafed to him, by a thankful recollection of their former liberality. r Soon after he had preached and planned the good things of Salvation amongst them, c. 2. 22. Act. 16. 12, 13, 40. s So that comparing their first benevolence with other Churches, when leaving of Macedonia, Act. 18. 5. 2 Cor. 11. 9. t In that none of the rest of the Churches had for the spiritual things received of him in his ministrations distributed of their carnal or temporal (though that was their duty beyond dispute, 1 Cor. 9. 7, 11, 13, 14. Gal. 6. 1. Tim. 5. 17, 18.) but they alone: which might at once commend their Christian liberality, and evince that he in preaching of the Gospel was not mercenary, nor having exacted a reward from others, but preached the Gospel freely, 2 Cor. 11. 7.

16. For even in Thessalonica ye sent once and again unto my necessity u.

u They for their parts were most commendable in that matter that when he was in Thessalonica the Mother City (not above twenty five Miles distant) their care for his comfortable livelihood was more than once manifested, he passing again and again through Macedonia, 1 Cor. 16. 5. 2 Cor. 1. 16. which argues his thankful remembrance of the constant purpose of their mind to succour him upon all occasions.

17. Not because I desire a gift w, but I desire x fruit that may abound to your account y.

y Neither would he have any of them to think, as if his commendation of them were any oblique insinuations, with design to draw something more from them; he would have them to understand he did not seek himself, or theirs for his use (as elsewhere, 1 Cor. 10. 33. 2 Cor. 12. 14.) x But his great intent was, that they themselves might of God's Grace have the fruit of their charity they had shewed to him, ch. 1. 11. & 4. 10. y Which in the balancing of the accounts (by accepting as it were of Christ's will, Prov. 19. 17. Mat. 10. 42. & 23. 34, 35.) will turn to their best advantage.

18. But z have all, and abound: I am full z, having received of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you a, an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing to God b.

z He further testifies his Thankfulness from the effect their gratitude had upon him, by three words here which declare the same thing, viz. that he was abundantly satisfied, having all that he could wish, even enough and more, so that he did not expect any thing more, a Than what he had already received by their faithful Messenger Epaphroditus. b Which he further commends from its great acceptableness to God in allusion to the sweet odours in the Sacrifices that God himself took pleasure in, Lev. 2. 1, 2. & 3. 16. Heb. 13. 16. So that that present God himself would accept through Christ, as if it had been offered to himself, 1 Pet. 2. 5.

'Tis true, the Secinians to lessen the merit of Christ's Sacrifice of himself, which the Apostle mentions, Eph. 5. 2. with respect to, Gen. 8. 21. would by this Text corrupt z but the truth is, it hath nothing like with that, for the benevolence and gravity of the Philippians is said by Paul to be an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, &c. but it is not said, that the Philippians themselves did give themselves an odour of a sweet smell as it is said, Christ gave himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God, for a sweet smelling savour; which being once offered for all, was sufficient to take away sin, Heb. 10. 10, 12. And therefore their reasoning is fallacious from that parity they suggest. 'Tis true, Believers and their good works are as sweet odours, Rom. 12. 1. acceptable but in Christ, 1 Pet. 2. 5. because they please God only for him, for his sake and merit. But Christ because he doth appease God himself, who smells a favour of rest in his Sacrifice, which all others under the Law did but shadow, receiving their efficacy from his: Christ did it by himself, Believers and their services are only acceptable in him.

19. But my God c shall supply all your need d, according to his riches in glory e, by Christ Jesus f.

c See 2. 3. he saith my God, because he imputeth and owneth that to be done to himself which is done according to his mind unto any of his Embassadors, he having received the gift from their hand by Paul, d Will in a gracious return to Paul's Prayer abundantly answer, (ye, a above all he could ask or think) all their expectations, Eph. 4. 1. 1, 2. 3. with 2 Cor. 9. 8, 10. e Agreeable to his own fullness and rich mercy, Psal. 24. 1. 1 Cor. 10. 26. Eph. 2. 4. gloriously, or riches of his glory, Eph. 3. 16. and goodness, Rom. 2. 4. & 9. 23. sustaining and defending them liberally and powerfully here, to his own glory, and taking them hereafter, unto everlasting glory, f Through the Mediation, and by virtue of their Communion with Christ Jesus.

20. Now unto God g and our Father h be glory i, for ever and ever k. Amen l.

g From thanking of the Philippians, the holy Man passes to a giving of thanks unto God the first cause, that they might not be elated. h He had My God, now Our Father, not only adoring him as Maker of all, but as Father of all the faithful as well as of Paul, being born of him in Christ, Joh. 1. 12, 13. through whom he takes a Fatherly care of them, Mat. 6. 32. Joh. 20. 17. Christ faith My Father, as being his only Son by eternal Generation, and he allows Believers to say Our Father, as being his Children by Adoption. i Unto whom they are obliged to ascribe praise, and always to give thanks in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, Eph. 5. 20. And this indeed hath been their practice which should be ours, Rom. 1. 25. & 9. 5. & 11. 33. 36. & 16. 25, 27. Eph. 3. 21. 1 Tim. 1. 17. 1 Pet. 4. 11. & 5. 11. 2 Pet. 3. 18. Jude v. 25. Rev. 1. 5. &c. Ittimate their hearts being full with the glory of God, their past and months were enlarged accordingly, exciting others to the like Doxologies. k To almost all which in the forecited places (as here) ever and ever is added connoting absolute eternity, and joining past, present, and future ages together. l This form of Amen affixed in the close, doth signify how his heart did give and rejoiced to give all blessedness to our Father in Christ, as rejoicing that he is so blessed a God.

21. Salute every saint in Christ Jesus m: The Brethren which are with me greet you n.

m He doth friendly embrace, and with happiness to all and every sanctified one who is a Member of Christ, hath eternally resigned up to him, and doth abide in him. n Then shews, that most probably his Colleagues and fellow-Labourers in the Christian Church at Rome (calling such elsewhere Brethren, 1 Cor. 1. 1. Col. 1. 1. & 4. 7. Phil. 1. 7, 20.) ch. 1. 14. & 2. 23. 1 Cor. 16. 20. do so likewise.

22. All the saints salute you o, chiefly they that are of Cæsars household p.

o The rest of Christians at Rome do the same. p More especially they of Nero the Emperor's own Family and court, his Domesticalls, ch. 1. 13. It seems there were some there truly pious and Christian: but however some conceits there is no real evidence, that Nero was of that number. He being not a Courtier, but a Senator, who left no real token (we know of) that he was a Christian.

23. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ q be with you all r. Amen s.

q He concludes this (like his other Epistles) much as he began, see on c. 1. 2. r Praying the same grace of the Lord might abide with them, which he had prayed to them all, c. 1. 1. s Not at all doubting, but with full confidence trusting all should be firm, as he had prayed.

COLOSSIANS.

THE ARGUMENT.

GOD having a Church planted in the City of Colosse, (by some since called Chone) situated at the conflux of the Rivers Meander, and Lycus, in the Neighbourhood of Laodicea, and Hierapolis, ch. 4. 13. in Phrygia of the lesser Asia, whither at first, only by the Preaching of Epaphras one of them who was a Servant of Christ, and faithful Minister, ch. 1. 7. & 4. 12. or by Paul himself, who (we learn from Luke that accompanied him) had gone throughout Phrygia, Act. 16. 6. and again over all the Country of Phrygia in order, Act. 18. 23. having stayed for a season in Asia, where he wrought Miracles, and was complained of for turning away much People from Idolatry almost throughout all Asia, Act. 19. 11, 22, 26. we may leave undetermined. But whoever was God's prime instrument in planting the Gospel here, upon Paul's being advertised by Epaphras, ch. 1. 8. & 4. 12. Phil. v. 23. that needs sprang up to cloak the good seed; as he was careful for the Philippians during his imprisonment, so for the Colossians, that they might not be perverted by those Judaizing false Teachers who mingled Moses with Christ, sticking for the necessity of obnoxious Ceremonies to Salvation, ch. 2. 4, 8, &c. vitiating their Doctrines with notions of vain or abused Philosophy, did seek to introduce a Superstitious Worship grounded on humane Traditions, ch. 2. 8, 18, &c. but reposing all their hope of Salvation in Christ alone, persevere in that Doctrine they had received according to his mind, and in the practice of real holiness with heavenly affections, both Personally and Relatively in heart and life, craving help of God, unto whom having blessed God for the grace wrought in them, he doth recommend them in his own, and Brethren's salutations, contradicting as it were the matter he had more fully Written in the Ephesians; that Epistle and this, as the Evangelists explaining each other.

CHAP. I.

PAUL an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God b, and Timotheus our brother c.

a He who of a Persecutor was become a Preacher, and that amongst the Gentiles laid aside his Hebrew Name Saul, and made use of this, which was more familiar amongst the Gentiles, viz. Paul, Act. 13. 2, 3, 9. b One of those extraordinary Persons immediately deputed by the special command of our Lord himself, with Sovereign authority to Preach the Gospel, and establish his Church, which is the highest charge ever God gave to men, Mat. 10. 2. Luk. 6. 13. 1 Cor. 12. see on, Eph. 1. 1. & 4. 11. c He joins Timothy as elsewhere Sophonias, 1 Cor. 1. 1. by the Title of Brother, as being of the same Faith, labouring in one and the same work which might be more for their satisfaction.

2. To the saints d and faithful brethren in Christ e, which are at Coloss f, Grace be g unto you, and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ g.

d See on Phil. 1. 1. e See on Phil. 4. 21. f See the Argument. g See on Eph. 1. 2. and Phil. 1. 2.

3. We give thanks to God h, and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ i, praying always for you k.

h See on Phil. 1. 3. He doth here take in Timothy, and others, in acknowledging God's Grace to them, which might excite his great good will to them. i Describing God to whom they render thanks both absolutely and relatively as the Father of Jesus Christ according to both natures, see on 2 Cor. 1. 3. with Eph. 1. 3. k Always when they did address themselves to God by Prayer making mention of them, as he also wrote to the Philippians, see on ch. 1. 3. 4.

4. Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus l, and of the love which ye have to all the saints m.

l He inducteth in principal graces, as the matter of his thanksgiving, beginning with Faith described and diffu-renced from the special object of it, Christ Jesus implying not a bare knowledge or assent, but a trust in him alone for Salvation, o Rom. 1. understanding this Saving grace with the consequent was wrought in them as he heard it was in the Ephesians, and Phil. o, 'twas a cogent motive to engage them in solemn thankfulness to God, see on Eph. 1. 15. compared with Phil. v. 5. m He joins love or charity to all the Saints, with Faith to our Saviour, because they are in effect inseparable, there being no real embracing of Christ without loving of him and all his Members for his sake, Gal. 5. 2. Tim. 1. 13. not as if Believers were not to show love or charity to others who are of the same nature and so bear the Image of God, for this Christ requires of them, Mat. 5. 44. 45. but by how much the nearer any are brought to God by Sanctification, by so much the more a special love is to be shewed to them, as Fellow-citizens of the household of God, and the household of Faith, Rom. 15. 26. with Gal. 6. 10. Eph. 2. 19.

5. For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven n, whereof ye have before in the word of the truth of the gospel o.

n Hope here in this description sits chiefly by a Metonymy to be put for the glorious eternal Salvation hoped for, Rom. 8. 24. Eph. 1. 18. which may also include that lively grace whereby we lay hold of eternal life contained in the Promise, Tit. 1. 2. This indeed is set before Believers here to encourage them to fly unto Christ for refuge, Heb. 6. 18. and reserved in the Heavens for them, 1 Pet. 1. 4. which may well quicken in Christian love to all the Members of Christ in every condition: yet not with a mercenary affection, 2 Cor. 5. 14. as if any by Office of Christian love to Brethren could merit what is laid up for those who exercise Faith, Love, and Hope, but that God of his mere grace and undeserved love is pleased to reward such as diligently seek him, and thereby gives an exact evidence of his admirable liberality, Heb. 11. 6. which will abundantly weigh down those light afflictions they sustain here, 2 Cor. 4. 17. o Hereupon he puts them in mind of the means whereby they attained to this good Hope when they first embraced the Gospel, viz. by hearing Rom. 10. 14. the Word of Truth eminently, 2 Cor. 6. 7. Eph. 1. 13. not only because it is the Word of Jesus Christ, who is the Truth, and the Life, Joh. 14. 6. but because the Gospel (which is here put appositively) is the most excellent of all Truths, surpassing all in Philosophy, and the law, Joh. 1. 17.

6 Which is come unto you, as it is in all the world p, and * bringeth forth fruit q, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it r, and knew the grace of God in truth s.

p And passing the narrow bounds of Judea, unto all or most of the regions of the World, v. 23. Mat. 24. 14. Ad. 1. 8. Rom. 1. 8. &c. So admirable was the progress of it in East, West, North, and South, weigheth over the World as it was then known to the Greeks and Romans, whereupon the Apostle might well write, Christ was believed on in the world, 1 Tim. 3. 16. As Christ had said he was the light of the World and by a figure of part for the whole, would upon his death draw all men to him, Joh. 12. 32. yel. yet let not the Rhemists or any other Romanist think that the propagation of the mysteries of the Gospel then is any proof of the verity of the Romish Religion in these latter ages when by Tyranny they impose for doctrines the traditions of men t; they do not bring forth that genuine fruit which the Colossians did, q viz, becoming the Gospel (as the Philippians did, c. 1. 27) and obedience, Mar. 3. 8. & 13. 23. Joh. 15. 16, and real holiness abiding in the hearts and lives of men, and effectually working in them that believe, 1 Cor. 10. 16. 3. 14. & 6. 7. & 12. 24. & 16. 17. 19. 20. 1 Thess. 13. which the practical Religion of the Populists generally bears no proportion to, being contrary to this, r. * Which from the first receiving of the Gospel, was found growing amongst the true converts at Colossæ, though it should seem false teachers crept in to choke the good fruit with their tares. f However they who had real experience of the grace of God and the excellency of the knowledge of Christ, Phil. 3. 8 did hold bringeth forth fruit in old age, Phil. 92. 14.

* Philem v. 23. 7 As ye also learned of * Epaphras s, our dear beloved-ervant u, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ u.

t To maintain the truth it did much concern them to have a good opinion of him, who was an eminent instrument in communicating to them, and therefore Paul doth here very opportunely commend Epaphras in opposition to those false Teachers, who likely might insinuate somewhat to his disparagement. u The respect they bare, and relation he stood in to them, being dearly beloved of him for his sincerity in promulgating the gospel, and being engaged with them in the service of the same Master, c. 4. 7. Rev. 6. 11. 2. u His office which he discharged with fidelity and integrity unto them. He did with all honesty and integrity as became one entrusted by his Master Christ, discharge what was incumbent on him for their good, c. 4. 13. Joh. 12. 26. 1 Cor. 4. 12. 1 Eph. 4. 12. 1 Tim. 4. 6. Heb. 13. 17.

8 Who also declared unto us * your love in the spirit v.

v Having with kindness and delight returned to Paul and Timothy, Gal. 5. What a spiritually fervent affection not moved by carnal considerations, but inwrought by the spirit, Gal. 5. 22, arising from a renewed heart, 1 Tim. 1. 5. & 2 Tim. 1. 7, they had for Christ, for the Gospel, the Apostle, and all that did love the Lord Jesus in sincerity, Gal. 6. 10. 1 Pet. 23. 23.

9 For this cause we also x, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you x, and to desire that you might be filled with the * knowledge of his will, in all wisdom y, and spiritual understanding z.

x He doth here suggest the motive mentioned in the preceding verses, viz, Faith and love, v. 4. 5. and their special love, v. 8. to him, why he and his brethren had them so much upon their hearts, see on Ephes. 1. 15. 16. 17. 4. It seems from the time they were refreshed with their oblige they did (as he exhorts the Colossians here, c. 2. 2) always upon all solemn occasions wait upon God for the Colossians spiritual prosperity, as Paul himself did for the Philippians, see on Luk. 18. 1. Rom. 12. 12. Phil. 1. 4. 9. with 1 Thess. 5. 17. b And the subject matter of their instant prayer was that they might attain to a more distinct, clear, and practical knowledge of the mind of God in Christ, and a greater measure of conformity to what he requires in the gospel, u. 6. Eph. 5. 15. 16. 17. c In (rather than with) all necessary knowledge of the things of faith and manners according to the precepts of the Gospel: for sapience or wisdom doth properly reflect the most excellent things, and such we learn most difficulty and satisfactorily from the revealed will of God, which we have in the Bible: this is that which Paul and other holy men spake as taught of God amongst the perfect or grown Christians in opposition both to the wisdom of Man and of the World, 1 Cor. 2. 4. 6. being agreeable to the will of God, Joh. 28. 28. Prov. 28. 7. Job. 6. 40. 1 Thess. 4. 3. d And with this Christian wisdom some would render the following words in spiritual prudence, but if we render it understanding or intelligence it may be expounded the same sense, for which there may be very good reason, for the Philosopher doth sometime by the Greek word mean that power or habit whereby men judge aright of things presented conducing to happiness, so as upon a due expence of circumstances to discern the good from the evil, the true from the false, and the real from the apparent: such a gift as Paul prays the Lord would give unto Timothy, 1 Tim. 3. 7. compared with 1 Cor. 1. 5. that they might rightly distinguish between simplicity and purity of the Gospel, and those false glosses and colours that false teachers were about to sophisticate it with not be without understanding) as some who follow'd our Saviour, Mat. 15. 16. what counte they should take in the sacrifice of piety; but be able to discern the times, 1 Chron. 12. 32. and other circumstances, Phil. 3. 1. & 50. 23. Ephes. 5. 1. Luk. 8. 18. for the ordering their actions aright, so as they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things as becomes the Gospel, Eph. 1. 8. with Phil. 1. 10. 27. Col. 4. 5. Tit. 2. 10. Ignorance then can be no Mother of true devotion, nor the inventions of men acceptable service to the living God, whose will alone is the rule of his worship.

10 That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work y, and encresing in the knowledge of God z.

y They pray'd for the above-mentioned gracious habits that the Colossians might exercise them in a course of life as it becomes those who are effectually called by the Gospel, to be the Sons of God, and the servants of Christ; suitable the members of the body of Christ, see on Eph. 4. 1. Phil. 2. 1. compared with, Rom. 16. 2. 1 Thess. 12. 8. 2 Thess. 1. 11. As the word God alone ordinarily connotes the Father, so Lord doth Christ: answerable to whose wisdom, holiness, and example, Christians professing a relation to him, and expecting benefit by his purchase should behave themselves, so that the Populists cannot from this walking worthy of the Lord justly infer a merit of condignity, behaving our lives as Christians being so far from any merit, or desert of ours that it is debt, we being indispensibly oblig'd to do so, practice being the end of our knowledge. z And this end we are to respect unto as pleasing, i. e. delighting and contenting our hearts in one thing only or in few things, but in all things whatsoever are incumbent on us, we may find acceptance with the Lord and Master, c. 3. 20. 1 Cor. 7. 32. & 10. 31. 1 Thess. 2. 4. Heb. 12. 28. all should be great and generous such as may best like our Lord, keeping themselves from the delinquencies of the age, Rom. 3. 4. g Particularly fruitful, which in the sense may be joined with being filled, v. 8. being fruitful is a metaphorical expression borrow'd from fruit-bearing Trees and such like Godly men & real Christians are compared, Phil. 1. 3. Joh. 15. 3. d And every good work is the fruit which these plants of the Lord, bring his spirit as the seed remaining in them, 1 Joh. 3. 9. doing his forth of every sort from a right principle, 1 Tim. 1. 5. according to rule warranted by God, 1 Joh. 29. 13. Gal. 6. 10. or having a call from him, for his glory, see 2 Cor. 9. 8. Phil. 1. 11. 2 Thess. 2. 17. Heb. 13. 21. b The Colossians were not yet perfect in knowledge, and therefore they pray'd that they might go on, and grow in grace and knowledge of God and Christ, 2 Pet. 3. 18. the better here knowing but in part, 1 Cor. 13. 9. therefore they desired these Christians as the Philippians, c. 3. 10. 12. and the Ephesians might come to their stature, Ephes. 4. 13. see on the Texts.

11 Strengthened with all might according to his glorious power y, unto all patience z, and long-suffering with joyfulness z.

y Whereunto they might be enabled it was needfull to pray for a power from above, for the best Christians here below are but infirm as well as imperfect, not able to perform what is required of them: for doing and suffering the will of God till entrenched, see on Phil. 4. 13. compared with Rev. 7. 17. we have here great need of all might, special aids of God, to discharge difficult duties, to mortifie gross corruptions, to contend with worldly allurements, to repulse frequent temptations, to bear manifold crosses, and to improve daily mercies, derived from exceeding great and mighty power, see on Eph. 1. 19. 20. with c. 16. an excellent glorious power; 2 Cor. 4. 7. 13. needfull to consummate and complete as well as begin the work of Grace, 2 Thess. 1. 11. a great reality (and not a metaphor) to sincere converts and sound believers, k Every way to bear the things which come hard upon them or continue long: Philosophy with all its speculations is ineffectual to form the Soul to true patience. Exhortation under sufferings; it might be given on the behalf of Christ, Phil. 1. 29. to a believer to suffer patiently in tongue and heart without a prevailing mixture of passion, for that evils do not make an impression upon him, but he doth possess his Soul with patience to the end, 1 Which he could not do with a becoming Christian cheerfulness, when furcharged with a weight of troubles he finds himself a-linking, if he were not supported with the hands of Heaven which relieve with present comfort, and raise up to believe a future reward, Mat. 5. 12. Ad. 5. 41. Rom. 5. 3. 1 Cor. 11. 32. 2 Cor. 1. 5. Heb. 11. 27. Heb. 12. 10. 12. Jam. 1. 2. 4.

12 Giving thanks unto the Father m, which hath made us meet n to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light o.

m He passeth from petitioning, v. 9. to Thanksgiving to God the Father, upon the consideration of his grace manifested in his Son for our Redemption, in the Ephesians, 1. 3. 4. he began with Election, here with effectual vocation he acknowledgeth God the Father to be the object and author of what was wrought for us by his Son, and in us by his Spirit. n Who hath made us capable of Communion with himself, or ready and fit, which implies that by nature we are uneasy, and unfit; so that merit cannot be drawn hence, and the Rhemists have done ill, in referring to the Translation of the Scripture, to translate it, made us worthy; one Copy hath, who hath called us. The original word in that we follow seems to be an idiom of the Apostle (as the learned think) borrowed from the Hebrew, we find it used only in one other Text by the Apostle, 2 Cor. 3. 5. 6. and there he shews we are insufficient for, and incapable of saying good things till God do capacitate us by making us accepted in the beloved, Eph. 1. 6. we cannot understand things of the Spirit of God, nor affect God, Joh. 12. 27. Rom. 8. 5. 1 Cor. 2. 14. till God do draw and capacitate us, Joh. 6. 44. 45. Phil. 2. 13. and form and work us by his Spirit unto this self same thing, Rom. 4. 17. 2 Cor. 5. 5. e To have a part in the lot of the purchased inheritance with them that are Sanctified, Ad. 26. 18. Eph. 1. 14. The Apostle seems to allude to the Land Canaan, wherein a portion was assigned to every one by lot for his inheritance, that being a type of the rest which remaineth to the People of God, Heb. 4. 9. and this is here said to be of the Saints in light, as allegorically connoting the joy and glory of that state and place, in opposition to the power of darkness.

13 Who hath delivered us from * the power of darkness p, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son q.

p The power of darkness, which signifies the sadness and despair of the damned, Eph. 6. 12. Jude. v. 8. and that they who are made members of the light as Children of the invisible light, Eph. 5. 8. are eternally freed from. The word which the Apostle useth to express God's delivering of Believers from the power of sin and Satan is very emphatical, signifying a gratuitous freedom where a Stranger hath delivered him from slavery who did not deserve it, nor then desire it, Mark. 3. 27. Luk. 1. 74. 79. Eph. 2. 2. 5. 6. Heb. 2. 14. 15. though he was held fast in sinners of Iron. And which is more, q He adds another word, intimating he did not leave us as Adam was before the Fall, but transport us without any precedent will of ours, by the effectual Call of his insuperable Grace, Joh. 6. 44. 1 Thess. 2. 12. 1 Pet. 2. 9. from the domination of Satan, into that of his own Son, the Son of his love, Mat. 3. 17. & 17. 5. Eph. 1. 6. amongst his Subjects and Servants where he Reigns, in his Kingdom of Grace, Mat. 13. 11. where Christ dwells in the heart by his Spirit that is united to him by faith, Eph. 3. 17. & 4. 12. 13. Heb. 12. 22. 23. and of glory indeed in our Father, v. 24. with Eph. 2. 6. by right of Adoption, Rom. 8. 17. and hope of Salvation through him promised by the omnipotent and true God, Rom. 8. 24. 1 Thess. 5. 23. 24. Tit. 1. 2. who may well call it the Kingdom of his dear Son, in that he admits none into it but by the mediation of his Son, who makes his Subjects willing, Phil. 1. 10. 3. and received this Government of his Father, Mat. 28. 18. Luk. 22. 29. Eph. 1. 6. 7. of whole dear Son, Paul hath more to say, to the comfort of his faithful Subjects at Colossæ, and every where.

14 * In whom r we s have redemption t through his blood u, even the forgiveness of sins v.

r. i. e. In the person of Christ alone God-man, deputed of his Father to dye for our Salvation, Ad. 4. 12. & 26. 28. f As we are in him, made meet, v. 12. e We have eternal deliverance, Heb. 9. 12. effected by a full ransom paid, 1 Cor. 6. 20. & 7. 23. 1 Pet. 1. 18. 19. for the freeing us indeed out of a state of sin and misery, Job. 8. 36. of eternal death the wages of sin, Rom. 6. 23. & 16. 20. so that by Redemption here is not meant barely laying down the price, Luk. 23. 8. nor consummate Redemption at the last, Eph. 1. 14. & 4. 30. but efficacious Redemption, u. Upon the account of Christ's offering himself an expiatory Sacrifice to God, without which is no remission, Eph. 9. 22. Rev. 5. 9. effusion of his blood by a Synecdoche takes in his humiliation to the death of the Cross, and the pains of the second Death he underwent for us, Jhn. 13. 5. 6. Ad. 2. 24. Gal. 3. 13. Phil. 2. 8. u Plenary remission of offenses, is by apposition to, or follows redemption as a necessary effect, Ch. 2. 13. Luk. 1. 77. Ad. 10. 43. by a Metonymy transferring the cause to the effect, see more on Eph. 1. 7.

15 Who x is * the image y of the invisible z God z, the 1 first-born of every creature a.

x Having touch'd on the benefit of Christ's Sacrifice which implies his humane nature, he doth here rise higher to let forth the dignity of his person (which made it satisfactory) both with respect to his Father and the Creature. As to the former he styles him his Image, y which is not to be understood of an artificial, accidental, or imperfect Image, as that of the King on his Coin, or as Man was the feeble Image of God, Gen. 9. 6. 1 Cor. 11. 7. Col. 3. 10. for the Apostle's arguing Christ's dignity to redem, would have no force in it, if Christ were no more than a meer man; but of a natural, substantial, and perfect Image, as Serb was the natural Image of his Father Adam, of the same substance with him, Gen. 5. 3. for Christ the eternal word, the only begotten Son of God by nature, Joh. 1. 1. 18. see on Phil. 2. 6. the God of very God, Joh. 1. 17. 3. 5. doth exactly resemble, perfectly and adequately represent his Father, u, of whose person he is the express Character, Heb. 1. 3. or perfect Image; yet more distinctly Christ is the Image of God. Either (1) As he is the second Person in the blessed Trinity, from an intrinsic Relation to the Father, in regard of the same essence with him by eternal Generation before the World was made. He being eternally in the Father, and the Father in him, Joh. 14. 10. so he is in respect of his Father, his essential Image, and in that regard to us as invisible as the Father himself; u no Creature could be the eternal Image of the Creator, as that Son of the only true God, the living God was, and is, Mat. 16. 16. Joh. 6. 69. in respect of his Father. (2) As he is God-man in whom the fulness of the Godhead dwells bodily, Ch. 2. 9. whereby he doth infinitely exceed and surpass Angels and Man at first, Phil. 1. 5. 6. & 2. 3. The Apostle in this place doth say simply God, Heb. 4. 9. and this is here said to be of the Saints in light, as allegorically connoting the joy and glory of that state and place, in opposition to the power of darkness.

y Christ is the Image of his invisible Father into us; unto whom in all his Offices and works of mediation, the attributes, affections, and graces of God clearly shine forth, they being otherwise incomprehensible and invisible by a Creature: but Christ is the complete Image of them, in a transcendent way; for as they are in him, they are incommunicable to any meer Creature, and therefore here the Image of the Invisible God, x In that he makes him visible unto us. God is a pure Spirit, without body, or bodily parts, but yet was clearly manifested in Christ tabernaculating amongst us, Jehn. 1. 14. 1 Tim. 3. 16. he represents him to us in his understanding and wisdom, Prov. 8. 14. 15. almightiness, and eternity, Jhn. 9. 6. 1. 1. & 8. 58. permanency and unchangeableness, Jehn. 1. 11. 12. & 13. 8. omnipotence, and omniscience, Jehn. 2. 24. 25. & 13. 18. Rev. 2. 13. Nor (as the Lutherans strangely imagine) that Christ is omnipotent with the omnipotency of the divine nature, or omniscient with that omniscience, as if the manhood did instrumentally use the attributes of the Godhead; but such perfections are really inherent in, and appertaining to the manhood, by virtue of its union with the Divine nature in the second Person of the Trinity, that though they are really shor'd of the attributes which are essential to the Godhead, yet they are the completest image of them, and such as no meer Creature is capable of. Hence 'tis said, we beheld his glory, the glory of the only begotten Son of God, who did further represent and manifest his Father to us, in the works of Creation and Preservation which he did, Jehn. 1. 3. & 5. 19. Heb. 1. 10. Hence the Apostle in this verse condescends the dignity of Christ, with respect to the Creature, as Adding to the forementioned intrinick, an extrinick Royalty, which a learned Man would render, Begotten before all the Creation, or Born before every Creature, which is an Hebrew phrase. The Greek Abelion, and several of the Greek Fathers go this way, not as if the ineffable Generation of Christ had any beginning, as some falsely conceived, Christ to be made in time, just in the beginning before the world, by whom as an instrument all the rest were created; but here the Apostle doth not say he was first made, or first created, but v. 17. was, or did exist before all things besides; (as John Baptist said, He was before me, Joh. 1. 15.) and therefore none of the rank of all them, but of another, viz, equal with his Father: whose Image he was, above all that was made, or created: he was not created at all, though first-born, or first-begotten, yet not first-created, (being distinguished here from creation, as he came from the effect) as it refers to him that begets, so it may to oney beget.

1. A new creation, Job. 5: 17, 23; 17: 5, is its other endowment, Isa. 65: 17, and is founder, Jer. 5: 13; the Apollite affirms the fame of him that is affirmed of the Father, John. 8: 37. Prov. 16: 1, Job. 44: 24, he made them all for his own sake. The Secinians in derogation to Chrift's Divinity would refrain from limit, and narrow what Chrift faith here in this verse to the new creation or reparation, but against manifest reality.

2. The words creation and reparation are not the same, and, as such, cannot be repeated together, but creation is repeated twice, and joyned with the word ad, and therefore to be understood as elsewhere absolutely of the old or first creation, 1 Tim. 10: 6 & 13: 19 & 16: 15, Rem. 1: 20, 25, 1 Cor. 11: 9, Mark. 4: 3, Heb. 1: 3 and 2 Pet. 3: 4, Jer. 10: 6, for when it is used of the second creation, or reformation the reflexive addition of us is necessary, Isa. 43: 1, or reformation the reflexive addition of us is necessary, Isa. 43: 1, Is. 65: 17, and 2 Cor. 5: 17, Gal. 6: 15, 1 Cor. 15: 48, 24, 2 Tim. 1: 1, 1 Pet. 1: 2, and the parallel places, thus making and founding of the old creation is ascribed to Chrift, both negatively and positively, Job. 1: 3, Heb. 1: 3, no one except is excepted, and therefore should not be refrained too much in this verse. His most evident from the context the Apollite doth infer: 1. His allivient from creation, in contradistinction to the new, what he speaks of afterwards in the 15th, and 16th verses, when he comes to treat of the new creation, and of his Church, and the reparation further. 4. The Apollites significant enumeration and definition of things created doth evidence that he understood the subject, the creation in the most extensive and unlimited comprehension of it. Hence non ut material as well as habits, but God upon the account of Christ's plenarian satisfaction doth freely remove all the guilt that binds over to eternal death, and doth not import to believers any of their sins in whole or in part, but treateth them as if they had committed none at all, Mat. 26. 28. Ab. 10. 43. Eph. 1. 7. Heb. 9. 15. and will remember them no more, so that when they are fought for they shall not be found, Jer. 31. 34. & 50. 20. Heb. 10. 17. what the Papists, by of the Faults being remitted, when the penitentials may be exact either in whole or in part, that they may have a pretence for humane satisfactions (the groundless of which was hinted, c. 1. 24.) it is a meer figment of the Schools, against scripture and reason.

14. Blotting out the hand-writing of ordinances c, that was against us f, which was contrary to us g, and took it out of the way b, nailing it to his cross i.

Having just before manifested God's grace in the free forgiveness of all their trespasses, he doth here adjoyne the foundation and means of this remission, viz. Wiping out the Bill of decrees (as one reader) effecting and cancelling the hand-writing that was against us, which was contrary to us in tradition as another pointing out Chirograph or hand-writing; upon the matter in the explanation there will be no difference from our reading of it. In scripture is frequently accounted a debt, and the pardoning of it, Mat. 6. 12. Luk. 11. 4. & 13. 4. as the debtor is obliged to payment, so the sinner to punishment, until 'tis to be remembered, that though a private creditor may forgive his debt, yet unless the confessor of public justice do exempt an offender against the law, he is not acquitted, but is still under an obligation, bond or hand-writing, having as they under the Mosaic law professed allegiance, Exod. 24. 7. which upon default was an evidence of this guilt to avenging justice. That law prescribed by the mitigation of Moses was saying, charged with many ceremonial ordinances, to the observation of all which circumcision did oblige, this obligation interpretatively was as an hand-writing which did publicly testify a Man's native pollution, and was a publick confession of his sin and misery, as walkings did testify the filth of his sins, and sacrifices Capital guilt to them, who liv'd under it, and did not perform it, that they were accursed, Gal. 3. 10. under a ministration of death, 2 Cor. 3. 7, 9. whilst by laying their hands on the sacrifices, Lev. 1. 4. it was given Bill or Bond against themselves, whereby conscience of guilt was retained, Heb. 10. 2, 3. and a conscience of sin renewed, so that the heart could not be stablished in any firm peace, 9. 9. Heb. 10. 2. but they did confess sin to remain, and that they did want a removal of the curse by a better sacrifice. Upon the offering up of this, the law of commandments was blotted out, cancelled or abolished (such the Apostle elsewhere) fee, Eph. 2. 15. even that contained in ordinances, compared with, v. 16. 20. 21. of this Chapter and therefore there is no condemnation to them that are circumcised with the circumcision of Christ, being found in him, v. 11. with Rom. 8. 1. & 7. 4. So that however the law which was in it felt holy, just, and good, though sin became in some sort contrary, or subcontrary to us, in that it did serve to convict, and terrify with the curse for our default, Rom. 7. 5. aggravating all by its ceremonies and thrusting the Gate of God's House, against the Gentiles of whose number the Colossians were, strangers to the covenants of promise, Eph. 2. 12. yet this obligation was abrogated and annulled by the death of Christ, as the Apostle expresseth it with great elegance, having not only said that the debt was wiped out, preface by the blood of Christ being drawn over it, as they us'd to blot out debts or draw red lines cross them; but he adds, B Taken away of the man as the debtors bond or obligation is being cancelled, and torn to pieces, so that there is no memorial or evidence of the debt doth remain, all matter of controversy being altogether removed. Yet (if it may be) to speak more fully and satisfactorily be annexeth, 1. And fasten'd it to his Cross; what could be more significant? implying that Christ by once offering himself a sacrifice on the Cross, had disannul'd the law, and taken away its condemning power, Rom. 4. & Gal. 3. 13. It being customary (as learned men say) of old especially in Africa to pierce cancell'd obligations and antiquated writings with nails; Christ by his plenarian satisfaction did not only deliver from the condemnation of the law, Rom. 8. 1, 24. but he did effectually with the nails with which he himself was crucified by Interpretation falsify the hand-writing of ordinances to his cross, and abolished the ceremonial law in every regard, since the substance of it was come and that which it tended to, was accomplished in giving himself a ransom for all, 1 Tim. 2. 6. to the putting away of sin, Heb. 9. 26. and obtaining eternal redemption, Heb. 9. 12.

15. And having spoiled principalities and powers m, he made a shew of them openly n, triumphing over them o, in it p.

& Conqueror it, seeing he hath tripped or made naked, as runners and racers us'd to pull off their cloaths, I Hence some of the ancients read putting off his flesh (possibly by the carelessness of some scribes writing, that which signifies flesh, instead of that which signifies principalities in all the Authentic Copies) but besides that Christ hath not put off the humane nature, only the infirmities of the flesh, 2 Cor. 5. 16. Heb. 5. 7. it doth not agree with what follows. One conceits that principalities and powers are meant the Ceremonies of the law, because of the divine authority they originally had, and that Christ unclashed or unripped them, and heav'd them to be empty figures that were accomplished in his own person. But I see no reason thus to allegorize, for 'tis easie to discern, the word is borrowed from conquering Warriors having put to flight and disarm'd their enemies, (as the word may well signify disarming in opposition to arming, Rom. 13. 12. Eph. 6. 11, 14.) and signifies here, that Christ disarm'd and dispossessed the Devil and his Angels with all the powers of darkness, we have seen by principalities and powers are meant Angels, c. 1. 16. with Rom. 8. 37. Eph. 1. 21. and hence means evil ones, in regard of that power they exercise in this world under its present state of subjection to sin and vanity, 2 Tim. 4. 6. Job. 12. 31. 2 Cor. 4. 4. Eph. 2. 2. & 6. 12. Luk. 2. 26. whom Christ came to destroy, and effectually did on his Cross defeat, Luk. 11. 22. Job. 16. 11. 1 Cor. 15. 55. Heb. 2. 14. & 3. 8. delivering his subjects from the power of darkness, c. 1. 13. according to the first promise, Gen. 3. 15. In Yea and Christ did as an absolute conqueror, rising as it were in his triumphal chariot, publicly shew that he had vanquish'd Satan and all the powers of darkness in the view of Heaven and Earth, Luk. 10. 17, 18. O Even then and there where Satan, thought he should alone have had the day by the death of the innocent Jesus was and his adherents triumphed over by the Lord of life to their everlasting shame and torment, what the Papists would gather hence that Christ did in this triumph shew upon the Cross, carry the Souls of the Patriarchs out of their Lambus; or appointment to Hell is a meer unscriptural fiction; for, that he made shew of in his victorious Chariot are the very same that he spoiled to their eternal ignominy and confusion. P What follows some render (as in the margin) in himself or by himself, i. e. by his own power and virtue and not by the help of any other; the Prophet hath said the vinegar alone, and has any of the people wish him, Isa. 63. 3. yet it seems here better to adhere to our own translation in it, consider what went before of his Cross, that he triumphed over Satan on it or by it, because the death that there he suffered was the true and only cause of his triumphs, there he trod Satan under his feet, there he set his feet at liberty, and they who go about to bereave them of it, and bring them into Bondage do no other than restore to Satan his spoils.

16. Let no man therefore judge you q * in meat or in drink r, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days f.

He tells men none should be condemn'd; none condemn others for exercising Christian liberty: none hath power to judge and censure herein, q. d. Suffer not any one (he excepts none) to impose upon you that, as necessary in the use and practice of it, which is not after Christ, v. 8. not warranted by his law of liberty, Rom. 14. 3. 4. Gal. 5. 1. Jam. 1. 25. Paul himself would not be imposed on, 1 Cor. 6. 12. & 7. 23. Gal. 2. 5, 11. 14. Ec. he would not (as one of the words doth note) be dominated over by any, or suffer any to exercise authority over him, who held the head and owned Christ to be Lord of the conscience, and sole Dictator of what way he will be served in. R He therefore would not have the practice of ceremonies obtruded, intangling in some, as the difference of meats and drinks in the use or not use of which (how after Christ had nailed those decrees to his Cross) superstitious ones would from the antiquated rites of the Jews and Pharisees place holiness in, and add them to the Christian institution. J Of the difference of festivals and sabbaths whether annual, monthly, or weekly from the Levitical institutions.

17. Which are a shadow of things to come q, but the body r of Christ n.

Which as they were but obfuscure representations or shadowy resemblances of future benefits procured by Christ, Heb. 9. 5. & 9. 11. & 10. 1. whereas temporary glory they had from the former institution, till the time of reformation, Heb. 9. 10. yet that was done away, and they now had none, in respect of the glory that excelleth and remaineth, 2 Cor. 3. 9, 10. So that this doth no way gain say the Sacraments none of Christ's own institution which may be called figures and shadows, not of things future, they Christ (not yet come, but) as already exhibited, whom they commit to the mind and faith to be present, and to be wholly rightly partake of them: we cannot say he condemns all distinctions of meats and drinks, viz. Bread and Wine in the Lord's Supper;

18. Let no man beguile you of your worship u, in a voluntary humility x, and worshipping of angels y, intruding into those things which he hath not seen z vainly puff'd up by his fleshly mind a.

The original compound word peculiar in the N. T. to Paul and that in this Epistle only (and not very frequent in other Authors) hath occasioned interpreters here to render it variously, some, joyning of God and man, some, being filled with the influences of his grace, 2 Cor. 3. 6. it is established and strengthened by little and little, in light and purity, and all graces till it attain to the measure of its perfect stature in Christ Jesus our Lord; whereas an increase in the traditions of Men, and the inventions of flesh do only blow it up with winds and imposthumes, to the disfiguring, deforming and destroying of it.

20. Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world q; why as though living in the world are ye subject to ordinances b?

Here the Apostle doth further argue against all impositions of superstitious observances, obtruded as parts of divine worship, whether relieving those abrogated or setting up new ones upon supposition of their union with Christ their head, and their being dead in him as to all begarly Elements from which he had freed them by his death, *Rom. 6. 3. & 4. 6. If the head of the Church like not the re- viving that worship he hath laid aside, be sure he will not approve of any new one which he never appointed. The Apostle is not here speaking of the Magistrates ordinances about things indifferent in their use for the real good of the civil Government; but of the way of worshipping God by Religious abstinencies, &c.

the traditions of men, Mar. 15. 2. 6, 9. we must not under any pretext of humility presume to know what belongs to our duty and God's service better than Christ doth, shewing us that he alone is the true and living way and we may come boldly by him, Mat. 11. 28. Job. 14. 1. 6. Eph. 3. 12. Heb. 4. 16. & 10. 20. And therefore the adoring and invoking of Angels as heavenly courtiers, whatever the Papists out of a shew of humility do argue, is no after Christ, but against him. Yea and for any one to affect it, and the like is to be a bold intruder upon another's position, a thrusting a Man felt into the knowledge and determination of that which is above his reach, Psal. 131. 1. and he hath no ground at all for, but doth prie or wade into a secret which a man cannot know. The Apostle useth a Platonic word against those who did indulge themselves out of curiosity in the opinions of the Platonists about Angels, the worshippers of which amongst those who were professed Christians in Phrygia were so tenacious of their error that they were not rooted out after the third century, when a Canon was made against them under the name of Angelici in the Council of Laodicea near Colosse. A The first rule of foolish presumption was a being rashly puff'd up with the sense of their flesh, a deluded mind mov'd by some carnal principle, setting out things with swelling words of vanity, wherewith in truth they have no acquaintance, and whereof they have no experience, 1 Tim. 1. 7.

And here, the Apostle suggests that those things he had before tax'd did proceed from hence, that they let go the Lord Christ himself, c. 2. 9. from whom all truths are to be derived, and consequently he is all truth itself, Job. 14. 6. not to adhere to him is the spring of all apostasies he being the head, fee Eph. 4. 15, 16. Whereas is comminatory and distributive such influence to the body, the Church as is necessary to all the sensations and motions thereof, Being in all its members fully framed together by the spirit, Eph. 2. 21, 22. and united by faith, Eph. 2. 17. hath a continual subsidy of life and vigour. e And fastned together in a spiritual union which joyneth all believers to their head, and each of them to the other in him, 1 Cor. 10. 17. & 12. 20, 25, 27. f Whereupon to mutual edification in love it groweth with divine growth, spiritual increase, arising from the efficacy of God and man's ready to his glory, being filled with the influences of his grace, 2 Cor. 3. 6. it is established and strengthened by little and little, in light and purity, and all graces till it attain to the measure of its perfect stature in Christ Jesus our Lord; whereas an increase in the traditions of Men, and the inventions of flesh do only blow it up with winds and imposthumes, to the disfiguring, deforming and destroying of it.

4. That they might not think he is a hypocrite, given check to superfluous abstinencies, was for the making of a carnal mortification, he infers here, how the exercise of truly Christian mortification was incumbent on those who were dead to sin and had their life hid in Christ. Neither is it any incongruity, that they who are in a fore already dead, should be exhorted to mortification; if we do but distinctly consider of mortification, and what they are to mortify, or endeavour to make dead, (1.) As to mortification, which may be considered in two ways, first, as inhibition, when upon effectually calling, a mortal wound is given to the sin, so that it be given to the old man, or to the habit of sin, which will in the end or consummation be a total privation of its life, though as yet it be but partial. It is not in regard of this inchoative mortification, which was begun upon their effectual calling that the Apostle exhorts the Saints at Calist in this verse to mortify. But mortification may be considered secondly, as removal, when the sin is removed from the life in the making dead all that is contrary to the life, so that the renewal should be continually following, and the period should be continually following.

kill outright without any reprieve." This is that the Apostle put the belling Colossians upon, not to spare any remaining ill dispositions or depraved habits of the bad Man but by the assistance of the Spirit (for this is not a natural, but spiritual work) Rom. 8. 13. Gal. 5. 24. continually to destroy the killing of it, on putting it to death. Never to defile the members with any earthly members of it: Col. 3. 5. Heb. 12. 1. 1 Pet. 2. 11. 1 John 2. 16. They are to mortify, by their members upon the earth, not as if they desired to put them into a dismembering of their bodies, or a defiling of thole bodily natural parts whereby the fest is dignitified, Rom. 6. 13. (though agreeable to his own practise he would have the body kept under and brought into subjection, 1 Cor. 5. 27.) but upon avoiding inordinate motions, and the consequences of them, as Colossians from the particular vices following which taken as collections, and joined up together may well pass under the notion of a body, he had before in this Epistle mentioned the body of the flesh of the fields, 2. 11. this he might say only not mercenarily by reason thole bad do reside in the natural body and members of it, Rom. 6. 6, 12, 19. but that the chiefly inexpressible the nature of corrupt nature dwelling in it, is compared to a peculiar the thing was qan, q same, an immoderate desire after and a longing to reach to this World, and in progressing for them, or puffing them out, as the Jews did, and by so doing, or by enflaming the heart from God, Eccles. 10. 1, 18, 18, trusting in riches rather than in the living God, Job 32. 8, 24, Mai. 6. 24, 2 Tim. 6. 17, r Upon which account it may pass under the title of Idolatry, as the covetous person is an Idolater too, Eph. 5. 5, 6, and further he might reckon, covetousness to be Idolatry, because nothing was more execrable in the judgement of the Jews than Idolatry was, it being ordinary with the Hebrews to note fins by the names of those most detested as rebellion against God, 1 Sam. 15. 23, by witchcraft, not that it be formally, but that the spirit of God is thereby so much more irreparable of mind against him, as that it is unto him, Hebrews 10. 29, and of these things, the Apostle would have us not to content our selves to purr-fume fancies of them, but to grub them up by the roots.

f Especially remembering how the indulging, or sparing of them will be of dreadful consequence, see Eph. 5. 6. y Yet they may be carnal then be looked upon as little faults; which God will overlook on course. z Yet they do certainly incur divine displeasure, and will bring most inevitable judgments upon those unrepentant, rebellious and unmerciful ones who would be thought God's Children and yet remain incorrigible, Matt. 23. 39. 1 Cor. 6. 9. Gal. 5. 21.

7 In the which y ye also walked sometime w, when ye lived in them z.

8 But now ye also put off all these y, anger z, wrath a, malice b, blasphemy c, filthy communication of your mouth d.

9 Having minded then their former condition under Paganism in a state of sin whilst they served various sensual lusts he doth here in their present circumstances under Christianity in a state of grace show them that now they professed to walk as Children of light, Rom. 13. 12. Eph. 5. 8.

10 Some were strongly obliged to lay aside those inordinate affections which were more spiritual, Eph. 2. 22. some of which he doth influence in viz. 1 Cor. 13. 4. 25. but he doth not mean the passion it self, Eph. 4. 26. with 31. but the inordinacy of it, being a vindictive appetite to hurt another unchristianly for some affront conceived to be given or occasioned by him. a Wrath, indignation, Rom. 2. 8. a sudden hasty and vehement commotion of the offended mind apprehending an injury when it is felt in the countenance in a manner and measure unbecoming a Christian, as in them who with rage thrust Christ out of the City, Luk. 4. 28. 29. with Eph. 4. 31. b Malice is commencing both the evil habit and the vicious act; now though this word be took offensively more generally, for that mischievous violence and venom which runs through all the passions of the soul reaching to all sins, 1 Cor. 5. 8. 14. 20. yet here it seems to be taken more peculiarly for a secret malignity of rooted anger and continued wrath retrenching injuries, meditating revenge, and watching for an occasion to vent it, being much like the same with that which the Apostle in a parallel Epistle calls bitterness, Eph. 4. 31. compared with other places, Gen. 4. 8. Rom. 1. 29. Tit. 2. 1. Per. 2. 1.

c After he had urged the laying aside of heart evils as the cause, he moves to the laying aside of those of the tongue, viz. blasphemy which in a like place we render evil speaking, Eph. 4. 31. the original word according to the notation of it doth signify the hurt of any one's good name; which when it respects God we do more strictly call Blasphemy. When it respects our neighbour though more largely it be so, or defamation, Rom. 3. 8. 1 Cor. 4. 13. Tit. 3. 2. yet more strictly, if it be done secretly, it is detraction or backbiting; more openly reviling or flandering, *Matt. 15. 19. So the import of the Apostles injunction is, let it regulate, govern, impel, moderate, or give law to the rest of the affections of the new man; let it be mistress and governess of all your motions to keep them in due respect, and withhold them from attempting any thing disorderly, and to overlay inclinations to the divine pleasure or the good order of Christian community. 22 He doth not say the peace of the World, but the peace of God or as some Copies, the peace of Christ; be sure without the mediation of Christ we have no peace with God, he alone hath made peace, c. 1. 20. with c. 2. 14. he is our peace making it with God, and amongst our selves to whom he hath preached it, Act. 10. 36. Eph. 2. 14, 15, 16, 17. and whom he hath brought into the bond of it, Eph. 4. 3. The Lord of peace himself who always gives it where it is enjoyed, Joh. 14. 27. 2 Thess. 3. 16. Thus then the peace of God through Christ, Phil. 4. 7. 9. by faith in whom we have peace in our own hearts with God, Joh. 14. 27. Rom. 5. 1. and 14. 17. and with one another, Joh. 17. 21. Rom. 15. 6, 7, 13. that the members of Christ may live in this peace, 2 Cor. 13. 11. the Apostle here enjoys, as we render the word, let it rule in your hearts, the Greek word (both simple here, and compound, c. 2. 18.) is no where else to be found in the N. T. but in this Epistle, and it may signify either to arbitrate, or to mediate; our translation and the generality of interpreters take it in the former notion, for to arbitrate, or to rule, govern, sway or moderate by way of arbitration, as he who fate judge, or umpire to decide thereward in the Agonistics. So the import of the Apostles injunction is, let it regulate, govern, impel, moderate, or give law to the rest of the affections of the new man; let it be mistress and governess of all your motions to keep them in due respect, and withhold them from attempting any thing disorderly, and to overlay inclinations to the divine pleasure or the good order of Christian community. The Arabick version is let it be as the centre. Yet one learned man conceiving the Apostle doth here as before, c. 2. 18. glance upon the false Apostles (who would imitate the mediation or intercession of Angels) thinks because the word signifies also to mediate, Intercede, or interpose, the Apostle's meaning may be let the peace of God to you instead of all conceived Angelical meditations, or intercessions which would derogate from him that made peace, c. 1. 26. making what hindered to his Cross, c. 2. 14. let that propitiate and draw you to your hearts, never balance any thing that can be ingrafted to the contrary. in Christ is accepted. Neither the eloquence of the Philosopher, nor the rudeness of him who is uncultivated; neither the liberty of the free-man nor the bondage of the slave doth further or obstruct the work of the new Creation. p But they that are truly interested in Christ, have really put him on, they are indeed privileged with that which answers all, they are indeed the blessed with faithful Abraham, whether they be of his seed according to the flesh yea or no, Gal. 3. 22. Gal. 3. 7, 8, 9. having put on Christ, Rom. 13. 14. they are all complete in him, c. 2. 10. He is all things to and in all those who are renewed, both metonymically and effectually, 1 Cor. 3. 30 & 15. 10. Gal. 2. 20. being by him made alive, who hath all, they have all, 1 Cor. 3. 17. either for their present support, or their eternal happiness, Act. 4. 12.

16 Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another & in Psalms, and Hymns, and spiritual Songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

One learned man conceives Paul to have written this first clause of the verse, as in a Parenthesis, joyning in the sense what next follows to be ye thankfull in the foregoing words; another would have the Parenthesis to beginneth from the 14th. verse. The thing here concerned is, that we fall short of all things, which the Bible more especially calls for, soeiel, that it may take up its residence and abide in our Souls, which cometh from the spirital incorporation or mixing of it with faith, Heb. 4. 2, without which it may enter as a stranger but will not abide, it can neither dwell nor shine but is not comprehended in the light of Gods enlighten, and therefore cannot afford some present delight, Mar. 6. 2c. but not lasting. The Apostle would have the word to be diligently searched, heartily received and carefully observed; a Child may have it in his memory, that hath not it in his heart, and therefore he saith, searched, and received, in his heart, this indwelling of the word in the heart, is called the fruit of the Spirit, Gal. 5. 22, &c.

17. And whatsoever ye do o in word or deed p, do all in the name Lord Jesus q, * giving thanks to God and the Father r by him.

to God after the Father & by Him.

o Here the Apostle gives an universal direction how in every capacity both personal and relative; in every motion and action, in every word and deed, in every thought and feeling a Christian may do all for God, as to the Father, God, the Son, and that in His capacities and actions, viz. comprehending His internal as well as external operations; his reasonings and revelations within, as well as his motions without; as the thoughts of his heart, as well as the words of his tongue and the works of his hand, to take care as much as possible that all be in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, elsewhere writing the same thing, the Apostle adds Christ (see Eph. 5. 20). Apostle could say not only every word, but every thought should take its beginning from God, but he understood nothing of the Mediator, of the love of him and the Father: but Christians know as there is Salvation husband's interests in the same way as he.

[illegible]

18. Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands as it is fit in the Lord :

2. Again, the husband's duty and subordination to his wife's duties, begins first with that which Wives are to do for their husbands to whom they are Married, by reason this Relation is the first in nature, and the fountain whence the rest do flow; Gen. 2:22. Eph. 1:7, & 12:3. Prov. 5:15, 16. That which he requires is self-submission in every thing, see Eph. 5:22, expressing a subjection with reverence, v. 24, 33. 1 Pet. 3:1. The God of Order made the Woman inferior to the Man, Gen. 2:8, 22, 33. 16. 1 Chr. 11:7, 9. 1 Tim. 2:13. Tit. 2:5. yet her subjection is not in the same manner, that of an hand-maid, but conjugal, and of a meet Commodity. Suitable to the mind's institution in becoming a member, agreeable to the mind of Christ, Art. 5. 1 Cor. 7:36. Eph. 5:1, 3.

19. Husbands, love your wives w, and be not bitter against them x.

¶ The Husband's duty is love, which the Apostle doth ever inculcate from the most obnoxious confederations which he speaks of this Relation, see Mat. 19. 6. 1 Cor. 7. 2. with Eph. 5. 25-33. to sweeten on one hand the subjection of the Wife, and to temper on the other hand the authority of the Husband. And he forbids him his authority he may not grow insolent, the Apostle forbids him forwardness with his Wife, therefore requiring a conversation with her, full of sweetness and amity: wrath and bitterness is to be laid aside towards all others, see 8. with Eph. 4. 31. much more towards his own Wife, in whom he is to joy and delight, Prov. 5. 15, 18. 1st Par. 3. 7.

19. 1 Cor. 3-7.

20. Children y, obey your parents z in all things q, for this is well-pleasing unto the Lord b. By Children, he understands both Males and Females y. Whom I have yielded my obedience to the other as being their head, they have just authority over them. Exod. 20. 12. Eph. 6. 1. paying reverence to them, Lev. 19. 3. Heb. 12. 9. observing their holy and prudent precepts, Luke 21. 3. shewing piety and kindness to them in particular offices, 1 Tim. 5. 4. and submitting to their Parents discipline, Lev. 19. 3. which is also very agreeable to the mind of the Supreme Governor, who is absolute Sovereign, Att. 4. 18. & 29. b And this upon the most cogent reason imaginable, because it's not barely pleasing, but well-pleasing, or very acceptable to the Lord, who has put his authority over their Children Eph. 6. 1. 2. 3.

21. Fathers, provoke not your children to disobedience, lest they be discouraged in the Lord.

c And to moderate the Paternal authority, that they may exercise it Christianly, he allows not Parents to do that which is in a direct tendency to irritate or move the passions of their Children merely for their own pleasure, without a principal regard to God's glory, and their Childrens profit, Heb. 12. 10. Indeed, he seems here more frigidly to guard against the excess of affection than of anger, upon this extreme than he doth elsewhere, when warning upon the same subject, Eph. 6. 4. considering the original word he here puts the negative upon, to engage them to lay aside rigour in their government (alwell as unwarrantable indulgence) and that upon a very weighty reason drawn from the end, viz. I Left those Children who might with a moderate correction be reduced to obedience, should be (as it were) delivered by the severity of their discipline, and reprobated again with grief, or grow delinquent.

22 * Servants ε, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh ε: not with eye-fervice g, as men-pleasers b, but in singleness of heart i, fearing God.

e The Apostle knowing how hard the condition of servitude was both under the Jews and Gentiles, left any believers in that man condition should distrust to find a subjection, especially to unbelieving Masters, and cast off the yoke by breaking their Covenant to the disturbance of humanity, and the disparagement of the Christian religion, It is written, It is a special privilege to seven hundred and thirty to all those indefinitely who lot it was, by recommending the duties of it to them from the consideration of the acceptableness of them to God, who of his unconstrained grace would vouchsafe to them the noblest reward. / Wherefore Christianity requires that Servants of all sorts should rejoice in their condition, and be ready to obey their Masters as unto the Lord, as if ye were to receive the Lord's 2.20 in things lawful and honest, of those who love Jesus whom God in his wise Providence hath given a just authority over them according to the flesh, see also Eph. 6. 5. which expression is not only for distinction from the Father and Marker of Spirits, Heb. 12. 9. but for mitigation of their servitude, in that their Earthly Master's power reacheth only to the body and outward, and cannot reach to the soul and things that are eternal, which might be some comfort that the servitude would not last long, and in the mean time they were God's Free-men, 1 Cor. 7. 22. which they might serve with the Spirit in the Gospel of his Son, Rom. 1. 9. y Yet their Masters after the flesh in those civil things wherein they had power to command, were not lightly to be respected or respected, as if ye were to receive the Lord's and things upon them, Eph. 6. 5. As it regard were to be ad-to the pleasing of Men, and not to the pleasing of God who searcheth the heart, and by his Gospel (which they should adore) expects they remember him she is ever upon them, Tit. 2. 9. 1. Pet. 2. 18. / And expects that in an holiness of heart and conversation, they be able to be in the sincerity of their Souls, Eph. 6. 5. with more regard to God than Men.

23 And whatsoever ye doe, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men &c.

to the Lord, and not unto men x.
 & Ye courageously and cheerfully from the very Soul, not contraindained and murmuringly, though they be forward and their commands harsh ; making account it is Iesus Christ ( who hath power over Soul and Body, Mat. 10. 28 ) not mortal Men onely, or in and for themselves whom you serve, see Eph. 6. 7. have an eye unto this Sovereign Lord, in the free office your Masters on earth do employ you.

24. Knowing <sup>1</sup> that of the Lord <sup>m</sup> ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: <sup>n</sup> for ye <sup>o</sup> serve the Lord Christ:

1 Being fully persuaded of this undoubted truth, in That of the Lord, who superabundantly all your services (not for any merit of yours) Eph. 6:3 the recompence which Nature has made you have purchased, Eph. 1:14, 18, [I] have freely feasted upon you whom he hath adopted into his Family, c. Rom. 8:17, Gal. 4:7, for in these duties you Christianly perform to Masters of the same fold with your (elves), he really looks upon you as his own Servants. see Eph. 6:6, 5ea and Freeman, i Cor. 7:2, so that as Onesimus, Philem v. 10, ye may more cheerfully submit to your Master's yoke, according to the commandment of the Lord, Col. 3:22, with a cheerful heart, in that account as done to your self, Matt. 23:10, ye will enslave you to your Master, and will enslave you in that eternal inheritance, in which neither you nor any mortal Man had naturally any Right at all.

25 But he that doth wrong, shall receive
7. for the wrong which he hath done: and *there is no respect of persons.

¶ But if the reward will not engage to a right discharge of these Relative duties, the injurious person whether he be bound or free, Eph. 6. 8. an inferior Servant, or a domineering Master, who doth violate the rules of right, agreeing with the Law natural and eternal. I Shall have the just recompence of that injury, whereby he wrongs his Correlate; the penalty apportioned to his fault, Rom. 2. 6. 2 Cor. 5. 10. 2. Pet. 2. 13. ¶ From the impartiality of divine justice, there is no respect of persons with God, Rom. 2. 11. or wish Christ John 8. 26. He who is to be judged shall be judged in the place Parialet (out), Ezek. 6. 9. who is so righteous a Judge that he is not swayed by the outward circumstances and qualifications of Men, whether potent or poor, Lev. 19. 15. Job. 34. 9. he seeth not as Man seeth, he looketh not on the outward appearance, but on the heart; 1 Sam. 16. 7. in the distribution of justice, he will put no difference betwixt the mightiest Monarch, and the most enslaved Peasant; the punishing Servant, and oppressing Master, shall certainly receive answerable to their doings from his impartial Hand: the mean one who is at present abased without relief, and the great one who doth tyrannize without control; shall one day have right, and be reckoned with by the righteous Judge,

2 Tim. 4. 8. who will shew to all the world that he will honour those that honour him, and lightly esteem those that despise him, 1 Sam. 2. 30. and that he is the avenger of all those that are wronged, 1 Thess. 4. 8. 2 Thess. 1. 6.

CHAP. IV

Masters a, give unto your servants that which is just b and equal c, knowing that ye also have a master in heaven d.

that ye and I have a matter in heaven d.

That this Verbe doth refer to the foregoing Chapter, and that the same is to be understood of the Lord, is generally agreed.

4 Having put Servants under the Rod, is generally agreed to signify that all those who have a just right over Servants to manage them, are justly towards those under their command. b Though your estate or estate hath advanced you above them in humane Society, yet you have the same nature and infirmities as they have; and as in the foregoing Verbe must appear with the Judge and rewarder at the day of the final Tribunal. And the Apostle doth further shew, 1 Cor. 6. 9, require of Masters in their superior Relation, which they have to their inferior one, to do the same thing, i. e. not the particular offices of their Servants, but according to general rules of right reason, which by the Law of God, Nature, and Nations, that which is common to, and incumbent on all Relations, *Prov. 13. 7. 2 Continue in prayer e, and watch in the same f with thanksgiving g.

* Chap. 3. 16.

6 Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man.

o Because discourse is the tenderest part of our converse with men, especially those without and ought to be managed with the greatest circumspection; upon occasions in every fit season, in imitation of Christ who entertained those that did converse with him with gracious words, Luk. 4. 22. you should endeavour to speak when called, that the hearers may conceive your discourse doth proceed from a gracious mind, or grace in the heart, Eccl. 6. 6. teaching your mouth, Prov. 15. 23. & with meekness of wisdom, Jam. 3. 13. u-ing knowledge aright, Prov. 15. 2. being in its tendency gracious, Eccl. 10. 12. not ungrateful (as tincher) with gall or vinegar; but ministering grace to the hearers, Eph. 4. 29. r Even as meat duly powdered with salt, (Mat. 5. 13.) becomes acceptable to the discerning palate, to the ear that trieth speech, fully spoken words, (Prov. 25. 11.) are of grateful favour, cleansed from corruption, Job. 33. 3. o Mark 9. 30. o To this purpose chiefly in the main points of Christian-ity, that in a Gospel becoming manner, you may be able to give a reason of the hope that is in you (to that that ask you with meekness and fear, Mat. 7. 6. 1 Per. 3. 15. courteousness and sincerity, Eph. 4. 25. free from the evil of speech he had before enjoyed them in this Epistle to put away, c. 3. 8.

7 All my state shall Tychicus declare unto you, who is a beloved brother, and a faithful minister, & a fellow servant in the Lord.

o The Apostle drawing to a conclusion, that he at so great distance might certify them of his love to them, and care for them, doth here acquaint them that with this Epistle he was sending two persons of integrity for their fa-tification and his, viz. Tychicus an Asiatick their country Man and his fellow traveller, Aff. 20. 4. whom he some-times sent to them, 2 Tim. 4. 12. o Tychicus who would give them to understand, what circumstances he was in, and all his affairs, see Eph. 6. 21, 22. o Whom he recommends to them as being a good man, a Brother as Timothy, c. 1. 1. and Epaphroditus, Phil. 2. 25. beloved of the People, o And whom he had experimentally found to be a faithful Dea-con in the larger acceptance or Minister, i.e. of Jesus Christ and his messenger. o And owned as his Colleague or fellow Servant in the Lord, that they might more kindly receive him.

8 Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, y, that he might know your estate, and comfort your hearts.

o Who was Paul's Messenger to them as to let them know know it was with Paul, to this end, (1) o That he might clearly understand how their matters stood (as Eph. 6. 22.) especially with respect to spirituals, c. 2. 1. 5. o And (2) cheer up their spirits (as, Eph. 6. 22.) that under the temptations of Satan, and tyranny of persecutors abroad or at home they might not be discouraged, 2 Cor. 4. 17.

* Phil. 2. 10.

9 With o Onesimus a faithful and beloved brother, who is one of you. They shall make known unto you all things which are done here.

o With Onesimus whom he adjoins to Tychicus. Some be-cause of his following commendation think him to be a nother person different from the fugitive Servant of Philemon, but the most comparing the description here, with the cir-cumstances in the Epistle Philemon, v. 10. 16. o Conclude him to be the very same, taking Philemon for a Colossian. There, as here, being expressly called a beloved Brother, yea and which may answer to faithful, Paul's spiritual Son, who (whatever he had been) would be profitable and a benefit to Philemon, whom Paul would have to receive him as his own bowels. And that which might commend him to the Colossians was that he was one of that City, or the same birth with themselves. o These two persons of Credit (upon the Apostles Testimony) in their different circumstan-ces, might at joint witness, give them a full and certain account how things went with the Church, and particularly with Paul now a Prisoner at Rome.

10 Arifarchus my fellow prisoner salureth you, & d. Marcus sifers son to Barnabas f. (touching whom ye received commandments: If he come unto you receive him g.)

o Here he doth with propriety to them, Luk. 10. 5. in the name of others beginning with those of the circumcision, viz. Arifarchus a Thessalonian of Macedonia who had been his fellow traveller, Aff. 19. 29. & 20. 4. & 27. 2. yea and now his fellow prisoner, and fellow labourer, Philem. 24. o And John Mark, who was Nephew to Barnabas, Aff. 12. 12. & 13. and having sometime disesteemed Paul by his dis-pature and accompanying his Uncle Barnabas, Aff. 15. 37. yea afterwards repented, and was reconciled to Paul, Philem. 24. o Tim. 4. 11. being profitable to him for the nu-merity as an evangelist. o Concerning this same Mark, Paul had given orders to them, as well as to other Churches, (who otherwise, likely, might be prejudiced against him, for leaving Paul and his company in Pamphilia, Aff. 13. 13.) that if he came amongst them, they should entertain him kindly, who as Peter's spiritual Son, 1 Per. 5. 13. did ele-where also salute those who were scattered. Some conceive from the commandments, here they had received that Barnabas had wrote to the Colossians in commendation of his Cousin Mark.

11 And Jesus, which is called Justus, who are of the circumcision b. These only are my fellow-workers unto the Kingdom of God i, which become a comfort unto me k.

o A third person of those who had been Jews mentioned in this salutation is Jesus framed probably from his last conversation (whether the same with him mentioned in 1 Cor. 15. 9. is not evident. The Greek Jesus for the Hebrew Joshua, Heb. 4. 8. it being common with them, to more than one. However the Christians since the Resurrection of Christ out of reverence to their Lord and Master, (who is God as well as Man) have foreborn to call their Children by the name of Jesus. o These three alone, i.e. of the Jews (as for Timothy, his Father was a Greek or Gentile, Aff. 16. 1. and others were Gentiles, Aff. 28. 23.) were sufficient to him at Rome (where it seems Peter was not) in expounding, and preaching the Gospel, enlarging the King-dom of Grace in converting of Souls, Mat. 4. 23. o Mat. 4. 11. o The carrying on of which work, did administer matter of great consolation, to him in his bonds.

12 Epaphras, who is one of you a servant of Christ, salureth you i, always o labouring fervently for you in prayers m, that ye may stand perfect, and t complete in all the will of God n.

o After he had given them the good wishes of some of the Jews; he doth here give the like from some of the Gentiles, beginning with Epaphras, whom he had before commended, c. 1. 7. o And doth here recommend him as born and bred amongst them, devoted to their service, in being the Ser-vant of Christ, as Paul separated to the Preaching of the Gospel, Rom. 1. 1. yea a Fellow-prisoner with the Apostle upon that account, Philem. 9. 23. o And as it became such an one faithful in his office, not diverted by distance of place, or length of time, was night and day contending zealously with prayers to God for their spiritual, temporal and eternal welfare, as Rom. 15. 30. o That they might at-tain a sufficient perfection in all that which God would have them reach to, see on ch. 1. 28. o Phil. 3. 15. The dis-tance twist Colossians and Philippi, &c. render it improbable, whatever a learned Man conceits, that Epaphras should be the same with Epaphroditus.

13 For I bear him record, that he hath a great zeal for you, & them that are in Laodicea, and them in Hierapolis p.

* Or, striving.

* Or, flock.

* For

o For faith the Apostle; though I am not priry to his fa-vour, yet I can bear him witness, and do give him mine own testimony that he hath a most ardent and special af-fection for you Christians at Colossae, p Yea, and for those also in your neighbour Cities, see the Arguments, and ch. 2. 1. viz. Laodicea the left of the seven Churches, to whom excellent Epistles were written, recorded by John the Divine, Rev. 1. 11. & 14. and Hierapolis, or the Holy City, about six Miles distant from the former, see Geographers.

14 Luke the beloved physician q, and Demas greet you r.

o Whether this Luke was the same with him that penned the Gospel and the Acts, because the Apostle here gives him no higher a commendation, some doubt? But others, and the most, conclude that as Mathew from a publican became an Apostle, and others from filthers of filthes filthers of men, o Luke from a Physician of the body, be-came a Physician of Souls, and that this was the very person who was Paul's perpetual and individual companion in his Travels, 2 Tim. 4. 11. o Philem. 24. considering from his style he was an excellent Grecian (very fit for a Physician) and made use of proper medical terms, Aff. 15. 39. & 27. 16. and here the Apostle calls him beloved as he had done Tychicus, v. 7. and elsewhere his fellow labourer who only of those that were not Prisoners stuck to him, 2 Tim. 4. 11. some think it to be Luke whose praises are ce-lebrated in the Gospel or Evangelical Churches, 2 Cor. 8. 18. the others would have that to be Barnabas, or some other; his practising of Physick was no more inconsistent with being an Evangelist than Paul's Tent-making with being an Ap-ostle, 2 Thess. 3. 8. o He adds a third in this salutation from others, and that is Demas who hitherto did persevere, and that as one of his fellow labourers, Philem. 24. Though it should seem afterwards when the persecution grew hotter, he did for some worldly respect, leave Paul, and depart un-to Thessalonica, 2 Tim. 4. 10.

15 Salute the brethren which are in Laodicea, y, and Nymphas r, and the church which is in his house u.

o Having saluted the Colossians, in the names of others, cir-cumcised, and uncircumcised, he desires them in his own name to salute the Christians in the Church at Laodicea. o And some pious man called Nymphas probably living either in the Country near the City of Laodicea; or some eminent Christian of chief note in the City. The masculine Article adjoyned shews this Person to be a male and not a female (as some have inconsiderately reckoned, u) and the company of believers either of his own family or neighbourhood, who did under his protection or inspection meet to worship God according to his appointment, Rom. 16. 1. 1 Cor. 16. 15. 19.

16 And when this epistle is read amongst you v, cause that it be read also in the Church of the Laodiceans x: and that ye likewise read the epistle from Laodicea y.

o The Apostle takes it for granted, that when this Epistle came to their hands, 'twould be publicly read in a solemn Assembly of the Church, or Brethren convened to that pur-pose, as elsewhere usual: For indeed he doth strictly enjoin and adjure the Thessalonians, under the penalty of the Lord's displeasure, that the Epistle or Letter which he wrote unto them should be read unto all the Brethren, 1 Thess. 5. 27. It being an indispensible duty of Christ's Disciples to search the Scriptures, Job. 5. 39. and there solemnly to read them in the Assembly for the edification of all Ministers and People, old and young, Deut. 17. 19. Psal. 1. 2. & 119. 9. Mark. 13. 37. Aff. 13. 15. & 17. 11. & 18. 26. 27. 28. Rom. 15. 4. 1 Tim. 4. 13. 15. o Hence (as it follows) the Apostle (who it's likely had not an opportunity at Rome, to have a Copy of it transcribed) chargeth them at Colossae, to see or take care after the reading of this same Epistle o amongst themselves, that a Copy of it being prepared for that purpose, it might, as from him, be also solemnly read or rehearsed in a publick assembly of the Christians at Laodicea. o And he further chargeth those to whom he wrote at Colossae that they should take care, that the Epistle (as we rightly with the generality of Ancients and moderns render it) from Laodicea, be read amongst them. The Archiepiscop version (as we have it there in the Latin) reads find it to Laodicea, that the Laodiceans also may read it, in the House, or Congregation of Christians there. The vulgar Latin, that ye likewise may read the Laodicean Epistle, or the Epistle of the Laodiceans. Whence some of old, and of late would have it thought, that St. Paul wrote a distinct Epistle to the Laodiceans. In favour of this opinion some bad man out of this Epistle to the Colossians and then to the Ephe-sians patch'd up and forg'd a short, but gross and trifling Epistle, and fathered it on the Apostle, though very different from his Character and style, whereupon it hath been re-jected as spurious and Apocryphal by the learned Fathers, and the second Council of Nice; and since by the learned on all hands; except some few of the Papists; and except Quakers, who printed a Translation of it, and plead for it: Some Papists urge this, to argue that the Church gives the Scrip-ture Authority amongst Christians. But though the is bound to preferre the Books of divine Authority, it doth not belong to her, to Authenticate them, or prescribe them as the rule of Faith, that were nolets than to outrage the Majesty of the Authour, others alledge it, as being lost, and there-upon would infer the Canon of holy Scriptures to be defe-ctive. But supposing, yet not granting, that Paul had written an Epistle to the Laodiceans, which had not come down to us, it were altogether inconsequent that the Canon of Scrip-ture, we have, doth not contain all things necessary to Sal-vation. Some still harping on the vulgar Translation of the Laodicean Epistle (though that in common speech might ar-gue they wrote it rather than received it) would fancy that 'twas the Epistle Paul wrote to the Ephe-sians; but Zerullian did brand the Impostuous Marcian for changing the title of Paul's Epistle to the Ephe-sians. Others conceit, it may be understood of Paul's Epistle to Philemon whom Paul calls his fellow-labourer, likely exercising his ministry in the neigh-bour City of Laodicea which was sent by Onesimus, for the sake of Onesimus (who was a Colossian) was to be read at Colossae, others because Luke is mentioned, v. 14. that it was an Epistle of his, to the Laodiceans, but of that there's no evi-dence. Neither is it probable that Paul would in this Epistle to the Colossians have saluted the Laodiceans, had he written a distinct Epistle to them. Wherefore 'tis most ratio-nal to understand it, of an Epistle of Paul written to the Laodiceans; but as our Bibles, according to an Authentick Copy, have with the Greek Fathers, faithfully trans-lated, and represented it, written from Laodicea. Some con-jecture it to be the first Epistle of John which they conceive was written from the City of Laodicea. Others think it was the first Epistle to Timothy, from the inscription or subscrip-tion of a long time put at the end of it, as if written from Laodicea. But against that it may be excepted; there is no mention of Patience, in the writers of the first age: but only in after times, dividing the Roman Empire into pro-vinces, and some say this was first mentioned in the Eccle-siastical records in the V. Synod at Constantinople. Further there be several passages in the Epistle fit to do imitate that it was written from some place in Macedonia, if we con-sult, c. 1. 3. with 3. 14. & 4. 13. not from Laodicea. Some think it to be meant of the Epistle from Laodicea, wherein they would answer the Colossians, how probably I determine not. Wherefore 'tis most probable that the Epistle was written from Laodicea, to Paul at Rome; either by the Church there, or some of her Officers, which (likely he in straits of time enclosed) and he would have read, as help-ful to the edification of the Colossians, for the better clear-ing of some passages in this Epistle to them, wherein he had obviated fix errors as he might hear seducers were attempt-ing to disseminate amongst them.

17 And say to Archippus z, Take heed to the ministry a which thou hast received, in the Lord b that thou fulfill it c.

o He also enjoyns them to advise or advertise Archippus whom he doth elsewhere call his fellow-soldier, i.e. Minister in the Gospel, Philem. 2. on his, and Timothy his behalf o To see to or be mindful of the nature of that excellent ministry he had undertaken, Rom. 11. 13. Eph. 3. 7. 1 Tim. 4. 6. yea and to be more heedful, Aff. 20. 28. 29. 1 Per. 5. 1. 2. o Considering the Authority of the Lord Jesus in whose name he had been called to it, and entrusted with it, Mat. 9. 38. Phil. 1. 17. 1 Tim. 4. 1. 21. o Having been Colleague to Epaphras, or in his absence newly received into this sacred cause to encourage him to a faithful discharge of his duty therein to fill up all the parts of his office, and leave none of them unperformed, see c. 1. 23. 1 Cor. 9. 16. 17. 1 Tim. 4. 16. with 2 Tim. 4. 5.

18 The salutation by the hand of me Paul d. Remember my bonds. e Grace be with you f A-men g.

o The Apostle having used on his heart, and here (as elsewhere) likely having used an Amen to pen the Bo-dy of this Epistle, to prevent fraud and forgery he doth subscribe his Salvation and Apostolical Benediction with his own hand which was well known, Rom. 16. 22. 1 Cor. 16. 21. Gal. 6. 11. Philom. 19. 2 Thess. 2. 2 & 3. 17. 6 Importuning them to be very mindful of his imprisonment in their prayers, 2. 3. Heb. 13. 3. imitating his constancy and patience if called to suffer for, Phil. 1. 14. his sufferings being an excellent seal to the truth of his Gospel, and his ardent affection to them and other Gentiles; for whose sake he was in bonds, f Then earnestly praying that the special grace and favour of God the Father in the Lord Jesus Christ might be ever present with them, see Rom. 16. 24. 1 Cor. 16. 23, 24. Phil. 4. 23. g In Testimony of the reality of his desire, and assurance to be heard, he concludes (as elsewhere) with Amen.

I. THESSALONIANS.

The ARGUMENT.

THE Apostle Paul being more especially the Minister of the Uncircumcised, and Preacher of the Gentiles, in his Progress through their Cities and Countries comes to Thessalonica; a chief City in Macedonia, for thither he was called in a Vision, Acts 16. 9. A man of Macedonia prayed him, saying, Come over to Macedonia and help us. In obedience to which he parted from Troas, and came to Samothracia, and from thence to Neapolis, from thence to Philippi, where he abode certain days; verse 12. And after passing through Amphipolis, and Apollonia came to Thessalonica, where was a Synagogue of the Jews, Acts 17. 1. whither as his manner was he went and Preached that Jesus was the Christ. Whereupon some believed, and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief Women not a few. But the Jews which believed not raised a persecution against him, whereupon the Brethren sent him and Silas away to Berea, verse 10. where he also went and Preached in the Jews Synagogue. But the unbelieving Jews of Thessalonica following him to Berea; he was conducted thence to Athens; and from thence it is thought by some he writes this Epistle to the Thessalonians, as is asserted in the Postscript. Wherein he gives account of the great success of his Preaching among them, for which he gives thanks to God, and makes an honourable mention of them in several places. But because they were new Converts, and met with Persecution from their own Countrymen for the Gospel sake, the Apostle was the more solicitous for them to confirm them in the Faith they had received. Whereupon he endeavoured once and again to come to them himself, but some way or other was hindered by Satan, as he tells them, chapter 2. verse 18. And therefore he sends to them Timotheus in his room, to know their Faith, and to establish them in it, who bringing an account thereof to him, and of their state, he writes this Epistle to them according to the account he received by Timotheus, and his own observation and knowledge while he was amongst them. Particularly,

1. He gives thanks for the Eminency and Operation of the Graces of God in them, for the special presence of the Holy Ghost in his Ministry amongst them, for their exemplary Faith and Conversation, chap. 1.
2. He puts them in mind of his Ministerial Labours and Personal Conversation among them, of the malicious carriage of the Jews both against Christ, and his Apostles, and particularly against himself, whereof he knew they themselves were eye witnesses; and declares his present rejoicing and glorying in them, chap. 2.
3. He next gives the Reason of his sending Timotheus to them, and speaks of the good account he gave of them, and the great refreshing and comfort he received thereby; and that he was greatly desirous to see their face, and prays that they might increase in Love, and be established in Holiness, chap. 3.
4. He then proceeds to exhort them about their Personal walking according to the Directions and Commandments he had given them from the Lord Jesus. And he insists on Marriage Chastity, Righteousness in dealing, brotherly Love, peaceable carriage, minding their callings, and diligence therein, and not to mourn inordinately for them that die in Jesus, as knowing that they shall rise from the dead, and meet the Lord in the Air as well, and as early as those that shall be found alive at his coming, chap. 4.
5. He next describes the manner of Christ's Coming; that it will be sudden and unexpected, whereby many will be surprised in their security, and therefore exhorts these Thessalonians to be watchful, sober, and armed for that day, which will be to them a day of Salvation which they had been appointed in. And then he exhorts them to duties belonging to their Church State, and Communion, to have an high esteem for their Guides and Teachers; to warn, support, and comfort one another; not to retaliate evil for evil, &c. And so in the close of the Epistle recommends them to God in Prayer, begging they would also pray for him; and salute one another, and Communicate this Epistle to all the Brethren, and so concludes with his usual salutation.

This is the Substance of the Epistle.

As to the place whence it was written we need not enquire, whether it was as is expressed in the Postscript, from Athens: or from Corinth as Grotius and others imagine.

As to the Time, it was surely not long after Pauls coming from Thessalonica; for indeed the present state of the Thessalonians did require that he should not long delay it, as his secret affection to them would not suffer it to be longer.

And as to the Order of the Epistle, that that which is called the Second Epistle should be really the First, and by some carelessness misnamed, and misplaced, is a bold groundless conjecture of Grotius, and needs no confirmation.

But this is more probable, that it was the first Epistle that the Apostle wrote to any Church, though other Epistles are in order set before it: The Gospel was more early Preached here than at Corinth or Rome, as appears in the Acts of the Apostles, and the success of it was more sudden and eminent than in any other City, and their persecutions more, whereby they might obtain an Epistle from the Apostle before any other Church.

in God the father d, and in the LORD Jesus Christ e: Grace be to you, and peace from God our Father, and the LORD Jesus Christ.

Why not Paul the Apostle as in some other Epistles? Because his Apostleship was not doubted of by them, they had such an eminent seal of it upon their hearts; and there were no false Apostles.

79 He next gives account of their carriage more positively : And first he speaks of their gentleness among them. * Notia, the Latin takes it for pietatis, infants, we were as infants to one another, as Nurses and Nurses' children are to one another, with Children. This is one of the Fruits of the Spirit, Gal. 5. 22. It stands opposite to moroseness, austerity, and roughness of temper, and is commendable in all, especially Milk-mothers, a Tim. 2. 24. And was eminent in Christ himself, was prophesied of him, Mat. 40. 17. and 22. 3. and the contrary he reproves in Titus and Titus, La. 5. 4. It springs from Humility, Meekness, and Patience, as the contraries, Pride, Passion, and Frowardness. In some cases harshness and severity may be needful, prudence is to direct therefore our carriage. The Apostle had now to do with young Converts, who were of the Trial of the Faith, and were Apostates, and obstinate sinners against whom we find he was sometimes severe and sharp, as Jude required, viz. 22. 23. And he represents this gentleness by that of a Nurse to her Children nor of an hired Nurse, but a Mother Nurse, Namque 12. who usually is reputed most gentle and affectionate, and for their frowardness, condescends to the meanest Offices and employments, and draws out her breasts to them, and lays them in her bosom, and all this to them to cherish them. And the doer this not out of hope of gain, but out of motherly affection. Thus furnish the Apostle, were we gentle among you. As he converted them to Christ, he was their Spiritual Father; but his gentleness was like that of a Mother, nursing her own Children. He considered their weakness in their first believing, and bore with it ; their many Infirmities, Temptations, Afflictions that were upon them, had compassion over them, and supported them under them, and cherisher them with the sincere Milk of Gospel Truths; and he did all this not for gain, but out of sincere affection, and willing mind. Some extend the word wender Nest to the brute Creatures themselves, especially Birds who hatch, and then cherish their young with the warmth of their own body, and care in feeding them ; πρόσθε, the word signifies a father, so it may have a more general signification, see Job 20, 14.

8 So being affectionately desirous of you y, we were willing to have imparted to you not the gospel of God only, but also * our own souls, because ye were dear unto us z.

3-7. 10 Ye are witnesses, and God also, * how honestly, justly, and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe e.

The former verities gave account of their carriage in the Ministry, this here of their Christian Conversation, holily, with respect to God, juffly, with respect to Duties commanded towards men, and unblameably, in denying themselves in law, liberty to avoid all occafion of blame from any of them. And for the truth of this he appeals to themfelves, to God himfelf. There is the witness of men, and the witness of confcience greater than of men, and the witness of God's greatnefs of all. 1 Yak. 3. 20. He appeals to them witnefs about their external Actions, and to God about the integrity of their hearts: And he doth this not in a way of boaffing, but to be an example to them, and as a further reason of the great fuccefs of his Ministry. The Conviction of Minifters hath great influence upon the fuccefs of their labours.

tolls him. Behold, my public Ministry he deak more privately with them, as Acts 20, 20. And that in a way of exhortation and comfort. By exhortation to quicken them, and by comfort to support them under troubles both outward and inward. And he did this as a Father to his Children, with much earnestness, as 1 Cor. 4, 14. And he did this as a Father, who before represented as a Mother, ver. 7. And here as a Father whole work and duty is to Exhort, Counsel and Comfort his Children privately at home, to do he as well as publicly, y<sup>e</sup> for was their spiritual Father, as he begat them to Christ by the Word, and he is their Father in the Church, as he feeds them with his Word, and he is their Father in the world, as he protects them from all enemies. As before he represented his gentleness, so here his Fatherly care. Or, at their first Conversion he carried it with gentleness as a Mother, but afterwards will his Fatherly Authority, And in this he appeals to their own knowledge also, calling them to remember, that he is their Father, who the Spirit, that he might leave the greater impression upon them.

13 For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it * not as the word of men, but (as it is in truth) the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe.

3 The Apostle having given the reasons for ours, and, as 4 follows, fills them, why the Gospel had such effect upon them, 5 he next proceeds to shew the reason on their part, for which he 6 giveth God thanks. And that is from their manner of receiving 7 it. Though this he said as the former are but fabulose re-
8 sponds. First, they heard it, some will not do that: and there-9 fore the Apostle says, Et audierunt et non crediderunt. And 10 in Hisaraph. Faith cometh by hearing. 2. They received it, as 11 word importeth agreeing with affection, as Philip the Virgin 12 Mary to his Wife, Matth. 1. 20. 3. They retired it, as the 13 word of men, which we receive sometimes doubting, sometimes 14 disputing it; or believing it only with an humane Faith, on the 15 grounds of reason as the dictates of Philosophy, or on the 16 grounds of authority, as the dictates of Tradition, or of the 17 God upon our minds, or when we receive the word of God be-18 cause of the eloquence or learning of the Preacher, and such 19 affection we bear to him, or admiration of his person, or other 20 Puppets, we believe it because the Church believeth it. And 21 a Divine Faith, ready Submission of our souls to it, and 22 Reverence of Authority, as that that is from above, and 23 which is confirmed by the effects of it, as it is in the 24 truth, or truly, they believed, to be dispensed to: world to them

chap. II. I. THESE

God. Having mentioned before the (subordinate) Reasons of the Efficacy of the Word, he now mentions the principal, which is God himself. They may receive the Word as the Word of God; it is not from the Preachers so much as from God. And it is a great cause of Thanksgiving that God himself has so graciously provided a way for the Word to be a Divine Faith, which is not done without Divine Grace! Then they see the fruit of their Ministry, for which they ought to give thanks. I. The powerful working of God is usually expressed by this Word, Eph. i. 19; Phil. 2. 13. And the working of Satan also, Eph. 2. 2. Men polluted with the Word, and yet not converted, are said to be the Word of Devil is believed and received as the Word of God when there is such Energy, or worketh effectually, so as to promote Love, Repentance, Self-denial, Mortification, Comfort and Peace, &c. The Apostle had mentioned before their works of Faith, labour of Love, patience of Hope, chap. i. 3. and all from Grace, their receiving the Word as the Word of God, and not as the Word of Devil.

14 For m ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God, which in Judea are in Christ Jesus n; for * ye also have suffered like things of your own country-men o, even as they have of the Jews p.

¶ This proves the alteration of the foregoing verse, as the Illative Fru doth shew. They were followers of the Churches in Judea, which shewed the word wrought in them effectually. Though the greatest part of the Fru believed not, yet many did. ¶ The heretup verse is a little more difficult. Though there was before but one National Church, yet now in Gospel times the Churches were many. ¶ And believing in Christ they are called Churches in him, gathered together in his name, into his institutions, and by his Spirit, and the Philadelphians were no followers, or hearers of the same, nor did they confer graces with them. The Churches among the Jews were the first planned, and the Gentile Churches followed them, conforming to the Faith, Worship and Order that was first in them, and thus uniting their Churches with the Churches of the Jews that believed. ¶ Suffered from the unbelieving Jews their own country, to do thine Philadelphians. But whether the Apostle means only the Gentiles of Thessalonica, or the Fru that dwelt there and were born among them, is uncertain. ¶ For the same reason mention is made of the Thessalonians in the Symon Synagogue, though the Gentiles might also joy with them there. ¶ They suffered at the Churches of Judea, namely, in the same kind, as John 10. 32. 33. 34. And in the same cause, and with the same joy, constancy and courage: And here the words of the Philadelphians are a Man Exemled be thof of his own house. Mat. 10. 35.

15 Who both killed the Lord Jesus g, and their own prophets, and have || persecuted us;
and they please not God s, and are contrary to all men t.

26 ¶ To consider then though they have persecuted you and the believing Jews their Country-men. They killed the Lord Jesus by the hands of Pilate, crying, Crucifie him, crucifie him. Though it was by Gods determinate counsel, and the Roman power, yet by the Jews malice they killed him. Matt. 21. 38. John 8. 12. Acts 7. 59. Rom. 7. 5. And he was re- flected and first particularly to them of God; so that it was new thing in thus to do. Not that these individual Jews who persecuted Paul, killed the Prophets, but they were of the same Nation, the same blood, and of the same spirit with them, and as the children of Abraham, and therefore as such our Saviour charged them, Matt. 23. 31. The Spirit of Persecution was natural to them; it defecated from one generation to another : Their Kings were guilty of it, their Priests, their false prophets, and the common people. And though better things might be expected of the Jews than any other people, yet thus it was. And it was because they were carnal, and of the flesh, and worshiped the Apostles preached, for they killed their own Prophets before him; but it was their love to their lusts, hatred of Reproof, enmity to Holiness, &c. that was the cause. And Christ himself chargeth them with the same things, Matt. 23. See Trinitarian there. And we may see how much more forcible it is that which they would yet practice, Matt. 23. 24. y<sup>e</sup> By the figure called Meiois, its meant they highly despised God, and were haters of God, and hated, and now rejected of him. Though they had the advantages and reasons to please God above all other people, having his law written and Ordinances of his Worship taught them, and the presence of God. And particularly in their persecutions of the Gospel, and the Apostles though they might think that therein they did God good service, as Joh. 16. 2. t Contrary in their worship, laws and customs. Or rather contrary to all men, in hindering the work of the Gospel, and the conversion of sinners, and despising all other Nations in comparison of themselves, they were apt to be Seditious, and raise tumults every where, and to disdain familiarity and common friendship with the Gen-

to their contrary to all men is exprest particularly in this instance; they forbad the Apostles to preach to the Gentiles, which were the greater number of men. Though they opposed also their preaching to the French Nation. For the French could not endure that the Sabbath should be removed out of the Church; Or into special favour with God as it appears by Christs Sermon in the Synagogue. Luk. 4. 28. And in the Apostles Apology for himself at Jerusalem. Acts 22. 21, 22. And their forbidding them implies, not an Act of Authority for they had it not, but their hindering them what they could, and flouting the people and the Law. Acts 17. 6. To claufe it to rife up to such a measure and degree as will at last bring destruction. Though this was not their intention, yet through the just judgment of God it was the event. They killed the Prophets, but killing Christs and persecuting the Apostles, and hindering the Salvation of many through this, fill up their Guilt. The expression alludes the first of Isaiah, Chap. 53. called the consummation; As here is a perfecting of Holiness, and filling up of Grace, for all of sin. And in accomplishing the Gospel people in more than against the Law. And because they were a constant progress, they are said to fill it up. Mat. 23. 32. Fill up to the measure of your fathers. X First they filled up their sin, and then comes this wrath, or that wrath foretold by Daniel, Chap. 9. 27. And by our Saviour Mat. 23. 38. It was their last deftruction by the Roman. Gods wrath burnt forth upon them several times before, but not to the utmost now. O, to the Jews, who were the former punishments God removed his wrath and restored them again, but this continues to the end. O some by the end, understand only the perfection and consummation of this wrath. And its coming may be read in the Gentile. It hath prepared itself, and is bringing forth the wrath of God against them. As the destruction of the old World, Sodom and Gomorrah, and the figures and forerunners of the last Judgment. And yet this doth not contradict what the Apostle speaks, Rom. 11. and many of the Prophets concerning their calling into the Faith and Church of Christ before the end of the World. All we must understand is, that there is an exception of the remnant of Gods Election that was amongst them.

17 But we, brethren, being taken from you for a short time †, in preface; not in heart; † Or, the time of endeavoured more abundantly to see your face an hour. with great desire y.

7 The Apostle here makes his Apology, for his so soon departing from them, and his continued absence. They were under great afflictions for receiving the Gospel he had preached, and for him that had been so long absent from them. (As appears in the story, Act. 16.) and not properly to return, might discourage their hearts and make them question his Love. Firſt for his leaving them, he tells them it was not voluntary but forced by the persecution of the Jews, He sings Antiphons during the night, the brethren to Beroe 16. 10. and therefore he calls it a taking away, rather than a going away from them. And (as the Greek word imports) it was secondly a thing grievous to him to be obliged to the benefit of father and mother, and his Orphans, are greatly troubled, because he was afflicted as a father bereft of children; so were these Thi-salonians to him having begotten them to Christ by the Gospel. 8 It was but for a short time, for the time of an hour, when he left them, he intends to have them stay long with him, to avoid the present loss: Others think he means by the words his sudden leaving them being so short solem a leave of them. 9 He left them in preference, quasi facit as to outward sight not in heart. There is a leave of love which is never parted with each other in soul when separated in body. 10 He tells them of his endeavours to see their face; and that the more abundantly because he came away so suddenly from them. And lastly, He tells them with great desire, his endeavours herein were acted with great Affection.

18 Wherefore we would have come unto you, (even I Paul &) once and again, but * Sa- * Rom. I. 13.
ran hindered us. & 16. 28.

This he adds further to fascinate them of his real affection to them, that he attempted to come to them once and again, that is often, as Mth. 13. 50. Phil. 1. 16. and that they might be assured it was not a false kind of friendship, or desire to come. Therefore he expreſſeth his own name particularly in a Parentheſis (even I Paul) Or by his ſaying, even I Paul, he affirms them concerning his own deſire to come to them: At leaſt I Paul, though others did not ſo; as the French Bible reads it. And he had come to them had not Satan hindered him. Either by railing up diſſentions againſt the Gofpel as he ſaith in the Philophophers ſtore, where he was conſtrained to fly and ſcape, Act. 14. Or elſe by flirring up wicked men to lye in wait for him in the way: Or by railing Tumults as the Jews did at Birta, whereby he was conſtrained to go as it were to the Sea, Act. 16. 14. Or by fowing diſſentions in other Churches which detained him to end them. Or by what way it was, is ſometimes uncertain. But being thus hindered it made his deſire the more fervent by the ſtoppage of the way, and hereby we ſee Satan Enmity to the Gofpel, eſpecially to Churches new planted, that they might not rake rooting, faith the Apostle, we was gentle among you. As he converted them to Christ, he was their Spiritual Father, but his gentleness was like that of a Mother, nursing her own Children. He considered their weakness in their first believing, and bore with it; he had them, Infirmites, Temptations, Afflictions that were upon them, had compassion over them, and supported them under them, and cherishe them with the sincere Milk of Gospel Truths; and he did all this: not for gain, but out of sincere affection, and willing mind. Some extend the word brendur like hatch, and then cherish their young with the warmth of their own body, and care in feeding them; τρεφουσιν, the word signifies a feeder, and so may have a more general signification, see Job 39: 14.

8 So being affectionately desirous of you y, we were willing to have imparted to you not the gospel of God only, but also * our own souls, because we were dear unto us z.

cause ye were dear unto us. 7. A further account of his behaviour among them. The former part of the text sheweth their great gentleness, this their great love; expresseth their affectionate desire of them; as the Latin phrase, Cupissimè sui imports, love to the person. And it was the desire of their Salvation, first in their believing, and then perseverance and progress in Faith. It was themselves, and their Goods they desired, as Paul elsewhere saith, We loved years, but ye. Secondly, in that they were so desirous of imparting the Gospel to them, that they might be saved, as Paul saith, that I might have two things. 1. That they did this willingly, not out of mere necessity, with a backward mind; the word is voluntariè. we were well-pleased to preach, and with complacency of mind. 2. That they were willing to impart their souls to them; that is, to hazard their lives for them in preaching to them; as Acts 16. The same word signifying the Soul and Life. And he that dies for his friends, gives his life to them. Or else, that they were willing to give up their lives, to save the souls of others, by their labours and hardships, whereunto they endangered their Lives for them, labouring night and day, etc. 9. Others underlaid the words only as an expression of their great affection to them; a man imparts his Soul to the person whom he entirely loves, as Ipsa 38. 10. when a man gives relief to a person in want out of love, and his compassion he imparts his Soul in what he gives. 11. The Apostle is expressed to be so desirous of imparting his life in the Gospel that preached. 12. The Apostle is expressed to be so desirous of imparting the body, Rom 12. 8. and the Gospel is the bread of Life to give relief to the Soul, and used in this sense also, Rom 1. 11. The Apostle may here further allude to Mothers that are Nurses, who impart not only other food, but their milk, which is their blood to cherish their Children. * Or ye have been beloved of him, in that the Apostle more plainly desired to impart his life to them as the ground of their Salvation, and perils in preaching to them; y<sup>e</sup> may reach to all that he had said before concerning their carriage among them, all was from love.

9 For ye remember brethren <sup>a</sup> our labour <sup>b</sup> 34 and travel <sup>c</sup>: For * labouring night and day, you <sup>d</sup>, we preached unto you the gospel of God.

To make good what he had suffered before about their integrity in preaching the Gospel, that it was without Covetousness, and vain Glory, &c. and about their great affection to them therein, he appeals to their own memory. b Laus in what we suffered, attended with care and solicitude of mind; as the word imports: c and travel in what we did attend with weariness, as some have thought. d The words e in his words f in the world g in the world h in the world i in the world j in the world k in the world l in the world m in the world n in the world o in the world p in the world q in the world r in the world s in the world t in the world u in the world v in the world w in the world x in the world y in the world z in the world aa in the world ab in the world ac in the world ad in the world ae in the world af in the world ag in the world ah in the world ai in the world aj in the world ak in the world al in the world am in the world an in the world ao in the world ap in the world aq in the world ar in the world as in the world at in the world au in the world av in the world aw in the world ax in the world ay in the world az in the world ba in the world bb in the world bc in the world bd in the world be in the world bf in the world bg in the world bh in the world bi in the world bj in the world bk in the world bl in the world bm in the world bn in the world bo in the world bp in the world bq in the world br in the world bs in the world bt in the world bu in the world bv in the world bw in the world bx in the world by in the world bz in the world ca in the world cb in the world cc in the world cd in the world ce in the world cf in the world cg in the world ch in the world ci in the world cj in the world ck in the world cl in the world cm in the world cn in the world co in the world cp in the world cq in the world cr in the world cs in the world ct in the world cu in the world cv in the world cw in the world cx in the world cy in the world cz in the world da in the world db in the world dc in the world dd in the world de in the world df in the world dg in the world dh in the world di in the world dj in the world dk in the world dl in the world dm in the world dn in the world do in the world dp in the world dq in the world dr in the world ds in the world dt in the world du in the world dv in the world dw in the world dx in the world dy in the world dz in the world ea in the world eb in the world ec in the world ed in the world ee in the world ef in the world eg in the world eh in the world ei in the world ej in the world ek in the world el in the world em in the world en in the world eo in the world ep in the world eq in the <

10 Ye are witnesses, and God also, * how honestly, justly, and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe e.

The former verses gave account of their carriage in the Ministry, this here of their Christian Conversation, holily, with resped to God fully, with respect to Duties commended to ward men, and unblameably, in denying themselves in lawful liberty to avoid all occasion of blame from any of them. And for the truth of this he appeals to themselves; yea, to God himself. There is the witness of men, and the witness of conscience greater than of men, and the witness of God greatest of all, 1 Joh. 3. 20. He appeals to them witnesses about their external Actions, and to God about the integrity of their hearts: And he doth this not in a way of boasting, but to be an example to them, and as a further reason of the great success of his Ministry. The Conversation of Ministers hath great influence upon the success of their labours.

11 As you know how we exhorted and comforted, and charged every one of you as a father doth his children f.

f Besides to public Ministry he deark more privately with them, as Acts 26. 20. And that in a way of exhortation and comfort. By exhortation to quicken them, and by comfort to support them under troubles, outward and inward. And for the first, Faith in his Children, and the Gifts of the Holy Ghost, Compulsion, and Love, and Authority also; he should be represented as a Mother, ver. 7. And here as a Father whose work and duty is to Exhort, Counsel and Comfort his Children privately at home, to do he as well as publicly. For the second, Faith in his Children, and the Gifts of the Holy Ghost, the Gospel, as he tells the Corinthians also, 1 Cor. 4. 14. As before he represented his gentleness, so here his Fatherly care. Or, at their first Conversion he carried it with gentleness as a Mother, but afterwards used his Fatherly Authority, as in the next application. And he respects also, calling them his Confessors to make witness to what he speaks, that it might leave the greater impression upon them.

12 * That ye would walk worthy of God g, * Phil. 1. 27 who hath called you || unto his kingdom and || Or, calling you

6 In the Greek Text the word changel mentioned in the former verse, begins this verse and upon you, it signifies telling, I have read it, ye outdid, which is as much as belicching, other confessed, which is a severe charge, containing a threatening, as Exod. 19. 21. Charge the people, faith God to Moses in the Margin, contell the people, or with the people. It is changed in the Latin into et inquit, namely in the Name of God, and them, calling in the witness of God to it. g That is truly before the nature of that God who is the true and living God. That you may walk like a people who belong to such a God, and express the virtues of this God in your conversation, 1 Pet. 2. 9. or suitably to the great mercy, and glorious privileges you have received from God, and ye shall be a peculiar people, as Heb. 12. 23. Ye are calling you. Then by Gods Kingdom and glory must understand the future fate of Heaven: Though they were not yet possit of it, yet by the Gospel God had called them to it, as Phil. 3. 14. 1 Pet. 5. 10. Or, Who hath called you, as we read it, then he means their present: For they were belicched, and obeyed the Call of the Gospel, they were brought thereby into the Kingdom of God, and are now calling for the Glory of God, especially the Glory of His Grace. And ye shall be a peculiar people, namely a people of Love, and Wisdom eminently fine forth, Hereupon Christians calling is termed an High Calling, Phil. 3. 14. an heavenly Calling, Heb. 3. 1. And they being called by God out of Sinners Kingdom into this Glorious Kingdom; the Apostles therefore then to walk worthy of God and this Calling, by having a zeal of good works, as Heb. 13. 17. and by walking according to the Laws of this Glorious Kingdom; they were already brought into, and suitably to the Glory of Heaven that they were called to the hope of.

13 For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us ||, ye received it * not as the word of men ||, & but (as it is in truth) || the word of God k, which effectually worketh also in you that believe k.

to the Apostle having given the reasons on his part, and non sic vult the fellow Ministers, why the Gospel had such effect upon them, meis, he next proceeds to shew the reason on their part, for which he Or. 174. gives God thanks. And that is from their manner of receiving it. Though this as well as the former are but subordinate reasons. First, they heard it, some will not do that: and therefore the Apostle here calls it a word of hearing, as Rom. 10. an Aitiam, a Faith comes by hearing. 2. They received it in the word of preaching with affections, as Philipp. 2. the word was preached with all simplicity, as if to Virgins they were his Wife, &c. They trusted it, 1. Pet. 1. as the word of our dear Lord Jesus Christ. They were not at the same time of meis, which we receive sometimes doubting, sometimes disputing it; or believing it only with an humane Faith upon grounds of reason as the dictates of Philosophy, or on the reports of men; and without the impression of the Authority of God upon our minds, or when we receive the word of God because of the eloquence or learning of the Preacher, and the affection we bear to him, or admiration of his person, or of his

Papists, we believe it because the Church believeth it. And we have a Divine Faith, ready Subjection of our souls to it, and with Reverend Attention, as a word that is from Heaven; which the Apollie positively affers in way of parenthesis. As it is the truth, or truly, they believed, so he dispersed the word to them and so they received it. And for this cause he gave forth

God. Having mentioned before the subordinate Reasons of the Efficacy of the Word, he now mentions the principal, which is God himself. That any receive the Word as the Word of God, it is not from the Preachers so much as from God. And it is a great cause of Thanksgivings to God, when Ministers find a people receive the Word with a Divine Faith, which is not done without the assistance of God. Then they are enabled to believe in Christ, for which they ought to give thanks. 1. The powerful working of God is usually expressed by this Word, Eph. 1. 19, Phil. 2. 13. And the working of Satan also, Eph. 2. 1. men possessed with the Devil, men called Ergasmimi. And where the Word is believed and received as the Word of God there it hath this Energy, or worketh effectually, so as to produce Repentance, Self-denial, Mortification, and Comfort, and Peace, etc. The Apostle had mentioned before the signs of Faith, labour of Love, patience of Hope, chap. 1. 3. and all from hence, their receiving the Word as the Word of God, and so retaining it.

14 For m ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God, which in Judea are in Christ Jesus n; for *** ye also have suffered like things of your own countrey-men o, even as they have of the Jews p.

power, yet by the Jews malice they killed him, Mt. 21. 38.
And therefore they are justly punished, and their Country reverted, and so particularly to them of this Nation, who newing in them thus to do. Not that these individual Jews who persecuted Paul, killed the Prophets, but they were of the same Nation, the same blood, and of the same spirit with them, and were the children of them that killed the Prophets, as our Saviour charged them, Mt. 23. 31. The Spirit of Persecution was natural to them, it descended from one generation to another, and was the quality of their hearts, their fellings their false conscience, and the common sense of the Nation, so that it might be expected of the Jews no other people, yet they they did. And it was not only because of the new Doctrine or Worship that the Apostles preached, for they killed their own Prophets before them; but it was their love to their Lulls, hatred of Reproof, enmity to Holiness, &c. that was the cause.
And Christ himself chargeth them with the same things, Mt.
23. 35. of tradition, how which kill the Prophets, &c. And the Jews themselves say, John 8. 44. We know that we have the Father, but you have not the Father, neither do you know God, and were haters of God, and hated, and now reject of him. Though they had the advantages and reasons to please God above all other people, having had the Law and Ordinances of his Worship among them, yet they pleased not God.
And particularly in their persecutions of the Gospel, and the Apostles though they might think, there wherein they did God service, yet they were contrary to the Gospel, and the Law, and Customs. Or rather contrary to all men, in hindering the course of the Gospel appointed for mens Salvation. And despising all other Nations in comparison of themselves, they were apt to be Seditious, and raise tumults every where, and to disdain familiarity and common friendship with the Gen-

* Their covetousy to all men is exprest particularly in this instance; they forbade the Apostles to preach to the Gentiles, which were the greater number of men. Though they opposed also their preaching to the Trifly Nation. For the Trifly could not endure to hear that the Gentils should be received into the Church; or into special favour with God; as ap-in the Apostles Argument for the Gentiles, chap. 17. v. 21.

chap. 17. v. 6. To cause it to rise up to such a measure and degree as will to laufe bring defruction. Though this was not their design, yet enough the full judgement of God it was the event. They killed the Lord, and crucified him, and persecuting the Apostles, and hindering the Salvation of many soules, by this filled up their sin. The expression alludes to what is 7 The Apostle here makes his Apology, for his fo toon departing from them, and his continued absence. They were under great sufferings for receiving the Gospel he had preached, and for him therefore to leave them fo as he did, (as appears by the words, Adi. 16.) and so gently to return, might discourage them, and make them think he was gone forever. Firſt for his leaving them, he tells them it was not voluntary, but forced by the persecution of the Jews, He being left away in the night: by the brethren to Betia. Adi. 18. 10. And therefore he calls it a taking away, rather than a going away as usual. And (as the Greek word imports) it was suddenly and without their consent. And the Jews are here by the word this grievous tumult, which they raise by the Jews, and ministers, and left Orphans, are greatly troubled. And was afflicted as a father bereft of children; so were these Tur- galians to him having begotten them to Christ by the Gospel. 8. It was but for a short time, for the time of an hour; when he left them, but he left them as he left them, only to avoid the present storm, but a storm by their words, and his sudden leaving them before he took solemn leave of them. 9. He left them in profeness, quod facit, as to outward fight not in heart. The proper genius of true Lovers, who are present with each other in soul when separated in body, is that they should be diligent in their endeavours to free their faces; and that the more abundantly they are separated, the more they are drawn together. And lastly, He did this with great grief, his endeavours hereto was acted with great Affection.

This he adds further to satisfy them of his real affection to them, that he attempted to come to them and comfort them, as Num. 13. 20. Phil. 4. 16. and that they might be assured it was not his fellow Tumbler desire only to come, therefore he expreſſeth his own name particularly in a Parentheſis (even I Paul) Or by his ſaying, etiam I Paul, he aſſures them concerning his own deſire to come to them: At leaſt I Paul, though others did not ſo; as the French Bible reads it, and ſo the Septuagint and Latin have it, ſtanding him, a ſingular ſaying raiſing up diſputes againſt the Hebrew and Greek Interpreters there, which he was concerned to flay and anſwer, ſub. 15. Or elſe by ſtirring up wicked men to lye in wait for him in the City: Or by raiſing Tumults as the Hebrew ſay at Berſa, whereby he was conſtrained to go as it were to the Sea, Aſt. 16. 14. Or by ſowing diſſentions in other Churches which deſtroyed him to end them. Or by what way was he ſo concerned to come, being ſo long hindered from it, and made his deſire the more fervent by the oppoſition. And ſurely we fee Satan Enemy to the Goſpel, eſpecially to churches new planted, that they might not take rootings.

either in the heart, or in speech, or in the eye, or lascivious gesture as well as in the very act itself was a sin commensurate with the Gentiles, especially the Grecians, and judged as no sin. And therefore it is particularly mentioned, lest they should believe Gentiles by the countenance of Trojan, lest they should apprehend it not to be an evil, Act. 15. 20. For it is not so evident by the light of nature as many other moral evils, and therefore the Apostle tells the Thessalonians that it is the Will of God they should abstain from it; and that is a sufficient ground either of doing, or not doing: This Will of God is express in the seventh Commandment, which though the Jews well knew, yet these new converts were ignorant of it, and so well understood. And therefore the Apostle in his several Epistles to the Gentile Churches doth dehort them from it, especially the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 6. 9 and that by many arguments. It is a sin which corrupts and effeminates the mind, captivates the heart, consumes the flesh, and wastes men's Estates. So that this will of God that forbids it is a good will, Rom. 12. 2, as all the Commandments of God are good for our good, Deuter. 10. 13.

4 That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honour.

This is added as a means to prevent that sin, by vessel I mean the married Wife, who is called the weaker vessel, 1 Pet. 3. 7, and her husband is to possess her in chastity, as the Greek word may signify here. For as Marriage is honourable to all men, Hib. 13. 4, so to live chastely in a married Estate is honourable also. For by Whoredom man gets dishonour, and his reproach shall not be wiped away, Prov. 6. 33. Others by Vice understand the body, which is the Vessel of the soul, the flesh carries it up and down, and it is in the several functions of the vegetative, sensitive, and intellectual Life. And so I mean the words of David to the Priest, 1 Sam. 21. 5. The vessels of the young men are holy, being kept from men; that is their bodies. Fornication is laid above all other sins to be a sin against the body, 1 Cor. 6. 18 and he that keeps his body chaste possesseth his vessel, keeps it under government, whereas by Fornication we give it to an Harlot, and that which is a member of Christ we make it the member of an Harlot, 1 Cor. 6. 16. And though the words are directed properly to the masculine Sex, the word Hicetian being masculine, yet under that the female is comprehended. And because the practise of this duty requires care, skill, and much watchfulness against temptations, therefore faith the Apostle that every man may possess his vessel in sanctification. To which KNOW how to possess his vessel in sanctification, is added, and I mean, for as to uncleanness dishonour the body, Rom. 1. 26. God keeps them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts to dishonour their own bodies, &c. God hath bestowed much curious workmanship upon the body, it is part of Christ's purchase, and with the Soul is a member of Christ, a Temple of the Holy Ghost in all true Sins, and therefore should be possessed with honour. Or it is to be kept to the honour and glory of God, as 1 Cor. 6. 18, and to be offered up as a sacrifice to him, Rom. 12. 1.

5 Not in the lust of concupiscence, as the Gentiles, which know not God.

Any violence of affection we call passion, whether of love or anger, or desire, because the soul is passive or suffers thereby. The Stoics said passions were not inordinable to a wife man, and they that are Christ's faith the Apostle, heaven crucified the flesh with the passions and lusts, Gal. 5. 24. And lust is usually taken for all inordinate affection either with respect to the object or degree. Though the Greek word doth signify only desire, and is sometimes taken in a good sense, 1 Pet. 1. 22. For there are good lustings as well as evil; as Gal. 5. 17. The spirit lusteth against the flesh, but here the word is taken in a bad sense, for the lust of uncleanness, which the Apostle here calls the lust of Concupiscence. The Philosophers distinguish of the affections or passions of the Soul, some are irascible, some concupiscible. The former are conversant about evil, to reject it, or fly from it; the latter about good either real or imaginary to pursue it, or embrace it. And the lusts of concupiscence are either of the Mind or of the Flesh, Eph. 2. 3, here we understand the latter; that fleshly concupiscence that is conversant about Women, which if by Vice in the former verse is understood man's lawful Wife, then he forbids all uncleanness even towards her; if the body, then he forbids all unlawful use of the body in any kind or towards any person whatsoever. And to avoid Fornication he forbids lust that leads to it. q Which the Apostle adds as an argument to them, though ye are Gentiles by Nation as well as others, yet not in state, such as know not God. There is a natural knowledge of God which the Apostle speaks of, Rom. 1. 21, which the Gentiles had. And a supernatural which is by the Scriptures to know the mind, will, nature, decrees, and counsels of God as they are revealed, and the knowledge of God in Christ, this is meant in the Text, and this the Gentiles had not, and therefore no wonder though they followed the lust of concupiscence, they wanted the rule of God's word to direct them, and that effectual knowledge of God, and presence of his Grace that would have restrained them from such lust. But these Thessalonians now since their conversion by the Gospel they were come to this knowledge of God which they had not before, and therefore were not to live as before they did. Knowledge ought to influence our hearts and lives, and to sin against knowledge is the greater aggravation of sin, and will make men more inexcusable. Yet where knowledge is wanting, what wickedness will not men practise. The Gentiles were alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that was in them, Eph. 4. 18. The Jews crucified Christ and Saul persecuted the Disciples through ignorance, 1 Tim. 1. 13. Much more are those Christians to be condemned, who having more knowledge than the Gentiles, yet practise worse than they; as the Apostle upbraids the Jews upon this account, Rom. 2. 27.

6 That no man go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter, because the Lord is the avenger of all such: as we also have forewarned you and testified.

This I mean to be another part of Sanctification mentioned before, 1 Cor. 7. 23. Taking the word Sanctification in a more general sense. And as before he spoke of chastity, so here of commutative justice in commerce and traffic, and he saith because Thessalonica was a City of great Trade and Merchandise, and it is true that Sanctification doth comprehend this righteousness in it. And will restrain men from that which is opposite to it, which as the Apostle speaks, is going beyond and defrauding his brother. To go beyonds that which we call overreaching; when in buying or selling we keep not a full measure, when we observe not due proportion between the price and the commodity, considering it either in its natural value, or in such circumstances as make it more or less valuable; Or to take advantage of another's ignorance or necessities, to take unreasonable profit. Or to break covenant with another, answering to the Hebrew word Gashur used in this sense, Deut. 17. 2, the original word signifies to transgress, or go above the due bounds. And to defraud is when out of a covetous mind we exact upon another beyond what is just. Some refer the word to defraud by injustice by force, and the latter by fraud, 2 Cor. 1. 2, and the evil is the greater because due to a brother. There is another by a common relation, and so all men that partake of humane nature are brethren, or by special relation, which is either natural, civil or spiritual. We may understand that in all these senses, especially in the last, that those that are brethren in Christ, and in the Faith, should not defraud one another. And when the Apostle adds, in any matter, the word is not being in the Greek, we may better read it in doing, or doing, the word is general, and is to be restrained by the subject-matter spoken of. There is another sense of the words agreeable to the former verses, and the verse that follows, and so I mean the Apostle as fill speaking of chastity, and so here he forbids the buying and selling that transgressing the bounds of Marriage whereby men go beyond or defraud their brother, usurping the eye of another man's wife, whom he hath no right to. And then in any matter, we must read in that matter which he had been speaking of before, or 'tis a model expression of the act of Adultery. The Hebrew Bo is used in the old Testament for carnal copulation, and thence the Greek Bais and Epheph here used, and the word Bo signifies denotes excellency in it, Eph. 4. 19. And the word Bo is added, because the Lord is the avenger of all such vengeance is mine, will repay, faith the Lord, Deut. 32. 35. Rom. 12. 19, whether we understand it of fraud, or overreaching in dealings, when man cannot right and relieve himself; the righteous God will avenge the unrighteousness of men; or of the fraud of the Marriage Bed, which is done in secret, and man cannot avenge himself, Hib. 13. 4. And this the Apostle saith, he had forewarned them of, and testified. Though the light of nature told the Heathen that God was an avenger of wickedness, Acts 24. 4, and the Heathen could say, Epheph Bo Thessalon Epheph God hath a revengeful eye, yet the Apostle had in his preaching assured it. He had told them of Christ's coming, to judge the World, which he would execute vengeance, 1 Thess. 1. 10, and this they were before ignorant of, and though God sometimes takes vengeance in this World, yet he seems to refer to this last vengeance because he speaks of it as that which he had forewarned them of; and testified in his ministry, and whereof they had not to clear a Testimony in natural conscience.

7 For God hath not called us to uncleanness, as unto holiness.

These two verses are added as further arguments, either to persuade to this chastity he had spoken of, called Chastity, or to caution, 1 Cor. 7. 2. The first is taken from their Christian Calling, which is not to uncleanness, but to chastity, called holiness, when they were Gentiles in state they lived in the lust of uncleanness, but they were now called by the power of the Gospel, and brought to such a profession that did forbid, and condemn it. And the Author of their Call is God himself, though the Apostles and other Ministers were the instruments.

8 He therefore that is defiled, hath defiled himself, not man, but God, who hath also given unto us his holy Spirit.

Whereas he teacheth this second Argument, 1 Cor. 7. 2, that if this chastity be defiled or rejected, as we may read the Text, it is not man, but God that is defiled. To despise a Minister in a commandment he delivers from God, so to despise God himself, Luk. 10. 16; and the Apostle doth here intimate, not to obey the Commandment of God, is a defiling God. Or that the Apostle was defiled by some because of the outward means of his person, or questioning his Authority. 2 This he adds as a third Argument, to the effect, what he had preached to them, was not from himself, but from the Holy Spirit: Or if by it he means that Thessalonians also, as some Copies read it, he hath given you, &c. then he argues from the gift of the Holy Spirit they had received against living in the lust of uncleanness. This would be very disagreeable not only to their Holy Calling, but the Holy Spirit God had given them. Or else these Arguments of the Apostle are so persuasive to holiness, taking Sanctification and holiness in a larger sense, and uncleanness, for all sin in general standing opposite thereto. Sin is oft spoken of in Scripture under the notion of filth, defilement, pollution, &c. and so was typed forth under the Law, and to be cleansed from sin is a cleansing man from filthiness, 2 Cor. 7. 1. So that to live in sin, as the Apostle argues, is to live in uncleanness, to contradict our Holy Calling, to defile God, and to walk contrary to the nature and dictates of his Holy Spirit.

9 But as touching brotherly love ye need not that I write unto you, for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another.

The Apostle proceeds from Chastity and Justice to speak of brotherly Love, which is Love upon a Spiritual ground: To love the Saints as such with respect to God as a common Father, and to all his Children are brethren, 1 Thess. 2. 8, 9. Hib. 13. 1, and he perverted the practice of it by a loving and winning infirmity; sure you are forward enough of your selves. As he saith the same apostle, Acts 25. 27, 28. 1 Cor. 13. 1, whereby the Apostle tacitly commends them, and would engage them to answer the commendation, and good opinion he had of them. What need I write to reach you that which you have already been taught of God. The Saints have this promise, Isa. 53. 3, Jer. 31. 34, fulfilled, 1 Joh. 2. 26, and this Divine Teaching is always efficacious, Rom. 10. 17, and that all teaching of men is to be laid aside as false. Gal. 3. 2, would hence infer, but that the Apostle thought he had less need to reach that which God himself had so effectually taught them. Hereby we perceive that God's teaching doth not only enlighten the mind, but reacheth the affections, and especially inclines the heart to love, for God is love; and though they were taught other things of God besides this love, yet he mentions only this as the most proper work of the Spirit of God by his gospel. And though common love of man to man may be found in meer Nature.

10 And indeed you do it a towards all the brethren which are in all Macedonia &c; But we beseech you, brethren, that ye encrease more and more.

As an evidence of the truth of their love for which he commended them, and that they were taught it of God: He gives a practical instance of it in this verse, elsethe Apostle might have been thought to flatter, or to command a love that was without Fruit: And therefore he saith not, ye profess it, but ye do it, 1 Cor. 8. 11, perform the doing of it. Which was a large Province, wherein were placed many Churches. Their love was not guided by Interests, Opinions, Civil Relations, or Self-interests, but it reached to all that were brethren, and that in some real effect of it, in some work of Charity, or Liberty, or otherwise not here mentioned, but we read of it 2 Cor. 8. 1, 2. But however their love was not yet perfect, and therefore he beseecheth them to abound more, or in other means as to the extent of it, not to confine it only to Macedonia, or as to the degree of it, to zeal men in it, as the Greek word may be rendered: And the same word the Apostle useth, and upon the same account 2 Cor. 8. 7, neither Love, or any other Grace is made perfect at once, even those that are taught of God, are taught by degrees. And Love being a grace so suitable to the Gospel, and the person suffering least that he therefore especially exhorts to a progress in it.

11 And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you.

He exhorts to quietness, and yet to be diligent; and probably he might see this needful, either that he himself had observed among them, or that he heard of others. And it appears by what he writes in his Second Epistle, chap. 3. 10, 11, to be quiet is to be of a peaceable temper and carriage, as the Greek word Hicetian importeth both. And stands contrary to strife, contention, division either upon a civil or religious account. And to study to be quiet, because the thing may be difficult especially in some circumstances of times, places, and persons. And the Greek word Pilantim implies an ambitious study. Quietness we should pursue with an holy ambition, as that which is honourable to our selves, and our profession, Prov. 20. 3. The same word is used 2 Cor. 5. 9, where it is rendered my labour, &c. Study is properly the exercise of the mind, yet it here comprehends any kind of labour. This agrees with what the Apostle elsewhere exhorteth to, Hib. 12. 14. 1 Pet. 3. 12. The text commands to be quiet, and that in our own business, and this he prescribeth as a good way for quietness. Contentions often arising from meddling in the affairs of other men which concern us not; for which he rebukes some in this Church, 2 Thess. 3. 11. But yet only to seek our own things is a great fault, and lamented by the Apostle, 1 Pet. 2. 21, we are to concern our selves in the affairs of others when called to it, and not otherwise; and then we may reckon them among our own things. A Christian's Calling is either general or particular, and what falls not within the compass of one or other, is to be accounted not our own business. And our doing and suffering ought to be only within the Sphere of our Calling; for to suffer otherwise, is to suffer as brute bodies, and the Apostle cautions against it, 1 Pet. 4. 15, as a Bishop intruding himself into another's Office; to which the word there alludes. This commendeth idleness, and living out of a Calling, we are not only to keep within our own Sphere, but to stretch forth our hands to work. The same precept he gives to the Ephephians, chap. 4. 28, not to sleep, but to work with their hands, that they may not cry out their own bread, 2 Thess. 3. 12, but have to give to him that lacketh; nor that there is no other work, but that of the hands. The Ministers of the Gospel are excused from that, 1 Cor. 9. 6, but not from work; there is the work of the Head, and the Tongue, and the Foot, and the Lungs as well as of the hands; but either under one species he comprehends all, or it may be he writes his speech to the condition of the people to whom he writes, who generally had such occupations wherein they were taught with the hands, 1 Thess. 2. 9, being a great place of Trade. And the Apostle speaks of the Churches of Macedonia as a poor sort of people, 2 Cor. 8. 2, and liberal beyond their power; though some among them might be tempted to idleness by the Charity of others to them, which as some conceive, was the occasion of the Apostles thus writing. But if men have Estates, and upon that account need not work, yet none is to be idle: Men's parts, or other Talents are to be employed, and account thereof is to be given, Matth. 25. 19. And the unprofitable Servant is cast into outer darkness, 1 Cor. 30, some way or other every man is to work, and may work for profit to himself and others, unless under some invincible impediment. He means when he was with them. He might probably observe some occasion for this Commandment: Industry is of good report with all; and by meddling in others affairs, and unquiet carriage and idleness, they might dishonour their Christian profession among the Heathen, which might be the chief reason of this Commandment; and the Apostle doth not act herein as a civil Magistrate, commanding about civil affairs for the public welfare, but as a Minister of Christ with respect to a spiritual end, as appears by what follows.

12 That ye may walk honestly as towards the Lord, and that ye may have lack of nothing.

He enforces his Commands by a twofold reason. The former is as towards the Lord, the other is as towards men. First, That ye may walk honestly or decently, as the word is rendered, 1 Cor. 12. 40. That is, honests, Inoffensive, they are described, 1 Cor. 12. 40, as those that were received into the Church of Christ, are said to be inoffensive. The Apostle would have them honour the Gospel before the Heathen in such moral actions that he did approve of, and were able to judge of, not understanding the higher mysteries of Faith and Grace, which he calls walking in wisdom towards them that are without, Col. 4. 5. The other reason is as towards men, That ye may have lack of nothing, or, as towards men. Have no need to beg of any man, it might offend, and be a stumbling block to the Gentiles to see Christians to beg of any, and especially of themselves, for their necessary relief; or, as towards men, that you may by your own labour be able to furnish, and not depend upon others, and so not be a burden to Friends, or a scandal to Strangers. For every man to subsist by his own labour, was the primitive Law to Adam, Gen. 3. 19, commanded often by Solomon in his Proverbs, and enjoined by the Apostle to believing Christians; 1 Thess. 3. 10.

13 But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren &c, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others that have no hope.

The Apostle now proceeds to a new discourse, about moderating of their sorrow for the dead, not for all, but the dead in Christ. He had either observed their sorrow in this kind excessive, while with them, or else God's timing, or some other, he had heard of it. Wherein observe in general, he doth not condemn their sorrow but the excess of it. Grace destroys not Nature, but regulates it; nor Reason, but refines it; nor takes away the Affections, but moderates them; doth not make us Stoicks, or Stocks. Affections are good when let upon right objects, and kept within due bounds, and this Christians doth reach, and Grace doth effect. And to mourn for the dead, especially the dead in the Lord, is a duty that both Nature and Grace teach, and God requireth; and the contrary is reproved by God himself, Jer. 57. 1, and to die unlamented is reckoned as a Curse, Jer. 22. 18, 19. Its only then moderate sorrow the Apostle here means. And to prevent it, or remove it, gives many instructions, and Arguments, and that in our own business, and this he prescribeth Resurrection, and Christ's personal coming again, which by the light of Nature, while Gentiles, they knew nothing of, or were very uncertain in. And the Apostle, because of his flout fly among them, had not had opportunity to instruct them about these things, and therefore doth it here diffidly and fully, as he doth the Corinthians; Cor. 15. 12. hearing there were some among them, even of the Church it self, that said there was no Resurrection. It is plain that he said this to the hands to believe it, and the most learned of the Heathen doubted of it and some exploded and scold'd at it as we find Acts 17. 18 even such as verbe the immortality of the Soul. And hereupon in this Verse the Apostle doth alert two things in general to relieve them against immediate Sorrows. 1. He calls the death of the Saints a sleep. 1st. 2. Luc. 8. 52. Job. 11. 11. 1. Cor. 15. 20. 51. where he referring to the dead already dead, or asleep, and that shall afterwards die, and why should they then exultively mourn. After sleep, we know there is awaking, and by sleep Nature is revived; and so it shall be with the saints in death. Hereupon the grave is called a bed, Job. 57. 2. and the burying place Cantabrian, a place of sleep. 1. 57. 2. There is hope in their death, as Prov. 14. 32. There is hope concerning their happy resurrection after death, and hope of their Resurrection, and seeing them, as that which is not an Eternal Farewell. This the Apostle here intends, and they will be then seen in a more excellent state, and probably so seen then, as that their Christian Friends may know them; else the Apostles Argument would not have to much strength, and so well suit the present case. The Heathen and Infidels buried their dead, without any hope, as they are said to be without hope, Eph. 2. 12. and not sure exultive in their sorrows, which they express'd by cutting their flesh, making themselves bald, doleful Songs, and mourning ejaculations, exspect sometimes upon instruments. And which the Jews had learned from them, as appears by Gods often reproving it, and Christ's putting out the Minstrels, Mat. 9. 13. and as that which he forbade them, Luk. 18. 28. Dent. 14. 21. And the Apostle may refer to this in 1. Thess. 5. 4. as that which is not so necessary to Nature, but discommensurable to a Christians Faith, Hope, and Profession. We are hereby the betrayers of our Faith and Hope, and the things we preach will seem false and feigned. Cypri. de mortalitate. And though man is said to die without hope as to a return to his former state of life, Job 14. 7, 8, 9, 10. yet not with respect to the life after the Resurrection, in which that die in Jesus.

14. For * if we believe that Jesus dyed, and role again * n, even so * them also which sleep in Jesus. * If we bring with him p.
As in the former Verse the Apostle made use of the hope of the Resurrection as an Argument against immediate sorrow, so here he proves the Resurrection by Christ's rising again, &c. He supposeth they did believe that Christ died, and role again; it was that which he had taught them, and which they had received, as being the two first and fundamental points of the Christian Faith without which they could not have been a Church of Christ. Quest. But how doth Christ's Resurrection prove the Resurrection of the Saints? He being the Eternal Son of God might have a privilege above all? Answ. This first shews the thing is possible; God hath already done it in Christ. 2. Christ role for our justification, Rom. 4. 25. and in justification is pardon of which brought in Death, and which alone by its guilt can keep under the dominion of Death. 3. Christ role not as a private person, but as the head of the body, his Church, Eph. 1. 4. 20. 6. and so looked the bands of Death and conquered the grave for all his People. 4. As the first fruits, 1. Cor. 15. 20. God has a pledge and assurance of the whole Harvest to follow. 5. God hath predestinated the Elect whom he foreknew, to be conformed to the image of his Son, Rom. 8. 29. 6. He is not conformed without them, 1. Thess. 5. 10. Lately, They sleep in Jesus, as the Text speaks; not only live but die in him, Rev. 14. 13. the Union remains with Christ even in death. 7. By which words also the Apostle distinguishes believers from all others; its only they shall have the privilege of this blessed Resurrection who sleep in Jesus. And performance in Christ's resurrection is here also intimated. 8. And though their Resurrection is not express'd in the Text, yet it is implied in this saying. By God is meant, as some understand here, the Son of God, who is to come from heaven, chap. 1. 10. And who will bring the spirits of just men made perfect in heaven with him, and unite them to their bodies, which cannot be done without their Resurrection. Whereby the Apostle gives an Argument against exultive sorrow for the Saints departed, they shall return from heaven again with Christ at his coming. Others understand it of God the Father, who will raise the dead, and then bring them to his Son, and bring them with him to heaven. Those that read the Text, They shall sleep or die for Jesus, and so confine it only to Martyrs, refrain it to too narrow a fence.

15. For this we say unto you in the word of the Lord q, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep r.
q The Apostle here sets down particularly the manner of the Lords coming, the method and order how all the Saints shall then meet with him, and with one another, which we find not so diffidly in any other Scripture; and whereby he further prosecutes the Argument he is upon. q That they might not think that what he speaks was either by some Tradition from others, or an invention of his own; and that is ground enough for faith, to which our Judgment and Reason ought to be captivated. r That which he faith here about the Resurrection, Christ's coming, the Ministry of Angels, the found of a Trumpet, the Voice of Christ at that day, we have seen in the Evangelists; but the Method and Order of all the Saints rising together, and meeting the Lord in the Air, we find not in any express words before-written, the Apostle speaks it here by extraordinary Revelation, which is the word of the Lord though not then written. And this order is express, 1. Negatively. The Saints then live upon earth shall not be with Christ sooner than those that were fallen asleep, and be caught up into the Air while the others are in the grave, and be caught up as if he should be one of that number; sure he could not think the coming of Christ should be in the Age wherein he lived, he speaks otherwise, 2. Thess. 2. 2. Or that his life should be prolonged to that day. For the time of his departure, he faith, was at hand, 2. Thess. 4. 6. But he looks upon the whole body of Saints together as himself as one of that number, and so speaks, we which live and remain, &c. As in 1. Cor. 15. 51. We shall not all die, but we shall all be changed. 2. Affirmatively. The dead in Christ shall rise first, before they that are alive shall be caught up into the Air. They shall fly all the rest be risen: As 1. Cor. 15. 51. We shall not all die, but be changed and in a moment which the Apostle calls clothing with it, 1. Cor. 5. 2. and which he rather describes, than to be unclothed, 1. Cor. 4. 1. and then they that are dead in Christ shall rise, and be united to them in one visible body.

16. For * the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout s, with the voice of the arch-angel t, and with the trumpet of God u: and the dead in Christ shall rise first v.
The means which effect this. The word shout in the Greek signifies a command, or word of command; alluding to Mariners, or Soldiers unmoved to be ready with their assistance, when called upon. And may refer to the Angels, whom Christ now summons to attend and assist in that day, and the Evangelists speaks of the voice of Christ, Job. 5. 28. which is there said to raise the dead. Whether there be an Oral Word and voice, from the mouth of Christ, or only an expression of his Divine Power, whereby he shall awaken them that sleep out of their grave, is a Question I shall not be curious about. r Christ is said to come with all the Holy Angels Mat. 25. 31. and to send his Angels with a great found of a Trumpet, Mat. 24. 31. But here is mentioned only the arch-angel, and his voice, instead of all the rest, they all coming under his conduct. Though there be not such distinct Orders of Angels as the Schoolmen affirm, yet there is order among them, as Arch-angel implies. And whether he will put forth an audible voice or not at that day; or whether this Arch-angel be not the same with Christ himself, who is the head of all Principality and Power, Col. 2. 10. I leave it as doubtful; but however it is certain the Angels shall be ministering to Christ at that day, especially in the Resurrection of the Elect, Mat. 24. 31. and delivering the Righteous from the Wicked, Mat. 13. 41. As 1. Cor. 15. 52. And whether this is to be taken literally, and distinct from the throne and voice before mentioned, or only used to shew forth the divine power of God that shall gather all the Elect together out of their Graves, as the Trumpet in War gather the scattered Army; or as the silver Trumpets under the Law, assembled the congregation of Israel, I shall not be positive. And this is the account of the Saints that are raised.

17. Then we which are alive, and remain, shall be caught up together with them * in the clouds, s, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord w.
Rev. 14:14.
1. Thess. 4:17.
1. Cor. 15:51.
w Christ will have a Church to the end of the World, and some will be found alive at his coming, and will be caught up, or snatched up, to denote its suddenness, it may be the arms of Angels, or by some immediate attractive power of Christ; and it will be together with them that are now raised from the dead; they shall all ascend in one great body, and will be in the clouds. As Christ himself ascended in a cloud, Act. 1. 9. and so will return again, Mat. 24. 30. he making the clouds his chariot, Psalm 104. 3. To meet the Lord in the air. 1. To congratulate his coming. Their first meeting shall also attend him for that end. 2. To receive their final discharge. 3. To be visibly joyed to their Head. 4. To be assistants with him in judging of the World, and to reign with him upon Earth. And whether the last judgment will be upon the Earth, or in the Air, I shall not determine. But after this Christ and his Saints shall never part. Their first meeting shall be in the Air, and their continuance will be with him while he is in this lower world, and after that they shall ascend with him into heaven, and so be for ever with him. Angels imagined that the Saints that are found alive shall in their ravine days, and then immediately revive, because it is expressed in 1. Thess. 5. 10. but the Apostle faith expressly, we shall not all die, but we shall all be changed, 1. Cor. 15. 51.

18. Wherefore, comfort + one another with these words x. x The Apostle makes application of all this Discourse to the end he designed, which was to comfort them under their sorrows for departed Christian Friends. And he faith not, ye be comforted, but comfort one another: To put them upon the great Duty of Christian Sympathy, though this is a duty we owe to all, yet especially to the Saints, and more especially of the same particular Congregation. And Funeral Offices are usually of this afflative, and therefore need to be allay'd with words of comfort, and not with any words but, shall the Apostle with these words, or these things, as the Greek the things or words that he had before said before them. The Philosophers used many Arguments against the fears of Death, and for comfort under funeral sorrows, but Christians should fetch their comforts from the Scriptures. These are the best, most solid, most durable, and universal, and therefore the Apostle commends them to them, believing Readers, Rom. 15. as here to these Thessalonians particularly. These considerations that whole which sleep in Jesus shall rise again, and that we shall meet them again, and we and they shall be for ever with the Lord together is a great relief against the sorrows of their departure hence. And the comforts arising hence may serve to support under other sorrows as well as these, which the Apostle also might intend in the words.

19. But of the times and the seasons, brethren, y, ye have no need that I | write unto you y.
y But when shall these things be might some say, as the Disciples asked Christ, Matth. 24. 33. 35. Act. 1. 6. He tells them, His not for you to know times and seasons: Not that they knew them in particular already, but there was no need they should know them. It may be some among them were too curious to enquire. He doth not say they could not be known as being put into Gods own power, as Act. 1. 7. but ye have no need that I write of them. The Apostle as in his preaching, so in his writing had respect to what was most needful, and profitable for the people; as when the Disciples ask, are there few that shall be saved, Christ answered them in that which was most needful to them, Luk. 13. 24. and so doth the Apostle here instead of acquainting them with the times and seasons, puts them upon watchfulness, that they might not be surprised, as in the following verses: and to improve the knowledge they had already, which was this, that Christs coming would be sudden.

20. For your selves know | perfectly that * the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night z.
z By times and seasons then before-mentioned, he meant the time of the Lords coming, or he applies what he spoke in general to this particular, which he here calls the day of the Lord. And though they knew not the particular time, yet they did know this, it would be sudden and unexpected, coming as a thief in the night, Rev. 16. 15. the comparison is to be refrained only to the suddenness of it; for his coming will be welcome, and so not as a Thief to all that believe: And it is called the day of the Lord here and elsewhere, 1. Cor. 2. 13. Phil. 1. 6. 10. And that day, 2. Tim. 1. 18. not to be taken for a natural day, but a certain period of time. Any eminent manifestation of God either in works of Mercy or Judgment are called his day in Scripture, Isa. 2. 12. Jer. 46. 10. And so because Christ will be more eminently manifested now than ever before, therefore his coming is called his day, and that it would be sudden, they did not only know, but know perfectly or accurately, Eph. 5. 15. circumpectly: They could be only conjectures about the particular time: The influence hereof was powerful upon their hearts, and so they may be said to know it perfectly. In Religion knowledge is not perfect which is not operative.

21. For when they shall say, Peace and safety a, then sudden b destruction cometh upon them, as travel upon a woman with child c, and they shall not escape d.
a By these words the Apostle proves that the day of the Lord will come unexpected, by the security that will be then found in the World. They say it in their hearts and practice, if not in their Tongues. And he useth two words the better to express the greatness of their security, peace and safety, danger of sliding, as the words import: And as the effect of Christs coming will be destruction to such, which will be Salvation to others, 2. Thess. 1. 10. so through their security it will be sudden destruction, c which he describes under the simile of Travel upon a Woman with Child, which doth for the most part come of a sudden, and is the most exquisite pains in Nature, and is often made use of in Scripture to set forth extremity of misery, *Isa. 13. 8. Jer. 13. 21. 2. And these pains come upon her unavoidably, so faith the Apostle of their mens destruction, and they shall not escape, or in no wise escape, except in the Greek by two Negatives, which do strongly affirm.*

22. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness e, that that day should overtake you as a thief. f.
f Let these believing Thessalonians be comforted in their minds by this Discourse, he adds this by way of comfort to them, that they shall not be surprised as others, though they did not know the particular time of Christs coming, yet it would not find them unprepared for it as the World would be, and the Reason he gives is, because they are not in darkness: Darkness is taken Metaphorically, and so in Scripture is taken either for Sin, Ignorance, or Mifery. The two former are here especially intended. These Thessalonians were brought into the light of the Gospel: They had the knowledge of Christs, and the way of Salvation by him, particularly they knew of his coming; and the manner and ends of his coming, which the Infidel World did not; and though Christs coming would be to others as a Thief in the night, yet not to them.

23. Ye are * all the children of light, and the children of the day g, ye are not of the night, nor of darkness h.
g And because the night is the time of darkness, and the day of light, he therefore here describes their present state positively, ye are all the children of the light, and the children of the day, as the light is from darkness, and day from night, not as if there was no ignorance remaining in them, for the best men have but through a glass darkly, 1. Cor. 13. 12. but the Apostle compares them with their former estate when they were Gentiles, and with the Jews, under the Law, and with respect to their state in Christ, they were not Children of the night, or of the state of the night, but children of the Light, and of the Day.

24. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others i: but * let us watch j, and be sober k.
i The Apostle draws this inference from the foregoing verses in a twofold Duty, 1. Negative, sleep is not proper for the children of the day, but of the night: And as the night and darkness are to be taken metaphorically, so the sleep, And though it hath several acceptations in Scripture, yet it is here taken for security. As the natural sleep binds up the senses, and men are not aware of approaching danger, so doth the sleep of the Soul. It darkens the mind, furnishes the spiritual fence, that men prepare not for the coming of Christ, nor to avoid the destruction that will then come suddenly upon them, and Rom. 13. 11, 12. is a place parallel to this. It is high time to awake out of sleep, Eccl. 5. 6. The night is far spent, the day is at hand, Eccl. 5. 7. 2. Positive, Watching stands contrary to sleep, the senses are then in exercise, which were bound up by sleep, when the Soul is watching, the faculties are in a spiritual exercise to apprehend both our Interest and our Duty, to take hold of that which is good, and to avoid the evil, the evil of sin, and the evil of suffering. But watching here in the Text especially refers to the coming of Christ, to prepare for it, that we may not be surprised as others will, and to be in a readiness to be found of him in peace, without pain and blame, 1. Pet. 3. 14. k Sobriety is reckoned to be one branch of temperance, and one of the Fruits of the Spirit, Gal. 5. 22. and one link of the chain of Grace, 2. Pit. 1. 6. It hath its name in the Greek signifying either foundness of mind, or continency of mind; a kind of keep or hold within its due bounds. It is usually taken for moderation in meats and drinks, fasting, being temperate, but it extends to all earthly things, as Honour, Riches, Pleasures, to have our affections to them, our cares about them, our endeavours after them kept within due bounds; and all this upon the account of Christs coming as a necessary preparation for it, 1. Cor. 7. 29. 30. 31. 1. Pet. 4. 7. Sobriety and watching are here join'd together, and so 1. Thess. 5. 8. For as intemperance in meats and drinks makes the soul dull and heavy, so without temperance and sobriety the soul will be disabled to watch.

25. For * they that sleep, sleep in the night, and they that be drunken, are drunken in the night l.
l The Apostle inforces the former duties of watchfulness and 34- sobriety, by the consideration of the duties of the night. They that sleep choose the night to sleep in, and they that would be drunk choose the night for it. Drunkenness being so shameful a vice, especially in the Apostles time, that men were ashamed to be seen drunk in the day time, vid. Acts 2. 15. Eph. 5. 18, 19. And in ancient times they had their Feasts in the night: Yet therefore that are not in the night of your former ignorance ought neither to be in the sleep of security, nor in the fire of Drunkenness, whereby may be meant all any kind of intemperance, for a man may be drunk, and not with wine, Isa. 29. 9. drunk with Pleasure, with Cares, with sensual Love, and Delices, with Passion, and by Spiritual Judgments upon the Souls, Isa. 29. 10.

26. But let us, who are of the day, be sober m, put-good, the commoner the better, but the contrary of evil, Christians stand in a special relation to one another, but in a common relation to all, and every Relation ought to be filled up with good. As love is a common debt to all men, to the fruit of it which is doing good. Our doing good should not be confined among Christians only of one way, opinion, or congregation, nor to men only under some limiting circumstances, but it should reach all men as we have ability, opportunity, and call; i.e. Enemies themselves, as our Saviour requires Math. 5. 44. This is to love God, and may commend Religion to all men, and is not to be looked upon as commanded by way of counsel as the Papists say, but commanded by precept. And it is not enough not to do evil, but we must do good; not to save a man's life when we have power to do it, is to kill him, as Christ argues Mark 3. 4. from not to love a mans estate, when we may, is stare 3. 14. from.

16 Rejoyce evermore. 1. Here the Apostle adds most Christian duties, briefly expressed, and fed close one to another, and they seem to have a mutual connexion, but not so relative to others as those before mentioned, but personal to themselves. He begins with the duty of Rejoycing, joy is an affection of the Soul springing from the hope or possession of some suitable good. And it is either natural, which is common to men with beasts, arising from that good that is common to them with several natures. Or spiritual, which is joy wrought by the Spirit, and exercised upon spiritual objects. And this the Apostle here means, and is called rejoycing in the Lord, Phil. 4. 4. and the joy of the Holy Ghost, Rom. 14. 17. arising either from what spiritual good we already possess, or hope to possess, exhibita & promissa, Bernard. which is there upon called a rejoycing in hope, 1 Cor. 13. 12. The Apostle speaks of the duty indefinitely, and 12. 12. The Apostle speaks of the duty indefinitely, and sometimes calls to mourning, yet its no where said mourn evermore, because rejoycing ought to be in a more constant practice, and all spiritual mourning tends to it, and will end in it; and he commands it as feasible to these Thessalonians to support them under their present afflictions. The grounds of a Christians Joy always abide, and he is not only to retain it in the habit, but to mix it with all his sorrows, and sufferings, as 1 Pt. 1. 6. 7. It greatly rejoys though for a season in distress. Whereas carnal mirth is mixt with sadness, Prov. 14. 13. So that a Christian ought to rejoyce in every condition, not only in prosperity but adversity, and especially when called to suffer for Righteousness sake, as Math. 5. 12. 1 Pt. 4. 13. It is not only allowed but commanded. This joy is one great part of Gods Kingdom even in this World, Rom. 14. 17. much more in the World to come. And therefore the Apostle speaks of rejoycing evermore, whereas mourning is but for a time, and ends to the Saints in this life.

17 Pray wth without ceasing. n. This is a means to maintain our rejoycing, and therefore next mentioned. Prayer is a making known our requests to God, Phil. 4. 6. And it is either mental in the heart only, as Hansard says, or vocal, expressed with the voice; or as some add, vial; so good works have a voice to bring down blessings, as mens fins cry for vengeance. * Not as the Zacchaeus and Misaelians, of old, who heathen thought no other duties were required, but always Praying; but by the word in the Text, is either meant a praying without fainting, as in the parable, Luk. 18. 1. and which the Apostle calls a perseverance in prayer, *Eph. 6. 18. Col. 4. 2. perseverantia, or praying with strength, as the greek word there imports, and is not to faint, 1o Rom. 12. 12. Or a praying in every thing, as 1 Cor. 4. 6. In every thing let your requests be made known, &c. Or, in every case, as Eph. 6. 18. to take hold of the fetters of prayer. Or, in all seasons and times whether good or bad, yet still to pray. And all this is meant by the word in the Text which is also used Rom. 1. 9. 1 Thess. 1. 3. and 2. 19. and implies in general no more but a constant course of prayer, 1o Col. 4. 2. to watch upon prayer as that the course of it be not interrupted by any diversions. As also to preserve an heart disposed to pray at all times; and to mingle ejaculatory prayers with the several actions of our lives, our wants are continual and God will be acknowledged in all our supplies, and therefore we ought to pray continually.*

* Eph. 5. 20. 18 * In every thing give thanks * : for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you. 9. When we have obtained mercy by Christ, then we are to give thanks, and what ever we may pray for, that we ought to give thanks for. And so by that understand and limit the general expression in the Text. We are not to give thanks when we fall into sin, for that we ought not to pray for. Yet if we have the pardon of it, or get any good by it, we should then give thanks; and so may give thanks for every affliction, we are in, in thanksgiving in every condition, either of prosperity or adversity. And with all our supplications, we are to join thanksgivings, Phil. 4. 6. Col. 4. 2. and thanksgiving properly refers to some mercy received, whether private, or positive, temporal, or spiritual, private or publick, and we are in all these to give thanks. Though praising God may reach further, which is to adore the excellencies of his being, as they are glorious in themselves; or the excellencies of his works as they are in themselves praise worthy. And Thanksgiving for mercy received is. 1. A taking notice of it as coming from God. 2. Setting a due value upon it. 3. A fence of Gods goodness and our own unworthiness. 4. Praising him for it. 5. Some carry this as a motive to all the preceding duties, but rather to this last mentioned: As if this was in special the Will of God being a duty so much to his own glory and our good, and by will we must by a Metonymy understand the thing willed, Eph. 6. 5. Col. 4. 12. It is required by the Law of nature not only, which is part of Gods will. The Heathen are reproved for not being thankful, Rom. 1. 21. and they may be said to punish it, and accounted it the greatest reproach, Isa. 63. 17. disertis omnia disertis, and by the Law of God that is written. The moral Law requires it, and the Ceremonial Law required offerings by way of thanksgiving; which we call gratulatory. And the Gospel requires it, it being one of the Gospel Sacrifices Phil. 2. 13. and the Lord better than the greatest of the legal Sacrifices, Phil. 2. 13. and it is said to be the Will of God in the Text, it must needs be pleasing to him. q Either meant as this will of his is signified to us by him, not only by the Law of nature, or of Moses, but by Christ Jesus, and it may be of greater force upon Christians, and hereby it is to be looked upon as one of the Commandments of Christ will. Or we may understand it upon the account of Christ, and the great love of God to him. Though thanksgiving is due for the least mercy, yet Gods will especially requires it with respect to Christ. And so especially of Christians who partake of Christs, and the Love of God in him; as the Apostle here adds, et quia. r Or towards you in special, the Heathen were obliged to thankfulness for Rain from Heaven, and fruitful seasons; these common blessings; much more are Christians for the special blessings they receive by Christ Jesus.

19 * Quench not the spirit. f. * That ye may be enabled to pray and give thanks, as before, 1o 1 Cor. 14. 30. Quench not the Spirit. And by the figure Miseli he means the spirit the spirit. The spirit is compared to Fire, Math. 3. 11. and he came down upon the Apostles in the similitude of tongues of Fire, Acts 2. 3. but the spirit himself cannot be quenched, he means it therefore of his gifts and operations. Which are either ordinary or extraordinary gifts, and extraordinary gifts in the primitive times, as healing, tongues, government, prophesie, &c. those that had them, without question, should have taken care not by any fault of their own, to lose them. Especially that of prophesie, which the Apostle prefers before all others, 1 Cor. 14. 1. and mentions here in the following verse. And which the Apostle exhorted Timothy to stir up in himself, 1 Tim. 1. 6. As we stir up the fire to quicken it, so the word analogia imports. The like is required of Ministers with respect to their Ministerial gifts, which are now given, but there are ordinary gifts and operations of the Spirit common to all Christians. As enlightning, quickening, sanctifying, comforting the Soul, men by cloth, security, earthly innumbrances, inordinate affections, &c. may abate these operations of the Spirit, which the Apostle calls the quenching it, the fire upon the Altar was kept always burning by the coals of the fire. Fire will go out either by neglecting it, or casting water upon it. By not exercising Grace in the duties of Religion, or by allowing sin in our selves we may quench the Spirit. As appears in David, Psal. 51. 10. 11. 12. Not that the Habits of grace may be totally extinguish'd in the truly regenerate, yet they may be stulted as to degree, and lively exercise. Yet those common illuminations, and convictions of Ministers, who are regenerate especially such that live under the Gospel do stand, may be totally lost, 1 Thess. 5. 4. 5. 6. and we read of Gods Spirit ceasing to strive with the old World, Rom. 6. 3. and the Scribes and Pharisees resisting the Holy Ghost, Acts 7. 51. which were not persons regenerate. He may sometimes strive with men, but not overcome them; and there is a quenching of the Spirit in others as well as our selves; people may quench it in their Ministers by discouraging them, and in one another by bad examples or reproaching the Zeal, and forwardness that they see in them.

20 Delpic not prophesyings. i. Thereby we may quench the Spirit, which usually works upon mens Minds and hearts by it. By prophesie is sometimes meant foretelling things to come, and speaking by extraordinary Revelation, 1 Cor. 14. 29. 30. sometimes the Scriptures are so call'd, especially the old Testament, 2 Pt. 1. 21. and sometimes the interpretation and applying of Scriptures, which is the same that we now call preaching, 1 Cor. 14. 3. And the duty with respect to it, is not to despise it, for it is thought as a thing of no worth. The word is often used in the New Testament, Luk. 18. 9. Acts 1. 11. Rom. 14. 3. 10. But the Apostle useth again the figure Miseli before mentioned, and means, Prize, Value, and highly esteem it, attend upon it, and have great regard to it. It being an ordinance of Gods institution and Edification, yet, as for Conversation also, 1 Cor. 14. 24. 25. some despise it because of the outward conceits of the persons which prophesie, some through a proud conceit of their own knowledge, some by a contempt of Religion it self. These Thessalonians had been commanded for their great proficiency, and yet were still to attend upon prophesying in the Church. Which he calls prophesying in the plural number, referring either to the several Prophets that prophesied, or to the several parts of their prophesie, or the times they prophesied. And the Prophets were either such as prophesied only by an extraordinary gift, and immediate revelation, which some private members of the Church, had in those times, 1 Cor. 14. 25. 30. Or such as prophesied not only by gift, but office also, Eph. 4. 11.

21 * Prove all things, hold fast that which is good. w.

* This duty relates to the former; as they were to attend upon prophesyings so to exercise a discerning judgment about what was prophesied. For all things is not to be taken here universally, but for Doctrines and Opinions in Religion which were delivered by the Prophets. The same which the Apostle John requires, hinc non every spirit but try the spirits, Rev. 19. 10. and its the same word there which in this Text we read proba; according to Gold or other Metals which are tried in the Fire, or by a touchstone, as some think. And though there was a peculiar gift of discerning of Spirits, 1 Cor. 12. 10. yet it is the duty of every Christian to try mens Spirits and Doctrines whether from God or no. The Apostle speaks here to the Saints in general, and so doth the Apostle St. John, 1 John 4. 1. And some Doctrines are to be judged of by the Scriptures as the standard of Truth, as the Berens were commended for fearfully the Scriptures about the Apostles Doctrine, Acts 17. 11. and the Apostle prays for the Philippians that they might discern things that ought, Phil. 1. 10. and if they had not yet attained it as they desire, yet he prays that they might, and not be always, blatit, but fact as the Apostle speaks of, who have their lights enlarged in the discerning of good and evil, Heb. 5. 13. 14. the people are to look upon them as the guides and leaders, as they are called Acts 12. 7. 12. and such as are to be before them in the fearing and dispensing of truth, yet because the rule is not infallible, they ought to try their Doctrine by the rule of Truth. Which is that judgment of discretion which Protestants allow to the people in their disputes with the Papists against their Doctrine of Infallibility and implicit Faith, which grounds the peoples Faith upon the Authority of the Church, which ought to rest upon the Authority of Gods Word. As we ought not to reject the authority and Faith of the Church, for not to believe with a blind Faith, or obey with a blind obedience. * The good here meant is Truth, which is an intellectual good, the contrary to which is Error, which is a mental evil. When we have proved mens Doctrines and Opinions, what we find agreeable to the Scriptures of Truth we ought to hold fast. And though all Truth hath a goodness in it, yet especially the divine Truth, and the Doctrine of the Gospel, which the Apostle calls, That good thing committed to Timothy, 2 Tim. 1. 14. Its good with respect to the soul, and to be better than any bodily good, and good that refers to eternity, and to be better than any temporal good. Now this good we are to hold fast. To hold it fast against adversaries and all opposition as some understand the word, to hold it as with both hands, against seducing Doctrines, Snares Temptations, and the Worlds Persecutions. And the word is used concerning the good ground that held fast the seed of the Word, Luk. 8. 15. So 1 Cor. 11. 2. we are to retain the Truth, but not detain it, as the heathen are said to do, Rom. 1. 18. where we find also the same word as in the Text. It is a duty much preb by the Apostles in their Epistles to the Saints and Churches that had received the Gospel that they should hold fast, 2 Tim. 4. 13. Tit. 1. 9. Phil. 4. 13. 2. 13. 25. and And there is holding fast the Truth, as well in Practice as Opinion, and which may be the ground of the name formerly given to such as opposed the Errors of Antichrist before the word Protestant was known, call'd Fest-men.

22 * Abstain from all appearance of evil. x. To make this verb have its connection with the former, some Expositors understand it of Doctrines and Opinions only. To take heed of Opinions that seem erroneous, and not rashly to receive them without due examination. Though this sense is not to be excluded, yet the verb need not be confined to it, but to extend to practise also, as in Worship to abstain from the show of Idolatry, as to eat meat in an Idols Temple was not always gross Idolatry, but had some appearance of it; and therefore the Apostle forbids it, 1 Cor. 10. 14. And so in appearance of it is to be avoided, Covertness, Drunkenness, Whoredoms, &c. and that both with respect to our selves, left by venturing upon that which hath some show of evil, we step into the evil it self, and with respect to others, that we may not occasion the taking offence not so justly given; or do that which may any way encourage a real evil in them by that appearance of it, which they see in us; yet we ought not to use this account to excuse the discharge of any necessary Duty. Some read the word, Abstain from all kind of evil, And words of evil saying, and the Greek word is so used by Logicians: But here to insist on particulars is infinite. And thus the Apostle concludes all these positive Duties with a general precept which he leaves with them at the close of his Epistle; having dejected them from many evils, now he exhorts them to abstain from the appearance of them.

23 And * the very God of peace * sanctify you wholly; y And I pray God your whole Spirit, and soul and body be preserved z blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. a.

The Apostle here concludes all with Prayer, as knowing all his exhortations and admonitions before given would be ineffectual without Gods blessing. He prays for their sanctification and preservation. Though they were sanctified already, yet but in part, so that he prays for farther progress in it to perfection;

which he means by wholly. A word no where used by the Apostle, but in this place, and variously rendered; some render it thoroughly, some piously, some in every part, some in all things, some fully, and the French entirely: It may refer to all the parts of holiness, and the degrees of holiness, and to the whole man in the several faculties of Soul and Body, express in the next words by Spirit, Soul, and Body, that their whole man may be entirely separated, and consecrated to God, offered up to him as a Sacrifice, Rom. 12. 1. and hence we observe that not only the beginning, but progress in Grace is from God. The Apostle therefore prays for it to God, (whom he calls the God of peace, to enforce his exhortation to peace, 1o 3.) which confutes the Pelagians, who thought objective Grace sufficient to sanctify, or that mans Nature need not be first purified by God, and then can go forward of it self, being not maintained, not totally corrupted by the fall. Its true, our faculties cooperate with God, but not of themselves, but as acted by his inherent Grace, and indwelling Spirit. And what the Apostle prays for, that Christians should endeavour after, which is a progress in sanctification to perfection. We may also note, that this sanctification reacheth the whole man, Spirit, Soul and Body. y Preservation, which we call preservation, express here both by the Subject and Term of it. The Subject is the whole man, branched into three parts, Spirit, Soul, and Body, figured, at least resembled by the three parts of the Temple. Consider man naturally, and then by Spirit we mean his superior faculties, as the Mind, Conscience, Rational Will. By Soul, his sensitive Appetites, with the Affections and Passions. By Body, we mean the outward and carnal part, the instrument of the Soul. The Jewish Rabbins and others think all these are express in the Creation of man, Gen. 2. 7. God formed man of the dust of the earth, there is his Body, and breathed into him the breath of life, or lives, Nimoth Chaiyim, Nephesh Chaiyah; that is, the faculties of the rational Soul, and Man became a living Soul, that is, the Animal and Sensitive Life; neither is properly meant here the Spirit God, but the faith, yet not the sanctified part of the Soul; for he prays for the preserving of their persons. Only observe when he speaks of their Spirit, he calls it their whole Spirit. And by the Figure Zugma the word whole is to be carryed also to Soul and Body, to that as he prayed their whole Man might be sanctified, so their whole Spirit, their whole Soul, their whole Body might be preserved; and the time when this shall be accomplished, 1o 3. where is rendered perfect, alluding to the perfect possessing of an Inheritance, or lot that belongs to a man. And by preserving, he means not so much the substance of the Spirit, Soul, and Body, to preserve them in Being, as to preserve them in Holiness. And they are preserved, partly by being delivered from the sinful Dependencies that are naturally in them; as Ignorance, Vanity, Impotency, and Enmity in the mind, Reluctancy and Obstinacy in the Will, mourning and Irregularity in the Affections; Disobedience to the Law of God, and the Regular Commands of the Soul in the Body. If they prevail, they will bring destruction: As Diseases prevailing destroy the Natural Life; and partly also by being supplied with that Grace whereby they act regularly towards God, and are serviceable to the end of man Being, as supply of Oyl preserveth the Lampburner. And whereby we may understand that not only the outward Faculties are corrupted in mans fall, but the superior and the supreme of all, esse the Apostle need not have prayed for the Spirit to be sanctified and preserved as well as the Soul and Body. And elsewhere prays for a renewing in the Spirit of the Mind, Eph. 4. 23. A Next we may consider this preservation with respect to the term of it, Preserved blameless unto the coming of Christ the same which the Apostle means by being preserved to Gods heavenly Kingdom, 2 Tim. 4. 18. and 1 Pt. 3. 14. And those that are preserved to that day, are preserved to the end, and will be found blameless and their whole Man, Spirit, Soul, and Body being first sanctified, and then preserved, shall be saved and glorified. And the Apostle intimates in the word qualitercumque blameless, that strict deliverance that will be made of persons at that day, where in one will be blameless, and others will be found without blame. And herein the Apostle may have respect both to the Teachers and Ministers in this Church, and the private Members of it, that with respect to their several Duties belonging to them they may be found blameless; and though according to the strictness of the Law of God, none can be without blame, yet, those that have been sincere, and have their sin pardoned, and their persons accepted in Christ, may be found blameless in the day of Christ, however it is that which we should strive after.

* 24 Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it. b.

b We had in the former verse the Apostles Prayer, here his Faith; and he speaks it by way of consolation to them, that what he had prayed for, God would effect; what he had promised, he would perform; and Promises though immutable, and infallible, yet are to be accomplished in a way of Prayer. Prayer is our Duty, and Gods Decrees and Promises are no dispensation from our Duty: Besides, Duties are more known to us than Gods Decrees. And God decrees the means as well as the end. But what is it he faith God will do? It is not here express'd, and the word, It, is not the Original, but only Grace and Gift, God will effect. He had prayed God would sanctify them wholly, and preserve them blameless, &c. And this he would do or effect. And he grounds his confidence partly upon Gods calling them. For the Apostle knew that Gods Gifts and Calling are without Repentance, Rom. 8. 30. and 11. 29. And where he called them by his gifts, and glorified. And this the Apostle saw in these Thessalonians that they efficacy of the Gospel upon their hearts, that they were effectually called and chosen, as chap. 1. 9. whence he concluded they should be at last wholly sanctified, and finally preferred, which is a strong argument against final Apostasy from a state of Grace. Though many that are outwardly called are never sanctified, much less wholly. But of this Call the Apostle speaks not here, at least not only. And partly also upon Gods faithfulness, who had called them. He doth not say, God is able to do it, though that is true, but he is faithful, and will do it. Those that are effectually called are brought into Gods Covenant, where perfection and perseverance are promised, and Gods faithfulness obligeth him to make good his Covenant. It is as Act of Grace and Mercy to call men, when called, Gods faithfulness is engaged to preserve them, and perfect the work begun, as 1 Cor. 1. 8. The Apostle tells the Corinthians, God will confirm them, to the end they might be blameless in the day of Christ, and his argument is, for God is faithful by whom ye were called, Cor. 1. 10. v. 9.

25 Brethren, pray for us.

The Apostle a little before had prayed for them, now he begs Prayers of them as head of other Churches, Rom. 15. 30. Col. 4. 3. Ministers and People need each others Prayers, and it is a mutual Duty they owe to one another. Ministers are obliged by special Office, People by Common duty; with respect to the success of the Gospel in general, 2 Thes. 2. 1. and their own edification by their labours. The Apostle, as he did not think it below him to call these Thessalonians, Brethren, so neither to beg their prayers. Those that stand highest in the Church, may find in need of the meaneest and lowest. The head cannot say to the foot, I have no need of thee. Those that preach not the Gospel, may yet promote it by their Prayers; yet this gives no warrant to beg the Prayers of Saints departed, for which we have no precept, promise, or example as we have for the other. And what is without faith is sin. It is at the best doubtful whether they know our state below, or can hear us when we pray, and certainly God never required us to pray upon such uncertainties, and it cannot be in Faith.

26 Greet all the brethren & with an holy kiss.

The Apostle concludes several of his Epistles with Greeting, or Salutations, as men usually do at this day, sometimes with salutations from himself alone, sometimes from others; either particular Persons, or Churches which he sometimes names as Rom. 16. 5, 6, v. 1. 1 Cor. 16. 19. and sometimes commends to the Saints their saluting one another, as Rom. 16. 16. 1 Cor. 16. 20. so here in the Text. The Persons to be saluted are all the Brethren, that is, all Believers incorporated into the Gospel Church under one common Head, and common Father. More particularly those of this particular Church, we call men Brethren, sometimes upon a Natural, sometimes a Civil account, and why not much more upon a Spiritual account. And as their love should reach to the Brotherhood, 1 Pet. 2. 17. so their salutation should reach all the Brethren, Poor, and Rich, High, and Low, Bond, and Free. 1 Thes. 5. 14. The Right or Ceremony of men kissing each other, was much used among the Jews, and in the Eastern Countries, Gen. 27. 26. Prov. 24. 25. Luke 7. 45. in their salutations; and thence it came to be practised in the Churches of Christ as an outward symbol and token of love and freindship. Which is not now practised with us amongst men, but is of the same signification with joyning of hands. The uniting of the Lips or Hands together denoting the inward conjunction of the heart. The word in the Greek signifies love or freindship, and call'd a kiss of Charity, 1 Pet. 5. 14. And though the Ceremony is ceased, yet that which it signified is to be preferred in all Churches, Places, and Ages. It was practised in the time of John Marry, John Mar. Apoc. 2. and *Tertullian, Tertul. de Orat. et called Osculum pacis, A kiss of peace, and used especially at their meeting together at the Lords Supper; their Love Feasts, and other solemn assemblies. Its call'd an Holy Kiss; so distinguish it from the Treacherous Kiss of Judas, or the Lullful Kiss of the Harlot, Prov. 7. 13. And why it is not used among us now, we need say only, as concerning walking of Feet aloft, we have as fast fallen out the Churches of Christ. Or as the Apostle phrases, Phil. 4. 8. whatsoever things are lovely, and whatsoever things are of good report, &c.*

27 I charge you by the Lord Jesus, that this Epistle be read unto all the holy brethren.

The Apostle having now finish'd the Epistle, lays a solemn charge upon them all, especially their Elders and Teachers to have this Epistle published. He now being himself hindered from preaching to them, he sends this Epistle to them to be read to all. He wrote it for publick use, and therefore would have none ignorant of it, whereby they might all understand what he had wrote about his great love and care of them, and the commendations he had given of them, and the instructions, Admonitions, Exhortations, and Comforts that were contained therein, of great use to them all. And his charge herein is in a way of Admiration, Open your eyes & Knees, imposing it on them as by an Oath, as Abraham did upon his Servant in the case of providing a Wife for Iaac, Gen. 24. 2. And to the High Priest said to Christ, I adjure thee by the living God, &c. Mat. 26. 63. Answering to the Hebrew word, highly, I adjure you, Cast. 5. 8. I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, &c. It imports the requiring of a thing in the Name and Authority of God, with a denunciation of Vengeance if it be not done. And all this charge is above the reading of this Epistle, as he commands the Epistle to the Colossians to be read in the Church of the Laudians, Col. 4. 16. and that from Laudians to be read to them, but not with that Solemn charge as this is. Hence we may gather the Duty of reading the Scriptures in the Church Assemblies; as the Law of Moses was read in the Synagogues. And very early in the Christian Churches there were some devoted Devotion, Julian the Apostle was a Reader in the Church at Nicomedia. And if this was the first Epistle Writ by the Apostle, as some suppose it, he lays this solemn charge first for the reading of this, to show the duty of the several Churches to the rest of the Scriptures, as they should come to their hand. The word of God should dwell richly and plentifully in the people, and therefore reading it is necessary, together with expounding and applying it. And we hence also may prove against the Papists, it should be made known to the people, even all the holy Brethren, and not confined to the Clergy; and to be read in their own Tongue; for so without question was this Epistle read in a language which the people understood. The Apostle was not for confining of knowledge, and keeping the People in Ignorance, as those are who make it the wonder of Devotion.

28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

Having exhorted them to salute one another, he now bids them his own Salvation. Not in a Lip-complement as the Mode now is, but in a serious expression of the desire of his Soul: And this, or words to the same purpose are his Salutation in every Epistle, which he makes to be his Token, 2 Thes. 1. 1. And by Grace here he means favour, and good Will rather than inherent Grace, and all blessings which spring from Grace, as sometimes all are comprehended under the word Peace. Yet Grace and Peace are sometimes in his Salutations both joyn'd together. And though here Christ is only mentioned, yet in many other places God the Father is mention'd with him, 2 Thes. 1. 2. 2 Tim. 1. 2. Yes, and God the Holy Ghost also 2 Cor. 13. 14. and where they are not mentioned, yet all are to be understood; for in all works all virtus still cooperate. And because Grace is to eminently manifested in the whole work of our Salvation, therefore the Apostle doth still mention it in all his Salutations. And with this he concludes this Epistle, and with this St. John concludes the whole Bible, Rov. 22. ult. And the Seal added, not to that up, but confirm the whole, Is, Amen. And is added, as the Voice of the whole Church upon reading the Epistle, as some think, and not by the Apostle himself.

The first epistle unto the Thessalonians was written from Athens.

These Postscripts to the Epistles Epistles are judged to be added by some Scribes that copied them out, and not by the Apostle himself, as might be made evident; and is not found in any Epistles but in St. Paul alone. But as it is usual to date Letters from the places where they are writ, so is this dated from Athens. Hither he was conducted by some before after his Persecution at Thessalonica and Bereæ, Act. 17. 15. and here we read he stay'd for some time; but that from thence he wrote this Epistle, either then, or any time after, is but conjecture, its more probable he wrote it from Corinth, because he sends it from Himerus and Silvanus, as well as from himself, and they came to him from Macedonia when he was at Corinth, as Act. 18. 5.

II. THES.

II. THESSALONIANS.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE Apostle being yet hindered from coming to them, and understanding some mistake of what he wrote in his former Epistle about the Coming of Christ, he thereupon sends this second Epistle where after his usual Salutation he gives thanks for them, and hearing of the continuance of their Faith and Patience under all their Persecutions, he glorifies in them. And then comforts them by Arguments taken from the righteous Judgement of God, and the different manner and effect of Christs Coming, both to themselves and all the Saints that Believe, and to their Adversaries, and all that knew not God, nor obey'd the Gospel. And then prays for the perfecting of their Faith to the glorifying the name of Christ, Chap. 1. But hearing they were shaken in their Minds about the time of Christs Coming, as if it should be presently in the Age wherein they lived, he doth vehemently caution them against such a mistake, and tells them of a great Apostasy, and the Revelation of the man of Sin, which must precede that day, which he doth particularly describe in the manner and effects thereof. But speaks of these Thessalonians with thanksgiving to God as such as God had chosen, and call'd to obtain the Glory of the Lord Jesus; and then prays for their Comfort and Establishment, Chap. 2. He next proceeds to desire their Prayers, both with respect to the success of the Ministry, and the safety of their Persons who were employed therein. And declares his Confidence in them that God would establish them, and that they would obey the Commandments they had received from them. And gives them some farther Commandments about such in the Church as did walk disorderly. And so concludes his Epistle with Prayers for their Peace, and recommending them to the Grace of Jesus Christ, Chap. 3.

CHAP. I.

Paul, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians in God our father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Grace unto you, and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

These two Verities are the same as in the former Epistle, and therefore I proceed.

We are bound to thank God always for you brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all towards each other aboundeth.

The Apostle begins this Epistle as the former, with thanksgiving; only, there he gave thanks for their Faith, Hope and Love, here he only mentions their Faith and Love; there for the efficacy of their Grace, here for the growth of it. There, he said only we give thanks, here he addeth we are bound, and as it is meet. As if he was obliged to give thanks for them now somewhat more than before, perceiving their grace did not only yet abide, notwithstanding all their persecutions, but encrease and grow. But the Apostles thanksgiving here respects particularly these Thessalonians grace. Not only the beginning, but growth of grace is from God, else why doth the Apostle give thanks for it, as Phil. 1. 6. Hence he is filled the God of all Grace, 1 Pet. 5. 10. weak and strong, first or second. The manner of its growth, whether by infusion of new degrees, as the first grace is infused; or by cooperating only with it, and so its increase by exercise first and second, leave to the Schoolmen. However growth is a Duty, and commendable in Churches. And the Apostle mentions particularly 1. Their growth in Faith; and that to a great degree, Capacitate, it grows exceedingly. It grows over and above, above the ordinary rate of growth, or the common pitch of Faith. Their progress was from Faith to Faith, their assent to the Doctrine of the Gospel grew more firm and rooted, and the perfection of their happy state in Christ was much confirmed and strengthened, with a more confident reliance on him. Or their Faith was extended to more objects by the increase of their knowledge. 2. Their encrease in love; which he also expresseth by an emphatical word, ἀγάπη, which signifies exceeding more and more; their love grew in the habit, and abounded in the train of it; and this love begets forth by the universality of it, and the reciprocity of it, it was the love of all to each other. They all did love, and were all beloved of one another; there was no Schisme among them, as in some other Churches. Faith and Love are two Sister Graces, and are always more or less together; but in the order of Nature, Faith is first and worketh by Love. But not first in time; and then afterwards when it brings forth, love is facta formata, Faith first, and then love follows. Hence some have said, that there was not one Hypocrite or false Christian in this whole Church. Now the Apostle and his Fellow Ministers hereupon judged themselves bound to give thanks. Christians are obliged to give God thanks for the Grace of God in others as well as in themselves; and especially the Ministers of the Gospel for the People that have been converted by them, or are committed to them. Hereby the Apostles joy was encreased at present, and his future Glory might be advanced also.

So that we our selves glory in you in the churches of God, for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure.

In the former verse the Apostle gave thanks for them; in this he glories in them: He gave thanks for them to God, and glories in them before men. Wherein Silvanus and Timotheus are to be understood as joyned with him herein. Glorifying in them is in high estimation of a thing, rejoicing in it, high commendation of it, and applauding our selves in it. And it must be some great thing either really, or in opinion, and in which some way or other our selves are concerned. And glorifying is good or evil according to the matter or object of it. To glory in our wisdom, strength, riches, Jer. 9. 23. To glory in men, 1 Cor. 3. 21. in our own works, Rom. 4. 2. In what we have received as if not received; 1 Cor. 4. 7. After the flesh, 1 Cor. 11. 18. or in our shame, Phil. 3. 19. All this glorying is evil. But to glory in God, Phil. 4. 16. in his love, 1 Cor. 13. 16. with Gods inheritance, Phil. 1. 20. in the knowledge of the Lord, Jer. 9. 24. In the Cross of Christ, Gal. 6. 14. in tribulation, Rom. 5. 3. In Christ Jesus 1 Cor. 1. 3. in hope, Heb. 3. 6. And of the success of the Ministry in the Churches growth, and their Faith and Patience; as here in the Text. All this glorying is good; as elsewhere he is boasted or gloried in the Corinthians List, 2 Cor. 9. 2. but his glorying in them was not to exalt himself, but to magnify the Grace of God, and provoke other Churches to imitate them. Where the excellency of Grace is known, and the commendation of it will be received, and imitated, and not amongst carnal men who seek after true goodness. And it was the Apostle himself, and Silvanus and Timotheus that thus gloried in them. It adds to persons commendation, when it is by men of great knowledge, wisdom and goodness. And it was by such as well knew them, and that have finished after the Gospel is a question. It is sometimes mentioned particularly with respect to them. As in the parable of the Tares and Wheat, Matth. 13. of the ten Virgins Matth. 25. and the Talents. And the Beast and false Prophets, are cast into the Lake of fire, Rev. 19. so, before the personal coming, his Judgment will be as before conceived, beg here, and then proceed to the rest of the World; whereupon many assign some great length of time to Christs stay upon Earth, and judging the World. But this takes the brightness of this coming in a spiritual sense. — It is clear that the brightness of this coming will be the Kingdom of Antichrist, or of this man of sin, is doubled in darkness, to the brightness of this coming will fission and destroy it with respect to his Eternal Glory. Christ is said to be the brightness of his Fathers Glory, John. 1. so, but this is a brightness with respect to men. — It is clear that this coming will be the brightness of the Kingdom from the beginning of the World, and more eminently after this Avenge, yet this will exceed all the former, and peculiarly filled the brightness of his coming : and so they expect this destruction of this man of sin before Christs coming to Judgment, for if he be the same with the fall of Babylon, mentioned in Revelation, and the destruction of the Kingdom of Antichrist after that, before Christs last coming, and they mention the calling of the Jews, the destruction of those Enemies called Gog and Magog, the coming down of the new Jerusalem from Heaven, which is some glorious State of the Church here upon Earth. However the Apostolic here mentioned nothing of a Kingdom, but only of a Kingdom of Grace, and of a Kingdom of different Religions upon a Civil account, I do not know, but as this man of sin rose out of the Apostasy of the Church, so he will not be confounded, and destroyed, but by a return from it, — which is done by the Wrath of Christs mouth, and the brightness of his eyes, and the light of his countenance. — Instruments, or others, God will use to bring down this man of sin, and to avenge the blood of his Servants upon this man of sin in the time and way appointed of him.

ably wrought by miracles, as the Greek word is rendered in Ath. 2, properly though the Devil can work the cure, he cannot the cure: He can by his great Natural Knowledge and Experience improve natural causes to their utmost, but he cannot effect things above all possibility of Nature, which is the same power and working: The Schoolmen give their distinction between wonders and miracles; they say, Wonders are such as infer: All miracles are wonders, but all wonders are not miracles: And yet are esteemed miracles when their cause is not known. Legends are full of fables of Miracles wrought: to confirm their false Doctrines of Purgatory, of Reliques, invocation of Saints &c. which might be wonders rarely wrought by the Devil's skill, but are commonly wrought by the Devil's malice, as Yanir in Egypt; and by Sinus Magnus, and Apollin; Yvanus, Magic Arts, and the people not knowing them in their causes, mistake them for miracles. And being wrought for such ends, are termed signs for a sign is anything that is used to make signification, wherby it is a Natural, or Artificial; an Ordinary, or Extraordinary: People either for a good end, as those taken by Christ, and the Apostles, were led away, as those used by this man offensively. Apollin was apt to be affected with signs, so that Iesus said the Apollin, Isid sign a figs, 1 Cor. 2, 22. as they desired Christ to shew them a sign, and therefore this man of sin comes with figs. Some figs are only for representation, the sign of the Cross, and the Images of Christ, and of his Doctrine, and some come from the heart: Others are for confirmation, which are the true signs, or Oracles as seem fo; and becomes in their latter sort, which are called magia Juudaica, isid wonder or wonders of a Iye, And though the Greek word is used also for a real miracle, yet no more; for miracles are the effects of a Divine Power only, Rom. 15, 19, Ath. 2, 4, not Diabolical. And call'd magia because they are used to bewitch a Iye, or because they are not real, as I have said: I wonder how they cheat the people, and make them wonder; I wonder what excuse in Gregorius Dialogues, and in Paulus Diaconus, and others, and yet such miracles as these the Papists boast of as marks of their Church to be true, though they are here by the same way the marks of the man of sin. And Christ foretold of false Prophets, Matth. 24, 24. See wonders, to deceive, if possible, the very Elect. Matth. 24, 24. See wonders.

11 And for this cause God shall send them || strong delusions, that they should believe a lye &c.

5. We had a point in the former verse of their punishment by the man of sin, of their fin, and here of their delinquency. They were first deluded, which was their fin, and God sends them from delusion and that is their punishment. The delusion therefore are given up to believe a lye, which is their punishment. Had they received the Truth aright, their might have been faded, but not receiving it they are damned to have been fazed to be such as perils, and their perishing is her call of damnation. So that though God is not the Author of sin, or falldown, Dum non fassus Adamus et alios Fulgentius, yet he is the Author of their punishment, and he is the Author of the calls God sending, etc. which imports either, 1. Tradition, which calls men to Satan to tempt and deceive. 2. Defection, withdrawing men from God to tempt and deceive. 3. Defection, withdrawing, or withdrawing that grace that might preserve them from sin. 4. A judicial proceeding. God purposing not to hinder men from falling into sin or delusions which he teaches their own hardness of heart, and that they will not be convinced, non efficitur, but deficiunt; Schismata which are in Scripture is often said for to do that which he permits to be done, as in the case of Joseph selling into Egypt, Gen. 45. 7. David's numbering the People, 2 Sam. 24. 1. compared with 1 Chron. 21. 1. And the ten Kings giving their power to the Beast, by thus putting it into their hearts, Rev. 17. 17. and it is not as if God were for or against the sin, but he is the Author of the sin; and he decreed the circumstances attending it, and the end to which he would order and dispose it. And the degree to which it should break forth, and the manner of it. And God gave them up to it. And it did work with great efficacy. Which either relates to the man of sin that did lead them thus throughly into it, to show that he was the author of it, and that he was the author of their life, and their eternal damnation makes men violent against the truth, there is the efficacy of error. And thus God doth judicially punish fin with fin, and delusion with delusion. And then they are always most operative, and most incurable. But men fall not presently under these judicial arts; men first relate to the before God sends them into sin, and then he sends them into sin, and then he sends them there. These in the Text first received to receive the Truth before they were given up to believe a lye; see Rom. 1. 24. So that both God, and this man of sin, and themselves also are concerned in these evils; but they finfully and unrepentantly.

which will overcome their practice, than the Truth which doth condemn it. See Præf. 10. 23. Rom. 1. 18. By righteousness, some Expōsitors understand Justi Dicitur, or Evangelium, because it is set in opposition here to Truth, as in its first application to Job. 8. 45. and that the Apostle hath peculiarly reprehended the corrupt Doctrines of Sinon and Nice, and the Neoplatonists, that gave Liberty to the Lufts of the Flesh. But why neoplatonists, that were Libertines, should be here set in opposition rather to the Truth, than to the Law, is not easily to be conceived, unless we have been before speaking of it. I rather take the Word in the larger sense, for all men is unrighteousness; and the Apostle St. Paul, Phil. 3. 9. All unrighteousness is sin, 1. Job. 4. 17. where unrighteousness is expressed by Aquila a word which imports transgression of the Law, as in this Text by Achila, a word which signifies iniquity. So that we see here an erroneous Mind, and a carnal heart, going together. And when sin is come to this height, that it is become a Law, it makes them ripe for damnation. And how well that shal agree to the Antichristian Church. Let men consider and judge.

13 But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you y, brethren, beloved of the Lord z, because God hath from the beginning || chosen you to salvation a, through sanctification of the Spirit b, and belief of the Truth c.

The Apostle here extenuates these Traffickers out of the Reprobates, that he had before spoken of, and speaks of them as Men that are not in the Way of Life in Faith or Frailty, and obtain Salvation. And this he mentions for comfort to them, and with thanksgiving to God. He had often before given thanks for them; 1 Thot. 1. 2. and 2. 13. and 3. 9. and in the former Chapter of this Epistle ver. 10. So that these mentions is as a debt he was bound to pay, or duty he was bound to perform. Gratias is here he files them, not only because, as before, but because of the Lord; such as have been, and are before. And therefore not in the number of them that should be lamented, mentioned in the former ver. A which words are either in the Way of Life or in the Way of Death; or rather all Arguments to convince them were beloved of the Lord. And he infallibly in their Election as a proof of it. There is an Election to Office, as David to be King, 2 Sam. 6. 21. and Judas to be an Apostle, Joh. 6. 70. and Election to a Church, and means of Salvation, and thus the feed of Abraham, Gal. 3. 7. and 18. 10. and 1 Cor. 1. 12. and 10. 20. and Election to Salvation, in the Text which is either that which follows Faith, as some understand that place, Met. 22. 14. or rather that which goes before it; said here to be from the beginning; not from the beginning of the Gospel as they say, nor from the beginning of our Preaching to you of your Election, but from the beginning of the Beginning of the thebeginning of the World, which was the firsting of the times or immediately upon Adam's Fall; but by beginning is here meant Eternity it self, as Election, Eph. 1. 4. is said to be from before the foundation of the World, which was from Eternity; and therefore John 17. 24. says, that the World may know that the Father hath sent me and that the Father hath glorified me from the beginning unto now. Scriptures often express Eternity by such words as relate to time. As when God is called the Ancient of days, Dan. 7. 9. it signifies his Eternity; and Judas speaks of some that were of old condemned to condemnation, Τῶν ἀρχαίων καταδικασμένων, Gods Eternal condemnation compared to a book wherein names are written, Judas 13. when he speaks of the beginning of the World and it is Election to Salvation, complete Salvation, which is here meant, in the full fruition of it; not in the Title to be Faith, or the first fruits of it in Sanctification, because they are here mentioned as the means that tend to it. Election is to the means, and to the end, and to the full fruition of it, the fullness of Gods Election, but God hath decided it to be the way to Salvation; without holiness none shall enter in the Lord, Heb. 12. 14. and therefore those were spoken of as persons to be damed, who believed not the Truth in the former ver. And it is to be said upon the benefit of Faith, it is through it we have Salvation, and therefore it is said, through it 1 Epil. 4. and the Apostle joins Sanctification and Faith together for they are not and cannot be put together. Now by all this the Apostle proves they were beloved of the Lord. He files the fruits of Election in their Sanctification and belief, and John 17. 24. thence concludes they were Elected, and therefore loved.

14 Whereunto || he called you by our gospel d;

d Before, the Apostle mentioned their Election, how their Calling; and are often in Scripture put together, Row. 8, 30. 2 Pt. 1. 10. and are both applied to Christ himself, Jn. 42. 6. They are those two Sovereign Acts of God, pre-requisite to a State of Salvation. The one Eternal, the other in time; the one immanent in God, the other transigent upon the Creature, and is the first transient Act that flows from Election. And because there is an outward and inward Call mentioned in Scripture, we must here understand the outward Call. For 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27, which follows, is mentioned in the beginning of the verse, ye are called, as he said in the former verse, which is, Salvation, Sanctification, belief of the Truth, which they could not attain with a meer outward call; though they had that call. For the Apostle mentions here the Gospel, which he calls evangel. because evangel they may be sure before hand God will give : And this establishment respects either their mind, in the belief of the gospel against false Doctrine, or their hearts against inordinate fears

the Apostle, against departing from the way of Holiness. The Apostle kept near the Tzavur of the New Covenant which contains promises of preformance and establishment; as well as of pardoning Mercy, and sanctifying Grace, [Jer. 32. 40.] And he grounds his confidence of their establishment upon Gods faithfulness, as upon the same account he comforts the Carinthians, 1 Cor. 10. 13. and those Thebanians, 1 Epht. 5. 24. and it may be said that we shall meet with wicked and uncharitable men, yet fear not, God will establish you, for he is faithful. As Gods promises are according to his purposes, so his performances will be according to his promises, which is his faithfulness. b. 2. As God would establish them, so keep them from evil. There is moral and penal evil, of sin and suffering; the Greek word imports the former : Never used but in connection with the latter, and signifies that God will keep him that dwells in him, and occasioned by him, Epht. 6. 16. 1 Joh. 5. 18. And its true, that God will keep his people from the Devil, as here read the word. But I suppose the apostle means thus by evil, evil work; as he speaks; 2 Tim. 4. 18. God will preserve us from every evil work. But whether the evil work of others, or their own ? the latter I incline to think, because if it were the former, how could he say, We would have assured them of the latter? did he think God would keep them from all sin ? The Apostle doth not mean so, nor say so : God keeps his people from much evil and fin which others fall into through not from all. And he keeps them from falling under the power of it. Though they may be tempted by Satan, the World or their own hearts, yet not so as finally to be overcome, and so as never to rise up again. They shall be more while they be kept from evil. And the Apostle doth also comfort them in this from the consideration of Gods faithfulness. But these promises of Gods keeping us, do not exclude our endeavours of keeping our selves. Eit tistat is born of God keepeth himself, and the wisdom unto teacheth him self, 1 Joh. 5. 18. Hence such exhortations, Keep ye least with all diligence, Prov. 4. 23. And keep your lives in the love of God, Jude 21. &c. And our keeping is secured to our own faith with the power of God, 1 Pet. 1. 5.

* 2 Cor. 7. 16. 4 And * we have confidence in the Lord touching you that ye both do, and will do the things that we command you c.

11. The Apostle had before him his confidence that God would establish them and keep them in his evil, and now here declares his confidence in them concerning their obedience. For he knew well that this is the way of Gods keeping men, and whereby he bleweth that he build his confidence concerning what he saith, that he will be able to keep them in his faith, to establish and preferation upon some good ground. And he describes their obedience by doing what the Apostle, and his Fellow-Labourers in the Gospel among them commanded them, whether they were Commandments about the duties of religion, or about the duties of civil life, or about the duty of Obedience to the Discipline of the Gospel. So that their Commandments were not other but the Commandments of the Lord himself, Matt. 23. 2. 1 Cor. 14. 37 Ministers are not arbitrary Commanders in the Church. Not Lords of Gods Heritage, 1 Pet. 5. 3. nor have dominion over the souls of men, as the Antiquaries of the Church have done for the Doctrine the Commandments of men, Matt. 15. 9. And he speaks before them these Theophilans that they received the word preached by them, not as the word of men but of God, 1 Thef. 2. 13. Both our Faith and Practice in Religion is, to be directed by the word of God, and that word is not secretly declared, or with any clear Confidence may be derived from it. So that what they command the people is from the Lord, and not themselves. Their work is to search out the Mind and Will of Christ, as revealed in the Scripture, wherein they have not to make immediate infallible inspiration that the Apostles, who were with Christ, and saw him, and heard him, were to build upon. And as to those things that are but appendices, and not of the substance of Religion, and for which no particular Rule is or can be laid down, Christian prudence is to regulate them according to general Rules, wherein the advice, approbation, and authority of the Apostles and their Successors in every Church. Yet nothing ought to be enjoyed in these things that is uncomely, that is not for edification, that is not of good report, that hath an appearance of Evil, that gives just occasion of offence, that transgresseth the general Rule of Mercy, that is contrary to the will of God, that is against the Commandments of the Ramish Church are justly condemned. And obedience to these Commandments of the Apostle he describes it by the universality of it, the things that we command you, that is all things the indefinite being equivalent to the universal. And by the consent of it, that you both desire to have 1 Cor. 14. 37. ye are all to do them, and not some of you. And by the free received, or any new Commandments we shall further give you; some whereof are probably such as are mentioned in the following part of this Chapter. And their present obedience gave the Apostle confidence about that which was saured. As if he had said, I am confident that you will be able to keep the commandment to persevere them thereto.

6 Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ f, * that you * Rom. 15. 17; withdraw your selves from every brother g; that ver. 14. walketh * disorderly, and not after the tradition Joh. 10. 2. he received of us h. 1 Thet. 4. 11.

which is about their carriage to disorderly Members in this Church. And having before declared his confidence, ten. 4. that they did, and would do the things he commanded, ten. 4. tells them what he commands; and because either 'tis a matter of great consequence, or else he is not to be backward in it, he therefore speaks with the greater vehemence, wherefore make in the former Epistle, chap. 9. 14. of warning the unruly, he then speaks with greater mildness, We exhort you brethren, &c. but now to withdraw from them is an harsher Duty; or they having first warned them, if they reform not next; they are to proceed to excommunicate them from the Church, as he here says, as that which he supposeth they might be backward to. II. Of Pardon. The word properly signifies a pardon conveyed from another, to the Apostle commands here in the Name of the Lord Jesus. Though he had Authority to command as much as yet, yet he would not use it as a threat, and therefore mildly conjures Christ with his Exhortations; and commands; or to avoid as the word signifies, and is of Pardon, 2 Cor. 8. 20. The word is used also, Gal. 2. 12. of rendering a reward from eating with the Gentiles. And rendering a ban, 1 Cor. 10. 38. alluding as some think there to a Soldier that draws out.

But here in the Text to a Mariner that fears his ship from the rocks, and so it implies the danger of not withdrawing, which may be the reason of the Apostles to solemn command about it. And it is not from an Heathen man, but a Brother. One that is of the Church, and is a Christian, and is neither rich or poor, high or low, &c. As he writes to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 5. 11. If any man that is called a Brother be a Fornicator, &c. b Alluding as some think to Soldiers who keep not their rank, not walking according to rule, or as he prefaces it, in order according to Tradition, 1 Cor. 11. 1. and so to be meant by Tradition, is explained in the former Chapter. And he cannot be understood to speak here of Rites and Ceremonies relating to Church Worship, or Order, as some imagine. The Apostle doth in the following Verses explain himself further. But what is the reason of his thus withdrawing or communicating the greater or the less? In a general sense it may be so called, for it is an withdrawing from Communion, but it is not properly; for that is called putting away a priest, a putting out of the old leaven, 1 Cor. 5. 7. this is only a withdrawing from him, much less is it a delivering up to Satan, which the Apo-file required, 1 Cor. 5. and himself inflicted upon Hymenæus and Alexander, 1 Tim. 1. Id est. The nature of the crime here mentioned will not bear that. It was not Incest or Blaphemy, as in the former Instances, but only disorderly walking, which he specifies afterwards. And with respect to such the Apostle requires in the former Epistle, warning only, warn the unruly. And though this is something more, yet it imports not a casting out of our Church, as the former. For the former Kingdom into Sarans Kingdom, for he is fill to be admittance as a Brother, as verse 15. And Excommunication is the exerting an Act of Church power, as 1 Cor. 5. 4. whereof no mention is made here, or of an absolute rejection which is elsewhere required, Tit. 3. 10. It seems then to be only a withdrawing from familiar converse, and the like, as verse 11. If any man that is call'd a Brother be a Fornicator, Cruelty, &c. with such as no sort to eat, alluding to the custom of the Jews who would not eat with the Gentiles, and by eating is express Communion in Scripture, and prophane Writings also. And such Communion is forbidden to such a brother, which the Apostle followed here, as he did in the former Epistle. And of the World, and not of the Church, as verse 10, which cannot be meant of sacred communion. And familiarity with such a brother would harden him in his sins, and reflect dishonour upon Religion, and indanger their infection more than with a Pagan, or Infidel, which therefore the Apostle forbids thus to be done. As he doth in the former Epistle, 1 Cor. 5. 11. as also the Romans, chap. 16. 17. And which may be a step towards excommunication from spiritual communion; which is the greater punishment, especially if the brother be not hereby made ashamed, and reform his course, and doth not only now and then do a disorderly action, but walk disorderly as verse 12. And therefore the Apostle commands Excommunication, and bids not to eat as verse 13. to be content.

10:4-15. 7 For your selves know * how ye ought to follow us. For we * behaved not our selves disorderly among you; officially abusing you. The speaker intimates the aggravation of their crime who did walk differently, and it justifies the withdrawing from them. For they would be reproved not only by his Doctrine, but Example; what he required of others he practiced himself, and that in some cases for this end alone, that he might be an Example. Examples teaching more than words, especially in the Christian religion, which only know how the Apostles and his fellow Ministers walked among them, but their end therein, whereby they knew they ought to follow them, and how to follow them; being guided as well as excited by their Example. And this is exprest more generally. First, Negative, We be bound upon first as different ones, as we be (he speaks in the first person) in foundation for their imitation; and he behest here the fame word to exprest his own practice which he did in theirs; being properly a military word as was said before. He went before them as a Captain before the Army, and taught them Order by his own Example; for in the Negative the Positive is intended.

cause, and any of you, of particular positive influence who before he speaks anything, and in general. And brings his Discourse home to the present case, and declares his earnerly working in that he wrought for his own bread, and did not eat for naught, or live upon that which was freely given.
 And the word is, And he said, that which is most commended, is that which is least received. 2 Cor. 12. 13.
 Or, that which is without cause, and that either with respect to money received, as Phil. 15. 23. Forasmuch as I have not received of you, I will not boast. Or, without merit. The Apple means that he preached the Gospel to them freely, as he tells the Corinthians, 2 Cor. 11. 7. Though if he had received maintenance for his labour in the Gospel among them, it was that which he well deserved, and that which he was commended for; as he saith, 1 Cor. 9. 14. *Forasmuch as the Lord hath so ordered, that they which preach the Gospel should live thereof, as he did at Corinth, 18. 20. And he wrought laboriously with weariness and toilsome labour, as the words import. And that when day is as he had told them in the former Epistle, chap. 5. 25. only he speaks here of a different kind of day, as that which is the day of judgment, of Consequence, and to evidence his sincere affection to them, here to let before them an example of industry against them who lived lazy, and did eat others bread. Had he not wrought with his hands, he had not walked disorderly, but they should have been ashamed of him, as he was at occasion of Evil. For though the labour of the ministry in the exercise of the mind and study may be reckoned as the greatest, yet most people cannot judge of it; and think it less; and though he had power to forbear working, he might have been thought to have been idle, and to have been any good should be hindered, or any evil furthered thereby.*

9 * Not because we have not || power n, but

7 The content of this verse is already given to us in the former, only the Apostle affirms the right of maintenance due to the Ministry by the name of power. It may be claimed by Authority from Christ; Though it should not be commanded by any Laws from men. As the Priests under the Law had their maintenance settled upon them by the Law of God; so the Apostles appoint that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel, 1 Cor. 9. 7. And though this power may be claimed, yet in some cases it is not to be exercised, as in the case of the Apostle Paul, 1 Cor. 9. 12. We have not used this power, lest we should hinder the Gospel of Christ. And he did here, to make itself an example, namely, which signifies any mark that is our or others to follow; things things upon its own likeness. Of which is given New Testament examples, but more fully applied, in the Decree to follow good works, 1 Cor. 11. 1. Be ye followers of me, as I am of Christ. And the like things, like the people, and to follow him is to imitate them, as Col. 3. 1. Be ye followers of me, even as I am of Christ. He is the first pattern, and others are to be regulated by it; and to be parents, Titus further to be imitated. As Ministers ought to be followers, and their lin will be greater, as the people ought to be followers, when it is exemplified in their practice.

mitted. Our Hope, there is no more in the (Greek) that is the chief of our Hope: as when 'tis said Gen. 31. 53. that Jacob (swore by the fear of his Father Israel, that is, by the Deity whom his Father feared). This glorious Epistle belongs to our Saviour, as to whom there is a concurrence of all that is requisite to free us from defective evils, and to make us everlastingly happy: for he is Wise, Righteous, Sanctification, and Redemption. Hence the Gentiles without Christ are left to be without hope, Eph. 2. 12. And from hence it is evident that Jesus Christ is the Eternal God, for if he were only a man, there is no way in which he could not be our Hope, for as said is that truth is man, John 1. 9.

2. Unto * Timothy my own son in the faith: * Grace, mercy, and peace from God our Father, and Jesus Christ our Lord.

He dignifies Timothy with the Title of his Son in the Faith: that is, being converted by him to Christianity, and begot to the Divine Life; and by filling Timothy his own Son, he signifies his piety and verity, that rendered him a worthy Son of such a Father, whom he imitated and honoured, and with whom he corresponded in a grateful obedient affection. Having thus designed the person to whom he writes, he expresses his ardent desires of his complete felicity, which is included in Grace, Mercy, and Peace: by Grace he means the free favour of God, that will of God, with all the spiritual gifts that proceed from it, either required for Salvation, or the great work of the Evangelical Ministry: by Mercy, his compassionate tender Love, pardoning, relieving, supporting, and assisting us in our Christian course: by Peace he signifies, principally the Peace of God, that divine calm of Conscience, that tranquillity of the Soul, which proceeds from the assurance that God is reconciled to us in Christ, and our freedom by the sanctifying Spirit, from the Tyranny of carnal lusts: This peace can never be in the world. And beyond this principal peace, we may understand peace with man, that is a quiet life exempt from hatred and persecutions, that Timothy might more comfortably and successfully perform the work of his Ministry. He prays for these blessings from God, who is the original Fountain of all good: and from Jesus Christ as the channel, by which all the gifts of God are conveyed to us. For without his mediation the Deity is as a sealed Fountain, no Grace would flow to us. He files God our Father, because he has adopted us in his Son, and in that quality he communicates his Grace, Mercy, and Peace to us: he files Christ our Lord, who hath supreme power over us as well by the right of Creation as of Redemption.

3 As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, f when I went into Macedonia g, that thou mightest charge some that they teach no other doctrine h.

Ephesus was a great City in Asia the less, whither Paul came Acts 19. 1. where Demetrius raised a tumult against him: which the Town Clerk opposed as we read there. From thence he went into Macedonia. Acts 20. 1, 2, 3. upon this his motion into Macedonia (as Divines judge) he left Timothy at Ephesus. The end of leaving him at Ephesus, was that he might charge some that they preached no other Doctrine, that is, more contrary to what he had preached, even contrary to the Doctrine of the Gospel, Gal. 1. 8, 9. what power was here committed to Timothy is by some questioned, supposing (which is very probable) that there were a greater number of Disciples then could meet in one Assembly, his power was more then Pastoral, for he had a power over the Teachers. Whether this power was extraordinary or ordinary, and what God intended ever to continue in the Church is the question. Those who make it to be such make it to be Episcopal, those that make it extraordinary, say it was the work of an Evangelist, 2 Tim. 2. 4. That there was such an Officer in the Primitive Church appears from Acts 21. 8. Eph. 4. 11. That this was Timothy's work appears from 2 Tim. 4. 5. nor is it a new thing, but very common in the settlement of all new Governments, to authorize some special Commissioners, and to give them an extraordinary power for a time till the Government can be settled, and things brought into a fixed order. If we consider the words without prejudice, I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, we can signify that Timothy was not the ecclesiastical Bishop of Ephesus, for to whom should the Apostle desire a Bishop to reside in his own Diocese, which he could not forsake without neglecting his duty, and the offence of God? This was a tacit request as if he were careless of his duty. And the word abide, apostrophe, does not necessarily import the consent of the Ecclesiastical Assembly, but signifies that Timothy, for some time only, as 'tis said of the Apostle, that remained many days at Corinth, Acts 18. 18. when his stay there was only for some Months. The intention of the Apostle seems to be that Timothy should continue for a while at Ephesus, and not accompany him in his Voyage to Macedonia, as he was wont to do upon other occasions. And 'tis evident by the sacred History, that about six months after Timothy was with the Apostle in Greece, that he went with him to Macedonia and Thess, and Miletus, Acts 20. 1, 4. where the Apostle sent for the Elders of Ephesus, to leave his last solemn charge with them. In short if Timothy had been appointed the Bishop of Ephesus, the Apostle would probably have given this Title of honour to him in the inscription of his Epistle. Upon the impartial considering of the whole matter, though the passion of Preley is so ingenious, as to discover so many mysteries and Myths in a few plain words, (viz. that Timothy was Bishop of that City, Metropolitan of the Province, and Primate of Asia) yet 'tis most likely that Timothy was left only for some time with a most Apostolical power in the Church of Ephesus: of which power this was one branch, and authoritatively to command him not to teach another Doctrine, then what was taught by the Apostles who were divinely illuminated. A divine rule, and most worthy of perpetual observation by all in the office of the Ministry. And this sheweth the mighty power of men as to deviate in their conversions from the right ways, lo in their judgements from the truths of God, otherwise Paul had had no need to have left Timothy for that end, in this Church so newly planted.

4 Neither * give heed to fables i, and endless genealogies, which minister questions rather then godly edifying k, which is in faith l: so do.

By Fables he probably meant the Jewish Fables, and commandments of men, mentioned Titus 1. 14. or more generally, all vain and idle speculations. k. Whatever tendeth not to build men up in Godliness, (which is the end of Preaching.) The Jews had many unwritten Fables, about what God did before he made the World, &c. and many unwritten Endless Genealogies, which were as many Labyrinths, intricate without an issue out of them: and 'tis probable that some of them were turned to the Christian Fall by their heads, and by their according to their Education, and the practice of the Jewish Doctors, and made the subject of their Sermons, and discourses to the assemblies of Christians; which is the thing the Apostle here denounceth a corruption of the Ordinances of Preaching, and inveighs against Acts 4. 2. Titus 1. 14. and 2. 10. and willeth Preachers to avoid, and People to be free from them, as nothing tending to the building Christ's up in holiness, which he here calleth edifying. Off. the building up of God, either by objectivity, or effectivity, or by his command, because it is God, viz. in the knowledge of God, and increase in the Love of God, and other spiritual habits, or in fact, being wrought by him, and serving for his honour and glory, or according to his Will. I For he tells us this edifying can be no otherwise then in Faith, Preaching the Doctrine of the Gospel, and embracing that which is the Doctrine of Faith, a Doctrine of Divine Revelation, to which men must give their assent, because of the authority of God revealing it. So to discourses which are not founded in a divine Revelation, and to be proved from thence can possibly tend to any building of God, which cannot stand in the Wildom of Men, but must stand in the power of God, from this Text we may observe the vanity and process of some persons even from the infancy of the Church, to make up what they call Sermons of discourses about Fables, idle Questions, and Speculations, and Genealogies of which there is no end, the Teachers being able to bring the minds of hearers to no rest about them nor tending to any good, and serving ill, but merely to their men's Wits and Parts, and we may also learn, that this is no religious Practice, or Hieroglyphic, being impossible men should be under any religious obligation to hear any such Proposals, that is, such as reveal the divine Will. For other discourses men in their fashions may hear them, or let them alone, and credit or not credit them as they see reason.

5 Now the * end of the commandment is * Rom. 13. 8, charity m out of a pure heart n, and of a good conscience o, and of faith unfeigned p. The word Translated Commandment here is enagalia, which rather signifies a particular charge given by superiors as to some thing, then a general Law, Acts 5. 28. and 16. 24. and in this chapter ver. 18. which inclinet me to think that though the proposition be true of the whole Law of God, (for Love is the fulfilling of the Law), and more eminently of the divine Doctrine in the Gospel, for the end and perfection it aims at, and produces is a pure mind: Love of God, and of man for his sake, and of the Gospel, yet it is rather here to be restrained to the Commandment relating to Practising, or dis-couraging the revealed Will of God relating to men's Salvation. The end of which is double Charity, which ought to be faith-ful, the friend of the workman, what he ought to intend and aim at: and is faith-ful the effect of the work, viz. the victory in the Souls of people Love to God and their Neighbours, neither of which can rationally be obtained, by Preachers telling people idle Stories, and filling their heads with idle questions and speculations. q. Which love to God must proceed from a clean, and holy, and sincere heart, and live up to such principles, when Conscience doth not lower down upon men, for presumptions miscarriages. Which p must all be rooted in, and accompanied with faith unfeigned rooted in it as Faith signifies a ready assent to Divine Revelation attended with it, as it signifies the Soul's repose and rest upon Christ for the fulfilling of the promises annexed to him that believes, and lives up to such propositions. These are the noble ends of whole Law of God, and particularly of the charge, or command God hath given Ministers as to Preaching, which can by no means be attained, by Teachers discouraging Fables and endless Genealogies to people, nor by Peoples attendance to idle discourses, for they can only fill people's heads with vain and unprofitable questions which serve to gender strife, and contention amongst people, instead of Love either to God or Men, and so to debase instead of purifying the Heart, and have no influence at all upon an Holy Life, all which can grow out of no root but an unfeigned Faith.

6 From which g, some having i swerved r, have turned aside unto * vain jangling f.

From which things (for the article is plural g) From which Commandment, and from the end of which Commandment, from which pure heart, good Conscience, and Faith unfeigned, 1. de doctrina, the word signifies to wander from a safe mark. Some men either propounding to themselves ends in their discourses to people different from the command concerning Preaching, and the true end of that, or at least wandering from that true end, they have turned aside. To do an adion well, two things are necessary. 1. The propounding to our selves a right end. 2. A moving to it by due means and in right order, who to falter in either of these, can no more do an adion well, then he can shoot an Arrow well, that either edge no mark, or levelleth his Arrow quite besides it, the Preachers reflected on by the Apostle, either never considered the true end of Preaching, or never regarded it in their action; this made them turn aside from Theology to Metaphysics, from Practising to Vain Jangling. (To we translate it, but the word signifies faithful talking (to we translate the adjective, Tit. 1. 10.) and to the word properly signifies, any kind of foolish and imprudent discourse either serving to no good end, or at least not such which the discourse pre-tendeth so. And indeed all discourses of Fables, and idle questions, and speculations, tending not to edifying, is no better then faithful talking.

7 Deferring to be teachers of the law i, understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm.

1. de doctrina. This Term lets us know that the Apostle reprehended upon some who were or had been Jews, who either prebeld the observance of the Law in order to justification, or spent their times in preling the Traditions of the Elders, and constructions of the Scribes, as Epiphanius testifies. Idolaters, and idolaters to the Divine Law, though none of the Letter of it upon which there arose a great many questions as insignificant as their Traditions themselves. u Which their vain Preachers spent their time in speaking to, neither understanding the Divine Law, nor the questions themselves started, and spoke upon with desire of Reputation, as persons of excellent skill in the Law, was the cause of their erroneous idle Sermons: And their ignorance is aggravated and incurable, in that they with pre-sumptuous boldness affirm the things of which they are ignorant.

8 But we know that the law i good w, if it be used lawfully x.

y. Not that I speak against the Law of God, I know that it is holy, and spiritual, and just, and good, Rom. 7. 12, 14. It is good though not for justification, yet for conviction, to convince men of sin, and to lead men to lead men to the Law, and to be in our walking with God: the purity and sanctity of its precepts are evidence of the sincere and purified mind. And as the Law has an intrinsic goodness in its nature, so it is good to men when 'tis used for the end to which God gave it.

9 * Knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man y, but for the lawless z, and for disobedient a, for the ungodly b, and for sinners c, for unholly and profane d, for murderers e, for fathers, and murderers of mothers f, for manslayers g.

By the Law is to be understood the Moral Law, (though possibly not excluding the Law of Ho, consisting in many Circumstances) as 'tis armed with flings and terrors, to restrain rebellious sinners; by the righteous man, one in whom a principle of Divine Grace is planted, and from the knowledge and love of God, chooses the things that are pleasing to him, and is ardent and active to do his will. Now 'tis true, the holiness commanded in the Law, is consistent in the love of God, and his Neighbour, obliging every reasonable creature indifferently and eternally, but as the Law was delivered in so terrible a manner, as it has annexed to many severe threatenings to the Transgressors of it, 'tis evident, that 'tis directed to the wicked, who will only be compelled by fear from an outrageous breaking of it. And this may be emphatically signified in the word here used h, for it signifies to be laid, as well as to be made. The Law is not laid is not laid against a righteous man. Thus we translate it, Mat. 3. 10. The Axe is laid to the root of the tree, there is some difference in the construction, here it is immediately laid with the Divine Law, and against men that committed and lived in gross sin and wickedness. Their sinners are first mentioned in general terms, then the Apostle proceeded to a more particular enumeration of them, whether in them (as some think) the Apostle hath respect to the several precepts of the Decalogue, I cannot determine. By the Law-ful he meaneth persons living without any respect to the Law of God or Men. By the h he meaneth such as will live in subjection to no Government. The word by us Translated unholly, signifies, such as live without any Religion, having no regard to the Worship of God, Amos 1. 4. The word Translated sinners signifies infamous, scandalous sinners: u Un-holly and profane are also general terms, signifying persons that have no piety, but lewdly talk of things sacred, and live as lewdly. e The words signify such as murder or bear their Pa-renters, though they do not give them mortal wounds, and well express violators of the fifth Commandment. Idolaters signifies such as kill men, whether maliciously, or passion-ately violators of the sixth Commandment.

10 For whomsoever g, for them that defile themselves with mankind h, for men-stealers i, for liars k, for perjured persons l, and if there be any other thing that is contrary to found do-ctrine m.

The two next terms express violators of the seventh Commandment, whether by Fornication, Adultery, Incest, or any beastly lusts. Idolaters. i The word signifies such as carry men into Captivity, or make slaves of them in the first place, it signifies also any fleeting of men. It is probable the worst of these is the man-stealing, principally intended, being the most common sin by Pyrates at Sea, and Soldiers at Land, yet not excluding any other stealing of men from their Relations, which he infameth in, as one of the highest violations of the eighth Commandment. By Liars, he meaneth such as knowingly speak what is false, especially to the prejudice of others. By Perjured Persons, he meaneth such as swear falsely. And because it would be too long to reckon up all kind of sinners, he comprehends them all in a general phrase, and if there be any other thing, that is contrary to found Doctrine, that is, the holy and pure truth of God: that is not corrupted, but judges against good and evil: for though he faith the Law is made that is, to deter from such crimes, or to condemn for them, but not to terrify such who either never were guilty of such flagitious crimes; but if they have been guilty, yet are now washed and sanctified, and justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of God, as the Apostle speaks, Cor. 6. 10, 11. The Law (as the Apostle here faith) was never made to terrify, or to condemn, and affirm them, for Rom. 8. 1. There is no condemnation to those that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit.

11 According to the glorious gospel of * the blessed God * which was committed to my trust. * chap. 6. 19. 1 Thim. 4.

Here the Apostle specifies the found Doctrine of which he speaks: that 'tis contained in the Gospel the pericure rule of right conduct which he files the glorious Gospel of the blessed God being a Doctrine revealed from Heaven, wherein the concurrence and command of the Divine Attributes, Wisdom, Power, Mercy, and Justice doth most clearly shine to the Glory of God, 2. Cor. 4. 6. Eph. 1. 6, 12. and gives the Title of blest to God, thereby to signify his transcendent goodness, in that being infinitely happy in the possession of his own excellencies, without any possible advantage and profit from any Creature, yet he was pleased to give his Son to be our ransom, and with him Grace and Glory yours. The Apostle adds which was committed to me, to distinguish it from the false Doctrine which seducers publish under the name of the Gospel.

12 And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, putting me into the Ministry.

Here St. Paul expresses his most humble and solemn thanks to Christ for his rich favour in calling him to the High Office of an Apostle: for by the Ministry, that is to be understood, and 'tis called by way of excellence, it being the most glorious and Divine Ministry that ever was established in the Church: and he ascribes to our Saviour the praise of all that he performed in the faithful discharge of it. He faith, Christ enabled me, that is, endowed him with Fidelity, Zeal, Courage, and all other qualifications requisite for that honourable and difficult Ministry, 2. Cor. 3. 5, 6. The end of that Sacred Ministry was to enlighten and reform the World from superstition, and from error, and to convert men to the true God, to please to convert men, to abolish those corrupt customs that had taken such deep root, and to plant the truth that comes from above, and to publish a holy Law to oppose to corrupt nature. This work was opposed by craft and cruelty, the artifice and violence of the powers of darkness in conjunction with the perverted World. And the Glory of the Apostles resisting such Enemies is entirely due to Christ. He adds as a motive of his thankfulness, that Jesus Christ counted him faithful, which is an evident proof that he intends that he made him faithful. His faithfulness was the cause or motive, but the fruit and effect of the Grace of God in calling him to the Ministry. This he expressly declares 1. Cor. 7. 25. Having obtained mercy to be faithful. If our Saviour had only discovered his fidelity, without bestowing that Grace upon him, there had not been a reason of such affectionate thanksgiving: for that always supposes some favour and benefit received.

14 And the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant x, with faith, and love which is in Christ Jesus y.

z The free love of God towards me, in justifying faith a guilty creature, and sanctifying faith an unholv creature, and after calling me to the office of an Apostle, fitting me for it, and trusting me with that great work and employment, abounded beyond all measure and possibility of Expression. I was made a Son of God, and a Son of Man, and to love him whom I loved, and to love him whom I ought to do much against; and his Disciples whom I formerly hated to Death, of whom I made havock, perfecting them to death. He mentions Faith and Love, the two principal Graces, in opposition to the reigning sins in his unconverted flave : Faith in the Doctrine of the Gospel, in opposition to his former Ignorance and Infidelity; and Love in opposition to his former Hatred, and his former Rage and Cruelty towards Believers, in the opposite Graces were from Christ the Son of his Mother, and Holy Spirit.

15 This a is faithful saying z, and worthy of all acceptation a, * that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners b, of whom I am chief c.

So the following saying, which is the great Propitiation of the Gospel is a saying that is in itself true, and wherein God hath declared his truth. A saying that is accepted. That Jesus Christ being sent of the Father, in the fulness of time, was incarnate, lived and died in our world; not only to fit sinners an Example, but to be a life, the only way to make God pleased with us, and to obtain Salvation for sinners, justifying Divine Justice, and Meriting all grace necessary to bring them to Salvation, to carry the lost Sheep home upon his Shoulders. Yes, though they had been great wanderers, disparaging themselves, and their former sin of Perfection before his Eyes. Persecutors are forgiven the chief of sinners. Some will have the relative of sinners to refer to the sinners mentioned. Of which sinners I have not said all have lived and yet received mercy. I have said some b The Apostle falleth out of this discourse with a Doxology or Sentence giving glory to God whom he calls the King, that is the moderator and Governour of all things. i. Eternal, without beginning of dayes, or end of Life. k. Immortal, not subject to Creatures, to any Passion, or determination of Being. l. Invisible, not obvious to our senses, whom no mortal eye ever saw. m. Only wise. Primatively and originally, and eminently from whom all Wisdom is derived. n Be Given all praises, homage and acknowledgments, by which he can be made glorious for ever.

18 This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy q, according to the prophecies which were before on thee p, that thou by them mightest r war a good warfare q.

¶ The term Son here applied to Timothy whom he elsewhere calls his Evangelist, is not term of Natural Relation, but of spiritual Relation, and of affectionate friendship and endearment. By the charge mentioned he probably means that before mentioned, viz. to charge the false Teachers to teach so the Doctrine, not to lead to Fables, &c. These prophets were either the judges of good men before becoming themselves him, or (which possibility is more probable) some Divine Revelations, John, Paul, or some Believers had received concerning the young man. ¶ That thou having heard of them, or remembrance bring them (though thou meetest with opposition as a Minister, and as a Christian yet) mightest not be discouraged, but Preach and hold the Faith, against all opposers. So the Apostle expondeth himself.

19 * Holding faith r ; and a good confidence s, which some having put away t, concerning faith, have made shipwreck u.

Of which men who have made shipwreck of a good conscience and concerning Titus and Alexander are the persons. Of Hymeneus we read 2 Tim. 1:16, he affirmed his reformation was real, and overtook the faith of many. Alexander was paid, 2 Tim. 4:14, he was a great enemy to the faith, a false prophet, a false judge, mentioned Acts 19:35, a fierce person, but afterwards one who did him much good. We notice with the same phrase, 1 Cor. 5: 5. See it noted there. Some think by it is signified a peculiar power granted the Apostles. God in those primitive times continued regular excommunications, by letting Satan loose upon persons uncommunicated to torture them, but we find nothing of it in Scripture. I rather think the fence is no more than what uncommunicated and cast out of the Church, making them the world again, (as the world is opposed to the Church, a Kingdom of Christ) with the greater reason the Apostle expressly by this Notion of being delivered to Satan who is called the God of this world, &c. nor that I might ruin, and un them, but that I might amend them by this exercise discipline, teaching them to take heed of spreading damnable and pernicious Errors to the reproach of God. Or perhaps with their perverse opinions (which is very ordinary) the mingled reproachful speeches concerning God.

CHAP. II.

1 ¶ Exhort therefore, that first of all, supplications a, prayers b, intercessions c, and giving of thanks be made for all men d:

a Twice (as was said before) was left at Apheia to manage the affairs of the Church there in the absence of Paul, who in this Epistle directs him as to this management. First he exhorts him to take that Prayers should be made for all men. Prayers supplications for supply of wants. b Prayers supplicatio, in which much time is; some will have it to signify petition for the conservation of the Church, and the good things we have. c Intercessio, Intercessions, Prayers for others, whether for vice or for evils from them, or the collection of good things upon them. d And blessings of God for good things bestowed upon our selves, or others: These Paul wills should be made. Pro quibus which may be of all men, or for all men, but the next verse plainly shows that it is here rightly rendered for all men, for there were at this time no Kings in the Church. Prayers should be offered for all men, and in the Ministry in the Church of God, and a primary piece; therefore he exhorts that he exhort that Filling of all. Not in respect of time so much as principally, Imitating a great piece of the publick Ministry which he would by no means have neglected. And he would have these prayers put up for all orders and sorts of men (such only excepted of whom St. John speaks, 1 John. 5. 16. who had feared that sin, for which he would not lay Christians down, that sinners.)

2 For kings, and for all that are in || authority e; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all godliness and honesty f.

¶ The Kings of the Earth at this time were all Heathens, and enemies to the Christian Religion, so (generally) were those who were in a subordinate authority to them, yet the A-poc-
 110 lie commands that prayers should be made in the Christian 111 Kingdom for the Conversion of the Heathen. Forasmuch as 112 was to be, is not expressed, but doubtless not to be limited by 113 the next words, that were not to have prayed for them but 114 for themselves. Prayers for Magistrates ought to be directed by 115 their circumstances. If Magistrates were idolaters and per- 116 secutors they were to pray for their Conversion, and the health 117 of their hearts. However they were to pray for their life and 118 health so far forth as might be for Gods glory and for Gods ga-119 119 dence in them in the administration of their Government; and 120 their success in their wars, and in their undertakings, &c.
 121 ¶ The other words that we may live a long and happy life 122 goldens and bestly, contains the reason why prayers should be 123 made for Governours and good effect of them. For tis for this 124 end that the supreme Lord hath ordained the office and dignity 125 of Kings and Governours, that they might be the Authority and 126 Power they may preferre Publick Justice, and punish punish-127 ing evil-doers, and proceeding and encouraging those that do 128 well. Thus under the old Testament the first were commanded 129 to pray for the peace of the Nation, or City which they 130 should be carried Captives, for in their peace they should have 131 peace, &c. &c.

3 For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour g.

g To pray for all, as well our Enemies as our Friends, especially for Princes, and such as are in places of Magistracy and Authority, is good, being according to the Will, and Commandment of God, who loveth peace, and desireth that all men should be subject to the Will are. The word Saviour may either be understood with reference to the Divine Being, God being our Prifrer, who maketh his Son to flue, and his min to fall upon the juft and unjuft; which Met. 5. 45. our Saviour brings as an argument to enforce his precept, that we fhould love our Enemies. A fecond reference to Chrift, to whom the title of Saviour with reference to Eternal Salvation more fitly belongs; who alfo by his death, when we were enemies, reconciled us to God: to fo that fuch a charitable office muft be acceptable to God, becaufe it is the way both for our Salvation, and the fatisfaction of our heavenly Father, and alfo the folloiver of Chrift.

4 * Who will have all men to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of the truth b.

b The Apostle produces a clear convincing reason, that the duty of Charity in praying for all men, is pleasing to God, from his love extended to all. In his willing their Salvation, and their knowledge and belief of the Gospel, which is the only way of Salvation. From hence our Saviours Commission and Command to the Apostles was universal, Go and teach all Nations, Mar. 28. 19. preach the Gospel to every creature, that is, to every man. Mark 16.

This our Saviour has done for us. The Scripture discovers to us, that by nature we are the children of Wrath, and guilty of many rebellions ins, and devoted to Eternal Death, being in this deplorable state, the Son of God, moved by his Divine Love undertook our suffering to free us from God's curse, and to deliver us from punishment due to our sins, and gave his most precious blood and life the price of our Redemption. Mat. 20.28. If he be objected, how it is consistent with Christ giving himself a ransom for all that so many perish in their sins : The answer is clear, we must distinguish between the sufficiency of his ransom, and the efficacy of it : he paid a ransom worthy to obtain the Salvation of all men, and has done whatever was requisite to reconcile God, and

Paul was a Prisoner at Rome when he wrote this, he would not have Timothy allowed to own him, and the Doctrine he had taught because of that circumstance. *Th*at is, be thou confident if God calls thee to it to take a share with me in those afflictions which I suffer for preaching and professing the Gospel, or those afflictions are inseparable from the Gospel. *Th*rough the power of God, for it is given to us on the behalf of Christ, as to believe, so to suffer for Christ's sake, Phil. 1. 29.

g Who hath saved m, and called us with an holy calling, a, not according to our works b, but a according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus d before the world began e.

g That is, brought us into a state of Salvation, and given us a right to it. a And in order to our obtaining it hath effectually called, renewed, and sanctified us. b Not for any merits of ours. c But from his own free love purposing and decreeing eternal Salvation to us, with the means adequate to it. d To be obtained through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ. Which purpose of his was before the foundation of the world was laid, and therefore could not be according to our works but must be of his own grace, Eph. 1. 4. *Th*is g.

10 But a is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ f, who hath abolished death g, and hath brought life, and immortality to light through the Gospel h.

g Which purpose of God in Christ Jesus, was in a great measure hidden under the Old Testament, but by the coming of Christ is made evident. For by his death he hath taken away the sting, and power of Death, delivering us from that which is the second Death. h And through the Doctrine of the Gospel he hath made the promises of Eternal Life plain and clear, which though existent under the Law, yet were very obscurely revealed, so as they lay out of the sight of most men and women, but are now brought to light, so as he who runneth may read them.

11 Whereunto I am appointed a preacher a, and an Apostle b, and a teacher of the Gentiles c.

g For the publication of which gracious counsel and purpose of God thus made manifest by Christ's coming, and of that Life and Immortality, thus by the Gospel brought to light; God hath appointed me as his evangelist, and sent me into the world as his Messenger to make publication of it, and hath made the instructing of the Heathen my peculiar Province, 1 Tim. 2. 7.

12 For a the which cause I also suffer these things m, nevertheless I am not ashamed n; for I know whom I have believed o, and I am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day p.

g For the preaching and publishing of which Gospel, or for the teaching of the Gentiles, I suffer these things, being accused by the Jews as a sedition person stirring up the people, and by them delivered to the Roman, and by them imprisoned. o Yet I am not ashamed of my chains. o I have committed my self to God, p and I am out of doubt concerning God's ability to keep until the day of judgment my soul, or my whole concern both for this Life and another, which I have by Faith committed to him: Some h say that I have committed unto him, in this Text understand the Church or Body of Believers, others understand the fruit and reward of his labours and sufferings. Mr. Calvin would have Life Eternal here meant, our Eternal Salvation is in Christ's keeping. I rather incline to the first notion, for it agrees with 1 Pet. 1. 9. God commits his Gospel to our Trust, who are Ministers. 1 Tim. 6. 20. we according to the phrase of Scripture are said to commit our souls to him, Luke. 22. 45. Al 1 Pet. 5. 9. I am, faith Paul concerned as to my sufferings, I have intrusted God with all my concerns in order to this Life, and that which is to come, and I know he is able to secure them.

13 Hold fast the form of sound words which thou hast heard of me g in faith h, and love, which is in Christ Jesus i.

g By sound words which he had heard from Paul, can be meant nothing but the Doctrine of the Gospel, which as it is self pure, and consistent with itself, not rotten; one piece of which will not hold with the other, so it tends to make Souls sound, as to their Spiritual health, this Doctrine Timothy had been instructed in by Paul, whether he had given him a written form of them or no, is much more material, for this (if he did) was not that which he would have him hold fast, but to keep the Life, or pattern of that Doctrine in his mind written in his heart, making his discourses conform to it. h The form of which form of sound words, he declareth to be Faith and Love, for all that the Gospel teacheth, is either believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, or keeping his Commandments, which is the demonstration of Love, John. 14. 15: or else the sense may be this, keep thy self found in the principles of Religion, which thou hast learned of me. h But do not think this enough without exercising a Faith in Christ as thy Redeemer, and living in obedience to his Commandments. Many an Orthodox man may go to Hell, notwithstanding his Orthodoxy.

14 That good thing which was committed to thee a, keep by the holy Ghost which dwelleth in us b.

g This is expounded by 1 Tim. 6. 20. he means the Doctrine of the Gospel, or his Office in the publication of it, he faithful in thy ministerial work: c To which purpose be the assistance and operation of the Holy Spirit, which dwelleth both in all believers, and more particularly afflicts the Ministers of the Gospel; we can neither keep our minds found in the Faith, as to the Doctrine of it, nor our Souls steady in the exercises of Faith, or Love without the assistance of the Holy Spirit, which yet the Lord giveth to them that ask him, and it abides in them, who do not vex, quarrel, grieve, or resist it.

15 This thou knowest a that a all they which are in Asia be turned away from me m, of whom are Phyllogus and Hermogenes n.

g Probably as to some he had a personal knowledge of their Apostasy, as to others he knew by information, which Paul confirmeth. m It seemeth unreasonable to interpret all here of every individual, but may (as all of significance in Holy Writ) interpret it of all the Jewish Profiteers, others of those of Asia, who accompanied Paul and there seeing his sufferings Apostatized, others of many who still abide in Asia, where Timothy now was; these all, or many of them, deserted Paul, either wholly casting off the Christian profession, or withdrawing themselves from communion with Paul, when they saw him a Prisoner. n Of these two we have no more said in Holy Writ, and therefore can assert nothing of them with any certainty.

16 The Lord gave mercy unto the house of Onesiphorus a, for he oft refreshed me p, and was not ashamed of my chain q.

g Whether Onesiphorus was at this time alive, or no, is very doubtful, for he only prays for his Family in this Text, and saithest them only, chap. 4. 19. p Either when he was in Asia, or (which is more probable by reason of what followeth) at Rome, whether he might attend him, or follow him, q and show kindness to him when he was a Prisoner; for which Paul prayeth mercy for his whole Family.

17 But when he was in Rome r, he sought me out very diligently, and found me s.

g Whether he might go upon his private occasions, and being there, he made it his business to find out Paul, and relied not until he had found him, either at his Inn, or in the Prison where he was put.

18 The Lord grant unto him that he may find mercy of the Lord in that day t: And in how many things he ministered unto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well u.

g This would incline us to think that Onesiphorus was yet alive; the term mercy he here prays that he may find of the Lord is comprehensive of all good, both Corporal, and Spiritual, which he prays God the Father to grant to this good man, to find from the Lord Jesus Christ in that day, when he shall come to judge the Quick and the Dead; for he had not only ministered to the Apostle while he was a Prisoner at Rome, but many ways at Ephesus (where probably this Onesiphorus resided) which Timothy being there well knew.

C H A P. II.

1 *Th*ou therefore my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus a.

g The sense is, either shew thy self a stout and valiant man, not being abashed at the dangers that threaten thee in the publishing, and defence of the Gospel, which brings the judgments of the Grace of Jesus Christ: Or be thou strong through the gracious influence of Christ Jesus, without which thou canst do nothing.

2 And the things that thou hast heard of me b amongst many witnesses c, be the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also d.

g The Doctrine of the Gospel which thou hast heard of me, confirmed by the testimony of many of the Prophets of old, or which thou hearst from me committed to thy truth, there being many witnesses present, when thou wert ordained, or set apart to thy Office. e Commit unto others that shall be set apart for the Ministry, but let them be such as have an ability to communicate their knowledge to others, and such as thou shalt judge will be faithful to their trust.

3 *Th*ou therefore endure hardness a, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ b.

g In the Grail it is fuller evils, h evils of affliction exceed them, and encounter and patiently endure them. a Remembering that the Life of a Minister is not a life of ease and pleasure, but the life of a Soldier, whose Life is a Life of hardship, exposed to numberless hazards and dangers.

4 No man that warreth, intangleth himself with the affairs of this life a, that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier b.

g Having told Timothy that his Life was to be the Life of a Soldier, in which he would be exposed to many difficulties, dangers, and hazards, he here mindeth him of the Law, and Custom of Soldiers, who being once enrolled in the Muster-roll, use to sever themselves from other employments in Trading, Husbandry, or the like. a That thereby they might be at the command of their General, or Captain, to be called out upon what service he pleaseth: So he who is a Minister of the Gospel ought not voluntarily, and of choice engage himself in secular employments, but give up himself wholly to the ministerial work: b that he might please the Lord Jesus Christ who hath chosen him to be his Soldier.

5 And a if a man also strive for masteries b, yet is he not crowned c, except he strive lawfully d.

g And look as it is in the public games in use amongst you, where divers strive by wrestling, fighting, racing, where there is a Crown proposed as the prize for those who are the Conquerors in the Game: a They have not that Crown set upon their heads; b unless they keep to the Laws of that game, or Contests, there is a far greater reward, even a Crown of Glory, proposed for such as overcome, but none shall have it, unless those who keep to the Laws which God hath made for those who exercise themselves in that Spiritual Combat.

6 The husbandman that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits a.

g As the Apostle before had compared the Minister of the Gospel to a Soldier, and thence concluded his Duty, not to intangle himself unnecessarily in secular employments; and to those that exercised themselves in their public games, and from thence concluded the obligation upon him to keep to the Divine rule in the management of his Office, and of himself under the opposition he should meet with: So here he compares him to a Husbandman, (as Christ himself had done, Matth. 13. 1. &c.) to intend him of his duty, First to look to save his own soul, then the souls of others, or of his advantage, it being the privilege of an Husbandman, being the proprietor of the Fruits (if he will) first to eat thereof, thereby intimating the privilege of those who turn many to give reward. Deut. 12.

7 Consider what I say m, and the Lord give thee understanding in all things n.

g Weigh these things with thy self in thy own thoughts. n But thou wilt not effectually understand them without a Divine influence opening thy mind to a comprehension of them, and they heart to a reception of all these things, and all other things which it is reasonable for thee to know, and understand.

8 Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David a was raised from the dead b according to my Gospel c.

g The Apostle passeth from his former Discourse, wherein he had armed Timothy against the afflictions of the Gospel, to a Discourse about the Doctrine of the Gospel, and here mentioneth two principal heads of that Doctrine. The Incarnation of Christ and his Resurrection, which he instanteth in, as more particularly to be remembered and pressed upon Christians in regard they were those two points of the Gospel which were either at that time denied, as that of the Incarnation was by the Jews, or he knew would first be opposed, and the latter that, which declared Christ to be the Son of God with power, Rom. 1. 4. and upon a faith in which Christians Salvation, and Condemnation much depended, Rom. 4. 25. and 8. 34. he therefore calls to him especially to remember that Jesus Christ was the first of David, truly man, and the true Messiah who was to be the first of David (as the Jews themselves confessed) the Manhood of Christ soon after the Apostles times, was denied by the Marcellites and Manichees, &c. p And that he was raised from the dead, delivered Timothy from remembrance, both because upon that depended the great evidence of Christ's Divine Nature, and the Salvation and Condemnation of Believers. q This he faith was futable to the Doctrine of the Gospel which he had preached to them; he recalls it to his Gospel, because committed to his trust to publish, Ro. 2. 16. and 16. 25. which he expoundeth, Gal. 1. 11. the Gospel preached by me; he speaketh in the Plural Number, 1 Thess. 1. 5. 2 Thess. 2. 14. declaring that the Gospel was no more his, than others also who were Ministers of it.

9 Wherein I suffer trouble, as an evil doer, a even unto bonds b; but the word of God is not bound c.

g That is, for which I suffer affliction, as if I were an evil doer to that degree that I am put in chains. b but yet I preach the Gospel, or the Gospel is preached, though they have restrained me, they are not able to restrain that.

10 Therefore a I endure all things b, for that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory c.

g That is all things which I do endure, reproach, imprisonment, &c. for he had not yet recited to blood. a As for Christ's Life to imitate his example, and testify my love to him; for the sake of those whom God hath chosen to Eternal Life, that they seeing my patience and constancy may be confirmed in the Faith of the Gospel, and by that means may obtain Eternal Life, Salvation, with Eternal Glory which is to be had in Christ.

11 It is a faithful saying a, For if we b be dead with Christ c, we shall also live with him d.

g See the force of 1 Tim. 1. 10. and 4. 9. where we had the same phrase. a We are said to be dead with Christ two ways, By our dying to sin, as he died for sin, Rom. 6. 5. b By our suffering in testimony of the truth, 1 Cor. 4. 10. which is that being dead with him, which is here mentioned. c There is a twofold living with him, by a rising again to a newness of Life, Rom. 6. 4. and hereafter in Glory, which latter is here intended.

12 If we suffer, we shall also reign with him a; if we deny him, we will also deny him b.

g That is, If we suffer for his Name's sake for a constant owning, and adherence to his Doctrine of Faith, or discharge of any truth he hath revealed to us, we shall reign with him in Glory; b but if we upon pretexts of danger deny his truth, or desert the profession of him, he in the day of judgment will not own us before his Father, and the holy Angels, Matth. 10. 33. Mar. 8. 38. Rom. 8. 17.

13 If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful a; he cannot deny himself b.

g Whether we believe, or believe not, or whether we be faithful to our truth, or be not, yet God will be himself faithful, either to his promises made to them who do believe, or to his threatnings denounced against those that believe not. d For it is impossible that he who is truth is self should be otherwise, that were for him to deny himself.

14 Of these things put them in remembrance a, charging them before the Lord b, sa that they c strive not about words d, so no profit e, but to the subverting of the hearers f.

g That is, put their Teachers in remembrance of all these things which I have given thee in charge. f Charging them, as in the sight of God, who most certainly observeth and taketh notice of them, and will call them to an account. g That they spend not their time in their Pulpits in contentions about things which tend to no solid advantage of their hearers. h But may tend to the subversion of them, and the destroying their steadiness in the Faith, drawing them into Parties and Factions, the fruit of which is nothing but envy, and contentions, and different opinions in matters of Faith as to which it hath been always observed, that the affliction of new phrases hath been introductive, of a novelty in opinion.

15 Study to shew thy self approved unto God a, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed b, rightly dividing the word of truth c.

g Let it be thy study, not to please men, to get their human and applause for speaking quickly, learnedly, or smoothly, but to approve thy self to God, who is thy Master in this work, and who thou oughtest to serve. c A workman that doth his work to well, and faithfully, that he need not be ashamed, whoever looketh and judgeth upon it. d 1 Cor. 13. 8. rightly cutting out, we translate it rightly dividing; it is not material, whether the Metaphor be drawn from the Priests right cutting out their sacrifices, so as all had their shares in them; or from Carpenters cutting out their Timber, cutting off the superfluous, and by a right line dividing the other parts; or from Cooks, or Carvers, or Parents rightly dividing a bit of meat among several Guests, or Children, or from those that use to cut out ways, or from Husbandmen cutting out furrows, &c. e The sense is, rightly handling the word of God, and giving to all their parts, For their notion who would make the sense of it, cutting out a right way for others by thy example, because the word Metaphor, sometimes signifies to cut a right way, it may agree to the Text, for whatever the Verb signifies above, he is mealy skill in the Grail, that knows not it cannot have that sense, being joined, (as here) with his Metaphor, which

g By their dishonourable terms the Apostle denameth all impertinent Discourses in discharge of the ministerial Office, as 1 Tim. 4. he called Falsely Metaphors Metaphors which metaphors, chap. 4. 7, profane, and vain babblings, here he calls them Metaphors, empty, vain, and unprofitable discourses which me at Antioch <sup>1</sup>, at Iconium <sup>2</sup>, at Lystra <sup>3</sup>, what persecutions I endured <sup>4</sup>, but <sup>5</sup> out of them all the Lord delivered me <sup>6</sup>.

where their Tools, nor be beholden to unwritten Traditions, or to the writings of Pagan Philosophers, for directions what to do, how to Worship God, or manage any part of their Conversation, either as to their general callings, or as to their particular Relations.

CHAP. IV.

<sup>1</sup> Charge thee therefore before God <sup>2</sup>, and <sup>3</sup> the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing <sup>4</sup>, and his kingdom <sup>5</sup>.

PHILEMON.

The ARGUMENT.

This Epistle is different from the other Epistles, because it is written upon a particular Subject of more special concernment, that it was wrote by Paul is not doubted, it hath what he calleth his token in every Epistle, 2 Thes. 3. 17. Who this Philemon was, is not so easily determined: Some have judged him a Phrygian, and of Colots, see Col. 4. 9. he appeareth to have been a Minister by Paul's calling him his fellow labourer, ver. 1. his Brother, ver. 7. his Partner, ver. 17. it is conjectured that he was one in the conversion of God made use of Paul as an instrument from ver. 19, where Paul tells him, that he would not say that he owed unto him his own self. He seems to have been a man of some Estate, for he kept a Servant, and refreshed the bowels of the Saints. 7. He had a company of Christians in his house, ver. 2. The time when Paul wrote this Epistle is not certain, it was when he was aged, and a Prisoner, ver. 9. from whence it is evident that it was wrote from Rome; some think it was written before the Second Epistle to Timothy, because ver. 22. he speak of hopes that he had of being restored to his liberty, ver. 22. and in his Epistle to Timothy, 2 Tim. 4. 7. he seems to have no such hopes. He also here ver. 24. sends him the Salutation of Demas, who he saith, 2 Tim. 4. 10. had forsaken him. Others think it was wrote after that, when Demas was again returned to him, (but it is not so clear that he ever returned.) It is very probable that it was wrote much about the same time with the Epistle to the Colossians, for Col. chap. 4. mention is made of Onesimus as a faithful Brother, there is also mention made of Marcus, Aristarchus, Epaphras, Lucas, and Demas, and Archippus, who are all named in this Epistle, and no more are here named, but Apphia. The scope of the Epistle is evident to reconcile Onesimus to Philemon. Onesimus had been a Servant to Philemon, and it should seem had wronged him by purloining some of his goods. He came to Rome, and was there converted by Paul, being a Prisoner, ver. 10. The Apostle would not detain him, being another man's Servant, but sends him back with this recommendatory letter to his Master. This recommendation was the occasion, and it is the matter of this Epistle. In the penning of which the Apostle sheweth himself as much an Orator, as he had in his Epistle to the Romans, and some other of his Epistles sheweth his skill as an Argument, for the Epistle is pen'd with great art, and many Topics are used to persuade Philemon again to receive him into his service, some such, as would incline one to think, that Paul knew this Philemon was something covetous, and would be a little difficult to grant his request.

* Eph. 4. 1. 1 Paul, * a prisoner of Jesus Christ 4, and
 2 Tim. 1. 8. Timothy our brother b, unto Philemon our dearly beloved, and fellow labourer c.

a That is, for the sake of Christ, for the Gospel, and for preaching of Jesus Christ; b from whence it is evident that Timothy was come to Paul at Rome, according to his desire, 2 Tim. 4. 9. 22. before this Epistle was wrote, which manifesteth that Second Epistle to have been the last he wrote; the Apostle useth to join some others with himself in his Salutation, Sylvanus 1 Cor. 1. 1. Timothy 2 Cor. 1. 1. Phil. 1. 1. Col. 4. 10. (where Sylvanus also is added) from whence it appeareth that Timothy was Paul's ordinary Companion, and the Apostle sheweth his Humility in joining the name of so young a man with his own; c whence we gather that Philemon was not a Christian only, but a Minister, probably one of the Ministers in Colide in Phlegia, for it appeareth Col. 4. 9. that Onesimus his Servant was a Colossian.

* Phil. 2. 25. 2 And to our beloved Apphia d, and Archippus e, * our fellow-souldier f, and to the church in thy house g.

d Apphia was the Roman Name of a Woman, the naming of her before Archippus (a Minister) makes it probable the wife was Philemon's. e It appears this Archippus was a Minister from Col. 4. 17. f He calleth him his fellow-Souldier, because he was engaged in some of those many dangers Paul incurred, but we are not told in Scripture which. g All those Christians that live in thy Family, we have the like expression, Rom. 16. 5. 1 Cor. 16. 19. Col. 4. 15. the Apostle doth not always by the term Church signify a body under Ecclesiastical Discipline, but sometimes call a Company of Christians ordinarily conversing together by that Name: Those who think the body of the Church were wont constantly to meet in Philemon's House, seem too to consider how the dangers of those times made such a thing hardly practicable.

3 Grace unto you, and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ h.

5 * Hearing

5 * Hearing of thy love k and faith l, which thou hast towards the Lord Jesus m, and toward all Faith n.

k Thy love to God and to the Saints, ver. 7. the Apostle putteth Love here before Faith, contrary to the true order of the Christian habits, for Love must be the Fruit of Faith which worketh by love, and to his own order in other places, 1 Tim. 2. 2. Tit. 1. 13. possibly to shew us that he spoke of the Love, which is conjoined with Faith, and of that Faith, which is true Faith by Love. l Faith in Christ. m That Faith which thou hast in Christ, reposing thy confidence in him for Salvation, and that Love which worketh in thee towards Christ and is seen in thy readiness to go good to all Christians, both especially as are Saints indeed, because thy goodness extendeth not to God, thou shewest it to the Saints that are in the Earth, and to the excellent like David, Psal. 136. 3.

6 That the communication of thy faith o, may become effectual p, by the acknowledging of every good thing which is in you in Christ Jesus q.

o The word sometimes, signifieth communion, in all which there is a mutual communication betwixt those with whom the communion is. That thou mayest declare that thou hast the same common Faith with us, thou communicatest the fruits of it. p And shewest that it is not a dead inoperative Faith, but the true Faith of Gods Eldst, Titus 1. 1. working by Love, Gal. 5. 6. and shewing it self by good works, Jam. 2. 18. q That every good thing, every good habit of Grace which Jesus Christ hath wrought in thy Soul might be acknowledged by others (the Servants of Christ) to whom thou declarest thy Love and Goodness.

7 For we have great joy, and consolation in thy love r, because the bowels of the faints are refreshed by thee, brother f.

r Thy Love doth not extend only to the poor distressed Saints helped, and relieved by thee, but it hath its effect upon others together with my self; it is a wonderful joy and comfort to us to hear, that God hath so opened and enlarged thy heart, the fruit of Grace in one, are a true cause of joy, and thanksgiving to all Christians, because God by them is glorified. f The Saints, or the bowels of the Saints, anymus, are brought to a rest, as travellers after their journey, or labourers after their dayes labour, when they come to sit still.

8 Wherefore, * though I might be much bold in Christ r, to injoy thee u, that which is convenient v.

u In the Greek it is therefore having much authority, boldness, liberty or freedom of speech, or much power and authority or right as Heb. 10. 19. for Christs sake, being Christs Apostle, or speaking for the sake of Christ. v To command thee, authoritatively. w To shew, things that are expedient, or convenient fit for thee to do. My office authorizeth me in such cases.

9 Yet for loves sake x I rather beseech thee, being such a one as Paul the aged y, and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ z.

x Writing to thee in a cause of Love, where so good, and charitable a man may have an opportunity to express his charity. Or rather, out of my Love and Kindness to thee, persuading me that I need not use my Apostolical authority to such a brother, and friend I beseech thee y being such a one as Paul now much in years, and not like to trouble thee long with any request. Or Paul the Elder by office, one who is thy brother in the Ministry x And now a Prisoner for Christs sake, and so cannot personally speak to thee, and I know such is thy piety, that my being a sufferer for the sake of Christ, will not render my petition to thee less acceptable or to be regarded less.

10 I beseech thee for my son Onesimus d, * whom I have begotten in my bonds b.

d Onesimus lately thy servant (the same mentioned Col. 4. 9.) but my Son. b Not naturally, but spiritually, to whom I have been a spiritual Father, and begotten him to Christ in my old age, and while I have been suffering as a Prisoner.

11 Which in time past was to thee unprofitable e: but now profitable to thee and me d.

e Aggravator, he useth a soft word, for it appears ver. 18. he had wronged him; taking away some of his Goods, and running away with them, without Philemon's knowledge, while he him doubly criminal. d But now Aggravator, profitable, one who may be profitable to thee having learned Christ, and to me, who have used him in my service, and whose conversion will add to my crown.

12 Whom I have sent again e: thou therefore receive him f, that is my own bowels g.

e He comes not of his own head, but upon my persuasion, and upon my errand f, therefore I desire that thou receive him him doubly criminal. d But now Aggravator, profitable, one who may be profitable to thee having learned Christ, and to me, who have used him in my service, and whose conversion will add to my crown.

13 Whom I would have retained with me, that in thy stead, he might have ministered unto me in the bonds of the gospel h.

h I have such an opinion of his sincerity, that I would willingly have kept him with me that he might while I am a Prisoner, for the Gospel of Christ, have done those offices for me, which thou wouldst have done, hadst thou been here.

14 But without thy mind I would do nothing i, * that thy benefit should not be as it * 2 Cor. 9. 7. were of necessity but willingly j.

i But he was thy servant, and I would not do it without thy knowledge, and consent, that it might not be thought that thou hadst done me a kindness necessarily, but that thou mightest do it freely, which seems to argue that St. Paul expected, that he freely reconciled to Onesimus should send him back to Paul: unless he makes the benefit due to Onesimus, in not revenging the wrong he had done him, should not be of benefit because he was out of his reach, but freely having him first in his power.

15 For perhaps he therefore departed for a season, that thou shouldst receive him for ever l.

l Onesimus in departing designed no such thing, but possibly God in the wisdom of his Providence suffered him to depart from thee, and to fall into this state, that he might upon that occasion come to a quicker sense, and conviction of sin, and see a need of a Saviour and being turned from sin unto God, and embracing Christ our common Saviour, thou mightest receive, love, and embrace him adversus, for ever, this ever, in this life, that is, so long as you both should live.

16 Not now as a servant m, but above a servant n, a brother beloved o, specially to me p, but how much more unto thee, both in the flesh, and in the Lord q.

m Not now merely as a Servant. n But as the deserveth much more kindness than a Servant. o Being a Christian deservedly to be loved. p Especially of me who have a spiritual relation to him, as the instrument of his conversion, and as he hath been useful in ministering to me in Prison. q But how much more to thee to whom he stands not only in the relation of a Brother, being converted to the Christian Faith, but is the Phlegia, or the Kinman, or thy Servant, or one of thy Family, or thy Country man, one of the same Town and Place.

17 If thou count me therefore a partner r, receive him as my self f.

r Partner, one with whom thou hast communion, a partner in the same Grace of the Gospel, and in the same trials and afflictions of the Gospel. f Do not only forgive him, but kindly entertain him, who is my friend, as thou wouldst do my self.

18 If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought s, put that on my account t.

d This would incline one to think that this Epistle was written, before the second Epistle to Timothy; for there chap. 4. 5, 7, 8. he seems to have other apprehensions: yet it is plain Timothy was with Paul, when he wrote this, which he was not when that second Epistle was written, as appears from chap. 4. 9, 21. ## The ARGUMENT.

SOME few Greek Copies not having the Name of the Apostle PAUL prefixed to this EPISTLE, the most of them have, hath made many doubt concerning the Writer of it, as others, especially Hereticks, of its Authority. The Conjectures of those who ascribe it to Barnabas, Luke, or Clemens, &c. seem groundless; since the Character the Holy Ghost gives of its Pen-Man, and his state in chap. 10. 34. and chap. 13. 19, 23. is not agreeable to any of them. This is most certain, that the Apostle Paul did write such an Epistle; that it was well known to the dispersed Churches of Christ then; that it was abused by Men of corrupt Minds, as it is at this day, since the Spirit gives us undeniable Testimony of it in 2 Pet. 3. 15, 16. That this Epistle should be it (when it is so like the rest of his Writings, when it is so strongly confirming the Truth the Apostle Peter had written to them, chap. 6. 2. and 10. 26, 27. when it is so expressive of his condition in Bonds, chap. 10. 34. and 13. 19. Coloss. 4. 18. of his known Companion Timothy, chap. 13. 23. Coloss. 1. 1. of his Love to, and Concern for those to whom he writes, Rom. 9. 1. 2. 3. and 10. 1. and of his known Doctrine, that Judaism had its completion in Christianity; that the Veil was rent asunder, that they might discern the Temple or Church to be laid open to Gentiles as well as Jews, as at Antioch, Galatia, &c. he taught them. Besides, that it hath the signal by which he declareth all his Epistles are to be known, chap. 13. 25. compare 2 Thess. 3. 17, 18. and the general consent of the Church through the successive Ages of it, entitling of him to it.) I say, that this Epistle should be it, seems not difficult to determine. It is conjectured that the reason why he prefixed not his Name to it, as to the rest of his Epistles, was, lest the great prejudice the Jews had causlessly taken up against him, as an Enemy to the Mosaic Law, would prevent their reading or weighing of it as they ought. It is ascribed by him to the dispersed Tribes of believing Israel, under the name of HEBREWS, being the common one of all the Posterity of Heber by Abraham, both which Patriarchs were great Separatists from the Idolatrous World in their respective Ages, and in whose Families the Church of God was continued; a Name grateful to them; because the Lord honoured it by adding it to his Title, Exod. 3. 18. and ascribed to their Progenitor, Gen. 4. 13. of a natural descent from whom they were most fond, John 8. 33. 2 Cor. 11. 22. And the Apostle Peter confirmeth these to be the Persons, 1 Pet. 1. 1, 2. compare 2 Pet. 1. 1. and 3. 15. Written thus was in the Greek Language, as his other Epistles, it being then the most diffusive Dialect in the World, and especially the common one of these Hebrews, Acts 6. 1. as Josephus himself testifies; tho the Greek Idioms themselves, and the Translation of other Words in the Epistle shew it abundantly. For the Time of his Writing it to them, most likely it was after his appearing before the Emperor Nero at Rome, 2 Tim. 4. 16, 17. during his Liberty, Acts 28. 30. Upon Timothy's dismission to them, chap. 13. 23. and before the first of the Ten Bloody Persecutions, chap. 12. 4. about the same Year wherein he dispatched other of his Epistles to the Churches.

The design of the Apostle in this Epistle is fully to discover to the Believing Hebrews, that they had not lost by renouncing Judaism, and turning Christians; since the whole Oeconomy of Moses was designed but to lead them to the Lord Jesus Christ, and to be perfected in him; he being the Truth and Substance of all those Shadows. To confirm them in the Faith of this, and to encourage them more cheerfully to undergo those cruel Persecutions, in loss of Goods, Liberty, Relations, Estates, Country, and Life it self, which their Enemy would pursue them with for it; he sheweth them, that it was never God's purpose to have the Earthly Mosaic Church-frame to continue in the World; it being weak and insufficient for Priesthood, Sacrifice, Ordinances, Ceremonies, to purge their Conscience, and to bring them into God, but to be a Type of, and a guide to a better, which he did resolve to pitch by his own Son, even that Heavenly one, in which both Jew and Gentile should acquiesce, and which should continue immovable to the end of the World. In handling which he instructs them, first, in the transcendent excellency of his Person and Office. In respect of his Deity, chap. 1. Of his Humanity exceeding Angels, chap. 2. As a Prophet exceeding Moses, ch. 3. ver. 1. to chap. 4. 14. As a Priest exceeding Aaron, chap. 4. v. 14. to chap. 5. 10. As a King and Priest exceeding Melchisedeck, chap. 5. 10. to chap. 7. 28. Secondly, He instructs them in the Doctrine of the Heavenly Church-frame pitched by him, with its appurtenances, which exceeded the Earthly Mosaic one; In respect of Covenant most excellent, ch. 8. Of Gospel Sacrifice, Ordinances, and Administrations for efficacy, exceeding all the Levitical ones, chap. 9. ver. 1. to chap. 10. ver. 19. where he proceedeth to improve and apply his former Doctrine, that they might answer their high Privileges by the performance of proportionable Duties, becoming this great Gospel-Minister and his Heavenly Church-frame, from chap. 10. ver. 19. to chap. 13. ver. 20. concluding the whole with solemn Prayer to God, for his enabling of them to the performance of these Duties, ver. 20, 21. Adding his desire of their candid acceptance of this Epistle from him. Comforting them with Timothy's dispatch to them, and his own hopes of seeing them: Giving them the Churches usual Salutations, and his own Palediction, whereby he discriminateth and closeth all his Epistles.

4 For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise 7 And God did rest the seventh day from all his works 7

* The Spirit proves that the Ref mentioned by David, Psalm 95 11 is not meant the seventh day Ref, because spoken 3000 years after that Ref was past; but this Ref of which he speaks, was to come, the spoken of, and known then. For Moses had spoken of it in a well-known place to them, Gen. 2 1 2 3 and this when he wrote of the seventh Day, which was eminently noting the Sabbath, and a Type of God's most excellent Ref which he swore unto Believers. 7 God doth not here rest as if he were weary, Job. 40 28 And is not God's Ref spoken in the Plain now promised to make but not from their propagation and his providence about them Acts 17 25 And this he did on the seventh Day which he instituted a Sabbath for his People Gen. 2 3 which resting day may type out the eternal Ref of Angels and Men when their Work of Obedience is finished And was not God's Ref spoken in the Plain now promised in the Gospel to Believers for this was yet to come whereas the seventh Day Ref was entered into from the Foundation of the World.

6 Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein 7 and they to whom it was first preached, entered not in because of unbelief r

7 The Spirit having demonstrated that God's Ref sworn to Believers in the Gospel, and mentioned by David, could not be the seventh Days Ref; proceeds to prove likewise, that it could not be the Ref of Israel in the Land of Canaan since that was entered into 400 years before he wrote by the Spirit of this better Ref, since those unbelieving Israel that entered into Canaan never entered into this Ref. Forasmuch then as a Ref to come is spoken of, and that time Believers must have a real and full possession of the glorious Ref offered to them in the Gospel, as David foretold, see 7 3 10 11 7 The unbelieving Israel who had the glad Tidings of this Ref preached unto them by Moses and by David &c. yet entered not into it, they entered into, and lived in Canaan, because of their Disobedience and Unbelief. Then it follows Canaan's Ref and this can be all one and the latter is only intended David here.

8 Again, he limiteth a certain day, saying in David 7 To-day, after so long a time, as it is said 7 To day if ye have heard his voice harden not your hearts 7

* This is a further Proof, that David did not mean or intend the rest of the Year in Canaan in the 95th Psalm from the determined time of it as it is said the Spirit had said before what I have proved take another Argument Against Arguing by the Prophecy forth out and forever from all other Time a single Day from which the Ref spoken of is clearly and of itself refuted by him Psalm 95 7 8 After God Year's past of Israel's Ref in Canaan which was a long Time David said David Q if it is day Time present then and further to be extended even the Gospel day in David's Time and after it is not in Yehova's for that was past long before 7 Ye ought to day to have received and believe the Gospel of God's Ref and not by Unbelief to turn your Hearts from the Voice of God in the Gospel.

8 For if Jesus had given them rest 7 then would he not afterward have spoken of another day 7

* This is the Improvement of the former Instance, 7 7 Yehova by bringing Israel into Canaan had given rest to all Believers then God would not by David have spoken of another their Day and State of Rest to come Yehova was Acts 7 45 a Type of Jesus bringing Believers into the true Ref of the heavenly Canaan and he did Israel into a literal one If that of Canaan was the full and perfect Ref of Believers which was given them by him 7 Then God himself would not have spoken by David of a better and heavenly Ref promised before in the Gospel of that of spiritual and eternal one both God's seventh Day Sabbath and the Ref of Canaan were but different Shadows 8 Types The Exposition is vehemently denying it.

9 There remaineth therefore a Ref to the people of God y

7 Here the Spirit concludes from his former Proofs, That there is a more excellent Ref revealed to Faith in the Gospel, which is remaining, future, and to come, and will fare, and most certainly do so; tho it be behind, yet it will be enjoyed. A Sabbathism, which is a State and Season of a most glorious Ref, see 7 10 shall be enjoyed by faithful Believers the true Ref of God of whom he is the Proprietor and who are for their eternal State so excellently called of divine a Nature that he is not afraid to call their God They have an Entrance here into the initials of this Sabbathism in internal Peace and the glorious Liberty of the Children of God and by the secure of their full Possession of it in the eternal Inheritance of the Saints in Light Coloss. 1 12 13 1 Phi. 1 3 4 5 Acts 14 13.

3: And this will we do k, * if God permit.

4. This concerns the prime cause promoting this progress, and by whom alone it can be effected, as well as his Revelation of nothing his Discourse of the Mystery of Christ's Priesthood. We will really, certainly and constantly leave our entrance into these Christian, human, or angelic Christians will do this. Others make it a purpose of the Apostle to handle these Doctrines at another Season, and that he will now proceed to instruct them in the higher Mysteries of Christ and the Gospel, and to finish his designed Discourse about them. I If God permit, whether it refers to their proceeding from the knowledge of the Christian Principles, to the perfection of Knowledge or the growth in Christian Graces; or of the Apostle's proceeding to open to them the higher Mysteries of the Gospel; it is none of Paul letting things to be done, or giving leave only; God is not subject to work a Condition; but it is ad Alt, noting God's Assistance as his permission for all persons and things are in his Power, who worketh to will and to do, Phil. 2. 13. But as to a progress in Christianity and reaching the perfect Man, Col. 3. 10, Eph. 4. 13. If he, the Lord of all Knowledge and Grace, hath delight in us, and will work this Grace in us, then we shall do this, even go on unto Perfection, Heb. 14. 5, Mat. 4. 2, 1 Cor. 3. 6, chap. 12. 2.

4. For * it is impossible for those who were once enlightened m, and have tasted of the heavenly gift n, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost o.

The foregoing Council the Spirit enforces on these Hebrews from the danger of Apostasy, to which the neglect of it doth dispose them, and the terrifying consequences of it from v. 4 to v. 9. We must go on to Perfection, unless we will draw back to Perdition; so that he belinks them. You have been sluggish and dull, and going back; if you neglect it you are in danger of utter falling away; for it is impossible, nor in respect of God's Absolute and Almighty Power, but in respect of any Created Power in others or themselves, Isa. 46. 10. It is impossible, because contrary to God's declared Will and Resolution in his Church, by which his Power is limited, so as he will never do it, nor suffer it to be done; in this he will not, cannot deny himself, 1 Cor. 10. 18, and chap. 11. 6. compare Mat. 7. 18 and 19. 24, 26. 2 Tim. 2. 13. Omnia verba, several Interpreters render the Baptized who were illuminated with the Beams of Divine Light, Isa. 60. 1, Psalm 139. 17, and such who had been initiated into Repentance, as v. 1, and think the term may be limited to Baptized, whereas it refers to all the other particulars. There are such who are intrusted in the Principles of the Christian Religion, and brought out of the Darkness and Ignorance of Idolatry and Heathenism, so that they were able Persons for the knowledge of Gospel-Truths than before; they for with a new Light (spiritual things), and have the Mind raised up to such objects as they knew not before, but they have no new Eyes or Understandings given them, and so are but as Devils like Angels of Light, whereas the Light of a real Christian is the Light of Faith, John 8. 12. see 2 Tim. 1. 10, and 2 Pet. 1. 19. Light formis, Interius profecti themselves to a act of the Mind. Tasting is the Soul, is an apprehension and reception by it, and but merely such, and no more. A Taste, and not a Digestion of Christ and his Benefits as revealed to them in the Gospel, John 1. 9, followed by the superficial reliance of their Joy and Peace on their temporary believing in them, as it was with the Stony Ground, Mat. 13. 20. A Sinner enlightened so as to see Christ and the glorious Promises made to Believers in him; it being agreeable to his natural Principles, and being too much humbled, runs away with them with joy, having good temporary relief, but a Stony-Heart (such was Israel, Mark 6. 20). Not by an inhabitation of his Person in them, but by his Operations in them, whereby he is trying how far a natural Man may be raised, and not have his Nature changed: as is evident in a Servant, who Died for owning the Unity of the Deity; and as the Scribe, perverted his Gifts to them, how much supernatural good, and workings towards Salvation they are capable of, without the putting forth of the exceeding greatness of his Power to make them new Creatures, as Gen. 6. 3, compare 1 Cor. 12. 1 and 1 Pet. 3. 18, 19. These did parallel of from the Holy Ghost, the Light of Nature, of the Law, of the Gospel, with some Spiritual Power accompanying all these; which as they are trials of lapsed Nature, so are testing many Punishments by keeping Men off from many Sins, as 2 Pet. 2. 20. These Professors had escaped the guiltless inward Pollution and Defilement, the many were drenched with in their Lives, but have Lusts arising unremoved, from whence these would arise in them fill; but here is no Pure Heart or Divine Nature wrought in them, and the Lustful Principle is unremoved fill; this God accepts according to its kind, compare Mark 10. 21, 22.

5. And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come g.
So as to relish Comfort and Sweetness in the Doctrine and Promises of the Gospel through faithfulness; for their bearing of Pardon of Sin, and crediting it, are filled with joy by it; as a Condemned Malefactor hearing of a general Pardon, believeth himself to be one of the Pardoners, and rejoiceth in it; see Mat. 13. 20, 21, and John 5. 35. 4 Thus some of them were affected with the powerful Doctrines of the Gospel, concerning the final Judgment, as their natural Conscience was wrought on by the Spirit in the Word, that they feel it as it were begun in them, the Sparks of the Wrath of God having left their Consciences in a light Flame for their Sins, as in a Psalm, Ps. 24. 25. As on the other hand, being acquainted by the Spirit in the Word, of Christ's being a Redeemer, they have them from the Wrath to come, and to influence them into Happiness, beyond what is strainable on Earth; fellow- doth externally close with the Revelation and apply it to it, as Isaiah did, Num. 23. 10. All these five Influences are the workings of the Holy Spirit. On corrupt Nature for its improvement, and in their falling from these supernatural operations, they do in fact against the Holy Ghost.

6. If they shall fall away r, to renew them again unto repentance s: feeling they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh t, and put him to an open shame u.
A falling away, or apostatizing in proportion like Adam, such a transgression as his was, Rom. 5. 15, 16, 17, whereby they are totally unchristianized, as he was, and into a Sinner; we must go on to Perfection, unless we will draw back to Perdition; so that he belinks them. You have been sluggish and dull, and going back; if you neglect it you are in danger of utter falling away; for it is impossible, nor in respect of God's Absolute and Almighty Power, but in respect of any Created Power in others or themselves, Isa. 46. 10. It is impossible, because contrary to God's declared Will and Resolution in his Church, by which his Power is limited, so as he will never do it, nor suffer it to be done; in this he will not, cannot deny himself, 1 Cor. 10. 18, and chap. 11. 6. compare Mat. 7. 18 and 19. 24, 26. 2 Tim. 2. 13. Omnia verba, several Interpreters render the Baptized who were illuminated with the Beams of Divine Light, Isa. 60. 1, Psalm 139. 17, and such who had been initiated into Repentance, as v. 1, and think the term may be limited to Baptized, whereas it refers to all the other particulars. There are such who are intrusted in the Principles of the Christian Religion, and brought out of the Darkness and Ignorance of Idolatry and Heathenism, so that they were able Persons for the knowledge of Gospel-Truths than before; they for with a new Light (spiritual things), and have the Mind raised up to such objects as they knew not before, but they have no new Eyes or Understandings given them, and so are but as Devils like Angels of Light, whereas the Light of a real Christian is the Light of Faith, John 8. 12. see 2 Tim. 1. 10, and 2 Pet. 1. 19. Light formis, Interius profecti themselves to a act of the Mind. Tasting is the Soul, is an apprehension and reception by it, and but merely such, and no more. A Taste, and not a Digestion of Christ and his Benefits as revealed to them in the Gospel, John 1. 9, followed by the superficial reliance of their Joy and Peace on their temporary believing in them, as it was with the Stony Ground, Mat. 13. 20. A Sinner enlightened so as to see Christ and the glorious Promises made to Believers in him; it being agreeable to his natural Principles, and being too much humbled, runs away with them with joy, having good temporary relief, but a Stony-Heart (such was Israel, Mark 6. 20). Not by an inhabitation of his Person in them, but by his Operations in them, whereby he is trying how far a natural Man may be raised, and not have his Nature changed: as is evident in a Servant, who Died for owning the Unity of the Deity; and as the Scribe, perverted his Gifts to them, how much supernatural good, and workings towards Salvation they are capable of, without the putting forth of the exceeding greatness of his Power to make them new Creatures, as Gen. 6. 3, compare 1 Cor. 12. 1 and 1 Pet. 3. 18, 19. These did parallel of from the Holy Ghost, the Light of Nature, of the Law, of the Gospel, with some Spiritual Power accompanying all these; which as they are trials of lapsed Nature, so are testing many Punishments by keeping Men off from many Sins, as 2 Pet. 2. 20. These Professors had escaped the guiltless inward Pollution and Defilement, the many were drenched with in their Lives, but have Lusts arising unremoved, being profaned and trampled on by it, and so their final Destruction unavoidable.

7. For the earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it w, and bringeth forth herbs: meet for them * by whom it is dressed x, receiveth blessing from God y.

For is narrative here, and not rationale, introducing a Parabolic illustration of the states and ends of truly regenerate Christians, and unregenerate Apostates; as if he said, you have heard the good of truly regenerate Christians, and the evil of Apostates, you need not to be offended at it, or wonder, for it is with them run as with the Earth, which is the good Ground in Christ's Parable, Mat. 13. 8, and Luke 8. 8, and which he interprets to be a good and as Isaiah Isa. 1. 1, renewed in a Sinner by the Holy Ghost, naturally of the same mould with all others, Ezek. 11. 19, and 25. 26, 27, for the Earth drinks up the Showers, moistening and fruitifying it, Ps. 65. 9, 10, so this good and honest Heart receiveth the Spiritual Dews and Rain descending from Heaven on it in the Word and Ordinances, as Dmt. 3. 2. 4 It bringeth forth all sorts of Fruit for those who feed it according to God's institution, Gen. 2. 11, and 12. 10. So the good and honest Heart bringeth forth Fruit, which God reditheth and delighteth in as the fruit to his Husbandry, Mat. 13. 23, compare 2 Pet. 1. 5, 6, 7, and 1 Cor. 5. 10, Gal. 5. 22, 23. And such as the great manner of Souls expects from them, 1 Cor. 3. 6, 7, 9. This good Ground is made fruitful by God's Blessing, and the more fruitful it is, the more Blessing it receiveth, Gen. 27. 29. This fruitfulness is not the meritorious cause of this Blessing, for that issueth from God, but it qualifyeth these good Hearts for it, i.e. the continuance to such Souls of the means of Grace, and their increase in Spiritual Comforts, till they reach the perfection of Blessing from God in Eternal Life, v. 9.

8. But that which beareth thorns and briars z, is rejected a, and is high unto cursing b, whose end is to be burned.

As he introduced the state and end of a sinful Apostate, that Earth, however upon as well as the good, the unregenerate Soul that had Gospel Dews, and Spiritual Rain by the Word and Ordinances drop down on it from Heaven; yet brought forth, or one of it, not Herbs or Fruits fit for its owner or dresser, but Briars, Thorns and Thistles; so Apostates under all enlightenings and tastings of these supernatural Dews of the Spirit, bring forth from a stony, unregenerate Soul, nothing but Corruptions and Evils, their rooted Lusts, and out and bring together with their common Gifts, Luke 8. 7, 13, 14. The words and deeds of whom are pernicious, dishonouring God, and hurting Men, as Unbelief, Hypocrisy, Apostasy, defiled, 2 Pet. 2. 1, 2, 3, 12, 14, 18, to 22. John 4. 8, 10, 12, 16, 19. Isaiah 65. 1. It is high Land, rejected by the Owners, he takes no care of it, such are these Apostates, of a Reprobate Mind, approving Evil, rejecting Good, and are so rejected of God, who withdraws his Spiritual Dews and Ordinances, and the concurrence of his Spirit with them, as unworthy of them, and useless as to any good Fruit to be produced therein. 4 Such are lookt upon as the Mountains of Gilboa, accursed, 2 Sam. 1. 21, and to be dealt with by the Owner, as the fruitful Fig-Tree by Christ, Mat. 21. 19, Mark 11. 21. So these Apostates are under the Curse, 2 Pet. 2. 1. Delivered up Judicially by Christ, to blindness of Mind, and hardness of Heart, and even to Satan himself, as the Unbelieving Jesus were, John 12. 40, and those Apostates, 1 Tim. 1. 19, 20. 4 The end of Briars and Thorns is Fire, they are to be burnt up by it, and this will be the final issue with Apostates, to be destroyed by a Christ whom they have rejected, with Eternal Fire, chap. 10. 27, and 12. 29. Mat. 3. 12, and 25. 41. 2 Thess. 1. 9, 10.

9. But beloved, we are persuaded better things of you d, and things that accompany salvation e, though we thus speak.

For presence of the apostasy in this Discourse, upon themselves, the Apostle rebuketh his judgment concerning these Hebrews in this Verse, and his reason for it in the next; although we have spoken of the attainments, states and ends of Apostates, we reflect not on you by it; but, notwithstanding we are persuaded: which Word imports not a simple assertion, for he had the gift of discerning of Spirits, and the Holy Ghost, who indicates it, did very well know them, so as he was confident of their good state and condition in Christianity, and the Spirit testified to them by the Epistles of the other Apostles directed to them; they were well assured of this, and certain, not only because they were such whom he had known, as it were only a good or charitable opinion in him, but because of their relation to him as true Christians, 4 Members of the one Body of Christ, and so they were very dear to him, whenever they might fear, because of what he wrote before of Apostates, for they had better things in them, than enlightenings, &c. which he said were in Apostates before, v. 4, 5, even the favor work of the Spirit on their Souls, nor by giving them Light only, or raising their affections, but by giving them a new Eye of Understanding, as well as new Light, and with it a renewed heart; Christ having by the exceeding greatness of his Power made them new Creatures, as well as Professing Christians; their Minds, Wills and Affections being all changed, and made truly spiritual by the Spirit of Christ, and which they manifested by the exercise of all Graces, and their high faith, and end is better, more excellent, and of another kind than that of Apostates, evincing v. 10. 4 Such things as have Salvation in them, even the Spiritual Mind, which hath eternal Life in the root of it, Rom. 8. 6, 10, 11, 16, 17. That Divine Nature which the Apostle faith, was in the same persons, 1 Pet. 1. 4, 23, 25; and 2 Pet. 1. 1, 10, 11, which shows the flame of their Spirits to be a flame of Grace, which had Salvation in it, secured by Promises to it, so as they are inseparable, and their union not to be dissolved.

10. For God is not unrighteous f, to forget your work g, and labour of love, whiche have heaved towards his Name, in that ye have ministered to the Saints, and to minister h.

For introduced the reason of the Apostle's former perfection concerning them, which was the real Graces of Faith and Love to God wrought in their Hearts, and shown in their Work, which was better than all enlightenings. The affirmative is implied, God is just, and faithful and true, in performing what he promised, as well as not unrighteous; the certain Truth is asserted in this emphatical Negative, compare a Thess. 1. 6, 7, with 1 John 1. 9, should he not perform he would be unjust. 4 God always remembers all things, because his Knowledge is perfect, and he will take notice of Grace in these Hebrews manifested by their works; so as to recompense and reward them for it, by perfecting his gracious work in them, which having promised, the Apostle is confident of the good effect of them through Grace, Phil. 1. 6. He will never forget the work of your Faith in his Name, your covetous Profession of the Gospel, Gal. 5. 6, Col. 1. 4, 1 Thess. 1. 3. A Grace of God in them made their Souls delight in him, such as was purely Divine, beginning and ending in God, carried out in the labour and exercise of it to his Glory, desiring it in all the supplies they gave him in his Name, to Christians as they love him, 1 John 4. 19. 4 Their labour of Love was evidenced by what they had done, and were doing for Christ, in their using all ethical means, for supplying, comforting, preserving and delivering his Members, giving their Goods to them, and their Lives for them, 1 John 3. 10, 11. So the Apostle asserts their deeds, chap. 10. 32, 33, 34. So did deeds and works love Paul, Rom. 16. 3-4. And this they did them so such as God's Children, and bore his Name, the prefix suffering Christians, who endured Railing, Plundering, Banishing Imprisonment and Death for their Faith in Christ's Name: Those brethren who being loved in and, for God, do evidence to these Hebrews that they are pulled from Death to Life, 1 John 3. 14.

11. And we desire that every one of you do shew the same diligence i, to the full assurance of hope unto the end j.

4 Having thus commended them, so that he did not flatter them in it, he discovered what was wanting in them, and introduced it with the Particle But, ut diffiniat you, encomendat properly signifieth the inward affection and strong desire of the Apostle that the Apostle had of their further profit. The Spirit testified in him for this, Gal. 5. 17; which was not only concern for them, but necessary for their Perfection. And this Desire of his was not for all chronically, but that each single Person who was a Lover of God and his Saints, should use it with diligence; as they had in degree done before, to have this perfected to the end of their Life, 2 Pet. 1. 5, 10. To it is an earnest agitation and halting of Spirit witness that a demonstrative Discourse of the same nature to the utmost, Rom. 7. 4. Their Souls with full faith constantly making over this most certain and full Assurance of Faith, to the excluding of every doubtful Thought of the truth of God and his Promises, and of Hope, shutting out all wavering, Unbelief, or Impatience in waiting for the Accomplishment of the Good, which is secured by the Merit and Intercession of Christ, the Purpose, Promise and Oath of God to them, ch. 10. 22, 23, compare Rom. 4. 21, Cal. 1. 24. Hope here is not synonymous with Faith, yet is certain Consolation, and is a vehement desire and longing after, with a patient Expectation of what is possible and sure to be enjoyed, because God hath promised, and sworn in the Lord never to give it a distance, yet to be communicated by him to his in his best time, ch. 11. 1, compare Rom. 4. 12, 1 Thess. 1. 3, 13, 21. This Christian Diligence must continue to the end of their own days, and the Perfection of their Grace in Glory; until they come unto the entire Perfection of what they believed.

CHAPTER VIII.

NO W of the things which we have spoken, this is the sum a: We have such an high priest,* who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens b.

The Spirit having cleared the Doctrine of the Priesthood of the great Gospel-Ministry, now proceeds to show how he executed that Office; and that therein as he far excelled, so he was to be valued and used before the Apostolic Priesthood. He introduces it with a Reflection on the foregoing Discourses. *I. See then the Office of the Priesthood is to be valued as the Head, i. e. the Spirit, in a Discourse driven at, others, the chief of all the Excellencies of the Priesthood hitherto held forth: as if it were palmarum Argumentum, the highest and chiefest of all that hitherto had been spoken; and it is proportionally true, as will be seen in the following: That it is must necessarily join the foregoing Discourses. II. A Discourse together, and to it comes Deus, Contrist, or Epitaph; a Recapitulation of the Heads formerly discoursed on and largely, ch. 7, and so shews the dependance of the matter remaining to be handled on what went before, when many things are summed up in a few Words. As Christ's Priesthood largely opened before in John 11:42, 43, and the Substance of it is briefly handled in this Verse, I am the True Vine, and believing Heaven, opposed to the Infidel Tree, has not only a Right to, and Interest in, but actual possession of Christ, God-Man, as our High-Priest; while their Infidel Brethren had only a filial Man: He who hath eminent Power above, and thus crucified by Men, yet thereby became victorious over Sin, Death, and Hell, and thus Lord of the elements of the Universe, and thus able to triumph, when he passed through their Kingdom in the Air, Coloss. 2:15, entered into the Heaven of Heavens, and there filled him down and filled himself, as was his Right, on the Right-hand of God, as he sat on his Throne, invested with all Power and Dignity, as God's Royal Priest, next to him, and the greatest Manager of all his Affairs, and thus able the Infidel Priest as Trifling Man, trembling before the Shadow of this heavenly Temple on Earth, ch. 1:1.*

* Chap. 9, 8, † true tabernacle e, which the Lord pitched f and thus is spoken of the high-priest here down to the Right-Hand of the Majesty in the Heavens, and relates to that Work of his whereby he was constituted ἀρχιερεὺς; which according to Sydæus, is compounded of two words, μεγιστὸν καὶ ἀρχιερεὺς, prælat. Work, so it might be rendered Administrator; and notes any public Office from the highest to the lowest. The Spirit is said in the New Testament hath applied it to the highly and Abundantly Ministry, in this Verbe to Christ himself in his exalted State, and so notes a Ruler, as he was now God's publicly fided King the Lord Administrator of all things in his Kingdom, agreeable to what he foretold, Psal. 2. 6, 7. and 110. 1. comp. Act. 13. 33. And here properly it notes him in all his Offices, his Royal Sacramental and Civil, in the Heavenly and the Earth, administering and governing all things in them.

The Things about which his Administration is concerned, are the ἅπλῃ ἐκείνῃ of Holies. Some refer this to Profits, as noting Saints, of whom he is the Ruler and Governour, Rev. 15. 2. Others to Things, Graces and Endowments bestowed by him upon his; but most properly here in the Neuter Gender it notes the Place, the Sanctuary, ἡ ἐκείνη of Holies whereby he is administering and governing all, the same way applied to all of these. For Holies is the Place, the Sanctuary wherein Saints, the persons for whom, and all holy Endowments the matters about which he administers, do defend. But the holy Place or Sanctuary is the proper import of it; and so, the express in the plural Number to all the holy parts of its Types, the Temple of Jerusalem, and Tabernacle, Exod. 26. 32. Some, because of the consecution of this to the former word Sanctuary, would have it import the same thing, even Holies; but the Spirit distinguisheth these from each other, Exod. 26. 31, 2. Some would understand it of the Body of Christ; but here not so properly and agreeably to what the Spirit is speaking of. But by Tabernacle, here it means Christ himself, the true Temple, Church, dwelling on Earth. For as Christ was the Body and Truth by all the Shadows and Types of the Tabernacle, Coloss. 2. 17. so not all one way

Some of the Types were figural, and terminated on his Person as Priethood, Sacrifice, Altar, Shew-bread, Incense, Ark of the Covenant, &c. Other Types were aggregat and composited of many things, as Tent, Sacristy, and Tabeurnacle &c. &c. parallel to this, there must be a Truth in Christ complete in itself, that is, Christ the Church, so framed and pitched a Houle be God, that he may dwell in it. The Apostle so interprets 1 Cor. 1. 16. that he may dwell in us 2. 20. at 1. the Church 4. 6. Christ in Person 5. 12. Foundation ; Seims are the several living materials, of which the Houle and Tabernacle made; their Dispositions, Graces, and Endowments, the Ordinaments of it: The Laws, Rules, Orders, Ordinances, are the Cement, the Cords and Stakes that joyns them together.

Every one of us was consecrated to stand and minister at God's Altar, and were offered our Sacrifices and Gifts, as cleared before, ch. 5. 1. Seeing these earthly Priests had such Service, it would follow thence, if he were earthly and of their Order, he should need such too. "Away said some by Verbo expressly joined to it, is variously supplied: Having, by it &c;" but those who would make the Translation, "shall not allow it," thus being offered before them, and therefore add, "that they shall be able to do," is best supplied positively, it would be unlawful for this High-Priest, if he were so low as those Priests, to have something of like nature or kind of Gifts, and Sacrifices, that he might offer as they did. Now such he needed not as being utterly inconsistent with his Priesthood, as is proved af-*

g But, is here adverbially setting this High-Priest over-against and above the Aaronaical, on the account both of his position and Location, of which theirs were but Types and Shadows. The Lord Christ hath now really and fully obtained, and doth exercise the office of High-Priest, a publick Ministry, which as to its glorious Efficacy, infinitely exceeds the Levitical, ch. 9. to 11, 12, 14, ch. 10. 12, 14. y By how much he is Mediator of a better Covenant, z By how much hath a more excellent Ministry, fo that this is a proof of the former. Marius is a Middle, one that interposeth himself between persons at distance, but at unity; his par-lying between offenders as distant, but at unity; his par-lyng being highly injured by, and offending with, and therefore he mediates here as a Saviour, as ch. 7. codd. and understands for Sinners to satisfy God, wronged by them, by sacrificing himself for them, and so secure the performance of his Cove-nant-mercy to them. By which Sacrifice he purchaseth and sanctifies the Holy Spirit, to enable Man to perform the Con-ditions which God requireth from him, to repent, and believe, and obey the Redeemer, and so to receive the Blessings of God's Father; as by his Jesuitism he secures to them all the Blessings of God's Covenant for Time and Eternity, as proved, ch. 9. s. The Gospel-Covenant, which was a solemn Agreement between an offended God and Sinners, wherein he binds himself to give forth Pardon and Life to them upon certain Conditions, and they bind themselves to per-form, in order to the obtaining thereof. This Covenant was brought about by the Intercession of Christ, the Mediator be-tween them, who became a Surety for the performance of it, and solemnly ratified and confirmed it by the Sacrifice of himself; as other Covenants were by the Blood of federal Sacrifices, of which we have frequent mention in the Scrip-ture. Called hitherto from the Moral Covenant, not for the manner of it, but for the nature of it, which was be-ing binding comparatively a greater Good than the Law, Gal. 3. 17. r Which Gospel-Covenant was renewed Be-neath, as the Mosaic one, confirmed, ratified, and fulfilled by the Blood of the Sacrifice according to the Lew, ch. 9. 18, to 21. This was its Sanction, it was by it sealed un-breakable, eternally firm, and inviolable, and the self Promiss, such as were more specificall, and more servative and preservative than those in the Mosaic Covenant, were.

7 For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.

* This proves the Gospel-Covenant better than the Mosaic; for if it had not, there would have been no second. That first Covenant, of which Moses was the Mediator, as to its Administration of it (as to the matter of it, it was the same from Adam throughout all Ages) was faulty, not because God made it, tho it was a less perfect Good, than what succeeded it. It was able to save those who would rightly use it, and come unto Christ by it, Gal. 2: 24, but accidentally by reason of the Priests Faults, and Peoples sinfulness, it became wholly ineffectual to them for saving them, therefore the blame and fault of it is charged on them, v. 8. ¶ The Question here is vehemently alterative, if that Covenant in Mofaical Administration had reached effectually its end, brought all that were under it to Christ, to be saved by him, no place, nor room was there, that then being so perfect for another to succeed it, God would have reſted there; but his excellent Wiſdom and Council determined to put in being the ſecond, and to ſet in the place of the firſt that was ſancti, and which was to be abrogated by it, Gal. 3: 21.

8 For finding fault with them x, he saith, Behold, the days come y, saith the Lord z, when I will make a a new covenant with the house of Israel, and the house of Judah :

* This is the Proof of the falseness of the Mosaic Covenant, from the right cause of it, those who did abuse it. The Lord by the Prophet Jeremiah, being dissatisfied and offended with the Israelites, and with Complains and Aggravations charged upon them, and the House of David, and the House of Levi, and the Levitical Ministry, for frustrating God's Covenant with them by their Unbelief, misleading God's mind in it, and using it to justify them, and not bring them unto Christ, who justified the ungodly, that the Covenant was not faulty in it itself unobjectively, and that it was given to change Hearts, tho' its spiritual Efficacy was not lost by the Israelites Unbelief, 56. For Moses, Joshua, Sarami, David, were saved by the right use of it. It did not bind them by Works to obtain Justification, for it was delivered with Blood, which taught them it was to be had only by Faith in Christ's Blood. But when they abused it, and perverted it, by their Unbelief, and not using it to bring them to Christ, and to obtain the Covenant, and to bring them to Christ, who justified the ungodly. The Administration of this Covenant by Men being to be defective, he finds fault with them, and revels on the 9 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers b, in the day when I took them by the hand c, to lead them out of the land of Egypt, because they continued not d in my covenant, and I regarded them not e, saith the Lord f.

6 The Spirit proceedeth to shew the form of the Covenant denied, not the same Covenant for habit or form, nor any like unto the same for the manner of its Administration, as was made by the Lord with the Abrahams their Progenitors, and with Moses and Israel in the wilderness, and in the wilderness. g The day that I said unto him as thou, and took hold of thee, even the last day of the 430 years fore-told to Abraham, Gen. 15, 13, 16, comp. Exod. 12, 40, 41. As a Fatherless hold of his Child to pluck it out of Danger. h It is a Memory of the Covenant made with Israel in their miraculous Deliverance out of Egypt, keeping them in his Hand, while he was smiting their Enemies, tearing them at liberty, and then striking Covenant with them, and binding them by it to be his obedient People, as such Remembrance is a Memory of the Covenant. At which time the Covenant was made, and the Promise of Gospel-one for eternal habit and form.

form only, as carried on by a Ceremonial Law and Priesthood, over which Christ's was to have the Preeminence by Power and Efficacy of Administration. d Thee unbelieving Hebrews under that Administration of the Covenant, conceived not faithful to it, as by their own word and confession they bound themselves to it, but apostatized from God and his Truth, Heb. 10: 27. The word used by the Prophet יְהוָה signifies the breaking and making void the Covenant. The Administration of it did not hold them in close to God, but they frustrated all God's Ordinances, turned Idolaters, forsook the Lord, and worshipped the Gods of the Nations round about. *1. Hebrews, I told you of them, I did neither repent nor regard them, but cast them off from being my people for their lewd, treacherous Covenant-breaking with me; they would not return unto me, and I rejected them from being my People, or a People as they were before. Who knows where the nine Tribes and the half are? and in what a despoiled, shattered Condition are the remaining Jews to this day? The Apostle in this follows the Sepтуагт, who read the effect of their Sin, their Rejection, for what was their Sin in self, which by the Prophet is expressed יְהוָה, should I be a Lord or Husband to them which is an Aggravation of their Sin from God's Dominion over them, or Marriage-relation to them; yet did they break his Marriage-Covenant with them according to their lewd and whoring Heart. See Exod. ch. 16, and ch. 22. But in this Question by the Apostle, and Translation of the Sepтуагт: It is a History of the Effect for the Cause, to reject, call off, or neglect them from their Tributary to him in their Marriage-Covenant, which was the true Cause of it. The Verbi עָזַב may signify neglect or dismiss, and so Kimchi reads it, for. 1. and is so rendered in this place by other Rabbinis, and so it signifies in other Languages. f This is God's irrevocable word, used four times by the Prophet, for. 1. 3, 13, 23, 33; and three times repeated by the Apostle here, as proper only to the Lord, none can speak so truly, certainly, infallibly, as He.*

10 For this is the covenant q that I will make with the house of Israel b after those days a, faith the Lord: r I will put my Laws into their mind k, and write them l in their hearts i: and I will be to them a God m, and they shall be to me a people n.

a For, sheweth it should not be such a Covenant-form as was given on Mount Sinai, it being wholly different, and that denoted before, both carnal and a ceremonial, full of Types and Shadows, and through their faith ineffectual to them. This is the firm Administration of the Covenant which I will bring. To which three words answer is in this Scripture, I will pre-sent, make, and dispose; which last is the Root from whence the Notion of a Covenant in the Græc is derived, διαθηκα. b Israel is the comprehensive Name of all the twelve Tribes, as 2. Cor. comp. Exod. 16. 31. and 40. 38. and is so used by the Lord himself, Math. 10. 6. and by Peter, Act. 2. 36. i In the Prophet it is, after those days of their Delivery from Babylon, Jer. 31. 1, 8, 11, 16, 21. but especially when those days of the firm Administration of the Covenant are accomplished, when the fulness of time for the Messiah's Revelation is come, Gal. 4. 4. To this God again puts his Seal, he faith it. k The great God, the Redeemer himself, the infinitely wise, and good, and powerful Spirit, who can only reach the Soul, will make Inscriptions, and write clear Characters of Divine Truth on it; 2. Cor. 3. 3. None can add, new mould, frame and temper a Spirit, but him, who hath a true original Right, of all God's grace promissory, which will freely, graciously dispense from himself, John 4. 10, 14. All the Doctrines of the Gospel which include in them the Moral Law, as now managed by Christ, all the Will of God concerning our Salvation, Promises, and Commands; and these in their Spirit and Power, which God, not only ratified in, but conveyed to the World by Jesus Christ, and especially into the mind of Christians renders the Hebrew קָרַב the inward parts, in the Prophet's Text. The Hebrew or Understanding being the inmost part of the Soul, is capable of receiving Impressions of Divine Truth, and its Characters are by it made legible to the Soul; which as promised here, is so prayed for by the Apostle, Eph. 1. 17. 18. 1. Emphatically is a Metaphor setting out a real, actual, powerful Will of the Spirit of Christ, which leaveth the express Characters of all God's living Mind and Will upon the Heart or Soul as plain as Writing upon Paper, or Engraving upon Stones; such an operation of the Spirit of Christ on the Souls of them, as whereby it conveyed into them a new Light, Life, Power, q that they are made by it Partakers of a Divine Nature; and so they are not after Faculties, yet they are quite other Things, than they were for Qualities and Operations, q so as they are enabled to know, observe and keep his Laws, which are set up in Authority and Dominion in their Souls, ruling and ordering all there, Exod. 11. 10, 20. and 36. 26, 27. 2. Cor. 3. 8, 9, 10, 18. m As in the former Word was the Promise of Conversion, Regeneration, and Renovation, so joyed with it is the Promise of Adoption. In which God ingathereth in Christ to be to penitence Believers, Rom. 9. 6, 8, A God, i. e. the Cause and Author of all Good, Gen. 12. and 17. 1, 7. what he is, hath, or can be for them of Good, is all theirs, and himself terminating in all the Blessings, Favour, and Worship of them. He will exercise all his Wisdom, Power, and Goodness to deliver them from all Evil, and to make them eternally happy and blessed in himself. n And to him this true Israel shall be a free, spiritual, eternal adopted Seed and People, Partakers of all that he hath promised to, can desire of him; so as that they shall be better than the Name of Sons or Daughters, an everlasting one, not to be cut off, Isa. 56. 5. They, as his People, attend on, vincts to, and contend for him and his Glory, are always at his beck; being purchased, made, and covenanted to for his life and Service, that they are not their own, but wholly at his disposal, John 22. 7. and 32. 20. Eph. 11. 20. and 37. 23, 27. 2. Cor. 8. 2. Cor. 6. 16.

11 And r they shall not teach o every man s his neighbour p, and every man his brother, saying, John 6. 45. q Know the Lord: For all shall know r me, from the least to the greatest.

o The subject implied in the Plural Verb, and by a participle Participle expressed they shall every man teach every man, Text וְכָל אִישׁ יְהוָה, even every truly Covenanted-One who hath the knowledge of the Lord. *They shall not teach any part, in Jer. 31. 34. a double Negative supplied in this Verse וְכָל אִישׁ denying that weak and fruitless kind of Teaching which was under the Mosaic Covenant-Administration, whereby Souls were not favourably edified in the knowledge of God; there was imperfection both in their knowledge and Teaching, which should not be under the Gospel. s Such as nearer to each other in Society or Commerce, a Fellow Citizen; or are near by Relation, by Nature or Alliance, by Contiguity or Affinity, one near at hand, ignorant of the Lord, and that needs instruction, one capable and possible to be taught. q This intimates the manner of Teaching denied, a formal customary way of Teaching, Isaiah, it was proverbial with them, and so was the matter of it, Know the Lord, as they used to say, *the Temple of the Lord, Jer. 7. 4. The Burden of the Lord, Jer. 23. 34. The Joy of the Lord, Amos 5. 18. or otherwise not to teach them their heart, without believing, loving, fearing, or obeying him, 1. John 2. 3, 4. or to teach them to know the Lord, as redeeming and delivering of them out of Egypt, or out of the Land of the North, that is, bringing them back from their Captivity in Babylon, as they were taught Exod. 20. 2. and Jer. 22. 7, 8. But as delivering them from Sin, the Cause, Wrath and Hell, Or, they shall not teach one another so darkly, blindly and imperfectly in the meaning of Types, Shadows and Ceremonies, that they might know the Lord in Truth, and worship him according to his Mind; or to take so much pains to instruct them concerning the Lord and his Worship, as they took with the Gentiles when they professed them. r For under the Gospel-Administration all the Covenanted-Ones, the Infant in the Church, and the Aged, Isa. 56. 20. All Ages in Christ, Children, Fathers and Young Men, as 1. John 2. 12, 13, 14. Young and Old shall have his Laws put into their Minds, and written on their hearts, the true saving knowledge of him in Christ in the fulness of it, as Isa. 11. 9. they shall perfectly know him, so as not to depart from him; he shall be theirs, and they his by an Everlasting Covenant, ordered in all things and pure; by the plentiful effusion of his Spirit in all the Gifts and Graces of it through his Gospel-Influences on them; they shall be so enlightened in Gospel-Truths, that they shall know their Duties, and perform them, as if they were immediately enlightened from above, rather than by the common methods of teaching by his Word, that they shall not need so much cautioning, threatening, correcting as they did under the Law; but shall naturally cleave to him, without a disposition to revolt.

12 For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness s, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more r.

r This For takes the cause of all the former Acts promised in the Gospel-Covenant, as Regenerating, Illuminating, Adopting, and God's gracious removing all Sin that might hinder the communication of these, and all other Good to his Covenanted-ones, God in and by the Administration of this Covenant, ratified by his Blood, propitiating him, will of his free Mercy pardon, blot out, and take away, chap. 2. 17. and thereby free them from the Guile, Power, and Punishments of their original and acquired unrighteousness, implying his reconciliation to, and free acceptance of their persons in Jesus Christ, on whose account it is he dealeth so graciously with them in all things, 1. John 4. 9, 10. 5. 7, 8, 9. t All the breaches of God's Law by Commissions or Omissions, whatever they may be for number or for aggravation; he will always through Christ, save his Covenanted-ones from them all, Math. 11. 21. Rom. 2. 21, 27. All of these shall not only be for the pretence blot out; but his Mercy will be so great and certain through Christ, that he will neither punish them for them, nor charge them to them, he will abundantly pardon, and for ever erase them away, so as if they be taught for, they shall be found, chap. 10. 24. 1. Pet. 4. 25. Micah 7. 18, 19. And when he forgets their Sins, he will have their Persons in everlasting remembrance, Ps. 112. 6.

13 In that he faith, A new Covenant, he hath made the first old s; Now that which decayeth and waxeth old, is ready to vanish away m.

s The Inference from what was before said, ver. 8. (In the Lord's saying this by the Prophet Jeremiah, that he would make a new Covenant for form and manner of administration, later and better, even the last and best he will make, and in which he will have penitence, believing Sinners to acquiesce) is this, That the Mosaic one, though first in respect of the Gospel, hath lost its power, strength and vigour, its binding force; and by God's inflicting another, is abrogated as useless, needless and imperfect. m This Mosaic one thus grown old, weak and decrepit, and by the institution of the new Gospel-Covenant, abrogated, may continue for a while, but in no force; and so gradually moulder and decay by little and little, till it at last vanish and totally cease: It was near to its vanishing, when the Ministry of the Gospel-High-Priest on Earth, when by his Death he fulfilled the Truth of this Typical one, and so virtually nullified it; and as to its binding force, vanished when the Gospel was published throughout the World; Rom. 10. 16, 17. n Compare 2. Cor. 5. 17. and is named by the Apostolical Synod, Acts ch. 15. It was high time for these Hebrews to cease from that Vanishing Mosaic one, and effectually to clothe with the Gospel-Principle and Covenant, which must remain and continue for ever; see 2. Cor. 5. 24, 26, 27. which if they did not, men end in the total destruction of them; their Temple and City, which came to pass not many years after the Apostle wrote this Epistle.

CHAP. IX.

1 Then a verily the first Covenant b had also ordinances c of divine service d, and a worldly sanctuary.

a The Holy Spirit from ver. 1. of this Chapter, to ver. 19. of chap. 10. is illustrating his two last Arguments taken from the Talmudic and Mosaic Administrations, about which both the Apostles, and the Gospel High-Priest did minister; in both which Christ hath been compared to the preeminence, which the Spirit proves by an Argument drawn a comparatio, of the Tabernacle and Service of the Aaronical Priests, and the Tabernacle and work of Christ. He beginneth with a proposition of the adjuncts of the first Covenant from 1. Cor. 10. 1, 2, 11. The three Particles introducing it quod, et, and agere, the one in connecting, the other demonstrating, and the last in asserting that which followed, to depend on what went before; as, and then itaque the first. b Hebrew וְהָיָה, nothing is in the Græc Text joined with it, though some Græc Copies add enough, the first Tabernacle, which is to make the same thing a property of it self, and is absurd to read True Tabernacle had a Tabernacle; it is therefore better supplied from that which First relates to in ver. 7. 13. of chap. 8. viz. The Mosaic Covenant-Administration, which had or possessed following r Antiquities, we read Ordinances; Others, may signify a Righteous System or Ordinance of God, or a religious Event that answers that Law or Decree, as Rom. 8. 4. In the Plural it notes Jura, the Laws of God, but especially here the Ceremonial Laws, Hebrew קְדוּשָׁה for Ministry which God sent by Moses to the Aaronical Priesthood, 4. Act. 13. Hebrew וְהָיָה to the Græc Κατασκευα, Κατασκευα, which our Translators make of the Græc Κατασκευα, but this is repugnant to the next words connected to it, which should signify be of the same Case; it is therefore best rendered in the Acclimated Case Plural, and by apposition to Ordinances, and so read Services or Worship, which because Divine. How various this Worship was in the Ministry of the High-Priest and ordinary Priests, the Apostle sheweth afterward, and therefore most properly to be rendered Services. t Tabernacle was the Sanctuary where these Services were performed, called the Tabernacle from its relation to God and his Service. It consisted of two Tabernacles as is described, v. 2, 3. It is filled with vessels of gold, silver, brass, and glorious, as is evident by its description, Exod. 26. Made it was after God's own Model, a Mystical Structure, and a Type of a better; yet though that were to please to the Eye of the World, its materials were like it, frail, brittle and wasting away, as things made with hands make way for better, v. 24.

2 For there was a Tabernacle f made, the first g, wherein was the candlestick h, and the table i, and the shew-bread k, which is called the Sanctuary l.

f The Spirit defends to a particular account of the three former adjuncts to the Covenant, beginning with the last, the Sanctuary, which being glorious, he advanced the Glory of Christ from the place of his Ministry above it. For, is demonstrative of what was ver. 2. after, the first Tabernacle Habitation that God had amongst Men, 2. Sin. 7. 6. as a token of his gracious Presence with them; The Tabernacle consisted of three parts, of the Court where stood the Brazen Altar of Burnt Offerings, the Brazen Laver for the Priests to wash their Faces in, and to purify themselves when they came and offered them upon the Altar, Exod. chap. 27. 1, 2. and 28. 17, 22. and 31. 20. and 32. 28. to 34. This Court the Holy Ghost here leaves out: Separated from this Court by a Vail was the first Tene or Tabernacle, called the Sanctuary, or Holy Place, where the Priest did the daily Service, which is called the Place, Exod. chap. 25. 36. and 40. 32. to 39. Inward of this, and separated by a Vail, was the Holy of Holies, where the Ark was, and where the High-Priest only entered once a Year, Exod. 25. 10, 22. and 40. 20, 21. This Tabernacle was according to God's Pattern and Command, prepared, finished and reared up by Moses, Exod. chap. 40. g The Sanctuary or Holy Place, separated by one Vail from the Holy of Holies, and from the Court by another, had in it the following Sacred Utenils. h For matter and form answering God's Pattern, as Exod. 25. 31, 40. and 37. 17, 25. and 40. 24, 25. It was of pure Gold, and of six Branches artificially wrought, by which was typified that Spirit of Light which Christ given to the Tabernacle, his Body Mystical, the Church wherein God dwelleth, not usually for our Light, but for our Example, and by reason of that Light is the Church for our use by the Emblem of Candlestick, Rom. 1. 4, 13, 13, 20. i The Table, for matter, of plates of Pure Gold covering the Shittim Wood, and a crowning Verge of Gold round it, Exod. 25. 23. to 31. and 37. 10, 17. and 40. 22, 23. Most excellent for its Spiritual use, feeding our Christ in all his Excellencies, well stored and furnished for his; which the Jews by their Unbelief and Prophaneism made contemptible, Mat. 1. 7. k Was Twelve Cakes made and set on the Table, new every Sabbath Day in the Morning, and when taken away, were to be eaten by the Priests only, Exod. 25. 30. and 40. 23. Levit. 24. 5. to 10. However, on Days of necessity, God dispensed with that Law, and allowed him to eat of it, Mark 2. 26. This was an Emblem of God's provision for the twelve Tribes, the Type of his Church; and the believing on them the Bread of Life from Heaven, the all-sufficient Food for them, John 6. 23. to 59. compare Col. 1. 18, 17. l Which first Tabernacle was called the Place or Sanctuary, being relatively q, as God's Tent, and no otherwise, q is fulfilled by the Spirit, Exod. 26. 33.

3 And after the second vail, the Tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all n.

m This distinguishing the second Tabernacle from the first, for passing through it to the end of it, there hung up a curtain Vail marked of Blue, Purple, Scarlet, and fine linen, with Figures of Cherubims, Exod. 26. 31, 32. and 26. 35, 36. and 40. 21. The Mystery of which is interpreted after v. 8. see chap. 6. 19. A Vail noteth distance and obscurity; or, covering, opposite to that which is open and free; behind this Vail was the second Tabernacle. n Called the Holy of Holies, Exod. 26. 33. by God himself, which did to all, though typically hold over the Place of God's special Appearance for Propitiation and gracious Answers of Peace answers to the desires of his People in the Lord Jesus, applied afterwards to Heaven it self, the Holiest of all, where the High-Priest is entered for us, and sits at the Right-hand of his Father, making intercession for us, ch. 6. 19, 20. and 7. 25. and 9. 24. and 10. 19.

4 Which had the golden censer, and the ark p of the covenant, overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden pot that had manna q, and Aarons rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant r;

o In the Holy of Holiest was reserved the Golden Censer, on which the High-Priest pur the Incense, when annually he entered there; see Levit. 16. 12, 13. that the Cloud of it might cover the Mercy-Seat, and be kept for that Service in it; see Job. 40. 12. p Many would refer this to the Golden Altar of Incense that stood before the Vail, Exod. 30. 6, 7, 8. In the Holy Place, and as they read it, having the Golden Altar of Incense before it for its Service, and not within it, signifying the God-head, by which Christ maketh his intercession, glorifying and performing his own, and all Offerings made in his Name. q It was a Coffin or Chest to please to the Eye of the World, its materials were like it, frail, brittle and wasting away, as things made with hands make way for better, v. 24. r It was a Coffin or Chest to please to the Eye of the World, its materials were like it, frail, brittle and wasting away, as things made with hands make way for better, v. 24.

This is the use: that he entered Heaven for expiation, satisfying the injured Justice of God by Sin, fulfilled the Law, and then publicly appeared at God's Throne, to show all was complete, Levit. 22. 43, 44, 45. John 19. 30. That one he did that which the High-Priest did annually typify, but could never accomplish nor for many 1200 years together, v. 25, 28, chap. 10. 12, 14. By which it is evident that one and one, refers to the shedding of his Blood as a Sacrifice, and presenting it to the Father, as completing Propitiation. Work at that once for ever. 1. When he with the Intent of his Merit and Prayer to the Just and Merciful Judge, even God his Father, died for, found, obtained, and fully received Eternal Redemption for Sinners, &c. 2. Deliverance of their guilty Persons from Eternal Death, full remission of all their Sins, Rom. 3. 25, 26. Full reconciliation to God, 2 Cor. 5. 18, 19, with an infusing them into all spiritual good. This Work is filled Eternal, because its virtue of personal atonement, which the duly qualified Sinner, Col. 1. 21, 23, from the Guilt and Punishment of all Sins for ever.

13 For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh.

1. This Service of Christ in his Sanctuary exceeds the Atonement, not only for reconciling Souls to God, but purifying of them, as cleared in this and 14. The Blood is the same as spoken of v. 12. Bulls here put for Calves, are but to distinguish the Sex; and it is to be noted where our Translators read Oxen, as to Sacrifices in the Old Testament, as particularly, Num. 7. 27, they mean Bulls, for no Oxen were by the Law to be offered to God at all, as Sacrifices, see Levit. 22. 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, 23. Because they could not be true Types of the true Sacrifice, which was to perfect them. This Blood was sprinkled on the Mercy-seat and before it, and on the Altar, Levit. 16. 14, 15, 19, &c. expiating Sins, and taking away the guilt and legal punishment. 2. The rite of preparing 12, read in Num. 19. 1, 10, 11. A red hyssop was by the People given to the Priest; he was to bring her without the Camp, and order her to be slain, and then take the Blood with his Finger, and sprinkle it towards the Tabernacle seven times; after which he was to be wholly burnt in his fire, with Cedar Wood, Hyssop and Sarcocolla. The Ashes of which were reserved; when they used them they took them in a Vessel, and put running Water to them, and then sprinkled them with a bunch of hyssop on persons legally unclean, 2. 18, 19, 20, and if they purified them from that Ceremonial Filth and Pollution; but none of these could purify an unclean Soul, that was left wholly and unclean still. 3. These sprinklings did sanctify those who were legally unclean, and did procure a legal purity and acceptance of them in the service of the Sanctuary, from which else they were excluded; by this they were looked on as externally Holy with the Congregation, their Flesh and outward Man being made pure by it for their external Worship.

14 How much more * shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge a living conscience from dead works to serve the living God.

1. The question supposeth an unexpressible difference between Christ's purifying and the legal Sacrifices. The Blood with which he purged within the Vail to the Throne in the highest Heavens, on which fate the Just God, the proper, precious, powerful Blood of God the Son incarnate. 2. Who in his Immortal Soul obeying all God's Will in Suffering, did through his own Eternal God-head, to which both Body and Soul were united, and which sanctified the Body offered, as the Altar, the Sacrifice, Heb. 10. 19, which is called the Spirit of Holiness, Rom. 1. 4, and gave value and virtue to his Sacrifice, Heb. 9. 14 a Sacrifice for Sin, when he died on the Cross, not Sheep, Bulls, Goats, Turkeys, Pigeons, &c. Not Man, nor the life of Angels were his Sacrifice, but himself, pure, holy and unspotted, an unspotted, blameless person, 2 Cor. 5. 21. How much beyond his Types for Innocency and Purity, Levit. 22. 20, 21. Num. 19. 2. The offended injured Creator and Judge of Sinners, who constituted him to this whole Work; and was by this most perfect Sacrifice propitiated; his Justice was satisfied, his Law obeyed, and himself fully free to pardon and forgive Sinners without Injustice; and to be just as well as gracious and merciful, in doing of it, Rom. 3. 25, 26, and they might be put in possession of his favour, presence and pardon again, as their own God, 1 Pet. 3. 18. 3. That the Sacrifice be over, the virtue and excellent causality of it doth abide, purging now as ever, not only justifying and absolving of a penitent believing Sinner, but purifying and sanctifying the Soul, procuring the Holy Spirit to renew it, and take away inherent Corruption, and infuse Holiness into it, Heb. 4. 2, 3, and making willing in the beauties of it, Phil. 1. 3. 1 Cor. 6. 11. Titus 2. 5, 6. Nourishing Body, Soul and Spirit one frame of Holiness to God; 1 Thim. 5. 22. So as the most quick, lively, and sufficient part of the Immortal Soul, conscious of Sin, is freed from the guilt, filth and stains of Sin that did cleave to it this thus purged, no consciousness of guilt remains, nor fear of punishment, but it is filled from the interest it hath in this Blood, and the work on it of this Spirit full of Joy and Peace and Righteousness by believing, Rom. 5. 1, 2, 5, 11. 4. All operations of Sin, which come from spiritually dead Souls, and work Eternal Death, Heb. 9. 2, of which they are as inflexible as dead Men; all forms of Sin which do corrupt, pollute, and defile the Soul, Much more Corruptious, Perverse, and Following the Soul than any of those things forbidden to be touched by Moses's Law could the Flesh, Num. 19. 18, they are as offensive to God and more than Carcases are to us, and Tefellential things, though themselves keeping Souls from any Communion with him. 5. As under the Law there was no coming to the Congregation of the Tabernacle without legal purifying, Num. 19. 13, 20. So by this purifying correspondent to the Type, Souls are quickened, have boldness and confidence Godward in point of Day, present themselves living Sacrifices, Rom. 12. 1. Aim at him through their whole Life, that he desires to keep Communion with them proportioned to himself, till he is taken for their complex serving and enjoying of him in the Holy of Holies in Heaven.

15 And for this cause he is the Mediator of the new testament, * that by means of death he for the redemption of the transgressors: that were under the first testament; they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

1. As Christ's Priesthood and Service, his Sacrifice and purifying, to the Testamental Covenant, and his Administration of it, did incomparably exceed all those of Aaron's; so that for what was spoken, v. 14. Even the effect of his Sacrifice, the Justification and Sanctification of Sinners, is the great Gospel-High-Priest, the mediating Person between God and Sinners, confirming and making effectual by his Death, God's Testamental Covenant to them, which is for the administration of it the very best and last, in which God bequeatheth Pardon, Reconciliation, Holiness, Adoption and Heirship to an eternal inheritance to penitent, believing Sinners. 2. The Death of Christ himself God-Man, the most excellent Sacrifice, without which there could be no remission, v. 22. nor the Tifkment of God about it put in force, for which cause he was the Mediator of it, that they should value him to him the more for his Death, fulfilling therein all his Types, and reach that which was unattainable by these, both to their Fathers and themselves. 3. For the satisfying the Justice of God for the wrong their Sins had done it, paying that price without which they could not be expiated, by which they were remitted, and to the duty qualified, actually forgiven, even the Sins of those who were under the Mosaic-administration of the Covenant; Aaron, Samuel, David, and the Saints, Believers in that time, had their transgressions pardoned by virtue of the Death of Christ to come, shadowed by these Sacrifices typifying him and his Death in their own times: What the Death of Beasts or Birds could do for them, his did, delivering them from the guilt and punishment of their Transgressions, under which otherwise they must have perished for ever; this Patet published, Act. 15. 11. This Virtue of Christ's Death is not mentioned except of New-Testament-Sinners being remitted by it; but if it did expiate those old ones, reaching to much backward, and even to Aaron's, it will much more expiate those under the New Testament to Penitent, Believing, Praying Sinners for it, as those Old-Testament-transgressors were, g Such as on God's call repent and believe on the Lord Jesus, that Angel of the Covenant then revealed to them, and enter into Covenant with him, Exod. 24. 26, 27, compare 1 Cor. 10. 3, 4, 9, and John 5. 45, 46, 47. Such as by it have Sins expiated, Conscience purged, as to have a title to, and himself the work of the Spirit for the Heavenly Canaan, Rom. 4. 16, 24, 25. May be put into the possession of that eternal Inheritance made over to them by Promise, and which the Spirit gave them an earnest of here, chap. 12. 10, 14, 16. compare Heb. 1. 12, 14, and 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4. All this is confirmed to die by Christ's Death.

16 For where a k testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator.

1. For, gives the reason of the Mediator's Death, even the putting the Called into the possession of the bequeathed Inheritance, demonstrated by a common, natural Law in all Nations of the Testament effect on the Testators Death: A Testament being a disposition by Will nuncupative, or written, of either Goods or Lands, which are the persons own, to be the Right and Possession of others after his Death, whom he bequeatheth in it: such in proportion is the New Covenant, where God gives freely all spiritual good things with an Heavenly Inheritance, as Legacies to all his Called Ones in Christ, by this last and best Will and Testament of his, written in his Scripture-Influence, witnessed by the Prophets and Apostles, sealed by the two Sacraments, especially by the Lord's Supper, 1 Cor. 11. 25. He who makes a Testament by the Law of Nature as of Nations, must die before the Legatee have any profit by the Will, the Son and Heir inherits not but on the Father's Death; then is the Testament firm and valid, the time being come for the Heirs inheriting, and for the Wills execution, it being now unalterable: the execution of which is cleared, v. 17.

Rom. 5. 6.
1 Pet. 3. 18.

16 3. 15. Men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all whilst the Testator liveth.

1. The Testator being by Death defunct of his Goods and Lands, the right takes place of the Legatee, and the time of their challenging it: such a sacred Tie there is upon the surviving, that none can at right add to it, alter, or diminish it. It is of no force while the maker of it liveth, because they have need of the things bequeathed; they can alter and change it, and by the Will. If it is declared, none shall have any right to the things bequeathed in it till the Testator be dead. The consequence of all this is, that the Tifkment must put it in force by Death; and his Death is of greater force to confirm his Testament than that of Men, because his Will can never be violated, it being a Divine Constitution; but the human Testament may. Christ God-Man after death as Testator, and puts the Testament in force; and by breaking the bonds of Death, doth gloriously effect that the Legatee perform the Conditions required in the Will, to fit them for receiving their Legacies; and then faithfully distribute them to them by his grand Executor, the Holy Spirit, who applied the virtue of it to the Legatee under the Old Testament, as well as that under the New; He being the Testator, as well as the Lamb slain from the beginning of the World.

18 Whereupon M neither the first testament was dedicated without blood.

1. For as much as all Testaments are put in force by the Death of the Testator, and all Covenants are most strongly confirmed by Death and Blood in God's own Judgment, thence it is that the Mosaic Covenant was confirmed by the Death of Christ, as the only made after the Holy Spirit, who applied the virtue of it to the Legatee under the Old Testament, as well as that under the New; He being the Testator, as well as the Lamb slain from the beginning of the World.

19 For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the Law; * he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book and all the people.

1. That the Old Testament was ratified by Blood, the Spirit prove by instance, Moses as Mediator having spoken Exod. 24. 26, 27, compare 1 Cor. 10. 3, 4, 9, and John 5. 45, 46, 47. Such as by it have Sins expiated, Conscience purged, as to have a title to, and himself the work of the Spirit for the Heavenly Canaan, Rom. 4. 16, 24, 25. May be put into the possession of that eternal Inheritance made over to them by Promise, and which the Spirit gave them an earnest of here, chap. 12. 10, 14, 16. compare Heb. 1. 12, 14, and 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4. All this is confirmed to die by Christ's Death.

it to them, and sprinkling it on them; he brings home the Testamental Blessings to them, chap. 10. 12, 21. and 12. 24. Heb. 12. 15. Eph. 2. 2, 1 Pet. 1. 2.

20 Saying, * This is the blood of the testament, which God hath enjoined upon you. 9. * Exod. 24. 8. Mat. 25. 28. 1 Cor. 11. 25. 1 Pet. 1. 2. 1 John. 1. 7. Rev. 1. 6. 1 Luke 1. 7. 1 Pet. 4. 2.

21 Moreover, he sprinkled likewise with blood * both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry.

1. Angels did not only sprinkle the Book of the Covenant with Blood, but the Tabernacle itself, yearly, on the atonement day, as is charged, Levit. 16. 14, 15, 17. For as the Altar and Persons were to be atoned for, so was the Tabernacle itself, v. 18, 20. First they were sprinkled, and then anointed, Levit. 16. 10, 11. As the Tabernacle was in the truth of it, 1 Cor. 6. 11. All the Garments and Vessels of that Priesthood were thus to be purified, Typifying how unclean all the Persons ministering with them, and atoned for in and by them, were; and how polluting all things, and polluted by them, all they were purified by the blood of Christ.

22 Ad almost all things are by the Law * purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission.

1. All such things as are capable of polluting, and which were not to be so by the Wash of Separation, or in Five, as Levit. 15. 28. Num. 31. 23: were ceremonially purged by Blood. 2. And because the Death of some living Creature as a Sacrifice, and the Blood of it not only shed, but sprinkled, there could be neither legal Pardon of Guilt, nor purging of Ceremonial filth. By this God signified to Israel, that without the Blood of Christ his Son, and the Testator of his Testament, shed as a Sacrifice, to purchase and procure both remission and the Spirit, there could be neither pardon of the guilt of Sin, and removal of the punishment, nor purging the filth, or renewing the nature of the Sinner, his blood being the ineffable price purchasing both for them.

23 It was necessary therefore, * that the patterns of the things in the Heavens should be purified with these, but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

1. This conclusion the Spirit draws from the antecedent, v. 18. proved in the following Verses, therefore it is here rehearsed the illative Particle Therefore, is but to sum up the use of Blood about the rite of the Tabernacle, and that Testamental-disposition. It is positively expiating them by the Will of God, expressly expiating them, to point out better, and that there might be an agreement of the Type with the Truth. 2. The Tabernacles in all their parts, the Book of the Covenant, Vessels, Services, &c. Being Types, Signs, Examples, Shadows of things in Heaven, must be ceremonially purged and separated from common use to Divine by those external, ritual sprinkling and lustrations, especially with Beasts Blood, mystically representing better Blood and Purifications of persons and things than these. 3. But things more excellent and glorious than earthly ones, the Gospel-Tabernacle in its parts, Testament, and Services, about which Christ ministrifieth, which are Heavenly for their degree, agreeableness with, and tendency to it; they are spiritual and incorruptible, v. 11, 12, chap. 8. 2. and 12. 22. Gal. 4. 26. Heb. 21. 1. are to be dedicated, separate, put in forth, and sanctified to God by the one Sacrifice of Christ, of more value, worth, and virtue than all the legal Sacrifices together. It is expiated spiritually, to answer the legal term, and to fit us in excellency, being far above all others; the Blood of it being that of God by personal union, and which is only efficacious for eternal good, and available with him; so ought it to be esteemed as it was in Truth, and no questioned with by these Humans.

24 For Christ is not entered y into holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true, but into heaven a: it self, now to appear b in the presence of God for us.

1. For, shews this to be a rational proof of the transcendency of Christ's Death and Sacrifice; and this to be derived from the Plan of his Death, far exceeding that of his Type. The Gospel-High-Priest did not like Aaron, enter with his Blood into the Holy of Holies of an earthly Tabernacle, frail and moveable, and appear before the Jecy-Seat on the Ark there, v. 9. All these were but like, and corresponding types, and resemblances of the true, holy, and glorious place of God's residence. A But, as our High-Priest, did enter with his Atoning-Blood; after the Sacrificing of himself on the Cross into the Heaven of Heavens, and approached the Throne of Justice, and propitiated it, making it a Mercy-Seat and true Throne of Grace unto penitent, believing Sinners; and then perfected the work of Propitiation and Redemption: Afterwards at his triumphant Ascension he entered in his whole person immortal, and laid open a way for our entering there; b Where he now appears as our Advocating Mediator, pleading his Merit for the remission of our Sins, and resulting of God's face smiling on, and favouring his Clients, which was terrifying and frightful guilty Adam before. See chap. 7, 25, and 10, 19, and Rom. 8, 34, 1 John 2, 1, 2, and 5, 6. Here he represents our persons to God's Face, sitting in the mean while as we beneath for our seeing him face to face, and being blessed in the enjoyment of that prospect for ever.

* Ver. 7.

25 Nor e yet that he should offer himself often, as * the high-priest entereth into the Holy place every year with the blood of others.

The excellency of Christ's Sacrifice beyond the Aaronical, is argued here from its singularity; it needs no repetition, as their multiplied Sacrifices did. Confounding it, is but inferring this excellency of Christ's Sacrifice, by denying in it that weakness which was annexed to the legal ones; there was no need that he should yearly, to fulfil the Type of the often yearly Sacrifices of the Legal High-Priest, who entered with the Blood of Bulls and Goats, strange Blood to him, and not his own, into the Holy of Holiest in the Tabernacle, and entered to every year once to the view of his Sacrifice to be only ritual, typical, and putting, to show that single individual one of Christ, in respect of Sacrifice and Oblation.

† Eph. 1, 10.

26 For then d must he often have suffered since e the foundation of the world: But now f * once in t end of the world hath he g appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

d Emph. The consequence is drawn ab impossibili; if he had often offered himself, he must have often suffered, but he could not suffer often. For where there was Offering, there must be a Sacrifice, and so Suffering. Christ should do so in his own Person, was impossible; he was assured, for God to have put his Son on suffering so cruel a Death to often, r From the Fall of Adam at the beginning of the World, ever since Sin needed a Sacrifice: but his once suffering as a Sacrifice for us, was of Eternal Virtue in God's purpose, answering and satisfying God's Justice; one Death of the second Adam for the Sin and Penalty of the first, in the efficacy and verue of his Death which was everlasting. The often and annual Sacrificing of the Aaronical Priests, and entering of the Holy of Holiest with the Blood of Beasts, was to shew the Jews their Weakness, and to instruct them in, and lead them to this one Sacrifice once to be offered, of eternal Avail, as is signified. f But Christ the Gospel-High-Priest was not only God-Man, manifested to be so, and exhibited as such an Officer by his Work, but was manifested to be such by Promise, and in Types and Figures from Adam's Fall; but now shewed it clearly in his Suffering-work, 1 Tim. 3, 16. The days of Christ's Ministry on Earth under the fourth Monarchy, called the last Days and Times, 1 John 2, 18. The end of the World, 1 Cor. 10, 11. Thefulness of time, Gal. 4, 4. God's fee and best time for his Appearance, and it was but once that he appeared in these days, performing this Work. g Then he sacrificed himself, offered up his Blood to God within the Veil, taking away by his own Blood, which he required, the Guilt, Stain and Power of all Sin, justifying Believers from any Condemnation by it, by what he did and suffered in their stead for their good, who file from it for refuge to him, Heb. 2, 53, Dan. 9, 24, Rom. 7, 24, 25, 1 John 3, 5.

27 And as it is appointed b unto men once to die, but after this the judgment i.

b The Proof of the necessity of Christ's suffering Death but once, is introduced in this Verse by the Conjunction And. It was according to God's decree and published Sentence that he should die once for God the Supreme Lord, Governor and Judge of them, for, constituted, and appointed by an unalterable and irrevocable Decree, as Law-giver, and Sentence, as Judge to all of the finite, Humane Race, the corrupt Seed of Apostate Adam, their grand Representative, whom God threatened with this Penalty upon his sinning and transgressing his Law, Gen. 2, 17, which Sentence was denounced upon him, Gen. 2, 19, comp. Rom. 5, 12, 14, and 6, 23. This Sentence was but set to be undergone by himself and all his final Off-spring, and by their Surety, and no more: so that the second Adam needed but once to die by this Sentence. No Man can keep himself from this, it being the general Rule of God's proceeding with all Persons. The Supreme Legislator may make what Exceptions and Privileges to his Law he pleases. Those that were translated by him, did suffer a Change proportioned to Death, as Enoch, ch. 11, 5, Gen. 5, 24, and Elijah, 2 King 2, 11, 12, and those that shall be changed at Christ's coming, must undergo the like, as 1 Cor. 15, 51, to 55, and 1 Thim. 4, 17. Those that were raised from Death by Christ, Peter and Paul, &c. God might glorify his Name by re-termining i; but whether they did die again, is not certain. This is to be the general Field Law and Rule of God. i In order, as Souls by Death are separated from their Bodies, they come to Judgment: And thus every particular one is handed over by Death to the Bar of God, the great Judge, and is so dispatched by his Sentence to its particular State and Place with its respective People, Rom. 14, 12. At the great and general Assize, the Day of Judgment, shall the General and Universal one take place, Acts 17, 31, when all Sinners in their entire Persons, Bodies and Souls united, shall be adjudged to their final, unalterable and eternal State, Rom. 14, 10, and 2 Cor. 5, 10, Jude 20, 6, 2 Cor. 20, 11, to 15.

28 * So Christ was once offered to bear the sins t of many, and unto them that look for him i shall he appear the m second time without sin n unto salvation.

o Conf. 29 is an allusive Connection between the Antecedent, v. 27, and this Consequent, as it was appointed to him once to die, so it was appointed to Christ once to offer himself. God's Sentence decreeth both of these; Christ the High-Priest appointed to Men, v. 27, having died once as a Sacrifice for Sins, and offered his Blood to God to expiate them, bearing their Punishment which God laid on him, Heb. 9, 6, and to take away Sins, Guilt, Filth, Power, and Condemnation from many, whom the Father gave to him, and he undertook for, in Math. 20, 28, and 26, 28, John 10, 15, 16. i And to his believing penitent Expectants, such as long for his coming, Phil. 3, 20, Tit. 2, 13, stretching out their Hands as the Mother of Sifra, Judg. 5, 28, with an holy Impatience of feeling him, such as by Faith and Prayer are waiting for him, Rom. 8, 23, 2 Cor. 5, 1, to 10, 1 Phil. 1, 3, to 10, shall he once more visibly appear to them and the World, Acts 1, 11. Revel. 1, 7, gloriously, without need to suffer or die again for them, having at his Departure after his first coming, carried all their Sins into the Land of Forgetfulness. n And to their Persons will be bring future and complete Salvation, rising and uniting Bodies and Souls together, Phil. 3, 21, and then take them as Assilms to himself in the Judgment-work on Men and Angels in the Air; and having dispatched that Work, return with them to the Holy of Holiest in Heaven, there to be completely blessed, in praising, serving, glorifying, and enjoying God in Christ, and the Blessedness that attends that State for ever, and as 1 Cor. 6, 2, 3; 1 Thim. 4, 17.

CHAP. X.

FOR a the law b having a shadow c of good things to come, and not the very image d of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually, make e the comers thereunto perfect:

a This For is connecting this to the foregoing Discourse, and is a further Improvement of the Argument laid down, v. 9, proving the Necessity and Excellency of the one Sacrifice offered by Christ for Sinners unto God, from the weakness of all the legal ones. For if all the multitude of them were not able to take away one offering, how much less might they abolish them, and to perfect all who use it, then not these legal ones, but his is necessary to be valued by the Hebrews, and preferred to that end; the Demonstration of which takes up from v. 1, to 19, of this Chapter. b The law judicial Ordinary given from God to Israel by him in the Wilderness of Sin; Priesthood, Covenants, Sacrifices and Services, which that did contain, c Chap. 8, v. 1. A Shadow is lower than an Image, and of another kind from the reality or Substance; a dark, obscure Representation of what was to fulfil them, viz. of Christ, with all his Ministry and Privileges attending his Covenants, both for Time and Eternity; this the Mosaic Law-real comprehended, but all in a Shadow-work. d They are not the very Essence and Substance themselves of those things, the Patterns, or real Sample, but a shadowy Representation; they lead their Users to Christ and his matters, which they represented, but were not the substantial good things themselves. So Imag is read, 2 Cor. 13, 49, we have carried the Image of the things, Adam, that is, his Nature. e The legal Sacrifices are not only imperfect in respect of their Constitution, but of their very Nature; being only Shadows, so as they cannot render a Soul complete, either in respect of justification or Satisfaction, it could not free any either from the Guilt or Punishment of Sin.

Sin at present, much less eternally, with all the Benovation of them either on the Day of Atonement yearly, or those daily offered by them, who they should continue to be offered for ever, yet could they not perfect either the Priests ministering or those for whom they ministered, who were eternally living themselves on the Expiration-day. They being designed only to point the People to this better Sacrifice of Christ, which was to perfect them, that Work being so noble, and above the power of Shadows to perform.

2 For then j would they not have ceased to be offered g, because that the worshippers once purged, should have had no more conscience of sins:

h For, proves the weakness of that shadowy Service under the Law, because it never ceased, which it would if it had perfected its Users; and having reached its end, and done that Work, have ceased; for these Sacrifices would not of right have been repeated, neither needed they, if they could have justified and sanctified Souls for ever. g For then this effect would have followed, the Worshippers if were to be atoned for, or expiated by these Sacrifices, if they had perfected them, i. e. pardoned, justified and acquitted them from Guilt of Sin and Punishment, there would have nothing remained to have troubled, vexed, or tormented their Souls, they being no further accused or condemned by their Conscience about Sin. God having justified and sanctified them, ch. 9, 14, 25, 28, comp. Rom. 5, 1, 2, 11.

3 But h in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year.

i If the legal Sacrifices could have perfected their Offerers, there would have been no Remembrance of Sins; but there is a Remembrance of Sins yearly, therefore they are weak and cannot perfect. i These shadowy Sacrifices yearly re-remembered, fill the Soul with Guilt and Killing Power, loading and grinding the Conscience by Accusation and Condemnation for them, as well as forcing them in the Light of God's Countenance. For in the Expiration-day Adam was to remember and to confess over the Head of the Scape-Goat, laying his hands on it, all the Churches of Sin of the past offered for them, Lev. 16, 22. For as soon as that was done, their expiating Virtue vanished, and so they renewed their Sacrifices without any spiritual Profit by them, the Guilt of past and present Sins remaining still; whereas Christians now renewing Sin, do renew their Faith and Repentance, but not their Sacrifice for it; the Virtue of which in a full and final Absolution applied to them, by the Spirit, makes them to have, upon their final Accounts, no Conscience of Sin for ever.

4 For * k it is i not possible that the blood of bulls m and of goats, should take away sins.

l For, gives a reason of the precedent Proof, That the legal Sacrifices did keep Sins in Remembrance; for they were of such matter as could not have any causal Power to take them away. i This is equivalent to an Universal Negative, the Impossibility being absolute as to the things themselves in their very Nature, they being corporeal, can have no Influence upon a spiritual Evil in the Soul, Mich. 6, 6, 7, and by God's Constitution they were to lead them to better things, God being not pleased with flesh and blood, Plam. 50, 13, Heb. 10, 11. m The Blood of these were only carried into the Holy of Holiest on the Atonement-day, yearly, Lev. 16, 17, to which this is chiefly applied; not could the blood of all the other Sacrifices by Expiation, pardon their Offerers, nor by Satisfaction cleanse them; nor by removing the sense of them, comfort the Soul; they could neither pacify God, nor the Sinners Conscience, having no Virtue or Power to cleanse God's Justice, or merit his Grace, only it had by his Constitution a Power to type out that Blood which could do both.

5 Wherefore n when he cometh into the world, he saith, o Sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not, but a body j hast thou prepared me:

n And introduced the Proof of the Invalidity of legal Sacrifices, and the Efficacy of the one Sacrifice of Christ, from Divine Testimony about both of them. o God the Son, who existed before his Incarnation, Isaiah God the Father, when he was coming into this World, to become a part of it, by uniting an holy Human Nature to the Divine, as David voucheth by the Spirit of God, Plam. 40, 8. The bloody atoning Sacrifices of Bulls and Goats, the Peace-offerings, and Thank-offerings, Lev. 17, 16, and Offerings of every sort without Blood, required by the Law of Mos, God did not desire, Lev. 17, 10, nor delight in as in themselves propitiatory; for he never intended them to take away Sin, to perfect the Worshippers. See 1 Sam. 15, 22, Ps. 117, 1, to 15, Jer. 6, 20, Amos 5, 21, 22, Ps. Bar the Hebrew Text reads, The ears hast thou bored for me. The Apostle makes use here of the Greek, Paraphrase, A Body hast thou fitted me; as giving in proper Terms the sense of the former figurative Expression, discovering thereby Christ's entire willingness to become God's Servant for ever, Exod. 21, 6, and that he might be so, which could not be, as God the Son, simply, the Father by his Spirit did articulate him, and formed him joint by joint; b Body; that is, furnished him with that Human Nature, so as that he might perform that piece of Service which God required, offering up himself a bloody Sacrifice for Sin, to which he was obedient, Phil. 2, 8. Thus were his Ears bored, which could not be, if he had not been clothed with a Body.

6 In burnt-offerings and sacrifices for sin q thou hast had no pleasure:

r Two sorts of Sacrifices are added to the former, as whole Burnt-offerings, which were all consumed by Fire on God's Altar, and no part of them came to the Priests, Lev. 1, 3, 9, 10, 13, 14, 17. And Peace-offerings, which were not totally consumed, but part of them was the Priests Portion, Exod. 29, 27, 28. These four sorts of Sacrifices comprehend all the Aaronical Offerings for Expiation: God did not require or desire any of these for themselves, or for the perverting of Sinners: He did not do as such and approve them, or take any pleasure in them.

7 Then said i, r Lo, i come (in the volume s of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God.

s When the Father declared the Sacrifices of Beasts and Birds would not please him, nor be accepted for expiating Sins, Isaiah 1, 11, appeared in Person, and declared, Lev. 1, 1 came with will and true Sacrifice. i I appeared with my full Human Nature, fully resolved to offer that to Thee as a Propitiatory Sacrifice, John 12, 27, comp. Plam. 40, 7. s Revel. the Head of our Translators keep to the Hebrew ספר the Volume of the Book, Plam. 40, 7. Books with the Hebrews, were Rolls of Parchment stitched at the top, and so rolled up. In this Book was Christ every where written and spoken of, as he testified himself before his Death, John 5, 39, after his Resurrection, Lev. 24, 44, 45, 46. The Scripture render is, the Word, as being the first word and beginning of the whole Roll, so wit, in the Books of Mos, Comp. Plam. 24, 27. And in the entrance of them the Spirit testified of his Deity, and of his Union to the Humanity, being to be conceived and born of a Virgin, and offering himself a Sacrifice to expiate Sin, and reconcile Sinners, Gen. 3, 15, comp. John 5, 45, 47. t To obey his Fathers Command, of dying an Expiatory Sacrifice for Sinners. It was his Father's Will that he should offer himself for satisfying his Justice, making way for his Mercy, and to redeeming and recovering lost Souls. This Will of God was in his Heart, he delighted to obey it, Plam. 40, 8, and his own natural Will that would reject it, he would deny, and would not use his Power to deliver himself from it, Math. 26, 39, 45, John 11, 11.

8 Above u when he said, Sacrifice, and offering, and burnt-offerings, and offering for sin thou wouldst not, neither hadst pleasure therein, (which are offered by the Law):

u In this Verse the Apostle repeats the whole Testimony, produced out of the Plam only with a Specification in a Paraphrase; which are offered by the Law; viz. flesh Sacrifices, against which the Apostle argues, which could not purge away Sin, nor procure righteousness, nor make no more the Conscience of Sins. He observes from the Plam, that the Will of God was plainly signified by his Spirit to David under the Law, above the Nature, State and Design of his Institution of Sacrifices, that they were typical of, and leading to a better Sacrifice than themselves; and that for their own sake only, they were to way acceptable to God, and so rejected by him.

9 Then w said he, Lo, i come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first; x that he may establish the second.

y In this Verse the Apostle collects the Platonic Assertion of God the Father's accepting his Sacrifice, the offering whereof was so exactly agreeable to his Will, when he was displeased with the legal ones, and this revealed to David when he was passionately using them according to the Law. x God therefore abolished all the legal Sacrifices, which he commanded to be used as Types of the better Sacrifice he had provided, because of their insufficiency and Weakness as to expiate Sin, or pacify Conscience, that he might establish that Sacrifice of the Body of Christ for abolishing Sin, and bringing in everlasting Righteousness, which was offered, and an actual Oblation agreeable to his Will and Command, Plam. 2, 7, 8. This being thus proved, he concludes from it, v. 10.

10 By the which y will we are sanctified z * Chap. 12; through the offering a of the body b of Jesus Christ once for all.

y That spoken of, Plam. 40, 8, that Will and Command of God given to Christ, God-Man, that he should once offer up his hath, ch. 2, 4, enforcing the former Duty pressed from the Grace of Perseverance, and the loss by withdrawing when Christ shall come. They are cited by this Apostle Paul to several Purposes, as to prove, That Righteousness is only obtained by Faith from God, and not by Man's own Works, Rom. 1, 17, and Gal. 2, 11. That whoever is righteous by Faith, shall live by it, by which that Righteousness is Faith, as here. The Apostle, according to the terms of the Covenant, who believed, and is renewed and sanctified by the Spirit, shall really, spiritually, happily, eternally live; and not end finally to that Life of his, till it be perfected by Christ in Glory. And this he shall live by a real and spiritual Affliction to the Gospel, and Reliance on God's Promises in it, especially by a Christian Faith, God-Man, as the Lord their Righteousness, by which we have him ours, and so we live. This Faith is a gift, continued in, and held fast amidst all Reproaches, Sufferings and Persecutions; by this only is the Life due to Righteousness, made sure to Sinners, drawing from Christ daily, and making real and present the Fulfillment of it promised to us, and expected, by it. Mark 13, 13. John 17, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

39 But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition, but of them that believe, to the saving of the soul.

The Conclusion is an hopeful Assertion of their Condition, or a direct Intimation of what they ought to be, even like himself; and to the Apostle removes all jealousy of reflecting on them, ch. 6, 9. The Adversative, but, is an Exception of them to whom he writes from the Apostasy-State, and to joys himself with them, hoping they were such as Paul, as he was, and as they ought to be de jure, and to imitate their Duty, and that all Christians. We are not of Disobedience, Persons withdrawing and tacking from Christ, his Gospel, or Duties; Apostates from the Truth, and not of Disobedience, an utter Separation from all Good, Life, and Glory, and full Subjection of Body and Soul to eternal Torments in Hell, by the righteous Sentence of God; who are Sons of Delection, are Sons of Perdition, Math. 10, 28. John 17, 12, 2 Thess. 2, 3. 1 Sam. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

CHAP. XI.

Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

The Holy Spirit proceeds in this Chapter to strengthen the Council he had given Hebrews to continue Paul in the Faith of Christ, to the end that they may receive their reward, the Salvation of their Souls, chap. 10, 20, and 1 Pet. 1, 9, and to begin with a description of that Faith, and proves it to be effectual to this end, by instances out of all Ages of the World before them, wherein the Old-Testament Believers had found it to be so. The definition of it is laid down 2, 1. The proof of it in both parts, 2, 2, 3. And the illustration of its power by Examples from 2, 4 to 40. The particle et hence is inferred as a discovery of that Faith, which is saving or purchasing the Soul; which that none of these Hebrews may be mistaken in, he describes them from its effect, and not from its form and essence. Faith is here a Divine Fruit of the Spirit, given and wrought by it in its Effect, and is justifying and purchasing the Soul to Glory, John 12, 38. Rom. 5, 1, 2 Cor. 13, 9, Eph. 1, 19, 20, and 2, 8. b. Titus 2, 12. c. 1 Cor. 13, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

God (which is the basis or foundation of it) by which the spiritual good things to come, and which Paul not under Paul, yet with a most cheerful and intense desire Paul not under Paul, but a mental intellectual existence and subsistence in the Soul which Paul not under Paul, and a descriptive discovery of that which Paul not under Paul, but a spiritual, and Paul not under Paul, and therefore is filled by Logicians a Demerit; hence it notes Faith to be that Spiritual space which by God's Revelation demonstrates or makes evident all things not seen by sense, or natural reason without it, as matters of Spiritual Truth, Good and Evil in their several kinds, both past, present, and to come, John 17, 6, 8. Eph. 1, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

2 This is a proof of the first part of Faith's description, that it is the substance of things hoped for: For all the Hebrews were testified of to have this power of Faith in realizing their Hopes. 1 Peter 1, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

3 By Faith we understand that the * worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen, were not made of things which do appear.

This proves the second part of Faith's Description, *v. 1. That it is the evidence of things not seen, for it is only we understand the Creation which is not seen. It is the same Divine Faith as described before, but as evidencing invisible Truths, it communicates a marvellous Light to the understanding, and leaves real impressions of it from the Word of God, whereby it arriveth unto a most certain knowledge of what is above the power of natural reason to convey, and gives a divine access to it, first as it is at, clear, free, and fruitful, different from that of the Gentiles, Rom. 1, 19, to 23. 7 The Hebrews, the word notes sometimes Angels, Luke 16, 8, the Arch and corrupt Paul of Men who live in them, Eph. 2, 2. Eternity: But there ch. 1, 2, it is a word of aggregation, signifying all kinds of Creatures, viz. their several places, times, and periods; things Celestial, Terrestrial, and Subterranean, Angels, Men, and all sorts of Creatures, together with all the states and conditions in which they were made, Heaven, Earth, and Seas, with all their Hosts of Creatures; the visible Creation and the invisible World were put into being and existence; placed in their proper order, disposed and fixed to their end by the mighty Word of God; Trinity in Unity the Creator; his powerful Fiat, without any pain, or trouble, or assisting Causes, instantly effected this miracle, glorious Work; Job 1, 14, and it was done, *Gen. 1, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

4 By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained et witnesses that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead, yet speaketh.

The Spirit begins here to illustrate his Description of Faith by induction of instances, throughout the former Ages of the Church to the time of these Hebrews. And he begins with Believers in the Old World before the Flood. Faith is the same Divine Grace as described before, only here to be considered as Paul not under Paul, but a spiritual, and Paul not under Paul, and therefore is filled by Logicians a Demerit; hence it notes Faith to be that Spiritual space which by God's Revelation demonstrates or makes evident all things not seen by sense, or natural reason without it, as matters of Spiritual Truth, Good and Evil in their several kinds, both past, present, and to come, John 17, 6, 8. Eph. 1, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

than Cain his elder Brother, not, it may be, for external price, but internal worth; Cain offered the fruits of the ground, such as God afterwards required in the Ceremonial Law, but he was not sensible of the guilt, and filth of Sin, and of its demerits, nor desirous to remove it in the due way and order appointed, as appears by his Murdering of his Brother after: Abel's Sacrifice was better, excelling; because more fully agreeable to God's Willing purging and pardoning Sin, full of spiritual and eternal life, Sin, and Faith in Christ's Sacrifice. By which Sacrifice of Faith, he had Testimony that he acknowledged himself a Sinner, that had need of the Blood of Christ to sprinkle him, yet he was righteous by the righteousness of Faith, Rom. 3, 22, 23, 24, 25, which is upon Abel, as all other Believers, Phil. 3, 9. And this testified to his Soul by God's Spirit, that he was justified and Sanctified, and so eminently righteous, and it was manifested to others, Christ himself God-Man witnessing of it, Math. 23, 35. 1 God himself witnesseth from Heaven to the truth of his state, by accepting of his person and Sacrifice, and giving a visible Sign of it, so as Cain could observe it, and be displeased at the difference God made between him and his Brother, Gen. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

5 By Faith Enoch was translated, that he should not see death, and was not found, because God had translated him: For before his translation he had this testimony that he pleased God.

By the Divine Faith before described, that which reacheth home to God through Christ; Enoch the seventh Patriarch a descendent from Adam of the Churches Line, Gen. 5, 21. An eminent Prophet and Seer, denouncing judgment against the ungodly ones of this time, so as to awaken them to Repentance, Jude 14, 15, was taken by God, Gen. 5, 24. The Apostle keeps to the Sepagunian Translation of the Text: He was miraculously changed in his Body from a mortal to an immortal fate, and this without any separation of his Soul from it. God out of an extraordinary Grace and Favour to him, dispensed with the common Sentence past on the human Seed in Adam, as he did many Ages after to Elijah. He died not, as the rest of the Fathers of the Church, Gen. 5, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

6 But without ra faith, it is impossible to please him, for he that saith cometh to God, must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

The Spirit here proves, that Enoch pleased God by Faith, though it was not expressly written in his Text by Hebrews, because of the impossibility of pleasing God without Faith; but without Faith, Enoch is Christ, whom Enoch pleased; it is absolutely impossible to do any thing acceptable to God, so as to be justified by him; for indelicately or want of Faith makes God a Liar, 1 John 5, 10. Christ a Vanity, John 5, 40, and God's Will a Decree, which perpetually fails, there is no pleasing of him but by Faith in Christ, John 14, 6. The Hebrews conceive without Cause, as is proved in the next words: "For whoever he be, every particular Soul that cometh out of Sin to God, so as to be under his conduct and influence; makes out by spiritual motions of his Mind, Will, Affections and Members, in Thoughts, Desires, Inclinations and Operations to enjoy God, so as to be accepted, with, justified by, and blessed of him; and as preface makes his access to him with liberty and boldness in Prayer, or any other Word through Christ. The Spirit here proves, that Enoch pleased God by Faith, though it was not expressly written in his Text by Hebrews, because of the impossibility of pleasing God without Faith; but without Faith, Enoch is Christ, whom Enoch pleased; it is absolutely impossible to do any thing acceptable to God, so as to be justified by him; for indelicately or want of Faith makes God a Liar, 1 John 5, 10. 21. Through this Divin Faith, both the Prophets Elijah and Elisha, did raise and refigure, the one to the Widow of Sarepta, 1 King, 17, 22, 23, the other to the Samaritan, 2 King, 4, 35, 36; their Sons from the dead; and these Women and Mothers did by Faith receive grace from the Prophets alive again, who by Faith and Prayer procured this Mercy from the quickening Lord, for them. In the general Reformation of Faith, therein is only recursive; we shall enjoy Life again, and receive others from the dead alive. In Others alive, besides the Prophets fore-mentioned, 2 32, impetrations, were typified; what manner of torturing Death this was, is not so certain, whether by Examination, and mauling Drun-heads of their Skins, or extending them on the Rack, as the Skin was stretched upon the Cross, and the tormentors were other Instruments, beating them to Death; of which sort of Sufferers seems Elijah to have been under Antiochus Epiphanes, 2 Macc, 6, 19, 30, for his not turning Heaten, when urged to it by that Torture; and to him his Diligence from Torture and Death were offered to him by his Tormentors on his Compliance with them, and renouncing his Religion, yet he refused it as foresaid, 2 32, 2 33, 2 34, refusing to be used for the sake of his Religion, and not turn idolater, and defile God's Name. That which influenced them to suffer, was their Faith in God's Promise of obtaining thereby a Reurrection to an incomparable better Life than they could have enjoyed on Earth; for tho' they might have been spared from Death now thrust them, this was a kind of Reurrection to eternal Life, in comparison of the Reurrection to eternal Life, Glory, Bliss, and Pleasure, to be enjoyed by them with God in Heaven; see what influenced them, 2 Cor, 4, 17, 18.

They felt the Scourges and Whips of their Enemies Satan on them, such as were exceedingly harmful, and they were able to bear them, and to triumph over them, such as was the matter of these Scourges, which their Smartings, whether of Thorns, Gords, or Wires, Jer. 20. 2. and 37. 15. They cheerfully and patiently received the cruel Torments of their Persecutors, who put them in the Stocks, places of little Eaf, Dungeons, loading them with Iron Shackles and Straiters, which the Weakness of Man had invented to torment them with; and their cruel usage by their Goads, restraining them from their Wicked and Unlawful ways, and forcing them with the Bread and Water of affliction, 2 Chrm. 18. 26. Act. 16. 24.

2 Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our Faith, who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

As if all the former Witnesses were not enough, he adds a more excellent one than them all, even our Lord Jesus Christ, who is not only a Patron to them in their Faith and Ministry, but is himself a Witness which end they were waiting to him, the word appropos is used, which is in all the New Testament, and signifieth a looking off from whatever would distract us from carefully looking on the principal Object alone; and though a word of little, yet here notable an adu. of the mind. It is borrowed from Rhetor., they fixedly eye their Guides, who look off them on in their course; so must a Christian in his Race look off all things else, and singly and intently look on Jesus to help him thorough it; appropos, chap. 2. to. here it denotes Jesus to be the great Infructifer of, and chief Leader in the Christian Race, and Perfecter of them in running it. In this running, grace, ability and success which they have for running, is the gift of God, the beginning of the work of Faith unto the end of it, the beginning of the course, he doth infuse, assist, strengthen and accomplish the work of it in the *John 6. 29, 30. * For, scilicet this to be a causative reason against fainting under God's rebukes, and enforcing the foregoing Duty; since whomsoever, Son or Daughter, every Child of God the Father choicely loveth, taketh into his Bosom, tendereth as a Parent doth a Child, Eph. 5. 1. He *nurtur*eth, instructs, corrects by his Word and Rod in its respective measure, for their spiritual profit and advantage, 1 Cor. 11. 32. v Scourgeth, noteth the highest degree of Chastening, even with the persecution and most severe Punishment, wherein God proceedeth with all every Son or Child, nor any excepted, whom he hath Adopted and received into his Bosom with complacency and delight, chap. 1. 8. compare Prov. 3. 12. Math. 17. 5. Rev. 3. 19, where though the Words do vary, yet the sense is one, and the same; God correcting, as a Father, the Son in whom he delighteth.

7 If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for y what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?

* His reason he illustrateth from the convertibility of suffering Affliction and Chastening from God the Father, and being his Child; if ye have a Child-like sense of Chastening, such Afflictions and Sufferings from him, as the bear them, and by Faith expect a saving issue from them; God the Father in Love Chastening you, beareth, carrieth and cherisheth himself to you as a Father to his Son full of Grace and Love, Luk. 26. 41. Job. 13. 15. Psl. 89. 30. Mich. 7. 9. y No Son or Child of God can be influenced in, who was capable of Chastening, but more or less than he felt it, even God's own and best beloved one, chap. 5. 8. for our sakes felt it, Heb. 5. 9. The Interrogation is a vehement exhortation, and so to be resolved.

8 But z if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons.

* But if God chasten ye not, or if he do, and ye have not Grace, or do not rightly understand it, are not managing your selves well under it, nor are profited by it, when all and every one of his Children are partakers of it, then are ye z falsi and spurious Seed, and not God's genuine Offspring, Bastards in his account; and indeed so the most forlorn, wretched persons of all others, under the Power and Dominion of Sin, hurrying them on to their own Destruction, John 8. 41. These Visible Church-Members have a Bastardly disposition, Hearts alienated from God and his Law, and inclined to the Will and Works of the Flesh, expressing it in their conversion, running into the excess of Sin, having no chastening to restrain them, and are detected by God for it, Heb. 1. 4. 5. 9. Heb. 4. 14. 17.

9 Furthermore * we have had fathers of our flesh who corrected us, and we b gave them reverence; shall we not much rather be in subjection unto * the Father of spirits d and * live?

* He enforceth the Duty of not despising nor fainting under the Lord's Chastening, from the consideration of his being our Father, and better than any Earthly one, and from his Goodness in that relation, and therefore we ought to submit to it: We have had our natural Parents, as we are Children, and who were the subordinate cause of our Being as to our Bodies, Job. 7. 5. 10, and they were instructors and correctors of us; made of the Rod as well as the Word for our nurture; they have Whipped and Chastised us, putting us to Smart and Pain, 1 Sam. 7. 14. Prov. 22. 15. 1 Pet. 2. 23. b Εντρέφοντες imports a caring of Bonitas and Spiritus within him towards their Fathers, covered with shame and blushing for their faults, and afraid to look them, when offending, in the Face, reverencing them, chastening, and submitting to the Penalty, so as to reform and turn from the faults for which they were corrected. c The Exposition shows the vehemency of the Argument more than a simple position. It is the highest reason, of all right we must and ought to be as well our Privilege as Duty to deny our selves, and be in that subjection, the free and willing subordination of our Spirits to God, as the Rod calls for it, receiving the Correction, reforming under it, and resigning our Souls to him who is the Creator of them as to their natural and spiritual Being, and the Sovereign, Guardian, Protector, and Disposer of them; Men nor Angels have any power over them, but this Father of them only, and his great Work and Concern is about them, Gen. 2. 7. Num. 27. 16. Eccl. 12. 7. Zech. 12. 1. d By his chastening of our Spirits, our Immortal Souls, Job. 3. 5. Rom. 8. 5. 6. He is furnishing them with more and more holiness, whereby they are enabled to live more wholly to God, from Grace to Glory. He makes them live more the life of God, which God in Flesh lived on Earth, Gal. 2. 20. Eph. 4. 18. Phil. 1. 21. 1 Pet. 4. 6. 1 John 3. 3. This Chastening promotes this Honourable Life as an instrument and means to God's hand, and advancement it daily, till it is perfected in Eternal Life, Heb. 14. 22. Rom. 5. 3. 4. 5. 8. 18. 2 Cor. 4. 17. 18. James 1. 12. Jude 1. 22.

10 For they e verily for a few days chastened w after their own pleasure; but he f for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness.

* As God hath his Prerogative in paternity, so he hath the transcendence in kind of Chastening his Children; for our natural Parents, Fathers of our Bodies, nurtured us by the Word and Rod for a little time, the days of Childhood and Youth, as they would and thought good, as they apprehended their Power over them, Arbitrarily, Partially, without reaching what is best for them by it; their own thoughts whether good or bad, were the rule of their chastening, and such as their thoughts are, such is their end, how imperfect and defective may be seen in it. But God the Father of our Spirits corrects us 22 of conscientia, which strictly uses comparation, intimating that in his Chastening his Children, he brings in his help, puts as it were his Shoulder to it; brings in his flag of Grace, and so trans together with them unto their advantage and profit in spiritual life, and this during our whole Life. Thus which he bears home to them, and puts in them by his Chastening, is his holiness of which being made partakers they thrive mightily as to their Spiritual Life, and increase in the Divine Nature, with all the increase of God, Eph. 3. 13. 19. Col. 2. 19.

11 Now g no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless h afterwards k it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.

* A Father Argument to persuade Christians not to despise nor faint under the Lord's Chastening, is the good issue of them, subjoined to fortify them against the suggestions of Flesh and Blood; as if they could not be from Love, nor for good, because they are smarting and grieving; therefore the Spirit allens the Truth as to both: All these Chastening, and rebukes that the Father of Spirit inflicts on his Children, nor one excepted, are for all the time they are so inflicted, suited by his Children to be as they are; they feel them to have no Sm in them, but a great deal of Grief, Pain, and Smart, are not pleasing of themselves; and God would not have them to be so, but his to feel the Smart of his Rod, when he corrects them with it. h Yes, have not his Children any reason to despise or faint under them; for they are not always to continue, and there accrue after them a Benefit to them, that will make amends for them all the afterward following to Eternity; this chastening redreth and bringeth forth to all the corrected Children, who labour to improve the Smart, under the Direction and Blessing, a righteous Compliance with the whole Will of God, and a purging out of all Sin, Job. 27. 9, filling the Soul full of Joy and Peace, and securing to the chastened a confidence of all that Good that will abundantly reward them for their Sufferings, feeling them above them, and making them blessed, Heb. 32. 17. Rom. 5. 1. 5. James 1. 2. 3. 4.

12 Wherefore lift up i the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees.

* This introduceth the use of the Doctrine of God's chastening Provisions, stated before; Therefore concludes the Rationality, and necessity of the Duty subjoined, as consequence from the Truth asserted before. Αναστρέφοντες notes the making, or setting aright which was out of its proper place and posture, as disordered members, into their right Frame and Composure, which there be not any Let in our Christian Race, nor fainting by our Conscience in its By-laws demands, and psylli Knies, are metaphorically represented the Hearts, Spirits, and Souls of these Children, such as droop, dejected, and are ready to faint and die away under chastening, Heb. 35. 3. 4. 5. 6. freed from the Covenant-Dispensation at Mount Sinai. ¶ You have not been called, as to your Body, to journey it to Sinai, or as to your Faith to clothe with that Covenant-Administration, to depend on, or have any Expectation from it, as delivered by Moses at Mount Sinai in Arabia, a Mountain visible, accessible, terrible, on earth, signifying the Covenant-Dispensation from this Mount to be low, and earthly, occasioning earthly Thoughts of God, and carriage to him, sticking in an earthly Altar-Sacrifice, and carnal, and sensual Religion, to the Law written in Stones, without minding the Spirituality of it, or having it in Hearts, walking wisely in this Wilderness-flute, yet by the Charge of God, not sensible by Faith at that time, that they come near to it in the third Month after their coming out of Egypt, Exod. 19. 1, 2, 13, 23. ¶ To the Fire, in the which the Lord descended on the Mount, Exod. 19. 18, which burnt unto the midst of Heaven, Dut. 4. 1, 11. and 5. 23, 24, and would consume them that broke that Law, which he spake to them out of it, Dut. 23. 2. ¶ To the black, thick Smoke that ascended as the Smoke of a Furnace, Exod. 19. 18, to Darkest, occasioned by the thick Clouds enveloping the Mount, Dut. 4. 11. and 5. 23, to Thimble, the Storm of Thundering, and Lightning, and Earthquake, the terrible Attendants of this Solemnity, Exod. 19. 16, 18, and 20. 18. all these flowing forth the fiery and terrible Storms of Wrath and Indignation, which should pursue the breakers of this Covenant, to the lowest Hell; giving them in this Delivery of the Law, a visible Type of what should be the issue of their breaking it, Exod. 19. 22, 24. These Terrors of the Almighty did so fright them, that they run from God, and fear not themselves to the tedious pursuit of Holiness, Heb. 12. 18, 19.

19 And ¶ the found of a trumpet, and the voice of words, which saith they that heard it, ¶ intreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more :

¶ which was most shrill and dreadful, it sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, giving a fearful Alarm unto Israel to draw near to the Lord to hear his Law to them, and covenant with them, and to see a Type of their Doom, if they transgressed it, in an obscure Representation of the General Judgment, Exod. 19. 15, 16, and 20. 18, compare 1 Thim. 4. 1, 2. 1 Thim. 1. 7, 8. ¶ After which Alarm the Angel of the Covenant uttered his Voice out of the Fire most majestically, distinctly, and loudly, spake to Israel in their own Language, the Ten Words, or Commandments, which they might hear and understand them, so as they feared them to be dreadful for their soul and man, Exod. 20. 1, 10, 20. Dut. 4. 10, 12, 13, and 5. 10, 28. ¶ The People being overwhelmed with the Majesty and Dreadfulness of that Voice, deprecated any more for matter or manner of Manifestation to them, Exod. 20. 19. Dut. 5. 23, 24, 25, 26, and 18, 16. And therefore desired Moses to speak to them God's Law, and that God might speak no more to them.

20 For if they could not endure that which was commanded. And if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thruth through with a dart.

¶ The refection of the foregoing Deprecation, and which adds to the Terribleness of this Covenant-Dispensation for the Voice supplied their Strength and Capacity, that they must die, if they heard it any more; so dreadful was the found and matter of it: for the Commandment and threatening was, That if any Man or Beast did but as much as touch the Mountain, they should die for it, Exod. 19. 12, 13, 21, 23.

21 Therefore was Moses so strictly charged to look to it, and to provide against it, shewing the Dreadfulness of the Covenant-Dispensation, that if Men did not keep their Beasts from coming near, they should be stoned, or darts to Death; how much more themselves, if they should transgress the Law, which, tho' it is designed to lead them unto Christ, have not generally so discerned or used by them. So that if the Publication of it be so terrible, how much more the Punishment for breaking it? Exod. 20. 20.

21 And ¶ so terrible was the sight, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake.

¶ It must needs be a dreadful, fearful, horrid, and afflicting Apparition, and Exhibition of the great Law-giver, that such a Person as Moses, so sanctified by him, so favoured with Familiarity with him, so consoled Mediator between the People and God in this Work for their Good and Comfort; so called and ordered by God to manage it, yet should cry to God to succour him, while he did quake and tremble at it; and was comforted and strengthened by God's Voice to him again, Exod. 19. 19. Christians now have no Call, nor Accents to be terrified a Dispensation of the Law, but have Immunity, Exemption, and Freedom from it, which was so helpful to Holiness, as the Gospel-Dispensation, to which now they have actual Admission, having freed them from all the Terrors and Curses of the Mosaic Law.

22 But ¶ by e are come unto ¶ mount Zion, and ¶ unto the City of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to ¶ an innumerable company of angels.

¶ The Spirit now adds the Privilege of Christians in the better flate, to which they have been by the Gospel-Dispensation from this 22nd to the 24th Verse; yet have left those Hindrances and Disadvantages inforced in before, but are come to these Helps for your furtherance in Holiness; they have an Access to all those most excellent, tho' invisible things, by Faith, and by it attain them, and are incorporated into them, as they follow. ¶ This is not literally to be understood for the Mount, on which the City of David was built, for that was as visible, and touchable as Mount Sinai, to which it is opposed; but that Mount which is higher than the highest, as high as Heaven it self, v. 25. Ch. 9. 24. Job. 3. 12. Where is the most orderly Government of God for Holiness, Mich. 4. 7, whence all good Gifts, and Gospel-Blessings are conveyed to the Church, of which these Believers were Members, 1 Jo. 8. 18, and 28. 16, and 59. 20. Rov. 14. 1. ¶ Of which the living God is the Builder and Maker, and wherein he dwelleth, where nothing but Life is, and whence Christ's Voice giveth Life to dead Souls, insubling them to live a Life of Holiness to God, as Phil. 4. 4, 5, and 48. 1, 8, and 87. 1 Jo. 6. 14. Job. 5. 25. to distinguish this from any earthly City or Corporation, it is said to be the Heavenly Jerusalem, its Original, Nature and End being all heavenly; a fruitful place, where Believers are made Partakers of the most spiritual Influences for Holiness; where there is nothing carnal, terrible, deadly, barren, but all causal and productive of Holiness in the church, Heb. 6. 2, and 65. 17, 18, 19, and 65. 10. ¶ In which City are many excellent Iudicaments which Believers are incorporated, and to whom they have Relation, as Myrist of Angels, who are ministering Spirits unto the Gospel, as under the Law, full of Holiness, Honour, Agility and Indomitable, fit for their Work, and End; who, tho' for numbers, are thousands and millions of them, Phil. 63. 17, and 103. 20, and 104. 4. Alis. 7. 53. Gal. 3. 19. Rov. 5. 11. yet are all fulfilling their Lord's Pleasure in every place, as ordered by him. Their Ministration of the Law was terrible in flaming Fire, but of the Gospel, most sweet and gracious, 1 Thim. 1. 14. At Sinai they ministered externally, and sensibly, affecting Senses; but from Sion they minister spiritually, to Hearts, Math. 4. 11. Luk. 22. 43. 1 Pet. 1. 11, refuting evil Spirits ministering wickedly. Their Ministry little effectual under the Law, but under the Gospel, Living. Alis. 7. 26, 27. 1 Thim. 1. 14. Rov. 19. 10. ¶ The former Ministration temporary and ceasing, but this everlasting, tho' they bring their Trust into Abraham's Bosom, Luk. 16. 22. They are promoting Holiness by God's sending things to us by them, and by their observing the goings and doings of Christians, whether holy, or not, 1 Cor. 11. 10, and giving an Account of the Success of their Ministry unto him, as to this end, Math. 18. 10. And the neglect of this means to help our pursuing Holiness, will God require, 1 Thim. 2. 2.

23 To ¶ the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are ¶ written in heaven, and to ¶ God the judge of all, and to ¶ the spirits of just men made perfect,

¶ Other Inhabitants of this heavenly City and Polity with whom Believers are incorporated, are such, into whose Communion they have admittance here below, viz. to the ecclesiastical Assembly of Christ, his whole Body, the Fulness of which he filleth all in all in an Assembly gathered out of all Nations, Rov. 5. 9, and 7. 9, throughout the World, extended to all Times and Ages, especially to that part of it which is on Earth, flourishing here, fitting for Heaven; the other parts triumphing in it. They are not called, or incorporated only into a particular national Assembly, a fraternal Society, as the Old-Testament Church was, the general Assembly of Saints are more helpful to Holiness, than a celler, Phil. 22. 27. Gal. 4. 25, 26, 27. ¶ This General Assembly is not a Rout, but a Church, such as are called out of the World with a holy Calling, subjecting themselves to Christ as their Head, and are, as quickened, so ordered by him; it is not a weak, or an Infant-Church, but strong and perfect, come unto nature, and respect the great Discoveries of the Mysteries of God, made by Christ to them, chap. 5. 12, 13, and 6. 1. Gal. 4. 1, 3, 4. This chosen, called, and well-ordered Society, were only of such Persons, who were the First-born of God, and Partners of Christ's Sonship and Primogeniture, being regenerated by him, and dignified with his Church-membership, Rov. 8. 17, 29. They are the Mighty and Excellency of Christ, whereas the Church at Sinai, for the Body of them, were but typically, literally, and externally so, Exod. 4. 22. Col. 1. 15, 18, and did not universally enjoy, as those do, the strength and fulness of Grace from God, 1 Jo. 1. 16. Gal. 3. 26, 29. are Joint-heirs with Christ, Rom. 8. 17, and made by him Kings and Priests to God and his Father, 1 Pe. 2. 9. Rov. 1. 6. ¶ They were not, as the Church at Sinai, of an earthly Exilement, registered here to know their Families and and descent, whether right Jews and Priests or no, whose Genealogy was preserved to that end, Exod. 2. 43, &c. but had their Right in Heirs, were written in the Lamb's Book of Life, to be of Heavenly descent, Born of God, partakers of the Divine Nature, and who had Right and Title by Faith in Christ to the Heavenly Inheritance, and were free Deputies of it, Luk. 10. 20, and have all Heavenly Privileges derived to them, Rov. 20. 13, 19, and 21. 27. How obliging, influencing, and promoting are these Privileges of every Christian, pursuit of Holiness. ¶ They were Christians privileged with an access, not as Israel had at Sinai with Fear and Terror, and Trembling, to so as to fly from the great Author, Lord and Judge of the Covenant, lest they died, as Exod. 20. 18, but with Liberty and Boldness of Faith, in the strength of Love and with firmness of Hope they come now on Sion, 1 Jo. 59. 20. 1 Jo. 12. 19, unto God in his Being and Sovereignty, who ruleth all, and who giveth to all according to their works, and in a most eminent manner such them, who as he is their Judge, hath not as at Sinai any Bars to keep them from him, Exod. 19. 12. 1 Thim. 4. 18. nor is Terrifying and Conflating, as then, Dut. 5. 24, 25, but justifying them, full of Grace and Love to all approaching him in Christ; his Throne is a Throne of Grace to him, comforting and encouraging them to make home to him, John. 5. 22. Alis. 10. 22. Rom. 3. 6, 50. as they have holdness in the day of Judgment, and stand unshaken before their Judge, and are strengthened by him, Rom. 8. 13, 24. ¶ John. 1. 12. he rewards them gloriously, 2 Tim. 2. 13, 24. ¶ Perfecting Holiness in them benevolently, and governing them with Glory above; what a help is this to pursue Holiness? ¶ The perfect flate to which the Gospel-Covenant leadeth, is promoting Holiness; for they have an access to the same Love, and are come into the same way of being perfected in Holiness, while the Spirits of the Righteous, separated from their Bodies enjoy in Heaven, and have a right unto, and shall have the certain enjoyment of the same Privilege, which carrieth through all difficulties in the pursuit of it, expecting themselves by Death to be put in possession with them of the same flate, Rom. 8. 22, 23. 2 Cor. 5. 12, 8. compare Phil. 3. 12, 13, 14.

24 And to ¶ Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant, and / to ¶ the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.

¶ The Mediator of the Sin-Covenant is better than the Mediator at Sinai, and more able to promote the Holiness required by it. Believers have not now access unto, or dependence on a Moses, a mere Man, and a Servant, declaring the God's Will, only a Sinner himself, trembling in his Office, and weary of his Climates, and whose Ministry is vanishing as his Person dying; but unto God the Sin-Covenant, a Son-Mediator, making Sons, and bringing them nearer to God, satisfying the Law for them, and writing it on their hearts; above all Sin himself, though a Sacrifice for it, who is able to save to the uttermost, for that he ever liveth to intercede for them, chap. 1. 1, 2, 3, and 3. 6, and 7. 26. Rov. 1. 13. He is the Mediator, not of a literal, dark, terrible, charging and condemning, temporary and vanishing Covenant, but of the most spiritual, lightness, gracious, justifying, sanctifying and everlasting Testamental-Dispensation of God, more effectually influencing Souls to Holiness than the Old, chap. 8. 10, 11. 2 Cor. 3. 6, and 5. 19. ¶ The Sacrifice ratifying the Sin-Covenant is more beneficially better than all the Typical Sacrifices confirming that at Sinai, is eminently purchasing and securing Holiness to those interested in it. The Blood of the immaculate Lamb of God, sprinkled on penitent, believing Sinners, which hath purchased Pardon for them, and so saves the Spirit to sanctify them throughout, and perfect them, chap. 9. 12. 1 Pe. 1. 18. ¶ 1 Jo. 1. 7, 9, and 6. 6. are free from access to the sprinkling of the Blood of Sacrificed Beasts, which was only typical and weak to purge the Conscience, calling Sin to remembrance yearly and daily, which was now forbidden and rejected as of no worth, and which, like Abel's, cried for Pardon of the Condemnation, Gen. 4. 10. Since their Blood now offered when Christ had, his blood was accounted of God as the Blood of Innocents slain, 1 Jo. 6. 6. ¶ Others render the Blood of Abel for the Blood of sprinkling of the Sacrifice that Abel offered unto God, Gen. 4. 4. which was sprinkled upon him; and so prefer Christ's Sacrifice, not only to that of Abel, but to all other Sacrifices have been from the beginning of the World, which though accepted by God, yet not like Christ, of which they were the Types. The sum of all these comparisons, is to show the greater helps, motives and encouragements that Christians have to pursue and perfect Holiness than all the Old-Testament Church had before them.

25 See that ye refuse not him that speaketh: For if it escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven :

¶ Here the Spirit closely applicth his former Arguments for their pursuit of Holiness, especially that of Christ's speaking by his Blood to them, by Caution, v. 25, 26, 27. ¶ Counsell, v. 28, 29. He introduceth this Caution with look ye, or take ye heed, a term expressing the things said to be great and weighty, intimating that fear, solicitude and watchfulness about this great and important concernment of their Souls, Luk. 12. 15, they flee to it there be no aversion in their Spirits to, no undervaluing or despising of, no diluting or Apostasy from, but a hearing, believing, and obeying Jesus speaking by his blood all the Gospel-Covenant to us, convincing them of Sin and Guilt that needed him, calling them to Repentance and Faith in the Word and Satisfaction, declaring his Intercession with God for Pardon, Holiness and Glory by it, and so implores them to follow Holiness which would evidence all this to them. ¶ He intercedeth his caution by a rational motive of the danger of their refusal, arguing from the less to the greater; that if their Ancestors refused not the Voice of God when they escaped to hear, believe and obey the Legal Covenant, which he spake on Earth from Mount Sinai, and writ on Tables of Stones, and delivered to Moses on the Mount, and by him communicated it to them, chap. 2. 2, and 10, 28, 30, 31. Dut. 2. 3, 4. Alis. 7. 53. 1 Cor. 10. 1, 10, 11. ¶ Much more and greater Sinners are all such who turn aside scornfully from Jesus, and not receive his Voice and the Revelation of God's Gospel-Covenant by it, who is God's only begotten Son, who brought it down from the Father's Bosom in Heaven, ch. 1. 14. ¶ John. 1. 14, 15, 17, 18, and 3. 12, ratified it with his own Blood on Earth; and as the Sin is beyond compare greater, so will the punishment be, and the certainty of its infliction both for Time and Eternity, Math. 11. 24. 2 Thim. 1. 7, 8, 9. 1 Thim. 10. 26, 30, 32. These remaining no more Sacrifices for such Sinners.

26 Whole ¶ voice then shook the earth, but now ye hath promised, saying, ¶ Yet once ¶ I shake not the earth only, but also heaven.

¶ The Sin and Punishment of Gospel-despisers and rejecters, is aggravated by the Person concerned in both, is that Jesus, the great Angel of the Covenant, speaking now by his Blood, which Voice at the delivery of the Law on Mount Sinai, and falling Israel in a Church-state under that Covenant-Dispensation, Exod. 20. 1, 19. Dut. 4. 12, and 5. 2, 22. 1 Thim. 1. 7, 8, 9. 1 Thim. 63. 17, 8. 1 Thim. 63. 17, 8, and 114. 4, 7, and not only the literal Sin, but the Sin, earthly condition, and flate of Israel coming out of Egypt, and bearing its reproach as a common People of the Earth, together with other Nations, John. 5. 9. This he removes it down from the Father's Bosom in Heaven, ch. 1. 14. ¶ John. 1. 14, 15, 17, 18, and 3. 12, ratified it with his own Blood on Earth; and as the Sin is beyond compare greater, so will the punishment be, and the certainty of its infliction both for Time and Eternity, Math. 11. 24. 2 Thim. 1. 7, 8, 9. 1 Thim. 10. 26, 30, 32. These remaining no more Sacrifices for such Sinners.

27 And ¶ this word, Yet once more significant ¶ the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that 2 Math. 24. 35. those things which cannot be shaken may remain.

¶ The Interpretation of the former matter in this Verse, is introduced by reasserting, And this yet once more, as if he said, I told you that God promised, yet once more, &c. when he saith, that I now declare to you this shaking of God, it means not a small alteration, but a total removal and abolition of the spiritual Heavens and Earths, forementioned, an alteration of their Church, Religion, and Administration, and a total abrogating of them, because they are Hand-work, chap. 9. 24. Such as were at God's direction made by Men, as Tabernacle, Altar, and that Typical Service, not reaching the Spirituality of the Law, and but Types of better to succeed them; and which, tho' did move the others to be finished, pass, and never to return again. ¶ These better things are the Administration of Christ's Kingdom inflexible, his Church-state, which is Heavenly, sealed by his own Evangelical Laws and Ordinances, which he hath so fixed by Promise, as never to be removed till the whole Church of Christ be compleated with him in Heaven. Hagei 2. 7. Matth. 17. 5. and 28. 18, 19, 20.

28 Wh. refore a we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, ¶ let us have grace b, whereby we may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear.

Verily the Apostle follows his Doctrine with the Counsel to sever Duties, such as concern the first Table and terminate on God in this chap. 23 and 29 Verſe ſuch as concern the ſecond Table, chap. 13, 14, &c. In this Verſe he begins with the Chriſtians Privilege, and ſays, Ye have heard that I ſaid, Ye ſhall love one another by Faith the Privilege, Thyſe things ſhall be done unto you by Faith the Privilege, and he ſignifies that they ſhall be able to ſubvert themſelves unto the Laws and Government of the ſupernatural Kingdom of Chriſt, that they may be able to ſubvert themſelves unto the Laws of the Church-clare, of which God is the Author, Chriſt the King, and his Spiritual under-Officers, Miniſters, Penitent Believing Saints the Subjects, the Gospel-Laws by which they ſhall be able to ſubvert themſelves unto the Laws of the Good; the Privileges of it all Grace here, and Glory above, the defence of all from Heaven: all which are to endure for ever unſhaken, and againſt them the Gates of Hell ſhall not prevail, Matth. 16, 19. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Tim. 2, 15, to 17. Heb. 12, 18, to 29. 1 Pet. 2, 13, to 17. 2 Pet. 1, 13, to 17. 1 John 2, 13, to 17. 2 John 1, 13, to 17. 3 John 1, 13, to 17. Revel. 1, 13, to 17. 1 Cor. 15, 24, to 29. Eph. 4, 1 to 16. Col. 1, 13, to 29 For as our God is a consuming fire.

 The motive informing this Duty, is no less terrible, than that given to Isaiah under the Law, obliging their obedience to that Covenant-Diffinition, Deut. 4. 23, 24. The Lord thy God is a consuming Fire, even a Jealous God. He thence was so respecting the Transgression of the Legal, will more be so to this Gospel-Covenant. God Almighty the most Gracious, and yet the most Just Being, their own God by Covenant-oblation: yet will be to them if they break his Covenant, and do not, through all acceptation, serve him in the return of love and good-will, as Fire consuming all that is contrary to his Covenant. If we break this Gospel-Law in the contempt of it, will be as Fire Law at Sinai, adjudging such Sinners unto Fire unquenchable, ch. 10. 27, to 32. comp. Math. 3. 12 and 23. 34.

CHAPTER XIII

co. 1 L E T * brotherly love continue 4.
 4 The Apottle in this Chapter purifieth the Subjects of the visible Kingdom of Christ, for their personal fitness to such a Purified, and especially such as more immediately termination, and are contained in the second Table of the Redeemers Laws; as the chief and fundamenone, Brotherly Love; Let Love, a fruit of the Spirit, the will and the power of the Spirit, be continually and in duration, by disposing always the inward Man, Mind Will, and Affections to seek the good, to speak all the good, and of, and to do all good to their Christian Brethren to all true Christians, eminently stilled by the Spirit to Brotherhood, Math. 22. 39. and 23. 39. 1 John 3. 13, 34
1 Cor. 13. 13. Eph. 4. 2. 1 Thim. 4. 9. 1
2. 14. 15.

3. 2 * Be not forgetful b to entertain Strangers: for c thereby some have entertained angels unawares.

8-10) The next Duty desirable to Christ's Kingdom, is Hospitality to Christian Friends. Be either loving or not unmerciful, by which charge they are bound strongly and always not to leave this to their own mind, though it may be out of hands; and the negative part of the positive Duty, removed, and the positive part, joined in a single Duty, namely, to have a love and desire to do to all joining in unity, that which is good. This is the Duty of Hospitality. Duty, bearing relation to the person of a Christian Brother, though a Stranger, unknown and brought by Providence to them, Math. 22. 39. and 24. 35. and to the work of being an Host, of entertaining such persons, 1 Pet. 4. 9. and 2. 17. and 3. 15. and 4. 9. and 5. 13. and 6. 1. and 7. 1. and 8. 1. and 9. 1. and 10. 1. and 11. 1. and 12. 1. and 13. 1. and 14. 1. and 15. 1. and 16. 1. and 17. 1. and 18. 1. and 19. 1. and 20. 1. and 21. 1. and 22. 1. and 23. 1. and 24. 1. and 25. 1. and 26. 1. and 27. 1. and 28. 1. and 29. 1. and 30. 1. and 31. 1. and 32. 1. and 33. 1. and 34. 1. and 35. 1. and 36. 1. and 37. 1. and 38. 1. and 39. 1. and 40. 1. and 41. 1. and 42. 1. and 43. 1. and 44. 1. and 45. 1. and 46. 1. and 47. 1. and 48. 1. and 49. 1. and 50. 1. and 51. 1. and 52. 1. and 53. 1. and 54. 1. and 55. 1. and 56. 1. and 57. 1. and 58. 1. and 59. 1. and 60. 1. and 61. 1. and 62. 1. and 63. 1. and 64. 1. and 65. 1. and 66. 1. and 67. 1. and 68. 1. and 69. 1. and 70. 1. and 71. 1. and 72. 1. and 73. 1. and 74. 1. and 75. 1. and 76. 1. and 77. 1. and 78. 1. and 79. 1. and 80. 1. and 81. 1. and 82. 1. and 83. 1. and 84. 1. and 85. 1. and 86. 1. and 87. 1. and 88. 1. and 89. 1. and 90. 1. and 91. 1. and 92. 1. and 93. 1. and 94. 1. and 95. 1. and 96. 1. and 97. 1. and 98. 1. and 99. 1. and 100. 1.

with a careful perseverance and assistance of them in the work of God, and helping them to persevere in the same; 2 John 6, 7, 8. C The advantage that accrues to faithful Christians, and its members, is great; for the exercise of this Duty, Aristotle says, being Strangers, we wait for our Country, Hebrews 10, 34, we are waiting for our Fatherland, Psalm 137, 3, 4, we are waiting for our Home, Eph. 19, 12, &c. And as we have been of God in the Messiah made men, they were delivered by them from Judgment, as Lut. Geth. 19, 10, 15, 16, 17, & now the general Guard of Angels goeth along with them and Sains, and are entertained in them who never come without a Blessing, they attend them in all their way, defending them from all evil Spirits, and offensive places where they are, though their Ministry be little observed or acknowledged as it ought, chap. 14. Not only but Christ himself accompanieth his Pilgrim-Members, and is entertained, fed, comforted and lodged in each with them.
Matt. 10, 40, 41, 42, and 25, 34, 35, 36. And for this will

3 Remember them d which are in bonds, as bound with them ; and them which suffer adversity e, as being your selves also in the bonds ly.

A further duty of the subjects of Christ's Kingdom, is Sympathy with their Christian Brethren, to remember to pray for, visit and minister all necessary refreshment to those in bonds, fettered, manacled and imprisoned for Christ's sake and the Gospel, being straitened for them; and partaking of their Bonds, bearing them with them, and seeking their deliverance out of them by all just means. Math. 23: 5, 6. Eph. 6: 15, 20. Col. 4: 10. 1 Tim. 3: 15, 17. 2 Tim. 1: 16, 17. Heb. 13: 3. 1 Pet. 3: 7. Rev. 12: 17. And to sympathize with those who are persecuted for Christ's sake and the Gospel, Persecuted, Oppressed, or Afflicted, who have not deserved any of this from Man, so as to carry it faithfully to them in these conditions, chap. 11: 25, 27, 28. So faithfully, as if we were the Persons in their conditions; carefully knowing that none is as bad as capable and able to do this. Many are ignorant how to sympathize with others, and are ignorant how to sympathize with themselves, our own afflictions, as knowing we are Members in the same Bond of Christ with them, and of them in particular, 1 Cor. 12: 25, 26, 27.

4 Marriage f is honourable in all, and the bed g undefiled: but whore-mongers h and adulterers God will judge.

§ The next Duty charged on the Subjects of Christ's Kingdom, is Chastity. The commendation of it is a Precept to it. Morrist is that flate, which God inflamed at the beginning, after the Creation of Adam and Eve, which was by his Law the making of them two to become one Flesh, Gen. 2. 24. confirmed by Christ, Math. 19. 5. On this flate he sets the fascinus of all those hard flumps he has put there, that they may never be able to sever from each other. A glorious and honourable flate. The connection is prefent; real, and neceffary; Sed faid it, therefore it is fo, and muft be fo; and this after God's inflitution in *ele*s concommenets every where, and in all times; but efppecially in all perfons in the Kingdom of Christ, true Christians of all forts and degrees of what flate or calling or fervice, qualified for or called to it, whether lay or clerical, male or female, young or old. God's it prevailing Sign, preferring holy and pure communion between the Married, propagating his Church, and accomplishing the number of his Chosen by it. Pfal. 111. 3. Mal. 2. 15. 1 Cor. 7. 2. 1 Thiff. 4. 3. 1 Pet. 3. 1, 7. § A Good, moral ufe of the Marriage-Bed, the natural and lawful ufe of the Wife by the Husband, and of the Husband by the Wife, according to the Law of God, as the Lord hath commanded, and as the Church confiftent with the Parity of Christ, as Papists, Apollates from the Faith, alters, 1 Tim. 4. 1, 3. § 4. that it is Holy, Pure, and Chafte in it felf, and a moft excellent means of preferring Chafteity among the Subjects of Christ's Kingdom, 1 Thiff. 4. 4. Titus 2. 5. 1 Pet. 3. 2. By this they are kept in their Bodies from being polluted or difhonoured by Fornication or Adultery: Marriages are thus honorable in themfelves, and fo are the Perfons, who are married, whileft they are fuch; and muft be undefiled in all, becaufe their Bodies are the Members of Christ, and Temples of the Holy Ghoft, 1 Cor. 6. 15, 17, 18, 19. 20. § But God hates unclean focieties of all Men and Women, but efppecially of Christians; and as he will certainly judge to, and inflict eternal punifhments upon all kind of unclean perfons, fo efpecially upon Whore-houses, and Adulteries, who protefts themfelves as Subjects of Christ's pure Kingdom, 2 Pet. 2. 6. Jude. v. 4. 7. Rom. 2. 21.

5 Let your conversation be i without covetousness; and be content k with such things as ye have: For he l hath said; * I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.

1. Concentration with our state and condition is a fifth Duty charged on the Subjects of Christ's Kingdom, and this is expressed privatively and positively, yet both Propositions without a Verb, which is best supplied by an Imperative. 'O'rges' so fitly signifies a turning, but here it lets out the motion or turning of a man up and down in the altitudes of his life, which in common speech is called Conversatio; not any motion of the Heart, or turn of the Eye, nor action of any member, but a turning of a man with a faithful, inordinate love to them, or pursuit of them, forbidden, Matt. 6. 25, Eccl. 1. Tim. 6. 17, 2. Tim. 3. 1, James 4. 13, 1. John 2. 15. The tedious endeavour and labour night and day, turning and winding every way, to be bringing forth fruit, and hurrying up worldly Wealth, and leading themselves with thick Clouds, Eccl. 4. 5, Gal. 5. 17, must not be the case or condition of any Christian, Eph. 5. 3, Col. 3. 2, 2. Pet. 2. 3, 2. 10, 15. But having an hearty quietness and satisfaction with that, porcion or pittance of earthly things which God at present doth allow us, whether more or less, and not with that which only we may think enough to serve our Lusts, Eccl. 5. 10, 1. Tim. 6. 8. If a reason enforcing it, is God's giving by Promise a special assignment to provide for them, This God solemnly made to Job, Gen. 28. 15, then to Israhel, Dut. 31. 6, 8, then to Yehoshaphat, 1. s. and to all Believers as well as them; for God will not give any less to the poor than to his prince, but will give to them in their preference, with all the Blessings which attend it, Psal. 46. 5, 1. Ps. 41. 10, and 2. 42, and 62. 9.

6 So m that we may boldly say, The Lord n is my helper, and o I will not fear what man shall do unto me.

■ Upon the account of which Promise of God all the true Subjects of Christ's Religion together with the Apostles, may with an untamed boldness of heart above all fears and doubtings, and with a daring confidence, professing that which they believe, nor staggering nor shrinking, nor being ashamed of their Faith, but openly avowing it, to all the World, that they are the Lord in the infiniteness of His Power, Wisdom, and Goodness, preserving, protecting, and maintaining His Kingdom, His Majesty, His universal and permanent help against all Trouble, and for all supplies in all cities, and at all times, to every one of them. They may say as Moses, Exod. 18. 4. As David, Psal. 27. 9. and 40. 17. and 56. 4. 11. and 118. 5. And therefore Faith especially fearfulness, and Intrepidity, and Courage of any Christian, is the chiefest, necessary, and chiefest Instrument, whereby the Christian, and that which Man may be an Instrument inducing, Phil. 4. 6. 7. Implying in it an unshaken freedom of Mind, Judgment, and Thoughts on God's help, a fixed frame of heart, without any tumultuous Passions or perturbations, with an unmovable resolution to keep close to God and his Word both in Word and Deed, amidst all oppositions and persecutions of Men for it.

Or, are Guides. 7 Remember p them which || have the rule over you, who have spoken to you the word of God : whose q faith follow, considering r the end of their conversation.

¶ Imitation of their Godly Ministers, is another Duty that Christ's Law chargeth on his Subjects, both here, and 2. 17. Be mindful of your spiritual Guides and Rulers, firmly, and constantly to retain their Excellencies in Memory, esteeming of them, and thanking God for them, which were sent to them and set over them by the Holy Ghost, who were guid- ing of them they Chrift to God, and enjoyment of Eternal Life with him, which they did by preaching to them, and writing the Gospel of Chrift for their edification, by the Inspiration of the Spirit, in which Gifts were removed by Devils, false and martyrs, and the Truth of Jesus, and ascended unto Heaven, and others were alive among them; they were to remember all of them, but especially their Spiritual Fathers that had begotten them to God by the Gospel, 1 Cor. 4: 15. 2 Cor. 2: 17. 1 Tim. 5: 17, and 2 Tim. 4: 15, 16, 17. 1 Pet. 4: 11, and 5: 3. q The best way of remembering such, is by writing down their names, and the Doctrine which they taught and praifed, and to be as fideftiall to the Faith as were they, and holding of it out to others, how eminent Believers they were? 1 Tim. 4: 12. and 6: 11. 2 Tim. 2: 22. Such as their Doctrine was, fuch was their example, conformable to Chrift, 1 Cor. 11: 1. It was howbeit, a warning, and a rebuke, as in Heaven, 1 Cor. 10: 3. 2 Pet. 2: 20. All their turning out of Nations in this World, their very Life was hid with Chrift in God; all agreeable to, as ordered by his Will, and fuch was the joy and grief of this life, which it is their concernment to review, their mercy by it an owe-fort from the remembrance of Sin and Mifery, which did defile and opprefsthem, Rom. 14: 15. And if it be the World, and all its oppositions to them, feeling the Truth with their Blood, which they had preached and praifed among them, and were more than Conquerors over all by death, having an in-to into Life, and Peace, and Eternal Glory, in inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and which fadeth not away, referred to them in Heaven, Rom. 8: 37. 1 Cor. 4: 8. 1 Pet. 1: 4, and 5: 4.

1747 Though this hath no term of connexion; yet it may be referred either to what precedeth or followeth it; for the Apostle is not here dropping Aphorisms, but pressing on the Subjects of Christ's Kingdom known Duties. It is here interposed as a weighty Reason of the Duty foregoing, to remember their Guides, imitate their Faith, and consider their Example. Forasmuch as ye have obeyed the Lord Jesus Christ in conformity with his death, in conformity with his blood, and as ye were perfected by Jesus Christ; so that they might be loved by him as their Guides were, there being no other way to Blessedness, but by Jesus Christ the same, &c. John 14.6. Or a Reason enforcing what followeth. That since Jesus Christ is the same, as is his Person so is his Doctrine, Faith and Conversation which he enjoineth on his Subjects, they must be the same, as he is the same, and divine and eternal. Jesus Christ personal is immutable in his care and love to his mystical Body, and all the Members of it, through out all Times and Ages; he never leaves nor forsakes them; so Christ's Doctrinal in his Faith, Law, and Rule of Conversation, Eph. 4. 2, 21. The pure, full, and incorrupt Religion of Christ is unchangeable, being simple, infinitely and eternally the same without any addition, alteration, or diminution, 1 Cor. 11. 17, 34. Gal. 1. 6, 7. viling, railing, censuring, &c. * Either deceives his own heart in thinking himself Religious, when indulging himself in things so contrary to Religion, or deceives his own heart, being blinded with self-love, and lifted up with self-conceit, which is the cause of his censuring, and speaking evil of others. * Empty and to no purpose, having no reality in it self, and bringing no benefit to him.

Untainted by the evil example of Men in the World, and free from the Lufts of the World, marital Pollution. good or honourable (as good place, u. 3. for honourable) Name of Christ's they blaspheme what they should adore. Or, which is called the poor, either which was called upon over you, when you were baptized into it, or rather it is an Hebrew phrase, and implies no more than (as we read it) their being called by it, as Children are called their Fathers, and Wives after their Husbands. Gen. 48. 16. Jil. 4. 1. For God's People are called by his Name, Deut. 28. 10. Eph. 3. 15.

8 If ye fulfil d. the royal law e. according to the scripture f. * Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thy self, ye do well g.

9 But if ye * have respect to persons h, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law i. as k. transgressors.

10 For whosoever shall l. keep the whole law m, and yet offend n. in one point, * he is guilty of all o.

11 This is not an Assertion, that any Man doth keep the whole Law so as to offend but in one point, but a supposition that if, or admitting such a one were. All the rest of the Law, that one point only of the whole being excepted. * Slip, or trip, or stumble; it seems to signify the least failing in any point of the Law. * Guilty of the breach, and obnoxious to the punishment of all; not distributively, or separately, as if he transgressed every Precept distinctly; but 1. conjunctively or copulatively, he is guilty of not keeping the whole Law, though not of breaking each particular Command; he breaks the whole Law, though not the whole of the Law; as he that wounds a Man's Arm, wounds the whole Man, though not the whole of the Man; he that breaks one link breaks the whole Chain, and he that fails in one Nafical Note, spoils the whole Harmony. 2. He sins against Charity, which is the sum of the Law, and upon which all the Commands depend; and so though he keep most of them, as to the substance, yet he keeps none of them in a right manner, because none out of Love, which should be the Principle out of which he observes all of them. 3. He sins against the Authority of the whole Law, which is the same in every Command. 4. He is liable to the same punishment, though not the same degree of it as if he had broke all the Commandments, Gal. 3. 1. and his keeping most, cannot exempt him from the punishment due for the breach of that one; this he speaks either in opposition to the Pharisees among the Jews, who thought themselves righteous if they kept most of the Law, though in some things they came short; or, rather against Hypocrites among Christians, who would pick and chuse Duties, obey some Commands and neglect others; whereas no obedience to God is right, but such which is impartial and respects all the Commands, Psalm 119. 6. Math. 5. 19.

11 For if he that said p. * Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill: Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill thou art become a transgressor of the Law q.

12 So speak ye, and so do r, as they that shall be judged s. by the law of liberty t.

righteous. In a Word, what God hath joined, must not be divided; and what he hath divided, must not be joined. He hath separated Faith and Works in the Believers' Justification; and therefore we must not join them in it, as Paul divides; and he hath joined them in the Lives of faithful Persons, and there we must not separate them, as James connects. Paul assures us they have not a sufficiency in Justification in Works; and James assures us they may, and ought to have a sufficiency in them that are justified. If the Reader desire further Satisfaction, let him consult Tantrina de Concordia Pauli & Jacobi, where he may find much more to the same purpose, as hath been said.

25 Likewise also was not Rahab the harlot justified by works, when she had received the messengers, and had sent them out another way?

¶ This Influence of Rahab is joined to that of Abraham, either to shew, that none of any Condition, Degree, or Nation, was ever numbered among true Believers, without good Works, or else to prove, that Faith, wherever it is sincere and genuine, is likewise operative, and fruitful, not only in older Disciples and stronger, such as Abraham was, but even converted to the Faith, which was Rahab's case. x Really and properly he, John 2. 1. John 11. 31. tho' possibly he might keep an Inn, and thus might occasion the Spies going to his House, not knowing her to be one of so scandalous a Life; which yet the Holy Ghost takes special notice of, that by the Infirmities of her former Conversation, the Grace of God in her Conversion might be more conspicuous. y In the same sense as Abraham was, i. e. declared to be righteous, and her Sincerity appeared in the Face of the Congregation of Israel, which upon her hiding the Spies, God gave a Commandment to save her alive, though the rest of her People were to be destroyed. z Her receiving them implies likewise her hiding them; both which together with her sending them forth another way, were Acts of Love to the People of God, of Mercy to the Spies, and of great Self-denial in respect of her own Safety, which she hazarded by thus exposing her self to the Fury of the King of Jericho, and her Countrymen; and all proceeded from her Faith in the God of Israel, of whose great Works she had heard, and whom she had now taken to be her God, and under whose Wings she was now come to trust.

¶ Or, trials.

26 For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also. ¶ This may be understood either according to the marginal reading, of the Body, and then the sense is, that Life and Breath being inseparable Companions, as the want of Breath argues want of Life in the Body, so lively Faith and Works being as inseparable, want of Works argues want of Life in Faith; Or, according to the reading in the Text, Spirit, signifying for that Substance which animates the Body, and is the cause of vital Functions in it, which is sometimes called Spirit, Philom 3. 5. Ecc 12. 7. and 1 Cor 2. 11. and then the sense is, that as a Body is without a Soul, so Faith is without Works, i. e. both are dead. As a Body without the Soul hath the Shape and Lineaments of a Man, but nothing that may discover Life in it, so Faith without Works may be like true Faith, have some resemblance of it, but hath nothing to discover the Truth and Life of it. ¶ Not true Faith, for that cannot be dead, but an empty Profession of Faith, which is rather called Faith by way of Consecration, or because of some likeness it hath to it, than really is so; as a dead Body, tho' called a Body, is really but a Carcase.

CHAP. III.

¶ My brethren, be not many masters, x knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation. b

¶ Let not every Man make himself a Master of other Men's Faith and Manners, a Censor, or supercilious Reprover of their Failings and Infirmities. Math 23. 1. All Reprover is not here forbidden, neither Authority by Church Officers, nor Character by private Brethren, but that which is irregular either in the ground of it, when that is false, or the manner of it, when it is matterly and imperious, or periphrastic (as when we reprehend others, and are not less reprehensible our selves, Rom 2. 21.) or in the end of it, when we seek to increase our own Reputation by offending or aggravating others Faults, &c. b By how much the more severe and rigid we are in judging others, the greater will be our Judgment, not only from Men, who will be apt to retaliate, but from God himself, Math 7. 1. 2. 3. Luk 6. 33. Rom 2. 2. 3. See the like Expression, Mat 23. 8. 14.

¶ For x in many things we offend all. x If in any man offend not in word, d the same is a perfect man, e and able also to bridle the body. f

¶ There is no Man absolutely free from Sin, 1 King 8. 46. Job 14. 4. Prov 20. 9. Ecc 7. 20. and 1 John 1. 8. 10. And therefore we must not be too critical in other Men's Actions, having for many Failings our selves. Gal 6. 1. d Knows how to govern his Tongue aright, speaks what, and when, as he ought. e Either sincere in the opposition to the Hypocrisy of those that pretend to great Zeal in correcting others, when they are allies, or more guilely themselves; or rather, we may understand it comparatively, with respect to others, of one that hath made good Profession in Religion, and is of greater Attainments than others. See 1 Cor 2. 6. f To govern all the other parts (Eyes, Ears, Hands, &c.) as to those Actions which are performed by them. No Member of the Body being more ready to offend than the Tongue; he that can rule that, may rule all else.

3 Behold, we put bits in the horses' mouths that they may obey us, and we turn about their whole body. g

¶ He illustrates the former Proposition, that he that can rule his Tongue, may rule his whole Body, by two Similitudes; the first of an unruly Horse, which yet, as was said, is being curbed in with a Bit, may be easily managed; intimating, that even so, if a Man's Tongue be well governed, the rest of the Man will be under command.

4 Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm whithersoever the governor listeth. h

¶ The other Similitude in which a Man is compared to a Ship, the Tongue to the Rudder, the governing the whole Body to the turning about the Ship. As the Rudder is but a small thing, in Comparison of the much greater Bulk of a Ship, and yet being it self turned, turns the whole Ship (tho' too great, and driven of so fierce Winds) which way Governor the Steersman pleaseth: So likewise the Tongue, tho' little to the whole Man (which may yet be driven, and acted by Storms of furious Passions) which if it be it self under Government, the rest of the Man will be too.

5 Even for the tongue is a little member, i and boasteth great things. k Behold how great is a little member, l a little fire kindleth much. m

¶ The Accommodation of the former Similitudes; the Tongue and 73. 8. 9. is a little Member, i. e. one of the lesser, in Comparison of the Body. k The Great Word signifies according to its Derivation, the lifting up of the Neck (as Horses, mentioned, x are wont to do in their Pride) in a way of Bravery and Triumph; and hence it is used to express boasting and glorying, but here seems to imply something more; viz. not only the uttering big Words, but doing great things, whether good and useful, as in the former Similitude, or evil, as in what follows; or its boasting how great things it can do, g. The Tongue, tho' little, is of great force and efficacy, and it will tell you to it self; it not only boasts its fellow-Members can do, but especially what it self can. l Another Similitude in which he sets forth the evil the Tongue accomplishes is, doth, where it is not well-governed, as in the former he had shewn the good it may do, when kept under Rule. m The word signifies either any combustible Stuff, or, as in the Margin, Wood, that being the ordinary Fuel then in use. n Even a Spark, the smallest Quantity or Particle, which may do great Mischief, when lighting in combustible Matter.

6 And the tongue is a fire, o, a world of iniquity: So is the tongue amongst our members, that it defileth the whole body, p, and setteth on fire the course of nature; q, and it is set on fire of hell. r

¶ The Application of the Similitude in the foregoing 2. 23. Words. The Tongue is a Fire, o, hath the force of Fire, and resembles it in the Mischief it doth. p As Fire, or Aggregation of Evils (as the natural World is an Aggregation of many several Beings) as we say, an Ocean, or a World of Troubles, meaning a great Multitude of them; and the Words may be understood, either with an Elipsis of the word matter, expressed just before, and supplied here; and the pointing a little altered, they may be thus read, And the Tongue is a Fire, a World of iniquity (or an unquenchable World, viz. which lies in Wickedness, 1 John 5. 19.) is the matter, namely, which it inflames. A kindled fire is fuel for a wicked Tongue, and from catcheth the Fire which it kindles: Or, rather as they stand plainly without any such Defect: The Tongue is a World of Iniquity, o, an Heap or Mass of various sorts of Sins; tho' it be but a little piece of Flesh, yet it contains a whole World of Wickedness in it, or is as full of Evils, as the World is of Bodies. l I understand the whole Man with Sin, Ecc 9. 6. as being the cause of Sin committed by all the Members of the Body; for tho' Sin began in the Soul, yet it is executed by the Body, which therefore seems here put (as v. 2.) for the Man. q Or, set on fire the Wheel of Nature, or Nature (in allusion to the Wheel set on fire by a violent rapid motion) meaning the Course of Nature, i. e. the natural Course of Life; as the Face of Nature, or Nature, ch 1. 23. for the natural Face; the sense is, it inflames with various Lusts, Wrath, Malice, Wasmotness, Pride, &c. the whole Course of Man's Life; so that there is no State, nor Age free from the Evils of it. Wickedness either Vices either do not extend to the whole Man, or are abated with Age, or worn away with length of time; the Vices of the Tongue reach the whole Man, and the whole time of his life. r i. e. By the Devil, the Father of Lies and Slanders; and other Tongues; 1 John 1. 10. John 8. 44. Rom 12. 18. the Tongue being the Fire, the Devil, by the Belows of Temptations, inflames it; 1 John 1. 10. and thereby kindles the Fire of all Mischief in the World.

¶ For every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of a more kind.

¶ Some of every kind. s Wild Beasts, such as are most fierce and untractable. t Tho' so moveable and wandering, the very Vagabonds of Nature, y which are restless Enemies to Mankind. u The Inhabitants, as it were, of another World, really of another Element. v Either made gentle, or at least brought into Subjection to Man by one means or other. w He that brings the Horse, the Pegasus, and the Interpreter, to tame such things, not only have been, but still are; and that not as the Effects of some miraculous Power, as in the Case of Dan and Pha 28. 28. but as that which is usually experienced, and in Man's Power still to do.

8 But the tongue can no man tame: it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison. x

¶ Not only other Men's Tongues, but not his own. y No Man of himself, and without the Assistance of Divine Grace, can bring his Tongue into Subjection, and keep it in order; nor can any Man by the Assistance of any Grace promised in this life, so keep it, as that it shall never at all offend. z Or, which cannot be refrained, and kept within Bounds: Wild Beasts are kept in by Grates and Bars, but this by no Refrain. a The Wickedness of the Tongue is compared to Poison, in respect of the Mischief it doth to others. It seems to allude to those kind of Serpents which have Poison under their Tongues, Phil 1. 6. with which they kill those they bite. The Poison of the Tongue is no less deadly, it murders Men's Reputations; the Slanders it utters, their Souls by the Lids and Balafts it flirs up in them, and many times their Bodies too by the Contentions and Quarrels it raiseth against Men.

9 Therewith with us God if even the Father, and therewith curse we men, y, which are made after the similitude of God. z

¶ Pray, and speak with of God, g. Or of Christ, and in him of all true Believers. h Rail on, revile, speak evil of, as well as with evil to. i Either, 1. Sins in whom God's Image is anew reformed; or, 2. Sins in whom Men more generally, who are they, have lost that spiritual Knowledge, Righteousness, and true Holiness, in which that Image of God, after which Man was created, principally consists; yet still have some Reliques of his Image continuing in them. This is added to aggravate the Sin, speaking evil of Men made after God's Image, is speaking evil of God obliquely, and by Reflection.

10 Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. k. My brethren, these things ought not so to be. l

¶ He repeats here, by way of Exaggeration, what he had said, v. 9. to shew how exceedingly absurd it is, that two such contrary Actions should proceed from the same Agent. m There is a Contradiction in the words; it means things should be quite contrary. See the like Expression, 1 Tim 5. 13. Tit 1. 11.

11 Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter? n

¶ Ordinarily and naturally; if any such be, it is looked upon as uncouth and prodigious.

12 Can the fig-tree, my brethren, bear olive berries, either a vine figs? o. So can no fountain yield both salt water, and fresh. p

¶ The same Tree cannot ordinarily bring forth Fruit of different kinds (on the same Branch, whatever it may be different, by circumstances) much less contrary Natures. See Mat 7. 16. 17. 18. q Or, whether can a salt Fountain yield fresh Water; but the Scope is still the same, as in our reading. The Apostle argues from what is impossible, or monstrous in Nature, to what is absurd in Matters, q. d. it is as absurd in Religion, for the Tongue of a regenerate Man, which is said to bless God, to take a liberty, or other times to curse Man, as it would be strange in Nature for the same Tree, on the same Branch, to bear Fruits of different kinds; or the same Fountain at the same place to send forth bitter Water and sweet.

13 Who is a wife man, and ended with knowledge as among you? let him shew, out of a good conversation, his works; with meekness of wisdom. r

¶ Who is a wife Man, &c. See Phil 2. 12. and 1 Phil 3. 10. where what David speaks by way of Interrogation, Ps 139. 23. is explained by way of Assertion. The Apostle having here the Dilate of the Tongue, comes now to remove the Cause, viz. Mens Opinion of their own Wisdom; they esteem others, because they take themselves to be wiser than others; and to point out the Remedy, godly Meekness; which is the truest Wisdom. s By Wisdom and Knowledge the same thing may be meant; or it may be taken for several things, (as sometimes there may be great Knowledge where there is but little Wisdom) yet this meekness Censors he speaks of, pretended to both, and were so rigid towards others, because so well concerted of themselves; the sense is, You pretend to be wise and knowing, but if you would approve your selves as well indeed, shew out of a good Conversation, &c. t Let him shew as the Testimony of his Wisdom, not his words in kind Censure, but his Works; viz. good acts, and those not done now and then, or on the by, but in the constant Course, and Tenor of his Life; or shew his Works to be good, by their being not casual, but constant; and his ordinary Practice in his whole Conversation. u A meek and gentle Wisdom, which can hear and forbear; and can wait, and admonish, and rebuke mildly; and sweetly with long suffering, as well as Doctrine, 2 Tim 4. 2. and then it comes the Quality of this Wisdom, or such Meekness as proceeds from Wisdom, or is joined with it, there being some which is foolish, affected, carnal, &c. that which is opposed to Zeal; whereas true Meekness is only opposed to Fierceness and Balafts; and then it comes the cause of Meekness.

14 But if ye have x bitter envying, and strife in your hearts, y, glory not, and lie not against the truth. z ¶ Rom 13. 10.

¶ Gr. Zeal, which he calls bitter, partly to distinguish it from that Zeal which is good; whereas this he speaks of is evil; and though it pretends to be Zeal, yet is really no other than Envy; and partly, because it commonly proceeds from an ambitious Spirit, and tends the imbruing it more. a Strife, the usual Effect of bitter Zeal, or Envy. b The Mountain whence it proceeds, is Strife in the Heart implies a Heart propensity, and inclined to Strife. y Glory not of your Zeal, or rather of your Wisdom, as if you were in well able to repress other, but rather be humble; what you make the issue of, your sayings being really just cause of Shame, c. d By professing your selves wise, or zealous, when ye are really neither.

15 This wisdom is a defendeth not from above, but is earthly, e. f Sensual, g. devilish. h ¶ Or, natural. i This Wisdom which they pretended to much, to be criticized on other Men's Actions, and inveigled against them, and which was accompanied with Strife and Envy. j k. From God the Author of Wisdom, from whom the every good and perfect Gift descends, 1 Cor 1. 7. and even Knowledge, and Skill in natural things, 1 Cor 2. 20. yet this Wisdom being sensual, is not from him; l because it is of the Earth, of no higher Origin than from the first Adam, who was of the Earth; and carnally, 1 Cor 1. 1. 2. 14. and likewise because it is employed, and exerts Mens Minds on earthly things. m This may be understood either, according to the reading in the Text, the word here used, being so rendered, John 1. 9. agreeable to 1 Th 3. 2. where Soul, from whence the word is derived, is opposed to Spirit, and taken for the sensitive Powers, which Men have in common with Beasts in Distinction from the intellectual, which go under the name of Spirit; and are proper to Men's mere Reason, without the Divine Grace, being apt to degenerate into Bruillines, and easily brought to serve the ends of sensual Appetite; this Vividness may well be called sensual. n Or, 2ly, according to the Margin, Natural, in opposition to Spiritual. The natural Man (1 Cor 2. 14.) where the same word (in the Greek) is used here, is one that lives under the Conduct of his own carnal Reason, not enlightened, nor regenerated by the Spirit of God: 1 John 3. 1. and (as the word imports) that hath no better, no higher Principle in him, than his own Soul. Accordingly, this Vividness here mentioned, is such as proceeds merely from a Man's own Soul, in its natural false definition of the Light and Grace of God's Spirit, and therefore may be termed natural. o Because it is of the Devil, or such as is in him, and makes Men like him, who is a proud Spirit, and envious, a Liar, and Slanderer, John 8. 44. and who observes Mens Faults, not to amend them, but accuse them from him.

16 For x where envy and strife y, there is confusion, and every work is made void. z

¶ The usual Consequence of this devilish Wisdom. a Or, Inconsistency, viz. both with Men's self, and others; Envy makes him unquiet in himself, and troublesome to others, by causing Contentions and Seditious among them, and breaking their Peace, as well as his own. b All manner of Wickedness is ushered in by this Confusion and Sedition.

and continue there a year, and buy, and sell, and get gain.

¶ Either this is a Note of Transgression of command to Inferiors, or rather of Admonition to such as are stupid or rash, and tends to the awakening their Attention, and stirring them up to the Consideration of their Duty, Danger, &c. ¶ Either with the Indicative Mood; noting the Peremptory of their Purposes, and their presuming upon future times, and things, which were not in their Power. ¶ He doth not consider Merchants travelling into other Countries, nor trading there, but their defiling Gain by their Trade, nor forcing their Burdens, but their promising themselves the Continuance of their Life, the accomplishing their Designs, and the Success of their Labours, without respect to God's Providence and Direction, as in their times, and their Works, were in their own Hands, not in His.

¶ Or, for it is Job 7. 7. See ch. 1. 10.

14 Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow: For what is your life? ¶ It is even a vapour that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away.

¶ Whether ye know not what shall be on the morrow, or what else shall be, or not. In vain do ye boast of whole Years, when ye cannot command the Events of one Day. ¶ This Question implies Content, as 1 Sam. 2. 10. Psalm 144. 3. 4. ¶ Like a Vapour, frail, uncertain, and of short continuance; and then how vain are those Countings and Purposes that are built upon no more sure a Foundation, than your own Lives?

¶ 1 Cor. 4. 19.

15 For that ye ought to say, * If the Lord will, we shall live, &c. and do this, or that.

¶ It is the Acknowledgment of God's Providence, and the Dependence of all our Affairs upon him, which is here required; and this is to be done, either expressly with the Mouth in such like Forms of Speech as this is, so far as the Soul is concerned, and distinguishing our selves from those that are profane, as hath been customary with the Saints in Scripture, Acts 18. 21. Rom. 1. 10. and other places, but always inwardly, and in the Heart. ¶ i. e. With his providential, or directive Will, which as yet we do not know, and therefore we say, If the Lord will: for all our Counsels and Determinations must be regulated by his providential, or directive Will, which we do know; and therefore with respect to that Will, we are not to say, We will do this, or that, If God will, i. e. commands it, but we must first see that it is commanded, and then resolve to do it. ¶ If God will, that is, if in His Providence he shall permit us. ¶ Some read the words, If the Lord will, and we shall live, we will do this, or that; and then the latter copulative, and, is redundant, and the sense is, That all our Actions depend not only upon our living, but upon God's Willing. God may permit us to live, and yet not permit us to do this or that. But if we take the words according to our reading, If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that, then both our Life and Actions depend upon the Will of God, not the one, nor the other is in our Power. And so here is a double Check to the vain Boasts of those that were so peremptory in their Resolutions, without considering the Frailty of their own Lives, or the Dependence of their Actions upon God's Will, when both the one, and the other, are in His disposal.

¶ 1 Cor. 5. 6.

16 But now ye rejoice in your boastings: ¶ All such rejoicing is evil.

¶ Or, glory. Ye praise your selves with them. ¶ If ye, of your carnal Projects, and Hopes of what you intend to do, and expect to get, &c. you vainly boast of your Designs and successes, without taking notice of God's Providence, under the Government of which you and your Affairs all are, & both as being contrary to the Word, which assures us, often, that it is vain promise our selves long life, or Prosperity in our worldly Business, without God's leave and Blessing, Psalm 127. 1. Prov. 16. 9. 33. and likewise as proceeding from Pride and Security.

¶ Rom. 1. 20. 21. 32. and 2. 17, 18, 23.

17 Therefore to * him that knoweth to do good, &c. and doth it not, to him it is sin.

¶ Either this may relate to all that the Apostle had been before speaking of, &c. I have admonished you of your Duty, now ye know how ye are to do; and therefore if you do it not, it will be your Sin: Or, it may refer to what he was immediately before discoursing of, and may be spoken to prevent an Objection. They might say, he taught them no more than what they knew already; and that they acknowledged God's Providence in all things. To this he replies, That if they knew their Duty, they ought to practise it, and so to actually submit themselves, and their Affairs to the Conduct of that Providence; and their not doing it, now that they knew it, would be their Sin. ¶ i. e. Sin indeed, or (as we say) Sin with a Wills, a greater Sin, and which much more of the Nature of Sin in it, or is more highly aggravated by being against Knowledge, and is so punishable with the severer Vengeance, than if done out of Ignorance, Luke 12. 47. See the like Expression, John 9. 41. and 15. 22, 24.

CHAP. V.

GO * to now, ye rich men, weep and howl: for your miseries that shall come upon you.

¶ See chap. 4. 13. ¶ He speaks to them not simply, as rich, (for Riches and Grace sometimes may go together) but as wicked, not only wallowing in Wealth, but abusing it to Pride, Luxury, Oppression, and Cruelty. Against their riches as looking on them as incurable, or upon Supposition of their Impenitency, he denounceth God's Judgments; and that whether they were uncovered Jews vexing the believing Jews; or Gentiles, oppressing the Christian Jews; or Christians in Profession and Name, who yet were to be vile in their Practice, as to conduct, and kill the just; and that they might more specifically do it, to draw them before the Judgment-Seat, &c. ¶ To denote the extremity of the Calamities coming upon them, in which they should not only weep like Men, but howl like wild Beasts. See Jer. 4. 6. Mich. 2. 6. Jer. 1. 10. 13. ¶ Or, are coming upon you, to signify the certainty and nearness of them. The Miseries he means, may be both temporal and eternal.

2 Your riches are corrupted, and * your * Math. 6. 20.

garments are moth-eaten.

¶ Either by Riches, he means the general, and by Garments, Gold and Silver, the particulars in which their Riches consisted; and then being corrupted, is to be taken generally, as comprehending the several ways whereby several kinds of their Riches were spoiled: Or else, by Riches, he understands such things as were liable to Corruption, or Putrefaction, as Corn, Wine, Oyl, which were a great part of their Riches. ¶ Costly Garments, in which Rich Men are wont to pride themselves; and under them may be comprehended all such Clothes as may be eaten by Worms, or Moths.

3 * Your gold and silver is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh: as it were fire: Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days.

¶ The most precious and lasting Metals; yet even they with long disuse, canker, and go to decay. Under these, other Metals in esteem among them, may be understood. ¶ By a Proverb, that which properly belongs to living Persons is ascribed to dead things, as Job. 2. 11. Luke 19. 40. It is as much as if he said, The Rust shall be a certain Evidence against you, and which will as effectually convict you, as any living Witness could do, of your Folly in pursuing your trust in perishing things, your Greediness in hoarding them up, your Uncharitableness in not supplying the Wants of others, and your Unthankfulness in despising the life of them to your selves, when you had rather let them lie by and perish, than enjoy the Comfort of them, or do good with them. The like Expression we have, Mark 6. 11. ¶ The Rust (the Witness of your Covetousness and Cruelty) which now eats your Money, shall hereafter devour your selves, Soul and Body (which he means by flesh) by procuring, and kindling the Wrath of God upon you, (compared to Fire) and likewise by galling your Consciences with a vexatious Remembrance of your Sin, and Folly; and so what in the Judgment is a Witness against you, in Hell will be a Tormentor to you. ¶ As if you had reserved Fire in your Treasure, & as well as Treasure in your Cloths. ¶ Either this may be understood metaphorically, ye have heaped a Treasure of Wrath for the last days, Rom. 2. 5. or literally, ye have hoarded up your Wealth against the last, and fatal days, in which God is bringing those Judgments upon you, which will consume all.

into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth.

¶ This is either a Note of Denunciation, as Job 1. 29. ¶ The Calf is plain, and cannot be denied; or of Exhortation, &c. &c. seriously consider it, or rather, of Confirmation, to intimate, that the Threatnings here denounced, should certainly be made good upon them. See Jer. 1. 4. ¶ The Wages of those, by whose Labour and Sweat ye your selves live, and are nourished. ¶ Either wholly denied them, or detained from them, when due to them, contrary to the Law, Lev. 19. 13. Deut. 24. 14, 15. Debiting Payment, is a sort of defrauding, as it betrays the Creditor of the Benefit of Improvement; and so they are taxed here with Injustice, as well as Covetousness, in that they lived upon other Men's Labours, and starved the Poor, to enrich themselves. ¶ Ye, for God for Vengeance, as such Sinners are said to do, which either are openly and boldly committed, as to dare the Justice of God, or so secretly, or secretly, that they are like to escape the Justice of Men, Gen. 4. 10. and 18. 20, 21. among others, Oppression of the Poor is a loud crying Sin, Exod. 2. 23. Jer. 24. 12.

¶ Rom. 11. 28. Luke 6. 35. 1 Tim. 6. 9.

12. Hib. 2. 9, 11, 12. y i. e. The Lord of Hosts, as having all the Creatures above and below, of all sorts, ranked under him as their great Commander, whom will they are ready to execute. ¶ He mentions God by this Title, not only for the encouragement of the poor oppressed, whose Patron and Protector he avows himself to be, Exod. 22. 23, 24, 27. Prov. 23. 11. But for terror to the powerful Oppressors, who think themselves out of the reach of Men's Justice.

¶ Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, &c. and been wanton: ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter.

¶ Luxuriously and deliciously, giving up your selves to your sensual Appetites, Amos 6. 4, 5, 6. Luke 16. 19, 23. ¶ Where you place your happiness without looking higher, and from whence you fetch your delights, Phil. 3. 19. ¶ The same word is used, 1 Tim. 5. 6. It seems to imply effeminate lascivious behaviour, as the effect of their riotous living. ¶ Either by an Hibow phrase, ye have nourished your hearts, for ye have cheered up your selves, Eph. 6. 6. Job 10. 13. or, ye have cheered up, and encouraged your hearts in your Luxury by pampering your flesh (Luke 12. 19) and feeding not to the satisfaction of nature, but the culling of your Lusts. ¶ Either securely, and without fear of the Destruction coming upon you, as Sheep graze quietly though by and by to be brought to the Shambles; or, rather is a day of slaughter, i. e. in a day of solemn Feasting, when many Beasts were killed in Sacrifice, on which they were wont to Feast, Prov. 7. 14, and 17, 1. They made every day a feasting day, and that too, lavishing out other Men's dues upon their own flesh, and sparing from their Labourers that they might spend upon their Lusts. This he brings to aggravate their Sin.

6 Ye have condemned, and killed &c. the just, & he doth not resist you.

¶ i. e. Procured by your Wealth and Power the passing unambiguous Sentences, and thereby the destruction of the just. ¶ Indefinitely and collectively, the just for any just Man, &c. such as were innocent and just in comparison of their Persecutors. ¶ This notes not only the Patience of such in bearing injuries, but their weakness too, and being destitute of human help against their Adversaries power.

7 ¶ Be ye patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early, and latter rain.

¶ Ye, to Judgment, and that either particular to avenge the quarrels of innocent sufferers upon their Tyrannical Persecutors; or, rather to the general Judgment, in which a full restitution is to be made both to the just and unjust, Rom. 2. 6, 8. To which Judgment the Scripture calls all to look, especially those that are under Oppression and Persecution, 2 Thess. 1. 6, 7, 8. ¶ Which call him hard labour, and to which he receives great benefit, the sustentation of his Life. ¶ The Rain after the Sowing, which caused the Corn to spring up; and that before the Harvest which plumped it, and made it fit for Reaping, Deut. 11. 14. Jer. 5. 24. Job. 6. 3. Jer. 1. 29.

8 Be ye all patient, &c. stablish your hearts for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

¶ Ye, in expectation of your Harvest, and the fruit of your Labours, as the Husband-Man is in looking for his. ¶ Let your hearts be steadfast in Faith, and constant in Holiness, encouraging your selves to both by the coming of the Lord. ¶ As before, his coming to the general Judgment, which is said to be nigh, because of the certainty of its coming, and the uncertainty of the time when it will come, and because it is continually drawing on, and the whole time of the Worlds duration till then, is but short in comparison of the Eternity following, and likewise because the particular Judgment of every Man is nigh at hand, See Phil. 4. 5. Heb. 10. 37.

9 ¶ Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned, &c. behold the Judge standeth before the door.

¶ Or, Grudge not; the sense may be, either, envy not one another, (or as we translate it, grudge not) it being the nature of Envy to grudge at other Men's good; or, grudge not, as if you are accused or complain to God against others, desiring him to avenge your quarrels, as if you were too good to suffer injuries; or God were unjust or forgetful of righting you. ¶ Brother against Brother, Christian against Christian; they were injured not only by rich Worldlings, and other Oppressors, but by their fellow-Professors, and gave one another mutual cause of fighting and grieving. ¶ Let God punish you all; there being none of you, but have given others cause of grief and complaint, as well as others have given you, Math. 7. 1. ¶ The Lord Jesus Christ, the 10, grudge, or grudge.

Judge of you all, is at hand (Phil. 4. 5.) in a readiness either to bring those evils upon you, which you will with all upon others; or to give you your reward, if through patient continuance in well doing, you seek for it, Rom. 2. 7. The like Phrase we have, Math. 24. 33. Mark 13. 29. or it may allude to Gen. 4. 7.

10 Take my brethren the prophets ¶ which have spoken in the name of the Lord: for an example of suffering affliction, &c. and of patience.

¶ As being most eminent among God's People, and leaders of them; he intimates that it is an honour to suffer among the best. ¶ By his Command and Authority, and so were employed in the highest services in the Church; and thereby appeared to be approved of God, and most dear to him. ¶ As much as God honoured and loved them, yet they were not exempted from Afflictions, but were maligned, traduced and persecuted by Men. 1 Kings 18. 19. and 19. 14. and 2 Kings 6. 31. Amos 1. 10. Job 11. and therefore when they suffered such hard things, it is no shame for you to suffer the like, Math. 5. 12. ¶ As the example of their sufferings should prevent your Discouragement, for the example of their patience should provoke your imitation; God having let them forth as examples of both, that if you suffer the same things, you may follow in the same minds.

11 Behold * we ye count them happy which endure. ¶ Ye have heard of the patience of Job, &c. and have seen the end of the Lord, &c. that the Lord is very pitiful, &c. and of tender mercy.

¶ Ye our selves count them happy that endure, and therefore should be patient, and not count our selves miserable if we endure too. ¶ Ye, patiently and constantly, Math. 5. 10, 11. ¶ For which he was as eminent as for his Sufferings; and though for signs of impatience he was shewed, yet his patience and submission to God being prevalent, and most remarkable to him, that only is taken notice of, and his failings overlooked. ¶ Job's Patience is heard of, but God's end seen: Suffering being a clearer way of Perception than Healing, is put in this latter clause, because God's bounty and recompense was more evident than Job's Patience. ¶ The good life God gave to all Job's Sufferings, in restoring him to his former state, and doubling his Prosperity. ¶ A Fall of Bawls, for the Bawls being the seat of compassion (in which we feel a stirring when strong affections are working in us) are frequently put, to signify the most tender and movable affections of the heart. ¶ Job's Patience, &c. Job's Patience, &c. 10 Either troubled or afflicted in Mind, as appears by the apostrophe being worry, or more generally afflicted in any way. Not that we need not pray at other times, but when under afflictions God calls us more especially to it, and our own necessities put us upon it. * For Support, Patience, Satisfaction, Afflictions, &c. * Express his Mirth in an holy manner, by praising God with Psalms or Spiritual Songs for mercies received from him, 1 Cor. 13. 1. Eph. 5. 17. and to keep up his spiritual mirth by a spiritual exercise, lest his cheerfulness degenerate into vanity and frolicsome.

15 Or inform, though not desperately and incurably. * Especially teaching Elders, they being usually best furnished with gifts who labour in the Word and Doctrine, 1 Tim. 5. 17. It is in the Plural Number, either by an Exhortation for the Singular, q. d. let him feed for some or other of the Elders; or, because there were in those times usually several Elders (an Ecclesiastical Senate) in each Church. * As it were setting him before God, and presenting him to him, which might be a means to stir up the greater affection and warmth in Prayer, see 1 King 17. 21. and 1 Kings 4. 33-35. John 11. 41. Acts 20. 10. and q. d. or laying on their hands, as Acts 28. 8. which yet seems to be for the same end. * An outward rite used in those times, in miraculous healing Sick persons, which might then be kept up, while the Gift whereof it was the Symbol continued; but the Gift ceasing, it is vainly used. These Cures were sometimes with a Word, Acts 19. 21. and 14. 10. 10. times without only with a Word, Acts 19. 21. and 14. 10. 10. Sometimes by taking by the hand, or embracing, Acts 2. 7. and 20. 10. Sometimes by laying on of Hands, Mark 16. 18. Acts 9. 17. Sometimes by anointing with Oil, Mark 6. 13. and to this is not an institution of a Sacrament, but a command, that those Elders that had the Gift of Healing (as many in those days had) being called by the Sick to come to them, should (the Spirit of the Lord foreshadowing them) exercise that Gift, as well as Pray over them. * Either, calling upon the Lord, and so joining Prayer with their anointing; or, in the Name, is by the Authority of the Lord, from whom they had received that Gift.

* Some Copies have the illative particle, therefore, in the Text, but even without that here seems to be a connexion between this and the former Verse: He had said, the Sick Man's Sins should be forgiven upon the Elders praying; and here adds that they must be confessed. * Either, that ye may be reconciled to one another when offended, or rather confess when admonished or reproved for Sin, or wounded in your Consciences with the sense of it; and so this is not meant of Articular Confession made to a Priest, but such as should be made, though especially to Ministers, yet, when need is, even to goodly, experienced Christians, for the easing and disburdening Men's Consciences, and getting the help of others Prayers. * Both in other ordinary cases, and chiefly upon occasion of your mutual Confessions, and those Soul-torments that prompted you to them. * Not only recover bodily Health when sick, but spiritual, when weakened or wounded by Sin. Healing is often applied to the Soul as well as the Body, Mark 13. 14. Lev 4. 18. Job 12. 13. and 1 Pet. 2. 24. * Our Translators use two words (and little enough) to express the signification of the Greek word in this place: Some Translate it inwardly, it seems to be a Prayer wrought in the Soul by the Holy Spirit, and so may imply both the efficiency of God's Spirit (the Spirit of supplications, Zech 12. 10.) and the vehemency of Holy Affections caused by him in Prayer, Rom 8. 26. * One sincerely righteous, and in a Gospel sense; the following inference of Elihu shows that it is not to be understood of a Man absolutely righteous. * Is very powerful with God for obtaining what is desired, 1 Job 5. 14. whereas God heareth not Sinners, Prov 15. 8. 29.

18 Both of Body and Mind, natural and moral; and so though he were righteous yet he was not perfect, though an eminent Prophet, yet but a Man. * With that effectual, fervent Prayer before mentioned. It is an Hebrew plural, and notes vehemency, as Lev 22. 15. * This is not expressly mentioned in the History, but this Apostle might have it by Revelation, or by certain Tradition well known in his Age. Other passages of the like nature, we meet with in the New Testament which are not in the Old. See 1 Tim. 3. 8. Heb 12. 21. Jude 9. * Or, the Lord, viz. of the Ten Tribes, and the places bordering on them, as Zechar 1. 1. 1 King 17. 9. Lev 4. 25. 20. * So Lev 4. 25. * How does this agree with 1 King 18. 1. where it is said, the word of the Lord came to Elijah about the third year from his coming to Sarepta; and he was by the Brook Chisai a year, 1 King 17. 7, where the Margin reads it according to the Hebrew, at the end of days, i. e. the days of a year, as the phrase is often used, Gen 4. 3. Jede 17. 10. So that his time spent in both places may well make up the three years and six months.

18 And * he prayed again p, and the heaven * r King 18. q gave rain, and the earth brought forth her 44. 43. fruit.

19 After the destroying the Prophets of Baal, Baal-worship especially gave occasion to his former Prayer, which he put up out of his zeal to God's Glory, then laid low by the Idolatry, and a desire to have them by some exemplary punishment for their Sin awakened to Repentance. And the destruction of the Idolaters, and reformation of the people, who now acknowledged the Lord to be God, might give occasion to this. * i. e. the Air or Clouds, which had not been for three years before.

19 Brethren * if any of you do err from the truth r, and one s convert him t.

21 Of his Life and Actions, which is contrary to the way which God hath preferred. * Men are said to live in the same way as to convert, viz. instrumentally. * The Soul of him that is thus converted, 1 Tim. 4. 16. Soul for person, as Job 1. 21. * Eternal death unto which he is hurrying while he continued in the error of his way, which led him toward destruction. * In the same sense as before it is said to convert and save his Soul, viz. in being instrumental to bring him to Faith and Repentance, upon which God pardons, i. e. hides his Sins (Psalm 32. 1.) though not from the eye of his Omniscience, yet from the eye of his vindictive justice, and so as not to bring them forth in Judgment against him.

The first Epistle general OF PETER.

The ARGUMENT.

OF the Pen-Man of this Epistle there is no doubt; and of the time of his writing it, no certainty; whether about the year of our Lord 43, or rather 65. The occasion of it may (not improbably) be thought to be the same that was of James his writing his, viz. the folly and perverseness of some in those times, and among the Jewish Christians, whom he wrote, in separating Faith from Holiness, and their doubting whether Peter and Paul taught the same Doctrine; His scope therefore is, partly to confirm these Saints in the belief of the Gospel, and to testify that the Doctrine of the grace of God through Jesus Christ, which they had embraced and did profess, was indeed infallibly true, chap. 1. ver. 10, 11, 12. fairly implying it to be the same that Paul preached by his sending this Epistle to them that were of the Circumcision, by Sylvanus a Minister of the Uncircumcision, and Paul's ordinary companion in the work of the Gospel; (as likewise he doth by that ample testimony he gives to Paul and his writings, 2 Pet. 3. 15, 16.) And partly to exhort them to the practice of Godliness, and a conversation suitable to the Gospel: And that he doth both as to the general Duties incumbent on all Believers, in the first chapter, from ver. 13. to chap. 2. ver. 13. and as to the particular Duties which concerned them in their several relations, Subjects to Magistrates, Servants to Masters, Husbands and Wives mutually to each other, Ministers to People, younger People to their Elders, and especially Sufferers toward their Oppressors and Persecutors; but withal intermixing several general Duties, and of concernment to all, and concluding all with Prayer and Salvation.

CHAP. I.

1 Peter an Apostle of Jesus Christ, to the Strangers * scattered b throughout Pontus c, Galatia d, Cappadocia e, Asia f, and Bithynia g.

2 Not only Metaphorically Strangers, as all Believers are in the World, chap. 2. 11. but properly, as being out of their own Land, and so really strangers in the places here mentioned. * So John 1. 1. * A Country of the lesser Asia, bordering upon the Euxine Sea, and reaching as far as Colchis. * Which borders upon Pontus, and lies Southward of it. To the Gentile Churches inhabiting here Paul wrote his Epistle inscribed to the Galatians. * This likewise borders upon Pontus, and is joined with it, Acts 2. 9. * That part of Asia the less, which was especially called Asia, viz. the whole Country of Ionia which contained in it Troas, Phrygia, Lycia, Caria, &c. See Acts 16. 6. p. and 19. 10. 31. * Another Province of the lesser Asia bordering upon Pontus, and Galatia, and opposite to Thracia. * Who were the Strangers to whom this Epistle was written? * A. Chiefly the Christian Jews scattered in these Countries, as appears by chap. 2. 12. and 1. 18. where he mentions the Traditions of their Fathers, of which the Jews were so fond, Matth 15. 2. Gal 1. 14. but fearlessly to the converted Gentiles. As Paul, the Apostle of the Uncircumcision, wrote principally to the converted Gentiles, as Rom 1. 11. Coloss, Ephesus, &c. but doth not exclude those Jews that were among them, who being converted to the Faith, were of the same mystical Body with them; so Peter, though he firstly write to the converted Jews, as being an Apostle of the Circumcision, yet includes the Gentiles that were mingled among them, and joined in Faith and Worship with them.

2 Elect b according to the foreknowledge f of God the Father k, through sanctification l of the Spirit m, unto obedience n, and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ o. * Grace unto you, and peace be multiplied p.

b By Elect he means, either, 1. singled out of the World, and separated unto God in their effectual callings; 1 Cor. 1. 1. those that are said to be called v. 26. are said to be chosen, 9. 27. 28. and so the word seems to be taken, John 2. 25. or, 2. Chosen to Salvation, and the means of it in God's Eternal Decree, Eph 1. 4. and 2 Thim 2. 13. i. Either, 1. The Divine Preordination, or Decree of Election, as the word is taken v. 20. and then we may take Elect in the first sense; Men are chosen out of the World, or called in time, according as they were chosen from Eternity, Rom 8. 30. or, 2. Fore-knowledge here is as much as approbation of love, Matth 7. 25. Rom 11. 2. and so signifies the free favour, and good-will of God, which is the Fountain from whence the Decree of Election proceeds; and then we are to take Elect in the latter sense, and so elect according to the fore-knowledge of God, is certainly designed unto life, according to, or out of that free grace and love God did from Eternity bestow to them, which was the only motive he had for his choosing them; or, (which comes to the same, in fore-knowledge we may understand Election in itself, as it is in God, and by Election the same as re-termined in the Creature, and entailed in effectual Calling. & This doth not exclude the Son or Spirit from their interest in, and concurrence to the Divine Decree, but only notes the order of working among the Three Persons in the affair of Man's Salvation: Election is ascribed to the Father, Reconciliation to the Son, and Sanctification to the Spirit. 1. Sanctification seems to be taken in a large sense, for the whole change of our spiritual face, both as to real grace in regeneration, and relative in justification, for that God may then be said to Sanctify us when in our effectual calling he justifies us from our Sins, and renews us unto Obedience, so it is taken, Heb 10. 10. * This is to be understood rather of the Spirit of God the efficiency of Sanctification, than the Spirit or Soul of Man the subject of it. * Either, 1. The obedience of Christ to God, and then the sense is Elect or ordained to be by the Sanctification of the Spirit made partakers of the benefits of Christ's Obedience; or, 2. The obedience of Believers to Christ, and that either in their Believing; Faith being a giving obedience to the great command of the Gospel, John 6. 29. and particularly called Obedience, Rom 1. 5. and then the sense runs thus, Elect unto Faith, which grace to be wrought in by the Sanctification

Work, they are to undertake. h Gr. prophetai, as in the Margin, i. e. Incertly, entirely, with a firm Confidence; but the following words favour our Translation, which signifies Perfection in Grace. See Heb. 3. 6. i. Final Salvation, which is the Gift of Grace, Rom. 6. 23. and is called the Grace of Life, 1 Pet. 3. 7. k Called the appearing of Jesus Christ, v. 7.

14 As obedient children l, not following m your selves according to the former lusts n, in your ignorance p.

l Gr. Children of Obedience, by an usual Hebraism for obedient Children. So Children of Discipline, Eph. 4. 3. and thus we may understand either absolutely, Children of obedience for obedient Persons; or with relation to God, obedient Children of God; and then the Apostle persuades them to their Duty by an Argument taken from their Adoption: being the Children of God, he would have them behave themselves obediently, as becomes them in that Relation. m No accommodating conforming your selves, not shaping, or ordering your Conversation. See the same word, Rom. 12. 2. n The Lusts you formerly indulged your selves in. See Eph. 4. 22. o Your Ignorance of Christ and the Gospel, 1. 8. not fashioning your selves according to those Lusts you lived in, when you were ignorant of Christ, the distinguisheth between the time of their Ignorance, and of their Illumination. Another Age requires other manners. They formerly lived according to the Dictates of their Lusts, but now ought to live according to the Will of Christ. See 1. 17. 20. p Heb. 4. 17, 18.

15 But as he p that hath called q you, is holy r, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation s.

p God the Father, to whom, as the first Cause, our Calling is frequently ascribed. Rom. 8. 30. 1. 24. and 1 Cor. 7. 15. Gal. 1. 6, 15. It may be rendered, according to the holy One that hath called you, i. e. according to his Example; you are Children, and should therefore imitate your Father, Eph. 5. 1. q viz. Effectually, to the Knowledge and Faith of Christ. r So God is often styled by Heb. and other Pen-men of the Scripture, as the Fountain and Exemplar of Holiness. s Either through the whole Course, and in the several parts of your Conversation, or in all manner of Conversation, as we read in 1. 1. with whomsoever ye converse, Believers or Infidels, Friends or Enemies, Relations or Strangers; and in whatsoever Condition ye are, Peace or Trouble, Prosperity or Adversity.

16 Because it is written, \ Be ye holy, for I am holy*.

1. 1 my Father, and therefore you ought to imitate, and obey me; Or, I that have severed you from other People, that you should be mine. Lev. 20. 26. to which place particularly this seems to refer.

17 And if u ye call on v the father, \ who*, without respect of persons, judgeth w according to every man's work x: \ t* pass the time of your journeying h here in fear c.

u This Particle is used here, and frequently elsewhere, not as a Note of doubting, but by way of Assertion, and Supposition of a thing known. x Either this is to be taken of Invocation, their calling on God in Prayer; and then the sense is, If ye be Servants, and Worshipers of the Father: Prayer being many times put for the whole Worship of God, Job. 43. 22. Acts 9. 11. or of their calling God, Father, as Matth. 6. 9. and then the sense is, If you would be counted God's Children, James 1. 5. y Call to will no more excuse you that are Jews, and descended from Abraham, than those that are born of Gentile Parents, Job. 34. 19. Acts 13. 24. Eph. 6. 9. z And so is not a Father only, but a Judge, and a most righteous one. a. 1. 17, the Singular Number put, for the Plural, as James 1. 25. See Rom. 2. 8. Job. 34. 17. b The word signifies the temporary abode of a Man in a place where he was not born, or does not ordinarily reside: such being the Condition of Believers in the World, they are Sojourners, not Citizens of it; they are travelling through it to their Father's House, and heavenly Country, Heb. 11. 9, 10, 13, 16. They are here called called to a stable Carriage according to the next words. c Which is due to him as a Father, and a Judge. It may imply the greatest Reverence, and the deepest Humility, Phil. 2. 12. and 1 Cor. 3. 3. and 1 Pet. 3. 2, 15.

18 For as much as ye know d, \ that ye were not redeemed e with corruptible things, as silver, and gold, f from your vain g conversation h, received by tradition i from your fathers j: k Consecrating that ye were in l Servile Condition, and in Bondage to their own Errors, will they were converted to Christ. † The most precious things, of greatest esteem among Men, † Because unprofitable to, and insufficient for Righteousness and Salvation. g viz. in your Judicial, wherein you were so much addicted to uncommanded Rites and Ceremonies, as to have little respect for God's Law. h And so not only* by their Example and Precepts, but by their Doctrine and Precepts, Matth. 15. 3. 9. Mark 7. 7. See likewise Gal. 1. 14. i Either, your Ancestors, Exod. 20. 18. or Doctors and Instructions, who are sometimes called Fathers, 1 Cor. 4. 15.

19 But \ with the precious k blood of Christ, as of a † Lamb m without blemish n, and without spot o.* k Because the Blood not only of an innocent Person, but of the Son of God, Acts 20. 28. 1. 18. viz who was a Lamb, † The Lamb of God, John 1. 29. John 1. 29. not only like a Lamb for his Innocence and purity, Job. 1. 5. viz. 7. but the Antitype of the Lamb, which under the Law were offered in the daily Sacrifices, and more especially of the Paschal Lamb; whatever was shadowed out in that, and those other Sacrifices having its Accomplishment in Christ. m Without Fault, without Defect, in which nothing was wanting that was requisite to its Perfection; or, in which nothing could be blamed. The Greek word seems to be derived from the Hebrew Sham, so often used for a Blemish; see Lev. 24. 19, 20. o Without any other Defect. The Lamb might have no Defect, but yet might have some Spot; † and it was to be perfect, (Exod. 12. 5) which implied it having not the one, nor the other. Christ was such a Lamb, perfect in Holiness, and free from all Sin, John 8. 29, 46. and Heb. 7. 26. 1. 22.

20 \ Who verily was fore-ordained p before † the foundation of the world q, but was manifested r, in † these last times s for you t.*

p By God's Decree appointed to the work of Redemption. The Lamb might have no Defect, but yet might have some Spot; † and it was to be perfect, (Exod. 12. 5) which implied it having not the one, nor the other. Temporal, Spiritual, and Eternal Mercies, which are all promised to the godly, 1 Tim. 4. 8. and which they have by right of inheritance, Phil. 3. 7. 11. Math. 5. 5. and this seems to agree with 10. 11. 12.

* Phil. 3. 4. 12. &c. 10 For h he that will love life r, and see good n days, let him refrain his tongue from evil x, and his lips that they speak no guile y.

h He that earnestly desires to lead a quiet and comfortable Life here, and to enjoy Eternal Life hereafter. y Peaceable, and propitious; as evil days are such as are grievous and calamitous, Gen. 47. 9. x From evil-speaking, railing, reviling, open destruction. y Tell no Lies of his Neighbour: Or, this may imply Whispering, Back-biting, or any way, secretly and closely speaking evil of him. Where these two, all the Vices of the Tongue, whereby the Neighbour may be wronged, are contained, and the contrary Virtues commended under the Name of Bliss.

* Phil. 3. 27. him seek peace a, and enslave b it.

a Let him not only in general avoid all Sin, and exercise himself in all well-doing (as the Prophet meaning cited in the Margin, seems to be) but particularly, let him avoid all Sin against his Neighbour, not recompensing evil to him, and doing him all the good he can, and overcoming evil with good; and to this the Apostle accommodates the Prophet's words. a Not only with God, and his own Conscience, but with his Neighbours, which is here especially meant. b Either seeking and enjoining rightly the same thing, viz. an earnest desire of Peace, and use of all lawful means to obtain it; or, viz. it may signify the difficulty of obtaining it; when we seek it, it may seem to fly from us. May not yet let us have Peace when we would have Peace, Phil. 1. 20. y, and therefore we must follow it, Heb. 12. 14.

12 For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers: c but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil.

c God watcheth over them, looks favourably on them and hears their Prayers: see Phil. 3. 24. 15. This lays down as a motive to Patience under affliction, and to keep us from tumultuating Passions, and desires of Revenge; that God sees all we suffer, hath a care of us, and is ready to hear, and in due time to help us. d His Anger or Indignation; Face being here taken for God's favour (as many times it is) but in the contrary sense; as Lev. 17. 9. and 20. 9. Phil. 48. 1. 2. e When they by their Contentment whether they be angry or pleased; and hence it is that God's Face is sometimes taken for his favour, sometimes for his displeasure. A further Argument to persuade us to Patience, that God undertakes to plead our cause against our Enemies, and avenges us on them; whereas if we think to secure our selves against him by undue means, we make God an Enemy to us.

13 And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?

a None or few will harm you, as being convinced and overcome by your good Deeds, whereby even they are many times mollified and melted that are of themselves most wicked and hard-hearted, 1 Sam. 24. 16. 17. b Either followers of God, who doth good to the evil and unkind; but then it should be rendered followers of him who is good, or, rather followers of those things that are good, q. d. if you be diligent in doing good to others, none will have the heart to do you hurt.

* Chap. 4. 1. 4. &c. 14 * But and if ye suffer for righteousness sake g happy h are you, and i be not afraid of their terror k, neither be troubled l.

g If ye suffer unjustly, whether it be for the true Profession of the Gospel, or in the exercise of righteousness, being followers of that which is good, and walking in the practice of the Duties before mentioned. h Both in the spiritual benefit ye gain by Sufferings, viz. your edification in Faith, Patience, Humility, &c. the Glory which redounds to God who supports you under, and carries you through them, and the reward you your selves expect after them, Math. 5. 10. &c. i Either be not afraid in the manner of carnal Men (as the Prophet's meaning is, Isa. 8. 2. viz. rather (the Apostle accommodating the words of the Prophet to his present purpose) be not afraid of those formidable things wherewith they threaten you; or be not afraid of themselves and their threatenings, whereby they would frighten terror into you; and so here is a Metonymy for the words; viz. the effects being put for the cause; thus fear is taken, Phil. 4. 1. 2. and 1 Pt. 5. 5. and Prov. 1. 26. & Ps. 119. inordinately, with such a Fear as is contrary to Faith, and hinders you from doing your Duty, Joh. 14. 1.

15 But sanctify j the Lord God in your hearts, and be ready always m to give an answer n to every man o that asketh you a reason of the hope p that is in you with meekness and q.

j Exalt him in your hearts, and give him the honour of all his glorious Perfections, Powers, Wisdom, Goodness, Faithfulness, &c. by believing down, and depending upon his Promises for defence and assistance against all the Evils your Enemies may threaten you with. m Prepared to answer when duly called to it. n Or, to make an Answer of Defence, viz. of the Faith ye profess; the word is used Act. 22. 1. and 1 Cor. 9. 3. o Either that hath Authority to examine you, and take an account of your Religion; or, that asks with modesty and a desire to be satisfied, and learn of you. p i. e. Faith, for which Hope is frequently used in Scripture, which is built upon Faith: The fence is, whereas Unbelievers, your Persecutors especially, may look at your hope of future Glory, as vain and groundless, and as your selves, as mad or foolish, for venturing the loss of all in this World, and exposing your selves to too many sufferings in expectation of ye know not what uncertainties in the other; do ye therefore be always ready to defend and justify your Faith against all Objections, and to show how reasonable your hope of Salvation is, and on how sure a Foundation it is built. q Either with meekness in relation to Men, in opposition to Passion and intemperance Zeal (your Confidence of the Faith must be with Courage, but yet with a spirit of meekness and modesty) and fear or reverence in relation to God, which, where it prevails, overcomes the fierceness of Men's Spirits, and makes them speak modestly of the things of God, and give due respect to Men; Or, Fear may be set in opposition to Pride, and presumption of a Man's own Wisdom or Strength, q. d. Make Confession of your Faith humbly, with Fear and Trembling, not in confidence of your own strength, or gifts, or abilities.

16 * Having a good conscience r that whereas s they speak evil of you, as of evil-doers, they may be ashamed t that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ u.

r This may be read either, 1. Indicatively, and joined (as by some it is) to the former Verse; and then the sense is, if ye be always ready to answer every one that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, ye shall have a good Conscience: Or, rather, 2. Imperatively (which our Translation favours) q. d. not only be ready to make Confession of your Faith; but let your Life and Practice be correspondent to it, in keeping your selves pure from Sin, and exercising your selves unto Godliness, from whence a good Conscience proceeds; here therefore the effect is put for the cause, a good Conscience for a good Life, Act. 23. 1. The fence is, that whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil-doers, your good Conversation may bear witness for you, confute their Calumnies, and make them ashamed, when it appears that their accusations are false, and that they have nothing to charge upon you but your being followers of Christ. s. i. e. That good Conversation, which ye lead as being in Christ; viz. according to his Doctrine and Example, and by the influence of his Spirit.

17 For v is better, if the will of God be for t, that ye suffer for well-doing than for evil-doing.

v That ye must suffer; intimating that this is an argument for their patience and submission in their Sufferings, and a ground of Comfort to them, that they are led into this by the Providence of God (not by their own folly or rashness) and have him for a Witness and Judge both of their Cause and Deportment.

18 For Christ also hath w once x suffered for sins y, the just for the unjust, z that he might bring us to God z; z being put to death in the flesh a, but quickened by the Spirit b.

a In opposition to the legal Sacrifices which were offered from day to day, and from year to year, Heb. 7. 27. 9. 25. and 10. 12. and this shews, as the perfection of Christ's Sufferings, (in that they needed not be repeated) or our Conformity to him in deliverance from ours; that as Christ underwent Death (the principal part of his Sufferings) not often, but once only, and then his Glory followed; so likewise if in this Life we suffer for righteousness sake, according to Christ's example, there remains no more suffering for us, but we shall be glorified with him, 2 Tim. 2. 12. s. i. e. For the expiation of Sin. This is another argument for Patience under Sufferings, that Christ by his Sufferings hath taken away the guilt, and freed us from the punishment of Sin; so that our Sufferings, though they may be not only by way of Trial, but of Correction; yet are not properly penal or vindictive. y And therefore will may we who are in our selves unrighteous, be content to suffer, especially for his Cause and Truth. z. i. e. Reconcile us to God, and procure for us access to him with freedom and boldness, Rom. 5. 2. Eph. 3. 12. a His humane Nature, frequently in Scripture called Flesh, as 1 Pt. 4. 1. 1. Ps. 14. and though his Soul, as being immortal did not die, yet he suffered most grievous Torments in it, and his Body died by the real Separation of his Soul from it. b. i. e. His own Godhead, Joh. 2. 19. and 10. 17. 18. The former Member of this Sentence speaks of the Subject of his Death, his Flesh, which was likewise the Subject of his Life in his Resurrection: this latter speaks of the efficient Cause of his Life, his own eternal Spirit.

* Chap. 4. 6. 19 By which c also he d went e and f preached g unto the Spirits h in prison i.

c By which Spirit mentioned in the end of the former Verse, i. e. by, or in his Divine Nature, the same by which he was quickened. d Christ, thenceforth the Person that acted and preached, as the former death the Nature in which, and so shews that what is here spoken of the Person of Christ, is to be understood of him according to his Divine Nature. e Or, viz. from Heaven, by an Anthropopathy, by which Figure God is often in Scripture said to go forth, Isa. 26. 21. to come down, Mich. 1. 3. and Isa. 68. 18. 1. 2. Isa. 68. 18. which two latter places are best understood of the second Person. This therefore here notes in Christ not a change of place, but a special Operation, and Testification of his Presence. f Viz. By Noah inspired by him, that he might be a Preacher of Righteousness to warn a wicked Generation of approaching Judgment, and exhort them to Repentance. g Souls of Men departed, which are frequently called Spirits, Eccl. 12. 9. Acts 7. 59. Heb. 12. 23. b. i. e. In Hell it is taken, Ps. 137. 20. compare with Math. 5. 25. Luke 12. 58. where Psalm is mentioned as a Type, or Representation of Hell; and the Spirit renders the word by Soul, which signifies sometimes the Grave, and sometimes Hell. See the like Expression, 2 Pt. 2. 4. 5. and Jude 6.

20 * Which j sometime k were disobedient l, when once m the long-suffering of God n waited o in the days of Noah p, while the ark was a preparing, q wherein few, that is, eight souls r were saved by water r.

j Which Spirits in Prison. Quest. When were these Spirits to whom Christ preached by Noah in Prison? Ans. Then when Noah wrote this Epistle. The Greek Particle of the Present Tense is here to be supplied, and the word thus read, preached to the Spirits, which are in Prison, viz. now at this time; and so the time of their being in Prison, is opposed to the time of their being disobedient; their Disobedience going before their Imprisonment, q. d. they were disobedient then, they are in Prison now. k. Viz. In the days of Noah, when they were upon Earth. l I would not believe what Noah told them in God's Name, nor be brought to Repentance by his Preaching. m Not always, but for a determinate time, viz. 120 years; which term being expired, there was no hope left for them that they should be spared. n. i. e. God in his Patience, and long-suffering. o For the Repentance and Reformation of that rebellious Generation. p Till the 120 years were run out, and the Ark, which was a preparing for the Security of him, and his Family, were finished. q. i. e. Eight Persons, Noah, and his Wife, his three Sons, and their Wives. r Either, 1. By Water, is here put for is, as Rom. 4. 11. that blessing, though they be not drops of life. The same Greek Preposition is used as here, and the words may be read, by or through, or rather is Uncircumcision; for Uncircumcision was not the cause or means of their believing. See the like use of this Particle, 2 Pt. 3. 7. Thus saved is the Water, is as much as notwithstanding the Water; or the Water notwithstanding; so 1 Tim. 2. 15. saved is Child-bearing, where the same Proposition is used: Or, 2. By Water, the Water, which drowned the World, lifting up the Ark and saving Noah and his Household. Quest. Doth not this Place commendance the Psalmist's Limbs, or the place where the Souls of the Old-Testament Fathers were reserved (as they pretend) till Christ's coming in the Flesh? Ans. No. 1. The Spirits here mentioned were disobedient, which cannot be said of the Fathers of the Old-Testament, who were true Believers. 2. The Spirits here mentioned, are not said to be delivered out of Prison, but only that Christ by his Spirit preached to them, and to his preaching to them, their disobedience is opposed. 3. According to the Psalmist, Noah and his Family must have their Limbs whither they were opposed to those disobedient Spirits to whom Christ is said to preach.

* Eph. 5. 26. 20 * The like figure s whereunto t, even baptism, doth also now save us u; (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh v, but the answer w of a good conscience x towards God y); by the resurrection of Jesus Christ z. z Gr. the Antitype; twice this word occurs in Scripture, once Heb. 9. 24. where it signifies simply a Type, or Exemplar, or Representation; and here, where it implies either the likeness or correspondence of one Type with another in signifying the same thing; so that here may be two types, the Deliverance of Noah and his Household in the Flood, and Noah, wherein the former was a Type of the latter, yet so as both represent the Salvation of the Church in that as the Waters of the Flood lifting up the Ark, and saving Noah's Family shut up in it, signified the Salvation of the Church: so likewise Baptism signifies the Salvation of those that are in the Church (as in an Ark) from the danger of destruction which involves the rest of the World: Or, it signifies the Truth it self, as answering the Type or Figure; and thus the temporal Salvation of Noah, &c. from the Flood, in the Ark, was the Type, and the eternal Salvation of Believers by Baptism, is the Antitype, or Truth figured by it. Our Translation seems to favour the former sense, viz. the saving of the Persons by Water, q. d. the Salvation of Believers now by Baptism, answers to the Deliverance of Noah then; and so this Relative, wherunto, answers to the foregoing Sentence, as its Antecedent, viz. with an eternal Salvation, in answer to the temporal Deliverance of Noah by Water; and it is not only as it is a Sign, but a Seal whereby the Spirit of God confirms the Hearts of Believers the Faith of their Justification purchased by Christ's Death, and witnessed by his Resurrection, Rom. 4. 25. x Not merely the washing of the Body with Water, or the external part of Baptism, which can of it self have no further effect, than only bodily Washings have, viz. to cleanse the flesh, and so to answer an Objection which might be made, how Baptism can be said to save us, when so many perish who are baptized, by declaring, as follows, what it is in Baptism which is so effectual. y The Grave word here used, is several ways rendered, and so this place differently interpreted: The best Translation seems to be, either, 1. The Prison of a good Conscience, and then it notes the effect of Baptism, viz. that they have Confidence and Security with a Conscience, sprinkled with the Blood of Christ, addresses it self to God in Prayer, as a Father. Thus the word is taken, Math. 15. 23. and 16. 2. Rom. 10. 20. Or rather, 2. The Stipulation, which by a Metonymy is taken for the Answer, Promise, or Retribution required, and this agrees with our Translation. In Baptism there is a solemn Covenant, or mutual Agreement between God and the Party baptized, wherein God offers, applies, and seals his Grace, stipulating or requiring the Party's acceptance of that Grace, and delivering himself to his Service; and when he out of a good Conscience doth engage, and promise this, which is to come up to the terms of Covenant, that may properly be called the Answer of a good Conscience. It seems to be an Allusion to the manner of Baptizing, where the Minister asks the Party to be baptized, concerning his Faith in Christ, and he accordingly answers him, Dost thou believe? I believe. Dost thou renounce the Devil, &c.? I renounce. See Act. 8. 37. A Conscience purified by Faith from internal and spiritual defilements (in opposition to putting away the filth of the flesh) which only inwardly answers to what God requires in Baptism, i. e. In the presence of God, with whom Confidence hath to do in Baptism, and who alone is the Judge of Conscience, and knows whether it be good and sincere, or not: Or, toward God, is to God; and then it relates to answer, and implies the Answer, or Engagement of Conscience to be made to God. z Either these words are to be joined to the Verb save, and the rest of the Verse to be read in a Parenthesis, according to our Translation, and then the sense is, That Baptism saved us by the Faith of Christ's Resurrection, or by Virtue derived from Christ's Resurrection, under which is comprehended his Death and Sufferings; or they are to be joined to answer, supplying which is, and then without a Parenthesis, the Text runs thus, the Answer of a good Conscience, which is, by the Resurrection of Christ, and the meaning is, That the Answer of a good Conscience toward God, is by the Resurrection of Christ, as the Foundation of our believing the Promise of Forgiveness, and Free-gate, in as much as it testifies God to be fully satisfied for Sin, and Christ to have fully overcome Sin, the Devil, &c. For where this Faith is not, there can be no good Conscience, nor any sincere answering what God requires of us in Baptism: If Men do not believe the Satisfaction of Divine Justice by Christ's Death, which is evidenced by his Resurrection, they will not close with the Offers of his Grace, nor engage themselves to be the Lord's. See 1 Cor. 15. 17. and this Epistle Chap. 1. 3.

22. Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God, * angels, and authorities, and powers c, being made d subject unto him.

* See Rom. 8. 34. Heb. 1. 3. This is added as another ground of Faith, and a good Conscience. c See Rom. 8. 38. Eph. 1. 20. 21. Col. 1. 16. and 2. 10. z Viz. by his Father, to whom this subjecting all things to Christ is ascribed, 1 Cor. 15. 27. Eph. 1. 22. Heb. 2. 8.

CHAP. IV.

Forasmuch then e as Christ hath suffered for us f in the flesh, arm your selves likewise with the same mind g; for h he that hath suffered in the flesh k, hath ceased from sin l. The Apostle having in the former Chapter exhorted Believers to patient bearing of Afflictions by the Example of Christ, v. 18, proceeds in this to persuade them to improve the Crosses they bore outwardly to inward Mortification. Christ's Death is proposed to us in Scripture as an Exemplar both of external Mortification in severe Reproaches, Persecutions, &c. This the Apostle prosecutes in the former Chapter, and of internal in the destroying the Body of Sin: this he exhorts to in this Chapter, and indeed draws his Argument from Christ's Death, not only as the exemplary, but efficient and meritorious Cause of our Mortification, and which hath a real Injustice upon us, in that Christ by his Death did not only merit the Pardon of Sin, but the giving the Spirit, whereby Corruption might be destroyed, and our Natures renewed. f Ver, not only as an Exemplar of Patience and Submission to the Will of God, but for the taking away of Sin, both in the Guilt and Power of it, and that he might be the Procurer as well as Pattern of our Mortification. g In his human Nature, as chap. 3. 18. b Strengthen, and fortify your selves against all Temptations, and unto the Mortification of your Lusts with the Consideration of their Ends, and the mighty Efficacy of Christ's Death, he suffering in his Flesh, i. e. in his human Nature, that you might suffer in your Flesh, i. e. in your sinful corrupt Nature: Or, (which comes to the same) with the same mind which Christ had, who, in his Death, aimed not only at the Pardon of your Sin, but the Destruction of it, and the Renovation of your Natures: Or, arm your selves with the same Mind, viz. a purpose of suffering in the Flesh, i. e. of dying spiritually with Christ in the Mortification of your Flesh, Rom. 6. 6, 7. as Christ died, and suffered in the Flesh, to reckon that you, by the Virtue of his Death, made to die to Sin, and crucify your Flesh, with its Affections and Lusts, Gal. 5. 24. or else what the same Mind is, he declares in the following clause. h Or rather that the Greek word here seems rather to be explicative than causal. i. e. The Old Man, his corrupt Flesh, (Flesh being taken here in a different sense from what it was in the former part of the Verse.) he that is spiritually dead with Christ, whose Old Man is crucified with him. I From sinning willingly and delightfully, and yielding himself up to the Power of Sin; comp. Rom. 6. which explains this: viz. Peter here calls suffering in the Flesh, Paul there calls a being dead to Sin, v. 2. 11. and what Peter calls a being dead to Sin, Paul calls a living no longer in Sin, v. 2. 2. and a being free from it, v. 7. And this may be the Mind, or Thought with which they were to be armed, that they being dead with Christ to Sin, should not live any longer in it; having their Flesh crucified, should not indulge in Affections and Lusts.

* Rom. 14. 7. 2 * That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh, to the lusts of men, but to the will of God.

m i. e. in the Body, meaning his natural Life. Flesh is here taken, in a third sense different from the two former; fo Gal. 2. 20. Phil. 1. 22. n By the Lusts of Men, he means the corrupt Desires, and sinful ways of carnal Men, to which they were not to conform themselves, or make them the Rule of their living, Rom. 12. 2. 1 Cor. 3. 3. and Gal. 5. 8. Tit. 1. 14.

o The Holy Will of God revealed to us in his Law, which is the Rule by which we are to walk i in opposition to the Lusts of Men; we are to live not as Men would have us, but as God commands us.

* Eph. 4. 17. 3 For the time past of our lives may suffice p

q we to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, y

when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excesses of wine, revellings, m, banquetings x, and abominable Idolatries y:

p The Apostle doth not mean by this Expression merely that they should forsake their former Lusts, out of a Society and Weariness, as having had their fill of them, but fit them up to Holiness by minding them that their former sinful life, q. d. ye are concerned to run well now, when ye have for so great a part of your time run wrong. It is a Figure whereby he mitigates and lessens the sharpness of his Re- proof for their former sinful life: See the Exe. Eph. 4. 6. and 45. 9. Mark 14. 41. q Some Copies read 36 and then agrees with the following Verse, where the second Per- son is made use of: or if we read according to our Transla- tion, m, i. e. as if called Accountants, whereby Peter at- taches to himself in common with them what yet in his own Person he was never guilty of, as Heb. 4. 6. 7. Dan. 9. 5. Or, or else it may be an Exaltation of the Person, who first the first is put for a second. viz. those that were pro- fanes and ignorant of God and Christ, and so it is the same as the Lusts of Men, v. 2. f Had our Conversation, as Eph. 2. 3. walking being taken for the Course of Man's Life; and sometimes in an evil way, as 2 Pet. 2. 10. and 3. 7. Jude 16. and sometimes in a good, as Luke 1. 6. Especially outward Acts here be, in distinction from Lusts, which im- plies their inward motions from which those outward Dele- ments proceed. a Unconscionable and luxurious feeding, Rom. 13. 13. Gal. 5. 21. c Compositions, or meetings for Drinking, Prov. 23. 30. He. 5. 11, 22. d Quest. Why doth Peter charge the First with Idolatry, who generally keep themselves from it after the Idolatry Captivity? Ans. The most dead, yet all might not. aly. It is a sort of Idolatry to eat things sacrificed to Idols, which many of the Jews being dispersed among the idolatrous Gentiles, and being invited by them to their idol-Festivals, might possibly do; and being under the Temptation of Poverty, might too far conform themselves to the Customs of the Nations among which they were. aly. Probably this Idolatry might be the Worship of Angels, frequent among the Gentiles, particularly the Cathari in- habiting a City of Phrygia, which was part of Asia where many Jews were, chap. 1. 1. aly. The Churches to which he wrote might be made up of Jews and Gentiles, and the Apostle may, as Synechdoche, ascribe that to all in com- mon, which yet is to be understood only of a part.

4 Wherein they think it strange, x, that you run a not with them to the same excess b of riot, speaking evil c of you.

z Gr. Ar. Strangers, i. e. carry themselves as Strangers, wondering (as at some new thing) at the change the Gos- pel hath made in you, and your no more conforming your selves to their wicked Customs: they seem to be in another World, when among you. 4 This seems to signify the ex- cesses and vehemency of these Gentiles in pursuing their Lusts, and may perhaps have some respect to the Feasts of Bacchus, to which they were wont mostly to run, and there commit the Abominations mentioned v. 3. b Or, Profane- ness, or Confusion of Rites or Luxury, and then it suits well with that up of Sin before-mentioned, whereby this seems to be comprehensive. c Gr. Blasphemy, or speaking evil. viz. as is added by the Translators: This may therefore be understood not only of their speaking evil of Believers, as void of Humanity, and Enemies to civil Society, but of God and the Christian Religion, as a dull, morose, frowny way, and which they could not embrace without renouncing all Mirth and Chearfulness.

5 Who shall give account d to him that is ready e to judge the quick and the dead, f. * Act. 17. 31. d Of their evil-speaking as well as of other Sins, Jude 1. e It is a Metaphor taken from Stewards giving account to their Masters, Matth. 18. 23. Luke 16. 2. f Not only prepared for it, but at hand to do it, James 5. 9. f Those that shall be alive at Christ's coming, and those that died before, but these shall be raised, and brought to judgment. h Gr. he assumes, for their Comfort, that tho' their Enemies, and ill-Willers might out-live them, yet they shall not escape God's Judgment.

6 For for this cause * was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, g, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit. i.

a Either, i. spiritually dead, i. e. dead in Sin, viz. then when the Gospel was preached to them: Or, 2ly. naturally dead, when the Apostle wrote this Epistle. The Verb are, not being in the Greek, the words may be understood either way, by supplying was, according to the former Ex- position, or are, according to the latter, which our Transla- tors favour. See the like, Ruth 1. 8. b Either, i. that they might be judged or condemned in the Flesh, i. e. that their Old Man, and carnal Conversation according to men walking in their carnal Lusts, might be destroyed and abolished; and then to be judged in the Flesh is of the same import as to suffer in the flesh, v. 1. to be dead to Sin, Rom. 6. 1. 2. that they might be judged or condemned in the Flesh, according to men; and so far as they could reach, not only by Centures, Reproaches, and evil-speaches, but even death in Hell, as it had fallen out already to Stephen, James, &c. That they might live a spiritual Life in their Souls according to the Will of God, and an eternal Life with him. To live in the Spirit, is the Will of God, to walk in virtues of Life, &c. are Phrases of a like import in the Language of the Apostles. According to the latter Exposition of the former clause, the Apostle seems in the whole to remove the scandal of these Christians being reproached, and condemned by unbelievers for their friskings in Religion, and Non-conformity to the World, by telling them, that their Condition was not singular, but so it had fared with others before them (tho' now dead) to whom the Gospel was preached, with the same Event as to the Judgment of worldly men who censured and condemned them, and yet with the same sort of Fruit and Bene- fit, viz. that they were condemned by men in the Flesh, or so to their outward man, yet as to their Souls (meant here by Spirits) they might live a holy spiritual Life, a Life to God in this World, ending in a Life with him in the other.

7 But * the end of all things is at hand f: Be ye therefore sober m, and watch n at unto prayer a.

h The last Judgment which will put an end to all the Evils as well as good things of this World. 1 See James 5. 8. m Both in mind, prudens, moderate. 2 Cor. 13. 7. n The watch in Body, temperate in means and diet. 3 Thim. 4. 7. o The watch in Soul, temperate in desires, in opposition to Drunkenness, &c. 1 Thim.

1 Thess. 5. 6. 8. and Watchfulness, 2 Thim. 4. 5. and this signifi- cation agrees best with this place, the former being im- plied in the word sober. 2 The end for which they should be sober and vigilant, viz. that they might observe every season fit for Prayer, and might still keep themselves in a Praying frame.

8 And above all things p have fervent chari- ty q among your selves, for * charity r shall co- ver the multitude of sins r.

9 See the like expression, James 5. 12. and on the same occasion, Col. 3. 14. q Not only labour after Charity dili- gently and carefully, but let it be fervent, intense, strong. r Parity by preventing Anger, Rillings, Revellings, Con- temptions, that they break not out, and partly by repressing, controlling, pardoning them when they do break out, 1 Cor. 13. 7. see James 5. 20.

9 * Life hospitality / one to another t without grudging z.

1 Christian Hospitality in entertaining Strangers, tho' of- ficially that are brought to need your kindness by suffering for the Gospel. 2 Or murmuring, either at the ex- pence, viz. make, or the carriage of those ye entertain, 4. d. Life Hospitality willingly, freely, cheerfully, Rom. 12. 8. and 2 Cor. 9. 7.

10 * As every man hath received the gift u, even so minister x the same one to another, as the good stewards y of the manifold grace z of God.

u Any gift, office, faculty, or ability, whereby he may be serviceable to the good of others, all which are re- ceived of God, 1 Cor. 12. 11. Eph. 4. 7. x Diligently and Com- municate modestly and humbly, not lifting himself up above others upon the account of his Gifts, but remembering he hath received them, and is a Steward to dispense them. y And therefore faithful in distributing his Lord's goods. z By Grace he means the same as by Gift before, and so by manifold Grace, the various Gifts given to them of God, 1 Cor. 12. 4. 5. 6.

11 * If any man speak a, let him speak as the oracles of God b; if any man minister c, let him do it as of the ability d which God giveth; i that God in all things e may be glorified through Je- sus Christ f: To whom be praise and dominion for ever, and ever. Amen.

1 Ver, Automatically, and by way of Office, as a pub- lic Teacher in the Church; though this may be ac- cused to private Christians in their charitable In- fluences of others, yet it seems especially meant of teaching Officers. b This relates not only to the manner of speak- ing, that it be with Faith in that Word the Preacher speaketh, and a due reverence of it, but to the matter likewise, that he preach nothing but the pure Word of God, and do not obtrude upon the Hearers, the Fancies, Fig- ures, or Traditions of Men instead of the Oracles of God. c This may be understood either, 1. More particularly of the work of Deacons, Act. 6. who were to serve Tables, v. 2. distribute the Alms of the Church, and take Care of the Poor; Or, 2. More generally of any Ministry in the Church, distinct from that of Teaching (of which he spake before) as the dispensing of Sacraments, exercise of Discipline, &c. d i. e. Not remotely and coldly, but diligently and strenu- ously, and with his might, (as far as God enables him) this being to do it faithfully, which is especially required in a Steward, 1 Cor. 4. 2. e In all your Gifts, and the Com- munications of them, q. d. God doth not adorn you with his Gifts so as to becarev himself of his Glory, but that you should give him the honour of them. f From whom ye have received the Gifts, Eph. 4. 8. and by whom you are enabled to glorify God; and by whom alone what ye do, can be accepted of God. See Exe. 23. 21.

12 Beloved, think it not strange p concerning the fiery trial q which is to try you a, as though some strange thing had happened unto you.

1 Cor. 13. 13. q Be not offended or troubled at Persecution, as at a thing unusual or never heard of: it implies that they should reckon upon it before-hand, that they might not be sur- prised with it when it comes. The same word is used 2. 4. h The heat of burning, whereby he means great afflic- tions, especially those that are for righteous sake, as appears v. 14. where they are often compared to Fire, as being alike painful and grievous to them, as Fire is to Men's Bodies; and because Men are tried by them as Metals are by Fire, Job. 6. 6. 10. He. 48. 10. i This he adds as the reason why they should not think strange of Persecutions, viz. Because they were sent by God, not for their destruc- tion, but for their trial and exercise of their Grace.

13 But rejoice, inasmuch as * ye are parta- cers of Christ's sufferings i, that when his glory shall be revealed m, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy n.

1 Be so far from being offended at your Sufferings, as rather to reckon that there is great matter of rejoicing in them: their being irksome makes them tolerable, but your being in them praiseworthy of Christ's Sufferings, makes them comfortable. 2 1. Ye suffer, i. e. as Christ did, for the Confession of the Truth, and so ye are such kind of Sufferers as Christ was. 2. As Members of Christ, ye suf- fer those evils which are laid out for those that belong to Christ, 1 Thess. 3. 3. 3. Ye are hereby conformed to Christ your Head. 4. Ye partake of the influence of what Christ suffered, for the sanctification of your Sufferings, Phil. 3. 10. m Viz. At his second coming, *chap. 1. 7. The rejoicing of the Saints here is mixed with pain and heaviness, but shall be pure hereafter; they rejoice in hope now, but in enjoyment then.

14 * If ye be reproached for the name of * Christ, happy are ye i; for the spirit of glory and Chap. 2. 20. of God p retheth q upon you: On their part he * and 3. 14. is evil spoken of j, but on your part he is glorified r.

1 Viz. Because of the Spirit's dwelling in you, which is both the means and evidence of your Happiness. 2 1. e. The glorious Spirit of God, or that Spirit of God which is likewise a Spirit of Glory; as being not only glorious in himself, but a glory to them in whom he dwells, and the cause of their future Glorification. This he adds in coun- ter-balance to the reproaches they suffered for the Name of Christ, that it is a greater Glory to you to have the Spirit of Christ dwelling in you, (whereof your patient bearing Reproaches and Persecutions is an Argument) than all the Calumnies and Obloquies wherewith your Enemies load you, can be a shame to you. q In allusion to Isa. 11. 2. dwells in you, and shall abide with you for ever. John. 14. 16. the Spirit who is with you. 1 Thess. 5. 19. either Christ, or rather the Spirit. f The Reproaches your Enemies cast upon you, recit that Spirit himself that dwells in you, when you revile that good Confession into which the Spirit led you, deride the Comforts he gives you, and speak evil of your persons, who are the Temples in which he dwells. g Viz. by your patience and constancy in your Sufferings, which shews forth the power of the Spirit which dwells upon you, in that he works so mightily in you, as to enable you to bear without the affliction of his Grace were intolerable.

15 But * let none of you suffer n as a murder- er, or as a thief, or as an evil doer x, or as a busy body in other men's matters y.

1 Keep clear of those Crimes which may expose you to suffering, by the hand of Justice, and carry your selves so innocently, that you may never suffer from Men but us- justly. 2 This is a general term, denoting them that offend against any public Law; or, it may signify those crimes that are guilty of any offence against the Laws, tho' less than Murder or Theft. 3 Either a Covetous Person that looks with an evil eye upon what others have, and is ready to catch it as he can; or, rather, one that goes be- yond the bounds of his own Calling, and invades the Callings of others, pragmatically intruding into their business, and making himself a Judge of those things which belong not to him. Some Nations are said to have punished those that were busy upon Idleness, imperitively diligent in other Men's matters, and negligent of their own. How- ever, if this pragmatism did not expose the Christians to the Laws of the Gentiles, yet it might make them odious, and expose them to their reproaches.

16 Yet if any man suffer as a Christian z, let him not be ashamed a, but let him glorify God on this behalf b.

The second Epistle general OF PETER.

The ARGUMENT.

I cannot be denied, but that some Question there hath been, both about the Pen-men, and the Authority of this Epistle. The former hath been questioned, because of the difference of the Style of this, from that of the former Epistle. But, to say nothing of a great likeness of Style in both, observed by some; why might not the same Person see fit on different Occasions, and according to the different things he wrote about, to change his way of Writing? Or why may not the Holy Ghost use his Instruments in what way he please, and not only dictate to them the matter they are to write, but the Expression and Phrase? Why must an Infinite and Sovereign Agent be bound up, and confined to the Parts and Qualifications of the Men he inspired? And if we set aside the Judgment of several Councils and Fathers (which yet might go far) two great Arguments may be drawn from this first Chapter, to prove Peter to be the Pen-man of this Epistle. One from the Inscription of it, where we have both his Names, Simon and Peter, prefixed to it. Another from v. 16. where he affirms himself to have been present with Christ at his Transfiguration; from whence we may well argue, that none having ever ascribed it to John, and James being dead before, (tho if he had been alive, it cannot be imagined that he should put Peter's Name to any Epistle of his own writing;) and there being none but they two present with our Lord at that time, beside Peter, Matth. 17. 1. none but he could be the Writer of it. And indeed, as some observe, if this Epistle be not Peter's, when his Name is set to it, it is so far from being Canonical, that it is not fit so much as to be reckoned among the Apocryphal Books, having so great a Lye in the Front of it. As for the Authority of it, there can be no doubt of that, if Peter were the Writer, when nothing concerns in its repugnance to other parts of Scripture, or unbecoming the Grace and Style of an Apostle. And though some of the Ancients have questioned it, yet many more have acknowledged it; nor was it ever numbered among Apocryphal Writings. And its not being found in the first Syriack Version, can but argue its being questioned by some, not its being rejected by all. It seems to be writ to the Jews of the Dispersion, as the former was, which appears by chap. 3. v. 1. 2. where he mentions the former written to them; and this was written not long before his Death, v. 14. The Scope of it is, partly to call to their Remembrance the Truths he had preached among them, that so when they should be destitute of the Apostles preaching to them, yet they might remember the pure Doctrine they had learned of them, chap. 1. 12, 15. and might thereby be fortified against the Errors of false Teachers, chap. 2. 1. and partly to persuade and stir them up to diligence in Holiness, and company in the Faith. As in his first Epistle he had exhorted them to Patience under the Tyranny of Persecutors, left they should yield to them; so in this he exhorts them to Perseverance in the Truth of the Gospel, against the Deceptions of Heretics, left they should be seduced by them, chap. 2. 3. and continue in Holiness, notwithstanding the Profaneness of Scorners, chap. 3.

CHAP. I.

Or, Simon. Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us, through the righteousness of God, & our saviour Jesus Christ.

Or, Simon. Simon a Servant as is likewise an Apostle. The former agrees to all Gospel-ministers generally, the latter is a Title of a greater Eminency, and so he intimates, that he writ to them not merely as an ordinary Minister, but in the Authority of an Apostle, an Officer of the highest degree in the Church. Note in respect of the degree or strength of it, but in respect of the Object, Christ, and the Benefits that come by it, justification, sanctification, Adoption, &c. in which respect the Faith of the weakest Believer is as precious as that of the strongest. Either with us Apostles, or with us Jewish Christians born, or inhabiting in Judea. The Greek Preposition which we render through, may likewise be rendered, with, as v. 5. and also v. 8. in the Church, that is, with the Church; and so the sense is either, 1. Through the Righteousness, i. e. Truth and Faithfulness of Christ in his Promises, whereby the Faith of the Saints was an Effect: Or, 2. through the Righteousness of Christ, as the meritorious Cause of their Faith: Or, 3. with the Righteousness of Christ imputed to them, and made theirs upon their believing. They had obtained like precious Faith as the Apostles themselves and others had, together with the Righteousness of Christ, an Interest in which always accompanies Faith, Rom. 4. 22. There being but one Article in the Greek, these words are to be understood jointly, the Promise, and being but an explicative, and the sense is, Through the Righteousness of our God, rem our saviour Jesus Christ, who is God: See the like, v. 11. and ch. 3. 18. Joh. 20. 28. Tit. 2. 14.

Grace and peace be multiplied unto you, through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus Christ our Lord;

Or Acknowledgment, i. e. Faith, whereby we are made Partakers of all the saving Graces of the Spirit; and whereby being justified, we are at peace with God, Rom. 5. 1. There being no saving Knowledge of God, or Faith in him, but by Christ.

According as to his divine power he hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, * through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue;

This may refer either, 1. to what goes before, Grace and Peace be multiplied unto you, &c. according as his divine Power hath given unto us, &c. and then in these words the Apostle shews what Reason there was to hope, that Grace and Peace should be multiplied to them, and perfected in them, &c. because God hath already given them all things pertaining to Life and Godliness, &c. d. he that hath done thus much for you, will do more, and fulfil his Work in you. Or, 2ly. to what follows, and then the Greek Phrase rendered, according as, is not a Note of Similitude, but of Illation, and may be rendered, since, or from that, and so the words are not a part of the Solution, but the beginning of the Body of the Epistle, and relate to v. 5. Striving that his Divine Power hath given unto us all things that pertain, &c. add to your Faith, Virtue, &c. as God hath done his part, so do you yours in the diligent Performance of what he hath enabled you unto. Divine Power may relate either to God, or rather to Christ, immediately going before, and then it tends to the confirming their Hope of the Multiplication of Grace, and Peace to them, not only from God, but from Christ, in that they had already experienced his Divine Power in giving them all things pertaining to Life and Godliness, i. e. whatever may be helpful to it, the Spirit, Faith, Repentance, &c. Joh. 7. 39. and 2 Cor. 4. 6. and 2 Tim. 2. 25. Either, 1. Divine Life, and then Godliness may be added by way of Explanation, that Life which consists in Godliness; or a godly Life; or, by Life may be meant the inward permanent Principle of spiritual Acts, and the Exercise of them may be called Godliness, as the Perfection of that Principle is called Glory. Or, 2ly. Eternal Life, and then we attain through Godliness, as the way; and then likewise they are under flood continually, Life as the end, and Godliness as the means; and so Life in this Verse is the same as Peace in the former; and Godliness the same as Grace. According to our Translation, Glory may be the same as Life, before, and Virtue the same with Godliness; and then the words set forth the end of God's calling us, unto Glory, or Life hereafter, as well as Virtue or Godliness now. But the Greek Preposition that, is no where (as some observe) in the New Testament found to signify to; for in Rom. 6. 4. (which some alledge) it is best rendered by; Glory being there put for God's power, and attainment of our Margin here reads it by Glory and Virtue; which may either be by an Analogy for glorious Virtue, taking Virtue for Power, that glorious Power of God, which is put forth in calling us, Eph. 1. 18, 19. or his Goodness and Mercy which appears in the same calling, in which sense the word may be understood, See Tit. 3. 4, 5. 1 Pet. 2. 9. or (which comes to the same) Glory being often taken for Doves, Joh. 2. 11. by Glory and Virtue may be meant God's Power, and Goodness, or Mercy.

Joh. 12. 10.
1 Joh. 3. 2.

Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.

This word may be rendered, in that, for that, inasmuch as, and then this is an Exposition of the things that pertain to Life and Godliness, to Glory and Virtue, all those things being contained in the Promises; or whereby may be understood of the Glory and Virtue last mentioned, taking them in the latter sense explained, v. 3. 4. d. by which glorious Goodness and Mercy to us. Or by Promises we may understand either the matter of the Promises, the things promised, Heb. 10. 36. such as Telemon by Christ, Reconciliation, Adoption, &c. and then they are called exceeding great and precious, in comparison of all temporal and worldly things; or else the Promises themselves, which are called great, because of the Excellency of the things contained in them, and precious in Relation to us; great Things being not only contained in the Promises, but by them secured unto us. We are said to be Partakers of the Divine Nature, not by any Communication of the Divine Essence to us, but by God's imprinting upon us, and infusing into us those divine Qualities and Dispositions (Knowledge, Righteousness, Perfections of God, and are called his Image, Eph. 4. 24. Col. 3. 10. And we are said to be made Partakers of this Divine Nature by the Promises of the Gospel, because they are the effectual means of our Regeneration (in which that Divine Nature is communicated to us) by reason of that quickening Spirit which accompanies them, 2 Cor. 3. 6. works by them and forms in us the Image of that Wisdom, Righteousness, and Holiness of God, which appears in them; or of that Glory of the Lord, which, when by Faith we behold in the Glasp of Gospel-Promises, we are changed into the same Image, even as by the Spirit of the Lord, 2 Cor. 3. 18. Or, the Divine Nature may be understood of the Glory, and Immortality of the other Life, wherein we shall be conformed to God; and whereby by the Promises we are made Partakers, &c. Either by Corruption here we are to understand, 1. Defilement, to which the greatest Part of the World is obnoxious through Lust, and then Corruption must be opposed to Life, and Pure before, and Life to Virtue and Godliness; Or, 2. the Life of the Frailty or Wickedness of human Nature, which is here said to be, i. e. to reign and prevail in the World, or worldly Men through Lust, or habitual Concupiscence, which is the Spring and Root from which it proceeds, and then the sense is the same as Gal. 5. 24. This Corruption through Lust is opposed to the Divine Nature before, and opposing this Corruption agrees with being Partakers of that Divine Nature. See Eph. 4. 22, 23, 24. Col. 3. 5, 10.

And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith, virtue, &c. and to verber, knowledge &c.

Here the Apostle begins his Exhortation, that since God had done so much for them, &c. 3. 4. they would likewise do their Duty; and that their care and diligence in improving the Grace they had received, might be added to his Bounty in giving it them. Or, add to may be taken as a benediction taken from the ancient way of Dancing, in which they joyed Hands one with another, thereby helping, and holding up one another. Faith is here set forth as the first Grace, and which (as it were) leads up, the rest following it, and ascending upon it, yet all in conjunction with any another, the Grace that is first place in the prime Grace of a Christian, the Foundation and Root of all other, as being that without which nothing else can be pleasing to God, Heb. 11. 6. By Virtue he seems to understand Universal Righteousness, or a Complication of all those Graces by which Faith is wont to work; and this being more general, he proceeds from it to set down the more special, &c. By this may be meant spiritual Prudence, which governs and directs other Virtues in their actions; and it is called Knowledge, because it consists in the practical Knowledge of the Will of God. See 2 Cor. 6. 6. and 1 Pet. 3. 7.

And to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience, &c. and to patience, godliness;

Grace which represseth, and curbs in, not only sensual Lusts, but all inordinate Appetites, &c. 5. 22. Tit. 1. 8.

That Christian Fortitude whereby we bear afflictions and injuries, so as to persevere in our Duty without being moved by the Evils that attend us in the doing of it. A which respects our immediate Duty to God, and comprehends all the Duties of the first Table. This is joined to Patience, as being that which teaches us in all we suffer, to acknowledge God's Providence, and Promises of Deliverance, and Recompense.

And to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity.

A love to those that are of the Household of Faith. This is joined to Godliness, to shew that it is in vain to pretend to true Religion, and yet be destitute of brotherly Love. This is more general than the former, and relates to all Men, even our Enemies likewise.

For if ye things that be in you and abound, they make you, that ye shall neither be barren, nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

If ye not only have these Graces in you, but abound, or grow in them, both as to the inward degree, and outward Exercise of them. Either they make you, or declare you next to be barren, or both; they will be both the Causes and Evidences of your not being barren. For Justified, id est, unfruitful. Void of good Works, which are frequently compared to Fruit, Matth. 23. 10 and v. 17, 18, 19. Gal. 5. 22. The Faith of Christ. But more is implied here, than expresse, &c. d. they will make you be active and fruitful in the Knowledge of Christ, and declare you to be so, and thereby make it appear, that ye have not in vain learned Christ.

But he that lacketh these things; * is as a blind man, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.

He that doth not live in the Exercise of the fore-mentioned Graces, &c. Spiritually blind, as being destitute of saving Knowledge. The Greek word is variously translated; the most probable account of it is either, 1. that it signifies to miss the way, or go as blind Men do; and then the meaning is, that lacketh these things is blind, and as a blind Man gropes, not knowing which way to go; he is a blind Man, who is destitute of the Knowledge he pretends to. Or, 2ly. to be post-blind, or short-sighted, so as to see things near hand, but not afar off, as our Translation hath it; and then the sense is, That such a one sees only the things of the World, but cannot look so far as Heaven to discern things there, which if he did, he would walk in the way that leads to life, &c. in the Practice of the Duties before prescribed. He is judged in the sight of God, to forget a Benefit received, that is not effectually mindful of it, in living suitably to it. And so here, he that professeth himself to have been purged from his old Sins, in justification and sanctification, by the Blood and Spirit of Christ, 1 Cor. 6. 11. Eph. 5. 26, 27, and yet live lives in Sin, and in the neglect of his Duty he is engaged to, practically declares his Forgetfulness of the Mercy he professeth to have been vouchsafed him; and accordingly may be interpreted, to have forgotten it, in that he acts like one that had. Or, if this be understood of one that is really purged from his old Sins, yet whereby the Godly may be delivered; but likewise his will many times less the Wicked alone in this World, so that they escape present Punishment; yet they shall not escape future Torment; they are a while pardoned, but never pardon-ed; and when free from Temporal Evils, are referred for Eternal Vengeance. Or 2. It may be understood as in the Preface Tem, which argues will be referred to God's Vengeance before mentioned, which was executed on wicked Non in this World; and thence the fence is, the Lord knows how to deliver the Godly out of Temptations when he sees fit, even in this Life, and how to reserve thoe wicked Men, whom he punisheth with Temporal Judgments here, to a much more cruel and dreadful punishment at the Day of judgment hereafter.

b The Apostle here applies the general Doctrine delivered to false Teachers, whose Character he gives in several particulars; the fence is, that God reserves all wicked Men to the Day of Judgment, but those especially that second their corrupt Doctrine with a wicked Conversation. The Verb refuse is to be repented from the former Vertue. To walk after the flesh is, Either 1. To follow the conduct of the sensual appetites, like brute Beasts, which may be done not by hearken or judgment, or, 2. More especially, it implies their giving up themselves to filthy Lusts, probably bly unatoural ones, Jude g. going after strange Filths, v. c. e.

And Agathis, Agathis, Agathis. ¶ And either, greater than these tioned Dignities. ¶ I. A. Greater in their natural Strength, and in their Dignity. ¶ Life nor reviling, reproachful, Language; the same with speaking civil in the former Verse.

¶ Either, i. again, Dignities, v. 10. and then the meaning is,
That good Angels, great and powerful as they are, yet bring not a railing Accusation before the Lord against Magistrates and Princes, but what they have any thing against them, they have carried themselves with Modesty, and due respect to that Dignity in which God had placed said, having a regard to Civil Government as God's Constitution, and being themselves at God's Appointment, Guardians, and Keepers, even of wicked Kings, as Dan. xviij. and 19. Or,
v. 11. Agathis, agathos, as in the Margin, and then the sense is,
That Devils do not reproach, nor revile each other, nay, not the Angel himself, as appears, Dan. x. (which place may explain this) and therefore it did abide by their faithful Teachers, who were to be below duty to condemn, reprove, or rail on Princes, and Civil Magistrates, who were to move above themselves; and had their Authority from God.

A Or, shall be corrupted in their own Corruption, i. e. shall utterly be destroyed by their own Fault and folly, or peral Corruption (or Perilous Corruption) following upon folly. (He compares Seducers, 1. to Wells without Water: because as Wells involve, a Traveller to it in hope of quenching his Thirst, but being without Water, mocks his Expectation; so false Teachers making a shew of true Wisdom, and saving Knowledge, draw Men to them, but being defunct of it, delude them, and make them no wiser than they were. 2. To Clouds, &c. because as Clouds many times promising Rain and Refreshment, either are scattered by the Wind, or break out into a Tempest; so these when they promise to refresh their Hearers Souls with the Truth of God, being themselves defunct of it, do them no good, or with their pernicious Errors, or corrupt Manners, do them much harm. By this Comparison he sets forth their Inconstancy, that like Clouds driven with the Wind, they are tossed to and fro, from one Doctrine to another, Eph. 4. 14. And, 2. their Deceitfulness, that they make a shew of what they have not, as Clouds do of Rain, when they are scattered, without yielding any. 3. 1. 18 For when they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure y<sup>e</sup> through the clouds of the flesh, through much wantonness, as those that were *clea*n escaped from them who live in error.

1. 1. Big words, full of sound, and void of Sense, at least of Truth. He seems to tax the affected, vain Speech of Seducers, who were wont to clothe their erroneous Doctrines (if not disguise the Truths of God) with strange unaccountable Phrases, which made a shew of some rare Discoveries, or deep Mysteries, whereas indeed they were empty of any thing solid, or tending to Edification. 2. As with a Bait; a Metaphor taken from the manner of taking Fish. 3. To which they give liberty, as a Bait to draw Men after them. 4. This explains the former, and shews what Lusts they indulge Men in, viz. Vanities, and Unchastities. 5. Truly, or really, which seems the better reading than that in the Margin; and this is said of them, 1. in respect of the Profession they make of a real Conversion. 2. In respect of the Alknt they gave to the Word by which they were called. 3. In respect of the charge that appeared in their outward Conversation. 4. Whether the Error of Judasism, or Heresim wherein they had been formerly involved, and others still were. This might be the case of some in whom yet there was no living change wrought, that they might be brought off from those more foul ways of Sin and Error in which they had walked, and yet might afterward return to the same, or to bad, Math. 12. 43. and 13. 21.

4 Those more gross Wickednesses in which most of the World still lie, 1. John 5. 19. 2. Such a Knowledge of Christ as brings with it an outward Reformation of Life, tho' it do not purify the Heart. For that the Apostle doth here speak of those that were first in Christ by a saving, and hearty purifying Faith, appears by v. 12, where he calls them Messiah's Souls. 3. 21 For * it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, & then after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.

4 Their Sin had been less, if they had not known the Truth, but now they fight against Knowledge, and therein their Apostasy is much worse than their Ignorance would have been. 1. The way of obtaining Righteousness by Christ, and of living truly in Christ, 2 Tim. 3. 12. prescribed in the Gospel: the same which is called the right way, v. 15, and the way of Truth, v. 2. 2. The time in other words. It is called Way, not only as proceeding from God, who is holy, but, as teaching nothing but what is holy, and being the means God useth in making Men holy, and as being opposed to the Pollutions of the World, before-mentioned.

2. 2. It is happened unto them according to the true proverb, * The dog is turned to his own vomit again, and, * The sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire.

* Prov. 26. 11.

3. This is added, to prevent the Scandal that might arise from their Apostasy, q. d. It is not to be wondered at, that they are again entangled in, and overcome by their former Pollutions, when there never was a thorough change wrought in their Hearts. Dogs and Swine (Beasts unclean by the Law) they still were under the greatest Appearances of Reformation, and such they now knew themselves to be by their false Apostasy. 4. As Dogs vomit up what is burdensome to them, but stilling their Conscience, and not having changed their Natures by eating their Stomachs, lick up their own Vomit again; so these under a Fit of Conviction through the Power of the Word, disgorge those Sins which burdened their Conscience, but having thereby gotten some ease, and their old Nature, and love to their former Lusts still remaining, they again return to the same Sins they had for a time forsaken. 5. As Swine that naturally love the Dirt and Mire, if sometimes they be washed from it, yet still retaining their filthy Disposition, return again to it; so likewise these here mentioned, however they may be washed from the Pollutions of the World, and by the preaching of the Gospel brought off from their former ways of Sin, and brought out to a Profession of Holiness, yet still retaining their old Nature, and corrupt Dispositions, they are easily prevailed over by them, and so relapse into their former Abominations.

CHAP. III.

THIS second epistle q, beloved, I now write unto you, in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance.

1. This confirms what had been said, that this Epistle was writ by Peter, as well as the former. 2. Or, Remember, the sense is either, 1. I stir up your Minds, that they may be pure, and sincere; 2. and then he doth not so much commend them for what they were, as for what he desired them to what they should be, that they might receive Benefit by what he writ, there being nothing that contributes more to the fruitful entertaining of the Word, than Sincerity, and honesty of Heart, when men by alide those things which are contrary to it, and might hinder its Efficacy. 3. Or, 2. 2. Or, stir up your Minds, tho' pure and sincere, to continuance, and constancy in that pure Doctrine ye have received. 1. John 2. 13.

2. That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us of the apostles of the Lord and Saviour.

1. The Word of Prophecy, ch. 1. 19. he joins the Prophets and Apostles together as concurring in their Doctrine, and to which as an Argument to persuade them to Constancy in the Faith of the Gospel, that what the Apostles preached to them, was confirmed by what the Prophets under the Old Testament had taught before, Acts 26. 22. Eph. 2. 20. 2. By this he means the whole Doctrine of the Gospel preached by him, and the other Apostles. See ch. 2. 21. and 1. John 3. 23. 3. Who was the Author of this Commandment, and the Principal in giving it, and from whom the Apostles received it, who were but Ministers, and Instruments in delivering it to others.

3. * Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days, scoffers, walking after their own lusts.

* Tim. 4. 1.

1. Especially, as being very necessary to be known. The Apostle having in the former Chapter cautioned these Saints against the more close Enemies of the Gospel, Seducers, and false Teachers, here he forewarns them of more open Enemies, profane Scoffers. See 1 Cor. 10. 11. and 2 Tim. 3. 1. 2. Profane Contemners of God, and Deriders of his Truth, Psalm 1. 1. and 2. 19. Isa. 28. 14, 22. 3. Such as are natural to them. See Jude 18. Lusts of Ungodliness.

4. And saying, * Where d is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers q fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation.

* Isa. 5. 19.

† Jer. 17. 19.

† Ezek. 12. 22.

1. Questioning, or denying the great Truths of the Gospel, thereby to encourage themselves in walking after their own Lusts.

Lusts. 1. The Christ mentioned, v. 2. Possibly these Scoffers might doubt the Name of Christ by way of Contempt, not vouchsafing to mention it, as the Jews did, John 9. 22. q. d. Where is the Promise of his coming, whom you expect? 2. His coming to judge the World, q. d. his promised coming doth not appear, the promise of it is not fulfilled. 3. Who died in the Faith of Christ's coming, and had the Promise of it. 4. Died; the usual Phrase of Scripture, which these Scoffers ought to speak in derision; q. d. it is so long since the Fathers fell asleep (as you call it) that it were more than time for them to be awakened, whereas we see the contrary. 5. The World continues to be the same it was, and hath the same Parts it had; we see nothing changed, nothing abolished, but still Nature keeps its old Course. Thus they argue, That because there had been no such great Changes, therefore there should be none; because Christ was not yet come to judgment, therefore he should not come at all; not considering the Power of God, who is as able to destroy the World, as to make it, nor the Will of God revealed in his Word concerning the end of it.

5. For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth q; || standing out of the water, and in the water q.

1. They will not know what they ought to know, and if they would search the Scriptures, might know. 2. The Command of God, or Word of his Power, as it is called Psalm 1. 2. See Gen. 1. 6, 9. and Psalm 23. 6. and 148. 5. 3. Were created, or had a being given them, Gen. 1. 6. 4. From the beginning of the World. 5. The Globe of the Earth which comprehends likewise the Seas, and Rivers, as parts of the whole. 6. According to our Translation, the sense of these words may be plainly this, That the Earth standing part out of the Water, (as all the dry Land doth, whose Surface is higher than the Water) and partly in the Water (as those parts do which are under it) or in the midst of the Water, as being covered, and encompassed by Seas and Rivers. But most Expositors follow the marginal Reading, and render the Greek word by confusing; and then the meaning may be, either, 1. That the Earth consisting of Water, as the matter out of which it was formed, (Moses calling the Chaos which was that matter, Waters, Gen. 1. 2.) and by Water, from which it hath its Compactness and Solidity, and without which it would be wholly dry, meer unprofitable Dust, unfit for the generation, and Production of natural Things. If we understand the words thus, the Argument lies against the Scoffers; for the Earth thus consists of, and by Water; yet God made use of the Water for the destroying of the World; and so natural Causes are not sufficient for its Preservation without the Power of God sustaining it in its being, and whenever he will, he may destroy it, in spite of all inferior Causes. 2. I must perforce, Or, say, the words may thus be read, The Heavens were of old, and the Earth (supply from the former clause) was out of the Water, and confounding by, or in the Water; and the meaning is, That the Earth did emerge, or appear out of, or above the Water, viz. when God gathered the Waters together, and made the dry Land appear; and doth confound by, or among, is the midst of the Waters, as was before explained.

6. Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished.

7. By which Heavens, and Water mentioned in the former Verse, the Fountains of the great Deep being broken up, and the Windows of Heaven opened, Gen. 7. 11. Or, by the Word of God, as the principal Cause, and the Water as the instrumental, which, at his Command, was poured out upon the Earth both from above and below. 1. The Earth, with all the Inhabitants of it, eight Persons excepted. This the Apostle allegeth against the fore-mentioned Scoffers, who said, that all things continued as they were, when yet the Flood had made so great a change in the Face of the lower Creation.

* Verse 10.

† 1 Thess. 1. 8.

8. But * the heavens, and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto a fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men.

1. The Eternal, or starry Heaven, as well as Aerial; for, v. 10, 12. he distinguishes the Heavens that are to perish by Fire, from the Elements; and, v. 13. he opposeth a new Heaven to that Heaven which is to be consumed; but the new Heaven is not meant merely of the Aerial Heaven, and which should not be the means of the same Heavens, which elsewhere in Scripture are said to perish; Job 14. 11. Psalm 102. 26. All of them (shall burn up, &c. The same as; 5. 9. Are kept like a fire in a Treasury, and untouched for a time, that they may be destroyed at last. 2. That they may be consumed by it. The Destruction of the World by Fire at the last Day, is opposed to the Destruction of it by Water in the Flood. 3. The general Judgment. 4. This the Apostle speaks with an Emphasis, because they were angels, against whom he here bends his Discourse.

8. But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day with the Lord as a thousand years, and a * thousand years as * Psalm 90. 4. one day.

1. He is sure of it: the same Word is here used as v. 5. and to be cautious them against the Ignorance of Scoffers, and to prevent it, would have them certainly know this one thing, which is extant in the Scripture, which foretells Christ's coming. 2. The Lord Jesus Christ, of whose coming he speaks. 3. By a Synecdoche, a thousand years is put for any, even the longest Revolution of time; and the sense is, That tho' there be great difference of time, long, and short, with us, who are subject to time; and are measured by it; yet with him who is eternal, without Succession, to whom nothing is past, nothing future, but all things present; there is no difference of time, none long, none short, but a thousand years, may, all the time that hath run out since the Creation of the World be but as a Day; and we are not to judge of the Lord's delay in coming, by our own sense, but by God's Kenning.

9. * The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men f count slackness; but he is long-suffering to us-ward q, not || willing; that any b should perish, but that all s should come to repentance. 1. 1. Doth not desire the fulfilling of it beyond the appointed time, Isa. 60. ult. 2. Either the Scoffers here mentioned, who, because of Christ's not yet coming, questioned whether he would come at all; as if God had changed his purpose, or would not fulfil it; Or Believers themselves, who, through the weakness of their Faith, and greatness of their Sufferings, might grow into some degree of Impatience, and think Christ long in coming to avenge their Cause, and give them their Reward. So much may be gathered from Rev. 6. 10. 3. To us Believers, or us Elect. 4. Any that he hath ordained to Life, tho' not yet called. 5. All whom he hath elected; he would have the whole number of them filled up, and defer the Day of Judgment till he be so. Or, this may be meant not of God's secret and effectual Will, but of his revealed Will, whereby he calls to Repentance promiscuously that hear the Gospel preached, hath made it their Duty, approves of it, hath preferred it as the way of Salvation, commands them to seek Salvation in that way, and is ready to receive, and save them upon their repenting. See 1 Tim. 2. 4.

10. But * the day of the Lord k will come as a thief in the night; 1. in the which t the heavens m shall pass away n with a great roife o, and the elements p shall melt with fervent heat q, the earth r also and the works j that are therein shall be burnt up.

a The places cited in the Margin, to which this Text seems to refer, speak of a new state of the Church here in the World, yet by way of Allusion to the Renovation of the World, which is ultimately there promised, and the Perpetuity of the Gospel-Church till then is thereby assured. b Instead of the present World which is to be consumed by Fire, 2. 12, 13. or the first Heaven and Earth which pass away, Rev. 21. 1. And by this way of expressing it, may be implied the Perfection of the Righteousness of such. Not only the new Heaven is mentioned, but the new Earth, because the whole World will then be the Possession, and Kingdom of the Saints, who follow Christ wherever he goes.

14 Wherefore, beloved, seeing ye look for such things a, be diligent, *** that ye may be found of him c in peace f, without spot, and blameless g.

If it be objected, That flesh having Sin still in them, cannot be said to be without Spot, and blameless in the sight of God. It may be answered, That though they have Sin in them, yet being, through the Righteousness of Christ, imputed to them justified in the sight of God, and accepted in the Beloved, Eph. 1. 6. he overlooks their Infirmities, and imputes no Sin to them, sees no Spot in them, so as to condemn them for it. The Apostle seems here to reflect on the Seducers before-mentioned, whom, ch. 2. 12. he had called Spots and Blamers; and he perfwades these Saints to look to themselves, that they might be found of Christ (not such as the other were, but) without Spot, and blameless; or, as it is translated, Eph. 5. 27, without Blame, i. e. in a State of Sanctification, as well as justification.

15 And account b that the long-suffering of our Lord a is salvation k; even as our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdom m given unto him, hath written unto you n.

stle. n That eminent and profound Knowledge in the Mysteries of the Gospel in which Paul did excel, 1 Cor. 2. 5, 7. Eph. 3. 3, 4. Peter makes such honourable mention of Paul, 1. That he might commend to the Jewish Christians the Doctrine Paul had preached, though a Minister of the Uncircumcision. 2ly, To shew that he had nothing the worse Thoughts of him for being so highly reprov'd by him, Gal. 2. and 3, that he might arm the Saints against those Heretics that abused Paul's Writings, and wrested them to their own meaning (probably) to patronize their Errors. o I know you Jewish Believers, &c. either, 1. in his Epistle to the Romans, ch. 2. 4, where is a Passage very like this: Or, 2ly, in his Epistle to the Titians, which, though it were not entitled to the Form of the Disputation, yet was written to their Nation; and in that Epistle several places there are of the same purpose with this here. See Heb. 9. 28, and 10. 23, 25, 36, 37; and other Epistle of Paul to the Jews we have none; and in this he shews much of that Wisdom God gave him in the Mystery of the Gospel; and in this likewise are many things hard to be understood.

16 As also in all his epistles a, *** speaking in them of these things p: In which q are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned r, and unstable s, wrest t, as they do also the other scriptures to their own deconstruction u.

a To make the Sense complete, we must supply here from the former Verse, he hath written, &c. p || || Concerning the second coming of Christ, and end of the World, the Passage that should be exercised in waiting for it; about avoiding Scoffers that deny these Truths, and the other Instructions contained in these two Epistles, but especially in the two latter Chapters of this second Epistle. q In which Epistles, or rather, in which things contained in Paul's Epistles, (for the Greek Relative is of a different Gender, and cannot agree with Epistles, q, d, some of the Doctrines delivered by Paul in his Epistles, are hard to be understood. And so this does not prove Paul's Epistles, much less the whole Scripture, to be obscure, and dark. The Style and Expression may be as clear as the Nature of the things will bear, and yet the things themselves to express what he is to be understood, either by reason of their own Obscurity, as Prophecies, the Excellency and Sublimeness of them, as some mysterious Doctrines, or the weakness of Mens Minds, and their Incapacity of apprehending spiritual things, 1 Cor. 2. 14, compare with ch. 13. 9, 10. r They that are ignorant of the Scripture, s unstable in the Word of Righteousness, Heb. 5. 13, or indolent, that will not be instructed. t Such as are ill-grounded, and therefore unsteady, and easily deceived, ch. 2. 14. 17 Ye therefore, beloved, *** seeing ye know these things a, before-hand, beware lest ye also b being led away by the error of the wicked, fall from your own stedfastness c.

a Which I have been now writing to you of, &c. That the Judge will certainly come; or, that Heretics, Deceivers, and Scoffers will come; or both may be comprehended. b As well as others have been. c The stedfastness of your Faith. This admonition he gives them not to discourage them with fear of Apostacy, but to awaken them to that holy care, which would be a means to prevent it; and to keep them from security, and trust in themselves, not to weaken their Faith, and Reliance on the Promise.

18 But grow in grace a, and in the knowledge b of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: To him be glory c both now and for ever. Amen.

a In all those spiritual Gifts ye have received from Christ, especially sanctifying. b In Faith, whereby ye are sanctified, and made Partakers of that Grace. c Which belongs only to God; and therefore this proves Christ to be God.

The

The first Epistle OF St. JOHN.

The ARGUMENT.

Concerning the Pen-man of the first Epistle, it does not appear there hath been any doubt; the Ancients generally ascribing it to the Apostle St. John. The time of his writing it is uncertain; some assigning to it an earlier, others a later date. It is thought to have been written directly to the Christian Jews, now living in Judæa, but remote in Parthia, (where it appears great numbers of them resided,) being filed by a noted Father, The Epistle to the Parthians: The design of it is to confirm them in the great fundamental Doctrine of Christianity, That our Lord Jesus was the Messiah, against the attempts of divers apostate or degenerate Christians; who (whether this Epistle were of the former or later date) did in his time deny, or essentially deprave that most important Article. And not only to induce them all most steadfastly to believe it, but to impress it more deeply upon their Souls, to reduce the more licentious, to raise and quicken the dead and carnal to a more firm, lively, vigorous Christianity; and (which is greatly inculcated) to excite and enflame mutual Christian love among them, as that which would more strongly justify them against the endeavours of Seducers, and render their Communion more pleasant among themselves. The other two Epistles are very much of the same Argument (tho the latter hath somewhat of a different and peculiar concernment) but doubted by some, whether by the same Pen-man, upon every insufficient grounds, the matter and style, plainly enough, shewing them to be this Apostle's.

CHAP. I.

That which was from the beginning b, which we have seen with our eyes, † which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled c of the word of life d.

a The Order of Discourse requires we begin with the last thing in this Verse, the Word of Life. This phrase [the Word] is, by this Apostle (not here to enquire in what notion, some, both Jews and Pagans before took it) familiarly used, to signify the Eternal Son of God: And whereas this is his usual title in speaking of this Sacred Person, as in the entrance of his Gospel (so very like that of this Epistle) so often over in his Revelation, chap. 19. 13, and there afterwards in this Epistle it self, chap. 5. 7, he so readily falls into the mention of him by this Name (as not doubting to be understood) it is scarce to be supposed, that being so constant to himself herein, he should use the same form of Speech, without any such inconsiderance in this place, where the circumstances do both allow and invite us to so understand him. Nor does the addition to it here [the word of Life] render it less fit to be apply'd to this purpose, but rather the more; as serving to denote the peculiar excellency of this word, that he is the living and quickning Word; whereupon he also fills him in the following Verse, simply, the Life; and thus Eternal Life (which is fit to be noted here, viz. that these three expressions, the Word of Life, the Life, and Eternal Life; do by the contexture of the Discourse, plainly mean the same thing, and seem in their principal indentments, to be set down as so many Titles of the Son of God) designing to represent him as the original and radical Life, the root of the Living Divine Life, to all who partake thereof agreeably to his own words concerning him in the Gospel, John. 1. 4. In him (viz. the Word) was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men, (i. e. the Word was a vital enlightning Light), and chap. 9. 20. of this Epistle, He (viz. the Son of God) is Eternal Life: And to our Lord's words of himself, I am the Life, John. 11. 25, chap. 6. 41, and thus the Father had given him to have Life in himself, chap. 5. 26. (and consequently, to be capable of being to others, as Original or Fountain of Life). Yet whereas by [the Word] and [the Word of Life] is often signified the Gospel (chap. 2. 5. Phil. 2. 16. and elsewhere) it seems not incongruous or disagreeable to this Context, to understand the Apostle as designing to so comprehend both the meanings together, in one expression apt enough to include them both. [See Dr. Hammond in loca.] Nor are they of so remote an import, considered in their relation to us, as not fully to admit of being both intended at once. The Son of God being his internal Word, the Word of his Mind, the Wisdom (another application of him frequent in Scripture, Prov. 8. and elsewhere) comprehending all Ideas of things to be created or done; is, in the immediate Original of Light and Life, and by whose vivifying Beams we are, especially to be transferred into the Divine likeness; the Gospel being his external Word, the Word of his Mouth, the radiation of those Beams themselves. As we do our selves first receive, and form in our Minds, what we afterwards utter and express: Only whereas our thought, or the Word of our Mind, is fluid, and soon vanishes; God's (in whom is no Change) is permanent, substantial and co-eternal with himself. The Word was with God, and the Word was God, John. 1. 1. Neither are these two senses of [the Word of Life] less fully (or with more impropriety) comprehended together under that one expression, than in common Discourse, speaking of the Sun, is referred to our senses; we often comprehend together in our meaning, both the body of the Sun it self, and its Beams, as when we say it enlightens us, revives us, shines in it this Window, or upon that Dial, we do not intend (as reasonably we cannot) to exclude either, but mean the Sun doth it by its Beams. And now the notion being fedded of [the Word of Life] (which was necessary first to be done, and which required a larger Discourse) we may the more easily perceive, how what is here said of it, may in the one sense, or the other, be apply'd thereto. So the Living Word, in the first sense, was, &c. when all things else began; which is not said if still then to have begun, as Job. 1. 1. In the Beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and, at the next Step, the Word was God. And with what is said by this Word himself (then taking another, but an equivalent Name, the Wisdom of God) Prov. 8. 22, 23, to 30. The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his way before his works of old. I was set up from everlasting from the Beginning, or ever the Earth was, when, &c. Then was I by him, as yet brought up with him, &c. where [from the Beginning] and [from Everlasting] we see it all one. See of this Epistle chap. 2. 13, 14. There are all expressions indifferently applicable both, 1. To the Person of the Son of God, primarily mean by [the Word] and [the Word of Life]; for that same glorious person was from the Beginning with the Father, viz. being now incarnate, became the object of these very Verbs, to this, and the other Apostles, who had so frequent opportunity to hear, and see, and behold him, and even to handle him with their Mind, as his Words about it in his writing his Gospel import: There came out Blood and Water: And he that saw it, bore Record, and his Record is true: and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe. John 19. 34, 35. That he thus says, that ye might believe, imports that he approached some great Mystery, if not intended, yet very apt to be signified by it. And 2. That he was a Jew, and (as is probable) wrote this Epistle to Jews, among whom he so frequently Abominates with Worship, as well as the Worship of Angels, were most known Things, and intended to typify (what they ought to have understood, and he now intimates) these very things the Purity and Dying of the Messiah. Not to insinuate upon him that he had long ere now occasion to observe in the Christian Church, Worship, and the Supper of our Lord, representing in effect severally the same things. Neither was this Way of Teaching unusual, nor these Expressions less intelligible, than our Lord's calling himself (as this Evangelist also records) a Shepherd, a Dove, a Vine, &c.

That the Spirit is said to bear witness, see v. 7, 8.

† John 1. 1. 7 For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghost: and these three are one.

Having mentioned the Spirit's testifying in the Cloze of v. 6. he returns to give us in order, in these two Verses, the whole Testimony of the Truth of Christianity, which he reduces to two Testimonies of Witnesses. The Matter of their Testimony is the love with that of their Faith, who are born of God, that Jesus is the Son of God, and the Angels, as may be collected from what was said before, v. 1, & 5, and what is said afterwards, v. 9. What they witness, is no other thing than what themselves. For the first test, is Heaven, that is not said to signify Heaven to be the Place of their testifying: for to the same thing concerning Jesus be also no doubt testified to the glorious Inhabitants of that World, yet that is the Apostle's present Scope, but to show what reason we have, who inhabit this World, to believe Jesus to be Christ, and the Son of God. In Heaven therefore is to be referred to (to them), not to (to hear word or witness) as the Text were read, which it may as well, There are three in Heaven, who bear Witness the Design being to represent their immediate testimony from Heaven, or the glorious, heavenly, majestic Manner of their testifying. So the Father testified of the Man Jesus by immediate Voice from Heaven, as his Baptism and Transfiguration, This is our Sample. The Eternal Word owned his Union with him, in that Glory with which he is eminently clothed in his Humanity, and which visible those through in the last test, whereof of this Apostle was a Speaker, and whereof he seems to refer in his Coloss. Chap. 1. 14. We behold his Glory, the Glory as of the only begotten Son of the Father, like unto his (which he testified him to be, even the very Son of God). And the Holy Ghost testified, descending as a Dove in a visible glorious Appearance upon him, as in Baptism also. And themselves are only, not only agreeing in their Testimony, as v. 8. but in Unity of Nature. An express Testimony of the Trinitie Deity, by whatsoever careless or ill design left out of some Copies, but sufficiently demonstrated by many most ancient ms. to belong to the Sacred Text: Of which L. Brug. ms. is in use with the other Critics, and as large Dr. Hammond.

8 And there are three that bear witness in earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one.

And for the three that are said to bear witness on Earth, there is first the Spirit, who, tho' the Holy Ghost were in the former Test, needs not here be taken for another Spirit, but may be the same considered under another Notion, and as testifying in another manner; not transiently and immediately from Heaven, as there, but habitually, and as teaching Inductures here on Earth: Extraordinary, the Man Christ Jesus, all his Apostles and first Disciples, in all the wonderful Works which they did for the Confirmation of the Christian Doctrine; and ordinarily, the whole Church of true Christians; for it animates the whole living Body of Christ, and makes it, tho' in an imperfect measure, by an uniform Course of Actions, tending to God and Heaven, an eternally visible Proof to the World of the Truth of that Religion which obtains in it, and of his Divine Power and Nature, who is the Head of it. Next, the Water, i. e. the continual sacrament, God-like Purity of our Lord Jesus through the whole Course of his terrestrial State, manifestly shewed him to be the Son of God, an incarnate Deity, inhabiting our World. And lastly, the Blood, his suffering of Death, considered in the Circumstances, was a most convincing, clear Testimony and Indication who he was; i. e. exactly according to the Prediction of the Prophets, attended with wonderful amazing Concomitants, ending in glorious a Resurrection. And in and with both these the Spirit, completing his Testimony, did bear witness too, as is intimated (after the former mention of them both) in the latter part of v. 6. It testified it all along, both in his clear immaculate Life, and in the bloody Death in which it afflicted him, which is accompanied with so marvellous Effects, and out of which at length it secures him, Rom. 4. And that part is root, as being the Spirit of Truth, and as it is here expressed, in the (more emphatical) Address, Truth is life.

9 If we receive the witness of Men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God, which he hath testified of his Son.

* A Testimony above exception, being wholly divine, as he himself affords, John 5. 36, 37. & 8. 13, 14, 17, 18.

10 He that believeth on the Son of God, * Rom. 8. 16. hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God, hath made him a liar, because he taketh not the record that God gave of his Son.

11 If he truly believeth, he hath the eternal Impression of this Testimony on his own Soul: if not, he gives God the lie, as if we do to any one whose Testimony we believe not. See John 9. 33.

12 And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life: and * this life is in his Son. * John 1. 4. || His Testimony, that this is his Son and the Christ, imports so much that eternal Life is in him, as the Source and Fountain of it: so that he gives it to us no other way than in and by him.

13 * He that hath the Son, hath life: and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life.

14 And therefore that we parake this Life, or parake it not, as by Faith we are united with him, or not united.

15 * The things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.

16 That discerning their own Faith, they might be in no doubt concerning their Title to eternal Life, and might be thereby encouraged to persevere in the same Faith.

17 And this is the confidence that we have, || Our own || in him, that * if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us.

* Vic. According to his Will, not negatively, as it only forbids our praying for, or enjoying that, and such things, but positively, i. e. according to his Will signified, 1. By his Commands, i. e. when the matter of our Prayers is sanctified good things, which was before the matter of our Duty; as when we pray for Grace to enable us to be, and to do what he requires us, as far as our present frame will admit. 2. By his Promises, which are most absolute and particular, in reference to things of that Nature, Matth. 4. 6. Luke 11. 12. In reference to things of an inferior Nature, of a conditional Nature, or more general, the things promised coming under the common Notion of good things, not in themselves only, but in present circumstances, which, whether they be, or not, he reserves to himself the liberty of determining, and doth only promise them, if they pray, according to what signifies he hath given us of his Will, in such cases. And so we are always sure to be heard in the former Case in the very particular kind, about which his Will is expressly made known before-hand.

18 And if we know that he hears us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him.

19 For if he determine that thing to be best for us, all circumstances considered, we shall have it; if he determine otherwise (Appointing we pray according to his Will) we desire it not: For every one intends God to himself, when he prays for any thing, not Hurt. And God answers his Children according to that general meaning of their Prayers, not always according to the particular (which may be often a much mistaken) meaning. According therefore in supposing the thing would be earthly and in truth hurtful, (And God's judgment is always according to Truth) they contradictorily pray to be desired it; and the Denial is the equivalent; say the better thing than what they particularly pray for; and so the contradiction is resolved.

20 * Testimonies, 3. 22. Not can be said to be to his Glory as the End, as the Order and Connection of Petitions shews in that admirable Platform prescribed by our Lord himself. And it is possible to be the End of any one that hath a sincere Heart in Prayer, that God would graciously him against himself. Therefore that Latitudinal allowed the Apostles, John 14. 13, 14. & 15. 16. & 16. 23. &c. must be understood to respect the Service of the Christian Interest, and it to be limited thereby, as some of the Expressions there.

The third Epistle OF St. JOHN

* 2 Joh. 1.
|| Or, p. 27.

1 THE elder unto the well-beloved Gaius, * whom I love in the truth.
2 Beloved, I || with above all things, that thou mayst prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth g.
3 This Gaius was well known by the Apostle, not only to be a faithful Professor of the truly Christian uncorrupted Faith, (which is implied in his avowing his Love to him in the Truth, or upon the Christian account) but to be so improved, and well-grown a Christian, that he reckons he might well make the prosperous State of his Soul, the measure of all the other Prosperity he could wish unto him.
4 For I rejoiced greatly, when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as * thou walkest in the truth r.
5 I have no greater joy than to hear that my children / walk in truth.
6 The Truth is familiarly used to signify the pure Doctrine of Christianity, which in its principal Design, aiming at correspondent Practice, that his Children, i. e. Such as had been converted to Christ by his Ministry, (as 2 Cor. 4. 15.) of whom it appears Gaius was one, did walk in the Truths (an apt Expression of such correspondent Practice) was greatest matter of joy to this holy Apostle, especially when the goodly Lives of such, to whose Conversion he had been instrumental, were so observable, as to gain them a Testimony from all others that knew them, as it was in the present Instance.
7 Beloved, thou dost faithfully: whatsoever thou dost, to the brethren, and to strangers:
8 Charity to Christians is reckon'd Fidelity to Christ, being shewn to them upon the Christian Account, which is intimated to have been done by this pious Person, who fo-kindly treated the Brethren, and Strangers, i. e. even tho they were Strangers.
9 Which have born witness of thy charity before the church: whom if thou bring forward on their journey after a godly sort n, thou shalt do well.
10 i. e. After a manner (as the Greek Expression is) worthy of God, viz. as becomes them, who bear the Name of God, as thou dost, or art intent upon his Work, as they are; which later notion is confirmed by what follows.
11 Because that for his name sake they went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles x.
12 We therefore ought to receive such, that we might be fellow-helpers of the truth.
13 It thence appears they were Jews, who went out from their own Country to serve the Interest of the Gospel, which therefore he should serve in helping them.
14 I wrote unto the church: But Diotrophes y, who loveth to have the preeminence among them, receiveth us not.

10 Wherefore if I come, I will remember his deeds which he doth, prating against us with malicious words: and not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbiddeh them that would, and calteth them out of the church.
11 This was probably some Church of which Gaius was Pastor, one who had received, or usurped some Office or Authority in it, so to ill a purpose, as when he had no Inclination to be hospitable himself to fellow-Christians, prevented others from being so; and upon pretence of the little differences of their Faith, from the Gentile Christians, excluded them from their Communion.
12 Beloved, * follow not z that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doth good a, is of God b: but he that doth evil hath not seen God c.
13 By following here he means Imitation, i. e. the Deformity of evil appearing in the Practice of some, and the Beauty of true Goodness in others, (Examples being given of both sorts, v. 9, and 12.) he exhorts to decline the former, and imitate the other; and enforces the Exhortation by the weightiest Arguments. a A Don of good, one made up of kinder and Ensignity (as the Context draws the sense to that special Kind of Goodness, ἀγαθότης & κρίσις, ἀγαθὸν εὖ κρίσις, from a fixed prevailing habit, 1 Joh. 3. 7, 8. b Is ally'd to Heaven, born of God, his Offspring. c An evil Don on the other hand, such as is a Composition of Spite, Envy, and Malice, is a meer Struggle to him, hath not been, or known, or had to do with him.
12 Demetrius hath good report of all men, and of the truth it self: yea, and we also bear record, and ye know that our record is true.
13 Some eminent Christian, whom he could with confidence recommend as a Pattern.
14 I had many things to write, but I will not with ink and pen write c unto thee.
15 Having much more to say, as 2 Joh. 12. he resolv'd on a more immediate, grateful, and effectual way of imparting, and even impressing his Sense, as the term Writing, is used in a greater latitude, 1 Joh. 2. 9, and elsewhere.
16 But I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speak f face to face f. Peace be to thee.
Our friends salute thee. Greet the friends by name.
17 Εὐχαιρέω σε, viz. by way of Confirmation, which he hoped ere long to have opportunity for. He concludes with the usual Christian Salutations.

The general Epistle OF JUDE

The ARGUMENT.

SOME Question there hath been concerning the Pen-man of this Epistle, and some have thought that Jude the Apostle was not the Man, whoever were; 1. Because he doth not give himself the Title of Apostle; but that is objected against James too, and hath been already answered. 2ly. Because the Writer of this Epistle speaks of himself, as coming after the Apostles, v. 17. But what necessity is there for his coming behind them in Office and Authority, because he doth in time? 3ly. Because he mentions the Contention about the Body of Moses, and the Prophecy of Enoch, which are no where to be found in Scripture. But when there were divers Traditions among the Jews, (whereof this about Moses's Body seems to be one) why might not the Holy Ghost assert some that were true (though before doubtful) by this Apostle, and make them certain, as well as he doth by Paul, the Names of James and James's 2 Tim. 3. 8. which were known only by Tradition, and Moses quaking and sitting at Mount Sinai, Heb.
12. 21. whereof no mention had been made in the Scripture? As for the Prophecy of Enoch, it seems to have been a Tradition too, (for he mentions no Writing) and then the same may be said as to the other. Yes if it were a Book, and an Apocryphal one too, (his citing of it doth not make it to be Canonical) for Jude might as well cite a Passage out of an Apocryphal Writer, as Paul doth several out of Heathen Authors, Acts 17. 28. and 1 Cor. 15. 33. and Tit. 1. 12. And, 4ly. because much of this Epistle seems to be transcribed out of 2 Pet. 2. 2. and therefore not to be dictated by the Spirit. But to this it may be said, that though many Passages in this Epistle agree with what Peter speaks, yet there is so much difference in the whole, that it is plain they are not transcribed thence. And yet you might not the Spirit dictate the same Truth to several Pen-men, either to be published to several Persons, or the same Persons at different times? As of Obadiah's Prophecy is to be found in Jeremiah's; Psalm 60. is in a great part the same with 108. and Psalm 14. the same with 53. And Paul by the same Spirit writ many of the same things to the Ephesians, and to the Colossians. And what is alleged of the Ancients questioning the Authority of this Epistle, it is not so considerable, as it might be alleged, even out of them, for the Confirmation of
it. Sure we may say, the Spirit of an Apostle breaths in this, as well as in others; the same Majesty, Purity, and Efficacy appear in it, and whatever may evidence its Divine Authority. It is written to the Christian Jews. The matter of it agrees very much with Pet. 2. 2. and the Scope is mostly the same, viz. to arm them against those, who by their wicked Error, and wicked Manners, secretly and slyly brought in, might infect them, and seduce them into the same Wickedness with themselves, whereby they might be exposed to the same Judgment, which he pronounceth, were like to come upon such.

being but one Salvation for all Believers, and one way to it. <sup>1</sup> The Second Reason of his writing, viz. the necessity of it, in respect of the Danger they were in, as follows, 4. 2. By Confessing the Truth, Zeal for the Truth, Holiness of Life, mutual Exhortation, Prayer, Suffering for the Gospel, &c. against those that would pervert the Gospel. <sup>2</sup> The Doctrine of the Gospel; Faith is taken for the Object of Faith. <sup>3</sup> Either, once for all, because it was delivered by all the Apostles as the only unchangeable Rule of governing their lives; and obtaining Salvation, to which nothing is to be added, and from which nothing is to be taken away. Or, it implies, that was therefore delivered to them that they might never forsake it, and that if they do, they must of their Salvation, as being never like to have another way made known to them. <sup>4</sup> Viz. by God, not invented by Men.

* Rom. 9. 24. <sup>1</sup> For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained p to this condemnation q, ungodly men, <sup>2</sup> turning the grace of God into lasciviousness, <sup>3</sup> and denying f the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

<sup>4</sup> Gr. Form-streiter, i. e. of whom it was formerly written, or fore-told, viz. by Christ and his Apostles; or rather, it is to be understood according to our Translation, hypo-stasiaz, viz. in the eternal Council of God; God's Decree being compared to a Book, in which things to be done, are written down. This the Apostle adds to prevent any Offence that might be taken at the Wickedness of these Seducers; and therefore lets these Saints know, that tho' such Men crept in unawares to them, yet it was not without the Providence of God to ordering it. <sup>5</sup> Gr. Judgement, and it may be understood, either of a reprobate Sentence, to which they who thus perverted the Gospel, were given up by God, according to his Pre-ordination; or of that Damnation he decreed should follow upon their Wickedness, in making Shipwreck of the Faith themselves, and subverting others. This seems best to agree with 2 Pet. 2. 3. <sup>6</sup> Abusing the Doctrine of the Grace of God, and Benefits of Christ revealed in the Gospel, especially the Doctrine of Christian Liberty, to the encouraging themselves and others in the vilest Lusts, 2 Pet. 2. 1. <sup>7</sup> Either this may be understood of the Father distinctly from Christ, expressed in the following clauses and why is put in to exclude either of the other Persons of the Trinity from being God, but to exclude Idols and false Gods; Or, it may be understood of Christ, as well as the words following; not only because there is but one Article in the Creed relating to the whole Sentence, but because it seems best to agree with the parallel place, 2 Pet. 2. 1. which is most general, and understood of Christ; and because the Heresies of those times, which Jude cautions these Saints against, struck especially at the Godhead of Christ, which he therefore the more expressly asserts.

<sup>8</sup> I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this; how that the Lord having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward <sup>9</sup> destroyed y them that believed not z.

* Num. 14. 25. <sup>10</sup> Gr. p <sup>11</sup> This may be joined either with the Verb following, ye knew, according to our Translation, and the Sense is, tho' ye knew this certainly, as the word now is taken, Psalm. 80. 5. or perfectly and thoroughly, or once for all. Or rather, with what goes before, and the words may be read, I will put you in remembrance, (viz. while I am in this Tabernacle) put you in remembrance of this, though you know it; as 2 Pet. 1. 12. <sup>12</sup> <sup>13</sup> <sup>14</sup> <sup>15</sup> <sup>16</sup> <sup>17</sup> <sup>18</sup> <sup>19</sup> <sup>20</sup> <sup>21</sup> <sup>22</sup> <sup>23</sup> <sup>24</sup> <sup>25</sup> they are here bid to build themselves up in other Graces, which follow upon Faith, as 2 Pit. 1. 5. Or, 2. Of the Doctrine of Faith, that on which their Faith itself is founded; and then the meaning is, that they should not rest satisfied in what measure of Faith they had already attained, but still be improving it, and making further progress in it, not only hold fast the Truth of the Gospel, the right foundation on which they had begun to be built, but get themselves, by the due study and meditation of the Word, more and more confirmed in the Belief of it. 1. 4. By the assistance of the Spirit, who teacheth what to pray for, and how to pray, from whom Faith, Fervency, and all Praying Graces do proceed, Rom. 8. 26, 27. the Spirit makes intercession (prays) in us, to note the exaltations of his Graces; there we are bid to pray in the Holy Ghost, to note the continuance of our fruitfulness.

The fence is, either, 1. That where there is danger of infection from Heretics, and obstinate Sinners, all converse with them, and any thing whereby the Communion of their Doctrine or Manners may reach us, is to be avoided: Or, 2. That when we reprehend others, we should do it with humble affections, and though we would save themselves, we should lose their Vices, and any thing that promotes them, or favours of them.

we shall feel when we come to the opening of the Seventh and Eighth Seal in the next chapter: only it pleases God by a Vision in this chapter to comfort his Church; & so to this Vision relate to the Seventh Seal; and before the opening of the seventh, yet it hath a relation to that, so that the earth that God would care of his Church under those great Evils that should happen upon the opening of the Seventh Seal; or when the things fore-told upon the opening of it, should come to be accomplished. 8 Four good Angels, God is called their God, &c. That is, to whom God had given in charge, that they should intercede his Judgments upon all the parts of the Earth; for God often useth, by his Prophets, the Metaphor of Wings, to express stormy, troublesome Dispensations, as Jer. 49. 36, & 18. 17, & 23. 11. &c. This phrase interpreted variously, God making use of Winds in a way of Judgment, to throw down Buildings and Trees. 2 In a way of Mercy, to purify the Air, and by their gentle Breaths to cheerish things. Some interpret this Command to the Angels, into a Command to these Angels to forbear a while those Storms of Judgment, which were coming, till the Servants of God should be sealed. Others interpret them into a Command to bring Judgments, either corporal or spiritual, which they think is signified by the Winds now blowing. The first seemeth to be favoured by the next Verse, Whom it was given unto the Earth, and the Sea; which seemeth to be to interpret the blessing mentioned in this Verse, of a harmful blessing. 4 The Earth, the Sea, and the Trees, seem to signify the inhabitable World, especially the Church.

2 And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God: And he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea,

By this other Angel, some understand an Angel by name; some a Min, Ellas or Confessor; others, Christ himself called an Angel, Eccl. 23. 20. It is not much material whether we by this Angel understand Christ, or some Angel, which he was his Instrument. I find given to Command to those four Angels, whom God had made the Ministers, or Executions of his Wrath, and Justice in the World.

3 Saying, Hurt not the earth, nor the sea, nor the trees, until we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.

A manifest Allusion to Eccl. 9. 4, and, as some think, to the Usage of some Eastern Countries, for Masters to set their Names upon the Foreheads of their Slaves, by which they were known to be theirs, & we mark our Sheep, or other Beasts. Men as vainly dispute what this Seal should be, as what the π meant in Eccl. 9. (The Mark set upon those that mourned for the Abominations of Babylon.) The Place where they were to be sealed, signified the end of their feeling, not so much for condemnation, for which Seals were used, as Mark, to signify to others they belong to God: So as it was of the same use as the Blasphemy upon the two Sides, and the upper Door-pools of the Israhelites in Eccl. 12. 13.

4 And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred, and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel.

5 Of the tribe of Judah were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand.

6 Of the tribe of Aser were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Nephthali were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Manasse were sealed twelve thousand.

7 Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Levi were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Ithamar were sealed twelve thousand.

8 Of the tribe of Zebulon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand.

9 For the understanding of these five Verses, several things are to be noted. 1 That the whole number is 144000, which is the Product of 12, as the original Number, (seeing also the Cyprians for 12 times 12 makes 144. The Number of 144, chap. 21. 17, was the measure of the Wall of the Jerusalem in Isaiah; which is the same of this Number 144, seemed to be God's Number, and used in Scripture about 144 times, and almost generally in things belonging to the Church, which had 12 Patriarchs, 12 Tribes under the Old Testament, 12 Apostles (as is said) under the New Testament, and the new Jerusalem from Heaven, ch. 21. 12. Is said to have 12 Gates, and at the Gate 12 Angels, v. 14. the Wall had 12 Foundations, the length of it, 2. 16. twice thousand Furlongs. 2 That we must not by 144000 understand a certain, but an uncertain Number, which yet was very great. 3 That by the Tribes of Israel mentioned here, are to be understood the several Gospel-Churches of the Gentiles, who are now God's Israel ingrafted into the true Olive.

4 That the Tribe of Issachar is here left out, and Ephraim is not named, (the one included in Joseph) of the Tribe of Dan there were none sealed: See was a great King-leader to Idolatry, & was Ephraim; see the 17, and 18. Chap. of Judith; and at Dan it was that Yerobam set up his Calves. Levi is put in instead of Dan, and Joseph instead of Ephraim, by which means here are yet twelve Tribes, which each had a special Protection or Favour from God in a day of evil.

5 These Tribes are not for in order, according to their Birth-right.

1. Judah was Levi's fourth Son, Gen. 29. 35; put first, because Christ descended from him.

2. Ruben her eldest Son is put next, giving place only to the Manasse's Tribe.

3. Gad, Issachar's Son by Zilpah, Gen. 30. 11, is put next.

4. Asaph, Issachar's Son by Zilpah, in the fourth place, Gen. 30. 15.

5. Nephthali is put next, who was Issachar's Son by Bilhah, Gen. 30. 8.

6. Manasse is put next, who was Joseph's Son.

7. Simeon, Issachar's second Son by Leah, Gen. 29. 33, is put in the seventh place.

8. Levi, Leah's third Son, in the eighth place, Gen. 29. 34.

9. Issachar, Leah's fifth Son, Gen. 30. 18, is put in the ninth place.

10. Zebulon, Leah's sixth Son, is put in the tenth place, Gen. 30. 20.

11. Joseph is put in the eleventh place; for Ephraim his Son.

12. Benjamin, Rachel's second Son, is put in the last place.

If there be any Mystery in this Order, differing from all other Scriptures, where there is a mention made of the twelve Patriarchs, it is probable that Mr. Mede hath hit upon it, in regard of the good or ill Defects of these Tribes, some of which are mentioned by him; all may be learned from the History of the Jews recorded in holy Writ. Hence we may learn, that the summary Sense of all these Verses, is this, That also within that Period of time, which is signified under the seventh Seal, there should be great Perfections of the Church, yet God would yet reserve unto himself a great Number in all Churches; which should not apostatize, and who in the Perfections should not be hurt, so as his Church should not fail, tho the Archers should shoot forth arrows at it, for tho men rage, yet it was by Gods Permission, and his Angels over-ruled it, who should take notice of those Numbers that he had sealed, and marked in their Foreheads.

9 After this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, & clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands.

If we enquire who these were, we are told, v. 14, by the best Interpreters, that they were such as out of Tribulation, and have suffered their Rites, &c. So that they could not seem to be the 144000 mentioned for Preservation in, from the Evil, &c. but such as had escaped, or were not in, or going into Tribulation, but come out. The Number of the former was determined, it is said of these, it could not be numbered. 4 These were glorified ones, no militant; they stood before the Throne, and the Lamb. 4 Clothed in the habits of such as amongst the Romans had fought, and conquered, and triumphed. 4 And to this end they are said to have carried Palm, the Emblems of Victory, in their Hands.

10 And cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God, which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

11 They acknowledge their temporal, spiritual, and eternal Salvation to the gift, and free Mercy of God in whom they had trusted. 4 And to the Lord Jesus Christ, by whose Merits and Spirit they had got the Victory.

12 And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders, & the four beasts, and fell before the throne, and cast their crowns, and said, Worthy is the Lord God, who was slain, to receive this glory, honour, and power, forever.

13 The good Angels, who always in Heaven behold the face of their Lord, and our heavenly Father. 4 And about the twenty four Elders mentioned, ch. 4. 4. 7 And the living Creatures mentioned, ch. 4. 6. 7 The Angels, Elders, and living Creatures, all fall down before their Faces in a reverent Sense of the infinite distance between them and their Creator. 7 Thus saying an Homage to God, stood to their glorified Place, in consideration of his Excellency.

13 Saying, Amen; Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen &c.

These words only signify the Union and Harmony of the Angels and Saints in praising God: See the Notes on chap. 5. 12.

13 And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they?

Not that he did not know, but to try whether John knew, or rather to let John upon enquiring.

14 And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, & they have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb:

John confessing his own Ignorance, applies himself to this Elder for Instruction, who tells him, 7 These were the Souls of them that came out of great Sufferings and Persecution. 4 But he added, that they were such as were washed in the Blood of Christ. Suffering will not bring us to Heaven, without having our Souls washed with the Blood of Christ.

15 Therefore are they before the throne of God, & serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them.

Not that they by their Sufferings have merited Heaven, but because it pleased God of his free Grace to reward them; therefore it was said, not only that they were such as came out of Tribulation, but that they had washed their Garments in the Blood of the Lamb, whose Blood had paid the Price of their Salvation. 4 By the Temple, here understood the Church in this Life, but it is foreign to the true Sense of the Text; for John saw only their Souls before the Throne, their Bodies were in their Graves. By the Temple is meant Heaven where God dwelleth, and is worshipped more gloriously and constantly than he was in the Jewish Temple, or in any part of the militant Church. 4 As God by his gracious Presence dwelt in the Jewish Temple; so God by his glorious Presence shall dwell amongst his glorified Saints.

16 They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat.

This is taken out of Isa. 40. 4. They are all Metaphorical Expressions, all signifying the perfect state of glorified Saints. They shall have no Wants, nor be exposed to any afflictive Providences.

17 For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne, shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

Christ, the Lamb mentioned, chap. 5. 6. I shall take care of them to satisfy, and to protect them, and give them the best Supplies, and both make them to forget their former Sorrows, and prevent any further cause of Sorrow and Affliction to them. A perfect Description of the glorious and happy state of Saints in Heaven. For wherein lieth the Happiness of Heaven, but in a freedom from all the Evils that incommode us in this Life, and the Enjoyment of all Happinesses we are capable of, and being ever with the Lord Jesus Christ under his Influence and Conduct? So as I cannot agree with Mr. Mede, or any of those who think this Vision and these Phrases describe any happy, peaceable state of the Church in this life, after the throwing down of Antichrist; but do think that John was shewed this great Reward of Martyrs, to encourage the Church of God under all those Evils, which they were to suffer under Antichrist, and the Beast, in that Period of Time which is described mystically upon the opening of the Seventh Seal, which we now come to in the next chapter.

CHAP. VIII.

AND when he had opened the seventh Seal, there was silence in Heaven about the space of half an hour.

This is the Lamb mentioned, chap. 5. 7, who took the Book out of the Hand of him who gave upon the Throne, the Book of God's Councils, and had now revealed mysteriously to John what should come to pass (under all the Pages Express) of the Church of Christ, until the time of Christ's coming, who was said about the year 2534 Antichrist the Great, who (as was said) about the year 2534 had sealed the Church of Christ, and thus all the Saints in Heaven, having conquered the Apostate Antichrist, & the Beast, having conquered the Apostate Antichrist, & the Beast, cometh now to open the Seventh Seal; that is, to reveal to the Church what should be in the succeeding time of the Church mingled with Blood cast upon the Earth: By which time, to the end of the World. But before the great Evils should break out, which were to come to pass in this time there was in the Church a Rest & a calm time; for from the year 317 (when Constantine bore the greatest Victory in the Empire) to 324, when he had got a full Victory over Maximian, the Church had a great Peace for a little time till 330, when the Empire being divided, and Constantine having the Eastern part, and Constantius the Western (both Sons of Constantine) Constantine being an Arian, (who denied the Godhead of Christ) began again to persecute the Christians; and after his fall, who apostatized to Paganism. But after him they had a little further respite to the year 335, when Theodosius died, and the Christians Quoted died with him. I rather chuse to interpret this time, than with those who understand the Silence in Heaven, of a Silence in the third Heaven, in allusion to the Jewish Order; who, tho they sang during the time of the Sacrifice, and played upon Instruments of Musick all that time, yet kept Silence while the Temple was offering. For (as divers have noted) it seemed hard to judge, that in this Revelation there should be no mention of that short Truce which the Church had during the Reign of Constantine, and for a small time after.

2 And I saw the seven angels which stood before God, and to them were given seven trumpets.

The seven mentioned hereafter, which blew with the Trumpets. For we previously read, that Seven Trumpets were given to them. Trumpets were used to call the People together, to proclaim Festivals, and in War. The use of these Trumpets we shall hereafter read, which was to proclaim the Will and Councils of God, as to things to come.

3 And another angel came, and stood at the altar, having a golden censer, and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints, upon the golden altar, which was before the Throne.

By this Angel I understand Christ; (as do many very valuable Authors) nor, indeed, can this be said of this Angel agree to any other but him, who is called an Angel, Gen. 28. 16, and the Angel of the Covenant, Mal. 3. 1. Here is a manifest Allusion to the Order in the Jewish Worship, they had an Altar of Incense, Exod. 30. 1, upon which the High-Priest was to burn Incense every Morning and Evening, Lev. 2. 2. Whilst the Priest was burning Incense, as appears, Lev. 2. 10, the People were without, praying. Christ is here represented as having a Golden Censer. The High-Priest's Censer amongst the Jews was of Brass; but here was a more excellent High-Priest, by which means we may understand his Death, & to be offered up himself (who is the Golden Altar) by the Prayers of all his Saints. By all this Christ is represented to us, as interceding for his Saints that were to live after this time, during all the Troubles that were immediately to begin, and to follow on, during the Reign of Antichrist.

4 And the smoke of the incense which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God, out of the angels hand.

This only denotes the Acceptableness of Christ's Intercession, and God's Peoples Prayers, through the Virtue of that Intercession unto God.

5 And the angel took the censer, and filled it with fire of the altar; and cast it into the earth: and there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and an earthquake.

I do not but by Fire here, it is to be understood the Wrath of God, often in holy Writ compared to Fire, poured out upon the Roman Empire, or the visible Church, & upon which followed great Judgments, Conversions, and Turnings, expressed here, or uttered in as before, ch. 6. 1. with Thunderings; which being here more generally mentioned, are by and by more particularly expressed.

6 And the seven angels which had the seven trumpets, prepared themselves to sound.

The Angels are God's Ministers by which he bringeth his Councils to pass in the World; they hearing the Thunders and Voices, knew the time was come when they were to begin the Execution of God's Judgments upon the Earth; the Execution of which was intrusted to them, and are therefore set out (though they be always ready) after the manner of Men, preparing themselves to execute what God had intrusted them with the Execution of.

7 And the first angel sounded, and there followed hail and fire mingled with blood; and they were cast upon the earth, and the third part of trees were burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up.

The first of the seven Angels to whom the seven Trumpets were given, ch. 8. 2. began to execute his Commandment. The consequence of which were Hail and Fire mingled with Blood cast upon the Earth: By which time, to the end of the World. But before the great Evils should Locusts, they moved very swiftly. This agrees to the Saracens, who made such havoc in their Conquests, the Scythians in India more than 50 years they had subdued Palmyra, Cyria, both the Armenia's, almost all the latter Asia, Peria, India, Egypt, Nubia, all Babylonia, Parthia, Spain, and within a few years, Sicily, Candia, Cyprus, and were come to the very Gates of Rome, so as they had many crowns on their heads, and moved as with Wings.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails, and their power was to hurt men five months.

11 A kind of Venomous Serpents that have their stings in their tails, which which they presently kill both Men and Beasts. What these serpentes mean, is very hard to say, certainly it is a certain number for an uncertain, and mentioned rather than any other dunes, because it is (as they say) the usual time of the life of Locusts; though some observe, that five months have in them (counting as the Hebrews, 30 days to the month) 150 days, and a day standing for a year, as in Prophetic Writings, it denoteth the full time the Saracens raged in Italy, from the year 830, to the year 980; as to which I refer my Reader to search tillicities.

12 And they had a king over them which is the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name is in the Hebrew tongue Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name Apollyon.

13 Solomon, Prov. 30. 27. faith, The locust hath its king over it, and its king is its firstborn; according to which the Locusts cannot be understood of Insects to call; or, if they have a King, yet it is certain the Devil is not their King, who is here called the Angel of the bottomless Pit. From him he hath defunct. b. That is, a Destroyer; intimating that the whole business of this barbarous Enemy, should be to ruin and destroy the world.

14 One who is said, and behold there come two more weeks hereafter.

15 One period of time is over, in which God hath plagued the World with a very great Judgment; but there are two more to come, which will be equally, if not more calamitous.

16 And the sixth angel sounded, and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar which is before God.

17 That is, from God, I heard him give a Command, which Voice is said to have proceeded from the Golden Altar (in allusion to Exod. 30. 3.) because that God received the Prayers of his People; and this Voice proceeding from that place, might signify the his servants Souls from thence crying to him for Vengeance. See chap. 6. 9, 10.

18 Saying to the sixth angel which had the trumpet, Loose the four angels which are bound in the great river Euphrates.

19 By these four Angels or Instruments of God to execute his Vengeance, I find the most valuable Interpreters understanding the Turks, considered as distinct from the Saracens, and succeeding of them, whose Empire began in Antioch 1256, or thereabouts. Mr. Mede faith these four Angels denote to many Salvatus or Kingdoms, into which the Turks were dispersed, having passed the River Euphrates, which River is famous for four things. 1. It was the boundary of Darius and Seleucus Kingdom. Dist. 11. 24. Yfso. 13. 4. 2. It was that River by which Babylon flood, Jer. 13. 4. 5. 6. 3. It was the boundary of the Roman Empire, beyond which it could never extend itself. 4. Add it also was the feat of the Arabs, who having taken it, were come over Euphrates, first divided themselves into a Tetrarchy, of which one in Asia, another at Alippo, another at Danagis, a fourth at Antioch. Mr. Mede gives us a Table or Diagram of it, Clav. Apoc. 40. p. 102. where they were bounded for a while, but about the year 1300 they were loosed, and began further to invade Europe, which is the severe Providence of God, conceived to be here foretold as the consequence of this sixth Angel's founding. The Turks who though come over the River Euphrates, had hitherto by the Providence of God been bounded near unto it, not much conceding to enlarge their Reveries, now joined together with the Saracens under Ottoman, and went further into Europe, and could by no means be stopp'd till they had got the Empire of Constantinople.

20 And the four angels were loosed which were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men.

21 That is (say some) for any time whatsoever, God would have them move; or for the certain time which God had determined; but Mr. Mede hath here a peculiar notion; he observeth that an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, make just 366 years. In a year are 365 days, in a month 30, which make 355; to which add the odd days, they make 366. The Turks began their Empire under Ottoman, who began his Reign 1296: But their Leader Toghtai, upon the taking of Bagdad was inaugurated, and put on the Imperial Robe, Ann. 1057. Constantinople was taken by them 1453, between which are just 356 years. In which time they slew a numberless number of Men, called here the third part.

22 And the number of the army of the horsemen, were two hundred thousand thousand, and I heard the number of them.

23 He faith nothing of the Infantry, but leaves us to conjecture how great that must be, from the number of the Horse; we must not think there was precisely this number, but the meaning is, that the Armies should be vastly great, as we know all the Turkish Armies are. Major's Army is described from the Cavalry, Ezek. 38. 4. 15.

24 And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, having breast-plates of fire, and of jacinth, and brimstone; and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions, and out of their mouths issued fire, and smoke, and brimstone.

25 We have no such description or representation as this in any other place of Holy Writ. We understand it of the several coloured Breast-plates that the Soldiers wore; some of a red and flaming colour like Fire; others blew like the Jacinth; some pale as fish as when they look terribly. Mr. Mede hath again a peculiar notion; thinking that the Holy Ghost doth here signify their fighting with great Gases (not known before the Siege of Constantinople) which throw out Fire and Smoke, &c. and to alter the Air, the Admiration by which we see, that the opposite party in fighting appear to those that use these Arms, as if they were covered with Breast-plates of Fire, and Smoke, and Smoke. To confirm this, he tells us of Chalchylar his report of this Siege, who mentioneth great Guns used at it of ten丈 high, that one of them required thirteen and two of Gunpowder, and two thousand Men to draw it, &c. It is at least a very ingenious conjecture, and could not but mention it in honour to the Learned Authors; leaving it to our Readers liberty, whether he will with Mr. Mede, judge this literal sense of the Text is best, or interpret all these Phrases more generally, only of a terrible appearance of these Armies.

26 By these three were the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone which issued out of their mouths.

27 That is, a great part of Men were killed by these numerous Armies. No such devastations were ever made by any Enemies that ever appeared in the World, as by the Turks have been; nor ever were there such vast great Guns used, one of which came Fire and Smoke, and Brimstone.

28 For their power is in their mouth, and in their tails, for their tails were like unto serpents, and had heads; and with them they do hurt.

29 By their Tails some understand their Infantry or Foot-Soldiers; others their Serpentine craft and subtilty; as the Locusts 9. 10. are compared to Serpents, whose Sting was in their tails, and who were said to hurt with their tails; so the same thing is said of these Armies, intimating that the Turks should be malicious by the same arts and means as their Predecessors the Saracens. They are said to have had Heads in their Tails, which was no odd of the Locusts; the reason of which Interpreters judge to have arisen from the different Animals by which they are represented.

30 And the rest of the men which were not killed by the plagues, yet repeated not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, & idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood; which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk:

31 The two thirds of Men that should be left, for the third part were destroyed; and this also must be understood of Men dwelling in Countries subject formerly to the Roman Empire on this side of Euphrates. This leave this applicable to none but Pagans; for there are none else but them who worship Demons, Gen. Idols of Gold and Silver. By Devils are meant Demons, that is, persons that are Dead, whom the Heathens made their Pantheons, and worshipped as middle Beings between them and the Supreme Gods (according to their notion) which is the same thing the Pagans are guilty of, with this only difference (as Mr. Mede excellently observeth) that the Heathens made many Supreme Gods, and their modern Idolaters, one but one in that notion; but as many Demons or Demies, as they they did, which are all those Saints to whom they pay an Adoration, as to those who should prefer their desires to God, which Mr. Mede sufficiently proves from Writers, was the very work the Pagans allotted for: those whom they Canonized after Death, from whence came the Names of Saints and Sils, &c. but from Babel, who it said to have been the first Pagan, whom being dead, they made a God, and adored; which Demons God in Scripture calleth Devils: Nor do any but they, nor worship Images, the works of Men's hands, made of Gold, Silver, Brass and Wood, who are here described in the same words as by the Plinian Plin. 1. 34. & 135. 15. A Norwithstanding Gods great Judgment executed upon the Gracians Churches, yet they repeated not of their Idolatry and Superstition; so as God hath brought them wholly under the power of those Barbarous Enemies; and though the Idolatry party there, yet neither do they repent, which may give them cause to fear that God should make life of the same Adversity to destroy them likewise; especially considering that neither to this day do they repent.

33 Of their Murdering the Saints of God, but go on in that practice; nor of their Fornications, which are publickly allowed amongst them; nor of their Theft and Robberies, and other Wickednesses, but are as insatiable for their Debaucheries as for their Superstition and Idolatry. How long this great Judgment of the Turks shall continue upon Christians, we cannot tell; it is Mr. Brightman's Opinion that it shall determine 1686; but of that the Scripture hath not informed us, and guessing is a Vanity, where we have no sure Foundation, and so many have appeared to have been mistaken in such particular determinations, that he lightly exposth his Reputation that will adventure further upon such Rocks.

CHAP. X.

We have had in the former Chapters Christ's Revelation to St. John of what should happen in the Roman Empire under the six first Seals, that is, during the Pagan State, (which determined in Constantine's time, anno 310, or 325.) Under the seventh Seal (that is from chap. 8. v. 1.) he hath revealed to him what should happen after that time to the Roman Empire by the Goths and Vandals under the four first Trumpets, and by the Saracens under the fifth Trumpet, and by the Turks under the sixth Trumpet, who are yet rampant and going on in their outrages. The seventh Trumpet in course should sound next, but we come not to that till chap. 11. 15. In this Chapter, and to the 15 verse of the next Chapter seems an interruption of the History that Christ might reveal to his Prophet the main things that should concern his Church. About the sense of this Interpreters are divided, some thinking this a distinct Prophecy relating to the affairs of the Church, yet not in a continued story, but made up of several Visions, some contemporary with the times before mentioned, some continuing to the time after the sixth Trumpet, which Prophecy they judge beginneth at the eleventh Chapter, to which what we have in this Chapter is Introductory. Of this mind are our Dr. More, Mr. Mede, and other very valuable Interpreters, whose reasons may be read in Mr. Pool's Latin Synopsis upon this Chapter, and some of them may be noted by us as we go through this Chapter. Others think it is no distinct Prophecy.

1 AND I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud, and a rainbow was upon his head, and his face was as it were the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire.

2 The most and best Interpreters understand by this Angel, Christ, formerly represented to us as a Lamb, here as an Angel; besides, the glorious appearance of this Angel, which is no other than the appearance of Christ, being about to do some great thing, is oft thus set out as coming down from Heaven. Christ is described as coming with Clouds, Rev. 1. 7. The Lord said I will dwell in thick darkness.

CHAP. 10. 15.

3 Chron. 6. 1. d. And a Rainbow upon his head, which was the sign of the Covenant made with Noah, Gen. 9. 16. and fitted Christ's head, as he that brought peace to the World, and to his Church in special. 1. See Matth. 17. 2. f. Signifying the steadfastness and efficacy of his actions.

4 And he had in his hand a little book open; and he stretched his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth.

5 The same Book with that mentioned chap. 5. 1. (though some by it understood the Scriptures) There it was represented to John as sealed with seven Seals; here open, to let us know that all the Councils of God, however sealed as to us, are open to Christ, and that he would open to John what should come to pass in his Church to the end of the World. To let us know the Dominion he had over the whole World, as well the more unquiet as quieter parts of it.

6 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth, and when he had cried, seven thunders uttered their voices.

7 This voice suited him who is the Lion of the Tribe of Judah; the Lion voice is both loud and terrible. 2. Inter-preteth these seven Thunders to signify quick judgments of God which should be executed in the World upon the founding of the seventh Trumpet, and precedaneous to the day of Judgment, which we shall find more fully opened under the seventh Trumpet, by the seven Vials poured out, which signify the same things: Yet some understand by these seven Thunders the powerful preaching the Gospel; but the other seemeth more probable.

8 And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write; and I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and do not write them.

9 To write what he understood of the Voices of these Thunders: But he was forbidden the publication of them, because they concerned things to be fulfilled at some distance of time, and should be afterward more fully revealed.

10 And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea, and upon the earth, lit up his hand to heaven.

11 See v. 2. which Angel was Christ, as Dan. 12. 7. with which Prophecy this agrees. It is an ordinary gesture used in swearing.

12 And swore by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein; that there should be time no longer.

13 That is, by God; for this Description can agree to no other, neither is it lawful to swear by any other, see Dan. 12. 7. There shall be an end of the World (to some) but this John knew well enough. It is rather to be understood of the time of the fourth Monarchy, the Roman Empire should come to an end, or the time of the Afflictions of the Church, whether by Pagan or Antichristian Enemies, should be no more.

14 But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished, & as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.

15 Of whom, and his founding, we shall read chap. 11. 15. From that time that he began to sound shall begin the mystery of God to be finished; either the mystery mentioned chap. 11. 15. when the Kingdoms of the World shall become the Kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ. Or more generally, whatsoever God hath revealed concerning the propagation of the Gospel, the ruin of Antichrist, and the end of the world. 2. Whatsoever God hath declared by his Servants the Prophets about these things (as to which see the 24. 26. 27. 66 Chapters of Isaiah, Dan. 7. v. 11; 12. Zech. ch. 14. Matth. 24. 4.) it shall be fulfilled, and begin to be fulfilled when the seventh Angel shall begin to blow, within which period of time most Interpreters judge we are, as being begun some time since.

16 And the voice which I heard from heaven, spake unto me again, and said, Go, and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea, and upon the earth.

17 The voice mentioned v. 4. The little Book mentioned v. 2. John is bid to take this Book, by which some understand the Scriptures; but it is most probable the Book mentioned chap. 5. 1. before said, now open.

9 And

Or, as

[illegible]

From this mysterious Portion of holy Writ thus opened, it appears that God, in the foregoing Chapters, hath been (no more summarily) instructed his Prophet in wisdom, should come to the final Ruine of the Roman Empire (as confuted as Pagan, that is, till Constantine's time) and also of the Reign of Antichrist. Forasmuch it must needs be follow, that whatsoever followeth this Chapter, and commeth to the end of the same, must be intended to be applied to the time of Christ's Kingdom, must concern some part with something which went before, and belong to some Period comprehended under the Vision of the Seals, or of the Trumpets. The three next Chapters are judged to be of this nature, and contain things past, God therein representing to his Prophet, and to the Church (as to this time) from the beginning of the World, to the time of the coming of the Nativty of Christ, howsoever the same be intended to be applied to the time of the coming of the Son of Man, while the time that Rome continued Pagan, or should continue Antichristian. The following Chapters shewing the gradual destruction of Antichrist by the seven last Plagues.

ing in birth, and pained to be delivered :

Not with Christ considered personally, who was long before brought forth by the Virgin Mary; but with the Truths and Gospel of Christ, or with Christ mystical, desiring to bring many Children to the Kingdom of Christ; or to bring forth Christ in the Souls of others; of this Burden and Labour the desired to be delivered. The Plurist is judged to signify both the Primitive Churches earnest desire to propagate the Gospel, and also her many sufferings for that endeavour.

3 And there appeared another wonder in heaven, and behold, a great red dragon g, having seven heads h, and ten horns i, and seven crowns upon his heads k.

f. There appeared to John, being yet in his Vision, another amazing Sign, which was a Sign of yet something different from what it appeared like. See Ch. 17, v. 10. Most judicious Interpreters, by the great red Dragon, understand the Empire; that first perished the Christian Church, and which Christ himself foretold should be destroyed, as the Dragon, the old Serpent; but the north, and best Interpreters understand it of the Pagan Empire, by whom the Devil did this Work, called a great Dragon, because of the Violence of that Empire; and a red Dragon, for their Cruelty against the Christians. b. The Holy Ghost, for their Jealousy against the Heaven; for even Ravens, by Evangelical Means, have been made to Preach the Gospel. c. The Seven Kings, who were the Successors of that Empire; the Governors of which, being ruled by the Devil, it is expounded by ten Kings, Ch. 17, v. 12. Strabellus testifies, that Augustus Cæsar divided the whole Rome into Seven Provinces; ten of which being more quiet, he gave to the People to govern, the other ten he referred to his own Governments. d. The Seven Crowns are expounded by seven Kingdoms, Ch. 17, v. 10, of which we shall speak more when we come to Ch. 18.

4 And his tail / drew the third part of the stars of heaven m, and did cast them to the earth n: And the dragon before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born o.

The Tail of the red Dragon signifies his followers, highway and military officers, who were ever by him impured to execute his Commands. By the Stars here, are presented the Ministers of the Christian Church, or the Priests of it. ¶ Turning them out of their places and disturbances, making them as useless as he could. That is, he was ready to propagate life, watching him on her creature, to destroy him, rather than to be made in-more free to send diabolical spirits, which would have persecuted some of the people, who were so much famous. For I know not, with reference to him, who would be understood by the red Dragon. Mr. Aldrich ingeniously observes, that Pharoah was a Type of this red Dragon.
It is rebuked by a Dragon, Jude 9; 13, 16. Rev 19:

well as they could; God providing for them in far more obscure places.

7 And there was war in heaven w; Micha and his angels fought against the dragon, and the dragon fought and his angels x;

<sup>8</sup> By hypenation, in this place, doubtless it means the Church of God; and believing that the Pagan Emperors are to be understood by the Dragon (which is pretty generally agreed there can be no doubt), that by this War is meant, is undoubtedly those Persecutions which the Pope calls the persecution of the Holy Church, the words being, et deo et sanctis eius. The Papal Armies were the Pagan Emperors, and also the Papal Armies were the Pagan Emperors, and also the Papal Armies; and Michael and his Angels. But who is here meant, namely, Michael and his Angels? Some, by this Michael, understand papa: as they call the Archangel, Jude one of the chief Princes, Dan. 10. 13. Others, by Michael here understand Christ himself, who, they think, is understood by Michael, Dan. 12. 1. The matter is not much; it is most certain that the Battle is not ours, but Christi's. It is as certain that the Victory will be his, by his own Angels, and that they have a Manifestation about his Chair. The meaning is no more than this: That Christ and his Party, opposed the Pagan Papal leaders and their Party.

8 And prevailed not y, neither was their place found any more in heaven z.

The Pagans were at length routed in this Battle; the Christians overcame them by the preaching of the Gospel and by their Faith and Patience. And Paganism found no place within the same Territories where the Church was. This was fulfilled in the time of Constantine the Great, who altered the face of the Roman Empire, and more eminently in the time of Theodosius, about the year 380.

9 And * the great dragon was cast out a which deceiveth the whole world: he was

This properly and typically signified, that thro the Ramess Emperors, being Pagan, they pervert the Church upward of 300 years; yet they should be thrown, and Paganism with all its Idolatry and Superstition, be rooted out; with which occurred a great deal of Glory to God from the Praises and Thanksgivings of his People expressed in the three next Verses.

10 And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, <sup>a</sup> Now is come salvation <sup>b</sup>, and strength <sup>c</sup>, and the kingdom <sup>d</sup>, of our God <sup>e</sup>, and the power <sup>f</sup> of his Christ <sup>g</sup>: <sup>h</sup> for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, <sup>i</sup> who accused them before our God <sup>j</sup> day and night <sup>k</sup>.

f. fo undoubtedly heard his voice as in the third Heaven, whether he was caught; but it is not only expressive of the Joy and Satisfaction which the glorious Angels, and glorified Saints had, upon their knowledge of what was done upon the Earth, but prophetic of the great Joy should be over all the Church, upon Cassidius's Hoping the Perfection, and restoring Peace to the Church, by calling out all Pages, Idolatries and Superfluities. g. Temporal Salvation, and Deliverance from Persecutors. h. How God hath shewed himself a thing and mighty God.  meritorious Cause, which is true; for Christ's Blood was both the meritorious and exemplary Cause of their Victory.
 But this will not agree with the usage of the term in the next words. Others therefore rather chuse to translate it, as,
as denoting the efficient Cause, whether principals (as was the Blood of the Lamb) or instrumental, o, as by their hearing, and professing the Gospel; p by their patient bearing of the cross: not shunning the Danger of Death, that they might preach Christ, and own his Truths, and live up to his holy Rule of life.

12 Therefore *rejoyce ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Wo to the inhabitants of the earth, and of the sea: for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

q He calls to the Angels and Saints again to rejoice; some think to the Church also. 7 These tell us, that the Inhabitants of the Earth, and the Six, in St. John's Writings, always signifies the Enemies of the Church, earthly, carnal Men. 7 The Devil now being bereft of the Power he exerted against the Church, will fall upon you; for so he principally hateth the Saints; as most openly to him, yet he is the common Hater of Mankind; & he hath but a little time to execute his Malice, he shall shortly be confined to the Bottomless Pit. It is hard to say whether here be intended all in general, or the worse part of the World only; for these Arguments, after this time upon the whole Ranzen Express, by the Ghosts and Vizards, and upon the Church by the Angels and by Angels, of whose Life we shall read in the next Chapter.

unto the earth <sup>u</sup>, he persecuted the woman which

1. "Whither the Devil gave that he could not uphold his Kingdom by Paganism, nor further execute his Malice by Pagan Emperors; but was wholly routed and overcome, as to this Power." To let us know, that he retained his Malice, that he had lost his former Power; he goes on in pursuing the Church of God to his ruine; only that it is another Form; heretofore in the Form of a Pagan, now under the Pretence of a Christian; by Atrideis, the Spawne of Abissus and Phoenix; (who were before this time) and by Pilatus, Nefarius, and Euzoyus, who all were betwixt 400 and 500, and by Archbishops the Beast we shall read of, ch. 12. 1. with seven Heads and ten Hornes.

14. And to the woman x were given two wings of a great eagle a, that she might fly into the wilderness b into her place d: where she is nourished d for a time, and times, and half a time from the face of the serpent a.

x. To the fincifer, paros of Christians (represented by the Woman, v. 1.) and by the Temple, and Altar, and those that worshipped therein, viz. in the Oracle where the Altar stood, ch. 11. v. 4. The Eagle being the Emblem of the Roman Empire, and Theodosius having two Sons, Honorius and Arcadius, betwixt which he divided the Empire, making Honorius the Emperor of the West, and Arcadius of the East, ch. 11. v. 4.

1260, the number of days mentioned, v. 6. If any inquire why what was expressed by 1260 days there, is thus expected here? it is answered, To make this comport with the Prophecy of Daniel, ch. 7, 25, and 12, 7, where it is thus expressed.

15 And the serpent f cast out of his mouth g water as a flood, after the woman: that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood h.

The Devil, the old Serpent, mentioned v. 9, being able no longer to execute his Malice as a Dragon, by the Power of the Roman Empire, tearing Christians in pieces, but differing the Church feared by the special Providence of God, went to work another way, g corrupting the Judgments of several Persons, who, out of the abundance of Error in their Hearts, preached corrupt Doctrine. Such were the Followers of Arius, Nestorius, Eutyches, Pelagius, &c. Prov. 18, 4. The words of a Mouth must be as day waters. Prov. 15, 28. The Mouth of the wicked pursueth out evil things. i On Purpose to ruin the Church: And, indeed, such were the ill Effects of these Heresies, that he who is but meanly versed in the History of the fifth Age will be ready to adore the Providence of God, that the Roman Emperors, upon the fight of them, did not again ruin Pagans, and add their force to the Malice of their pretended Christians against the sincere part of the Church.

16 And the earth helped the woman k, and the heaven opened her mouth, and swallowed up of the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth l. k Then are divers Nations here of the Earth; to me this seemeth most probable, who understood by the Roman, the Goths and Vandals, &c. who, Anno 410, invaded the Roman Empire, and gave it continual Trouble, till they had put an end to the Western Empire, 480. By whose continual Goadings with the Subjects of the Roman Empire, the Church enjoyed some quiet in the Exercises of Religion; and, tho' all this while they were troubled by the Broods of Arians, Pelagians, Nestorians, and Eutychians, yet they could do them no great hurt; and the Church had a Liberty to condemn them by the sound and third General Council; in which, it is probable, there were many too that deserved no better Name than the Earth. l But yet they lived, in a great measure, to swallow up that flood of Heresies which the Devil threw out of his Mouth by these Heresies.

17 And the dragon was wroth with the woman m, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed n, which keep the commandments of God, and * have the testimony of Jesus Christ o.

The Devil hath been defeated in two Defians against the whole Church; he could not wholly root it out by the Ten Persecutions under the Roman Emperors, nor by the Wiles thrown out of his Mouth, perfidious Doctrines which he influenced forth; but he was angry still, his Rage was not extinguished. * He gives over his Design to ruin the whole Church, as not practicable, but resolves to do all the Mischief he could to the Remnant of his Seed, to particular Christians: a choice especially, which kept closest to the Doctrine of Faith called here the Witness of Jesus Christ, and to the Rule of an holy Life, which is meant by keeping the Commandments of God. Hence Antichrist's Rage hath not been against Christians in general, as was the Papists, but only against such Christians as he hath not been able to bring over to him, in a Compliance with his Corruptions in Doctrine, Worship, and Discipline.

CHAP. XIII.

God is now coming to show his Prophet that grand Enemy of his Church, who is emphatically called Antichrist; after the Determination of whose time of 1260 years, the Kingdom of Christ shall begin, whether in the Day of Judgment, or in some Period of time before that; and here upon the Earth, I dare not determine.

The Rise, Power, and Prevalency of this Adversary, is described in this Chapter; the Opposition made to him by Christ and his Followers, chap. 14. His Fall, chap. 15, 16, 17, 18. For which, Praise is given to God, ch. 19.

This Enemy of the Church is shewed to John by this Symbol, or Representation of two Beasts: the one having the Body of a Leopard, the Feet of a Bear, and the Mouth of a Lion: the other having two Horns like a Lamb, but speaking like a Dragon.

The Reader must understand, that the Rise of these Beasts, their Rage, and Prevalency, was contemporaneous with some of the six Trumpets, mentioned chap. 8, and 9. For, chap. 9, 15, upon the sounding of the seventh Trumpet Antichrist began to fall; whose gradual Fall we shall find more fully described in chap. 16. by pouring out of the Vials; only (as was before said) there is from chap. 12, a more particular Description of what should happen to, and in the Church under the six first Trumpets.

The best Interpreters, by these two Beasts, understand the Antichrist: (For in a larger Sense there are more Antichrists than one) and by the Antichrist they understand the Pope, as armed both with a Secular and Ecclesiastical Power; yet I dare not conclude from this Nation, the Civil Majesty of the Roman Empire, who either helped the Pope into his Chair, or delivered him there.

The greatness of the Pope's power, is to be known the time when the Papacy began, was shewn down, that was, about 325, nor before the Silence in Heaven for half an hour, was over, which (if this by it the Rap be meant, which the Church enjoyed in the time of Constantine and Theodosius) was about 390 or 400. But if we fix the Rise of the Papacy there, I know no ground for it; and it would, besides, have been determined in 1600, or thereabouts. I think, therefore, we must distinguish between the Rise and Reign of Antichrist.

It does not seem to me reasonable to make his Reign to commence higher than 600 or 606, when he arrogated to himself the Primacy; and that was confirmed to Boniface the third by Phocas, in requital of Boniface his Kindness to him, who had got the Empire by the help of his Murder of Mauritian his Master, and of all his Children, and stood in need of the Pope's help to support him. From that time, I judge, the 1260 years should be counted; but Nemo repetat peccatum, we must allow the Papacy some time to come to this visible Efface from his Cradle. And I see no great harm of allowing the 200 years, from 400 to 600, for this: So that I do think that in this Chapter we shortly revealed what should happen to the Church from about the year 400, or the space of 42 Months, or 1260 Years, the time of the Beast's Reign.

AND I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads, and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his head the name of blasphemy.

The place of John's present Residence was Patmos, which was an Island, ch. 1, v. 9. He was yet in a Vision, he thought he was upon the Sea-shore, either in Patmos, or elsewhere; b and saw a Beast rise up out of the Sea; that is, (as I should think) unexpectedly; for who would expect to see a Leopard rise from thence? c This Beast is denoted like the Dragon, ch. 12, 3. (The Beast is described with seven Crowns) by which we understand it to be in the Heathen Emperors of Rome; and we shall find, in v. 2, to answering Daniel's Vision of the four Monarchies, that I cannot but think the Roman Empire, after the time of Theodosius, are meant, several of which were Arians, as also were the Goths and Vandals (many of them) who from 400, invaded the Empire, and were not beaten out, till 554, little above 40 years before Boniface was confirmed in his Primacy. d The Arians denying the eternal Existence of Christ, as God, may be said to have the Names of Blasphemy upon them, or upon their Heads; but whether by the ten Heads be meant the ten sorts of Governments made use of in the Empire, or the ten Governments into which the Goths and Vandals divided the Empire, is not easy to determine, nor possibly much material. There are other Nations whose this Beast's form would have it to be the Heathen; but he is plainly distinguished, v. 2, and 4, from the Dragon: Some would have it to be the Turks, but we read of the worshipping of this Beast, which is what were not done to the Turks Emperors, who also began not till above the year 1500, (who indeed the Emperors began 500 years before) the Rome, which never was the Theodosius, is made the Seat of this Beast. Some would have it to be Idolatry it self; this was Greater his Notion; (see the Reasoning against it Mr.

Mr. Paul's Styphius Letter. Some would have it the Pagan Empire of Rome, but John never saw the first rise of that. This is a Beast that rose after the Dragon was cast down; which must be the Roman Empire under the Dominion of the Papists, in which respect only it is now one Beast again; for otherwise in civil respects it is divided into many crowned Heads, i. e. distinct, independent Kingdoms or Principalities.

2 And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, b, and his seat, and he gave authority k.

1. In his Vision of the Chaldeick, Persian, Greek, and Roman Shahs by which the World was successively ruled from his time to St. John's; and many years after had the first reprimanded to him by a Lion, for his Nobility and Fierceness. The second, by a Bear, for his Cruelty; the third, by a Leopard, for the fierceness of its Bulk, the swiftness of its Conquests, its strength, and the fourth, by a Beast (not named), and exceedingly terrible, that had great iron Teeth, that devoured, and brake in pieces, and brake round upon its Feet. This Beast is generally here described, which had several forms: John saw it first, under the Representation of a red Dragon, which signified that Emperor, while Papists, for 500 years after Christ, in which time the old Papists could prevail nothing against the Church. Then after a Rest to the Church of a few years, which ended with Theodosius about 380 or 400 (or he it under the form of a Dragon, ruled by Armen Emperors till near 600. This Beast had 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, Worship, or towards Men in that are consecrated to, and accepted of God, as the first-fruits were, being the only part of the World that are not profane.

* Psal. 32. 2. * Eph. 5. 27.

5 And * in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God.
 * Not that any liveth, and fineth not against God, but it is to be understood comparatively: they are without Fault, in comparison of the rest of the World; they have not in them the Guile of Hypocrites; they are sincere. Or, possibly by Guile, is here understood, a Lie. All idolaters are Liers, Rom. 1. 25. and idols are called Liers, Jer. 16. 19. Amos 4. 2. Mr. Mede expoundeth this Text by 2Pet. 2. 13. The words may more generally signify the foolishness of these Persons, in opposition to the wisdom of the Holy Spirit: Or more particularly their Freedom and Purity from Anti-christian Superstitions, and Idolatry.

6 And I saw another angel sit in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth; and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people.

* God having in a Vision shewed unto his Servant John the Reign and Rage of Antichrist, ch. 13. and in this Chapter the cure he would extend toward his Church for the Preservation of a godly Seed during his Reign, he now cometh by further Visions to instruct him in what should be done during Antichrist's Reign of 42 Months. 1. The Gospel should be preached. This I take to be the Substance of this Verse. This Angel comes to me to represent faithful Ministers Speed and Diligence to preach the Gospel in all parts of the World. It is called the everlasting Gospel, either with Reference to the time, as much as to the place, the old Gospel; or to the time to come, in being that Doctrine of Salvation, besides which there is nothing left, nor ever shall be revealed any other while the World endures, Acts 4. 12.

* Psal. 145. 6. * Abd. 14. 6. * Job. 17. 5.

7 Saying with a loud voice, Fear God; and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come: * and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

* These Angels, or Ministers of God, whether Civil or Ecclesiastical Witnesses, called against the Papal Idolatry, in worshipping Saints and Images, admonishing all Men to give divine Adoration only to the true and living God, who was the Creator of all things. The worshipping of Images began soon after Antichrist began to reign: We find it decreed in a Synod held at Laod. about 710, but it was established by a Synod at Councils, 712. In 723 it was again established by a Synod at Nice. By a Synod in Spain it was defended, Ann. 725, and the Emperor Leo Isaurus was excommunicated for opposing it: In 750, a Synod at Constantinople decreed for it against it: Another Synod held there 755, upon the Emperor Constantine Copronymus decreed against it: but two other Synods held in Bavaria, 765, 766, again decreed for it. In 786 the second Synod of Nice established it: since which time it hath continually increased amongst the Papists; but as from the first beginning of this Idolatry, it was opposed by five Emperors of Constantinople, so it hath all along been declaimed against by the faithful Ministers of Christ, preaching the everlasting Gospel, and calling upon Men to perform Divine Adoration only to him who made Heaven and Earth.

8 And there followed another angel, saying, * Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

* The Apostle is shewn, that other Messengers of God should come forth, during the Reign of Antichrist, that should declare his Ruine as certainly as if it were already effected. These words are taken from Isaiah 21. 9. Babylon is fallen, Babylon is fallen, and all the great Images of her Gods, be like to idols, and shall be broken down to the ground. So Jer. 51. 2. Babylon is like to idols, and shall be broken down. There is no doubt, but both the Prophet speaks of that Babylon into which the Jews were carried captive; but that Babylon was typical of another Babylon, called here the great City, and great Babylon, ch. 16. 19. 17. 5. & 18. 20. and the Apostle of Revelation, ch. 17. 5. There is neither, nor ever was any City in the World, to whom these things could agree, but to Rome, rightly enough called the Mother of Harlots, and the Queen of the Earth, chap. 17. 5, both in respect of carnal Fornication tolerated to make the Bishops of Rome a Revenue, and spiritual Whoredoms, which is Idolatry: called also Babylon & Egypt, ch. 11. 8. the former of which was famous for Idolatry, the latter for Idolatry and Oppression of God's People. The Ruine of old Babylon is denounced by the Prophet, Jer. 51. 2. because of her Idolatry in Image-worship, for which she was called Babylon as very wise as famous. The word denoted, Wrath (who is called in Revelation) yet those words were her destruction, saying, as we translate, Dan. 5. 2.

32. Job 20. 16. The LXX in those Verses use the same word that is here used, Synagoga for the Senate is [with the] synagoga of her Idolatry] intimating to us the venemous Condition of Rome Superstitious and Idolatrous, to induce Ignorant People to be in love with them, as Nations are with their Priests, or polluted Courts, to make Men in love with them. If we better approve of our Translation of the term Wraith, The Wife of the Wrath of her Fornication, signifieth her Fornication which brings Wrath upon them that join with her in it.

9 And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, * God learn his Servant John know, That during the Reign and Rage of Antichrist, as he would have Ministers of the Gospel that should preach the Truth, and mind Men to set themselves from idols, worshipping God alone; and others that should assist them the Wraith should go down, seduced should fall; so he would have others that should give warning to Men and Women of those dreadful Plagues that should come upon them that entered themselves in this great City, either worshipping the Beast after the Pagan manner, or the Image of the Beast, i. e. coming to the Ministry after the apostatized Popish Fashion, so that should either be faithful to this idolatrous Beast, or be a Soldier to fight for it. What those Judgments should be, God himself is to reveal. It is not a more severe Denunciation of Judgment in the words Beast of God, than in the words Wraith of God, which drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture, into the cup of his indignation. * Chap. 18. 6. * Chap. 19. 2. * Chap. 20. 2. * Chap. 19. 20.

10 The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture, into the cup of his indignation; * and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone, in the presence of his holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb.

* Those that do yield a Subjection to him, and profess his Faith, shall drink of the Wine of the Wrath of God; that is, shall feel the Severity of God's judicial Dispensations, which in Scripture are expressed by the Wine of his Wrath, Jer. 25. 16. See also Jer. 49. 12. Psalm 75. 16. 17. 18. either from the intoxicating quality of Wine, or the purifying quality of it, when mixed with Myrror, or other purifying things. * And here is to be said Wraith, which signifies their false feeling of the Effects of Divine Vengeance. * That is, in his Wrath he will be angry with the counterfeit of his Wrath, as to the Pain of it, is set out by Fire and Brimstone: Brimstone being a material in which Fire holds longest to torment any flesh two thousand years.

11 And the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: * and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name.

* That is, their Torments shall be everlasting, as well as not ceasing, and causing the most acute Pain. * This is the same thing in other words: their Torments shall be such as shall give them no rest at any time. 5. The Sense of these two Verses, is no more than this. That all idolaters shall undergo the Vengeance of God in this Life, and at last shall be shown to Hell; not only such as worship the Beast, committing heinous Idolatry, worshipping Stocks and Stones, and Devils, in the term of their Worshipping, but such as worship the Image of the Beast by us Anti-christ, worshipping of Angels and Saints, or their Images. From hence an olive Answer may be given to that Question: Whether a Man can be saved in that which at this day is called the Roman Catholic Religion? If they either worship the Beast, or the Image of the Beast, they cannot: whether they do, or no, let the Reader judge from what hath been before said.

12 * Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.

* God having in the former Chapter shewn his Servant John the Reign and Rage of Antichrist in his Wrath, and in this Chapter, what he will do to the end both of him, and all his Adherents. Here cometh forth telling him, This is a Period of time wherein, the Fasting of his Holy Ones will be tried; both in waiting for their Deliverance, and also in their patient waiting Antichrist's Oppression and Tyranny. And here will be the last of Men, whether they stand to the Faith of Christ, and Obedience of God's Commandments, by committing no, or keeping many sins (sinful) Lives: Those that come out of her, will then bear the third mark, in their holy and obedient Communion, with whom they are.

13 And I heard a voice from heaven, saying, * Come up here, I will shew thee the things which shall come to pass hereafter. * And I saw, and behold, a white cloud, and upon the cloud sat one, like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

* In this Vision, the one of an Harlot, the other of a Vintage, is no great Difficulty in determining, that they both signify the judicial Dispensations of God, that he would bring upon the World, or some part of it; the latter of which signifies the greater than the former, the more, and the more terrible, which they signify God's general Judgment in the 15th, and 16th, and belongs to the Wraith which we read of. That which the latter signifies is the Judgment in the 17th, and 18th, and belongs to the Wraith which we read of. That which the latter signifies is the Judgment in the 17th, and 18th, and belongs to the Wraith which we read of. That which the latter signifies is the Judgment in the 17th, and 18th, and belongs to the Wraith which we read of.

* These words denote the Excellency of the following Saying, it is a Voice from Heaven, therefore worthy of our Attention. John is commanded to write it to be kept in memory for the Comfort and Encouragement of God's People, who might be discouraged at the hearing of those calamitous times which they were like to meet with, during the Reign of Antichrist, in which many of them were like to be put to death. If this Phrase of dying in the Lord, is applicable to any Persons that die united to Christ by a true and lively Faith; all such die in the Lord. But if we consider the scriptural Usage of it, it seems rather to signify Martyrs, such as die for the Lord; for so often in Scripture signifies, for Him. 16. 28. 12. 1. Pet. 4. 14. 18. Rec. If any Christ shall be put to death for Adherence to Christ, they shall be no Losers; for they shall be blessed, and that not only upon the account of that Glory into which they shall pass, but upon the account of that Rest which their Death will give them from the Troubles of the calamitous times before, or hereafter mentioned. * There is some little difference amongst Interpreters about the Sense of this Particular: certain it is, it is not to be understood of the time following this Revelation exclusively, as to those who before died to Christ, for they also were blessed, they also rested from their Labours, &c. yet the Particle etiam to refer to the time to come. The Emphasis of the Particle seems to be to obviate the Doubts of those who should happen to deny during Antichrist's Rage, Examples of them by the Hands of Pagans, and bowed Enemies of the Gospel, but of such as should call themselves Christians, and yet be false, and die for the Lord, and are blessed, and shall be blessed. The Spirit of Truth affirms it. 1. They shall be at rest from the Troubles of this Life, & their good Deaths, and patient Sufferings shall follow them as Witnesses for them, before the Judge of the quick and the dead.

14 And I looked, and behold, a white cloud, and upon the cloud sat one, like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

* In this Vision, the one of an Harlot, the other of a Vintage, is no great Difficulty in determining, that they both signify the judicial Dispensations of God, that he would bring upon the World, or some part of it; the latter of which signifies the greater than the former, the more, and the more terrible, which they signify God's general Judgment in the 15th, and 16th, and belongs to the Wraith which we read of. 15 And the angel that saw these things, testified that these things should come to pass. * And I heard a voice from heaven, saying, * Come up here, I will shew thee the things which shall come to pass hereafter. * And I saw, and behold, a white cloud, and upon the cloud sat one, like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

16 And he that sat on the cloud, thrust in his sickle on the earth, and the earth was reaped.

* According to the above-mentioned different Notion of the Harvest, there is amongst them a different Interpretation of this Verse; some interpreting it of God's calling in the Jews, or in the Gentiles, by the Preaching of the Gospel; others of his Vengeance upon Antichrist and his adherents more fully expressed, ch. 14. 15. and 16.

17 And another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle.

* This Angel, some will have to be some Instrument God would make use of to cut down Antichrist; Others would have it to be the Word of God in the Mouth of his Ministers, which, Heb. 4. 12. is sharper than a two-edged Sword, having to the dividing Asclepi of Soul and Spirit; and thus they judge this Angel to be the same with the Rider upon the white Horse, chap. 19. out of whose Mouth went a Harp Sword, &c.

18 And another angel came out from the altar, where he had power over fire; and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, * Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe.

* The Place of Sacrifices and Burn-offerings, which had Permission to execute God's Judgments compared to fire, Psalm 11. 6. and 21. 9. and so. 3. Or, learned Dr. Mede expounds this Altar, of a Readjust for Confession, as well as for Diffraction, and thinks the first is here, rather intended: the last words of this next Verse incline me to judge otherwise.

16 And he that sat on the cloud, thrust in his sickle on the earth, and the earth was reaped.

* According to the above-mentioned different Notion of the Harvest, there is amongst them a different Interpretation of this Verse; some interpreting it of God's calling in the Jews, or in the Gentiles, by the Preaching of the Gospel; others of his Vengeance upon Antichrist and his adherents more fully expressed, ch. 14. 15. and 16.

19 And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great wine-press of the wrath of God.

* Dr. Mede thinks the Sense of this, The Men were pressed in Confession upon the Harp; Conviction of Christ's powerful Ministers, with sorrow for their Sins, and to feel the Wrath of God in them. But Mr. Mede, with whom (as to the Sense of this Text) I rather agree, tells us, that the trampling of the Vintage, a parabolical Scripture, signifies a crush, bruise, and daily Slaughter; he thinks that it is the same Slaughter mentioned, ch. 19. 9. 19. 20. 21. as to which, v. 15, much the same Metaphor is used, he translates the Wine-press of the Plow and the Wid of Almighty God.

20 And the wine-press was trodden with the city, and blood came out of the wine-press, even unto the horse-bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.

* By the City, Dr. Mede thinks Babylon; he here means, and that the meaning is, That the powerful Convictions of the Word before-mentioned, shall not reach Babylon, the Romish Harlotry and Policy, as being hardened against any such thing. But Mr. Mede and others think, that the City of Babylon is here meant, or the holy Land, which comprehends exactly 1600 Furlongs, that is, 200 British Miles, or 160 German Miles. But what that place shall be, where this Slaughter shall be, is a great Secret. * It is plain, it shall be a great Slaughter, by the depth of the blood mentioned, and the length of the Ground which it should to the depth overflow. It is very probable, that great Babel is meant, mentioned ch. 19. 20. in the place called Armageddon, upon the pouring out of the fifth Vial, ch. 16. 16. In so difficult a business nothing can be positively determined.

CHAP. XV.

AND I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous; seven angels bearing the seven last plagues; for in them is filled up the wrath of God.

* That is, a Representation which appeared to John great and wonderful. * Ministers of God, used by him in the Dispensations of his Providence, & having a Commission to execute the seven last Judgments of God, by which he designed to destroy Antichrist, & for by them the Wrath of God was to be executed upon him to the uttermost.

2 And I saw as it were a sea of glass, mingled with fire; and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, standing on the sea of glass; * having the harps of God h.

* Chap. 5. 8. & 14. 2. This Sea of Glass (as our learned Athenians hath either an Allusion to the Sea of Glass like unto Christ, reflected upon by the Lamps of Fire burning before the Throne, ch. 4. 5, 6, or to the Waters of the Red-Sea congealed (while the Ishtarim passed) reflected upon by the Pillar of Fire. Others make it the Church gathered out of all Nations, fide to be of Glass, because of its Splendor and Glory. Others make it to signify the World, which is laid to be of Glass, to let us understand, God hath through it, as the place of the glorified Saints, who had overcome all Temptations to Idolatry, either from Pagan (which were the best) or from Antichrist and his Party (which are called the Image of the Beast) and had avoided all kind of Compromise with them in Profession of the Religion which he would endeavor to impose upon them. * Harps of God signify either the most excellent Harps, or holy Harps. Mr. Faber faith well, they signify Hearts tempered with Joy, and Love, and a grateful Sense of the Mercies of God towards them.

And they sing the Song of Moses the servant of God; and the Song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty! * just and true are thy ways, thou King of Saints m.

* Psal. 111. & 139. 14. Chap. 16. 7. The Song which Moses sang upon God's Delivery of the Israelites from the Danger of Pharaoh, which we have, Exod. 15. 1, &c. not that they sang those words, but to the same sense. * A Song to the Honour of Christ, to the same sense, that Moses sang, and upon a much like occasion. Admiring the greatness and marvellousness of what God had done in their Deliverance, and giving him the glory of his Almighty Power, acknowledging that all the Acts of his Providence were both just (God, in them, giving to every one their due) and true, by them but justifying his Promises and Threatenings. These words are taken out of Psal. 145. 17.

* Jer. 10. 7. & 16. 22. * Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only are holy n: for all nations shall come and worship before thee p; for judgments are made manifest q.

* Acknowledging, that for this God delivered to be worshipped and served by all the World: * because of his Holiness, much seen in the Justice and Truth of his ways; p declaring their Faith and Hope that now all Nations should own and acknowledge Christ, and be subject unto him. q Now that his Judgments upon Antichrist, and his Justice in all his Dispensations, was made so evident to the World.

* And after that I looked, and behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened r.

* Chap. 11. 19. Num. 1. 50. Here is a plain Allusion to the Jewish Tabernacle or Temple, in which was the holy Place, and the Holy of Holies; into the latter the High-Priest only entered. There were kept in the Ark the two Tables of God's Law, given to every one of the Israelites of God. From this Tabernacle of Testimony proceeded God's Oracles; there God gave Answers from the Mercy-seat, and therefore in the Book of Kings it is called the Oracle. The Sense fore put upon this, is, That God here shewed unto his Prophets the Liberty that should be, after the down-fall of Antichrist, to preach the Gospel. But in this sense it must be an Anticipation of what orderly should have come in after the pouring out of the Vials: I had rather understand it of God's being now about to give out an Answer to his People's Prayers for a Deliverance from the Tyranny of Antichrist; as the place called the Oracle in the Jewish Temple was opened when the High-Priest had been inquiring of God, to give an account of the Answer he had.

* 6 And the seven angels f came out of the temple r, having the seven plagues a, clothed in pure and white linen; * and having their breasts girded with golden girdles n.

* Chap. 1. 13. The seven Ministers of God's Vengeance on Antichrist, to whom the Vials were given. * That is, out of the Tabernacle of the Testimony; for in Moses his Tabernacle there was only this inward Court for the Priests, (the People worshipped without) They came (as the High-Priest was wont) out of the Oracle to bring God's Answer to all his Saints Prayers. The Answer was seven Plagues, that is, that God had employed them to bring seven Plagues successively upon the Antichristian Party, and all the Enemies of his Church, till by them they should be consumed. * These Angels came in the Habit of High-Priests, when they went in to inquire of God, or came out with an Answer from God.

* 7 And one of the four beasts x gave unto the seven angels y, seven golden vials full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever z. * One of those four Beasts round about the Throne, ch. 4. 6. y The seven Angels mentioned, z. 6. x A Vial is a plain Doe or Glass with a wide Mouth, used to drink in; they were full of the Wrath of God who liveth for ever. The meaning is no more than that the seven Angels before-mentioned, were commissioned from God, by one Plague after another, to bring Antichrist to his ruin.

* 8 And * the temple a was filled with smoke * Exod. 40. 34. b from the glory of God, and from his power c; and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled d.

* That the Church (Temple most ordinarily signified in this Book.) b By Smoke, doubtless, is meant Contusions and Troubles, c caused by God's glorious Manifestation of his Power, in bringing Antichrist to ruin, who had so twisted his Interest with that of the Civil Kingdom in several Kingdoms, that there was no rooting him out, without a terrible shaking of all those parts of the Earth where he set his Foot, d so as no part of the Church could be left until God had fulfilled his Ruine by these Plagues: nor must any quiet ease of the Church be expected, until this great Work be effected.

CHAP. XVI.

God having shewed unto his Servant John in the Vision of the first six Seals, the fate of the Church under the Pagan Emperors of Rome, ch. 5, 6, and its Fate under Antichrist, in the Vision of the six first Trumpets, under the seventh Seal, ch. 8, 9, and diverted him by the Vision of the little Book, opened, ch. 10, and by the Consents of it, ch. 12, 13, 14, and inspired him concerning the Affairs of the Church, during all the time of the Reign of the Dragon and Antichrist, who was the Image of the Dragon, comes now to instruct him particularly, how and by what means he would ruin Antichrist, and restore Peace to his Church.

* 1 AND I heard a great voice out of the temple a, saying to the seven angels, Go your ways, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth b.

* Either out of the Church Triumphant, Christ the Head of it, commanding the Executioners of his Justice to go and do their Office: Or out of the Church-Militant, by their Prayers soliciting God to execute Vengeance upon the Beast. * All the Beast's Territories, or the several Parts of his Kingdom, are expressed in this Chapter, under the Notions of the Earth, the Sea, the Rivers, and Fountains, the Sun, and the Stars of the Night. The first Command to the Executioners of God's Justice, is, to pour out his Wrath on the Earth. By the Earth, Parus understands some parts of the Earth's other parts, the common People's others, the Roman Empire; but others, considering the Earth as the several part of the Universe, say, thou by the Earth is meant, the People's Cling, the Body of the Papacy; and I am very much inclined to judge, that the most probable sense of it, not only because there is little of Heaven in them, and their whole Frame and Model is the Product of earthly Policy, but because Experience hath told us, that the Pope here received his first Wound, in the Diminution of their Power, and Authority, and a Contempt of them. God hath used many Instruments to pour out this Vial, even so many (whether Priests or Ministers) as he hath made use of to root out Monks and Abbots, and to expose Anti-Christ to Scorn and Contempt. Mr. Mede seemeth to be of another mind, thinking, that by Earth is meant the Commonalty of the People, whose Defection from the Pope was his first Plague: but that which is to be understood by the Earth, being the affected part of Antichrist, I cannot agree with that learned Man; for tho the Beast suffered by the Defection of the Commonalty, yet I cannot fee how those that made the Defection, suffered at all by it.

* 2 And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the earth; and * there fell a noisome and grievous pour upon the men f which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image g.

* There is a plain Allusion to the Plagues which God brought upon Pharaoh King of Egypt for his Opposition of his anointed Moses; God hereby shewing us, that he would beat this Anti-Christ by his Persecutions of his Gospel-Churches, as he dealt by Pharaoh; as he turned the Egyptian Rivers into Blood, so as the Fifth died, and the Waters stunk, Exod. 7.

so, and as he plagued the Egyptians with Blights and Blows, Exod. 9. 5, so he would plague the Papacy by proportionable Judgments, until, as Pharaoh with his whole Party was at last drowned in the Red-Sea, so all the Antichristian Party shall be rooted out. Here are two of the Egyptian Plagues mentioned, viz. that of Blights breaching out in Storms. What is meant by this grievous Storm, I must needs say I find not to understand, but think Dr. Mede speaks very probably, interpreting it of Tribulation and Vexation, which the Popish Party should have upon the first Prospect of their Kingdom's going down; it being of the Nature of Storms, to vex and disturb those that are affected with them, so as they are very uneasie so long as they are affected with them. And indeed, I find many Interpreters agree in this Notion.

* 3 And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea d, and it * became as the blood of a dead man e: and every living soul died in the sea f.

* This answered the first Plague upon Pharaoh, Exod. 7. 20. All the Waters that were in the River, were turned to Blood; and the Fish that were in the River, died. By the Sea, Dr. Mede understands the Justification and Domination of the Papacy, wherein he agrees with Mr. Mede. I rather agree with those who understand the whole System of the Popish Rites and Ceremonies, their Doctrines of Indulgences and Purgatory, &c. God shewed his Power, and instructed us, that he will bring the Papacy to ruin, first by bringing his Clings, (which are the Earth upon which he stands) into Scorn and Contempt; discovering their Frauds and Cheats. * By discovering the Folly and Vanity of their Principles, and Antichrist confounding only in vain Show, and idle Rites and Ceremonies, without any regard to that Religion which is spiritual, and pure, and undisturbed before God; discovering the cheat of their Confessions and Absolutions, their Masses, Pardons, and Indulgences; making them appear to be unlawful, unprofitable, and damnable. * Dr. Mede says, Christians could not live in the Communion of their Church, but it must be damnable to those who keep in the Communion of it.

* 4 And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of waters g, and they became blood h.

* Mr. Mede and Dr. Mede both agree in interpreting this of the Jews and other Popish Rites. * Dr. Mede has made for the Execution of them in England in the time of Q. Elizabeth, not excluding those civil Powers, which are the Upholders and Maintainers of Antichrist, as the Spaniards, who also within their last 100 years, had had their Rites, and given him to drink both in 1588, and in the Low-Countries; it seemeth, a little hard to interpret a Prophecy relating to the whole Church, by what is done in so small a part of it. We know in what extent the Emperors are at this day, both in the Empire, and in Spain, and in France, and Prussia, from whence they sometimes were expelled. * We have, indeed, Laws against them in England, but principally relating to those of them, who, being native Subjects of England, have apostatized. So as I had rather think this Vial is not yet poured out, or that Interpret mislike the meaning of these Fountains and Rivers, than agree with them in that Interpretation of this Prophecy, I am much disposed to believe that we are not further than the pouring out of the second Vial. God, indeed, hath made the Popish Clings conceivable enough, and hath vexed and enragged them sufficiently. He hath also made their Strained Religion as contemptible to, and justly abhorred by a great part of the Christian World; but how far he hath proceeded towards the Ruine of Antichrist, I do not understand.

* 5 And I heard the angel of the waters say i, Thou art righteous, O Lord, which art thus; and shall be, because thou hast judged thus k.

* I Allude to this Verse to his crying the Honour and Glory that shall be given unto God, when he shall have accomplished his great Work in destroying those who feed, and uphold, and maintain the Beast, partly by those Instruments he shall use in that Work, expressed here by the Angel of the Waters, partly from others. * Acknowledging the Lord's Justice and Righteousness in such Destruction.

* 6 For * they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; for they are worthy l.

* Because of their Persecutions of, and cruelty towards God's faithful Ministers and People, who rendered the spilling of their Blood but a condign Punishment fired to their Sin.

* 7 And I heard another out of the altar say, yea, even * so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments n.

* Others also, called Members of the Church Triumphant or Militant, or both, shall in this Day give Glory to God, as a God of Power, able to do such things as of Righteousness, thus giving these bloody Men their due; and of Thou, thus fulfilling both his Promises to his People, and his Threatenings against his Enemies. Dr. Mede is well wiser to determine who shall thus rejoice, than the time when this Joy shall be. This certainly is God's Work, but in fin, now doing, but not done.

* 8 And the fourth angel poured out his vial upon the sun o; and power was given unto him to scorch men with fire p.

* Here we have no History to guide us in the Government of our Fancies and Judgments; but their Opinion seems most probable to me, who, by the Sun, understand some great Prince or Potentate, or the whole civil Power in the Antichristian Ministry; suppose the Spaniard, or the Empire. It seems to signify either some Destruction of such civil Powers, or some Defection of them from their Vapour; which will vex and irritate Antichrist and his Party, as if they were scorched with Fire. This I look upon as much more probable than that which interpret it of the natural Sun, or the World of God.

* 9 And men were * scorched with great heat q; and * blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues r; and they repented not to give him glory s.

* What the damned do in Hell, where the Wrath of God is poured out upon Men to the utmost; it did Reprobates do upon Earth, they are scorched with great Heat, the Vengeance of God cometh upon them; they are mad and enraged, and speak evil of a just, and righteous God, who brings such Vengeance on them; they blaspheme the name of their Sins, and upon any Thoughts of turning to God, confessing their Sins, and giving him Glory. This will be the Uplife of God's latter Judgments upon the Papacy: They will be mad at them, and rage, and reproach God's Justice; but never as hard-hearted Generations given over to Ruine, that will never be sensible that their Judgments come upon them for their Idolatries and Superstitions, and for their Persecutions, and the shedding the Blood of God's Holy Ones; not that all adhering to that Church will be so (many, probably, will convert, and be brought to acknowledge the Truth); but there will be a great Army of them, whom nothing but the Wrath of God ever come upon them in the bottomless Pit to the utmost, will ever make sensible that they have done much, being given up to Delusion, to Blindness, and to Hard Heart, and to Rebelle Judgments.

* 10 And the fifth angel z poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast t; and his kingdom was full of darkness u; and they gnawed their tongues for pain v.

* The fifth of the seven Angels mentioned, 2, 1, by which, as was said, is to be understood the fifth which God will use gradually to destroy the Papacy. The fifth Rank of Persons, whom God will employ in the Execution of this Purge, by his Acts of Providence, as I shall express, God's Wrath upon the City of Rome & hij, wholly destroying the Papacy in their Power. * Upon which this whole Kingdom shall be full of the Darkness of Misery, Trouble, and Affliction (Darkness was one of the Plagues of Egypt.) * And they shall be full of Calamities, like Men in a moment Pain, that they bite their own Tongues for Pain. When this shall be God's known; I think, and Experience hath proved, that they were much too lazy in their Speculations, that prophesied it should be 1545, or 1550, or 1566. For my own part, I do not believe it will be before 1866, or betwixt that and the year 1900. The Determination of it depends upon the right fixing of the Epoch, or beginning of the 42 Months, or 1260 prophetic Days, which I think most probably fixed upon the year 608 or (according to Mr. Stephens his Notion) 666, which, according to the Julian Account, is the same (See the Note on ch. 13. 18.)

* 11 And * blasphemed the God of heaven, w, because of their pains, and their torments, and repented not of their deeds y.

* This is the same that was said, 2, of a former Party belonging to the Beast, and death by fighting; that there will be found the same Vine of Blasphemy of Antichrist, Exod. 10. 1, and Reprobates of Sin running through that whole Party, until they be wholly ruined.

* 12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates z; and the water thereof was dried up a; that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared b.

* Upon the Tribal Egypt, See the Note on ch. 6. 10. These Forces, Power, might, shall be destroyed.

* How a way may be prepared for the Conquest of the East. This I find to be the sense of the prophetic and judicious Interpreters of this mysterious Book, amongst whom I count Mr. Mede, Dr. Mede, Mr. Parus, Mr. Turretin, &c. It will be reasonable to say, concerning Antichrist, to the from Hell, (the word signifies both.) * And shall certainly be destroyed. * But before he goes into Perdition he shall be cleared the World, that the generality of the People (shall wonder at the Beast (see chap. 13. 8.) seeing false who are chosen of God to Eternal Salvation; the 144000 mentioned chap. 14. 1. conceive that which hath made them merciful to divide in their Nations about this Beast, because those words, and yet it is, are not added in the beginning of the Verse, which being understood, there appears no difficulty considerable; for it is certain the Roman Empire was before Christ, and continued Pagani till 510. When was not Pagan but Christian, yet after some years was again as idolatrous and bloody against Christians, as the old Pagan Empire was; especially when swallowed up by the Pope, the Beast with two Horns like a Lamb. This is the Beast with seven Heads and ten Horns, chap. 13. 2.

9 And here is the mind which hath wisdom. * The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth.

* That is, here is that which requires a Mind endued with Spiritual Wisdom. * The seven Heads, which he saw the Beast with, signified seven Mountains or Hills upon which Rome is situated, they were named before (see the Notes on v. 9.) They tell us now Rome is situated in the Apennine: Rome Wastevain is 15, that in St. John's time it was situated upon them, and they are now within the compass of Rome.

10 And there are seven kings, five are fallen, g and one is h, and the other is not yet come, and when he cometh he must continue a short space k.

* The seven Heads do not only signify seven Hills or Mountains, but also seven Kings, that is (according to the best Interpretation I meet with) seven first of Christians which ruled Rome (the term Kings, in Scripture signifying Rulers, whether the Government was in Single Persons, or more, as Dan. 33. 5. Rome was governed, 1. By Kings; 2. By Cleists; 3. Princes; 4. Dominions; 5. Dilectus; 6. Emperors that were Pagans; 7. Emperors that were Christians. * Five of these were fallen, extinguished before John's time, the Government by Kings, Cleists, Tribunes, Dominions, Dilectus. * The Government by Pagan Emperors was at that time in being. * The Government by Cleists as Emperors was not yet in being and when it came, it held but a little time before the Bishops of Rome wrested the Government of Italy out of their hands: This is the sense the most probable Interpretation of this difficult Verse.

11 And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth m, and is of the seven n, and goeth into perdition o.

* This made the eighth (succession of Governments in the Roman Empire. * This was of the seventh Head, for although this was the eighth Government in order, as we have counted them; yet one of these, viz. the seventh, (which was that of true Christian Emperors) must not be counted as one of the seven Heads, which were all idolatrous: So though this was the eighth Government, yet he was one of the seven Heads, i. e. idolatrous Governments, and so to be destroyed as they were.

12 And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet, but receive power as kings one hour with the beast.

* Possibly by ten Kings here are not meant Monarchs but Governments, g which were not in being in John's time, not in many years after. * But should, during some time of the Beast's Reign, have power with the Beast, employing their power with him, to establish his idolatry. But who these Ten Monarchs be, or what these Ten Governments are, I must confess my self at a loss to determine: It is plain they should be 1. Such as should be contemporaneous with the Reign of the Beast, 2. Such as employed their power in conjunction with him. 3. Such as should afterwards be instruments to ruin the Papacy, v. 16, 17. The Beast's Reign being 1260 years, there hath been, and will be such a variety of Princes and Governments, as it is very probable that they shall be. But their being contemporaneous with the Beast, makes me think it cannot be understood of any that were in the World before the year 600, when the Beast's Reign began (for the Ministry of Isaias was working, and the Image of the Beast was making long before); as also that the Ten Barbarous Nations that afflicted him from 1400 till near 600 could not be others, being all before Antichrist: one to Kings, not did they ever have any great love or hatred to the Papacy: sometimes serving, sometimes opposing him, as Kings that respect Civil Interests. I am very inclinable to think the Kingdom to concern those Kings near the end of Antichrist's Reign, who though for a while they serve the Papacy, yet shall at last be instruments to ruin him; but who they are shall do so, or when it shall be I cannot determine.

13 These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength to the beast.

* They shall all be Papists, and for a while shall employ all their Power and Strength to uphold the Papist Religion.

14 * These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them, for he is Lord of Lords, and King of Kings, and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful u.

* These Ten Kings shall at a while oppose themselves to the Gospel, taking part with Antichrist. * But Christ shall overcome them by the Power of his Gospel, or those of them that way, others shall will, not be converted shall be confounded; some way, or other, brought to ruin. For he that comes above others, and knows how to put forth his power, his purpose is to save those whom he shall make up of this work shall be Chosen Persons, and faithful in discharge of the Trust committed to them.

15 And he saith unto me, The waters which thou sawest where the whore sitteth, are people, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues, * For, for the great Whore, sitting upon seven Mountains, v. 9. and upon many Waters, v. 12. these signify her Dominion and Jurisdiction over many People.

16 And the ten horns, which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire x.

* See v. 13. and v. 12. The ten Kings, which shall apostatize from the Papacy, and be great Instruments of God to ruin it. When we see some other Kingdoms now in Valitude to the Pope, do so much as had been done in England and Scotland, and Spain, and some other places, we may possibly understand this Prophecy better than we yet do.

17 For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to agree and give their kingdom to the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled y.

* This is, what he hath determined he will do; not what he commands Men to do, or approves their doing of his permissive Will. * For God put Malice against himself and his Son into the hearts of men, which is the cause of many afflicting the Beast. * Now shall they do this any longer than till the 42 months be expired, which he by his word hath declared, he hath allowed to these mingled Gentiles, to read down the outward Court: But till that time be expired, these Kingdoms will give to their power to the Beast, whom about the expiration of that time they shall hate, and help to destroy.

18 And the woman which thou sawest, * is that great city, which reigneth over the Kings of the earth z.

* See v. 3. * That is, figurative that great City, see v. 3. Babylon the great. * A Commanding and punishing them as the plebs. To what person or power that either now is, or ever was upon the Earth, in this applicable, but to the Pope who makes Emperors hold his Scepter, sends his Legates Princes to execute, Excommunicates them, and subdues their Subjects, and arms them against them if they resist: So that if the Pope sits upon seven Hills, or Rome be built upon them; if the Papacy hath altered the Indulgences of the Earth to Idolatry; if he be instrumental the bridge image of the old Pagan Idolatry; if to her many Princes have given their Power and Strength; if the respect over the Kings of the Earth; and these things be applicable to no other Person or Government; there is no more doubt, whether the Pope be Antichrist, and Rome mystical Babylon which shall certainly be destroyed for her idolatry and shedding the Blood of God's Holy Ones; when there is of what we have, chap. 11. 2. That this Book contains the Revelation of John Christ to Jesus unto his Servants, things which must shortly come to pass, which he said and testified by his Angel, to his Servant John, who hath heard of the Word of God, and of the Testimony of John Christ, and of all things that he saw.

CHAP. XVIII.

AND after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power, and the earth was lightened with his glory.

* It is a matter of no great moment, whether by this Angel we understand Christ, or a Created Angel; the description applied to Christ, and may agree to a created Angel, To Whom God had given Power and Authority to to declare the Ruine of Babylon; and had communicated to him a great Glory: And to his Splendor and Greatness, whose Messenger he was.

2 And he cried mightily, with a strong voice, saying, * Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and of all cage of every unclean and hateful bird a.

* Whoever was meant by the Angel, v. 1. whose John saw his Splendor was so great, warning to the whole Church (therefore he crieth with a strong voice.) * That Rome the great City, the Mother of spiritual Harlots, should fall. This Angel was a Prophet, and the Messenger of him who calls the things that are not, as if they were; and therefore he speaks in a Divine Prophetic style: The Prophets (ordinarily) speaking of things to come, as past, or present, to denote the certain certainty of them, and doubting their power to assure us of; for this, Isa. 40. 5. is expounded by Isa. 40. 6. We read of this Angel, Isa. 40. 6. It is ordinary with Prophets to repeat the same things, and it is done as the Children of David, and the Tyrians this Isaiah. Both Isaiah and Jeremiah declared more than one Sermon in certain approaching ruin. These verses are taken upon Isa. 21. 9. where the word fallen is doubled, as here. They are found also, Isa. 21. 8. God here explains what he said in Isa. 21. 9. The words are such as make him signify a final Fall, or Apostasy; and what is here, is true of it that they; Isa. 21 in Scripture being ordinarily called Devils; but they seem rather to be understood of a Final Fall, for such is that spoken of, Isa. 21. 9. after which it should become an Edification of David, and the Tyrians Babylon. See the like picture of literal Babylon, Isa. 13. 19. 20, 21. wild Beasts, and hateful Birds usually frequenting desolate places.

3 For all nations * have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the Kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies b.

* That is, her Fornication which have brought this Wrath upon her. * She hath not only her self committed Idolatry, but allured others to it, teaching them to break the Commandments of God, and hath influenced Princes to establish, and propagate, and to uphold, and maintain; and all sorts of Men have been bewitched by her, growing rich by her Abundance, and being drawn into her Idolatry.

4 And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, * Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues: * For a Command from God. * These are the words of God by his Prophet, Isa. 50. 8. and Isa. 61. 6. calling to his People, that the years of their Captivity being now expired, and they having a Liberty to go back to Jerusalem, they would no longer linger in Babylon, nor partake of her Sins; for God was about to destroy that place; and if they were found in it, they would be in danger of being destroyed with it, especially if they were found Partakers of her Sins. But they are also a general Warning to all to leave her of any Fellowship with idolaters; and to the Apostle apply part of these words, 2 Cor. 6. 17. Here they are applied to mystical Babylon, which is Rome Antichristian. God calls to all that either love him, or their own Souls, to forsake the Communion of it; for while they continue in it, they must partake of its Sins, Isa. 57. 17. by paying, at his Command, a Divine Homage to Satan and Angels, to the Virgin Mary, to Images and Statues; nay, to a piece of Baker's Bread; and doing so, they will be involved in her Plagues. This Text looks terribly upon those who apostatize to this Idolatry; and instead of coming out of it in obedience to the Command of God, being come out, go in again, and that not by Compulsion, but out of choice, and voluntarily.

5 For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities c.

* That is, the cry of her Sins; according to what is said of Sodom (one of the Types of Antichrist) Gen. 18. 20. * The time is come when will punish her for her Idolatry, and Perfection, and all the abominable things done, and committed by her.

6 * Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double, according to her works: to in the cup which she hath filled, fill to her double d.

* This Verse founded in Isa. 40. 6. as if God had rewarded the Ruine of the Papacy by effecting by some Prophets and some of those whom they had persecuted; if not some of their Persons, yet some of the same Faith.

7 How much the hath glorified her self, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for the faith in her heart, * I fit a * Isa. 47. 7. Queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow.

* This speaks such much; That when ever God's time cometh for the Ruine of the Papacy, the Condition of all that Party shall appear as miserable, as it appears now splendid and happy. * And one great reason of this is great Antichrist, which will be the False, Hypocritical, and Stupidity of that Faction, much after the rate of old Babylon, Isa. 47. 8. old Babylon thought it self invulnerable; and new mystical Babylon thinks her self invulnerable and impregnable too; the only Church (if we will believe her) against whom the Gates of Hell shall not prevail.

8 Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burnt with fire; for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her e.

* As was threatened to old Babylon, Isa. 47. 9. In one day, that is, in a short time. * All manner of Judgments, till she be fully consumed. * For the hath to do with a strong Lord; she thinks the hath secured her self from Man, by interceding Kings and Princes in her Quarrels; but it is the Lord that judgeth her, and she will find him strong enough to accomplish his Word upon her.

9 And the Kings of the earth, who have committed fornication, and lived deliciously with her, shall bewail her, and lament for her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning f.

* Nor all of them, for some of them shall help to burn her, Isa. 47. 13. * But such as God had left to their Hardness of Heart, that they shall live in her Fellowship and Communion: Or, if others also, it shall proceed from their Humanity, not being able to see so splendid a City as that of Rome, ruined, and so many ruined as will perish by her Fall, without the mourning of their kinsfolk by some Ignis Ignis and Commercium.

10 Standing afar off for fear of her torment, saying, * Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city! for in one hour is thy judgment come g.

* As well as they loved her, they will not come nigh her in the time of her Torment: the Fire will be too hot for them; they will only stand aloof off, and pierce her. That to groans, and heavy City should be so suddenly ruined; such a gay and splendid Church, so politically founded and put together, should be in a sudden broke to pieces.

11 And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her, for no man buyeth her merchandise any more h.

* As the Merchants, Ezek. 27. 27. lamented for Tyre that they could buy and trade no more there, because all the Trade thereof was destroyed: So these Antichristian Merchants, that were wont to trade with Rome for Indulgences, and Pardons, and Dispensations, and Faculties, for Cardinals, Caps, and Bishopricks, and Prebendaries, and other Church-Preferments, shall lament when the Papacy falls; for there will be no more such Merchandise to be bought or sold there.

12 The merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stone, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all things of ivory, and all manner vessels of ivory, and of all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and of iron, and marble,

13 And cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and all slaves, and souls of men.

14 And the fruits that thy soul lusted after, are departed from thee, and all things which were dainty and goodly, are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all i.

* Here is a large Enumeration of several sorts of Wares, such as were most precious, Gold, Silver, Precious Stones: such as were most useful for Ornament, Iron, Pearls, Silk, Scarlet; most gratifying the exterior Senses, Spice, Wine, Oils, Ointments, &c. most necessary, Beasts, Sheep, Horses, Chariots; all which, as is prophesied, shall depart from Rome; such, whatever the King, which shall draw him into her Idolatrous Communion: All their Idols and Images, Cardinals, Caps, Prebends, &c. all their Preferments and Dignities, whatever they loved the Lusts of the Eye, the Lust of the Flesh, or the Pride of Life; whatever their own carnal and ambitious Minds, or the carnal and ambitious Dignities of others did seek her Communion: they shall all perish, and she be despoiled of them. * It is very remarkable, that here is one piece of Merchandise to be had no where but at Rome, viz.

LORD OF LORDS r.

r The same Name as in chap. 17. 14. 1 Tim. 6. 15. (See the Notes on those two Texts) denoting the Sovereign Power and Authority which he had. This he always had; but he now comes forth openly to manifest it; therefore this Name is said to be written upon his Vesture, and upon his Thigh, that all might take notice of it.

17. And I saw an Angel standing in the sun, and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that flie in the midst of heaven ꝑ, Come, and gather your selves together to the supper of the great God ꝑ.

¶ The best Conjecture I can find at the sense of these Words, is, That they signify the Preachers of the Gospel bold and clear forstelling the Ruine of Antichrist. ¶ There are divers kinds of Fowls, amongst others some that feed on Flesh. These are those Fowls here mentioned, such as feed upon dead Carcases. ¶ They are invited to the Supper of the Great God, called so, because it is made and prepared by the Power of him who is the great God, or because it is a Sacrifice to the Justice of God. See 1 Sam. 17. 46. Isa. 18. 6, 7. 12. o.

God's justice upon his Enemies, is called a Sacrifice, Isa. 34. 6. Jer. 46. 10. Ezek. 39. 17. Idolaters were wont upon their Sacrificing to have a Feast; God hath also a Feast upon this his Sacrifice, but it is for the Fowls and Beasts, that feed on dead Carcasses.

18 That ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great x.

α In the former Verse God invited all the ravenous Fowls to a Supper, he here flourisheth their Grief. The meaning is no more than this, That in the great Battell of Armageddon, which was for the destruction of all the Remainder of the Enemies of the Church, whether Papists, or Atheists, or Turks, Men of all Sorts and Orders should be slain, and their dead Bodies made Meate for the Fowls of Heaven, that feed on dead Flesh.

19. And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army y.

y The Beast, whereby it be understood the Dragon, or the Beast with seven Heads and ten Horns, or the Beast with two Horns, of all of them, shall before this Time be all destroyed, (that is, as to their Power and Dominion) but they will yet be Gentils left, both of Pagans, and Turks, and Papists, of whom shall yet remain some, who shall yet be Christians. This after the Armageddon, upon the pouring out of the Purple Wine, shall be privied the Empire of their Dominion, and by the pouring out of the Sixth Vial, shall have deprived the Turk of his Dominion; shall yet gather Pagans, Turks, and Papists, as shall be left, shall be gathered together, and make one or more great Armies, with whom the Jews and Gentiles (now united in the Antichrist Church) shall fight under the Conduct of Christ, as the Armageddon shall be, by whom they shall be overcome; and that this shall be the great Battle in Armageddon, mentioned chap. 16. v. 16.

20 And the beast was taken, and with him the * false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. ¶ These both were cast alive into the lake of fire, * burning with brimstone.

This great Babel will be the real Rome of the all the Exiles of the Church, their Bodies being made New to be the Fowls of the Heaven, their Souls cast into the Bo-romedon Py of Hell. The Secular part of Antichrist is hereto be by the Beast: « The Ecclesiastical Antichrist by the Beast's Prophet, that had changed golden Princes, and credited the Beast's Prophecy, that he should be the Son of Man, and that he should be the Son of Man, and that he was but the Image of the old Idolatry of the heathen worshipping Demetrius, and the Images of fish as they were eaten amongst them while they were alive. « Both these, the Laick and Secular Prophet, and all their Churchmen, shall be left to be the Beast's prey, shall now be devoured in a matter of Five, not more, nor less, than World yet. of 200 years or more, and thus darkly foretold, can be positive and particular. « But this seemeth the end of 16, upon the former Prophecy: That the Beast shall have 7 Heads and ten Horns, mentioned chap. 13. v.
 1. and the Beast shall be the Son of Man, and that he shall be the Son of Man, beginning with Rome, which introduced the Idolatry introduced by the Bishops of Rome, and continuing in the Universal Bishops, or Popes of Rome, and their Clergy, who quickly worried out the Emperor's Power, and for 160 Years reigned, taxing up Idolatry and Superstition, and corrupting the Doctrine of Faith, and for the last six hundred Years of Time, persecuting the true Faith of Christ more notoriously. After which God will begin to reckon with him, gradually pouring out five Vials upon him. I am very valuable to think that, that we in this Age are yet under the influence of the five Vials of these Vials, feeling little yet effected towards the Ruine of this Pandemonium, the expiating of their Idolatries and Cheats to several Princes and States, and so the Generality of thinking People; nor hath the Providence of God poured forth that as yet. The three first Vials are yet to be poured out upon the Papacy, besides that the three last Vials will fall upon all the Enemies of the Church together: And who shall live upon God shall do this thing!

21 And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that fate upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth; and all the fowls were filled with their flesh.

In all Armies there are common Soldiers as well as Officers. What the Issue of this Battle shall be, as to the Leaders in it, the former Verse told us: This tells us how it shall fare with those under the Command of them. It seems they shall not be excused because they followed their Leaders, and did only what they bade them; Christ commands that they also should be slain. d And this bloody Day (when ever it comes) will be a Day of great Slaughter; for the dead Bodies will be enough to fill and fill all the Fowls of Heaven.

17. And thus comes to the darkest part of the whole Revelation, what is meant by the thousand Years, and the first and second Resurrection, and by Gog and Magog, chap. 20. of the New Heavens and New Earth, and the Jerusalem coming down from Heaven, dispersed at, chap. 21. 2. is very hard to say, and possibly much more cannot with any probability be conjectured as to them, than hath been already said. I had only tell my Reader that, leaving him to judge what is most probable, and leaving it to the Divine Providence to give us a certain and infallible Exposition of what is contained in these three last Chapters.

AND I saw an angel coming down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit, and a great chain in his hand.

a The description of this Angel can agree to none but Christ, or one that exerciseth a Power by delegation from him: for, chap. x. 18. it is he who hath the Power of Hell and Death; and it is he who alone is stronger than the Devil, which must be supposed to him that binds him, or we must think the Devil much tamer than he is.

hall at Church, as some think) Year enjoy great quiet under the conduct of the Council, (as some think) In these times, Years shall fall personally be upon the Earth; or of such a Godly Magnificence in all Places of the Church, as shall do and execute what Christ would have done and executed. After which the Enemies of the Church (mentioned here v. 8. under the Notions of Giggs and Mages) shall rally again, but shall be destroyed by the Power of the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall send forth his Word, and hath many good and brave Patrons. I shall only say this, That I do not understand what this thousand Years mean, if they do not denote a serene and calm Time for the Church of God, of long continuance, before the Day of Judgement shall come. And therefore I am persuaded, that the Church shall be in places of Power, or the Power of Christ only shall be seen in so ruling and governing all Magistrates, that they shall not, as before, impose Superstitions and Idolatry, and kill or rude Men for not complying with them; but the Servants of God, that swearby him is Spirit and Truth, shall under many different Names, be called forth, and shall be able to resist the Devil honestly. I cannot determine, but do to my own thoughts most incline to the last, that the thousand Years only denote a large Space of Time, (as yet at a great distance) when the Church of God shall freely enjoy their Liberty, without the Oppression of Tyranny, Superstition, or other Wickedness, as they have yet along had, either from Jews, Pagans, or Antichrist's Party.

3 And cast him into the bottomless pit <sup>e</sup>, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him <sup>f</sup>, * that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled <sup>g</sup>;
and after that he must be loosed a little season <sup>h</sup>.

¶ That is, into Hell, his proper place: He shall no longer, or at least not till these thousand Years be expired, exercise his Power, as Prince of the Power of the Air, Eph. 2. 2. or compelling the Earth, and walking up and down in it, as Job 1. 7. who Door shall be restrained as much as one flure up in Prison, whose Doors are sealed up. g That till this Time of God's Counsel for the quiet of his Church be run out, he shall not deceive People by his old Arts. b But after: that he shall have a Liberty again. (as vrf. 7.) for a little time.

4 And I saw * thrones i, and they fate upon them k, and judgement was given unto them i: and I saw the † souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Iesus, and for the word of God, and || which had not worshipped the beast, * nor his image; neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands m; and they lived and † reigned with Christ a thousand years.

This is a very difficult Text. Thrones are Places of Dignity and Judicature; they seem here to signify only Places of Dignity. & Those mentioned afterward in this Text have upon them. [That is a Power of Judgment, 16. 6. 2. 3.] And therefore they are called Thrones. But how can we say that Thrones are defcribed to be, 1. Such as had kept themselves from Idolatry, or any Compliance with Antichrist, either in the form of the Beall, or of the Image of the Beall. 2. And so for that Non-compliance were rewarded with a Throne? The first seems to be confined in his Word. These are described as living with Christ in Honour and Dignity, all that place of the Churches Rest and Tranquillity before expression. Our learned Dr. Moss interprets the Throne, and the Tranquillity of the Church, to signify the Peace which the Dragon's Officers fail, to condemn the Saints from whence issued the purting to death of many of God, and thinks that in this Vision there is a live and reign in glory with our Father. Now these Saints are laid to rest in the blessed Kingdom of our Father, while the Church upon the Earth, enjoyed great rest and quiet on Earth. Others have thought, that these should be raised from the dead, and live with Christ on Earth their thousand Years; which Nocton (if true) will follow a great Phoenician, and render it not improbable, that the Number of the Saints shall be increased, and that the Church shall be able to rule the World, and overbalance the Number of all the Wicked of the Earth. Those who think thus, judge there will be two Resurrections; the first, of Martyrs, which shall attend the general Resurrection a thousand Years; but the Scripture no where else mentions more than one Resurrection. For my own part, I shall not be so credulous, as to believe in any such thing. For the two next Verses, nor shall be positive as to any thing of them. For the spiritual Resurrection, as to the Martyrs, it was long since past, or else they had died in their Sins. But this is fine more in the next Verse.

5 But the rest of the dead  $\circ$  lived not again until the thousand years were finished p. This is the first resurrection q.

$\circ$  By the rest of the Dead, some understand all except Martyrs; others, only that Party who adhered to Antichrist. Those who by the rest understand all the Dead, both good and

And, the Marryns alone excepted) judging that there will be two Resurrections. The first more particular, of those that have suffered Death for Christ; the second general, of the rest of the Dead. I must confess, I find a difficulty to allow this: it is too great a Point to found upon a single Text; in a portion of Holy Writ to cloud upon Metaphors as this, and to know no sufficient Text. Those who understand by this, that the Marryns shall be raised up by their living as a political Life, that is, recovered not the former natural State, continued as dead Men, able to do no mischief, till the thousand Years of the Churches Peace and Tranquillity were expired. My Sense of living, and living again, be allowed, it will deliver us from almost all our difficulties about the sentence of death. Only the Marryns, who are the living Church, is signified a political Living, not a Resurrection from natural Death. But then arises a question, If these beheaded Saints did not rise from their natural Death, how could they be reformed to Places of Dignity with Christ in the Church? I must therefore, that those formerly suffering for the Name of Christ, and who were formerly dead, should be considered as one Church; and to those formerly beheaded, lived and reigned with Christ in their Successors in the same Faith: that is, those alive at that time, being reformed to their Faith and Liberty, and Reputation in the World, the Marryrs, who were dead in the World, and dead in the Body, are also laid to live. This appears to be the most proper way to solve the difficulty. The glorious Saints should leave Heaven (as to their Souls) to be again clothed with Fleish, and in it to live the thousand Years, and be concerned in the following Troubles the Church should meet with after these thousand Years, seems to me to be the most proper way, and to lay a foundation for so many difficult questions, as will be manifest to all who desire a reasonable satisfaction. But yet there remains a difficulty, *Q*uow his restoring Gods holy Ones to a better State, can be called the first Resurrection: That is may be called a Resurrection, is plain, as the Conversion of the Jews, and reformation of the Gentiles, and the raising up of God, is called Life from his Dead, Rom. 11. 15. And the raising up of the Witnesses, chap. 11. 11. is called so, tho neither the one nor the other were naturally Dead. Mor is it unusual in Scriptural and Prophetical Writings, to speak of People recovered to their former and better State, as being risen from the dead; as the Marryns are, who were dead in the World, and yet an excellent State which they shall be put in after the last Judgment, when they shall live and reign with Christ in a more happy and glorious manner. If this may not be allowed as the sense of these two Verses, I shall confess this such a Resurrection is, as the Scriptures are not understood, and I shall proceed with the former Verses upon Apocals as this is the Sense, so I dare not be positive in it.

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection : on such the * second death hath no power /, but they shall be || priests of God, and of Christ *, and shall reign with him a thousand years :

7. That is, they are only Holy Ones, that shall be thus restored to share in the Churches Happiness; and such as shall not perish eternally, but they shall be as Priests to God and Christ, glorifying him with the spiritual Sacrifices of Prayer and Praise, and shall enjoy a quiet and honourable Station with Christ upon the Earth for a long time.

7 And when the thousand years are expired <sup>w</sup>, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison <sup>x</sup>.

When the long Time expressed under the Notion of a Thousand Years, shall be expired, & God shall take off his Refraint from the Devil, so as he shall influence the Wicked of the Earth once more to make Opposition to his Church.

8 And shall go out to deceive the nations, which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom was the sand of the sea.

¶ That is, the Devil, being got from under the Belttraine of Divine Providence, shall fall upon his old Work, going about to deceive Men over all the World, either tempting them to Idolatry, or Heresy, or Lewdness of Life, or (which seemeth most probable) stirring them up to one Another, more to ruine the Church. ¶ These People are called Gog and Magog, about the meaning of which there are various Opinions. We read of Magog, Gen. 10. 2. he was one of the Sons of Japhet, he also 1 Chron. 1. g. he inhabited that Country called Syria, and from thence his Posterity being multiplied,

We read of Gag nowhere in Scripture, but in Isaiah, chap. 38. 39. where both Gag and Magog are mentioned as the great Enemies of God's ancient Israel. Gog there, chap. 38. 2. is named as the chief Prince of Misbuch and Tubal. There are Disputes who are meant by Gog and Magog in those 2 Chapters.

* Chap. 16.14]

13 On the east three gates, on the north three gates, on the south three gates, on the west three gates.

To signify it was made up of persons from all parts of the World. This agrees with Equil's Vision, Ezek. 48, 31, 32, 33, 34. The Triumphant Church will be a collection of Believers, who from all Nations have come in to it.

14 And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, p, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the lamb q.

The ancient Church of God was founded in 12 Patriarchs, and 12 Tribes; the Gospel Church in 12 Apostles; Christ is the only Foundation of both, 1 Cor. 3, 11, but he is the Foundation upon which the Church is built. The 12 Apostles are called the Foundations per quos, et per quos, by which the Gospel Church had its beginning, q. As Work-Men sometimes let their Names upon Foundation-Stones, by which it is made known who were they that builded the Wall.

15 And he that talked with me *, had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

This seemeth to signify the transcendency of the state of the Church now, to what it was before; it was then measured by a Man, chap. 11, now by an Angel; then by an ordinary Reed, now by a Golden Reed.

16 And the city lieth foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth, And he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length, and the breadth and the height of it are equal f.

The Church Militant, measured by the Reed of the Word, is equal in its parts. Some parts of it are purer than others; but in the New Jerusalem all parts shall be equal in perfection and purity, as all the sides of a thing foursquare are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof an hundred and forty, and four cubits b, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel k.

This could not be the measure of the compass, (it was for that much too little,) nor of the height or breadth, (for either of them it was much too great,) from whence Dr. Puter concludes, it must be the square measure; so as the height and breadth of it was twelve Cubits, for 12 times 12 makes 144. I as Men use a measure k, and as this Angel measures, who appeared as a Man in this Action.

18 And the building of the wall of it was of Jasper l, and the city was pure gold m, like unto clear glass n.

Strong and Impregnable, not subject to Impressions from Enemies, as it is said of the Jasper, no Hammer will break it. All that make up this City are perfect and noble, s and pure without spots.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones p. The first foundation was a jasper; the second, a sapphire; the third, a chalcodon; the fourth, an emerald.

By which we need before, to be understood the Apostles, who building upon the one Foundation Christ Jesus, by their Holy Doctrine laid the beginnings of the Gospel-Church, the first Stones (upon the Rock Christ) which were afterwards multiplied, others being builded upon them, till the whole Church was perfected.

20 The fifth, a fardonyx; the sixth, a fardius; the seventh, a chrysolite; the eighth, a beril; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysolite; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst p.

I cannot tell what to make of these precious Stones, which they are said to be garnished, unless it be their Spiritual gifts and labors of Grace. The various significations of the Holy Spirit given to the Apostles to profit the Church with all, with which they adorned the Doctrine of the Gospel, and was upon the Pagan World, making themselves admirable in the Eyes of Men and Women. Nor were it hard to ascribe upon these several sorts of Stones, and to them of what Colors they may be Types; the Jasper, of Steadfastness and Continuity; the Sapphire, of Heavenly and Divine things; (it being a Stone of the colour of the Heavens); the Chrysolite, of Zeal; the Emerald, of Vigor and Life; the Sardius (a stone of various colours) of various gifts and graces; the Sardius, of Courage and Fortitude, and a readiness to shed their Blood for Christ; the Chrysolite, of Wisdom and Knowledge; the Beryl, of Wisdom and Understanding; the Jasper, of searching out Divine Mysteries; the Chrysolite, of Gravety and Servery.

The Jacinth, of Spiritual Joy, Calmness, and Serenity of Mind: The Amethyst, of Sobriety and Temperance: But it seems to me too great curiosity to Philosophize so far upon the nature of these Stones; else them together, they probably signify all the Gifts and Graces of the Blessed Apostles, by which the Religion of the Gospel was first commended, and made to appear lovely to the World.

21 And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl, and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass q.

I am not willing to dissent further in particulars, conjecturing (for it is no more) what each Metaphorical term signifies in this unusual Description of a City. I do think the scope of the whole, is no more than to let us know, that the mansions of Heaven will be most glorious places, giving the Souls of those to whom God shall give to enter into them, an infinite satisfaction, beyond what the most rich and glorious things in the World can give our outward senses.

22 And I saw no Temple therein r, for the Lord God Almighty, and the Lamb are the temple of it f.

I cannot take Temple too strictly here, as those who understand all this but as a description of the Blessed State of the Militant Church, during the Thousand years, but understand it of all such Worship and Ordinances as we serve God in, and by, in this Life. f. The immediate favour of God shall there supply all, God shall be all in all, 1 Cor. 15, 28. Ordinances are but Perspectives, of what in Life to see God at a distance; means, whereby we know in part: There we shall see God face to face, and know him as we are known. The Saints there shall want nothing, and therefore shall not need an House of Prayer; they shall know perfectly, and therefore will not need any to teach them; they shall always see Christ, and so will need no Sacraments whereby to remember him.

23 * And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof a.

The Sun and the Moon are the two great Luminaries of the World, which God hath made, the one to rule the Day, the other to rule the Night; in Heaven there will be no need of any of these. Light in Scripture (in its Metaphorical notion) signifies peace, joy, comfort, there will in Heaven be no need of any created things to help us to either of these: God and Christ shall there fill the Souls of his Saints with Knowledge and Joy not to be expressed.

24 * And the nations of them that are saved, shall walk in the light of it w, and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it x.

All that go to Heaven, shall be thus happy. * And such Kings of the Earth, as shall come into Heaven, shall all their Honour and Glory follow up in the Glory and Honour of that place and state; and confess that all their Crowns are infinitely those of this Blessed and Glorious Crown, all their Thrones nothing to these Thrones.

25 And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day, for there shall be no night there z.

The reason of shutting a Cities Gates, is either to shut out Enemies, or to keep in such as are within: There will be no need of shutting these Gates on either of these accounts; there will be no Enemies to fear, and those that are within this City will have no need not desire to go out. z. We do not ordinarily shut our City Gates by day, but there shall be nothing but Day, no Night in a natural or metaphorical sense.

26 And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it a.

Whoever is excellent or desirable in the World, shall be supplied to the Souls of those that are in Heaven, by God of another make, but which shall be equally (if infinitely more) satisfactory to the Soul.

27 And there shall in no wise enter into it, any thing that defileth c, neither whatsoever Joel 3, 17, worketh abomination d, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lambs book of life f.

In the Greek there is two Negative Particles, which tho' in the Latin they make an affirmative, yet in the Greek make a stronger Negative, which we render in no wise, or by no means. This strongly denying Particle is brought to make the Bar excluding all unclean persons from Heaven evident. And alas! how often had this need be denied, to make Men and Women, who of their Lusts, believe in the Word rendered, not defiled, significant, what is common; nothing, no person that hath not by an Holy Life.

separated himself from the world, and all Sin, and Whoredoms, and dedicated himself to God. d. No profane, or lewd Person, e. Nor any false living Hypocrites, nor any false Believers, for I do not see, f. These but those whose Names are written in the Book of Life, pronounced to Salvation, and redeemed with the Blood of Christ. Some are not pleased with this Sense; but what other thing can be meant? This is, at least, the sixth time we have met with this Phrase in this Book, ch. 3, 5, and 13, 8, and 17, 8, and 20, 12, 13. It is also mentioned, Phil. 4, 3, and what else can be meant in Angels his Prayers, Ezek. 9, 2, 3. It is twice, ch. 13, 8, and 17, 8, said, that Names were written in it, from the Foundation of the World. God hath a particular, certain, infallible Knowledge who are his, and had it from Eternity; and Whence he should know it, without willing of it, is very hard to conceive. g. It is called the Lamb's Book, to let us know, that the Act of Redemption by Christ bears proportion to the Guilt of the Election.

CHAP. XXII.

1 And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal h, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb i.

The Angel who shewed him all before-mentioned, shewed him a pure river. h. No place can be happy without the Accommodation of Water: Those places have the best Accommodation of it that are near a River, especially a pure River; to let us know, that in Heaven there shall be no want of any thing that can make the Saints happy. It is defiled as having by it, or running through it, a poor River, where Water is clear; and no ordinary Water, but such as give, and preserve Life: What could this signify, but the pure and unalloyed Joys of Heaven. i. Flowing from the Saints there enjoying of God, and Jesus Christ?

2 In * the middle of the street of it, and of either side of the river, was there the tree of life k, which bare twelve manner of fruits l, and yielded her fruit every month m; and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations n.

Trees, especially Fruit-trees, and those laden with Fruits and variety of Fruit, and such as instead of being prejudicial to Life, are wholesome, and give Life, are very beautiful, especially in, or near a City. The City in Equil's Vision, ch. 47, 3, is thus described. This Expression further heaves the infinite Pleasures and Soul-sanctification the Saints shall have in Heaven. But we are further told, that the Tree here is the Tree of Life, a manifest Allusion to Gen. 2, 9, called in old Paradise, Gen. 2, 9, and who can this agree to, but Christ? In whom all Fruits dwell, the Fruits of the Godhead, and who was known, and so received the Spirit without measure, m and is daily distributing of his Fruits to his People; n and in whom there is nothing void, but who tends either to the Life or healing of his People out of all Nations.

3 And * there shall be no more curse o; but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it p, and his servants shall serve him q.

Nothing that is devoted to the Devil, gen. 3, 14, no accursed Person, or Thing. p. The presence of an holy and pure God will prevent and forbid that. q. It is a place in which God alone shall be served by his own Servants.

4 And they shall see his face r, and * his name shall be in their foreheads s.

It is a Phrase by which the Happiness of the glorified Saints is expressed, Math. 5, 8, 1 Cor. 12, 12, Phil. 12, 14, 1 John 3, 2, they shall enjoy him immediately. These shall be none that have the Name of the Beast in their Foreheads; they shall have God written on their Foreheads, and be manifested to be the Sons of God.

5 And there shall be no night there, and they need no candle, neither light of the sun: for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign for ever and ever t.

See the Notes on ch. 21, 23.

6 And he said unto me, * These sayings are faithful and true u. And the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to shew unto his Servants the things which must shortly be done v.

All the words of this Book, particularly the things of last Vision are such as proceed from him, who is the faithful witness, ch. 1, 5, and 3, 14, from him who was called Faithful, chap. 19, 11, and which God will shew himself true and faithful in bringing to pass; and so such things as God hath revealed to his Prophets under the Old Testament in part, and now to his new Prophets, to them who his People the things that shall come to pass, and shall shortly begin to be accomplished. See chap. 1, 1.

* Behold, I come quickly *, I blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this Book y.

I come quickly to the last Judgment. y. He is happy that observeth and keepeth in memory, that he understandeth, believeth, and liveth up to the Prophecy of this Book.

8 And I John saw these things z, and heard them a. And when I had heard and seen, I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel, which shewed me these things.

I saw the Vision. a. I heard the words spoken to me relating to them.

9 Then said he unto me, See thou do it not b; for I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren the prophets c, and of them which keep the sayings of this Book, Worship God d.

See the Notes on ch. 19, 10. A Whole Employment is the same with thine, to render the Will of God, y. And a Brother to all the Servants of God. Thou shalt not be the Object of mine Adoration, I am a created Being, and can accept no such Homage.

10 And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this Book e, for the time is at hand f. g. With, h. is Christ, as appeareth from 2, 12, 13. Let their things be open to be promulgated, and published to the whole Church, g. for it will not be long before they shall begin to be fulfilled.

11 He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still; and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still i.

It may be, the keeping of this Book open, and the Publication of it will dispulse wicked and filthy Men; but let them be dispulsed, the Truths of God must not be concealed. i. It will on the other side confirm the Servants of God in their Faith, Patience, and Holiness, and all the Fruits of Righteousness.

12 And behold, I come quickly k, and my reward is with me l, to give every man according as his work shall be m.

To the last Judgment (as before, y. 7) I bring with me Power and Authority to reward every Man according to what he hath done, Dan. 12, 2, Rom. 2, 6, 2 Thim. 13, 14, 15, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28.

13 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning, and the end, the first and the last n.

See the Notes on chap. 1, 8, and 21, 6.

14 Blessed are they that do his commandments o, that they may have right to the tree of life p, and may enter in through the gates into the city q.

That believeth in the Lord Jesus Christ (for that is the great Commandment of the Gospel), and liveth in conformity to the Law of God. o. To Christ, called before the Tree of Life, o. by virtue of the Promise, Rom. 2, 7, for no Works of ours will give us a right of Purchase to it. q. That they may enter into Heaven; the Joys and Pleasures of which have been described under the Measure of a great and glorious City.

15 For * without p are dogs, and fornicers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth, and maketh a lie. Col. 3, 6.

Without Heaven, that is, in Hell shall be all Dogs that bark, and bite, and devour the Church of God, all profane Persons, Idolaters and Hypocrites, vid. ch. 21, 8, 27. 1 Cor. 6, 9, 10. See the Notes there.

16 I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches r: I am the root, and the off-spring of David s, and the bright and morning star t.

In these words Christ commendeth the Revelation as his; the Angel did but testify, John did but hear, and write it. r. David's Lord, and yet his Son: his Root, as I am God, and gave a Being to his Family, as to all the Families of the Earth; and yet his Son, a Branch out of the Root of Joel. s. I who, as the Morning-star, first kings, or prophecies, Light to the World; I have my self first published my Gospel, or this Revelation, to give Light to my People, concerning the Fate of my People to the last day.

17 And the spirit z, and the bride say, Come a. And let him that heareth, say, Come w. And let him that is thirsty, come x; and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely y.

The Spirit in the Hearts of Believers, or rather the Holy Spirit. z. Because the Bride, that is, the Church is also mentioned, to desire the second coming of Christ to Judgment.

men. And every one that heareth of, and believeth these things, should also desire the same thing. * And in order to that, every one that waneeth, and is sensible of his want of Righteousness, or any Habit of Grace, is also invited unto Christ, under the Notion of the Water of Life, to take him freely, as Isa. 55. 1.

* Deut. 4. 2. Prov. 30. 6. 18 For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book 1. * If any man shall add unto these things 3. God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book 2.

* Exod. 12. 33. Psa. 59. 28. † I Christ, or 1. John testify to every one to whose Hands or Ears the words of this Book shall come, † That if any Man shall invent new Prophecies contrary to the Prophecies contained in this Book, † God shall severely punish him, by adding to the Plagues threatened against Sinners, in this Book.

19 And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy 4. * God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things that are written in this book 5.

* But Divines generally do further extend the sense of these two Verses considering this as the last Portion of holy Writ, not only placed last in our Bible, but revealed and written last. They conceive these Verses the Seal of all Canonical Scriptures, and that God here denounceth vengeance against those who shall pretend any new Revelations of his Will other than what are to be found in the Books of the Old and New Testament; as also against all those who shall deny, corrupt, or deprave any part of them. † God as to such Perilous, faith, they shall not have any such Part or Portion in Heaven, as they would pretend a Right to, or seemed to have.

20 He which testifieth these things, faith, Surely I come quickly 6. Amen 4. Even so, come, Lord Jesus 7.

† That is, Christ, who publisheth these things by his Angel, or by his Servant John, faith he is quickly coming to judgment. † John replies, Lord, let it be so. † This exounds Amen used here as a Particle of wishing and desiring, tho it may be interpreted as an affirmative Particle, and joyed to the former part of the Sentence.

21 * The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen †.

† This is a Salutation used by the Apostles in all their Epistles, containing a desire of the fulness and increase of all Grace, very proper here upon the Prospect which John in this Revelation had of the long, and great Trials the Church would meet with before the glorious Appearance of our blessed Lord and Saviour.

* Rom. 16. 24. 2 Thes. 3. 18.

To God the Author of this, and all the other Books of holy Writ, be Honour and Glory.
